To the Reader.

This Figure that thou here ſeeſt put,
It was for gentle Shakeſpear cut;
Wherein the Graver had a ſtrife
With Nature to outdo the Life.
O, could he but have drawn his Wit
As well in Braſs, as he has hit
His Face; the Print would then ſurpaſs
All that was ever writ in Braſs.
But ſince he cannot, Reader, look
Not on his Picture, but his Book.

To the most Noble and Incomparable pair of Brethren,

WILLIAM Earl of Pembroke, &c. Lord Chamberlain to the Kings most Excellent Majestie;

And PHILIP Earl of Montgomery, &c. Gentleman to His Majesties Bed-Chamber. Both Knights of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and our singular good LORDS.

Right Honourable,

WHilst we study to be thankful in our particular, for the many favours we have received from your L L, we are faln upon the ill fortune, to mingle two the most diverse things that can be, fear, and rashnesse in the enterprise, and fear of the successe. For, when we value the places your H.H. sustain, we cannot but know their dignity greater, than to descend to the reading of these trifles: and, while we name them trifles, we have depriv'd our selves of the defence of our Dedication. But since your L.L. have been pleas'd to think these trifles something heretofore, and have prosecuted both them, and their Authour living, with so much favour: we hope, (that they out-living him, and he not having the fate, common with some, to be Executor to his own writings) you will use the same indulgence toward them, you have done unto their parent. There is a great difference, whether any Book choose his Patrones, or find them: This hath done both. For, so much were your L. L. likings of the several parts, when they were acted, as before they were published, the Volume ask'd to be yours. We have but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his Orphanes, Guradians; without ambition either of ſelf-profit, or fame: only to keep the memory of ſo worthy a Friend and Fellow alive, as was our Shakeſpeare, by humble offer of his Playes, to your moſt Noble Patronage. Wherein, as we have juſtly obſerved, no man to come near your L. L. but with a kind of religious addreſs; it hath been the height of our care, who are the Preſenters, to make the Preſent worthy of your H. H. by the Perfection. But, there we muſt alſo crave our abilities to be conſidered, my Lords. We cannot goe beyond our own powers. Countrey hands reach forth Milk, Cream, Fruits, or what they have: and many Nations (we have heard) that had not Gummes and Incenſe, obtained their requeſts with a leavened Cake; It was no fault to approach their gods, by what means they could: And the moſt, though meaneſt of things, are made precious, when they are dedicated to Temples. In that name therefore, we moſt humbly conſecrate to your H. H. theſe remains of your ſervant Shakeſpeare; that what delight is in them, may be ever your L. L. the reputation his, and the faults ours, if any be committed by a pair ſo careful to ſhew their gratitude both to the living, and the dead, as is

Your Lordships moſt bounden

John Heminge,
Henry Condell.

Rom the moſt able, to him that can but ſpell. There you are number'd, VVe had rather you were weigh'd. Eſpecially, when the fate of all Books depends upon your capacities: and not of your heads alone, but of your Purſes. VVell, it is now publick, and you will ſtand for your priviledges, we know: to read, and cenſure. Doe ſo, but buy it firſt; that doth beſt commend a Book, the Stationer ſayes. Then, how odde ſoever your brains be, or your wiſdomes, make your ſilience the ſame, and ſpare not. Iudge your ſix-penny worth, your ſhillings worth, your five ſhillings worth at a time, or higher, ſo you riſe to the juſt rates, and welcome. But, whatever you do, Buy, Cenſure will not drive a Trade, nor make the Jack goe. And though you be a Magiſtrate of Wit, and ſit on the Stage at Black-Fryers, or the Cock-pit, to arraign Playes daily, know, theſe Playes have had their trial already, and ſtood out all Appeals; and do now come forth quitted rather by a Decree of Court, then any purchas'd Letters of Commendation.

It had been a thing, we confeſſe, worthy to have been wiſhed, that the Author himſelf had liv'd to have ſet forth, and overſeen his own Writings; But ſince it hath been ordain'd otherwiſe wiſe, and he by death departed from that right, we pray you do not envy his Friends, the office of their care, and pain, to have collected and publiſh'd them; & ſo to have publish'd them, as where (before) you were abus'd with divers ſtoln, and ſurreptitious Copies, maimed and deformed by the frauds & ſtealths of injurious Impoſtors, that expos'd them: even thoſe, are now offer'd to your view cured, and perfect of their limbs; and all the reſt, abſolute in their numbers as he conceived them. Who, as he was a happy imitator of Nature, was a moſt gentle expreſſer of it. His mind and hand went together: And what he thought, he uttered with that eaſineſs, that we have ſcarce received from him a blot in his Papers. But it is not our Province, who only gather his Works, and give them you to praiſe him. It is yours that read him. And there we hope, to your divers capacities, you will find enough, both to draw, and hold you: for his wit can no more lie hid, then it could be loſt. Read him, therefore; and again, & again: And if then you do not like him, ſurely you are in ſome manifeſt danger, not to underſtand him. And ſo we leave you to other of his Friends, who, if you need, can be your guides: if you need them not, you can lead your ſelves, and others. And ſuch Readers we wish him.

To the Memory of the deceased Authour
Mr. W. VILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

SHakeſpeare, at length thy pious Fellows give
The World thy Works: thy Works, by which, out-live
Thy Tomb, thy Name muſt: when that ſtone is rent,
And Time diſſolves thy Stratford Monument,
Here we alive ſhall view thee ſtill. This Book,
When Braſs and Marble fade, ſhall make thee look
Freſh to all Ages: when Poſteritie
Shall loathe what's new, think all is prodigie
That is not Shakeſpear's; ev'ry Line, each Verſe
Here ſhall revive, redeem thee from thy Herſe.
Nor Fire, nor cankring Age, as Naſo ſaid,
Of his, thy wit-fraught Book ſhall once invade.
Nor ſhall I e're believe, or think thee dead
(Though miſt) until our bankrout Stage be ſped
(Impoſſible) with ſome new ſtrain t' out-do
Paſſions of Juliet, and her Romeo;
Or till I hear a Scene more nobly take,
Than when thy halfe-ſword parlying Yeomans ſpake
Till theſe, till any of thy Volumes reſt
Shall with more fire, more feeling be expreſt,
Be ſure, our Shakeſpeare, thou canſt never die,
But crown'd with Lawrell, live eternally.

Upon the Effigies of my worthy Friend, the Authour Mr. W. Shakeſpeare, and his Works.

SPectator, this Lifes Shadow is; to ſee
The truer Image and a livelier he Turn Reader. But, obſerve his Comick vain,
Laugh, and proceed next to a Tragick ſtrain,
Then weep; So when thou find'ſt two contraries,
Two different paſſions from thy rapt ſoul riſe,
Say, (who alone effect ſuch wonders could)
Rare Shakeſpeare to the life thou doſt behold.

To the Memory of Mr. VV. Shakeſpeare.

WE wonder (Shakeſpeare) that thou went'ſt ſo ſoon
From the VVorlds-Stage, to the Graves-Tyring-room.
We thought thee dead, but this thy Printed worth,
Tells thy Spectators, that thou went'ſt but forth
To enter with applauſe. An Actors Art,
Can dye, and live, to act a ſecond Part.
That's but an Exit of Mortality;
This, a Re-entrance to a Plaudite.

J. M.

To the Memory of my beloved the Authour Mr. VVILLIAM SHAKESPEARE; And what he hath left us.

TO draw no envy (Shakespeare) on thy Name,
Am I thus ample to thy Book, and Fame:
While I confesse thy writings to be such,
As neither Man, nor Muse can praise too much.
'Tis true, and all mens suffrage. But these wayes
Were not the paths I meant unto thy praise:
*For seelie*st Ignorance on these may light,
Which, when it sounds at best, but ecchoes right;
Or blind Affection, which doth ne're advance
The truth, but gropes, and urgeth all by chance;
Or crafty malice, might pretend this praise,
And think to ruine, where it seem'd to raise.
These are, as some infamous Baud, or Whore, [more?
Should praise a Matron. What could hurt her
But thou art proofe against them, and indeed
Above th'ill fortune of them, or the need.
I therefore will begin. Soul of the Age!
The applause! delight! the wonder of our Stage!
My Shakespeare rise; I will not lodge thee by
Chaucer, or Spenser, or bid Beaumont lie
A little further, to make thee a room:
Thou art a Monument without a Tomb,
And art alive still, while thy Book doth live,
And we have wits to read, and praise to give.

That I not mix thee so, my brain excuses;
I mean with great, but disproportion'd Muses:
For if I thought my judgement were of years,
I should commit thee surely with thy Peers,
And tell how far thou didst our Lily out-shine,
Or sporting Kid, or Marlow's mighty Line.
And though thou hadst small Latine & less Greek,
From thence to honour thee, I would not seek
For names; but call forth thund'ring Æschylus,
Euripides, and Sophocles to us,
Paccuvius, Accius, him of Cordova dead,
To live again; to hear thy Buskin tread,
And shake a Stage: Or, when thy Socks were on,
Leave thee alone for the comparison
Of all, that insolent Greece, or haughty Rome
Sent forth, or since did from their ashes come.
Triumph, my Britain, thou hast one to show,
To whom all Scenes of Europe homage owe.
He was not of an age, but for all time!
And all the Muses, still were in their prime,
When like Apollo he came forth to warm
Our ears, or like a Mercury to charm!
Nature her self was proud of his designes,
And joy'd to wear the dressing of his Lines!
Which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,
As, since, she will vouchsafe no other wit.
The merry Greek, tart Aristophanes,
Neat Terence, witty Plautus, now not please;

But

But antiquated, and deſerted lie
As they were not of Natures family.
Yet muſt I not give Nature all: Thy Art,
My gentle Shakeſpeare muſt enjoy a part.
For though the Poet's matter Nature be,
His Art doth give the Fashion. And, that he,
Who caſts to write a living line, muſt ſweat,
(Such as thine are) and ſtrike the ſecond heat
Upon the Muſes Anvile: turn the ſame,
(And himſelf with it) that he thinks to frame;
Or for the Lawrel, he may gain a ſcorn,
For a good Poet's made, as well as born.
And ſuch wert thou. Look how the Fathers face
Lives in his Iſſue, even ſo the race
Of Shakeſpear's mind, and manners brightly ſhines
In his well torned, and true filed lines:
In each of which, he ſeems to ſhake a Lance,
As brandiſh't at the eyes of Ignorance.
Sweet Swan of Avon! what a ſight it were
To ſee thee in our water yet appear,
And make thoſe flights upon the Banks of Thames,
That ſo did take Eliza, and our Iames!
But ſtay, I ſee thee in the Hemiſphere
Advanc'd, and made a Conſtellation there!
Shine forth, thou Starre of Poets, and with rage,
Or influence, chide, or chear the drooping Stage,
Which, ſince thy flight from hence, hath mourn'd like
And deſpairs day, but for thy Volumes light. [night,

On worthy Mr. SHAKESPEARE, and his Poems.

A Mind reflecting ages paſt, whoſe clear
And equal ſurface can make things appear
Diſtant a Thouſand years, and repreſent
Them in their lively colours juſt extent.
To out-run haſty Time, retrive the Fates,
Rowle back the Heavens, blow ope the Iron Gates
Of Death and Lethe, where (confuſed) lie
Great heaps of ruinous Mortality.
In that deep duskie dungeon to diſcern
A Royal Ghoſt from Churles; By art to learn
The Phyſiognomie of ſhades, and give
Them ſuddain birth, wondring how oft they live.
What ſtory coldly tells, what Poets fain
At ſecond hand, and picture without brain
Senſeleſſe and ſouleleſſe shows. To give a Stage
(Ample and true with life) voice, action, age,
As Plato's year, and new Scene of the world
Them unto us, or us to them had hurl'd.
To raiſe our ancient Soveraignes from their Herſe
Make Kings his Subjects, by exchanging verſe
Enlive their pale trunks, that the preſent age
Joyes in their joy, and trembles at their rage:
Yet ſo to temper paſſion, that our ears
Take pleaſure in their pain; And eyes in tears
Both weep and ſmile, fearful at plots ſo ſad,

Then

Then laughing at our fear; abus'd, and glad
To be abus'd, affected with that truth
VVhich we perceive is falſe; pleas'd in that ruth
At which we ſtart; and by elaborate play
Tortur'd and tickled; by a crab-like way
Time paſt made paſtime, and in ugly ſort
Diſgorging up his ravaine for our ſport------
-----VVhile the Plebeian Imp from lofty throne,
Creates and rules a world, and works upon
Mankind by ſecret engines; Now to move
A chilling pity, then a rigorous love:
To ſtrike up and ſtroak down, both joy and ire;
To ſteer th'affections; and by heavenly fire
Mould us anew. Stoln from our ſelves------
This and much more which cannot be expreſt,
But by himſelf, his tongue and his own breſt, [brain
VVas Shakeſpeares freehold, which his cunning
Improv'd by favour of the nine-fold train.
The Buskin'd Muſe, the Comick Queen, the grand
And lowder tone of Clio; nimble hand,
And nimbler foot of the melodious pair,
The Silver voiced Lady; the moſt fair
Calliope, whoſe ſpeaking ſilence daunts.
And she whoſe praiſe the heavenly body chaunts.
Theſe jointly woo'd him, envying one another
(Obey'd by all as Spouſe, but lov'd as brother)
And wrought a curious robe of ſable grave,
Freſh green, and pleaſant yellow, red moſt brave,

And

And constant blew, rich purple, guiltless white,
The lowly Russet, and the Scarlet bright;
Branch't and embroydered like the painted Spring
Each leafe match'd with a Flower, and each string
Of golden wire, each line of silk; there run
Italian works whose thred the Sisters spun;
And there did sing, or seem to sing, the choice
Birds of a foreign note and various voice.
Here hangs a mossey Rock; there playes a faire
But chiding Fountain purled: Not the aire,
Nor Clouds, nor Thunder, but were living drawn
Not out of common Tiffany or Lawn.
But fine materials, which the Muses know
And onely know the Countries where they grow.
Now when they could no longer him enjoy
In mortal garments pent; Death may destroy
They say his body, but his Verse shall live
And more then Nature takes, our hands shall give.
In a lesse Volume, but more strongly bound [crown'd
Shakespeare shall breathe and speak, with Laurel
Which never fades. Fed with Ambrosian meat
In a well-lined vesture rich and neat [it,
So with this Robe they cloathe him, bid him wear
For time shall never stain, nor envy tear it.

Endowments,

An Epitaph

On the admirable Dramatick Poet, WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

WHat need my Shakespeare for his honour'd bones,
The labour of an Age, in piled stones,
Or that his hallow'd Reliques should be hid
Under a Starre-ypointing Pyramid?
Dear Son of Memory, great Heir of Fame,
What need'st thou such dull witnesse of thy Name?
Thou in our wonder and astonishment
Hast built thy self a lasting Monument:
For whil'st to th'shame of slow-endeavouring Art
Thy easie numbers flow, and that each part,
Hath from the leaves of thy unvalued Book,
Those Delphick Lines with deep Impression took
Then thou our fancy of her self bereaving,
Dost make us Marble with too much conceiving,
And so Sepulcher'd in such pomp dost lie,
That Kings for such a Tomb would wish to die.

Upon the Lines and Life of the Famous Scenick Poet Mr. W. Shakeſpeare.

THoſe hands, which you ſo clapt, goe now and wring
You Britaines brave; for done are Shakeſpeares dayes:
His dayes are done, that made the dainty Playes,
Which made the Globe of Heav'n and Earth to ring.
Dry'd is that Vein, dry'd is the Theſpian Spring,
Turn'd all to tears, and Phœbus Clouds his Rayes:
That Corps, that Coffin now beſtick thoſe Bays,
Which crown'd him Poet firſt, then Poets King.
If Tragedies might any Prologue have,
All thoſe he made, would ſcarce make one to this:
Where Fame, now that he gone is to the Grave,
(Deaths publick Tyring-houſe) the Nuncius is.
For though his Line of Life went ſoon about,
The Life yet of his Lines ſhall never out.

Hugh Holland.

THE TEMPEST.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

A tempeſtuous noiſe of Thunder and Lightning heard: Enter Ship-maſter, and a Boteſwain.

Maſter.

BOte-ſwain.

Bote. Here Maſter: What cheere?

Maſt. Good: Speak to th' Mariners: fall too't, yarely, or we run our ſelves aground, beſtirre, beſtirre. Exit.

Enter Mariners.

Boteſ. Hey my hearts, cheerely, cheerely my hearts: yare, yare: Take in the top-ſail: Tend to th' Maſters whiſtle: Blow till thou burſt thy wind, if room enough.

Enter Alonſo, Sebaſtian, Anthonio, Ferdinando, Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good Bote-ſwain have care: where's the Maſter? Play the men.

Boteſ. I pray now keep below.

Anth. Where is the Maſter, Boſon?

Boteſ. Doe you not hear him? you marre our labour, Keep your Cabins: you doe aſſiſt the ſtorm.

Gonz. Nay, good be patient.

Boteſ. When the Sea is: hence, what cares theſe roarers for the name of King? to Cabine; ſilence: trouble us not.

Gonz. Good, yet remember whom thou haſt aboard.

Boteſ. None that I more love then my ſelf. You are a Counſellour, if you can command theſe Elements to ſilence, and work the peace of the preſent, we will not hand a rope more, uſe your authority: If you cannot, give thanks you have liv'd ſo long, and make your ſelf ready in your Cabine for the miſchance of the hour, if it ſo hap. Cheerely good hearts: out of our way I ſay. Exit.

Gon. I have great comfort from this fellow: me thinks he hath no drowning mark upon him, his complexion is perfect Gallows: ſtand faſt good Fate to his hanging, make the rope of his deſtiny our Cable, for our own doth little advantage; If he be not born to be hang'd, our caſe is miſerable. Exit.

Enter Boteſwain.

Boteſ. Down with the top-Maſt: yare, lower, lower, bring her to Try with Main-courſe. A plague-------- upon this howling: they are lowder then the weather, or our office: yet again? What do you here? Shall we give o're and drown, have you a mind to ſink?

A cry within. Enter Sebaſtian, Anthonio & Gonzalo.

Sebaſ. A pox o' your throat, you bawling, blaſphemous, incharitable Dog.

Boteſ. Work you then.

Anth. Hang cur, hang, you whoreſon inſolent Noyſemaker; we are leſſe afraid to be drown'd then thou art.

Gonz. I'le warrant him for drowning, though the Ship were no ſtronger then a Nut-ſhell, and as leaky as an unſtanched wench.

Boteſ. Lay her a hold, a hold, ſet her two courſes off to Sea again, lay her off.

Enter Mariners wet.

Mar. All loſt, to prayers, to prayers, all loſt.

Boteſ. What muſt our mouths be cold?

Gon. The King, and Prince, at prayers, let's aſſiſt them, for our caſe is as theirs.

Sebaſ. I'm out of patience.

An. We are meerly cheated of our lives by drunkards, This wide-chopt-raſcall, would thou might'ſt lie drowning the waſhing of ten Tides.

Gonz. Hee'l be hang'd yet,
Though every drop of water ſware againſt it,
And gape at wid'ſt to glut him. A confuſed noyſe within.
Mercy on us.
We ſplit, we ſplit, Farewell my wife, and children,
Farewell brother: we ſplit, we ſplit, we ſplit.

Anth. Let's all ſink with King.

Seb. Let's take leave of him. Exit.

Gonz. Now would I give a thouſand furlongs of Sea for an Acre of barren ground: Long heath, Brown firrs, any thing; the wills above be done, but I would fain die a dry death.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Proſpero and Miranda.

Mira. If by your Art (my deareſt father) you have Put the wild waters in this Rore; allay them:
The skie it ſeems would pour down ſtinking pitch,
But that the Sea, mounting to th'welkins cheek,
Daſhes the fire out. Oh! I have ſuffered
With thoſe that I ſaw ſuffer: A brave Veſſel

(Who had no doubt ſome noble creature in her)
Daſh'd all to pieces: Oh the cry did knock
Againſt my very heart: poor ſouls, they periſh'd.
Had I been any God of power, I would
Have ſunk the Sea within the Earth, or ere
It ſhould the good Ship ſo have ſwallow'd, and
The fraughting Souls within her.
Prof. Be collected,
No more amazement: Tell your piteous heart,
There's no harm done.
Mira. O wo, the day.
Prof. No harm.
I have done nothing, but in care of thee
(Of thee my dear one; thee my daughter) who
Art ignorant of what thou art, nought knowing
Of whence I am: nor that I am more better
Then Proſpero, Maſter of a full poor cell,
And thy no greater Father.
Mira. More to know
Did never meddle with my thoughts.
Prof. 'Tis time
I ſhould inform thee farther: Lend thy hand
And pluck my Magick garment from me: So,
Lye there my Art: wipe thou thine eyes, have comfort,
The direfull ſpectacle of the wrack, which touch'd
The very virtue of compaſſion in thee,
I have with ſuch compaſſion in mine Art
So ſafely ordered, that there is no ſoul,
No not ſo much perdition as an hair
Betide to any creature in the veſſell
Which thou heard'ſt cry, which thou ſaw'ſt ſink:
Sit down, for thou muſt now know farther.
Mira. You have often
Begun to tell me what I am, but ſtopt,
And left me to the bootleſſe Inquiſition,
Concluding, ſtay: not yet.
Prof. The hour's now come,
The very minute bids thee ope thine ear,
Obey, and be attentive. Canſt thou remember
A time before we came unto this Cell?
I doe not think thou canſt, for then thou was't not
Out three years old.
Mira. Certainly Sir, I can.
Prof. By what? by any other houſe; or perſon?
Of any thing the Image, tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.
Mira. 'Tis farre off.
And rather like a dream, then an aſſurance
That my remembrance warrants: Had I not
Four, or five women once, that tended me?
Prof. Thou hadſt; and more Miranda: But how is it
That this lives in thy mind? What ſeeſt thou elſe
In the dark backward and Abyſme of Time?
If thou remembreſt ought ere thou cam'ſt here,
How thou cam'ſt here thou may'ſt.
Mira. But that I doe not.
Prof. Twelve year ſince (Miranda) twelve year ſince,
Thy Father was the Duke of Millain, and
A Prince of Power.
Mira. Sir, are not you my Father?
Prof. Thy Mother was a piece of virtue, and
She ſaid thou waſt my Daughter; and thy Father
Was Duke of Millain, and his onely heir:
And Princeſſe; no worſe Iſſued.
Mira. O the heavens,
What foul play had we, that we came from thence?
Or bleſſed was't we did?
Prof. Both, both my Girl.
By foul play (as thou ſayeſt) were we heaved thence,
But bleſſedly holp hither.
Mira. O my heart bleeds
To think o'th' teene that I have turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance: pleaſe you, farther;
Prof. My Brother and thy Uncle, call'd Anthonio:
I pray thee mark me, that a Brother ſhould
Be ſo perfidious: he, whom next thy ſelf
Of all the world I lov'd, and to him put
The mannage of my ſtate, as at that time,
Through all the ſignories it was the firſt,
And Proſpero the prime Duke, being ſo reputed
In dignity; and for the Liberall Arts,
Without a parallell; thoſe being all my ſtudy.
The Government I caſt upon my Brother,
And to my ſtate grew ſtranger, being tranſported
And rapt in ſecret ſtudies, thy falſe Uncle
(Doeſt thou attend?)
Mira. Sir, moſt heedfully.
Prof. Being once perfected how to grant ſuits,
How to deny them: whom t'advance, and whom
To traſh for over-topping; new created
The creatures that were mine, I ſay, or chang'd 'em,
Or elſe new form'd'em; having both the key,
Of Officer, and office, ſet all hearts o'th ſtate
To what tune pleas'd his ear, that now he was
The Ivy which had hid my princely Trunck,
And ſuck't my verdure out on't: Thou attend'ſt not?
Mira. O good Sir, I doe.
Prof. I pray thee mark me:
I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To cloſeneſſe, and the bettering of my mind
With that, which but by being retired
Ore-priz'd all popular rate: in my falſe Brother
Awak'd an evill nature, and my truſt,
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falſhood in it's contrary, as great
As my truſt was, which had indeed no limit,
A confidence ſans bound. He being thus Lorded
Not onely with what my revenue yielded,
But what my power might elſe exact. Like one,
Who having into truth, by telling of it,
Made ſuch a ſinner of his Memory
To credit his own lie, he did believe
He was indeed the Duke, out o'th' Subſtitution
And executing th' outward face of Royalty
With all prerogative: hence his Ambition growing:
Do'ſt thou hear?
Mira. Your tale, Sir, would cure deafneſſe.
Prof. To have no Schreen between this part he plaid,
And him he plaid it for, he needs will be
Abſolute Millain, Me (poor man) my Library
Was Dukedome large enough: of temporall royalties
He thinks me now incapable. Confederates
(So drie he was for Sway) with King of Naples
To give him annuall tribute, doe him homage,
Subject his Coronet to his Crown, and bend
The Dukedome yet unbowed (alaſs poor Millain)
To much ignoble ſtooping.
Mira. Oh the Heavens.
Prof. Mark his condition, and th'event, then tell me
If this might be a Brother.
Mira. I ſhould ſin
To think but Nobly of my Grand-mother,

Good wombes have born bad ſons.
Pro. Now the condition.
This King of Naples being an Enemy
To me inveterate, hearkens my brothers ſuit,
Which was, That he in lieu o'th'premiſes,
Of homage, and I know not how much Tribute,
Should preſently extirpate me and mine
Outof the Dukedome, and confer fair Millain
With all the honours, on my brother: Whereon
A treacherous Army levied, one mid-night
Fated to th' purpoſe, did Anthonio open
The gates of Millain, and ith' dead of darkneſſe
The Miniſters for th' purpoſe hurried thence
Me, and thy crying ſelf.
Mir. Alack, for pity:
I not remembring how I cri'd out then
Will cry it o're again: it is a hint
That wrings mine eyes too't
Pro. Hear a little further,
And then I'le bring thee to the preſent buſineſſe
Which now's upon's without the which, this ſtory
Were moſt impertinent.
Mir. Wherefore did they not
That hour deſtroy us?
Pro. Well demanded, wench:
My tale provokes that queſtion: Dear, they durſt not,
So dear the love my people bore me: nor ſet
A mark ſo bloody on the buſineſſe; but
With colours fairer, painted their foul ends.
In few, they hurried us aboard a Bark,
Bore us ſome Leagues to Sea, where they prepared
A rotten carkaſſe of a Butt, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, nor ſail, nor maſt, the very rats
Inſtinctively have quit it: There they hoiſt us
To cry to th' Sea, that roar'd to us; to ſigh
To th'Winds, whoſe pity ſighing back again
Did us but loving wrong.
Mir. Alack, what trouble
Was I then to you?
Pro. O, a Cherubin
Thou was't that did preſerve me; Thou didſt ſmile,
Infuſed with a fortitude from heaven,
When I have deck't the Sea with drops full ſalt,
Under my burthen groan'd, which rais'd in me
An undergoing ſtomack, to bear up
Againſt what ſhould enſue.
Mir. How came we aſhore?
Pro. By providence divine,
Some food, we had, and ſome freſh water, that
A noble Neapolitan Gonzalo,
Out of his Charity, (who being then appointed Maſter of this deſign) did give us, with
Rich garments, linnens, ſtuffs, and neceſſaries
Which ſince have ſteeded much, ſo of his gentleneſſe
Knowing I lov'd my Books, he furniſhd me
From mine own Library, with volumes, that
I prize above my Dukedome.
Mir. Would I might
But ever ſee that man.
Pro. Now I ariſe,
Sit ſtill, and hear the laſt of our Sea-ſorrow:
Here in this Iſland we arriv'd, and here
Have I, thy School-maſter, made thee more profit
Then other Princeſſe can, that have more time
For vainer hours; and Tutors, not ſo carefull.
Mir. Heavens thank you for't. And now I pray you Sir,
For ſtill 'tis beating in my mind; your reaſon
For raiſing this Sea-ſtorm?
Pro. Know thus far forth,
By accident moſt ſtrange, bountifull Fortune
(Now my dear Lady) hath mine enemies
Brought to this ſhore: And by my preſcience
I find my Zenith doth depend upon
A moſt auſpitious ſtar, whoſe influence
If now I court not, but omit, my fortunes
Will ever after droop: Here ceaſe more queſtions,
Thou art inclin'd to ſleep: 'tis a good dulneſſe,
And give it way: I know thou canſt not chuſe;
Come away, Servant, come; I am ready now,
Approach my Ariel. Come. Enter Ariel.
Ari. All hail, great Maſter, grave Sir, hail I come
To anſwer thy beſt pleaſure; be it to fly,
To ſwim, to dive into the fire: to ride
On the curl'd clowds: to thy ſtrong bidding, task
Ariel, and all his Quality.
Pro. Haſt thou, Spirit,
Perform'd to point, the Tempeſt that I bad thee.
Ar. To every Article.
I boarded the Kings ſhip: now on the Beak,
Now in the Waſte, the Deck, in every Cabin,
I flam'd amazement, ſometimes I'ld divide
And burn in many places; on the top-maſt,
The Yards and Bore-ſprit, would I flame diſtinctly,
Then meet, and joyn. Joves Lightning, the precurſers
O 'th dreadfull Thunder-claps more momentarie
And ſight out-running were not; the fire and cracks
Of ſulphurous roaring, the moſt mighty Neptune
Seem to beſiege, and make his bold waves tremble,
Yea, his dead Trident ſhake.
Pro. My brave Spirit,
Who was ſo firm, ſo conſtant, that this coyl
Would not infect his reaſon?
Ar. Not a ſoul
But felt a Feaver of the madde, and plaid
Some tricks of deſperation; all but Mariners
Plung'd in the foaming bryne, and quit the veſſell;
Then all a fire with me the Kings ſon Ferdinand
With hair up-ſtaring (then like reeds, not hair)
Was the firſt man that leapt; cri'd hell is empty,
And all the Devils are here.
Pro. Why that's my ſpirit:
But was not this nigh ſhore?
Ar. Cloſe by, my Maſter.
Pro. But are they (Ariel) ſafe?
Ar. Not a hair periſhed:
On their ſuſtaining garments not a blemiſh,
But freſher then before: and as thou badſt me,
In troops I haue diſpers'd them 'bout the Iſle:
The Kings ſon have I landed by himſelf,
Whom I left cooling of the Aire with ſighs,
In an odde Angle of the Iſle, and ſitting,
His arms in this ſad knot.
Pro. Of the Kings ſhip,
The Mariners, ſay how thou haſt diſpos'd,
And all the reſt o'th' Fleet?
Ar. Safely in harbour
Is the Kings ſhip, in the deep Nook, where once
Thou call'dſt me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the ſtill-vext Bermoothes, there ſhee's hid;
The Mariners all under hatches ſtowed,
Who, with a Charm joyn'd to their ſuffered labour
I have left aſleep: and for the reſt o'th'Fleet

(Which I dispers'd) they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean Flote
Bound sadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they saw the Kings ship wrackt,
And his great person perish.
Pro. Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more work:
What is the time o'th' day?
Ar. Past the mid season.
Pro. At least two Glasses: the time 'twixt six and now
Must by us both be spent most preciously.
Ar. Is there more toyl? Since thou dost give me pains,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.
Pro. How now? moodie?
Which is't thou canst demand?
Ar. My Liberty.
Pro. Before the time be out? no more:
Ar. I prethee,
Remember I have done thee worthy service,
Told thee no lyes, made thee no mistakings, serv'd
Without or grudge, or grumblings; thou didst promise
To bate me a full year.
Pro. Do'st thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee? Ar. No.
Pro. Thou do'st: & thinkest it much to tread the Ooze
Of the salt deep;
To run upon the sharp wind of the North,
To doe me business in the veines o' th' earth
When it is bak'd with frost.
Ar. I doe not Sir.
Pro. Thou lieſt, malignant Thing: hast thou forgot
The foul Witch Sycorax, who with Age and Envy
Was grown into a Hoop? hast thou forgot her?
Ar. No Sir.
Pro. Thou hast: where was she born? speak: tell me:
Ar. Sir, in Argier.
Pro. Oh, was she so: I must
Once in a moneth recount what thou hast bin,
Which thou forgetst. This damn'd Witch Sycorax
For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter humane hearing, from Argier
Thou know'st was banish'd: for one thing she did
They would not take her life: Is not this true? Ar. I Sir.
Pro. This blew ey'd hag, was hither brought with child,
And here was left by th' Saylors; thou my slave,
As thou report'st thy self, was then her servant,
And, for thou wast a Spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhord commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee,
By help of her more potent ministers,
And in her most unmittigable rage,
Into a cloven Pyne; within which rift
Imprison'd, thou did'st painfully remain
A dozen years: within which space she di'd,
And left thee there: Where thou didst vent thy groans
As fast as Mill-wheels strike: Then was this Island
(Save for the Sun that he did littour here.
A frekelld whelp, hag-born) not honour'd with
A humane shape.
Ar. Yes: Caliban her son.
Pro. Dull thing, I say so; he, that Caliban
Whom now I keep in service, thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in; thy groans
Did make Woolves howl, and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry Beares; it was a torment
To lay upon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not again undoe: it was mine Art,
When I arriv'd, and heard thee, that made gape
The Pyne, and let thee out.
Ar. I thank thee Master.
Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an Oak
And peg thee in his knotty entrails, till
Thou hast howl'd away twelve winters.
Ar. Pardon, Master.
I will be correspondent to command
And doe my spriting gently.
Pro. Do so: and after two dayes
I will discharge thee.
Ar. That's my noble Master:
What shall I doe? say what? what shall I doe?
Pro. Go make thy self like to a Nymph o'th' Sea,
Be subject to no sight but thine, and mine: invisible
To every eye-ball else: go take this shape
And hither come in't: go: hence
With diligence. Exit.
Pro. Awake, dear heart awake, thou hast slept well,
Awake.
Mar. The strangeness of your story, put
Heavinesse in me.
Pro. Shake it off: Come on,
We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never
Yields us kind answer.
Mir. 'Tis a villain Sir, I doe not love to look on.
Pro. But as 'tis
We cannot misse him: he do's make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serves Offices
That profit us: What hoa: slave: Caliban:
Thou Earth thou: speak.
Cal. within. There's wood enough within.
Pro. Come forth I say, there's other business for thee:
Come thou Tortoys, when? Enter Ariel like a water-
Fine apparition: my quaint Ariel, Nymph.
Heark in thine ear.
Ar. My Lord, it shall be done. Exit.
Pro. Thou poisonous slave, got by the Devil himself
Upon thy wicked Dam; come forth. Enter Caliban.
Cal. As wicked dew, as ere my Mother brush'd
With Ravens feather from unwholsome Feh,
Drop on you both: A South-west blow on yee,
And blister you all o're.
Pro. For this be sure, to night thou shalt have cramps,
Side-stitches, that shall pen thy breath up, Urchins
Shall for that vast of night, that they may work
All exercise on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd
As thick as honny-combe, each pinch more stinging
Then Bees that made 'em.
Cal. I must eat my dinner:
This Island's mine by Sycorax my Mother,
Which thou tak'st from me: when thou cam'st first
Thou strok'st me, & made much of me: would'st give me
Water with berries in't: and teach me how
To name the bigger Light, and how the lesse,
That burn by day and night: and then I loved thee,
And shewed thee all the qualities o'th' Isle,
The fresh Springs, Brine-pits; barren place and fertill,
Curs'd be I that I did so? All the Charmes
Of Sycorax: Toads, Beetles, Bats light on you:
For I am all the Subjects that you have,
Which first was mine own King: and here you sty me
In this hard Rock, whiles you doe keep from me
The rest o'th' Island.

Pro.

Pro. Thou moſt lying ſlave,
Whom ſtripes may move, not kindnes: I have us'd thee
(Filth as thou art) with humane care, and lodg'd thee
In mine own Cell, till thou didſt ſeek to violate
The honour of my childe.
Cal. Oh ho, oh ho, would't had been done:
Thou didſt prevent me, I had peopel'd elſe
This Iſle with Calibans.
Mir. Abhorred Slave,
Which any print of goodneſs will not take,
Being capable of all ill: I pittyed thee,
Took pains to make thee ſpeak, taught thee each hour
One thing or other: when thou didſt not (Savage)
Know thine own meaning; but wouldſt gabble, like
A thing moſt brutiſh, I endow'd thy purpoſes
With words that made them known: But thy vild race
(Tho thou didſt learn) had that int't, which good natures
Could not abide to be with; therefore wa'ſt thou
Deſervedly confin'd into this Rock, who hadſt
Deſerv'd more then a priſon.
Cal. You taught me Language, and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curſe: the red-plague rid you
For learning me your language.
Pro. Hag-ſeed hence:
Fetch us in Fewel, and be quick thou'rt beſt
To anſwer other buſineſſe: ſhrug'ſt thou (Malice)
If thou neglect'ſt, or doſt unwillingly
What I command, Ile rack thee with old cramp's,
Fill all thy bones with Aches, make thee rore,
That beaſts ſhall tremble at thy dyn.
Cal. No, 'pray thee.
I muſt obey, his Art is of ſuch pow'r,
It would controll my Dam's god Setebos,
And make a vaſſaile of him.
Pro. So ſlave, hence.
Enter Ferdinand and Ariel, inviſible playing & ſinging.
Ariel's Song. Come unto theſe yellow ſands,
and then take hands:
Curt'ſied when you have, and kiſt
the wild wav's whiſt:
Foot it featly here and there, and ſweet Sprights bear
the burthen. Burthen diſperſedly.
Hark, hark, bough-wawgh: the watch-Dogs bark,
bough-wawgh.
Ar. Hark, hark, I hear the ſtrain of ſtrutting Chanticlere,
cry cockadidle-dowe.
Fer. Where ſhould this Muſick be? I'th aire, or th'earth?
It ſounds no more: and ſure it waits upon
Some god 'oth' Iland, ſitting on a bank,
Weeping again the King my Fathers wrack.
This Muſick crept by me upon the Waters;
Allaying both their fury, and my paſſion
With it's ſweet ayre: thence I have follow'd it
(Or it hath drawn me rather) but 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.
Ariel's Song. Full fadom five thy Father lies;
Of his bones are Corrall made:
Thoſe are pearl's that were his eyes,
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth ſuffer a Sea-change
Into ſomething rich, and ſtrange:
Sea-Nimphs hourly ring his knell.
Burthen: ding dong.
Hark now I hear them, ding-dong bell.
Fer. The Ditty do's remember my drown'd father,
This is no mortal buſineſſe, nor no ſound
That the earth owes: I hear it now above me.
Pro. The fringed Curtains of thine eye advance,
And ſay what thou ſee'ſt yond.
Mira. What is't a ſpirit?
Lord, how it look's about: Believe me ſir,
It carries a brave forme. But 'tis a ſpirit,
Pro. No wench, it eats, and ſleeps, and hath ſuch ſenſes
As we have; ſuch. This Gallant which thou ſeeſt
Was in the wrack: and but hee's ſomething ſtain'd
With grief (that's beauties canker) thou might'ſt call him
A goodly perſon: he hath loſt his fellowes,
And ſtrayes about to finde'em
Mir. I might call him
A thing divine, for nothing natural
I ever ſaw ſo Noble.
Pro. It goes on I ſee
As my ſoul prompts it: Spirit, fine ſpirit, I'le free thee
Within two dayes for this.
Fer. Moſt ſure the god deſſe
On whom theſe ayres attend. Vouchſafe my pray'r
May know, if you remain upon this Iſland,
And that you will ſome good inſtruction give
How I may bear me here: my prime requeſt
(Which I do laſt pronounce) is (O you wonder)
If you be Maid, or no?
Mir. No wonder ſir,
But certainly a Maid.
Fer. My Language? Heavens:
I am the beſt of them that ſpeak this ſpeech,
Were I but where 'tis ſpoken.
Pro. How? the beſt?
What wer't thou if the King of Naples heard thee?
Fer. A ſingle thing, as I am now, that wonders
To hear Thee ſpeak of Naples: he do's hear me,
And that he do's, I weep: my ſelf am Naples,
Who, with mine eyes (never ſince at ebbe) beheld
The King my Father wrack't.
Mir. Alack, for mercy.
Fer. Yes faith, and all his Lords, the Duke of Millain
And his brave ſon, being twain.
Pro. The Duke of Millain
And his more braver daughter, could controll thee,
If now 'twere fit to do't: At the firſt ſight
They have chang'd eyes: Dilicate Ariel,
Ile ſet thee free for this. A word good Sir,
I fear you have done your ſelf ſome wrong: A word,
Mir. Why ſpeaks my father ſo urgently? This
Is the third man that ere I ſaw: the firſt
That ere I ſigh'd for: pitty move my father
To be enclin'd my way.
Fer. O, if a Virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, Ile make you
The Queen of Naples.
Pro. Soft Sir, one word more.
They are both in eithers pow'rs: But this ſwift buſineſs
I muſt uneaſie make, leaſt too light winning
Make the prize light. One word more: I charge thee
That thou attend me: Thou do'ſt here uſurpe
The name thou ow'ſt not, and haſt put thy ſelf
Upon this Iſland, as a ſpye, to win it
From me, the Lord on't
Fer. No, as I am a man.
Mir. Ther's nothing ill, can dwell in ſuch a Temple.
If the ill-ſpirit have ſo fair a houſe,
Good things will ſtrive to dwell with't.
Pro. Follow me.

Proſ. Speak not you for him: he's a Traitour: come,
I'le manacle thy neck and feet together:
Sea water ſhalt thou drink: thy food ſhall be
The freſh-brook Muſsles, wither'd roots, and husks
Wherein the Acorn cradled. Follow.
Fer. No,
I will reſiſt ſuch entertainment, till
Mine enemy ha's more pow'r.
He drawes, and is charmed from moving.
Mira. O dear Father;
Make not too raſh a triall of him, for
He's gentle, and not fearfull.
Proſ. What I ſay,
My foot my Tutor? Put thy ſword up Traitour,
Who makes a ſhew, but dar'ſt not ſtrike: thy conſcience
Is poſſeſt with guilt: Come from thy ward,
For I can hear diſarm thee with this ſtick,
And make thy weapon drop.
Mir. Beſeech you Father.
Pro. Hence: hang not on my garments.
Mir. Sir, have pity,
I'le be his ſurety.
Pro. Silence: One word more
Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee: What,
An advocate for an Impoſtor? Huſh:
Thou think'ſt there is no more ſuch ſhapes as he,
(Having ſeen but him and Caliban:) Fooliſh wench,
To th' moſt of men, this is a Caliban,
And they to him are Angels.
Mir. My affections
Are then moſt humble: I have no ambition
To ſee a goodlier man.
Pro. Come on, obey:
Thy Nerves are in their infancy again,
And have no vigour in them.
Fer. So they are:
My ſpirits, as in a dream, are all bound up:
My Fathers loſſe, the weakneſs which I feel,
The wrack of all my friends, nor this mans threats,
To whom I am ſubdu'd, are but light to me,
Might I but through my priſon once a day
Behold this Maid: all corners elſe o'th' Earth
Let liberty make uſe of: ſpace enough
Have I in ſuch a priſon.
Pro. It works: Come on.
Thou haſt done well, fine Ariell: follow me.
Hark what thou elſe ſhalt doe me.
Mir. Be of comfort,
My Father's of a better nature (Sir)
Then he appears by ſpeech: this is unwonted
Which now came from him.
Pro. Thou ſhalt be as free
As mountain winds, but then exactly doe
All points of my command.
Ar. To th' ſyllable.
Pro. Come follow: ſpeak not for him. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Alonſo, Sebaſtian, Anthonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Franciſco, and others.

Gonz. Beſeech you Sir, be merry: you have cauſe,
(So have we all) of joy; for our eſcape
Is much beyond our loſſe; our hint of woe
Is common, every day, ſome Sailors Wife,
The Maſters of ſome Merchant, and the Merchant
Have juſt our Theam of woe: But for the miracle,
(I mean our preſervation) few in millions
Can ſpeak like us: then wiſely (good Sir) weigh
Our ſorrow, with our comfort.
Alonſ. Prethee peace.
Seb. He receives comfort like cold porredge.
Ant. The Viſitor will not give him o're ſo.
Seb. Look, he's winding up the Watch of his wit,
By and by it will ſtrike.
Gon. Sir.
Seb. On: Tell.
Gon. When every grief is entertain'd,
That's offer'd comes to th' entertainer.
Seb. A dollor.
Gon. Dolour comes to him indeed, you have ſpoken truer then you purpos'd.
Seb. You have taken it wiſelier then I meant you ſhould.
Gon. Therefore my Lord.
Ant. Fie, what a ſpend-thrift is he of his tongue.
Alon. I prethee ſpare.
Gon. Well, I have done: But yet
Seb. He will be talking.
Ant. Which, of he, or Adrian, for a good wager,
Firſt begins to crow?
Seb. The old Cock.
Ant. The Cockrell.
Seb. Done: The wager?
Ant. A laughter.
Seb. A match.
Adr. Though this Iſland ſeem to be deſert.
Seb. Ha, ha, ha.
Ant. So; you're paid.
Adr. Uninhabitable, and almoſt inacceſſible.
Seb. Yet.
Adr. Yet.
Ant. He could not miſs't.
Adr. It muſt needs be of ſubtle, tender, and delicate temperance.
Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.
Seb. I, and a ſubtle, as he moſt learnedly deliver'd.
Adr. The aire breathes upon us here moſt ſweetly.
Seb. As if it had Lungs, and rotten ones.
Ant. Or, as 'twere perfum'd by a Fen.
Gon. Here is every thing advantageous to life.
Ant. True, ſave means to live.
Seb. Of that there's none, or little.
Gon. How luſh and luſty the graſſe looks? How green?
Ant. The ground indeed is tawny.
Seb. With an eye of green in't.
Ant. He miſſes not much.
Seb. No: he doth but miſtake the truth totally.
Gon. But the rarity of it is, which is indeed almoſt beyond credit.
Seb. As many vouch't rarities are.
Gon. That our Garments being (as they were) drencht in the Sea, hold notwithſtanding their freſhneſſe and gloſſes, being rather new dy'd then ſtain'd with ſalt water.
Ant. If but one of his pockets could ſpeak, would it not ſay he lies?
Seb. I, or very falſely pocket up his report.

Gon.

Gon. Methinks our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Affrick, at the marriage of the Kings fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our return.

Adri. Tunis was never grac'd before with such a Paragon to their Queen.

Gon. Not since Widow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow? a pox o' that: how came that Widow in? Widow Dido!

Seb. What if he had said Widower Æneas too? Good Lord, how you take it?

Adri. Widow Dido said you? You make me study of that: She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.

Gon. This Tunis Sir was Carthage.

Adri. Carthage? Gon. I assure you Carthage.

Ant. His word is more then the miraculous Harp.

Seb. He hath rais'd the wall, and houses too.

Ant. What impossible matter will he make easie next?

Seb. I think he will carry this Island home in his pocket, and give it his son for an Apple.

Ant. And sowing the kernels of it in the Sea, bring forth more Islands.

Gon. I. Ant. Why in good time.

Gon. Sir, we were talking, that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now Queen.

Ant. And the rarest that ere came there.

Seb. Bate (I beseech you) Widow Dido.

Ant. O Widow Dido? I, Widow Dido.

Gon. Is not my Doublet Sir as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean in a sort.

Ant. That sort was well fish'd for.

Gon. When I wore it at your daughters marriage.

Alon. You cram these words into mine ears, against the stomack of my sense: would I had never Married my daughter there: For comming thence My son is lost, and (in my rate) she too, Who is so far from Italy removed, I ne're again shall see her: O thou mine heir Of Naples and of Millain, what strange fish Hath made his meal on thee?

Fran. Sir he may live. I saw him beat the surges under him, And ride upon their backs; he trod the water Whose enmity he flung aside: and brested The surge most swoln that met him: his bold head 'Bove the contentious waves he kept and oared. Himself with his good armes in lusty stroke To th'shore; that ore his wave-worn basis bowed As stooping to relieve him: I not doubt He came alive to Land.

Alon. No, no, he's gone.

Seb. Sir you may thank your self for this great losse, That would not blesse our Europe with your daughter, But rather lose her to an Affrican. Where she at least, is banish'd from your eye, Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.

Alon. Prethee peace.

Seb. You were kneel'd too, and importun'd otherwise By all of us: and the fair soul her self Waigh'd between loathnesse, and obedience, at Which end o'th beam should bow: we have lost your I fear for ever: Millain and Naples have (son, Mo Widows in them of this businesse making, Then we bring men to comfort them: The fault's your own.

Alon. So is the deer'st o'th' losse.

Gon. My Lord Sebastian, The truth you speak doth lack some gentlenesse, And time to speak it in: you rub the sore, When you should bring the plaister.

Seb. Very well. Ant. And most Chirurgeonly.

Gon. It is foul weather in us all, good Sir, When you are cloudy.

Seb. Foul weather? Ant. Very foul

Gon. Had I plantation of this Isle my Lord.

Ant. He'd sow't with Nettle-seed.

Seb. Or Docks, or Mallows.

Gon. And were the King on't, what would I doe?

Seb. Scape being drunk, for want of Wine.

Gon. I'th' Commonwealth I would (by contraries) Execute all things: For no kind of Traffick Would I admit: No name of Magistrate: Letters should not be known: Riches, poverty, And use of service, none: Contract, Succession, Born, bound of Land, Tilth, Vineyard none: No use of Metall, Corn, or Wine, or Oyl: No occupation, all men idle, all: And women too, but innocent and pure: No Soveraignty.

Seb. Yet he would be King on't.

Ant. The latter end of his Common-wealth forgets the beginning.

Gon. All things in common Nature should produce Without sweat or endeavour: Treason, fellony, Sword, Pike, Knife, Gun, or need of any Engine Would I not have: but Nature should bring forth Of it's own kind, all foyzon, all abundance To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying 'mong his Subjects?

Ant. None (man) all idle; Whores and Knaves,

Gon. I would with such perfection govern Sir: T' excell the Golden Age.

Seb. 'Save his Majesty. Ant. Long live Gonzalo.

Gon. And doe you marke me, Sir? (me.

Alon. Prethee no more: thou dos't talk nothing to

Gon. I doe well believe your Highnesse, and did it to minister occasion to these Gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble Lungs, that they alwayes use to laugh at nothing.

Ant. 'Twas you we laugh'd at.

Gon. Who, in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you: so you may continue, and laugh at nothiog still.

Ant. What a blow was there given?

Seb. And it had not faln flat-long.

Gon. You are Gentlemen of a brave metal: you would lift the Moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter Ariell playing solemn Musick,

Seb. We would so, and then go a Bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay good my Lord, be not angry.

Gon. No I warrant you, I will not adventure my discretion so weakly: Will you laugh me asleep, for I am very heavy.

Ant. Go sleep and hear us.

Alon. What, all so soon asleep? I wish mine eyes Would (with themselves) shut up my thoughts, I find they are inclin'd to doe so.

Seb. Please you Sir, Doe not omit the heavy offer of it: It seldome visits sorrow, when it doth, it is a Comforter

Ant.

Ant. We two my Lord, will guard your person,
While you take your rest, and watch your safety.
Alon. Thank you: Wondrous heavy.
Seb. What a strange drowsinesse possesses them?
Ant. It is the quality o' th' Clymate.
Seb. Why.
Doth it not then our eye-lids sinke? I finde
Not my self dispos'd to sleep:
Ant. Nor I, my spirits are nimble:
They fell together all, as by consent
They dropt, as by a Thunder-stroke: what might:
Worthy Sebastian? O, what might? no more
And yet, me thinks I see it in thy face,
What thou should'st be: th' occasion speak's thee, and
My strong imagination see's a Crown
Dropping upon thy head.
Seb. What? art thou waking?
Ant. Do you not hear me speak?
Seb. I do, and surely
It is a sleepy Language, and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleep: What is it thou didst say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleep
With eyes wide open: standing, speaking, moving:
And yet so fast asleep.
Ant. Noble Sebastian,
Thou let'st thy fortune sleep: die rather: wink'st
Whiles thou art waking.
Seb. Thou do'st snore distinctly,
There's meaning in thy snores.
Ant. I am more serious then my custome: you
Must be so too, if heed me: which to doe,
Trebbles thee o're.
Seb. Well: I am standing water.
Ant. I'le teach you how to flow.
Seb. Do so: to ebbe,
Hereditary Sloth instructs me.
Ant. O!
If you but knew how you the purpose cherish
Whiles thus you mock it: how in stripping it
You more invest it: ebbing men, indeed
(Most often) doe so near the bottom run
By their own fear, or sloth.
Seb. 'Prethee say on,
The setting of thine eye, and cheek proclaim
A matter from thee: and a birth, indeed,
Which throwes thee much to yield.
Ant. Thus Sir:
Although this Lord of weak remembrance; this
Who shall be of as little memory
When he is earth'd, hath here almost perswaded
(For he's a Spirit of perswasion, onely
Professes to perswade) the King his son's alive,
'Tis as impossible that he's undrown'd,
As he that sleeps here, swims.
Seb. I have no hope,
That he's undrown'd.
Ant. O, out of that no hope,
What great hope have you? No hope that way: Is Another way, so high a hope, that even
Ambition cannot pierce a wink beyond,
But doubt discovery there. Will you grant with me
That Ferdinand is drown'd?
Seb. He's gone.
Ant. Then tell me who's the next heir of Naples?
Seb. Claribell.
Ant. She that is Queen of Tunis: she that dwells
Ten leagues beyond mans life: she that from Naples
Can have no note, unlesse the Sun were post:
The Man i'th Moon's too slow, till new-born chinnes
Be rough, and Razor-able: She that from whom
We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast again,
And by that destiny to perform an act,
Whereof, what's past in prologue; what to come
In yours, and my discharge.
Seb. What stuffe is this? How say you?
'Tis true, my brother's daughter's Queen of Tunis,
So is she heir of Naples, 'twixt which Regions
There is some space.
Ant. A space, whose ev'ry cubit
Seems to cry out, how shall that Claribell
Measure us back by Naples? keep in Tunis.
And let Sebastian wake. Say, this were death
That now hath seiz'd them, why they were no worse
Then now they are: There be that can rule Naples
As well as he that sleeps: Lords, that can prate
As amply, and unnecessarily
As this Gonzalo: I my self could make
A Chough of as deep chat: O, that you bore
The mind that I do; what a sleep were this
For your advancement! Doe you understand me?
Seb. Me thinks I doe.
Ant. And how do's your content
Tender your own good fortune?
Seb. I remember
You did supplant your Brother Prospero.
Ant. True:
And look how well my Garments sit upon me,
Much feater then before: My Brother's servants
Were then my fellows, now they are my men.
Seb. But for your conscience.
Ant. I Sir: where lies that? If 'twere a kybe
'Twould put me to my slipper: But I feel not
This Deity in my bosome: Twenty consciences
That stand 'twixt me, and Millain, candied be they,
And melt ere they molest: Here lies your Brother,
No better then the earth he lies upon,
If he were that which now he's like (that's dead)
Whom I with this obedient steel (three inches of it)
Can lay to bed for ever: whiles you doing thus,
To the perpetuall wink for aye might put
This ancient morsell: this Sir Prudence, who
Should not upbraid our course: for all the rest
They'l take suggestion, as a Cat laps milk,
They'l tell the clock, to any businesse that
We say befits the hour.
Seb. Thy case, dear Friend
Shall be my president: As thou got'st Millain,
I'le come by Naples: Draw thy sword, one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou payest,
And I the King shall love thee.
Ant. Draw together:
And when I rear my hand, doe you the like
To fall it on Gonzalo.
Seb. O, but one word,
Enter Ariell with Musick and Song.
Ariel. My Master through his Art foresees the danger
That you (his friend) are in, and sends me forth
(For else his project dies) to keep them living.
Sings in Gonzalo's ear.
While you here do snoaring lie,
Open-ey'd Conspiracie
His time doth take:

If

If of Life you keep a care,
Shake of ſlumber and beware.
Awake, awake.

Ant. Then let us both be ſudden.

Gon. Now, good Angels preſerve the King.

Alo. Why how now hoa; awake? why are you drawn? Wherefore this ghaſtly looking?

Gon. What's the matter?

Seb. Whiles we ſtood here ſecuring your repoſe, (Even now) we heard a hollow burſt of bellowing Like Bulls, or rather Lyons, did't not wake you? It ſtrook mine ear moſt terribly.

Alo. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a Monſter's ear; To make an earthquake: ſure it was the roare Of a whole herd of Lyons.

Alo. Heard you this Gonzalo?

Gon. Upon mine honour, Sir, I heard a humming, (And that a ſtrange one too) which did awake me: I ſhak'd you Sir, and cri'd: as mine eyes open'd, I ſaw their weapons drawn: there was a noyſe, That's verily: 'tis beſt we ſtand upon our guard; Or that we quit this place: let's draw our weapons.

Alo. Lead off this ground, and let's make further ſearch For my poor ſon.

Gon. Heavens keep him from theſe Beaſts: For he is ſure i'th Iſland.

Alo. Lead away.

Ar. Proſpero, my Lord, ſhall know what I have done. So (King) go ſafely on to ſeek thy Son. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Caliban, with a burthen of wood (a noyſe of Thunder heard.)

Cal. All the infections that the Sun ſucks up From Bogs, Fens, Flats, on Proſper fall, and make him By ynch-meal a diſeaſe: his Spirits hear me, And yet I needs muſt curſe. But they'l not pinch, Fright me with Urchin-ſhewes, pitch me i'th mire, Nor lead me like a fire-brand, in the dark Out of my way, unleſſe he bid'em; but For every trifle, are they ſet upon me, Sometime like Apes, that moe and chatter at me, And after bite me: then like Hedg-hogs, which Lie tumbling in my barefoot way, and mount Their pricks at my foot-fall: ſometime am I All wound with Adders, who with cloven tongues Do hiſſe me into madneſſe: Lo, now Lo, Enter. Here comes a Spirit of his, and to torment me, Trinculo. For bringing wood in ſlowly: I'le fall flat, Perchance he will not mind me.

Tri. Here's neither buſh, nor ſhrub to bear off any weather at all: and another ſtorm brewing, I hear it ſing 'ith wind: yond ſame black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bumbard that would ſhed his liquor; if it ſhould thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond ſame cloud cannot chuſe but fall by pailefulls. What have we here, a man, or a fiſh? dead or alive? a fiſh, he ſmells like a fiſh: a very ancient and fiſh-like ſmell: a kind of, not of the neweſt poor John: a ſtrange fiſh: were I in England now (as once I was) and had but this fiſh painted; not a holy-day fool there but would give a piece of ſilver: there, would this monſter, make a man: any ſtrange beaſt there, makes a man: when they will not give a doit to relieve a lame Beggar, they will lay out ten to ſee a dead Indian: Leg'd like a man; and his Fins like Armes; warm o' my troth: I doe now let looſe my opinion; hold it no longer; this is no fiſh, but an Iſlander, that hath lately ſuffered by a Thunderbolt: Alaſs, the ſtorm is come again: my beſt way is to creep under his Gaberdine: there is no other ſhelter hereabout: Miſery acquaints a man with ſtrange bedfellows: I will here ſhrowd till the dregs of the ſtorm be paſt.

Enter Stephano ſinging.

Ste. I ſhall no more to ſea to ſea, here ſhall I dye aſhore.
This is a very ſcurvy tune to ſing at a mans Funerall: well, here's my comfort. Drinks.
Sings. The Maſter, the Swabber, the Boat-ſwain & I;
The Gunner, and his Mate,
Lov'd Mall, Meg, and Marrian, and Margery,
But none of us car'd for Kate,
For ſhe had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a Sailour go hang:
She lov'd not the ſavour of Tar nor of Pitch,
Yet a Taylor might ſcratch her where ere ſhe did itch,
Then to Sea Boys, and let her go hang.
This is a ſcurvy tune too:
But here's my comfort. drinks.

Cal. Doe not torment me: oh.

Ste. What's the matter?
Have we Devils here?
Do you put tricks upon's with Salvages, and Men of Inde? ha? I have not ſcap'd drowning, to be afeard now of your four legs: for it hath bin ſaid: as proper a man as ever went on four legs, cannot make him give ground: and it ſhall be ſaid ſo again, while Stephano breathes at noſtrils.

Cal. The Spirit torments me: oh.

Ste. This is ſome monſter of the Iſle, with four legs: who hath got (as I take it) an ague: where the Devil ſhould he learn our language? I will give him ſome relief if it be but for that: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a Preſent for any Emperour that ever trod on Neats-Leather.

Cal. Doe not torment me 'prethee: I'le bring my wood home faſter.

Ste. He's in his fit now; and do's not talk after the wiſeſt; he ſhall taſte of my Bottle: if he have never drunk Wine afore, it will go near to remove his Fit: if I can recover him, and keep him tame, I will not take too much for him; he ſhall pay for him that hath him, and that ſoundly.

Cal. Thou doſt me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: Now Proſper works upon thee.

Ste. Come on your wayes: open your mouth: here is that which will give language to you Cat; open your mouth; this will ſhake your ſhaking, I can tell you, and that ſoundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps again.

Tri. I ſhould know that voyce:
It ſhould be,——

But he is drown'd; and theſe are Devils; O defend me.

Ste. Four legs and two voyces; a moſt delicate Monſter: his forward voyce now is to ſpeak of his friend; his backward voyce, is to utter foul ſpeeches, and to detract: if all the Wine in my Bottle will recover him, I will help his Ague: Come: Amen, I will poure ſome in thy other mouth.

Tri. Stephano.

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy: This is a Devil and no Monſter: I will leave him, I have no long Spoon,

Tri. Stephano: if thou beeſt Stephano, touch me, and ſpeak to me: for I am Trinculo; be not afeard, thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou beeſt Trinculo: come forth: I'le pull thee by the leſſer legs: if any be Trinculo's legs theſe are they: Thou art very Trinculo indeed: how cam'ſt thou to be the ſiege of this Moon-calf? Can he vent Trinculo's!

Tri. I took him to be kill'd with a thunder-ſtroke; but art thou not drown'd Stephano: I hope now thou art not drown'd: Is the ſtorm over-blown? I hid me under the dead Moon-Calfes Gaberdine, for fear of the Storm: And art thou living Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitanes ſcap'd?

Ste. 'Prethee doe not turn me about, my ſtomack is not conſtant.

Cal. Theſe be fine things, and if they be not ſprights: that's a brave god, and bears Celeſtiall liquor: I will kneel to him.

Ste. How did'ſt thou ſcape?
How cam'ſt thou hither?
Swear by this Bottle how thou cam'ſt hither: I eſcap'd upon a But of Sack, which the Saylors heaved o're-board, by this Bottle which I made of the Bark of a Tree, with mine own hands, ſince I was caſt aſhore.

Cal. I'le ſwear upon that Bottle, to be thy true Subject, for the liquor is not earthly.

Ste. Here: ſwear then how thou eſcap'dſt.

Tri. Swom aſhore (man) like a Duck; I can ſwim like a Duck i'le be ſworn.

Ste. Here, kiſſe the Book.
Though thou canſt ſwim like a Duck, thou art made like a Gooſe.

Tri. O Stephano, has't any more of this?

Ste. The whole But (man) my Cellar is in a rock by th'Sea ſide, where my wine is hid:
How now Moon-Calf, how do's thine Ague?

Cal. Has't thou not dropt from heaven?

Ste. Out o'th Moon I doe aſſure thee. I was the Man ith' Moon when time was.

Cal. I have ſeen thee in her: and I doe adore thee: My Miſtreſſe ſhew'd me thee, and thy Dog, and thy Buſh.

Ste. Come ſwear to that: kiſſe the Book: I will furniſh it anon with the new contents: Swear.

Tri. By this good light, this is a very ſhallow Monſter: I afeard of him? a very ſhallow Monſter:
The Man ith' Moon?
A moſt poor credulous Monſter:
Well drawn Monſter, in good ſooth.

Cal. I'le ſhew the every fertill ynch o'th' Iſle: and I will kiſſe thy foot: I prethee be my god.

Tri. By this light, a moſt perfidious, and drunken Monſter, when's god's aſleep hee'll rob his Bottle.

Cal. I'le kiſſe thy foot. I'le ſwear my ſelf thy Subject.

Ste. Come on then: down and ſwear.

Tri. I ſhall laugh my ſelf to death at this puppy-headed Monſter: a moſt ſcurvie Monſter: I could find in my heart to beat him.

Ste. Come, kiſſe.

Tri. But that the poor Monſter's in drink:
An abhominable Monſter.

Cal I'le ſhew thee the beſt Springs: I'le pluck thee Berries: I'le fiſh for thee; and get thee wood enough.
A plague upon the Tyrant that I ſerve;
I'le bear him no more Sticks, but follow thee, thou wondrous man.

Tri. A moſt ridiculous Monſter, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard.

Cal. I prethee let me bring thee where Crabs grow; and I with my long nayles will dig thee pig-nuts; ſhow thee a Jay's neſt, and inſtruct thee how to ſnare the nimble Marmazet: I'le bring thee to cluſtring Philbirts, and ſometimes I'le get thee young Scamels from the Rock: Wilt thou go with me?

Cal. I prethee now lead the way without any more talking. Trinculo, the King, and all our company elſe being drownd, we will inherit here: Here; bear my Bottle: Fellow Trinculo; we'll fill him by and by again:

Caliban ſings drunkenly.

Farewell Maſter; farewell, farewell.

Tri. A howling Monſter: a drunken Monſter.

Cal. No more dams I'le make for fiſh,
Nor fetch in firing, at requiring,
Nor ſcrape trenchering, nor waſh diſh,
Ban' ban', Cacalyban
Has a new Maſter, get a new Man,

Freedome, high-day, high-day freedome, freedome high-day freedome.

Ste. O brave Monſter, lead the way. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Ferdinand (bearing a Log.)

Fer. There be ſome ſports are painfull; and their labour
Delight in them ſet off: Some kinds of baſeneſſe
Are nobly undergon; and moſt poor matters
Point to rich ends: this my mean Task
Would be as heavy to me, as odious, but
The Miſtreſſe which I ſerve, quickens what's dead,
And makes my labours pleaſures: O ſhe is
Ten times more gentle, then her Father's crabbed;
And he's compo'd of hatſhneſſe, I muſt remove
Some thouſands of theſe Logs; and pile them up,
Upon a ſore injunction; my ſweet Miſtreſſe
Weeps when ſhe ſees me work, and ſays, ſuch baſeneſſe
Had never like Executor: I forget:
But theſe ſweet thoughts, doe even refreſh my labours,
Moſt buſie leaſt, when I doe it. Enter Miranda and Proſpero.

Mir. Alaſs, now pray you.
Work not ſo hard: I would the lightning had
Burnt up thoſe Logs that thou art enjoyned to pile:
Pray ſet it down, and reſt you: when this burns
'Twill weep for having wearied you: my Father
Is hard at ſtudy, pray now reſt your ſelf,

He's

Hee's safe for these three hours.
Fer. O most dear Mistresse,
The Sun will set before I shall discharge
What I must strive to doe.
Mer. If you'l sit down
I'le bear your Logs the while: pray give me that,
I'le carry it to the pile.
Fer. No precious Creature,
I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,
Then you should such dishonor undergoe,
While I sit lazy by.
Mir. It would become me.
As well as it do's you; and I should do it
With much more ease: for my good will is to it,
And yours it is against.
Pro. Poor worm thou art infected,
This visitation shews it.
Mir. You look wearily.
Fer. No, noble Mistress, 'tis fresh morning with me.
When you are by at night: I do beseech you
Chiefly, that I might set it in my prayers,
What is your name?
Mir. Miranda. O my Father,
I have broke your hest to say so.
Fer. Admir'd Miranda,
Indeed the top of Admiration, worth
What's dearest to the world: full many a Lady
I have ey'd with best regard, and many a time
Th'harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear: for several virtues
Have I lik'd several women, never any
With so full soul, but some defect in her
Did quarrell with the noblest grace she ow'd,
And put it to the foyl. But you, O you,
So perfect, and so peerlesse, are created
Of every Creatures best.
Mir. I doe not know
One of my sex; no womans face remember,
Save from my glasse, mine own: Nor have I seen
More that I may call men, then you good friend,
And my dear Father: how features are abroad
I am skilleſse of; but my modesty
(The jewell in my dower) I would not wish
Any Companion in the world but you;
Nor can imagination form a shape,
Besides your self, to like of: but I prattle
Something too wildely, and my Fathers precepts
I therein doe forget.
Fer. I am, in my condition
A Prince (Miranda) I doe think a King
(I would not so) and would no more endure
This woodden slavery, then to suffer
The flesh-flie blow my mouth: hear my soul speak.
The very instant that I saw you did
My heart flie to your service, there resides
To make me slave to it, and for your sake
Am I this patient Log-man.
Mir. Do you love me!
Fer. O heaven; O earth, bear witnesse to this sound,
And crown what I professe with kind event
If I speak true: if hollowly, invert
What best is boaded me, to mischief: I,
Beyond all limit of what else i'th' world
Do love, prize, honour you.
Mir. I am a fool
To weep at what I am glad of.
Pro. Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections: heavens rain grace
On that which breeds between'em.
Fer. Wherefore weep you?
Mir. At mine unworthinesse that dare not offer
What I desire to give, and much lesse take
What I shall die to want: But this is trifling,
And all the more it seekt to hide it self,
The bigger bulk it shews. Hence bashfull cunning,
And prompt me plain and holy innocence.
I am your wife if you will marry me;
If not, I'le die your maid: to be your fellow
You may denie me; but I'le be your servant
Whether you will or no.
Fer. My Mistresse (dearest)
And I thus humble ever.
Mir. My Husband then?
Fer. I, with a heart so willing
As bondage ere of freedome: here's my hand.
Mir. And mine, with my heart in't; and now farewell
Till half an hour hence.
Fer. A thousand, thousand. Exeunt.
Pro. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
Who are surpriz'd with all; but my rejoycing
At nothing can be more: I'le to my book,
For yet ere supper time must I perform
Much businesse appertaining. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me, when the But is out we will drink water, not a drop, before; therefore bear up, and board 'em Servant Monster, drink to me.
Trin. Servant Monster? the folly of this Iland, they say there's but five upon this Isle; we are three of them, if th'other two be brain'd like us, the State totters.
Ste. Drink servant Monster when I bid thee, thy eyes are almost set in thy head.
Trin. Where should they be set else? he were a brave Monster indeed if they were set in his tail.
Ste. My man-Monster hath drown'd his tongue in Sack: for my part the Sea cannot drown me, I swam ere I could recover the shore, five and thirty Leagues, off and on, by this light thou shalt be my Lieutenant Monster, or my Standard.
Trin. Your Lieutenant if you list, hee's no standard.
Ste. Wee'l not run Monsieur Monster.
Trin. Nor go neither: but you'l lye like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.
Ste. Moon-calf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good Moon-calf.
Cal. How does thy honour? Let me lick thy shooe: I'le not serve him, he is not valiant.
Trin. Thou liest most ignorant Monster, I am in case to justle a Constable: why, thou debosh'd Fish thou, was there ever man a Coward, that hath drunk so much Sack as I to day? wilt thou tell me a monstrous lye, being but half a Fish and half a Monster?
Cal. Loe, how he mocks me, wilt thou let him my Lord?

Trin.

Trin. Lord, quoth he? that a Monſter ſhould be ſuch a Naturall?

Cal. Loe, loe again: bite him to death I prethee.

Ste. Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head: If you prove a mutineer, the next Tree: the poor Monſter's my ſubject, and he ſhall not ſuffer indignity.

Cal. I thank my noble Lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd once again to hearken to the ſuit I made to thee?

Ste. Marry will I: kneel and repeat it,
I will ſtand, and ſo ſhall Trinculo.

Enter Ariell invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am ſubject to a Tyrant,
A Sorcerer that by his cunning hath cheated me
Of the Iſland.

Ariell. Thou lyeſt.

Cal. Thou lyeſt, thou jeſting Monkey thou:
I would my valiant Maſter would deſtroy thee;
I doe not lye.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in's tale,
By this hand, I will ſupplant ſome of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I ſaid nothing.

Ste. Mum then, and no more: proceed.

Cal. I ſay by Sorcery he got this Iſle
From me, he got it. If thy Greatneſſe will Revenge it on him, (for I know thou dar'ſt)
But this thing dare not.

Ste. That's moſt certain.

Cal. Thou ſhalt be Lord of it, and I'le ſerve thee.

Ste. How now ſhall this be compaſt?
Canſt thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yea, yea, my Lord, I'le yield him thee aſleep,
Where thou maiſt knock a nail into his head.

Ariell. Thou lieſt, thou canſt not.

Cal. What a py'de Ninnie's this? Thou ſcurvy patch:
I doe beſeech thy Greatneſſe give him blows,
And take his Bottle from him: When that's gone,
He ſhall drink nought but brine, for I'le not ſhew him,
Where the quick Freſhes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger:
Interrupt the Monſter one word further, and by this hand, I'le turn my mercy out o' doors, and make a Stock-fiſh of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing:
I'le go no further off.

Ste. Didſt thou not ſay he lyed:

Ariell. Thou lyeſt.

Ste. Doe I ſo? Take you that,
As you like this, give me the lye another time.

Trin. I did not give the lye; Out o' your wits and hearing too?
A pox o' your Bottle, this can Sack and drinking doe:
A murrain on your Monſter, and the Devil take your fingers.

Cal. Ha, ha, ha.

Ste. Now forward with your Tale: prethee ſtand further off.

Cal. Beat him enough: after a little time
I'le beat him too.

Ste. Stand further: Come proceed.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a cuſtome with him
I'th afternoon to ſleep: there thou maiſt brain him,
Having firſt ſeiz'd his Books: Or with a Log
Batter his skull, or paunch him with a Stake,
Or cut his wezand with thy Knife. Remember
Firſt to poſſeſſe his Books; for without them
Hee's but a Sot, as I am; nor hath not
One Spirit to command: they all doe hate him
As rootedly as I. Burn but his Books,
He ha's brave Utenſils (for ſo he calls them)
Which when he has a houſe, hee'l deck withall.
And that moſt deeply to conſider, is
The beauty of his Daughter: he himſelf
Calls her a non-pareil: I never ſaw a woman
But onely Sycorax my Dam, and ſhe;
But ſhe as far ſurpaſſeth Sycorax,
As great'ſt do's leaſt.

Ste. Is it ſo brave a Laſs?

Cal. I Lord, ſhe will become thy bed, I warrant,
And bring thee forth brave brood.

Ste. Monſter, I will kill this man: his Daughter and I will be King and Queen, ſave our Graces: and Trinculo and thy ſelf ſhall be Vice-royes:
Doſt thou like the plot Trinculo?

Trin. Excellent.

Ste. Give me thy hand, I am ſorry I beat thee:
But while thou liv'ſt keep a good tongue in thy head.

Cal. Within this half hour will he be aſleep,
Wilt thou deſtroy him then?

Ste. I on mine honour.

Ariell. This will I tell my Maſter.

Cal. Thou mak'ſt me merry: I am full of pleaſure,
Let us be jocond. Will you troul the Catch
You taught me but whileare?

Ste. At thy requeſt Monſter, I will doe reaſon,
And reaſon: Come on Trinculo, let us ſing.

Sings.

Flout'em and cout'em: and skowt'em, and flout'em,
Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune.

Ariell playes the tune on a Tabor and Pipe.

Ste. What is this ſame?

Trin. This is the tune of our Catch, plaid by the picture of No-body.

Ste. If thou beeſt a man, ſhew thy ſelf in thy likeneſs:
If thou beeſt a devil, tak't as thou liſt.

Trin. O forgive me my ſins.

Ste. He that dies pays all debts: I deſie thee,
Mercy upon us.

Cal. Art thou affeard?

Ste. No Monſter, not I.

Cal. Be not affeard, the Iſle is full of noyſes,
Sounds, and ſweet aires, that give delight and hurt not:
Sometimes a thouſand twangling Inſtruments
Will hum about mine ears: and ſometimes voyces,
That if I then had wak'd after long ſleep,
Will make me ſleep again; and then in dreaming
The clouds me thought would open, and ſhew riches
Ready to drop upon me, that when I wak'd
I cri'd to dream again.

Ste. This will prove a brave Kingdome to me,
Where I ſhall have my muſick for nothing.

Cal. When Proſpero is deſtroy'd.

Ste. That ſhall be by and by:
I remember the ſtory.

Trin. The ſound is going away.
Let's follow it, and after doe our work.

Ste. Lead Monſter,
Wee'l follow: I would I could ſee his Taborer.
He layes it on.

Trin. Wilt come?
I'le follow Stephano. Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Tertia.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Anthonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, &c.

Gon. By'r lakin, I can go no further, Sir,
My old bones ake : here's a maze trod indeed
Through forth-rights and Meanders : by your patience,
I needs must rest me.

Alo. Old Lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who am my selfe attach'd with wearinesse
To th'dulling of my spirits : sit down, and rest :
Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it
No longer for my flatterers : he is drownd
Whom thus we stray to find, and the Sea mocks
Our frustrate search on land : well : let him go.

Ant. I am right glad, that he's so out of hope :
Doe not for one repulse forgo the purpose
That you resolv'd t'effect.

Seb. The next advantage will we take throughly.

Ant. Let it be to night ;
For now they are oppress'd with travell, they
Will not, nor cannot use such vigilance
As when they are fresh.

Solemn and strange Musick: and Prospero on the top (invisible.) Enter severall strange shapes, bringing in a Banket; and dance about it with gentle actions of salutations, & inviting the King, &c. to eat, they depart.

Seb. I say to night : no more.

Al. What harmony is this ? my good friends, hark.

Gon. Marvellous sweet Musick.

Alo. Give us kind keepers, heavens : what were these?

Seb. A living Drollery : now I will believe
That there are Unicorns : that in Arabia
There is one Tree, the Phœnix throne, one Phœnix
At this hour reigning there.

Ant. I'le believe both :
And what do's else want credit, come to me,
And I'le be sworn 'tis true : Travellours ne're did lye,
Though fools at home condemn 'em.

Gon. If in Naples
I should report this now, would they believe me ?
If I should say I saw such Islanders.
(For certes, these are people of the Island)
Who though they are of monstrous shape, yet note
Their manners are more gentle, kind then of
Our humane generation you shall find
Many, nay almost any.

Pro. Honest Lord,
Thou hast said well : for some of you there present,
Are worse then Devils.

Alo. I cannot too much muse
Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound expressing
(Although they want the use of tongue) a kind
Of excellent dumb discourse.

Pro. Praise in departing.

Fra. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since (mickss.
They have left their Viands behind ; for we have sto-
Wilt please you taste of what is here ?

Alo. Not I. (Boyes

Gonz. Faith Sir, you need not fear : when we were
Who would believe that there were Mountayneers,
Dew-lapt, like Bulls, whose throats had hanging at'em
Wallets of flesh ? or that there were such men
Whose heads stood in their breasts ? which now we find
Each putter out of five for one, will bring us
Good warrant of.

Alo. I will stand to, and feed,
Although my last, no matter, since I feel
The best is past : brother, my Lord, the Duke,
Stand too, and doe as we.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Ariell (like a Harpy) claps his wings upon the Table, and with a quaint device the Banquet vanishes.

Ar. You are three men of sin, whom destiny
That hath to instrument this lower world,
And what is in't : the never surfeited Sea,
Hath caus'd to belch up you ; and on this Island,
Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongst men,
Being most unfit to live : I have made you mad ;
And even with such like valour, men hang, and drown
Their proper selves : you fools, I and my fellows
Are ministers of Fate, the Elements
Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with bemockt-at-Stabs
Kill the still closing waters, as diminish
One dowle that's in my plumbe : My fellow ministers
Are like-invulnerable : if you could hurt,
Your swords are now too massie for your strengths ;
And will not be uplifted : but remember
(For that's my businesse to you) that you three
From Millain did supplant good Prospero ;
Expos'd unto the Sea (which hath requit it)
Him, and his innocent child : for which foul deed,
The Powers, delaying (not forgetting) have
Incens'd the Seas, and Shores ; yea, all the Creatures
Against your peace : Thee of thy Son, Alonso,
They have bereft ; and doe pronounce by me
Lingring perdition (worse then any death
Can be at once) shall step by step attend
You, and your wayes, whose wraths to guard you from,
Which here, in this most desolate Isle, else falls
Upon your heads, is nothing but hearts-sorrow,
And a clear life ensuing.

He vanishes in Thunder : then (to soft Musick.) Enter the shapes again, and dance (with mocks and mowes) and carrying out the Table.

Pro. Bravely the figure of this Harpy, hast thou
Perform'd (my Ariel) a grace it had devouring :
Of my instruction, hast thou nothing bated
In what thou had'st to say : so with good life
And observation strange, my meaner ministers
Their severall kinds have done : my high charmes work,
And these (mine enemies) are all knit up
In their distractions : they now are in my power ;
And in these fits, I leave them, while I visit
Young Ferdinand (whom they suppose is drown'd)
And his, and mine lov'd darling.

Gon. I'th name of something holy Sir, why stand you
In this strange stare ?

Alo. O, it is monstrous : monstrous !
Me thought the billows spoke, and told me of it,
The winds did sing it to me : and the Thunder
(That deep and dreadfull Organ-pipe) pronounc'd
The name of Prosper : it did bate my Trespasse,
Therefore my Son i'th Ooze is bedded ; and
I'le seek him deeper then e're plummet sounded ;
And with him there lie mudded. Exit.

Seb. But one fiend at a time,
I'le fight their Legions o're

Ant. I'le be thy second. Exeunt.
Gon. All three of them are desperate: their great guilt
(Like yoyson given to work a great time after)
Now gins to bite the spirits; I doe beseech you
(That are of suppler joynts) follow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this extasie
May now provoke them to.
Ad. Follow, I pray you. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I have too austerely punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends, for I
Have given you here, a third of mine own life,
Or that for which I live: who once again
I tender to thy hand: All thy vexations
Were but my trialls of thy love, and thou
Hast strangely stood the rest: here, afore heaven
I ratifie this my rich gift: O Ferdinand,
Do not smile at me, that I boast her off,
For thou shalt find she will out-strip all praise
And make it halt, behind her.
Fer. I doe believe it
Against an Oracle.
Pro. Then, as my guest, and thine own acquisition
Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter:
If thou do'st break her Virgin-knot, before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy right be minister'd,
No sweet aspersion shall the heavens let fall
To make this Contract grow; but barren hate,
Sower-ey'd disdain, and discord shall bestrew
The union of your bed, with weeds so loathly
That you shall hate it both: Therefore take heed,
As Hymens Lamps shall light you.
Fer. As I hope
For quiet dayes, fair Issue, and long life.
With such love, as 'tis now the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strong'st suggestion,
Our worser Genius can, shall never melt
Mine honour into lust, to take away
The edge of that dayes celebration,
When I shall think, or Phœbus steeds are founderd,
Or night kept chain'd below.
Pro. Fairly spoke;
Sit then, and talk with her, she is thine own;
What Ariell; my industrious servant Ariel. Enter Ariel.
Ari. What would my potent master? here I am.
Pro. Thou, and thy meaner fellows, your last service
Did worthily perform: and I must use you
In such another trick: go bring the rabble
(O're whom I give thee power) here, to this place:
Incite them to quick motion, for I must
Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
Some vanity of mine Art: it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.
Ari. Presently?
Pro. I: with a twincke.
Ari. Before you can say come, and go,
And breathe twice; and cry, so, so;
Each one tripping on his Toe,
Will be here with mop, and mowe.
Doe you love me Master? no?
Pro. Dearly, my delicate Ariell: doe not approach
Till thou do'st hear me call.
Ari. Well: I conceive. Exit.
Pro. Look thou be true: doe not give dalliance
Too much the raign: the strongest oathes, are straw
To th'fire ith'blood: be more abstemious,
Or else good night your vow.
Fer. I warrant you, Sir,
The white cold virgin Snow, upon my heart
Abates the ardour of my Liver.
Pro. Well.
Now come my Ariell, bring a Corolary,
Rather then want a spirit, appear, and pertly. Soft Musick.
No tongue: all eyes: be silent. Enter Iris.
Ir. Ceres, most bounteous Lady, thy rich Leas
Of Wheat, Rye, Barley, Fetches, Oats, and Pease;
Thy Turphy Mountains, where live nibling Sheep,
And flat Medes thetch'd with Stover, them to keep:
Thy banks with pioned, and twilled brims,
Which spungy April, at thy best betrims;
To make cold Nymphs chast crowns; and thy broom-groves;
Whose shadow the dismissed Batchelor loves,
Being lasse-lorn: thy pole-clipt vineyard:
And thy Sea-marge steril, and rocky-hard,
Where thou thy self do'st aire, the Queen o'th Skie,
Whose watry Arch, and messenger, am I,
Bids thee leave these, and with her soveraign grace, Juno
Here on this grasse-plot, in this very place descends.
To come, and sport: here Peacocks flye amain:
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain. Enter Ceres.
Cer. Hail, many coloured Messenger, that ne're
Do'st disobey the wife of Jupiter:
Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flowers
Diffusest hony drops, refreshing showres,
And with each end of thy blew bow do'st crown
My bosky acres, and my unshrub'd downe,
Rich scarph to my proud earth: why hath thy Queen
Summond me hither, to this short gras'd Green?
Ir. A contract of true Love, to celebrate,
And some donation freely to estate
On the bless'd Lovers.
Cer. Tell me heavenly Bow,
If Venus or her Son, as thou do'st know,
Doe now attend the Queen? since they did plot
The means, that dusky Dis, my daughter got:
Her, and her blind Boyes scandal'd company,
I have forsworn.
Ir. Of her society
Be not afraid: I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos: and her Son
Dove-drawn with her: here thought they to have done
Some wanton charm, upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are, that no bed-right shall be paid
Till Hymens Torch be lighted: but in vain,
Mars's hot Minion is return'd again,
Her waspish headed Son, has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with Sparrows,
And be a boy right out.
Cer. Highest Queen of State,
Great Juno comes, I know her by her gate.
Ju. How do's my bounteous sister? go with me
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be,
And honor'd in their issue. They Sing.

Ju. Honour, riches, marriage, blessing,
Long continuance, and encreasing,
Hourly joyes, be still upon you,

Juno

Juno ſings her bleſſings on you.
Earths increaſe, and foyzon plenty,
Barns, and Garners, never empty.
Vines, with cluſtring bunches growing,
Plants, with goodly burthen bowing:
Spring come to yon at the fartheſt,
In the very end of Harveſt.
Scarcity and want ſhall ſhun you,
Ceres bleſsing ſo is on you.

Fer. This is a moſt majeſtick viſion, and Harmonious charmingly: may I be bold
To think theſe ſpirits?

Pro. Spirits, which by mine Art
I have from all their confines call'd to enact
My preſent fancies.

Fer. Let me live here ever,
So rare a wondred father, and a wiſe,
Makes this place Paradiſe.

Pro. Sweet now, ſilence:
Juno and Ceres whiſper ſeriouſly,
There's ſomething elſe to doe: huſh, and be mute
Or elſe our ſpell is marr'd.

Juno and Ceres whiſper, and ſend Iris on employment.

Ir. You Nymphs cal'd Nayades of the windring brooks
With your ſedg'd crowns, and ever-harmleſſe looks,
Leave your criſp channells, and on this green-land
Anſwer your ſummons, Juno do's command
Come temperate Nymphs, and help to celebrate
A Contract of true Love: be not too late.

Enter certain Nymphs.

You Sun-burn'd Sicklemen of Auguſt weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry,
Make holly-day: your Rye-ſtraw Hats put on,
And theſe freſh Nymphs encounter every one
In Country footing.

Enter certain Reapers (properly habited:) they joyn with the Nymphs in a graceful dance, towards the end whereof, Proſpero ſtarts ſuddenly and ſpeaks, after which to a ſtrange hollow and confuſed noyſe, they heavily vaniſh.

Pro. I had forgot that foul conſpiracy
Of the beaſt Calliban, and his confederates
Againſt my life: the minute of their plot
Is almoſt come: Well done, avoid: no more.

Fer. This is ſtrange: your Father's in ſome paſſion
That works him ſtrongly.

Mir. Never till this day
Saw I him touch'd with anger, ſo diſtemper'd.

Pro. You doe look (my Son) in a mov'd ſort,
As if you were diſmaid: be cheerfull Sir,
Our Revells now are ended: Theſe our actors,
(As I foretold you) were all Spirits, and
Are melted into aire, into thin aire,
And like the baſeleſſe fabrick of their viſion,
The Clowd-capt Towers, the gorgeous Pallaces,
The ſolemn Temples, the great Globe it ſelf,
Yea all which it inherit, ſhall diſſolve,
And like this inſubſtantiall Pageant faded
Leave not a rack behind: we are ſuch ſtuffe
As dreames are made on: and our little life
Is rounded with a ſleep: Sir, I am vext,
Bear with my weakneſſe, my old brain is troubled;
Be not diſturb'd with my infirmity,
If you be pleas'd; retire into my Cell,
And there repoſe; a turn or two I'le walk
To ſtill my beating mind.

Fer. Mir. We wiſh your peace. Exit.

Pro. Come with a thought; I thank thee Ariell: come.

Enter Ariell.

Ari. Thy thoughts I cleave to, what's thy pleaſure?

Pro. Spirit: we muſt prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ari. I my Commander, when I preſented Ceres
I thought to have told thee of it, but I fear'd
Leaſt I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where didſt thou leave theſe varlots?

Ar. I told you Sir, they were red-hot with drinking,
So full of valour, that they ſmote the aire
For breathing in their faces: beat the ground
For kiſſing of their feet; yet alwayes bending
Towards their project: then I beat my Tabor,
At which like unback't Colts they pricke their eares,
Advanc'd their eye-lids, lifted up their noſes
As they ſmelt muſick, ſo I charm'd their eares
That Calf-like, they my lowing follow'd, through
Tooth'd briars, ſharp firzes, pricking goſſe, and thorns,
Which entred their frail ſhins: at laſt I left them
I'th' filthy mantled pool beyond your Cell,
There dancing up to th' chins, that the foul Lake
O're-ſtunck their feet.

Pro. This was well done (my bird)
Thy ſhape inviſible retain thou ſtill:
The trumpery in my houſe, go bring it hither
For ſtale to catch theſe theeves. Ariell. I go, I go. Exit.

Pro. A devil, a born-devil, on whoſe nature
Nurture can never ſtick: on whom my pains
Humanely taken, all, all loſt, quite loſt,
And, as with age, his body uglier grows,
So his mind cankers: I will plague them all,
Even to roaring: Come, hang on them this line.

Enter Ariell, loaden with gliſtering apparell, &c. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all wet.

Cal. Pray you tread ſoftly, that the blind Mole may not hear a foot fall: we now are near his Cell. (Fairy,

Ste. Monſter, your Fairy, which you ſay is a harmleſſe
Has done little better then plaid the Jack with us.

Trin. Monſter, I doe ſmell all horſe-piſſe, at which
My noſe is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine. Doe you hear Monſter: If I ſhould
Take a diſpleaſure againſt you: Look you.

Trin. Thou wert but a loſt Monſter.

Cal. Good my Lord, give me thy favour ſtil,
Be patient, for the prize I'le bring thee to
Shall hood-wink this miſchance: therefore ſpeak ſoftly,
All's huſht as midnight yet.

Trin. I, but to loſe our Bottles in the Poole.

Ste. There is not onely diſgrace and diſhonour in that (Monſter) but an infinite loſſe.

Trin. That's more to me then my wetting:
Yet this is your harmleſſe Fairy, Monſter.

Ste. I will fetch off my Bottle,
Though I be o're eares for my labour.

Cal. Prethee (my King) be quiet. Seeſt thou here
This is the mouth o'th Cell: no noiſe, and enter:
Doe that good miſchief, which may make this Iſland
Thine own for ever, and I thy Caliban
For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand,
I doe begin to have bloody thoughts.

Trin. O King Stephano, O Peer: O worthy Stephano,
Look what a wardrobe here is for thee.

Cal. Let it alone thou fool, it is but traſh.

Tri. Oh, ho, Monſter: we know what belongs to a frippery, O King Stephano.

Ste. Put off that gown (Trinculo) by this hand I'le have that gown.

Tri. Thy grace shall have it. (mean

Cal. The dropsie drown this fool, what doe you
To doat thus on such luggage? let's alone
And doe the murther first: if he awake,
From toe to crown hee'l fill our skins with pinches,
Make us strange stuffe.

Ste. Be you quiet (Monster) Mistris line, is not this my Jerkin? now is the Jerkin under the line: now Jerkin you are like to lose your hair, and prove a bald Jerkin.

Trin. Doe, doe; we steal by line and level, and't like your grace.

Ste. I thank thee for that jest: here's a garment for't: Wit shall not go unrewarded while I am King of this Country: Steal by line and levell, is an excellent passe of pate: there's another garment for't.

Tri. Monster, come put some Lime upon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will have none on't: we shall lose our time,
And all be turn'd to Barnacles, or to Apes
With foreheads villanous low.

Ste. Monster, lay to your fingers: help to bear this away, where my hogshead of wine is, or I'le turn you out of my Kingdome: go to, carry this.

Tri. And this.

Ste. I, and this.

A noyse of Hunters heard. Enter divers spirits in shape of Dogs, and Hounds, hunting them about: Prosper and Ariell setting them on.

Pro. Hey Mountain, hey.

Ari. Silver: there it goes, Silver.

Pro. Fury, Fury: there Tyrant, there: hark, hark.
Go, charge my Goblins that they grind their joynts
With dry Convulsions, shorten up their sinews
With aged Cramps, and more pinch-spotted make them,
Then Pard, or Cat o' Mountain.

Ari. Hark, they rore.

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly: At this hour
Lies at my mercy all mine enemies:
Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou
Shalt have the aire at freedome: for a little
Follow, and doe me service. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Prospero (in his Magick Robes) and Ariell.

Pro. Now do's my Project gather to a head:
My charmes crack not: my spirits obey, and time
Goes upright with his carriage: how's the day?

Ar. On the sixth hour, at which time, my Lord
You said our work should cease.

Pro. I did say so,
When first I rais'd the Tempest: say my spirit,
How fares the King, and's followers?

Ar. Confin'd together
In the same fashion, as you gave in charge,
Just as you left them, all prisoners Sir
In the Line-grove which weather-fends your Cell,
They cannot budge till you release: The King,
His Brother, and yours, abide all three distracted,
And the remainder mourning over them,
Brim full of sorrow, and dismay: but chiefly
Him that you term'd, Sir, the good old Lord Gonzalo,
His tears run down his beard like winters drops
From eaves of reeds: your charm so strongly works'em
That if you now beheld them, your affections
Would become tender.

Pro. Do'st thou think so, spirit?

Ar. Mine would, Sir, were I humane.

Pro. And mine shall.
Hast thou (which art but aire) a touch, a feeling
Of their afflictions, and shall not my self,
One of their kind, that relish all as sharply
Passion as they, be kindlier mov'd then thou art?
Though with their high wrongs I am strook to th'quick,
Yet, with my nobler reason, against my fury
Doe I take part: the rarer action is
In virtue, then in vengeance: they, being penitent,
The sole drift of my purpose doth extend
Not a frown further: Go, release them Ariell,
My Charmes I'le break, their senses I'le restore,
And they shall be themselves.

Ar. I'le fetch them, Sir. Exit.

Pro. Ye Elves of Hills, Brooks, standing-Lakes and
And ye, that on the Sands with printless foot (Groves,
Doe chase the ebbing Neptune, and doe flie him
When he comes back: you demy-Puppets, that
By Moon-shine doe the green sowre Ringlets make,
Whereof the Ewe not bites: and you, whose pastime
Is to make midnight-Mushromes, that rejoyce
To hear the solemn Curfewe, by whose aid
(Weak Masters though ye be) I have bedimn'd
The noon-tide Sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds,
And 'twixt the green Sea, and the azur'd vault
Set roaring war: To the dread ratling Thunder
Have I given fire, and rifted Jov's stout Oke
With his own Bolt. The strong bass'd promontory
Have I made shake, and by the spurs pluck't up
The Pine, and Cedar. Graves at my command
Have wak'd their sleepers, op'd, and let'em forth
By my so potent Art. But this rough Magick
I here abjure: and when I have requir'd
Some heavenly Musick (which even now I doe)
To work mine end upon their senses, that
This airy charm is for, I'le break my staffe,
Bury it certain fadomes in the earth,
And deeper then did ever Plummet sound
I'le drown my Book. Solemn Musick.

Here enters Ariel before: Then Alonso with a frantick gesture, attended by Gonzalo. Sebastian and Anthonio in like manner attended by Adrian and Francisco. They all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charm'd: which Prospero observing, speaks.

A solemn Aire, and the best comforter,
To an unsetled fancy, Cure thy brains
(Now useless) boil within thy skull: there stand,
For you are Spell-stopt.
Holy Gonzalo, Honourable man,
Mine eyes, even sociable to the shew of thine,
Fall, fellowly drops. The charm dissolves apace,
And as the morning steals upon the night
(Melting the darkenesse) so their rising senses
Begin to chace the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason. O good Gonzalo,
My true preserver, and a loyall Sir
To him thou follow'st; I will pay thy graces
Home both in word, and deed: Most cruelly

Didst

Didst thou Alonso, use me, and my daughter:
Thy Brother was a furtherer in the act,
Thou art pinch'd for't now Sebastian. Flesh, and blood,
You, Brother mine, that entertain'd ambition,
Expell'd remorse, and nature, whom, with Sebastian
(Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong)
Would here have kill'd your King: I doe forgive thee,
Unnaturall though thou art: their understanding
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shore
That now lies foul and muddy: not one of them
That yet looks on me, or would know me: Ariell,
Fetch me the Hat, and Rapier in my Cell,
I will discase me, and my self present
As I was sometime Millain: quickly spirit,
Thou shalt ere long be free.

Ariell sings, and helps to attire him.

Where the Bee sucks, there suck I,
In a Cowslips bell, I lie.
There I crouch when Owles do cry,
On the Bats back I doe flie
after Summer merrily.
Merrily, merrily, shall I live now,
Under the Blossom that hangs on the Bow.

Pro. Why that's my dainty Ariell: I shall misse thee,
But yet thou shalt have freedome: so, so, so.
To the Kings Ship, invisible as thou art,
There shalt thou find the Mariners asleep
Under the Hatches: the Master and the Boat-swain
Being awake, enforce them to this place;
And presently, I prethee.

Ari. I drink the aire before me, and return
Or ere your pulse twice beat. Exit.

Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabits here: some heavenly power guide us
Out of this fearfull Countrey.

Pro. Behold Sir King
The wronged Duke of Millain, Prospero:
For more assurance that a living Prince
Do's now speak to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee, and thy Company, I bid
A hearty welcome.

Alo. Where thou be'st he or no;
Or some inchanted trifle to abuse me,
(As late I have been) I not know: thy Pulse
Beats as of flesh, and blood: and since I saw thee,
Th' affliction of my mind amends, with which
I fear a madnesse held me: this must crave
(And if this be at all) a most strange story.
Thy Dukedome I resign, and doe entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs: but how should Prospero
Be living, and be here?

Pro. First, noble friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honour cannot
Be measur'd, or confin'd.

Gon. Whether this be,
Or be not, I'le not swear.

Pro. You doe yet taste
Some subtilties o'th' Isle, that will not let you
Believe things certain: Welcome, my friends all;
But you, my brace of Lords, were I so minded
I here could pluck his Highnesse frown upon you
And justifie you Traitours: at this time
I will tell no tales.

Seb. The devil speaks in him:

Pro. No.
For you (most wicked Sir) whom to call Brother
Would even infect my mouth, I doe forgive
Thy rankest fault: all of them: and require
My Dukedom of thee, which, perforce I know
Thou must restore.

Alo. If thou beest Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation,
How thou hast met us here, who three hours since
Were wrackt upon this shore? where I have lost
(How sharp the point of this remembrance is)
My dear Son Ferdinand.

Pro. I am woe for't, Sir.

Alo. Irreparable is the losse, and patience
Sayes, it is past her cure.

Pro. I rather think
You have not sought her help, of whose soft grace
For the like losse, I have her soveraign aid;
And rest my self content.

Alo. You the like losse?

Pro. As great to me, as late, and insupportable
To make the dear losse, have I means much weaker
Then you may call to comfort you; for I
Have lost my daughter.

Alo. A daughter?
Oh heavens, that they were living both in Naples
The King and Queen there, that they were, I wish
My selfe were mudded in that oo-zy bed
Where my Son lies: when did you lose your daughter?

Pro. In this last Tempest. I perceive these Lords
At this encounter doe so much admire,
That they devour their reason, and scarce think
Their eye doe offices of truth: their words
Are naturall breath: but howsoever you have
Been justled from your senses, know for certain
That I am Prospero, and that very Duke
Which was thrust forth of Millain, who most strangely
Upon this shore (where you were wrack't) was landed
To be the Lord on't: no more yet of this,
For 'tis a Chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a break-fast, nor
Befitting this first meeting: Welcome, Sir;
This Cell's my Court: here have I few attendants,
And Subjects none abroad: pray you look in:
My Dukedome since you have given me again,
I will requite you with as good a thing,
At least bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much, as me my Dukedome.

Here Prospero discovers Ferdinand and Miranda, playing at Chesse.

Mir. Sweet Lord, you play me false.

Fer. No my dearest love,
I would not for the world. (wrangle,

Mir. Yes, for a score of Kingdomes; you should
And I would call it fair play.

Alo. If this prove
A vision of the Island, one dear Son
Shall I twice lose.

Seb. A most high miracle.

Fer. Though the Seas threaten they are mercifull;
I have curs'd them without cause.

Alo. Now all the blessings
Of a glad father, compasse thee about!
Arise, and say how thou cam'st here.

Mir. O wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here?
How beauteous mankind is? O brave new world

That has ſuch people in't.
Pro. 'Tis new to thee. (play?
Alo. What is this Maid, with whom thou was't at
Your eld'ſt acquaintance cannot be three houres:
Is ſhe the goddeſſe that hath ſeve'rd us,
And brought us thus together?
Fer. Sir, ſhe is mortall;
But by immortall providence, ſhe's mine;
I choſe her when I could not ask my Father
For his advize: nor thought I had one: She
Is Daughter to this famous Duke of Millain,
Of whom, ſo often I have heard renoun,
But never ſaw before: of whom I have
Receiv'd a ſecond life; and ſecond Father
This Lady makes him to me.
Alo. I am hers.
But O, how odly will it ſound, that I
Muſt ask my child forgiveneſſe?
Pro. There Sir ſtop.
Let us not burthen our remembrances, with
A heavineſſe that's gone.
Gon. I have inly wept,
Or ſhould have ſpoke ere this; look down you gods
And on this couple drop a bleſſed crown;
For it is you that have chalk'd forth the way
Which brought us hither.
Alo. I ſay Amen, Gonzalo.
Gon. Was Millain thruſt from Millain, that his iſſue
Should become Kings of Naples; O rejoyce
Beyond a common joy, and ſet it down
With gold on laſting Pillars: In one voyage
Did Claribell her Husband find at Tunis,
And Ferdinand her Brother, found a Wife,
Where he himſelf was loſt: Proſpero his Dukedome
In a poor Iſle: and all of us, our ſelves,
When no man was his own.
Alo. Give me your hands:
Let grief and ſorrow ſtill embrace his heart,
That doth not wiſh you joy.
Gon. Be it ſo, Amen.
Enter Ariell, with the Maſter and Boatſwain amazedly following.
O look Sir, look, hear is more of us!
I propheſi'd, if a Gallows were on Land
This fellow could not drown; Now blaſphemy,
That ſwear'ſt grace ore-board, not an oath on ſhore,
Haſt thou no mouth by Land?
What is the newes?
Boat. The beſt newes is, that we have ſafe found
Our King and company: The next: our Ship,
Which but three glaſſes ſince, we gave out ſplit,
Is tyte, and yare, and bravely rig'd, as when
We firſt put out to Sea.
Ar. Sir, all this ſervice
Have I done ſince I went.
Pro. My trickſey ſpirit.
Alo. Theſe are not naturall events, they ſtrengthen
From ſtrange to ſtranger: ſay, how came you hither?
Bot. If I did think, Sir, I were well awake,
I'ld ſtrive to tell you: we were dead of ſleep,
And (how we know not) all clapt under hatches,
Where, but even now, with ſtrange and ſeverall noiſes
Of roring, ſhreeking, howling, gingling chains,
And moe diverſity of ſounds, all horrible,
We were awak'd: ſtraight way at liberty;
Where we, in all our trim, freſhly beheld
Our royall, good, and gallant Ship: our Maſter
Capring to eye her: on a trice, ſo pleaſe you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them,
And were brought moping hither.
Ar. Was't well done?
Pro. Bravely (my diligence) thou ſhalt be free.
Ar. This is as ſtrange a Maze, as e're men trod,
And there is in this buſineſſe, more then nature
Was ever conduct of: ſome Oracle
Muſt rectifie our knowledge.
Pro. Sir, my Liege,
Doe not infeſt your mind, with beating on
The ſtrangeneſſe of this buſineſſe, at pickt ſeizure
(Which ſhall be ſhortly ſingle) I'le reſolve you,
(Which to you ſhall ſeem probable) of every
Theſe happen'd accidents: till when, be cheerfull
And think of each thing well: Come hither ſpirit,
Set Caliban, and his companions free:
Untye the Spell: How fares my gracious Sir?
There are yet miſſing of your Company
Some few odde Lads, that you remember not,
Enter Ariell, driving in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, in their ſtoln Apparell.
Ste. Every man ſhift for all the reſt, and let
No man take care for him ſelf; for all is
But fortune: Coragio Bully-Monſter, Coragio.
Tri. If theſe be true ſpies which I wear in my head,
Here's a goodly ſight.
Cal. O Setebos, theſe be brave ſpirits indeed;
How fine my Maſter is? I am afraid
He will chaſtiſe me.
Seb. Ha, ha:
What things are theſe my Lord Anthonio?
Will money by 'em?
Ant. Very like: one of them
Is a plain Fiſh, and no doubt marketable,
Pro. Mark but the badges of theſe men, my Lords,
Then ſay if they be true: This miſhapen knave;
His Mother was a Witch, and one ſo ſtrong
That could controul the Moon; make flowes, and eb's,
And deal in her command, without her power;
Theſe three have robb'd me, and this demy-devil;
(For he's a baſtard one) had plotted with them
To take my life: two of theſe Fellows, you
Muſt know, and own, this Thing of darkneſſe, I
Acknowledge mine.
Cal. I ſhall be pincht to death.
Alo. Is not this Stephano, my drunken Butler?
Seb. He is drunk now:
Where had he Wine?
Alon. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where ſhould they Find this grand Liquor that hath gilded 'em?
How cam'ſt thou in this pickle?
Tri. I have been in ſuch a pickle ſince I ſaw you laſt,
That I fear me will never out of my bones:
I ſhall not fear flie-blowing.
Seb. Why how now Stephano?
Ste. O touch me not, I am not Stephano, but a Cramp.
Pro. You'ld be King o' th' Iſle, Sirrha?
Ste. I ſhould have been a fore one then.
Alo. 'Tis a ſtrange thing as e're I look'd on.
Pro. He is as diſproportion'd in his manners
As in his ſhape: Go Sirrha, to my Cell,
Take with you your Companions: as you look
To have my pardon, trim it handſomly.
Cal. I that I will: and I'le be wiſe hereafter,

And

And ſeek for grace: what a thrice double Aſſe
Was I to take this drunkard for a god?
And worſhip this dull fool?
Pro. Go to, away. (found it.
Alo. Hence, and beſtow your luggage where you
Seb. Or ſtole it rather.
Pro. Sir, I invite your Highneſſe and your train,
To my poor Cell: where you ſhall take your reſt
For this one night, which part of it, Ile waſte
With ſuch diſcourſe, as I not doubt, ſhall make it
Goe quick away: The ſtory of my life,
And the particular accidents, gone by
Since I came to this Iſle: And in the morne
Ile bring you to your ſhip, and to to Naples.
Where I have hope to ſee the Nuptials
Of theſe our dear-belov'd, ſolemnized,
And thence retire me to my Millain, where
Every third thought ſhall be my grave.
Alo. I long
To hear the ſtory of your life; which muſt
Take the ear ſtrangely.
Pro. Ile deliver all,
And promiſe you calme Seas, auſpicious gales,
And ſail, ſo expeditious, that ſhall catch
Your Royal fleet far off: My Ariel (Chick)
That is thy charge: then to the Elements
Be free, and fare thou well: pleaſe you draw near.

Exeunt omnes.

EPILOCUE

ſpoken by Proſper.

NOw now my Charm's are all ore-thrown,
And what ſtrength I have's mine own,
Which is moſt faint: now 'tis true
I muſt be here confin'd by you,
Or ſent to Naples: Let me not
Since I have my Dukedome got,
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare Iſland, by your ſpell,
But releaſe me from my bands
With the help of your good hands:
Gentle breath of yours, my Sailes
Muſt fill or elſe my project failes,
Which was to pleaſe: Now I want
Spirits to enforce: Arts to enchant,
And my ending is deſpaire,
Unleſs I be reliev'd by prayer,
Which pierces ſo, that it aſſaults
Mercy it ſelf, and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your Indulgence ſet me free. Exit.

FINIS

THE
Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Actus Primus, Scena Prima.

Valentine, Protheus, and Speed.

Valentine.

CEase to perswade, my loving Protheus;
Home-keeping youth, have ever homely wits,
Wer't not affection chaines thy tender days,
To the sweet glances of thy honour'd Love,
I rather would entreat thy company,
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Then (living dully sluggardiz'd at home)
Wear out thy youth with shapelesse idlenesse.
But since thou lov'st; love still, and thrive therein,
Even as I would, when I to love begin.

Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine adieu,
Think on thy Protheus, when thou (haply) seest
Some rare note-worthy object in thy travaile:
Wish me partaker in thy happinesse,
When thou do'st meet good hap; and in thy danger,
(If ever danger do environ thee)
Commend thy grievance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy Bead's-man, Valentine.

Val. And on a Love-book pray for thy successe?

Pro. Upon some book I love, Ile pray for thee.

Val. That's on some shallow Story of deep love,
How young Leander crost the Hellespont.

Pro. That's a deep Story of a deeper love.
For he was more then over-shoos in love.

Val. 'Tis true; for you are over-boots in love,
And yet you never swom the Hellespont.

Pro. Over the Boots? nay give me not the Boots.

Val. No, I will not; for it boots thee not

Pro. What?

Val. To be in love, where score is bought with groans:
Coy lookes, with heart-sore sighes: one fading moments
With twenty watchfull, weary, tedious nights: (mirth,
If haply won, perhaps a hapless gain:
If lost, why then a grievous labour won;
How ever, but a folly bought with wit,
Or else a wit, by folly vanquished.

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me fool.

Val. So, by your circumstance, I fear you'l prove.

Pro. 'Tis love you cavil at, I am not Love.

Val. Love is your Master, for he Masters you;
And he that is so yoked by a fool,
Methinks should not be Cronicled for wise.

Pro. Yet Writers say; as in the sweetest Bud,
The eating Canker dwels; so eating Love
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And Writers say; as the most forward Bud
Is eaten by the Canker ere it blow,
Even so by Love, the young and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly, blasting in the Bud,
Loosing his verdure, even in the prime,
And all the fair effects of future hopes.
But wherefore waste I time to counsail thee
That are a Votary to fond desire?
Once more adieu: my Father at the Road
Expects my coming, there to see me ship'd.

Pro. And thither will I bring thee Valentine.

Val. Sweet Protheus, no: Now let us take our leave:
At Millain let me hear from thee by Letters
Of thy success in love; and what news else
Betideth here in absence of thy Friend:
And I likewise will visit thee with mine.

Pro. All happiness bechance to thee in Millain.

Val. As much to you at home: and so farewell. Exit.

Pro. He after honour hunts, I after Love;
He leaves his friends to dignifie them more;
I love my self, my friends, and all for love:
Thou Julia, thou hast metamorphos'd me:
Made me neglect my studies, lose my time;
War with good counsail; set the world at nought;
Made wit with musing, weak; heart sick with thought.

Sp. Sir Protheus: 'save you: saw you my Master?

Pro. But now he parted hence to embarke for Millain.

Sp. Twenty to one then, he is ship'd already,
And I have plaid the sheep in losing him.

Pro. Indeed a sheep doth very often stray,
And if the Shepheard be awhile away.

Sp. You conclude that my Master is a Shepheard then, and I a sheep?

Pro. I doe.

Sp. Why then my hornes are his hornes; whether I wake or sleep.

Pro. A silly answer, and fitting well a sheep.

Sp. This proves me still a sheep.

Pro. True; and thy Master a shepheard.

Sp. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shall go hard but Ile prove it by another.

Sp. The Shepheard seeks the sheep, and not the Sheep the shepheard; but I seek my Master, and my Master seeks not me: therefore I am no sheep.

Pro. The Sheep for Fodder follow the Shepheard, the Shepheard for food follow's not the Sheep: thou for wages followest thy Master, thy Master for wages follow's not thee: therefore thou art a sheep.

Sp. Such a nother proof will make me cry Baâ.

Pro. But dost thou hear: gav'st thou my Letter to Julia?

Sp. I Sir : I (a loſt-Mutton) gave your Letter to her (a lac'd Mutton,) and ſhe (a lac'd Mutton) gave me (a loſt-Mutton) nothing for my labour.

Pro. Here's too ſmall a Paſture for ſuch ſtore of Muttons.

Sp. If the ground be over-charg'd, you were beſt ſtick her.

Pro. Nay in that you are aſtray : 'twere beſt pound you.

Sp. Nay Sir, leſs then a pound ſhall ſerve me for carrying your letter.

Pro. You miſtake ; I mean the Pound, a Pinfold.

Sp. From a pound to a pin ? fold it over and over,
'Tis three fold too little for carrying a letter to your Lover.

Pro. But what ſaid ſhe ?

Sp. I.

Pro. Nod-I, why that's Noddy.

Sp. You miſtook, Sir, I ſaid ſhe did nod:
And you ask me if ſhe did nod, and I ſaid I.

Pro. And that ſet together, is noddy.

Sp. Now you have taken the paines to ſet it together, take it for your paines.

Pro. No, no, you ſhall have it for bearing the Letter.

Sp. Well, I perceive I muſt be fain to bear with you.

Pro. Why ſir, how do you bear with me ?

Sp. Marry ſir, the Letter very orderly,
Having nothing but the word noddy for my paines.

Pro. Beſhrew me, but you have a quick wit.

Sp. And yet it cannot overtake your ſlow purſe.

Pro. Come, come, open the matter in brief ; what ſaid ſhe?

Sp. Open your purſe, that the money and the matter may be both delivered.

Pro. Well ſir : here is for your paines: what ſaid ſhe ?

Sp. Truly ſir, I think you'l hardly win her.

Pro. Why? could'ſt thou perceive ſo much from her?

Sp. Sir, I could perceive nothing at all from her ;
No, not ſo much as a Ducket for delivering your letter :
And being ſo hard to me, that brought your minde ;
I fear ſhee'l prove as hard to you in telling her minde.
Give her no token but ſtones, for ſhee's as hard as ſteel.

Pro. What ſaid ſhe, nothing ?

Sp. No, not ſo much as take this for thy paines: (me ;
To teſtifie your bounty, I thank you, you have Teſtern'd
In requital whereof, henceforth carry your letter your ſelf ; And ſo ſir, Ile commend you to my Maſter.

Pro. Go, go, be gone, to ſave your ſhip from wrack,
Which cannot periſh having thee aboard,
Being deſtin'd to a dryer death on ſhore :
I muſt go ſend ſome better Meſſenger,
I fear my Julia would not deign my lines,
Receiving them from ſuch a worthleſs poſt. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. But ſay Lucetta (now are we alone)
Would'ſt thou then counſail me to fall in love ?

Luc. I Madam, ſo you ſtumble not unheedfully.

Jul. Of all the faire reſort of Gentlemen,
That every day with par'le encounter me,
In thy opinion which is worthieſt love ?

Luc. Pleaſe you repeat their names, Ile ſhew my mind,
According to my ſhallow ſimple skill.

Jul. What think'ſt thou of the fair Sir Eglamoer ?

Luc. As of a Knight, well-ſpoken, neat, and fine ;
But were I you, he never ſhould be mine.

Jul. What think'ſt thou of the rich Mercatio ?

Lu. Well of his wealth ; but of himſelf, ſo, ſo.

Jul. What think'ſt thou of the gentle Protheus ?

Lu. Lord, Lord : to ſee what folly raignes in us.

Jul. How now ? what means this paſſion at his name?

Lu. Pardon dear Madam, 'tis a paſſing ſhame,
That I (unworthy body as I am)
Should cenſure thus on lovely Gentlemen.

Ju. Why not on Protheus, as of all the reſt ?

Lu. Then thus : of many good, I think him beſt.

Ju. Your reaſon ?

Lu. I have no other but a womans reaſon.
I think him ſo, becauſe I think him ſo.

Ju. And would'ſt thou have me caſt my love on him ?

Lu. I : if you thought your love not caſt away.

Ju. Why he, of all the reſt, hath never mov'd me.

Lu. Yet he, of all the reſt, I think beſt loves ye.

Ju. His little ſpeaking ſhews his love but ſmall.

Lu. Fire thats cloſeſt kept, burns moſt of all.

Ju. They do not love, that do not ſhew their love.

Ku. Oh, they love leaſt, that let men know their love.

Ju. I would I knew his minde.

Lu. Peruſe this Paper Madam.

Ju. To Julia : ſay, from whom ?

Ju. That the Contents will ſhew.

Ju. Say, ſay : who gave it thee ?

Lu. Sir Valentines Page: & ſent I think from Protheus.
He would have given it you, but I being in the way,
Did in your name receive it : pardon the fault I pray.

Ju. Now (by my modeſty) a goodly Broker :
Dare you preſume to harbour wanton lines ?
To whiſper and conſpire againſt my youth ?
Now truſt me, 'tis an office of great worth,
And you an officer fit for the place.
There : take the Paper : ſee it be return'd,
Or elſe return no more into my ſight.

Lu. To plead for love, deſerves more fee then hate.

Ju. Will ye be gone ?

Lu. That you may ruminate. Exit.

Ju. And yet I would I had ore-look'd the Letter ;
It were a ſhame to call her back again,
And pray her to a fault, for which I chid her.
What 'fool is ſhe, that knows I am a Maid,
And would not force the letter to my view ?
Since Maids in modeſty, ſay No to that,
Which they would have the profferer conſtrue, I.
Fie, fie ; how way-ward is this fooliſh love ;
That (like a teſty Babe) will ſcratch the Nurſe,
And preſently, all humbled, kiſſe the Rod ?
How churliſhly I chid Lucetta hence,
When willingly I would have had her here ?
How angerly I taught my brow to frown,
When inward joy enforc'd my heart to ſmile ?
My penance is, to call Lucetta back,
And ask remiſſion for my folly paſt.
What hoe : Lucetta.

Lu. What would your Ladiſhip ?

Ju. Is't near dinner time ?

Lu. I would it were,
That you might kill your ſtomack on your meat,

And not upon your Maid.
Ju. What is't that you,
Took up so gingerly?
Lu. Nothing.
Ju. Why did'st thou stoop then?
Lu. To take a Paper up, that I let fall.
Ju. And is that Paper nothing?
Lu. Nothing concerning me.
Ju. Then let it lye, for those that it concerns.
Lu. Madam, it will not lye where it concerns,
Unless it have a false interpreter.
Ju. Some Love of yours hath writ to you in Rime.
Lu. That I might sing it (Madam) to a tune:
Give a note, your Ladiship can set.
Ju. As little by such toy's, as may be possible:
Best sing it to the tune of Light O Love,
Lu. It is too heavy for so light a tune.
Ju. Heavy? belike it hath some burthen then?
Lu. I: and melodious were it, would you sing it.
Ju. And why not you?
Lu. I cannot reach so high.
Ju. Lets see your song:
How now Minion?
Lu. Keep tune there still, so you will sing it out:
And yet methinks I do not like this tune.
Ju. You do not?
Lu. No (Madam) 'tis too sharp.
Ju. You (Minion) are too sawcie.
Lu. Nay, now you are too flat;
And marre the concord, with too harsh a descant:
There wanteth but a Mean to fill your Song.
Ju. The Mean is drown'd with your unruly base.
Lu. Indeed I bid thee base for Protheus.
Ju. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me;
Here is a coile with protestation:
Goe, get you gone: and let the Papers lye:
You would be fingring them to anger me.
Lu. She makes it strange, but she would be best pleas'd
To be so angred with another Letter. Exet.
Ju. Nay, would I were so angred with the same:
Oh hatefull hands, to tear such loving words;
Injurious Wasps, to feed on such sweet honey,
And kill the Bees that yield it, with your stings;
Ile kiss each several Paper for amends:
Look, here is writ, kinde Julia: unkinde Julia,
As in revenge of thy ingratitude,
I throw thy name against the bruzing stones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy disdain.
And here is writ, Love-wounded Protheus.
Poor wounded name: my bosome, as a bed,
Shall lodge thee till thy wound be throughly heal'd;
And thus I search it with a soveraign kisse.
But twice, or thrice,, was Protheus written down:
Be calm (good winde) blow not a word away,
Till I have found each letter in the Letter,
Except mine own name: That some whirle-wind bear
Unto a ragged, fearful, hanging Rock,
And throw it thence into the raging Sea.
Loe, here in one line is his name twice writ:
Poor forlorne Protheus, passionate Protheus:
To the sweet Iulia: that Ile tear away:
And yet I will not, sith so prettily
He couples it, to his complaining names;
Thus will I fold them, one upon another;
Now kiss, embrace, contend, do what you will. Enter.
Lu. Madam: dinner is ready, and your father stayes.
Ju. Well, let us goe.
Lu. What, shall these Papers lie, like tell-tales here?
Ju. If you respect them; best to take them up.
Lu. Nay, I was taken up, for laying them down.
Yet here they shall not lye for catching cold.
Ju. I see you have a month's mind to them.
Lu. I (Madam) you may say what sights you see;
I see things too, although you judge I wink,
Ju. Come, come, wilt please you goe? Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Antonio Panthion and Protheus.

Ant. Tell me Panthion, what sad talk was that,
Wherewith my brother held you in the Cloyster?
Pan. 'Twas of his Nephew Protheus, your sonne.
Ant. Why? what of him?
Pan. He wondred that your Lordship
Would suffer him to spend his youth at home,
While other men of slender reputation
Put forth their Sonn's, to seek preferment out.
Some to the warres, to try their fortune there;
Some to discover Islands farre away:
Some, to the studious Universities.
For any, or for all these exercises,
He said, that Protheus, your son, was meet;
And did request me to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home;
Which would be great impeachment to his age,
In having known no travail in his youth.
Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that Whereon, this moneth I have been hammering.
I have consider'd well, his loss of time,
And now he cannot be a perfect man,
Not being tried, nor tutor'd in the world:
Experience is by industry atchiev'd,
And perfected by the swift course of time:
Then tell me, whither were I best to send him?
Pan. I think your Lordship is not ignorant
How his Companion, youthfull Valentine,
Attends the Emperour in his Royal Court.
Ant. I know it well. (thither,
Pan. 'Twere good, I think, your Lordship sent him
There shall he practise Tilts and Turnaments;
Hear sweet discourse, converse with Noblemen,
And be in eye of every exercise
Worthy his youth and nobleness of birth.
Ant. I like thy counsail: well hast thou advis'd:
And that thou maist perceive how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make known;
Even with the speediest expedition,
I will dispatch him to the Emperours Court.
Pan. To morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso,
With other Gentlemen of good esteem
Are journeying to salute the Emperour,
And to commend their service to his will.
Ant. Good company: with them shall Protheus goe:
And in good time, now will we break with him. Enter.
Pro. Sweet Love, sweet lines, sweet life, (Pro.
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart,
Here is her oath for love, her honours pawn:

O that our Fathers would applaud our Loves
To seal our happiness with their consents,
Oh heavenly Julia.

Ant. How now? What Letter are you reading there?

Pro. May't please your Lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine;
Deliver'd by a friend, that came from him.

Ant. Lend me the Letter: Let me see what news.

Pro. There is no news (my Lord) but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well belov'd,
And daily graced by the Emperour;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.

Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?

Pro. As one relying on your Lordships will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.

Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish:
Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed;
For what I will, I will, and there's an end:
I am resolv'd that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentino in the Emperours Court:
What maintenance he from his friends receiv's,
Like exhibition thou shalt have from me,
To morrow be in readinesse to go,
Excuse it not: for I am peremptory.

Pro. My Lord I cannot be so soon provided,
Please you deliberate a day or two.

Ant. Look what thou want'st shall be sent after thee:
No more of stay: to morrow thou must go;
Come on Panthion; you shall be imploy'd,
To hasten on his expedition.

Pro. Thus have I shunn'd the fire for fear of burning,
And drench'd me in the Sea, where I am drown'd,
I fear'd to shew my father Julia's Letter,
Least he should take exceptions to my Love,
And with the vantage of mine own excuse
Hath he excepted most against my Love.
Oh, how this spring of love resembleth
The uncertain glory of an Aprill day,
Which now shews all the beauty of the Sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away. Enter.

Pan. Sir Protheus, your father call's for you,
He is in haste, therefore I pray you go.

Pro. Why this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answer's no.

Exeunt. Finis.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, Silvia.

Speed. Sir, your Glove.

Valen. Not mine: my Gloves are on.

Sp. Why then this may be yours: for this is but one.

Val. Ha? Let me see: I, give it me, it's mine:
Sweet ornament, that decks a thing divine,
Ah Silvia, Silvia.

Speed. Madam Silvia: Madam Silvia.

Val. How now Sirrah?

Sp. She is not within hearing Sir.

Val. Why sir, who bad you call her?

Sp. Your worship sir, or else I mistook.

Val. Well: you'l still be too forward.

Sp. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.

Val. Go to sir, tell me: do you know Madam Silvia?

Sp. She that your worship loves?

Val. Why, how know you that I am in love?

Sp. Marry by these special marks: first, you have learn'd (like sir Protheus) to wreath your armes like a Male-content: to relish a Love-Song, like a Robin-red-breast: to walke alone like one that had the Pestilence: to sigh like a Schoole-boy that had lost his A. B. C. to weep like a young Wench that had lost her Grandam: to fast like one that takes dyet: to watch like one that fears robbing: to speak puling like a Begger at Hallowmasse: You were wont when you laughed to crow like a Cock: when you walk'd, to walk like one of the Lions: when you fasted, it was presently after dinner: when you look't sadly, it was for want of money: And now you are Metamorphos'd with a Mistresse, that when I look on you, I can hardly think you my Master.

Val. Are all these things perceiv'd in me?

Sp. They are all perceiv'd without ye.

Val. Without me? they cannot.

Sp. Without you? nay, that's certain: for without you were so simple, none else would: but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in an Urinal: that not an eye that sees you, but is a Physitian to Comment on your Malady.

Val. But tell me: dost thou know my Lady Silvia?

Sp. She that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper?

Val. Hast thou observ'd that? even she I mean.

Sp. Why sir, I know her not.

Val. Dost thou know her by gazing on her, and yet know'st her not?

Sp. Is she not hard favour'd sir?

Val. Not so fair (boy) as well favour'd.

Sp. Sir, I know that well enough.

Val. What dost thou know?

Sp. That she is not so fair, as (of you) well favour'd?

Val. I mean that her beauty is exquisite,
But her favour infinite.

Sp. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.

Val. How painted? and how out of count?

Sp. Marry sir, so painted to make her fair, that no man counts of her beauty.

Val. How esteem'st thou me? I account of her beauty.

Sp. You never saw her since she was deform'd.

Val. How long hath she been deform'd?

Sp. Ever since you lov'd her.

Val. I have lov'd her ever since I saw her,
And still I see her beautifull.

Sp. If you love her, you cannot see her.

Val. Why?

Sp. Because Love is blinde: O that you had mine eyes, or your own eyes had the lights they were wont to have, when you chid at Sir Protheus, for going ungarter'd.

Val. What should I see then?

Sp. Your own present folly, and her passing deformitie: for he, being in love, could not see to garter his Hose; and you, being in love, cannot see to put on your Hose.

Val. Belike (Boy) then you are in love, for last morning You could not see to wipe my shooes.

Sp. True sir, I was in love with my bed, I thank you, you swing'd me for my love, which makes me the bolder bolder to chide you for yours.

Val. In concluſion I ſtand affected to her:
Sp. I would you were ſet, ſo your affection would ceaſe.
Val. Laſt night ſhe enjoyn'd me,
To write ſome lines to one ſhe loves.
Sp. And have you.
Val. I have.
Sp. Are they not lamely writ?
Val. No (Boy) but as well as I can do them:
Peace, here ſhe comes.
Sp. Oh excellent Motion; Oh exceeding Puppet:
Now will he interpret to her.
Val. Madam and Miſtris, a thouſand good morrowes.
Sp. Oh, 'give ye-good-ev'n: here's a million of manners.
Sil. Sir Valentine, and ſervant, to you two thouſand.
Sil. He ſhould g ve her intereſt: and ſhe gives it him.
Val. As you injoyn'd me; I have writ your Letter
Unto the ſecret, nameleſs friend of yours:
Which I was much unwilling to proceed in,
But my duty to your Ladiſhip.
Sil. I thank you (gentle ſervant) 'tis very Clerkly done.
Val. Now truſt me (Madam) it came hardly off:
For being ignorant to whom it goes,
I writ at random very doubtfully.
Sil. Perchance you think too much of ſo much pains?
Val. No (Madam,) ſo it ſteed you, I will write
(Pleaſe you command) a thouſand times as much:
And yet——
Sil. A pretty period: well: I gueſs the ſequell;
And yet I will not name it: and yet I care not.
And yet, take this again: and yet I thank you:
Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.
Sp. And yet you will: and yet, another yet.
Val. What means your Ladiſhip?
Do you not like it?
Sil. Yes, yes: the lines are very quaintly writ,
But (ſince unwillingly) take them again.
Nay, take them.
Val. Madam, they are for you.
Sil. I, I: you writ them Sir at my requeſt,
But I will none of them: they are for you:
I would have had them writ more movingly:
Val. Pleaſe you, Ile write your Ladiſhip another.
Sil. And when it's writ: for my ſake read it over,
And if it pleaſe you, ſo: if not, why ſo.
Val. If it pleaſe me (Madam?) what then?
Sil. Why if it pleaſe you, take it for your labour;
And ſo good morrow ſervant. Exit.
Sp. Oh Jeſt unſeen: inſcrutible, inviſible,
As a noſe on a mans face, or a Weathercock on a Steeple:
My Maſter ſues to her: and ſhe hath taught her Suitor,
He being her Pupil, to become her Tutour.
Oh excellent deviſe, was there ever heard a better?
That my Maſter being Scribe,
To himſelf ſhould write the Letter?
Val. How now ſir?
What are you reaſoning with your ſelf?
Sp. Nay, I was riming: 'tis you that have the reaſon.
Val. To do what?
Sp. To be a ſpokes-man from Madam Silvia.
Val. To whom?
Sp. To your ſelf: why, ſhe woe's you by a figure.
Val. What figure?
Sp. By a Letter, I ſhould ſay.
Val. Why ſhe hath not writ to me?
Sp. What need ſhe,
When ſhe hath made you write to your ſelf?
Why, do you not perceive the jeſt?
Val. No, believe me.
Sp. No believing you indeed Sir:
But did you perceive her earneſt?
Val. She gave me none, except an angry word.
Sp. Why ſhe hath given you a Letter.
Val. That's the Letter I writ to her friend.
Sp. And that Letter hath ſhe deliver'd, & there's an end.
Val. I would it were no worſe.
Sp. Ile warrant you 'tis as well:
For often have you writ to her: and ſhe in modeſty,
Or elſe for want of idle time, could not again reply,
Or fearing elſe ſome meſſenger, that might her mind diſcover
Her ſelf hath taught her Love himſelf to write unto her
All this I ſpeak in Print, for in Print I found it. (Lovet
Why muſe you ſir, 'tis dinner time.
Val. I have din'd.
Sp. I, but hearken ſir: though the Cameleon Love can feed on the aire, I am one that am nouriſh'd by my victuals; and would fain have meat: oh be not like your Miſtreſs, be moved, be moved. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Protheus, Julia, Panthion.

Pro. Have patience, gentle Julia.
Jul. I muſt where is no remedy.
Pro. When poſſibly I can, I will return.
Jul. If you turn not: you will return the ſooner:
Keep this remembrance for thy Julia's ſake.
Pro. Why then wee'l make exchange;
Here, take you this.
Jul. And ſeal this bargain with a holy kiſſe.
Pro. Here is my hand, for my true conſtancie:
And when that hour ore-ſlips me in the day,
Wherein I ſigh not (Julia) for thy ſake,
The next enſuing hour, ſome foul miſchance
Torment me for my Loves forgetfulneſs:
My father ſtayes my coming: anſwer not:
The Tide is now; nay, not thy tide of tears,
That tide will ſtay me longer then I ſhould,
Julia farewell: what, gone without a word?
I, ſo true love ſhould do: it cannot ſpeak,
For truth hath better deeds than words to grace it.
Pan. Sir Protheus, you are ſtaid for.
Pro. Goe, I come, I come:
Alas, this parting ſtrikes poor Lovers dumb.
Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Launce, Panthion.

Launce. Nay, 'twill be this hour ere I have done weeping: all the kind of thee Launces have this very fault: I have receiv'd my proportion, like the prodigious ſonne,

Son, and am going with Sir Protheus to the Imperialls Court: I think Crab my Dog, be the sowrest natured Dog that lives: My Mother weeping: my Father wailing: my Sister crying: our Maid howling: our Cat wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexity, yet did not this cruell-hearted Curre shed one tear: he is a stone, a very pibble-stone, and has no more pity in him then a Dog: a Jew would have wept to have seen our parting: why my Grandam having no eyes, look you, wept her self blind at my parting: nay, I'le show you the manner of it. This shooe is my father: no, this left shooe is my father; no, no, this left shooe is my mother: nay, that cannot be so neither; yes: it is so, it is so; it hath the worser sole: this shooe with the hole in it, is my mother: and this my father: a veng'ance on't, there 'tis: Now sir, this staffe is my sister: for look you, she is as white as a lilly, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan our maid: I am the dog: no, the dog is himself, and I am the dog: oh, the dog is me, and I am my self: I so, so: now come I to my Father; Father, your blessing: now should not the shooe speak a word for weeping: now should I kisse my Father; well, he weeps on: Now come I to my Mother: Oh that she could speak now, like a would-woman: well, I kisse her: why there 'tis; here's my mothers breath up and down: Now come I to my sister; marke the moan she makes: now the dogge all this while sheds not a tear: nor speakes a word: but see how I lay the dust with my tears.

Panth. Launce, away, away: a Board thy Masters is ship'd, and thou art to post after with oars; what's the matter? why weep'st thou man? away asse, you'l loose the Tide, if you tarry any longer.

Laun. It is no matter if the tide were lost, for it is the unkindest Tide, that ever any man tyde.

Panth. What's the unkindest tide?

Lau. Why, he that's tide here, Crab my dog.

Pan. Tut man: I mean thou'l't loose the flood, and in loosing the flood, loose thy voyage, and in loosing thy voyage, loose thy master, and in loosing thy Master, loose thy service, and in loosing thy service: -------why dost thou stop my mouth?

Laun. For fear thou should'st loose thy tongue.

Panth. Where should I loose my tongue?

Laun. In thy Tale.

Panth. In thy Taile.

Laun. Loose the Tyde, and the voyage, and the Master, and the Service, and the tide: why man if the River were drie, I am able to fill it with my tears: if the wind were down, I could drive the boat with my sighes.

Panth. Come: come away man, I was sent to call thee.

Lau. Sir: call me what thou dar'st.

Pan. Wilt thou go.

Lau. Well, I will go. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, Speed, Duke, Protheus.

Sil. Servant.

Val. Mistris.

Sp. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.

Val. I boy it's for love.

Sp. Not of you.

Val. Of my Mistris then.

Sp. 'Twere good you knockt him.

Sil. Servant, yor are sad.

Val. Indeed, Madam, I seem so.

Thu. Seem you that you are not?

Val. Hap'ly I do.

Thu. So do Counterfeits.

Val. So do you.

Thu. What seem I that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Thu. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thu. And how quoat you my folly?

Val. I quoat it in your Jerken.

Thu. My Jerken is a doublet.

Val. Well then, Ile double your folly.

Thu. How?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio, do you change colour?

Val. Give him leave, Madam, he is a kind of Camelion.

Thu. That hath more minde to feed on your blood, then live in your aire.

Val. You have said Sir.

Thu. I Sir, and done too for this time.

Val. I know it well sir, you alwayes end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volly of words, gentlemē, & quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, Madam, we thank the giver.

Sil. Who is that Servant?

Val. Your self (sweet Lady) for you gave the fire,
Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your Ladiships looks,
And spends what he borrows kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt.

Val. I know it well sir, you have an Exchequer of words,
And I think, no other treasure to give your followers:
For it appears by their bare Liveries
That they live by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more:
Here comes my father.

Duke. Now, daughter, Silvia, you are hard beset.
Sir Valentine, your father is in good health,
What say you to a Letter from your friends
Of much good news?

Val. My Lord I will be thankfull,
To any messenger from thence.

Duke. Know you Don Antonio, your Countriman?

Val. I, my good Lord, I know the Gentleman
To be of worth, and worthy estimation,
And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. hath he not a Son?

Val. I my good Lord, a Son; that well deserves
The honour, and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well?

Val. I knew him as my self: for from our Infancie
We have convers't, and spent our hours together,
And though my self have been an idle Trewant,
Omitting the sweet benefit of time
To clothe mine age with Angel-like perfection;
Yet hath Sir Protheus (for that's his name)
Made use, and fair advantage of his dayes:
His years but young, but his experience old:
His head unmellowed, but his judgement ripe;
And in a word (for far behinde his worth
Comes all the praises that I now bestow.)

He is compleat in feature, and in minde,
With all good grace, to grace a Gentleman.
Duk. Beſhrew me ſir, but if he make this good
He is as worthy for an Empreſs love,
As meet to be an Emperours Councellor:
Well, Sir: this gentleman is come to me.
With Commendation from great Potentates,
And here he means to ſpend his time a while,
I think 'tis no welcome news to you.
Val. Should I have wiſh'd a thing, it had been he.
Duk. Welcome him then according to his worth:
Silvia, I ſpeak to you, and you Sir Thurio,
For Valentine, I need not cite him to it,
I will ſend him hither to you preſently.
Val. This is the gentleman I told your Ladiſhip
Had come along with me, but that his Miſtreſs
Did hold his eyes, lockt in her Chriſtal looks.
Sil. Belike that now ſhe hath enfranchis'd them
Upon ſome other pawne for fealty.
Val. Nay ſure, I think ſhe holds them priſoners ſtill.
Sil. Nay then he ſhould be blind, and being blind
How could he ſee his way to ſeek out you?
Val. Why Lady, Love hath twenty pair of eyes.
Thu. They ſay that love hath not an eye at all.
Val. To ſee ſuch Lovers, Thurio, as your ſelf,
Upon a homely object love can wink. Enter.
Sil. Have done, have done: here comes the gentleman.
Val. Welcome, deer Protheus: Miſtris, I beſeech you
Confirm this welcome, with ſome ſpecial favour,
Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hither,
If this be he you oft have wiſh'd to hear from.
Val. Miſtris, it is: ſweet Lady, entertain him
To be my fellow-ſervant to your Ladiſhip.
Sil. Too low a Miſtris for ſo high a ſervant.
Pro. Not ſo, ſweet Lady, but too, mean a ſervant,
To have a look of ſuch a worthy Miſtris.
Val. Leave off diſcourſe of diſabilitie:
Sweet Lady, entertain him for your ſervant.
Pro. My dutie will I boaſt of, nothing elſe.
Sil. And dutie never yet did want his meed.
Servant, you are welcome to a worthleſs Miſtris.
Pro. I'le die on him that ſaies ſo but your ſelf.
Sil. That you are welcome?
Pro. That you are worthleſs. (you.
Thur. Madam, my Lord your father would ſpeak with
Sil. I wait upon his pleaſure: Come Sir Thurio,
Go with me: once more, new ſervant welcome;
I'le leave you to confer of home affairs,
When you have done, we look to hear from you.
Pro. Wee'l both attend upon your Ladiſhip.
Val. Now tell me how do all from whence you came?
Pro. Your friends are well, and have them much com-
Val. And how do yours? (mended.
Pro. I left them all in health.
Val. How does your Lady? and how thrives your love?
Pro. My tales of love were wont to weary you,
I know you joy not in a Love-diſcourſe.
Val. I Protheus, but that life is alter'd now,
I have done penance for contemning Love,
Whoſe high emperious thoughts have puniſh'd me
with bitter faſts, with penetentiall groans,
With nightly tears, and daily heart-ſore ſighes,
For in revenge of my contempt of love,
Love hath chac'd ſleep from my enthralled eyes,
And made them watchers of mine own hearts ſorrow.
O gentle Protheus, Lov's a mighty Lord,
And hath ſo humbled me, as I confeſs
There is no woe to his correction,
Nor to his ſervice, no ſuch joy on earth:
Now, no diſcourſe, except it be of love:
Now can I break my faſt, dine, ſup, and ſleep,
Upon the very naked name of love.
Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye:
Was this the Idoll, that you worſhip ſo?
Val. Even She; and is ſhe not a heavenly Saint?
Pro. No; But ſhe is an earthly Paragon.
Val. Call her divine.
Pro. I will not flatter her.
Val. O flatter me: for love delights in praiſe.
Pro. When I was ſick, you gave me bitter pills,
And I muſt miniſter the like to you.
Val. Then ſpeak the truth by her, if not divine,
Yet let her be a principalitie,
Soveraigne to all the Creatures on the earth.
Pro. Except my Miſtris.
Val. Sweet: except not any,
Except thou wilt except againſt my Love.
Pro. Have I not reaſon to prefer mine own?
Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too;
She ſhall be dignified with this high honour,
To bear my Ladies train, leaſt the baſe earth
Should from her veſture chance to ſteale a kiſs,
And of ſo great a favour growing proud,
Diſdain to root the Summer-ſwelling flower,
And make rough Winter everlaſtingly.
Pro. Why Valentine, what Bragadiſm is this?
Val. Pardon me (Protheus) all I can is nothing;
To her, whoſe worth makes other worthies nothing;
She is alone.
Pro. Then let her alone.
Val. Not for the world: why man, ſhe is mine own,
And I as rich in having ſuch a Jewell
As twenty Seas, if all their ſand were pearle,
The water Nectar, and the Rock pure gold.
Forgive me, that I do not dream on thee,
Becauſe thou ſeeſt me doat upon my love:
My fooliſh Rivall that her father likes
(Onely for his poſſeſſions are ſo huge)
Is gone with her along, and I muſt after,
For Love (thou know'ſt) is full of jealouſie.
Pro. But ſhe loves you? (hour,
Val. I, and we are betroathed: nay more, our marriage
With all the cunning manner of our flight
Determin'd off: how I muſt climbe her window,
The Ladder made of Cords, and all the means
Plotted, and 'greed on for my happineſs.
Good Protheus, go with me to my chamber,
In theſe affaires to aid me with thy counſel.
Pro. Go on before: I ſhall enquire you forth:
I muſt unto the Road, to diſ-embarque
Some neceſſaries; that I needs muſt uſe,
And then I'le preſently attend you.
Val. Will you make haſte?
Pro. I will.
Even as one heat, another heat expels,
Or as one nail by ſtrength drives out another:
So the remembrance of my former Love
Is by a new object quite forgotten,
Is it mine then, or Valentine ans praiſe?
Her true perfection, or my falſe tranſgreſſion?
That makes me reaſonleſs, to reaſon thus?
She is fair: and ſo is Iulia that I love,

(That I did love, for now my love is thaw'd,
Which like a waxen Image 'gainſt a fire
Bears no impreſſion of the thing it was.)
Me thinks my zeal to Valentine is cold,
And that I love him not as I was wont:
O, but I love his Lady too-too much.
And that's the reaſon I love him ſo little.
How ſhall I doat on her with more advice,
That thus without advice begin to love her?
'Tis but her picture I have yet beheld,
And that hath dazel'd ſo my reaſons light:
But when I look on her perfections,
There is no reaſon, but I ſhall be blinde.
If I can check my erring love, I will;
If not, to compaſs her I'le uſe my skill.

Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed. Launce, by mine honeſty welcome to Padua.

Laun. Forſwear not thy ſelf, ſweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this alwaies, that a man is never undone till he be hang'd, nor never welcome to a place, till ſome certain ſhot be paid, and the Hoſteſs ſay welcome.

Speed. Come-on you mad-cap: I'le to the Ale-houſe with you preſently; where, for one ſhot of five pence, thou ſhalt have five thouſand welcomes: But ſirha, how did thy Maſter part with Madam Iulia?

Laun. Marry after they cloas'd in earneſt, they parted very fairly in jeſt.

Sp. But ſhall ſhe marry him?

Lau. No.

Sp. How then? ſhall he marry he?

Lau. No, neither.

Sp. What, are they broken?

Lau. No; they are both as whole as a fiſh.

Sp. Why then, how ſtands the matter with them?

Lau. Marry thus; when it ſtands well with him, it ſtands well with her.

Sp. What an aſſe art thou, I underſtand thee not.

Lau. What a block art thou, that thou can'ſt not? My ſtaffe underſtands me.

Sp. What thou ſai'ſt?

Lau. I, and what I do too: look thee, I'le but lean, and my ſtaffe underſtands me.

Sp. It ſtands under thee indeed.

Lau. Why, ſtand-under: and underſtand is all one.

Sp. But tell me true, wil't be a match?

Lau. Ask my dog, if he ſay I: it will: if he ſay no, it will: if he ſhake his taile and ſay nothing, it will.

Sp. The concluſion is then, that it will.

Lau. Thou ſhalt never get ſuch a ſecret from me, but by a parable.

Sp. 'Tis well that I get it ſo: but Launce, how ſai'ſt thou that my maſter is become a notable Lover?

Lau. I never knew him otherwiſe.

Sp. Then how?

Lau. A notable Lubber: as thou reporteſt him to be.

Sp. Why, thou whoreſon Aſſe, thou miſtak'ſt me.

Lau. Why Foole, I meant not thee, I meant not thy Maſter.

Sp. I tell thee, my maſter, is become a hot Lover.

Lau. Why I tell thee, I care not, though he burn himſelf in Love. If thou wilt go with me to the Alehouſe, ſo, if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Jew, and not worth the name of a Chriſtian.

Sp. Why?

Lau. Becauſe thou haſt not ſo much charity in thee as to go to the Ale with a Chriſtian: Wilt thou go?

Sp. At thy ſervice.

Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Protheus ſolus.

Pro. To leave my Iulia; ſhall I be forſworn?
To love fair Silvia; ſhall I be forſworn?
To wrong my friend, I ſhall be much forſworn.
And ev'n that Power which gave me firſt my oath
Provokes me to this three-fold perjury.
Love bad me ſwear, and Love bids me for-ſwear;
O ſweet ſuggeſting Love, if thou haſt ſin'd,
Teach me (thy tempted ſubject) to excuſe it.
At firſt I did adore a twinkling Star,
But now I worſhip a celeſtial Sun:
Un-heedful vows may heedfully be broken,
And he wants wit, that wants reſolved will,
To learn his wit, t'exchange the bad for better;
Fie, fie unreverend tongue to call her bad,
Whoſe ſoveraignty ſo oft thou haſt preferd,
With twenty thouſand ſoul-confirming oaths.
I cannot leave to love, and yet I do:
But there I leave to love, where I ſhould love.
Iulia I looſe, and Valentine I looſe,
If I keep them, I needs muſt loſe my ſelf:
If I looſe them, thus finde I but their loſs,
For Valentine my ſelf: for Iulia, Silvia.
I to my ſelf am dearer then a friend,
For Love is ſtill moſt pretious in it ſelf,
And Silvia (witneſs heaven that made her fair)
Shews Iulia but a ſwarthy Ethiope.
I will forget that Iulia is alive,
Remembring that my love to her is dead.
And Valentine I'le hold an Enemie,
Aiming at Silvia as a ſweeter friend.
I cannot now prove conſtant to my ſelf,
Without ſome trechery us'd to Valentine.
This night he meaneth with a corded-ladder
To climbe celeſtial Silvia's chamber window,
My ſelf in councel his competitor.
Now preſently I'le give her father notice
Of their diſguiſing and pretended flight:
Who (all inrag'd) will baniſh Valentine:
For Thurio he intends ſhall wed his daughter,
But Valentine being gone, I'le quickly croſs
By ſome ſlie trick, blunt Thurio's dull proceeding.
Love lend me wings, to make my purpoſe ſwift,
As thou haſt lent me wit to plot his drift.

Enter Julia and Lucetta.

Jul. Counsel, Lucetta, gentle girl assist me,
And even in kind love, I doe conjure thee,
Who art the Table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly Character'd, and Engrav'd,
To lesson me, and tell me some good mean.
How with my honour I may undertake
A journey to my loving Protheus.
Luc. Alas, the way is wearisome and long.
Jul. A true devoted Pilgrim is not weary
To measure Kingdomes with his feeble steps,
Much lesse shall she that hath loves wings to flie,
And when the flight is made to one so dear,
Of such divine perfections as Sir Protheus.
Luc. Better forbear till Protheus make return.
Jul. Oh, know'st thou not, his looks are my souls food?
Pity the dearth that I have pined in,
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the inchly touch of Love,
Thou would'st as soon go kindle fire with snow
As seek to quench the fire of Love with words.
Luc. I doe not seek to quench your Loves hot fire,
But qualifie the fires extream rage,
Least it should burn above the bounds of reason.
Jul. The more thou dam'st it up, the more it burns:
The Current that with gentle murmur glides
(Thou know'st) being stop'd, impatiently doth rage:
But when his fair course is not hindered,
He makes sweet musick with th'enameld stones,
Giving a gentle kisse to every sedge
He overtaketh in his pilgrimage.
And so by many winding nooks he strayes
With willing sport to the wild Ocean.
Then let me go, and hinder not my course:
I'le be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step have brought me to my Love,
And there I'le rest, as after much turmoil
A blessed soul doth in Elizium.
Luc. But in what habit will you go along?
Jul. Not like a woman, for I would prevent
The loose encounters of lascivious men:
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weeds
As may beseem some well reputed Page.
Luc. Why then your Ladiship must cut your hair.
Jul. No girl, i'le knit it up in silken strings,
With twenty od-conceited true-love knots:
To be fantastick, may become a youth
Of greater time then I shall show to be. (ches?
Luc. What fashion (Madam) shall I make your bree-
Jul. That fits as well, as tell me (good my Lord)
What compasse will you wear your Farthingale?
Why even what fashion thou best likes (Lucetta.)
Luc. You must needs have them with a cod-piece (Ma-
Jul. Out, out, (Lucetta) that will be ill-favord. (dam
Luc. A round hose (Madam) now's not worth a pin
Unlesse you have a cod-piece to stick pins on.
Jul. Lucetta, as thou lov'st me let me have.
What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly,
But tell me (wench) how will the world repute me
For undertaking so unstaid a journey?
I fear me it will make me scandaliz'd.
Luc. If you think so, then stay at home and go not.
Jul. Nay, that I will not.
Luc. Then never dream on Infamy, but go:
If Protheus like your journey when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd when you are gone:
I fear me he will scarce be pleas'd withall.
Jul. That is the least (Lucetta) of my fear:
A thousand oathes, an Ocean of his tears
And instances as infinite of Love,
Warrant me welcome to my Protheus.
Luc. All these are servants to deceitfull men.
Jul. Base men, that use them to so base effect;
But truer stars did govern Protheus birth,
His words are bonds, his oathes are oracles,
His love sincere, his thoughts immaculate,
His tears pure messengers, sent from his heart,
His heart as far from fraud, as heaven from earth.
Luc. Pray heaven he prove so when you come to him.
Jul. Now, as thou lov'st me, do him not that wrong,
To bear a hard opinion of his truth:
Onely deserve my love, by loving him,
And presently go with me to my chamber
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me upon my longing journey:
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose,
My goods, my Lands, my reputation;
Onely in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence:
Come; answer not: but to it presently,
I am impatient of my tarriance.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus, Valentine, Launce, Speed.

Duk. Sir Thurio, give us leave (I pray) awhile,
We have some secrets to confer about.
Now tell me Protheus, whats your will with me?
Pro. My gracious Lord, that which I would discover,
The law of friendship bids me to conceal,
But when I call to mind your gracious favours
Done to me (undeserving as I am)
My duty pricks me on to utter that
Which else no worldly good should draw from me:
Know (worthy Prince) Sir Valentine my friend
This night intends to steal away your daughter:
My self am one made privy to the plot.
I know you have determin'd to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates;
And should she thus be stolen away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus (for my duties sake) I rather chose
To crosse my friend in his intended drift,
Then (by concealing it) heap on your head
A pack of sorrows, which would presse you down
(Being unprepared) to your timelesse grave.
Duk. Protheus, I thank thee for thine honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I live.
This love of theirs, my self have often seen,
Happly when they have judg'd me fast asleep,
And oftentimes have purpos'd to forbid

Sir

Sir Valuntine her company, and my Court.
But fearing leaſt my jealous aime might erre,
And ſo (unworthily) diſgrace the man
(A raſhneſſe that I ever yet have ſhun'd)
I gave him gentle looks, thereby to find
That which thy ſelf haſt now diſclos'd to me.
And thou maiſt perceive my fear of this,
Knowing that tender youth is ſoon ſuggeſted,
I nightly lodge her in an upper Tower,
The key whereof my ſelf have ever kept:
And thence ſhe cannot be convey'd away.

Pro. Know (noble Lord) they have devis'd a mean
How he her Chamber window will aſcend,
And with a Corded Ladder fetch her down:
For which, the youthfull Lover now is gone,
And this way comes he with it preſently.
Where (if it pleaſe you) you may intercept him.
But (good my Lord) doe it ſo cunningly
That my diſcovery be not aimed at:
For, love of you, not hate unto my friend,
Hath made me publiſher of this preſence.

Duke. Upon mine honour, he ſhall never know
That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adiew, my Lord, Sir Valentine is comming. Enter.

Duk. Sir Valentine, whether away ſo faſt?

Va. Pleaſe it your Grace, there is a Meſſenger
That ſtayes to bear my Letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliver them.

Duk. Be they of much import?

Val. The tenure of them doth but ſignifie
My health, and happy being at your Court.

Duk. Nay then no matter: ſtay with me awhile,
I am to break with thee of ſome affairs
That touch me near: wherein thou muſt be ſecret
'Tis not unknown so thee, that I have ſought
To match my friend Sir Thurio, to my daughter.

Val. I know it well (my Lord) and ſure the Match
Were rich and honourable: beſides, the gentleman
Is full of Virtue, Bounty, Worth, and Qualities
Beſeeming ſuch a Wife, as your fair daughter:
Cannot your Grace win her to fancy him?

Duk. No, truſt me, She is peeviſh, ſullen, froward,
Proud, diſobedient, ſtubborn, lacking duty,
Neither regarding that ſhe is my child,
Nor fearing me, as if I were her Father:
And may I ſay to thee, this pride of hers
(Upon advice) hath drawn my love from her,
And where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should have been cheriſh'd by her child-like duty,
I now am full reſolv'd to take a wife,
And turn her out to who will take her in:
Then let her beauty be her wedding Dowre:
For me and my poſſeſſions ſhe eſteems not.

Val. What would your Grace have me to doe in this?

Duk. There is a Lady in Verona here
Whom I affect: but ſhe is nice, and coy,
And nought eſteems my aged eloquence.
Now therefore would I have thee to my Tutor
(For long agone I have forgot to court;
Beſides the faſhion of the time is chang'd)
How, and which way I may beſtow my ſelf
To be regarded in her ſun-bright eye.

Va. Win her with gifts, if ſhe reſpect not words,
Dumb Jewels often in their ſilent kind
More then quick words, doe move a womans mind.

Duk. But ſhe did ſcorn a preſent that I ſent her,

Val. A woman ſometimes ſcorns what beſt contents her
Send her another: never give her o're,
For ſcorn at firſt makes after-love the more.
If ſhe do frown, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more love in you.
If ſhe doe chide, 'tis not to have you gone,
For why, the fools are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulſe, whatever ſhe doth ſay,
For, get you gone, ſhe doth not mean away.
Flatter, and praiſe, commend, extoll their graces:
Though ne're ſo black, ſay they have Angels faces,
That man that hath a tongue, I ſay is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot win a woman.

Duk. But ſhe I mean, is promis'd by her friends
Unto a youthfull Gentleman of worth,
And kept ſeverely from reſort of men,
That no man hath acceſſe by day to her.

Val. Why then I would reſort to her by night.

Duk. I, but the doors be lockt, and keys kept ſafe,
That no man hath recourſe to her by night.

Val. What lets but one may enter at her Window?

Duk. Her Chamber is aloft far from the ground,
And built ſo ſhelving, that one cannot climbe it
Without apparent hazard of his life.

Val. Why then a Ladder quaintly made of Cords
To caſt up, with a pair of anchoring hooks,
Would ſerve to ſcale another Hero's Tower,
So bold Leander would adventure it.

Duk. Now as thou art a Gentleman of blood
Adviſe me, where I may have ſuch a Ladder.

Val. When would you uſe it? pray ſir, tell me that.

Duk. This very night; for Love is like a child
That longs for every thing that he can come by.

Val. By ſeven a clock, i'le get you ſuch a Ladder.

Duk. But hark thee: I will go to her alone,
How ſhall I beſt convey the Ladder thither?

Val. It will be light (my Lord) that you may bear it
Under a Cloak, that is of any length.

Duk. A Cloak as long as thine will ſerve the turn?

Val. I my good Lord.

Duk. Then let me ſee thy Cloak,
I'le get me one of ſuch another length.

Val. Why any Cloak will ſerve the turn (my Lord)

Duk. How ſhall I faſhion me to wear a Cloak?
I pray thee let me feel thy Cloak upon me.
What Letter is this ſame? what's here? to Silvia?
And here an Engine fit for my proceeding,
I'le be ſo bold to break the ſeal for once.

My thoughts do harbour with my Silvia nightly,
And ſlaves they are to me, that ſend them flying.
Oh, could their Maſter come, and go as lightly,
Himſelf would lodge, where (ſenſeleſſe) they are lying.
My Herald Thoughts, in thy pure boſome reſt them,
While I (their King) that thither them importune.
Do curſe the grace that with ſuch grace hath bleſt them,
Becauſe my ſelfe doe want my ſervants fortune.
I curſe my ſelf, for they are ſent by me,
That they ſhould harbour where their Lord would be.

What's here? Silvia? this night I will enfranchiſe thee.
'Tis ſo: and here's the Ladder for the purpoſe.
Why Phaeton (for thou art Merops ſon)
Wilt thou aſpire to guide the heavenly Cat?
And with thy daring folly burn the world?
Wilt thou reach ſtars, becauſe they ſhine on thee?

So base Intruder, over-weening Slave,
Bestow thy fawning smiles on equall mates,
And think my patience, (more then thy desert)
Is priviledge for thy departure hence.
Thank me for this, more then for all the favours
Which (all-toomuch) I have bestowed on thee.
But if thou linger in my Territories
Longer then swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royall Court,
By heaven, my wrath shall far exceed the love
I ever bore my daughter, or thy self.
Be gone, I will not hear thy vain excuse,
But as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence. Exit.

Val. And why not death, rather then living torment?
To die, is to be banisht from my self,
And Silvia is my self: banish'd from her
Is self from self. A deadly banishment:
What light is light, if Silvia be not seen?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unlesse it be to think that she is by,
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no musick in the Nightingale.
Unlesse I look on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to look upon.
She is my essence, and I leave to be;
If I be not by her fair influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alive.
I flie not death, to flie his deadly doom,
Tarry I here, I but attend on death,
But flie I hence, I flie away from life. Enter Pro. and

Pro. Run (boy) run, run, and seek him out. Launs.

Lau. Soa-hough, Soa-hough------

Pro. What seest thou?

Lau. Him we go to find,
There's not an hair on's head, but 'tis a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine?

Va. No.

Pro. Who then? his Spirit?

Va. Neither.

Pro. What then?

Va. Nothing.

Lau. Can nothing speak? Master, shall I strike?

Pro. Whom would'st thou strike?

Lau. Nothing.

Pro. Villain, forbear.

Lau. Why Sir, I'le strike nothing: I pray you.

Pro. Sirrha, I say forbear? friend Valentine, a word.

Va. My Eares are stopt, and cannot hear good news,
So much of bad already hath possest them.

Pro. Then in dumb silence will I bury mine;
For they art harsh, untuneable, and bad.

Va. Is Silvia dead?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Va. No Valentine indeed, for sacred Silvia,
Hath she forsworn me?

Pro. No Valentine.

Va. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworn me.
What is your newes?

Lau. Sir, there is a proclamation that you are vanished.

Pro. That thou art banish'd: oh that's the newes,
From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.

Va. Oh, I have fed upon this woe already.
And now excesse of it will make me surfet.
Doth Silvia know that I am banish'd?

Pro. I, I: and she hath offered to the doom
(Which unreverst stands in effectuall force)
A Sea of melting pearl, which some call teares.
Those at her Fathers churlish feet she tendred,
With them upon her knees, her humble self,
Wringing her hands, whose whiteneſse so became them,
As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held up,
Sad sighs, deep groans, nor silver-shedding teares
Could penetrate her uncompassionate Sire;
But Valentine, if he be tane, must die.
Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,
When she for thy repeal was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of biding there.

Val. No more: unless the next word that thou speak'st
Have some malignant power upon my life:
If so: I pray thee breathe it in mine ear,
As ending Antheme of my endlesse dolour.

Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not help,
And study help for that which thou lament'st,
Time is the Nurse, and breeder of all good;
Here if thou stay, thou canst not see thy love:
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life:
Hope is a lovers staffe, walk hence with that
And manage it, against despairing thoughts:
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence,
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milk-white bosome of thy love.
The time now serves not to expostulate,
Come, I'le convey thee through the City-gate.
And ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concern thy love-affairs:
As thou lov'st Silvia (though not for thy self)
Regard thy danger, and along with me.

Va. I pray thee Launce, and if thou seest my Boy
Bid him make haste, and meet me at thee North-gate.

Pro. Go sirrha, find him out: Come Valentine.

Va. Oh my dear Silvia, hapleſse Valentine. Exeunt.

Launce. I am but a fool, look you, and yet I have the wit to think my Master is a kind of a knave: but that's all one, if he be but one knave: He lives not now that knows me to be in love, yet I am in love, but a Teem of horse shall not pluck that from me: nor who 'tis I love; and yet 'tis a woman; but what woman, I will not tell my self: and yet 'tis a Milkmaid: yet 'tis not a maid: for she hath had Gossips: yet 'tis a maid, for she is her Masters maid, and serves for wages. She hath more qualities then a Water-Spaniell, which is much in a bare Christian. Here is the Cate-log of her Condition. Inprimis, She can fetch and carry: why a horse can doe no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but onely carry, therefore is she better then a Jade. Item. She can milk, look you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Enter Speed.

Speed. How now Signior Launce? what newes with your Masterſhip?

La. With my Masterſhip? why, it is at Sea:

Sp. Well, your old vice still: mistake the word: what newes then in your paper?

La. The black'st newes that ever thou heard'st.

Sp. Why man? how black?

La. Why, as black as Ink.

Sp. Let me read them?

La. Fie on thee Jolt-head, thou canst not read.

Sp. Thou lieſt: I can.

La. I will try thee: tell me this: who begot thee?

Sp.

Sp. Marry, the ſon of my Grand-father.

Sp. Oh illiterate loyterer; it was the ſon of thy Grand-mother: this proves that thou can'ſt not read.

Sp. Come foole, come: try me in thy paper.

La. There: and S. Nicholas be thy ſpeed.

Sp. Imprimis ſhe can milk.

La. I that ſhe can.

Sp. Item, ſhe brews good Ale.

La. And thereof comes the proverb: (bleſſing of your heart, you brew good Ale.)

Sp. Item, ſhe can ſowe.

La. That's as much as to ſay (Can ſhe ſo)

Sp. Item, ſhe can knit.

La. What need a man care for a ſtock with a wench, When ſhe can knit him a ſtock?

Sp. Item, ſhe can waſh and ſcoure.

La. A ſpecial vertue: for then ſhe need not to be waſh'd and ſcowr'd.

Sp. Item ſhe can ſpin.

La. Then may I ſet the world on wheels, when ſhe can ſpin for her living.

Sp. Item, ſhe hath many nameleſs vertues.

La. That's as much as to ſay Baſtard-vertues: that indeed know not their fathers, and therefore have no names.

Sp. Here follows her vices.

La. Cloſe at the heels of her vertues:

Sp. Item, ſhe is not to be faſting in reſpect of her breath.

La. Well, that fault may be mended with a breakfaſt: read on.

Sp. Item, ſhe hath a ſweet mouth.

Sp. That makes amends for her ſowre breath.

Sp. Item, ſhe doth talke in her ſleep.

La. It's no matter for that; ſo ſhe ſleep not in her talke.

Sp. Item, ſhe is ſlow in words.

La. Oh villanie! that ſet down among her vices! To be ſlow in words is a womans onely vertue: I pray the out with't, and place it for her chief vertue.

Sp. Item, ſhe is proud.

La. Out with that too: It was Eves legacie, and cannot be tane from her.

Sp. Item, ſhe hath no teeth.

La. I care not for that neither, becauſe I love cruſts.

Sp. Item, ſhe is curſt.

La. Well: the beſt is, ſhe hath no teeth to bite.

Sp. Item, ſhe will often praiſe her liquor.

La. If her liquor be good; ſhe ſhall: if ſhe will not, I will; for good things ſhould be praiſed.

Sp. Item, ſhe is too liberall.

La. Of her tongue ſhe cannot; for that's writ down ſhe is ſlow of: of her purſe, ſhe ſhall not, for that I'le keep ſhut: Now, of another thing ſhe may, and that cannot I help. Well, proceed.

Sp. Item, ſhe hath more hairs then wit, and more faults then hairs, and more wealth then faults.

La. Stop there: I'le have her: ſhe was mine, and not mine twice, or thrice in that Article: rehearſe that once more.

Sp. Item, ſhe hath more hair then wit.

La. More haire then wit: it may be I'le prove it: The cover of the ſalt, hides the ſalt, and therefore it is more then the ſalt; the haire that covers the wit, is more then the wit: for the greater hides the leſſe: What's next?

Sp. And more faults then hairs.

La. That's monſtrous; oh that that were out.

Sp. And more wealth then faults.

La. Why that word makes the faults gracious: Well, I'le have her: and if it be a match, as nothing is impoſſible.

Sp. What then?

La. Why then, will I tell thee, that thy Maſter ſtaies for thee at the North-gate.

Sp. For me?

La. For thee? I, who art thou? he hath ſtaid for a better man then thee.

Sp. And muſt I go to him?

La. Thou muſt run to him; for thou haſt ſtaid ſo long that going will ſcarce ſerve the turn.

Sp. Why did'ſt not tell me ſooner? 'pox on your love Letters.

La. Now will he be ſwing'd for reading my Letter; An unmannerly ſlave, that will thruſt himſelf into ſecrets: I'le after to rejoyce in the boyes correction. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus.

Du. Sir Thurio, fear not, but that ſhe will love you Now Valentine is baniſh'd from her ſight.

Th. Since his exile ſhe hath diſpis'd me moſt, Forſworn my company,, and rail'd at me, That I am deſperate of obtaining her.

Du. This weak impreſſe of love, is as a figure Trenched in ice, which with an hours heat Diſſolves to water, and doth looſe his forme. A little time will melt her frozen thoughts, And worthleſs Valentine ſhall be forgot. How now Sir Protheus, is your countreyman (According to our Proclamation) gone?

Pro. Gon, my good Lord.

Du. My daughter takes his going heavily?

Pro. A little time (my Lord) will kill that grief.

Du. So I believe: but Thurio thinks not ſo: Protheus; the good conceit I hold of thee, (For thou haſt ſhown ſome ſigne of good deſert) Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer then I prove loyal to your Grace, Let me not live, to look upon your Grace.

Du. Thou know'ſt how willingly, I would effect The match between ſir Thurio and my daughter?

Pro. I do my Lord.

Du. And alſo I do think, thou art not ignorant How ſhe oppoſes her againſt my will?

Pro. She did my Lord, when Valentine was here.

Du. I, and perverſly, ſhe perſeveres ſo: What might we do to make the girl forget The Love of Valentine, and love Sir Thurio?

Pro. The beſt way is to ſlander Valentine, With falſehood, cowardize, and poor deſcent: Three things, that women highly hold in hate.

Du. I, but ſhe'll think, that it is ſpoken in hate.

Pro. I, if his enemy deliver it. Therefore it muſt with circumſtance be ſpoken By one, whome ſhe eſteems as his friend.

Du. Then you muſt undertake to ſlander him.

Pro.

Pro. And that (my Lord) I shall be loath to do.
'Tis an ill office for a Gentleman,
Especially against his very friend.
Du. Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your slander never can endamnage him;
Therefore the office is indifferent:
Being intreated to it by your friend.
Pro. You have prevail'd (my Lord) if I can do it
By ought that I can speak in his dispraise,
She shall not long continue love to him:
But say, this weed her love from Valentine,
It follows not that she will love sir Thurio.
Th. Therefore as you unwinde her love from him;
Least it should ravel, and be good to none,
You must provide to bottome it on me:
Which must be done, by praising me as much
As you in worth dispraise sir Valentine.
Du. And Protheus, we dare trust you in this kinde,
Because we know (on Valentines report)
You are already loves firm votary,
And cannot soone revolt, and change your minde.
Upon this warrant, shall you have access,
Where you, with Silvia may confer at large.
For she is lumpish, heavy, melancholly,
And (for your friends sake) will be glad of you;
Where you may temper her, by your perswasion,
To hate young Valentine, and love my friend.
Pro. As much as I can do, I will effect:
But you sir Thurio, are not sharp enough:
You must lay Lime, to tangle her desires
By wailfull Sonnets, whose composed Rimes
Should be full fraught with serviceable vows.
Du. I, much is the force of heaven-bred Poesie.
Pro. Say that upon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your tears, your sighes, your heart:
Write till your ink be dry; and with your tears
Moist it again: and frame some feeling line,
That may discover such integrity:
For Orpheus Lute was strung with Poets sinews,
Whose golden touch could soften steele and stones;
Make Tygers tame, and huge Leviathans
Forsake unsounded deeps, and dance on Sands.
After your dire-lamenting Elegies,
Visit by night your Ladies chamber-window
With some sweet consort; To their Instruments
Tune a deploring dump: the nights dead silence
Will well become such sweet complaining grievance:
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.
Du. This discipline, shews thou hast been in love.
Th. And thy advice, this night, I'le put in practise:
Therefore sweet Protheus, my direction-giver,
Let us into the City presently
To sort some Gentlemen, well skil'd in Musick.
I have a Sonnet, that will serve the turn
To give the on-set to thy good advice.
Du. About it Gentlemen.
Pro. We'll wait upon your Grace, till after Supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.
Du. Even now about it, I will pardon you, Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speede, and certain Out-laws.
1. Out-l. Fellows, stand fast: I see a passenger.
2. Out. If there be ten, shrink not, but down with'em.
3. Out. Stand sir, and throw us that you have about'ye.
If not: we'll make you sir, and rifle you.
Sp. Sir, we are undone,; these are the Villains
That all the Travellers do fear so much.
Val. My friends.
1. Out. That's not so, sir: we are your enemies.
2. Out. Peace: we'll hear him.
3. Out. I by my beard will we; for he is a proper man.
Val. Then know that I have little to lose;
A man I am, crost with adversitie:
My riches, are these poor habiliments,
Of which, if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I have.
2. Out. Whither travel you?
Val. To Verona.
1. Out. Whence came you?
Val. From Millain.
3. Out. Have you long sojourn'd there? (staid,
Val. Some sixteen moneths, and longer might have
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.
1. Out. What, were you banish'd thence?
Val. I was.
2. Out. For what offence?
Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse;
I kil'd a man, whose death I much repent,
But yet I slew him manfully in fight,
Without false vantage, or base treachery.
1. Out. Why ne're repent it, if it were done so;
But were you banish'd for so small a fault?
Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doom.
2. Out. Have you the tongues?
Val. My youthfull travel, therein made me happy,
Or else often had been miserable.
3. Out. By the bare scalpe of Robin hoods fat Fryer,
This fellow were a King, for our wild faction.
1. Out. We'll have him: Sirs, a word.
Sp. Master, be one of them:
It's an honourable kind of thievery.
Val. Peace villain.
2. Out. Tell us this: have you any things to take to?
Val. Nothing but my fortune.
3. Out. Know then, that some of us are Gentlemen,
Such as the furie of ungovern'd youth
Thrust from the company of awfull men.
My self was from Verona banished,
For practising to steal away a Lady,
An heir, and Neice allide unto the Duke.
2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a gentleman,
Who, in my moode, I stab'd unto the heart.
1. Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as these.
But to the purpose: for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawless lives;
And partly seeing you are beautifi'de
With goodly shape; and by your own report,
A Linguist, and a man of such perfection,
As we do in our quality much want.
2. Out. Indeed because you are a banish'd man,
There, above the rest, we parley to you:
Are you content to be our general?
To make a vertue of necessitie,
And live as we do in the wilderness?
3. Out. What say'st thou? wilt thou be of our consort?
Say I, and be the captain of us all:
We'll do thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,
Love thee as our Commander, and our King.

1. Out. But if thou ſcorne our curteſie, thou dyeſt.
2. Out. Thou ſhalt not live, to brag what we have of-
Val. I take your offer, and will live with you, fer'd.
Provided that you do no outrages
On ſilly women, or poor paſſengers.
3. Out. No, we deteſt ſuch vile baſe practiſes.
Come, go with us, we'll bring thee to our Crewes,
And ſhew thee all the Treaſure we have got;
Which, with our ſelves, all reſt at thy diſpoſe. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Protheus, Thurio, Julia, Hoſt, Muſitian, Silvia.

Pro. Already have I been falſe to Valentine,
And now I muſt be as unjuſt to Thurio,
Under the colour of commending him,
I have acceſs my own love to prefer.
But Silvia is too fair, too true, too holy,
To be corrupted with my worthleſs gifts;
When I proteſt true loyaltie to her,
She twits me with my falſehood to my friend;
When to her beauty I commend my vowes,
She bids me think how I have been forſworn
In breaking faith with Julia, whom I lov'd;
And notwithſtanding all her ſuddain quips,
The leaſt whereof would quell a lovers hope:
Yet (Spaniel-like) the more ſhe ſpurns my love,
The more it grows, fawneth on her ſtill;
But here comes Thurio; now muſt we to her window,
And give ſome evening Muſick to her ear.
Th. How now, ſir Protheus, are you crept before us?
Pro. I gentle Thurio, for you know that love
Will creep in ſervice, where it cannot go.
Thu. I, but I hope, Sir, that you love not here.
Pro. Sir, but I do: or elſe I would be hence.
Thu. Whom, Silvia?
Pro. I, Silvia, for your ſake.
Thu. I thank you for your own: Now Gentlemen
Let's turn; and to it luſtily a while.
Ho. Now, my young gueſt; me thinks you'r allycholly:
I pray you what is it?
Ju. Marry (mine Hoſt) becauſe I cannot be merry.
Ho. Come, we'l have you merry: I'le bring you where you ſhall hear Muſick; and ſee the Gentleman that you ask'd for.
Ju. But I ſhall hear him ſpeak.
Ho. I that you ſhall.
Ju. That will be Muſick.
Ho. Hark, hark.
Ju. Is he among theſe?
Ho. I: but peace, let's hear'em.

Song. Who is Silvia? what is ſhe?
That all our Swains commend her?
Holy, fair, and wiſe is ſhe,
The heaven ſuch grace did lend her,
that ſhe might admired be.
Is ſhe kinde as ſhe is fair?
For beauty lives with kindneſs,
Love doth to her eyes repair,
To help him of his blindneſs:
And being help'd, inhabits there.
Then to Silvia, let us ſing,
That Silvia is excelling;
She excels each mortal thing
Upon the dull earth dwelling.
To her let us Garlands bring.

Ho. How now? are you ſadder then you were before;
How do you, man? the Muſick likes you not.
Ju. You miſtake: the Muſitian likes me not.
Ho. Why, my pretty youth?
Ju. He plaies falſe (father.)
Ho. How, out of tune on the ſtrings?
Iu. Not ſo: but yet
So falſe that he grieves my very heart-ſtrings.
Ho. You have a quick ear. (heart.
Iu. I, I would I were deaf: it makes me have a ſlow
Ho. I perceive you delight not in Muſick.
Iu. Not a whit, when it jars ſo.
Ho. Hark what fine change is in the Muſick.
Iu. I: that change is the ſpight.
Ho. You would have them alwaies play but one thing.
Iu. I would alwaies have one play but one thing.
But Hoſt, doth this Sir Protheus, that we talke on,
Often reſort unto this Gentlewoman?
Ho. I tell you what Launce his man told me,
He lov'd her out of all nick.
Iu. Where is Launce?
Ho. Gone to ſeek his dog; which to morrow, by his Maſters command, he muſt carry for a preſent to his Lady.
Iu. Peace, ſtand aſide, the company parts.
Pro. Sir Thurio, fear not I will ſo plead,
That you ſhall ſay, my cunning drift excels.
Th. Where meet we?
Pro. At Saint Gregories well.
Th. Farewell.
Pro. Madam: good ev'n to your Ladiſhip.
Sil. I thank you for your Muſick (Gentlemen)
Who is that that ſpake?
Pro. One (Lady) if you knew his pure hearts truth,
You would quickly learn to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Protheus.
Pro. Sir Protheus (gentle Lady) and your Servant.
Sil. What's your will?
Pro. That I may compaſs yours.
Sil. You have your wiſh: my will is ever this,
That preſently you hie you home to bed:
Thou ſubtile, perjur'd, falſe, diſloyal man:
Think'ſt thou I am ſo ſhallow, ſo conceitleſs,
To be ſeduced by thy flattery.
That has't deceiv'd ſo many with thy vows?
Return, return, and make thy love amends:
For me (by this pale queen of night I ſwear)
I am ſo far from granting thy requeſt,
That I deſpiſe thee, for thy wrongfull ſuit;
And by and by intend to chide my ſelf,
Even for this time I ſpend in talking to thee.
Pro. I grant (ſweet love) that I did love a Lady,
But ſhe is dead.
Iu. 'Twere falſe, if I ſhould ſpeak it;
For I am ſure ſhe is not buried.
Sil. Say that ſhe be: yet Valentine thy friend
Survives; to whom (thy ſelf art witneſs)
I am betroth'd; and art thou not aſham'd
To wrong him, with thy importunacy?

Pro.

Pro. I likewiſe hear that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And ſo ſuppoſe am I; for in his grave
Aſſure thy ſelf, my love is buried.
Pro. Sweet Lady, let me rake it from the earth.
Sil. Go to thy Ladies grave and call her thence,
Or at the leaſt,, in hers, ſepulchre thine.
Iul. He heard not that.
Pro. Madam: if your heart be ſo obdurate:
Vouchſafe me yet your Picture for my love,
The Picture that is hanging in your chamber:
To that I'le ſpeak, to that I'le ſigh and weep:
For ſince the ſubſtance of your perfect ſelf
Is elſe devoted, I am but a ſhadow;
And to your ſhadow, will I make true love.
Iul. If 'twere a ſubſtance you would ſure deceive it,
And make it but a ſhadow, as I am.
Sil. I am very loath to be your Idol Sir;
But, ſince your falſehood ſhall become you well
To worſhip ſhadows, and adore falſe ſhapes,
Send to me in the morning, and I'le ſend it:
And ſo, good reſt.
Pro. As wretches have ore-night
That wait for execution in the morne. Exeunt.
Iul. Hoſt, will you go?
Ho. By my hallidome, I was faſt aſleep.
Iul. Pray you where lies Sir Protheus?
Ho. Marry at my houſe:
Truſt me, I think 'tis almoſt day.
Iul. Not ſo: but it hath been the longeſt night
That ere I watch'd, and the moſt heavieſt. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Eglamore, Silvia.

Eg. This is the hour that Madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her minde:
That's ſome great matter ſhe'ld employ me in.
Madam, Madam.
Sil. Who calls?
Eg. Your ſervant. and your friend;
One that attends your Ladiſhips command.
Sil. Sir Eglamore, a thouſand times good morrow.
Eg. As many (worthy Lady) to your ſelf:
According to your Ladiſhips impoſe,
I am thus early come, to know what ſervice.
It is your pleaſure to command me in.
Sil. Oh Eglamore, thou art a Gentleman:
Think not I flatter (for I ſwear I do not)
Valiant, wiſe, remorſe-full, well accompliſh'd.
Thou art not ignorant what dear good will
I bear unto the baniſh'd Valentine:
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vain Thurio (whom my very ſoul abhor'd)
Thy ſelf haſt lov'd, and I have heard thee ſay
No grief did come ſo near thy heart,
As when thy Lady, and thy true-love di'de,
Upon whoſe Grave thou vow'dſt pure chaſtitie;
Sir Eglamore: I would to Valentine
To Mantua, where I hear, he makes aboad;
And for the wayes are dangerous to paſs,
I do deſire thy worthy company,
Upon whoſe faith and honour, I repoſe.
Urge not my fathers anger (Eglamore)
But think upon my grief (a Ladies grief)
And on the juſtice of my flying hence,
To keep me from a moſt unholy match,
Which heaven and fortune ſtill rewards with plagues.
I do deſire thee, even from a heart
As full of ſorrows, as the Sea of ſands,
To bear me company and go with me:
If not, to hide what I have ſaid to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.
Eg. Madam, I pitty much your grievances,
Which, ſince I know they vertuouſly are plac'd,
I give conſent to go along with you,
Wreaking as little what betideth me,
As much, I wiſh all good befortune you.
When will you go?
Sil. This evening coming.
Eg. Where ſhall I meet you?
Sil. At Frier Patricks Cell,
Where I intend holy confeſſion.
Eg. I will not fail your Ladiſhip:
Good morrow (gentle Lady.)
Sil. Good morrow, kind Sir Eglamore. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Launce, Protheus, Iulia, Silvia.

Lau. When a mans ſervant ſhall play the Cur with him (look you) it goes hard: one that I brought up of a puppy: one that I ſav'd from drowning, when three or four of his blinde brothers and ſiſters went to it: I have taught him (even as one would ſay preciſely, thus I would teach a dog) I was ſent to deliver him, as a preſent to Miſtris Silvia, from my Maſter; and I came no ſooner into the dyning-chamber, but he ſteps me to her Trencher, and ſteals her Capons-leg: O, 'tis a foule thing, when a Cur cannot keep himſelf in all companies: I would have (as one ſhould ſay) one that takes upon him to be a dog indeed, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit then he, take a fault upon me that he did, I think verily he had been hang'd for't: ſure as I live he had ſuffer'd for't: you ſhall judge: He thruſts me himſelf into the company of three or four gentleman-like-dogs, under the Dukes table: he had not been there (bleſſe the marke) a piſſing while, but all the chamber ſmelt him: out with the dog (ſaies one) what cur is that (ſaies another) whip him out (ſaies the third) hang him up (ſaies the Duke.) I having been acquainted with the ſmell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogges: friend (quoth I) you mean to whip the dog: I marry do I (quoth he) you do him the more wrong (quoth I) 'twas I did the thing you wot of: he makes me no more adoe, but whips me out of the chamber: how many Maſters would do this for his ſervant? nay, I'le be ſworne I have ſat in the ſtocks for puddings he hath ſtoln, otherwiſe he had been executed: I have ſtood on the Pillorie for Geeſe he hath kil'd, otherwiſe he had ſuffered for't: thou think'ſt not of this now: nay, I remember the trick you ſerv'd me, when I took my leave of Madam Silvia: did not not I bid the ſtill marke me, and do as I do; when did'ſt thou ſee me heave up my leg, and make water againſt a Gentlewomans farthingale; did'ſt thou ever ſee me doe ſuch a trick?

Pro. Sebaſtian is thy name: I like thee well,
And will imploy thee in ſome ſervice preſently.

Ju. In what you pleaſe, I'le do Sir what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt.
How now you whor-ſon pezant,
Where have you been theſe two dayes loytering?

La. Marry Sir, I carried Miſtris Silvia the dog you bad me.

Pro. And what ſayes ſhe to my little Jewel?

La. Marry ſhe ſayes your dog was a cur, and tells you curriſh thanks is good enough for ſuch a preſent.

Pro. But ſhe receiv'd my dog?

La. No indeed ſhe did not:
Here have I brought him back again.

Pro. What, did'ſt thou offer her this from me?

La. I Sir, the other Squirrill was ſtoln from me
By the hangmans boy in the market place,
And then I offer'd her mine own, who is a dog
As big as ten of yours, and therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Go, get the hence, and find my dog again,
Or ne're return again into my ſight.
Away, I ſay: ſtayeſt thou to vex me here;
A ſlave, that ſtill an end, turn's me to ſhame. Exit.
Sebaſtian, I have entertained thee,
Partly that I have need of ſuch a youth,
That can with ſome diſcretion do my buſineſs:
For 'tis no truſting to yond fooliſh Lowt:
But chiefly, for thy face, and thy behaviour,
Which (if my Augury deceive me not)
Witneſs good bringing up, fortune, and truth:
Therefore know thou, for this I entertain thee.
Go preſently and take this Ring with thee,
Deliver it to Madam Silvia;
She lov'd me well, deliver'd it to me.

Jul. It ſeems you lov'd not her, to leave her token:
She is dead belike?

Pro. Not ſo: I think ſhe lives.

Jul. Alas.

Pro. Why do'ſt thou cry alas?

Jul. I cannot chooſe but pitty her.

Pro. Wherefore ſhould'ſt thou pitty her?

Jul. Becauſe, methinks that ſhe lov'd you as well
As you do love your Lady Silvia:
She dreams on him, that has forgot her love;
You doat on her, that cares not for your love.
'Tis pitty Love ſhould be ſo contrary:
And thinking on it, makes me cry alas.

Pro. Well: give her that Ring, and therewithall
This Letter: that's her chamber: Tell my Lady,
I claim the promiſe for her heavenly Picture:
Your Meſſage done, hye home unto my chamber,
Where thou ſhalt find me ſad, and ſolitarie. Exit.

Jul. How many women would do ſuch a meſſage?
Alas poor Protheus, thou haſt entertain'd
A Fox, to be the Shepheard of thy Lambs;
Alas, poor fool, why do I pitty him
That with his very heart deſpiſeth me?
Becauſe he loves her, he deſpiſeth me,
Becauſe I love him, I muſt pitty him.
This Ring I gave him, when he parted from me,
To bind him to remember my good will:
And now I am (unhappy Meſſenger)
To plead for that, which I would not obtain;
To carry that, which I would have refus'd;
To praiſe his faith which I would have diſprais'd.
I am my Maſters true confirmed love,
But cannot be true ſervant to my Maſter,
Unleſs I prove falſe traitor to my ſelf.
Yet will I woo for him, but yet ſo coldly, Enter.
As (heaven it knows) I would not have him ſpeed. Silvia.
Gentlewoman, good day: I pray you be my mean
To bring me where to ſpeak with Madam Silvia.

Sil. What would you with her, if that I be ſhe?

Jul. If you be ſhe, I do intreat your patience
To hear me ſpeak the meſſage I am ſent on.

Sil. From whom?

Jul. From my Maſter, Sir Protheus, Madam.

Sil. Oh: he ſends you for a Picture?

Ju. I, Madam.

Sil. Urſula, bring my Picture there;
Go, give your Maſter this: tell him from me,
One Julia, that his changing thoughts forgot,
Would better fit his Chamber, then this Shadow.

Ju. Madam, pleaſe you peruſe this Letter;
Pardon me (Madam) I have unadvis'd
Deliver'd you a paper that I ſhould not;
This is the Letter to your Ladiſhip.

Sil. I pray thee let me look on that again.

Iu. It may not be: good Madam pardon me.

Sil. There, hold:
I will not look upon your Maſters lines:
I know they are ſtuft with proteſtations;
And full of new-found oaths, which he will break
As eaſie as I do tear his paper.

Iu. Madam, he ſends your Ladiſhip this Ring.

Si. The more ſhame for him, that he ſends it me;
For I have heard him ſay a thouſand times,
His Iulia gave it him, at his departure:
Though his falſe finger have prophan'd the Ring,
Mine ſhall not do his Iulia ſo much wrong.

Iu. She thanks you.

Si. What ſai'ſt thou?

Iu. I thank you Madam, that you tender her:
Poor Gentlewoman, my Maſter wrongs her much.

Si. Do'ſt thou know her?

Iu. Almoſt as well as I do know my ſelf.
To think upon her woes, I do proteſt
That I have wept a hundred ſeveral times.

Si. Belike ſhe thinks that Protheus hath forſook her?

Iu. I think ſhe doth: and that's her cauſe of ſorrow.

Si. Is ſhe not paſſing fair?

Iu. She hath been fairer (Madam) then ſhe is,
When ſhe did think my Maſter lov'd her well;
She, in my judgement, was as fair as you.
But ſince ſhe did neglect her looking glaſs,
And threw her Sun-expelling Maſque away,
The air hath ſtarv'd the roſes in her cheeks;
And pinch'd the lilly-tincture of her face
That now ſhe is become as black as I.

Sil. How tall was ſhe?

Iu. About my ſtature: for at Pentecoſt,
When all our Pageants of delight were plaid,
Our youth got me to play the womans part,
And I was trim'd in Madam Iulia's gown,
Which ſerved me as fit, by all mens judgements,
As if the garment had been made for me:
Therefore I know ſhe is about my height;
And at that time I made her weep agood,

For

For I did play a lamentable part.
(Madam) 'twas Ariadne, passioning
For Theseus perjury, and unjust flight;
which I so lively acted with my tears:
That my poor Mistris moved there withall,
Wept bitterly: and would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow.
Sil. She is beholding to thee (gentle youth)
Alas, (poor Lady) desolate, and left;
I weep my self to think upon thy words:
Here youth: there is a purse; I give thee this
For thy sweet Mistris sake, because thou lov'st her.
Farewell. Exit.
Jul. And she shall thank you for't, if ere you know
A vertuous gentlewoman, milde, and beautifull. (her.
I hope my Masters suit will be but cold,
Since she respects my Mistris love so much.
Alas, how love can trifle with it self:
Here is her Picture: let me see, I think
If I had such a Tyre, this face of mine
Were full as lovely as is this of hers;
And yet the Painter flatter'd her a little,
Unless I flatter with my self too much.
Her hair is Aburne, mine is perfect Yellow;
If that be all the difference in his love,
I'le get me such a colour'd Perriwig:
Her eyes are grey as grass, and so are mine:
I, but her fore-head's low, and mine's as high:
What should it be that he respects in her,
But I can make respective in my self,
If this fond love, were not a blinded god?
Come shadow, come, and take this shadow up,
For 'tis thy rivall: O thou senseless forme,
Thou shalt be worshipp'd, kiss'd, lov'd, and ador'd;
And were there sense in this Idolatry,
My substance should be statue in thy stead.
I'le use thee kindly, for thy mistris sake
That us'd me so, : or else by Jove, I vow.
I should have scratch'd out your unseeing eyds;
To make my Master out of love with thee. Exit.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Eglamore, Silvia.

Egl. The Sun begins to guild the Western skie,
And now it is about the very hour
That Silvia, at Fryer Patricks Cell should meet me,
She will not fail; for Lovers break not hours,
Unless it be to come before their time,
So much they spur their expedition.
See where she comes: Lady a happy evening.
Sil. Amen, Amen: go on (good Eglamore)
Out at the Postern by the Abbey wall;
I fear I am attended by some Spies.
Egl. Fear not: the Forrest is not three leagues off,
If we recover that, we are sure enough. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Thurio, Protheus, Julia, Duke.

Th. Sir Protheus, what sayes Silvia to my suit?
Pro. Oh Sir, I find her milder then she was,
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.
Thu. What? that my leg is too long?
Pro. No, that itis too little. (der.
Thu. I'le wear a Boot, to make it somewhat roun
Pro. But love will not be spurr'd to what it loath's.
Thu. What sayes she to my face?
Pro. She sayes it is a fair one.
Thu. Nay then the wonton lies: my face is black.
Pro. But Pearl's are fair; and the old saying is,
Black men are Pearl's, in beauteous Ladies eyes.
Thu. 'Tis true, such Pearl's as put out Ladies eyes.
For I had rather wink, then look on them.
Thu. How likes she my discourse?
Pro. Ill, when they talke of war.
But well, when I discourse of love and peace.
Jul. But better indeed, when you hold your peace.
Thu. What sayes she to my valour?
Pro. Oh Sir, she makes no doubt of that.
Jul. She needs not, when she knowes it cowardize.
Thu. What sayes she to my birth?
Pro. That you are well deriv'd.
Jul. True: from a Gentleman to a fool.
Thu. Considers she my possessions?
Pro. Oh I: and pitties them.
Thu. Wherefore?
Ju. That such an Ass should owe them.
Pro. That they are out by Lease.
Ju. Here comes the Duke.
Du. How now sir Protheus; how now Thurio?
Which of you say saw Sir Eglamore of late?
Thu. Not I.
Pro. Not I.
Du. Saw you my daughter?
Pro. Neither.
Du. Why then
She's fled unto the pezant, Valentine;
And Eglamore is in her companie.
'Tis true: for Frier Laurence met them both
As he, in penance wander'd through the Forrest:
Him he knew well: and guest that it was she,
But being mask'd, he was not sure of it.
Besides she did intend Confession,
At Patricks Cell this even, and there she was not.
These likelihoods confirm her flight from hence;
Therefore I pray you stand not to discourse,
But mount you presently; and meet with me
Upon the rising of the Mountain foot
That leads toward Mantua, whither they are fled:
Dispatch (sweet Gentlemen) and follow me.
Thu. Why this it is, to be a peevish Girl,
That flies her fortune where it follows her:
I'le after; more to be reveng'd on Eglamore,
Then for the love of reck-less Silvia.
Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvia's love
Then hate of Eglamore that goes with her.
Ju. And I will follow, more to cross that love
Then hate for Silvia, that is gone for love. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Silvia, Out-lawes.

1. Out. Come, come be patient.

We

We must bring you to our Captain.
Sil. A thousand more mischances then this one
Have learn'd me how to brook this patiently.
2 Out. Come, bring her away.
1 Out. Where is the Gentleman that was with her.
3 Out. Being nimble footed, he hath out-run us.
But Moyses and Valerius follow him:
Go thou thither to the West end of the Wood,
There is our Captain: wee'l follow him that's fled,
The thicket is beset, he cannot scape.
1 Out. Come, I must bring you to our Captains, Cave.
Fear not: he bears an honourable mind,
And will not use a woman lawlesly.
Sil. O Valentine: this I endure for thee.
Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Protheus, Silvia, Julia, Duke. Thurio, Out-lawes.

Val. How use doth breed a habit in a man?
This shadowy Desart, unfrequented woods,
I better brook then flourishing peopled townes:
Here can I sit alone, unseen of any,
And to the Nightingales complaining Notes;
Tune my distresses, and record my woes.
O thou that dost inhabit in my brest,
Leave not the Mansion so long Tenantlesse,
Lest growing ruinous, the building fall,
And leave no memory of what it was,
Repair me with thy presence, Silvia:
Thou Gentle Nymph, cherish thy forlorn Swain.
What hallowing, and what stirre is this to day?
These are my mates, that make their wills their Law,
Have some unhappy passenger in chase;
They love me well, yet I have much to doe
To keep them from uncivil outrages.
Withdraw thee Valentine: who's this comes here?
Pro. Madam, this service I have done for you,
(Though you respect not ought your servant doth)
To hazard life, and rescue you from him,
That would have forc'd your honour and your love,
Vouchsafe me for my meed, but one fair look:
(A smaller boon than this I cannot beg,
And lesse than this I am sure you cannot give,)
Val. How like a dream is this? I see and hear:
Love, lend me patience to forbear a while.
Sil. O miserable unhappy that I am.
Pro. Unhappy were you (Madam) ere I came:
But by my comming I have made you happy.
Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most unhappy.
Iu. And me, when he approacheth to your presence.
Sil. Had I been seized by a hungry Lion,
I would have been a breakfast to the Beast,
Rather than have false Protheus rescue me:
O heaven be judge how I love Valentine,
Whose life's as tender to me as my soul,
And full as much (for more there cannot be)
I doe detest false perjur'd Protheus:
Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.
Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death,
Would I not undergo for one calme look:
Oh, 'tis the curse in Love, and still approv'd,
When women cannot love, where they're belov'd.
Sil. When Protheus cannot love, where he's belov'd:
Read over Julia's heart, (thy first best Love)
For whose dear sake thou didst then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oathes; and all those oathes,
Descended into perjury to deceive me,
Thou hast no faith left now, unlesse thou'dst two,
And that's far worse than none: better have none
Then plurall faith, which is too much by one:
Thou counterfeit to thy true friend.
Pro. In love,
Who respects friend?
Sil. All men but Protheus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of moving words
Can no way change you to a milder form;
I'le move you like a Soldier, at armes end,
And love you 'gainst the nature of love: force ye.
Sil. Oh heaven.
Pro. I'le force thee yield to my desire.
Val. Ruffian let go that rude uncivil touch,
Thou friend of an ill fashion.
Pro. Valentine!
Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or love,
For such is a friend now: Though treacherous man,
Thou hast beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine eye
Could have perswaded me: now I dare not say
I have one friend alive; thou would'st disprove me:
Who should be trusted now, when ones right hand
Is perjured to the bosome? Protheus,
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake:
The private wound is deepest: oh time, most accurst:
'Mongst all foes, that a friend should be the worst?
Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me:
Forgive me Valentine: if hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient Ransome for offence,
I tender't here: I doe as truly suffer,
As e're I did commit.
Val. Then am I paid:
And once again, I doe receive thee honest;
Who by repentance is not satisfied,
Is nor of heaven, nor earth; for these are pleas'd:
By Penitence th'Eternal's wrath's appeas'd:
And that my love may appear plain and free,
All that was mine in Silvia, I give thee.
Iu. Oh me unhappy.
Pro. Look to the Boy.
Val. Why, Boy?
Why Wag: how now? what's the matter? look up: speak.
Iu. O good Sir, my Master charg'd me to deliver a Ring to Madam Silvia: which (out of my neglect) was never done.
Pro. Where is that Ring, Boy?
Iu. Here 'tis: this is it.
Pro. How? let me see.
Why this is the Ring I gave to Julia.
Iu. Oh, cry you mercy sir, I have mistook:
This is the Ring you sent to Silvia.
Pro. But how cam'st thou by this Ring? at my depart
I gave this unto Julia.
Iu. And Julia her self did give it me.
And Julia her self hath brought it hither.
Pro. How? Julia?
Iu. Behold her that gave aim to all thy oathes,
And entertaind'em deeply in her heart.
How oft hast thou with perjury cleft the root?
Oh Protheus, let this habit make thee blush.

Be thou asham'd that I have took upon me,
Such an immodest rayment: if shame live
In a disguise of love?
It is the lesser blot modesty finds,
Women to change their shapes, than men their minds.
Pro. Than men their minds? 'tis true, oh heaven, were
Man but constant, he were perfect; that one errour
Fills him with faults: makes him run through all th'sins;
Inconstancy falls off ere it begins:
What is in Silvia's face, but I may spie
More fresh in Julia's with a constant eye?
Val. Come, come: a hand from either:
Let me be blest to make this happy close:
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.
Pro. Bear witnesse (heaven) I have my wish for ever.
Iul. And I mine.
Out-l. A prize, a prize, a prize.
Val. Forbear, forbear I say: it is my Lord the Duke.
Your grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd,
Banished Valentine.
Duke. Sir Valentine?
Thu. Yonder is Silvia: and Silvia's mine.
Val. Thurio give back; or else imbrace thy death:
Come not within the measure of my wrath:
Doe not name Silvia thine: if once again,
Verona shall not hold thee: here she stands,
Take but possession of her, with a Touch:
I dare thee, but to breathe upon my Love.
Thur. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I:
I hold him but a fool that will endanger
His body, for a Girl that loves him not:
I claim her not, and therefore she is thine.
Duk. The more degenerate and base art thou,
To make such means for her as thou hast done,
And leave her on such slight conditions.
Now, by the honour of my Ancestry,
I doe applaud thy spirit Valentine,
And think thee worthy of an Empresse love:
Know then, I here forget all former griefs,
Cancell all grudge, repeal the home again,
Plead a new state in thy arrival'd merit,
To which I thus subscribe: Sir Valentine,
Thou art a Gentleman and well deriv'd,
Take thou thy Silvia, for thou hast deserv'd her.
Val. I thank your grace, the gift hath made me hap-
I now beseech you (for your Daughters sake) (py:
To grant one Boon that I shall aske of you.
Duke. I grant it for thine own what ere it be.
Val. These banish'd men, that I have kept withall,
Are men endu'd with worthy qualities:
Forgive them what they have committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their exile:
They are reform'd, civil, full of good,
And fit for great imployment (worthy Lord.)
Duk. Thou hast prevail'd, I pardon them and thee:
Dispose of them, as thou know'st their deserts.
Come, let us go, we will include all jarrs,
With Triumphs, Mirth, and all solemnity.
Val. And as we walk along, I dare be bold
With our discourse, to make your grace to smile.
What think you of this Page (my Lord?)
Duk. I think the Boy hath grace in him, he blushes.
Val. I warrant you (my Lord) more grace then Boy.
Duk. What mean you by that saying?
Val. Please you, I'le tell you as we passe along,
That you will wonder what hath fortuned:
Come Protheus, 'tis your penance but to hear
The story of your Loves discovered.
That done, our day of marriage shall be yours;
One feast, one house, one mutuall happinesse. Exeunt.

THE
Merry VVives of WINDSOR.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Iustice Shallow, Slender, Sir Hugh Evans, Master Page, Falstaffe, Bardolph, Nym, Pistoll, Anne Page, Mistresse Ford, Mistresse Page, Simple.

Shallow.

Sir Hugh, perswade me not: I will make a Star-Chamber matter of it, if he were twenty Sir John Falstaffes, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow, Esquire. (Coram.

Slen. In the County of Gloucester, Justice of Peace, and Shal. I (Cousin Slender) and Cust-alorum.

Slen. I, and Rato-lorum too; and a Gentleman born (Master Parson) who writes himself Armigero, in any Bill, Warrant, Quittance, or Obligation, Armigero.

Shal. I that I do, and have done any time these three hundred yeares.

Slen. All his Successors (gone before him) have don't: and all his Ancestors (that come after him) may: they may give the dozen white Luces in their Coat.

Shal. It is an old Coat.

Evans. The dozen white Lowses doe become an old Coat well: it agrees well passant: it is a familiar beast to man, and signifies Love.

Shal. The Luce is the fresh-fish, the salt-fish, is an old Coat.

Slen. I may quarter (Coz.)

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Evans. It is marrying indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Evans. Yes per-lady: if he has a quarter of your Coat, there is but three skirts for your self, in my simple conjectures: but that is all one: if Sir John Falstaffe have committed disparagements unto you, I am of the Church and will be glad to doe my benevolence, to make atonements and compremises between you.

Shal. The Council shall hear it, it is a Riot.

Evan. It is not meet the Council hear of a Riot: there is no fear of Got in a Riot: The Council (look you) shall desire to hear the fear of Got, and not to hear a Riot: take you viza-ments in that.

Shal. Ha; o' my life, if I were young again, the sword should end it.

Evans. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it: and there is also another device in my prain, which peradventure prings good discretions with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master Thomas Page, which is pretty virginity.

Slen. Mistresse Anne Page? she has brown hair, and speaks like a woman.

Evans. It is that ferry person for all the orld, as just as you will desire, and seven hundred pounds of monies, and gold, & silver, is her Grand-sire upon his deaths-bed, (Got deliver to a joyful Resurrections) give, when she is able to overtake seventeen years old. It were a good motion, if we leave our pribbles and prabbles, and desire a marriage between Master Abraham, and Mistresse Anne Page.

Slen. Did her Grand-sire leave her seven hundred pound?

Evans. I, and her Father is make her a petter penny.

Slen. I know the young Gentlewoman, she has good gifts.

Evans. Seven hundred pounds, and possibility is goot gifts.

Shal. Well let us see honest Mr. Page: is Falstaffe there?

Evans. Shall I tell you a lie? I doe despise a liar, as I doe despise one that is false, or as I despise one that is not true: the Knight Sir John is there, and I beseech you be ruled by your well-willers: I will peat the door for Master Page. What hoa? Got blesse your house here.

Mr. Page. Who's there?

Evans. Here is got's plessing and your friend, and Justice Shallow, and here's young Master Slender: that peradventures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Mr. Page. I am glad to see your Worships well: I thank you for my Venison, Master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you: much good doe it your good heart: I wish'd your Venison better, it was ill kill'd: how doth good Mistresse Page? and I thank you alwayes with my heart, la: with my heart.

Mr. Page. Sir, I thank you.

Shal. Sir, I thank you: by yea and no I doe.

M. Page. I am glad to see you good Master Slender.

Slen. How do's your fallow Greyhound, Sir, I heard say he was out-run on Cotsale.

M. Pa: It could not be judg'd sir.

Slen. You'll not confesse, you'll not confesse.

Shal. That he will not, 'tis your fault, 'tis your fault: 'tis a good dog.

M. Page. A Cur sir.

Shal. Sir, he's a good Dog, and a fair Dog, can there be more said? he is good, and fair. Is Sir John Falstaffe here?

M. Page. Sir, he is within; and I would I could doe a good office between you.

Evan. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speak,

Shal. He hath wrong'd me (Master Page.)

M. Page. Sir, he doth in some sort confesse it.

Shal. If it be confeſſed, it is not redreſſed ; is not that ſo (M. Page?) he hath wrong'd me, indeed he hath, at a word he hath : believe me, Robert Shallow Eſquire, ſaith he is wrong'd.

Ma. Pa. Here comes Sir John.

Fal. Now, Maſter Shallow, you'll complain of me to the King ?

Shal. Knight, you have beaten my men, kill'd my Deer, and broke open my Lodge.

Fal. But not kiſs'd your Keepers Daughter ?

Shal. Tut a pin : this ſhall be anſwer'd.

Fal. I will anſwer it ſtraight, I have done all this : That is now anſwer'd

Shal. The Council ſhall know this :

Fal. 'Twere better for you if it were known in counſell : you'il be laugh'd at.

Evans. Pauca verba ; (Sir John) good worts.

Fal. Good worts ? good Cabbadge ; Slender, I broke your head : what matter have you againſt me ?

Slen. Marry Sir, I have matter in my head againſt you, and againſt your Cony-catching Raſcals, Bardolph, Nym, and Piſtoll.

Bar. You Banbury Cheeſe.

Slen. I, it is no matter.

Piſt. How now, Mephoſtophilus ?

Slen. I, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I ſay, pauca, pauca : Slice, that's my humor.

Slen. Where's Simple my man ? can you tell, Couſin?

Evans. Peace I pray you : now let us underſtand ; there is three Umpires in this matter, as I underſtand ; that is, Maſter Page (fidelicet Maſter Page) and there is my ſelf, (fidelicet my ſelf) and the three party is (laſtly, and finally) mine Hoſt of the Gater.

M. Pa. We three to hear it, and end it between them.

Evan. Ferry goo't, I will make a prief of it in my Note-book, and we will afterwards orke upon the cauſe, with as great diſcreetly as we can.

Fal. Piſtoll.

Piſt. He heares with eares.

Evan. The Tevil and his Tam, what phraſe is this he heares with ear ? why it is affectations.

Fal. Piſtoll, did you pick M. Slenders purſe ?

Slen. I, by theſe gloves did he, or I would I might never come in mine own great chamber again elſe, of ſeven groats in Mill-ſixpences, and two Edward Shovelboards, that coſt me two ſhilling and two pence a piece, of Yead Miller : by theſe gloves.

Fal. Is this true Piſtoll ?

Evan. No, it is falſe, if it is a pick-purſe.

Piſt. Ha, thou Mountain Forreigner : Sir John, and Maſter mine, I combate challenge of this Latine Bilboe : word of denyall in thy labras here ; word of deniall, froth, and ſcum thou lyeſt.

Slen. By theſe gloves, then 'twas he.

Nym. Be avis'd ſir, and paſſe good humours : I will ſay marry trap with you, if you run the nut-hooks humour on me, that is the very note of it.

Slen. By this Hat, then he in the red face had it : for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunk, yet I am not altogether an Aſſe.

Fal. What ſay you Scarlet and Iohn ?

Bar. Why ſir (for my part) I ſay the Gentleman had drunk himſelf out of his five ſentences.

Evans. It is his five ſences : fie, what the ignorance is.

Bar. And being fap, ſir, was (as they ſay) caſheer'd : and ſo concluſions paſt the Car-eires.

Slen. I, you ſpake in Latine then too : but 'tis no matter : I'le ne're be drunk whil'ſt I live again, but in honeſt, civil godly company for this trick : If I be drunk, I'le be drunk with thoſe that have the fear of God, and not with drunken knaves.

Evan. So got-udge me, that is a virtuous mind.

Fal. You hear all theſe matters deny'd, Gentlemen you hear it.

M. Page. Nay daughter carry the Wine in, wee'll drink within.

M. Page. How now Miſtreſſe Ford ?

Fal. Miſtreſſe Ford, by my troth you are very well met : by your leave good Miſtreſſe.

M. Page. Wife, bid theſe Gentlemen welcome : come, we have a hot Veniſon Paſty to dinner ; Come gentlemen, I hope we ſhall drink down all unkindneſſe.

Slen. I had rather then forty ſhillings I had my book of Songs and Sonnets here : How now Simple, where have you been ? I muſt wait on my ſelf, muſt I ? you have not the book of Riddles about you, have you ?

Sim. Book of Riddles, why did you not lend it to Alice Short-cake upon Alhallowmas laſt ; a fortnight afore Michaelmas.

Shal. Come Coz, come Coz, we ſtay for you : a word with you Coz : marry this, Coz : there is as 'twere a tender, a kind of tender, made a far off by Sir Hugh here : doe you underſtand me ?

Slen. I Sir, you ſhall find me reaſonable ; if it be ſo, I ſhall doe that is reaſon.

Shal. Nay, but underſtand me.

Slen. So I doe Sir.

Evan. Give ear to his motions ; (M. Slender) I will deſcription the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will doe as my Couſin Shallow ſayes : I pray you pardon me, he's a Juſtice of Peace in his Countrey, ſimple though I ſtand here.

Evan. But that is not the queſtion : the queſtion is concerning your marriage.

Shal. I, there's the point Sir.

Evan. Marry is it : the very point of it, to M. An. Page.

Slen. Why if it be ſo ; I will marry her upon any reaſonable demands.

Eva. But can you affection the 'o-man, let us command to know that of your mouth, or of your lips : for divers Philoſophers hold, that the lips is parcell of the mouth : therefore preciſely, can you marry your good will to the maid ?

Shal. Couſin Abraham Slender, can you love her ?

Slen. I hope ſir, I will doe as it ſhall become one that would doe reaſon.

Evan. Nay got's Lords and his Ladies, you muſt ſpeak poſſitable, if you can carry-her your deſires towards her.

Shal. That you muſt :
Will you (upon good dowry) marry her ?

Slen. I will doe a greater thing then that, upon your requeſt (Couſin) in any reaſon.

Shal. Nay, conceive me, conceive me, (ſweet Coz:) what I doe is to pleaſure you (Coz) can you love the Maid ?

Slen. I will marry her (Sir) at your requeſt ; but if there be no great love in the beginning, yet Heaven may decreaſe it upon better acquaintance, when we are marryed, and have more occaſion to know one another : I hope upon familiarity will grow more content : but if you ſay marry-her, I will marry her, that I am freely diſſolved, and diſſolutely.

Evan.

Evan. It is a ferry diſcretion anſwer: ſave the fall is in th'ord diſſolutely: the ort is (according to our meaning) reſolutely: his meaning is good.

Sh. I, I think my Couſin meant well.

Sl. I, or elſe I would I might be hang' (la.)

Sh. Here comes fair Miſtreſſe Anne; would I were young for your ſake, Miſtreſſe Anne.

An. The dinner is on the Table, my Father deſires your Worſhips company.

Sh. I will wait on him, (fair Miſtreſſe Anne.) (Grace.

Evan. Od's pleſſed will: I will not be abſence at the

An. Will't pleaſe your Worſhip to come in, Sir?

Sl. No, I thank you forſooth heartily; I am very well.

An. The Dinner attends you ſir.

Sl. I am not a-hungry, I thank you forſooth: go Sirrha, for all you are my man, go wait upon my Couſin Shallow: a Juſtice of Peace ſometime may be beholding to his friend for a man; I keep but three men and a Boy yet, till my Mother be dead; but what though, yet I live a poor Gentleman born.

An. I may not go in without your Worſhip; they will not ſit till you come.

Sl. I'faith, I'le eat nothing: I thank you as much as though I did.

An. I pray you ſir walk in.

Sl. I had rather walk here (I thank you) I bruiz'd my ſhin th'other day, with playing at Sword and Dagger with a Maſter of Fence (three veneys for a diſh of ſtew'd Prunes) and by my troth, I cannot abide the ſmell of hot meat ſince. Why doe your dogs bark ſo? be there Bears ith' Town?

An. I think there are, Sir, I heard them talk'd of.

Sl. I love the ſport well, but I ſhall as ſoon quarrell at it as any man in England: you are afraid if you ſee the Bear looſe, are you not?

An. I indeed Sir.

Sl. That's meat and drink to mē now: I have ſeen Sackerſon looſe twenty times, and have taken him by the Chain: but (I warrant you) the women have ſo cri'd and ſhreekt at it, that it paſt: But women indeed cannot abide'em, they are very ill-favour'd rough things.

M.Pa. Come gentle M. Slender, come: we ſtay for you.

Sl. I'le eat nothing I thank you Sir.

M.Pa. By Cock and Pye you ſhall not chooſe Sir: come, come.

Sl. Nay, pray you lead the way.

M.Pa. Come on Sir.

Sl. Miſtreſſe Anne, your ſelf ſhall go firſt.

An. Not I Sir, pray you keep on.

Sl. Truly I will not go firſt: truly-la: I will not doe you that wrong.

An. I pray you Sir.

Sl. I'le rather be unmannerly then troubleſome: you doe your ſelf wrong indeed-la. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Evans and Simple.

Evan. Go your wayes and ask of Doctor Caius houſe, which is the way; and there dwells one Miſtreſſe Quickly, which is in the manner of his Nurſe; or his dry-Nurſe; or his Cook; or his Laundry; his Waſher, and his Ringer.

Sim. Well Sir.

Evans. Nay, it is better yet: give her this letter; for it is a 'oman that altogethers acquaintance with Miſtreſs Page; and the Letter is to deſire, and require her to ſolicite your Maſters deſires to Miſtreſs Anne Page: I pray you be gone: I will make an end of my dinner; there's Pippins and Cheeſe to come. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falſtaffe, Hoſt, Bardolfe, Nym. Piſtoll. Page.

Fal. Mine Hoſt of the Garter?

Ho. What ſayes my Bully Rook? ſpeak Schollarly, and wiſely.

Fal. Truly mine Hoſt; I muſt turn away ſome of my followers,

Ho. Diſcard, (Bully Hercules) caſhieer; let them wag; trot, trot.

Fal. I ſit at ten pounds a week.

Ho. Thou'rt an Emperour (Cæſar, Keiſar and Phaezar) I will entertain Bardolfe: he will draw, he will tap, ſaid I well (Bully Hector?)

Fa. Doe ſo (good mine Hoſt.)

Ho. I have ſpoke, let him follow: let me ſee thee froth and live: I am at a word: follow.

Fal. Bardolfe follow him, a Tapſter is a good trade: an old Cloake makes a new Jerkin; a wither'd Serving-man, a freſh Tapſter, go, adieu.

Ba. It is a life that I have deſir'd: I will thrive.

Piſt. O baſe hungarian wight: wilt thou the Spigot weild

Ni. He was gotten in drink: is not the humor conceited.

Ba. I am glad I am ſo acquit of this Tinderbox: his Thefts were too open; his filching was like an unſkilfull Singer, he kept not time.

Ni. The good humour is to ſteal at a minutes reſt.

Piſt. Convey, the wiſe it call: Steal? foh: a fico for the phraſe.

Fa. Well ſirs, I am almoſt out at heels.

Piſt. Why then let Kibes enſue.

Fal. There is no remedy: I muſt conicatch, I muſt ſhift.

Piſt. Young Ravens muſt have food.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this Town?

Piſt. I ken the wight, he is of ſubſtance good.

Fal. My honeſt Lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Piſt. Two yards and more.

Fal. No quips now Piſtoll: (Indeed I am in the Waſte two yards about: but I am now about no waſte, I am about thrift:) briefly, I doe mean to make love to Fords wife: I ſpie entertainment in her: ſhe diſcourſes: ſhe carves: ſhe gives the leere of invitation: I can conſtrue the action of her familiar ſtile, and the hardeſt voice of her behaviour (to be engliſh'd right) is, I am Sir John Falſtaffes.

Piſt. He hath ſtudied her will; and tranſlated her will: out of honeſty into Engliſh.

Ni. The Anchor is deep: will that humour paſſe?

Fal. Now, the report goes, ſhe has all the rule of her Husbands Purſe: he hath a legend of Angels.

Piſt. As many devils entertain: and to her Boy ſay I.

Ni. The humor riſes: it is good: humor me the Angels.

Fal. I have writ me here a Letter to her; and here another to Pages wife, who even now gave me good eyes too; examin'd my parts with moſt judicious illiads: ſometimes the beam of her view, guided my foot: ſometimes my portly belly.

Piſt. Then did the Sun on Dung-hill ſhine.

Ni. I thank thee for that humour.

Fal. O ſhe did ſo courſe o're my exteriours with ſuch a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye, did ſeem to ſcorch me up like a burning-glaſſe: here's another Letter to her: She bears the Purſe too: She is a Region in Guiana: all gold and bounty: I will be Cheaters to them both, and they ſhall be Exchequers to me: they ſhall be my Eaſt and Weſt-Indies, and I will trade to them both: Go, bear thou this Letter to Miſtreſſe Page; and thou this to Miſtreſſe Ford: we will thrive (Lads) we will thrive.

Piſt. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become,
And by my ſide wear Steel? then Lucifer take all.

Ni. I will run no baſe humour: here take the humour-Letter; I will keep the haviour of reputation.

Fal. Hold Sir-ha, bear you theſe Letters rightly,
Sail like my Pinnace to theſe golden ſhores.
Rogues, hence, avaunt, vaniſh like hail-ſtones; go,
Trudge; plod away oth' hoof, ſeek ſhelter, pack:
Falſtaffe will learn the honour of the age,
French-thrift, you Rogues, my ſelf, and skirted Page.

Piſt. Let Vultures gripe thy guts; for gould, and Fullam holds: & high and low beguiles the rich and poor,
Teſter I'le have in Pouch when thou ſhalt lack,
Baſe Phrygian Turk.

Ni. I have operations,
Which be humours of revenge.

Piſt. Wilt thou revenge?

Ni. By Welkin and her Star.

Piſt. With wit, or ſteel?

Ni. With both the humours, I:
I will diſcuſſe the humour of this Love to Ford.

Piſt. And I to Page ſhall eke unfold
How Falſtaffe (Varlet vile)
His Dove will prove: his gold will hold,
And his ſoft couch defile.

Ni. My humour ſhall not cool: I wil inceniſe Ford to deal with poyſon: I will poſſeſſe him with yellowneſſe, for the revolt of mine is dangerous: that is my true humour.

Piſt. Thou art the Mars of Male-contents: I ſecond thee: troop on. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Miſtreſſe Quickly, Simple, John Rugby, Doctor Caius, Fenton.

Qu. What, John Rugby, I pray thee go to the Caſement, and ſee if you can ſee my Maſter, Maſter Doctor Caius comming: if he doe (I'faith) and find any body in the houſe, here will be an old abuſing of Gods patience, and the Kings Engliſh.

Ru. I'le go watch.

Qu. Go, and we'll have a poſſet for't ſoon at night, (in faith) at the latter end of a Sea-coale fire: An honeſt, willing, kind fellow, as ever ſervant ſhall come in houſe withall: and I warrant you, no tell-tale, nor no breed-bate: his worſt fault is, that he is given to prayer; he is ſomething peeviſh that way: but no body but has his fault: but let that paſſe. Peter Simple you ſay your name is.

Si. I, for fault of a better.

Qu. And Maſter Slender's your Maſter?

Si. I forſooth.

Qu. Doe's he not wear a great round Beard, like a Glovers pairing-knife?

Si. No forſooth: he hath but a little wee-face; with a little yellow Beard: a Cain-colour'd Beard.

Qu. A ſoftly-ſprited man, is he not?

Si. I forſooth: but he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is between this and his head: he hath fought with a Warriener.

Qu. How ſay you: oh, I ſhould remember him: doe's he not hold up his head (as it were?) and ſtrut in his gate?

Si. Yes indeed doe's he.

Qu. Well, heaven ſend Anne Page no worſe fortune: Tell Maſter Parſon Evans, I will doe what I can for your Maſter: Anne is a good girl, and I wiſh------

Ru. Our alaſs: here comes my Maſter.

Qu. We ſhall all be ſhent: Run in here, good young man: go into this Cloſet: he will not ſtay long: what John Rugby? John: what John I ſay? go John, go enquire for my Maſter, I doubt he be not well, that he comes not home: (and downe, downe, adowne'a, &c.)

Ca. Vat is you ſing? I doe not like des toyes: pray you go and vetch in my Cloſet, unboyteen verd; a Box, a green-a Box: doe intend vat I ſpeak? a green-a Box.

Qu. I forſooth i'le fetch it you:
I am glad he went not in himſelf: if he had found the young man, he would have been horn mad.

Ca. Fe, fe, fe, fe, moi foi, il fait for ehando, Ie mau voi a le. Court la grand affaires.

Qu Is it this Sir?

Ca. Ouy, mette le au mon pocket, de-peech quickly: Vere is dat knave Rugby?

Qu. What John Rugby, John?

Ru. Here Sir.

Ca. You are John Rugby, and you are Jack Rugby: Come, take-a your Rapier, and come after my heel to the Court.

Ru. 'Tis ready ſir, here in the Porch.

Ca. By my trot I tarry too long: od's-me: que ay je oublie: dere is ſome Simples in my Cloſet, dat I will not for the varld I ſhall leave behind.

Qu. Ay-me, he'll find the young man there, and be mad.

Ca. O Diable, Diable: vat is in my Cloſet?
Villanie, La-roon: Rugby, my Rapier.

Qu. Good Maſter be content.

Ca. Wherefore ſhould I be content-a?

Qu. The young man is an honeſt man.

Ca. What ſhall de honeſt man doe in my Cloſet: dere is no honeſt man dat ſhall come in my Cloſet.

Qu. I beſeech you be not ſo flegmatick: hear the truth of it. He came of an errand to me from Parſon Hugh.

Ca. Vell.

Si. I forſooth, to deſire her to------

Qu. Peace, I pray you.

Ca. Peace-a-your-tongue, ſpeak-a your Tale.

Si. To deſire this honeſt Gentlewoman (your Maid) to ſpeak a good word to Miſtreſſe Anne Page, for my Maſter in the way of marriage.

Qu. This is all indeed-la: but i'le ne're put my finger in the fire and need not.

Ca. Sir Hugh ſend-a-you? Rugby, ballow me ſome Paper: tarry you a littell-a-while.

Qu

Qui. I am glad he is ſo quiet: if he had been throughly moved, you ſhould have heard him ſo loud, and ſo melancholly: but notwithſtanding man, I'le do for your Maſter what good I can: and the very yea, and the no is, the French Doctor my Maſter, (I may call him my Maſter, looke you, for I keep his houſe; and I waſh, ring, brew, bake, ſcoure, dreſs meat and drink, make the beds, and do all my ſelf.)

Sim. 'Tis a great charge to come under one bodies hand.

Qui. Are you a-vis'd o'that? you ſhall find it a great charge: and to be up early, and down late: but notwithſtanding, (to tell you in your ear, I would have no words of it) my Maſter himſelf is in love with Miſtris Anne Page: but notwithſtanding that I know Ans mind, that's neither here nor there.

Cai. You, Jack'Nape: give-'a this Letter to Sir Hugh, by gar it is a ſhallenge: I will cut his troat in de Parke, and I will teach a ſcurvy Jack-a-nape Prieſt to meddle, or make:--- you may be gone: it is not good you tarry here: by gar I will cut all his two ſtones: by gar, he ſhall not have a ſtone to trow at his dog.

Qui. Alas: he ſpeaks but for his friend.

Cai. It is no matter'a ver dat: doe not you tell-a-me dat I ſhall have Anne Page for my ſelf? by gar, I vill kill de Jack-Prieſt: and I have appointed mine Hoſt of de Jarteer to meaſure our weapon: by gar, I will my ſelf have Anne Page.

Qui. Sir, the maid loves you, and all ſhall be well: We muſt give folks leave to prate: what the good-jer.

Cai. Rugby, come to the Court with me: by gar, if I have not Anne Page, I ſhall turn your head out of my door: follow my heels, Rugby.

Qui. You ſhall have Anne-fools head of your own: No, I know Ans mind for that: that never a woman in Windſor knows more of Ans mind then I do, nor can do more then I do with her, I thank heaven.

Fenton. Who's within there, hoa?

Qui. Who's there, I troa? Come near the houſe I pray you.

Fen. How now (good woman) how doſt thou?

Qui. The better that it pleaſes your good Worſhip to aske?

Fen. What news? how do's pretty Miſtris Anne?

Qui. In truth Sir, and ſhe is pretty, and honeſt, and gentle, and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way, I praiſe heaven for it.

Fen. Shall I do any good thinkſt thou? ſhall I not looſe my ſuit?

Qui. Troth Sir, all is in his hands above: but notwithſtanding (Maſter Fenton) I'le be ſworne on a book ſhe loves you: have not your Worſhip a wart above your eye?

Fen. Yes marry have I, what of that?

Qui. Well, thereby hangs a tale: good faith, it is ſuch another Nan; (but (I deteſt) an honeſt maid as ever broke bread: we had an hours talke of that wart; I ſhall never laugh but in that maids company: but: (indeed) ſhe is given too much to Allicholly and muſing, but for you----well---go to----

Fen. Well: I ſhall ſee her to day: hold, there's money for thee: Let me have thy voyce in my behalf: if thou ſeeſt her before me, commend me.----

Qui. Will I? Ifaith that we will: And I will tell your Worſhip more of the Wart, the next time we have confidence, and of other wooers.

Fen. Well, farewell, I am in great haſte now.

Qui. Farewell to your Worſhip: truly an honeſt Gentleman: but Anne loves him not: for I know Ans minde as well as another doe's: out upon't: what have I forgot? Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Miſtris Page, Miſtris Ford, Maſter Page, Maſter Ford, Piſtol, Nim, Quickly, Hoſt, Shallow.

Miſ. Page. What, have I ſcap'd Love-letters in the holly-day time of my beauty, and am I now a ſubject for them? let me ſee?

Ask me no reaſon why I love you, for though love uſe reaſon for his preciſian, he admits him not for his Counſellor: you are not young, no more am I: go to then, there's ſimpathy: you are merry, ſo am I: ha, ha, then there's more ſimpathy: you love Sack, & ſo do I: would you deſire better ſimpathy? Let it ſuffice thee (Miſtris Page) at the leaſt if the Love of a Souldier can ſuffice, that I love thee; I will not ſay pity me, 'tis not a Souldier-like phraſe, but I ſay, love me:

By me, thine own true Knight, by day or night:
Or any kind of light, with all his might,
For thee to fight. John Falſtaffe.

What a Herod of Jury is this? O wicked, wicked world: One that is well nigh worn to pieces with age. To ſhow himſelf a young Gallant? what unwayed Behaviour hath this Flemiſh drunkard pickt (I'th' devils name) out of my converſation, that dares in this manner aſſay me? why, he hath not been thrice in my Company: what ſhould I ſay to him? I was then frugall of my mirth: (heaven forgive me:) why I'le exhibit a Bill in the Parliament for the putting down of men: how ſhall I be reveng'd on him? for reveng'd I will be? as ſure as his guts are made of puddings.

Miſ. Ford. Miſtris Page, truſt me, I was going to your houſe.

Miſ. Page. And truſt me, I was coming to you: you look very ill.

Miſ. Ford. Nay, I'le nere believe that; I have to ſhew to the contrary.

Miſ. Page. 'Faith but you do in my minde.

Miſ. Ford. Well: I do then: yet I ſay, I could ſhew you to the contrary: O Miſtris Page, give me ſome counſell.

Miſ. Page. What's the matter, woman?

Miſ. Ford. O woman: if it were not for one trifling reſpect, I could come to ſuch honour.

Miſ. Page. Hang the trifle (woman) take the honour: what is it: diſpence with trifles: what is it?

Miſ. Ford. If I would but go to hell, for an eternall moment, or ſo: I could be knighted.

Miſ. Page. What thou lieſt? Sir Alice Ford? theſe Knights will hack, and ſo thou ſhouldſt not altar the article of thy Gentry.

Miſ. Ford. We burn day-light, here, read, read: perceive how I might be knighted, I ſhall think the worſe of fat men, as long as I have an eye to make difference of mens liking; and yet he would not ſweare: praiſe praiſe womens modeſty: and gave ſuch orderly and well-behaved reproofe to all uncomelineſs, that I would have ſworn his diſpoſition would have gone to the truth of his words: but they do no more adhere and keep place together, then the hundred Pſalms to the tune of Greenſleeves: What tempeſt (I troa) threw this Whale, (with ſo many Tuns of oyle in h's belly) a'ſhoar at Windſor? How ſhall I be revenged on him? I think the beſt way were to entertain him with hope, till the wicked fire of luſt have melted him in his own greace: Did you ever hear the like?

Miſ. Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs: to thy great comfort in this myſtery of ill opinions, here's the twin-brother of thy Letter: but let thine inherit firſt, for I proteſt mine never ſhall: I warrant he hath a thouſand of theſe Letters, writ with blank-ſpace for different names (ſue more:) and theſe are of the ſecond edition: he will print them out of doubt: for he cares not what he puts into the preſſe, when he would put us two: I had rather be a Gianteſſe, and lye under Mount Pelion: Well, I will find you twenty laſcivious Turtles ere one chaſt man.

Miſ. Ford. Why this is the very ſame: the very hand: the very words: what doth he think of us?

Miſ. Page. Nay I know not: it makes me almoſt ready to wrangle with mine own honeſty: I'le entertain my ſelf like one that I am not acquainted withall: for ſure unleſſe he know ſome ſtrain in me, that I know not my ſelf, he would never have boorded me in this fury.

Miſ. Ford. Boording, call you it? I'le be ſure to keep him above deck.

Miſ. Page. So will I: if he come under my hatches, I'le never to Sea again: Let's be reveng'd on him, let's appoint him a meeting: give him a ſhow of comfort in his Suit, and lead him on with a fine baited delay, till he hath pawn'd his horſes to mine Hoſt of the Garter.

Miſ. Ford. Nay, I will conſent to act any villany againſt him, that may not ſully the charineſſe of our honeſty: oh that my husband ſaw this Letter: it would give eternal food to his jealouſie.

Miſ. Page. Why look where he comes: and my good man too: hee's as farre from jealouſie (as I am from giving him cauſe, and that (I hope) is an unmeaſurable diſtance.

Miſ. Ford. You are the happier woman.

Miſ. Page. Let's conſult together againſt this greaſie Knight: Come hither.

Ford. Well: I hope, it be not ſo.

Piſt. Hope is a curtall-dog in ſome affairs:
Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why ſir, thy wife is not young.

Piſt. He woo's both high and low, both rich and poor, both young and old, one with another (Ford) he loves thy Gally-mawfry (Ford) perpend.

Ford. Love my wife?

Piſt. With liver burning hot: prevent:
Or go thou like Sir Acteon with
Ring-wood at thy heels: O, odious is the name.

Ford. What name Sir?

Piſt. The horn I ſay: Farewell:
Take heed, have open eye, for thieves do foot by night.
Take heed, ere ſummer comes, or Cuckoo-birds do ſing.
Away ſir Corporall Nim:
Believe it (Page) he ſpeaks ſence.

Ford. I will be patient: I will find out this.

Nim. And this is true: I like not the humour of lying: he hath wronged me in ſome humours: I ſhould have borne the humour'd Letter to her: but I have a ſword: and it ſhall bite upon my neceſſity: he loves your wife; There's the ſhort, and the long: My name is Corporall Nim: I ſpeak it, and I avouch, 'tis true: my name is Nim: and Falſtaffe loves your wife: adieu, I love not the humour of bread and cheeſe: adieu.

Page. The humour of it (quoth'a?) here's a fellow frights Engliſh out of his wits.

Ford. I will ſeek out Falſtaffe.

Page. I never heard ſuch a drawling affecting rogue.

Ford. If I do find it: well.

Page. I will not believe ſuch a Cataian, though the Prieſt o'th'Town commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good ſenſible fellow: well.

Miſ. Page. Whither goe you (George?) hark you.

Miſ. Ford. How now (ſweet Frank) why art thou melancholly?

Ford. I melancholly? I am not melancholly:
Get you home, goe.

Miſ. Ford. Faith, thou haſt ſome crochets in thy head. Now: will you go, Miſtris Page.

Miſ. Page. Have with you: you'll come to dinner George? Look who comes yonder: ſhe ſhall be our Meſſenger to this paltry Knight.

Miſ. Ford. Truſt me, I thought on her: ſhee'll fit it.

Miſ. Page. You are come to ſee my daughter Anne?

Qui. I forſooth: and I pray how do's good Miſtreſs Anne?

Miſ. Page. Goe in with us and ſee: we have an houre talke with you.

Page. How now Maſter Ford.

Ford. You heard what this knave told me, did you not?

Page. Yes, and you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Do you think there is truth in them?

Page. Hang'em ſlaves: I do not think the Knight would offer it, But theſe that accuſe him in his intent towards our wives, are a yoak of his diſcarded men; very rogues, now they be out of ſervice.

Ford. Were they his men?

Page. Marry were they.

Ford. I like it never the better for that,
Do's he lye at the Garter?

Page. I marry do's he: if he ſhould intend this voyage toward my wife, I would turn her looſe to him; and what he gets more of her, then ſharpe words, let it lye on my head.

Ford. I do not miſdoubt my wife: but I would be loath to turn them together: a man may be too confident: I would have nothing lye on my head: I cannot be thus ſatisfied.

Page. Look where my ranting-Hoſt of the Garter comes: there is either liquor in his pate, or money in his purſe, when he lookes ſo merrily: How now mine Hoſt?

Hoſt. How now Bully-Rooke: thou'rt a Gentleman Cavalerio Juſtice, I ſay.

Shal. I follow, (mine Hoſt) I follow: Good-even, and twenty (good Maſter Page.) Maſter Page, will you go with us; we have ſport in hand.

Hoſt. Tell him Cavalerio-Juſtice: tell him Bully-Rook.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, between Sir Hugh the Welch-Prieſt, and Caius the French Doctor.

Ford. Good

Ford. Good mine Hoſt o'th'Garter: a word with you.

Hoſt. What ſaiſt thou, my Bully-Rook?

Shal. Will you go with us to behold it? My merry Hoſt hath had the meaſuring of their weapons; and (I think) hath appointed them contrary places: for (believe me) I hear the Parſon is no Jeſter: hark, I will tell you what our ſport ſhall be.

Hoſt. Haſt thou no ſuit againſt my Knight? my gueſt-Cavaleir?

Shal. None, I proteſt: but I'le give you a pottle of burn'd Sack, to give me recourſe to him, and tell him my name is Broom: onely for a jeſt.

Hoſt. My hand, (Bully:) thou ſhalt have egreſs and regreſs, (ſaid I well?) and thy name ſhall be Broom. It is a merry Knight: will you go An-heirs?

Shal. Have with you mine Hoſt.

Page. I have heard the French-man hath good skill in his Rapier.

Shal. Tut ſir: I could have told you more: In theſe times you ſtand on diſtance: your Paſſes, Stoccado's, and I know not what: 'tis the heart (Maſter Page) 'tis here, 'tis here: I have ſeen the time, with my long-ſword, I would have made you four tall fellowes skip like Rats.

Hoſt. Here boys, here: ſhall we wag?

Page. Have with you: I had rather hear them ſcold, then fight.

Ford. Though Page be a ſecure ſoole, and ſtands ſo firmly on his wives frailty; yet, I cannot put-off my opinion ſo eaſily: ſhe was in his company at Pages houſe: and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will look further into't, and I have a diſguiſe, to ſound Falſtaffe; if I find her honeſt, I loſe not my labour: if ſhe be otherwiſe, 'tis labour well beſtowed.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falſtaffe, Piſtol, Robin, Quickly, Bardolffe, Ford.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Piſt. Why then the worlds mine Oyſter, which I, with ſword will open.

Fal. Not a penny: I have been content (Sir) you ſhould lay my countenance to pawn: I have grated upon my good friends for three Repreeves for you, and your Coach-fellow Nim; or elſe you had look'd through the grate, like a Gemeny of Baboons: I am damn'd in hell, for ſwearing to Gentlemen my friends, you were good Souldiers, and tall-fellows. And when Miſtreſſe Briget loſt the handle of her Fan, I took't upon mine honour thou hadſt it not.

Piſt. Didſt thou not ſhare? hadſt thou not fifteen pence?

Fal. Reaſon, you rogue, reaſon: think'ſt thou I'le endanger my ſoul, gratis? at a word, hang no more about me, I am no gibbet for you: go, a ſhort knife, and a throng, to your Mannor of Pickt-hatch: go, you'll not bear a Letter for me you rogue? you ſtand upon your honour: why, (thou unconfinable baſeneſs) it is as much as I can do to keep the term of my honour preciſe: I, I, I my ſelf ſometimes, leaving the fear of heaven on the left hand, and hiding mine honour in my neceſſity, am fain to ſhuffle: to hedge, and to lurch, and yet, you Rogue, will enſconce your rags; your Cat-a-Mountain-lookes; your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating-oaths, under the ſhelter of your honour? you will not do it? you?

Piſt. I do relent: what would thou more of man?

Rob. Sir, here's a woman would ſpeak with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Qui. Give your worſhip good morrow.

Fal. Good-morrow, good-wife.

Qui. Not ſo and't pleaſe your worſhip.

Fal. Good maid then.

Qui. I'le be ſworn,
As my mother was the firſt hour I was born.

Fal. I do believe the ſwearer; what with me:

Qui. Shall I vouchſafe your worſhip a word, or two?

Fal. Two thouſand (fair woman) and I'le vouchſafe thee the hearing.

Qui. There is one Miſtreſs Ford, (Sir) I pray come a little nearer this wayes: I my ſelf dwell with M. Doctor Caius.

Fal. Well, on; Miſtreſs Ford, you ſay.

Qui. Your worſhip ſayes very true; I pray your worſhip come a little nearer this wayes.

Fal. I warrant thee, no body hears: mine own people, mine own people.

Qui. Are they ſo? heaven bleſs them, and make them his ſervants.

Fal. Well; Miſtreſs Ford, what of her?

Qui. Why, Sir; ſhee's a good creature; lord, lord, your Worſhip's a wanton: well, heaven forgive you, and all of us, I pray-------.

Fal. Miſtreſs Ford; come, Miſtreſs Ford.

Qui. Marry this is the ſhort, and the long of it: you have brought her into ſuch a Canaries, as 'tis wonderfull: the beſt Courtier of them all (when the Court lay at Windſor) could never have broguht her to ſuch a Canary: yet there has been Knights, and Lords, and Gentlemen, with their Coaches; I warrant you Coach after Coach, letter after letter, gift after gift, ſmelling ſo ſweetly; all muſk, and ſo ruſhling I warrant you, in ſilk and gold, and in ſuch alligant termes, and in ſuch wine and ſugar of the beſt, and the faireſt, that would have won any womans heart: and I warrant you they could never get an eye-wink of her: I had my ſelf twenty Angels given me this morning, but I defie all Angels (in any ſuch ſort, as they ſay) but in the way of honeſty: and I warrant you, they could never get her ſo much as ſip on a cup with the proudeſt of them all, and yet there has been Earls: nay, (which is more) Pentioners, but I warrant you all is one with her.

Fal. But what ſayes ſhe to me? be brief my good ſhee-Mercury.

Qui. Marry, ſhe hath receiv'd your Letter: for the which ſhe thanks you a thouſand times; and ſhe gives you to notifie, that her husband will be abſence from his houſe, between ten and eleven.

Fal. Ten, and eleven,

Qui. I, forſooth: and then you may come and ſee the picture (ſhe ſayes) that you wot of: Maſter Ford her husband will be from home: alas, the ſweet woman leads an ill life with him: hee's a very jealouſie-man; ſhee leads a very frampold life with him, (good heart.)

Fal. Ten, and eleven.

Woman

Woman, commend me to her, I will not fail her.

Qui. Why, you say well: But I have another messenger to your worship: Mistress Page hath her hearty commendations to you too: and let me tell you in your ear, she's as fartuous a civil modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not misse you morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, who ere be the other: and she bad me tell your worship, that her husband is seldome from home, but she hopes there will come a time. I never knew a woman so doat upon a man; surely I think you have charmes, la: yes in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee; setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I have no other charmes.

Qui. Blessing on your heart for't.

Fal. But I pray thee tell me this: has Fords wife, and Pages wife acquainted each other, how they love me?

Qui. That were a jest indeed: they have not so little grace I hope, that were a trick indeed: But Mistris Page would desire you to send her your little Page of all loves: her husband has a marvellous infection to the little Page: and truly Master Page is an honest man: never a wife in Windsor leads a better life then she do's: doe what she will, say what she will, take all, pay all, go to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will: and truly she deserves it; for if there be a kind woman in Windsor, she is one: you must send her your Page, no remedie.

Fal. Why, I will.

Qui. Nay, but do so then, and look you, he may come and go between you both: and in any case have a nay-word, that you may know one anothers mind, and the Boy never need to understand any thing; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickednesse: old folks you know, have discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Fare thee-well, commend me to them both: there's my purse, I am yet thy debter: Boy, go along with this woman, this news distracts me.

Pist. This Punck is one of Cupids Carriers,
Clap on more sails, pursue: up with your fights:
Give fire: she is my prize, or Ocean whelm them all.

Fal. Saist thou so (old Jack) go thy wayes: I'le make more of thy old body then I have done: will they yet look after thee? wilt thou after the expence of so much money, be now a gainer? good body, I thank thee: let them say 'tis grossly done, so it be fairly done, no matter.

Bar. Sir John, there's one Master Broom below would fain speak with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a mornings draught of Sack.

Fal. Broom is his name?

Bast. I Sir.

Fal. Call him in: such Broomes are welcome to me, that ore'flows such liquor: ah, ah, Mistress Ford and Mistress Page, have I encompassed you? go to, via.

Ford. 'Bless you sir.

Fal. And you sir: would you speak with me?

Ford. I make bold, to presse, with so little preparation upon you.

Fal. You'r welcome, what's your will? give us leave Drawer.

Ford. Sir, I am a Gentleman that have spent much, my name is Broom.

Fal. Good Master Broom, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good Sir John, I sue for yours: not to charge you, for I must let you understand, I think my self in better plight for a Lender, then you are: the which hath something emboldned me to this unseason'd intrusion: for they say, if money goe before, all wayes doe lye open.

Fal. Money is a good Souldier (Sir) and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I have a bag of money here troubles me: if you will help to bear it (Sir John) take all, or halfe, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserve to be your Porter.

Ford. I will tell you sir, if you will give me the hearing.

Fal. Speak (good Master Broom) I shall be glad to be your servant.

Ford. Sir, I hear you are a Scholler: (I will be brief with you) and you have been a man long known to me, though I had never so good means as desire, to make my self acquainted with you. I shall discover a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine own imperfection: but (good Sir John) as you have one eye upon my follies, as you hear them unfolded, turn another into the Register of your own, that I may passe with a reproof the easier, sith you your self know how easie it is to to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well Sir, proceed.

Ford. There is a Gentlewoman in this Town, her husbands name is Ford.

Fal. Well Sir.

Ford. I have long lov'd her, and I protest to you, bestowed much on her: followed her with a doating observance: Ingros'd opportunities to meet her: fee'd every slight occasion that could but nigardly give me sight of her: not onely bought many presents to give her, but have given largely to many, to know what she would have given: briefely, I have pursu'd her, as Love hath pursued me, which hath been on the wing of all occasions: but whatsoever I have merited, either in my minde, or in my means, meed I am sure I have received none, unless experience be a Jewel, that I have purchased at an infinite rate, and that hath taught me to say this.

" Love like a shadow flies, when substance Love pursues;
' Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues.

Fal. Have you receiv'd no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Have you importun'd her to such a purpose?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what quality was your love then?

Ford. Like a fair house, built on another mans ground, so that I have lost my edifice, by mistaking the place, where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose have you unfolded this to me?

Ford. When I have told you that, I have told you all: Some say, that though she appear honest to me, yet in other places she enlargeth her mirth so far, that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now (Sir John) here is the heart of my purpose: you are a Gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authentick in your place and person, generally allow'd for your many war-like, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O Sir.

Ford. Believe it, for you know it: there is money, spend it, spend it, spend more; spend all I have; onely give

give me to much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Fords wife: use your Art of wooing; win her to consent to you: if any man may, you may as soon as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection that I should win what you would enjoy? Methinks you prescribe to your self very preposterously.

Ford. O, understand my drift: she dwels so securely on the excellency of her honour, that the folly of my soul dares not present it self: as she is too bright to be look'd against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand; my desires had instance and argument to commend themselves, I could drive her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage-vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too-too strongly embattailed against me: what say you too't, Sir John

Fal. Master Broom, I will first make bold with your money: next give me your hand: and last, as I am a Gentleman, you shall, if you will, enjoy Fords wife.

Ford. O good Sir.

Fal. I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money (Sir John) you shall want none.

Fal. Want no Mistreß Ford (Master Broom) you shall want none: I shall be with her (I may tell you) by her own appointment, even as you came into me; her assistant, or go-between, parted from me: I say I shall be with her between ten and eleven: for at that time the jealous-rascally-knave her husband will be forth: come you to me at night, you shall know I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acquaintance: do you know Ford Sir?

Fal. Hang him (poor Cuckoldly knave) I know him not: yet I wrong him to call him poor: They say the jealous wittolly-knave hath masses of money, for the which his wife seems to me well-favour'd. I will use her as the key of the Cuckold-rogues Coffer, and there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might avoid him, if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanicall-salt-butter rogue; I will stare him out of his wits: I will awe him with my cudgell: it shall hang like a Meteor o're the Cuckolds horns: Master Broom, thou shalt know, I will predominate over the pezant, and thou shalt lye with his wife. Come to me soon at night: Ford's a knave, and I will aggravate his stile: thou (Master Broom) shalt know him for knave, and Cuckold. Come to me soon at night Exit.

Ford. What a damn'd Epicurian-Rascall is this? my heart is ready to crack with impatience: who saies this is improvident jealousie? my wife hath sent to him, the hour is fixt, the match is made: would any man have thought this? see the hell of having a false woman: my bed shall be abus'd, my Coffers ransack'd, my reputation gnawn at, and I shall not onely receive this villanous wrong, but stand under the adoption of abhominable termes: and by him that does me this wrong: Termes, names: Amaimon sounds well: Lucifer, well: Barbason, well: yet they are Devils additions, the names of fiends: But Cuckold, Wittoll, Cuckold? the Devill himself, hath not such a name. Page is an Asse, a secure Asse; he will trust his wife, he will not be jealous: I will rather trust a Fleming with my butter, Parson Hugh the Welchman with my Cheese, an Irish-man with my Aqua-vitæ-bottle, or a Thief to walke my ambling gelding, than my wife with her self. Then she plots, then she ruminates, then she devises: and what they think in their hearts they may effect; they will break their hearts but they will effect. Heaven be prais'd for my jealousie: eleven o' clock the hour, I will prevent this; detect my wife, be reveng'd on Falstaffe, and laugh at Page. I will about it, better three hours too soon, then a minute too late: fie, fie, fie: Cuckold, Cuckold, Cuckold. Exit.

Page. Master Shallow; you have your self been a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Body-kins Mr. Page, though I now be old, and of peace; if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one: though we are Justices, and Doctors, and Churchmen (Mr. Page) we have some salt of our youth in us, we are the sons of women (Mr. Page.)

Page. 'Tis true Mr. Shallow.

Shal. It will be found so, (Mr. Page) Mr. Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home: I am sworn of the peace: you have shew'd your self a wise Physician, and sir Hugh hath shown himself a wise and patient Churchman: you must go with me, Mr. Doctor.

Come at my heels, Jack Rugby.

Actus Tertius, Scena Prima.

Enter Evans, Simple, Page, Shallow, Slender, Hoſt, Caius, Rugby.

Evans. I pray you now, good Maſter Slenders, ſerving-man, and friend Simple by your name; which way have you look'd for Maſter Caius, that calls himſelf Doctor of Phiſick.

Sim. Marry Sir, the pitty-wary, the Park-ward; every way: old Windſor way, and every way but the Town way.

Evan. I moſt fehemently deſire you, you will alſo look that way.

Sim. I will ſir.

Evan. 'Pleſs my ſoul: how full of Chollars I am, and trempling of minde: I ſhall be glad if he have deceived me: how melancholies I am? I will knog his Urinalls about his knaves coſtard, when I have good opportunities for the orke: 'Pleſs my ſoul: To ſhallow Rivers to whoſe falls, melodious Birds ſings Madrigalls: There will we make our Peds of Roſes: and a thouſand fragrant poſies. To ſhallow. 'Mercy on me, I have a great diſpoſition to cry. Melodious birds ſing Madrigall:---When as I ſat in Pabilon: and a thouſand vagram Poſies. To ſhallow, &c.

Sim. Yonder he is coming, this way, Sir Hugh.

Ev. Hee's welcome: To ſhallow Rivers, to whoſe falls: Heaven proſper the right: what weapons is he?

Sim. No weapons, Sir: there comes my Maſter, Mr. Shallow; and another Gentleman; from Frogmore, over the ſtile, this way.

Evan. Pray you give me my gown, or elſe keep it in your armes. Enter All.

Shal. How now Maſter Parſon? good morrow good Sir Hugh: keep a gameſter from the dice, and a good Student from his book, and it is wonderfull.

Slen. Ah ſweet Anne Page.

Page. 'Save you good Sir Hugh.

Evan. 'Pleſs you from his mercy-ſake, all of you.

Shal. What? the Sword, and the word? Do you ſtudy them both, Mr. Parſon?

Page. And youthfull ſtill, in your doublet and hoſe, this raw-rumatick day?

Evan. There is reaſons, and cauſes for it.

Page. We are come to you: to do a good office, Mr. Parſon.

Evan. Fery well: what is it?

Page. Yonder is a moſt reverend Gentleman; who (belike) having received wrong by ſome perſon, is at moſt odds with his own gravity and patience, that ever you ſaw.

Shal. I have lived fourſcore years; and upward: I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, ſo wide of his own reſpect.

Evan. What is he?

Page. I think you know him: Mr. Doctor Caius the renowned French Phiſitian.

Evan. Got's-will, and his paſſion of my heart: I had as lief you would tell me of a meſs of porredge.

Page. Why?

Evan. He has no more knowledge in Hibocrates and Galen, and he is a knave beſides: a cowardly knave, as you would deſire to be acquainted withall.

Page. I warrant you, hee's the man ſhould fight with him.

Shal. It appears ſo by his weapons: keep them aſunder: here comes Doctor Caius.

Page. Nay good Mr. Parſon, keep in your weapon.

Shal. So do you, good Mr. Doctor.

Hoſt. Diſarm them, and let them queſtion: let them keep their limbs whole, and hack our Engliſh.

Cai. I pray you let-a-me ſpeak a word with your ear; wherefore vill you not meet-a me?

Evan. Pray you uſe your patience in good time.

Cai. By-gar, you are de Coward: de Jack dog: John Ape.

Evan. Pray you let us not be laughing-ſtocks to other mens humours: I deſire you in friendſhip, and I will one way or other make you amends: I will knog your Urinal about your knaves Cogs-combe.

Cai. Diable, Jack Rugby, mine Hoſt de Jarteer, have I not ſtay for him, to kill him? have I not at de place I did appoint?

Evan. As I am a Chriſtians-ſoul, now look you: this is the place appointed, I'le be judgement by mine Hoſt of the Garter.

Hoſt. Peace, I ſay, Gallia, and Gaul, French, and Welch, Soul-Curer, and Body-Curer.

Cai.

Cai. I, dat is very good, excellant.

Host. Peace, I say: hear mine Host of the Garter, Am I politick? am I subtle? am I a Machivell? Shall I loose my Doctor? No, he gives me the Potions and the Motions. Shall I loose my Parson? my Priest? my Sir Hugh? No, he gives me the Proverbs, and the Noverbs. Give me thy hand (Celestial) so: Boyes of Art, I have deceiv'd you both: I have directed you to wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your skins are whole, and let burn'd Sack be the issue: come, lay their swords to pawn: Follow me, Lad of peace, follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Trust me, a mad Host: follow Gentlemen, follow.

Slen. O sweet Anne Page.

Cai. Ha' do I perceive dat? Have you make-a-de-sot of us, ha, ha?

Evan. This is well, he has made us his vlowting-stog: I desire you that we may be friends: and let us knog our prains together to be revenge on this same scall scurvy-cogging companion the Host of the Garter.

Cai. By gar, with all my heart: he promise to bring me where is Anne Page: by gar he deceive me too.

Evan. Well, I will smite his noddles: pray you follow.

Scena Secunda.

Mist. Page, Robin, Ford, Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Evans, Caius.

Mist. Page. Nay keep your way (little Gallant) you were wont to be a Follower, but now you are a Leader: whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your Masters heels?

Rob. I had rather (forsooth) go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarfe. (Courtier.

Mi. Pa. O you are a flattering boy, now I see you'l be a

Ford. Well met Mistresse Page, whether go you.

Mi. Page. Truly Sir, to see your wife, is she at home?

Ford. I, and as idle as she may hang together for want of company: I think if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

Mist. Pag. Be sure of that, two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-cock?

M. Page. I cannot tell what (the dickens) his name is my husband had him of, what do you call your Knights (name, sir? ha?

Rob. Sir John Falstaffe.

M. Pa. He, he, I can never hit on's name: there is such a league between my goodman, and he: is your Wife at Ford. Indeed she is. (home indeed?

M. Pa. By your leave sir, I am sick till I see her.

Ford. Has Page any brains? Hath he any eyes? Hath he any thinking? Sure they sleep, he hath no use of them: why this boy will carry a Letter twenty mile as easie, as a Canon will shoot point-blanck twelve score: he pieces out his wives inclination: he gives her folly, motion and advantage: and now she's going to my wife, and Falstaffes boy with her: A man may hear this shower sing in the wind; and Falstaffes boy with her: good plots, they are laid, and our revolted wives share damnation together. Well, I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed vail of modesty from the so seeming Mist. Page, divulge Page himself for a secure and wilfull Acteon, and to these violent proceedings all my neighbours shall cry aime. The clock gives me my Qu, and my assurance bids me search, there I shall find Falstaffe: I shall be rather praised for this, than mock'd, for it is as positive, as the earth is firm, that Falstaffe is there: I will go.

Shal. Page, &c. Well met Mr. Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knot: I have good cheer at home, and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse my self Mr. Ford.

Slen. And so must I Sir,

We have appointed to dine with Mistresse Anne,
And I would not break with her for more money
Then I'le speak of.

Shal. We have linger'd about a match between Anne Page, and my Cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer.

Slender. I hope I have your good will father Page.

Page. You have Mr. Slender, I stand wholly for you, but my wife (Master Doctor) is for you altogether.

Cai. I be-gar, and de Maid is love-a-me: my nurse-a-Quickly tell me so mush.

Host. What say you to young M. Fenton? He capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth: he writes verses, he speaks holliday, he smels April and May, he will carry't, he will carry't, 'tis in his buttons, he will carry't.

Page. Not by my consent I promise you. The Gentleman is of no having, he kept company with the wild Prince, and Poinz: he is of too high a Region, he knows too much: no, he shall not knit a knot in his fortunes, with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simply: the wealth I have waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you heartily, some of you go home with me to dinner: besides your cheer you shall have sport, I will shew you a Monster: Mr. Doctor, you shall go, so shall you Mr. Page, and you Sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well:

We shall have the freer wooing at Mr. Pages.

Cai. Go home John Rugby, I come anon.

Host. Farewell my hearts, I will to my honest Knight Falstaffe, and drink Canary with him.

Ford. I think I shall drink in Pipe-wine first with him, I'le make him dance. Will you go, Gentles?

All. Have with you, to see this Monster. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Mistresse Ford, Mistresse Page, Servants, Robin, Falstaffe, Ford, Page, Caius, Evans.

Mist. Ford. What John, what Robert.

Mist. Page. Quickly, quickly: Is the Buck-basket----

Mist. Ford. I warrant. What Robin I say.

Mist. Page. Come, come, come.

Mist. Ford. Here, set it down.

Mist. Pa. Give your men the charge, we must be brief.

M. Ford. Marry as I told you before (John and Robert) be ready here hard-by in the Brew-house, and when I suddenly call you, come forth, and (without any pause, or staggering) take this basket on your shoulders: that done, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the Whitsters in Datchet Mead, and there empty it in the muddy ditch, close by the Thames side.

M. Page. You will do it? (direction.

M. Ford. I ha told them over and over, they lack no

Be gone, and come when you are call'd.

Miſ. Page. Here comes little Robin. (with you?

Miſ. Ford. How now my Eyas-Muſket, what news.

Rob. My M. Sir John is come in at your back door (Miſt. Ford,) and requeſts your company.

Miſ. Pa. You little Jack-a-lent, have you bin true to us?

Rob. I, i'le be ſworn: my Maſter knows not of your being here: and hath threatned to put me into everla-ſting liberty, if I tell you of it: for he ſwears he'l turn me away.

Miſ. Page. Thou'rt a good boy: this ſecrecy of thine ſhall be a Taylor to thee, and ſhall make thee a new doublet and hoſe. I'le go hide me.

Miſ. Ford. Doe ſo: go tell thy Maſter, I am alone: Miſtreſſe Page, remember you your Cue.

Miſ. Page. I warrant thee, if I doe not act it, hiſſe me.

Miſ. Ford. Go to then: we'l uſe this unwholſome humidity, this groſſe-watry Pumpion; we'l teach him to know Turtles from Jayes. Enter Fal.

Fal. Have I caught thee, my heavenly Jewell? Why now let me die, for I have liv'd long enough: This is the period of my ambition: O this bleſſed hour.

Miſ. Ford. O ſweet Sir John.

Fal. Miſtreſſe Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate (Miſtreſſe Ford) now ſhall I ſin in my wiſh; I would thy Husband were dead, I'le ſpeak it before the beſt Lord, I would make thee my Lady.

Miſ. Ford. I your Lady Sir Iohn? Alaſs, I ſhould be a pittifull Lady.

Fal. Let the Court of France ſhew me ſuch another: I ſee how thine eye would emulate the Diamond: Thou haſt the right arched-beauty of the brow, that becomes the Ship-tyre, the Tyre-valiant, or any Tire of Venetian admittance.

Miſ. Ford. A plain Kerchiffe, Sir Iohn
My brows become nothing elſe, nor that well neither.

Fal. Thou art a tyrant to ſay ſo: thou would'ſt make an abſolute Courtier, and the firm fixure of thy foot would give an excellent motion to thy gate, in a ſemi-circled Farthingale. I ſee what thou wert if Fortune thy foe were not, Nature thy friend; Come, thou canſt not hide it.

Miſ. Ford. Believe me, there's no ſuch thing in me.

Fal. What made me love thee? Let that perſwade thee. There's ſomething extraordinary in thee: Come, I cannot cog, and ſay thou art this and that, like a many of theſe liſping Haw-thorn buds, that come like women in mens apparell, and ſmell like Bucklers-berry in ſimplingtime: I cannot, but I love thee, none but thee; and thou deſerv'ſt it.

Mi.For. Do not betray me Sir, I fear you love M. Page.

Fal. Thou might'ſt as well ſay, I love to walk by the Counter Gate, which is as hatefull to me, as the reek of a Lime-kill.

Miſ. Ford. Well heaven knowes how I love you, and you ſhall one day find it.

Fal. Keep in that mind, I'le deſerve it.

Miſ. Ford. Nay, I muſt tell you, ſo you doe, or elſe I could not be in that mind. Within.

Rob. Miſtreſſe Ford, Miſtreſſe Ford, here's Miſtreſſe Page at the door, ſwearing, and blowing, and looking wildely, and would needs ſpeak with you preſently.

Fal. She ſhall not ſee me, I will enſconce me behind the Arras.

M. Ford. Pray you doe ſo, ſhe's a very tatling woman. What's the matter? how now? Enter Miſ. Page.

Miſ. Page. O Miſtreſſe Ford, what have you done? You'r ſham'd, y'are overthrown, y'are undone for ever.

M. Ford. What's the matter, good Miſtreſſe Page?

M. Page. O well-a-day, Miſtreſs Ford, having an honeſt man to your husband, to give him ſuch cauſe of ſuſpition.

Miſ. Ford. What cauſe of ſuſpition?

Miſ. Page. What cauſe of ſuſpition? Out upon you: How am I miſtook in you?

Miſ. Ford. Why (alas) What's the matter?

Miſ. Page. Your husbands comming hither (woman) with all the Officers in Windſor, to ſearch for a Gentleman, that he ſayes is here now in the houſe; by your conſent to take an ill advantage of his abſence: you are undone.

Miſ. Ford. 'Tis not ſo, I hope.

Miſ. Page. Pray heaven it be not ſo, that you have ſuch a man here: but 'tis moſt certain your husband's comming, with half Windſor at his heels, to ſearch for ſuch a one, I come before to tell you: If you know your ſelf clear, why I am glad of it: but if you have a friend here, convey, convey him out. Be not amaz'd, call all your ſenſes to you, defend your reputation, or bid farewell to your good life for ever.

Miſ. Ford. What ſhall I doe? There is a Gentleman my dear friend: and I fear not mine own ſhame ſo much, as his perill. I had rather then a thouſand pound he were out of the houſe.

Miſ. Page. For ſhame, never ſtand (you had rather, and you had rather:) your husband's here at hand, bethink you of ſome conveyance: in the houſe you cannot hide him. Oh, how have you deceiv'd me? Look, here is a basket, if he be of any reaſonable ſtature, he may creep in here, and throw foul linnen upon him, as if it were going to bucking: Or it is whiting time, ſend him by your two men to Datchet-Meade.

Miſ. Ford. He's too big to go in there: what ſhall I do?

Fal. Let me ſee't, let me ſee't, O let me ſee't:
I'le in, i'le in: Follow your friends counſell, I'le in.

Miſ. Page. What Sir John Falſtaffe, are theſe your Letters Knight?

Fal. I love thee, help me away: let me creep in here: i'le never------

Miſ. Page. Help to cover your Maſter (boy:) Call your men (Miſtreſſe Ford) You diſſembling Knight.

Miſ. Ford. What John, Robert, John; Go take up theſe cloathes here, quickly: Where's the Cowle-ſtaffe? Look how you drumble? Carry them to the Landreſſe in Datchet-Mead: quickly, come.

Ford. 'Pray you come near: if I ſuſpect without cauſe,
Why then make ſport at me, then let me be your jeſt,
I deſerve it: How now? Whether bear you this?

Ser. To the Landreſſe forſooth?

Miſ. Ford. Why, what have you to doe whether they bear it? You were beſt meddle with buck-waſhing.

Ford. Buck? I would I could waſh my ſelf of the Buck: buck, buck, buck, I buck: I warrant you Buck, and of the ſeaſon too; it ſhall appear.

Gentlemen, I have dream'd to night, I'le tell you my dream: here, here, here be my keyes, aſcend my Chambers, ſearch, ſeek, find out: I'le warrant we'l unkennell the Fox. Let me ſtop this way firſt: ſo, now uncape.

Page. Good Maſter Ford, be contented:
You wrong your ſelf too much.

Ford. True (Maſter Page) up Gentlemen: you ſhall ſee ſport anon: follow me Gentlemen.

Evan.

Evan. Th s is ferry fantaſticall humours and jealouſies.

Cains. By gar, 'tis no-the faſhion of France; it is not jealous in France.---- Exeunt.

Miſ. Page. Is there not a double excellency in this?

Miſ. Ford. I know not which pleaſes me better, that my Husband is deceived, or Sir John.

Miſ. Page. What a taking was he in, when your husband ask't who was in the basket?

Miſ. Ford. I am half afraid he will have need of waſhing: ſo throwing him into the water will doe him a benefit.

Miſ. Page. Hang him diſhoneſt raſcall: I would all of the ſame ſtrain, were in the ſame diſtreſſe.

Miſ. Ford. I think my husband hath ſome ſpeciall ſuſpition of Falſtaffe's being here: I never ſaw him ſo groſſe in his jealouſie till now.

Miſ. Page. I will lay a plot to try that, and we will yet have more tricks with Falſtaffe: his diſſolute diſeaſe will ſcarce obey this medicine.

Miſ. Ford. Shall we ſend that fooliſh Carrion, Miſt. Quickly to him, and excuſe his throwing into the water, and give him another hope, to betray him to another puniſhment?

Miſ. Page. We'l doe it: let him be ſent for to morrow by eight a clock to have amends. Enter All.

Ford. I cannot find him: may be the knave bragg'd of that he could not compaſſe.

Miſ. Page. Heard you that?

Miſ. Ford. You uſe me well, Maſt. Ford? doe you?

Ford. I, I, I doe ſo.

Miſ. Page. Heaven make you better then your thoughts.

Ford. Amen.

Mi. Page. You doe your ſelf mighty wrong (M. Ford)

Ford. I, I: I muſt bear it.

Ev.an If there be any pody in the houſe, and in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the preſſes: heaven forgive my ſins.

Cains. By gar, nor I too: there is no-bodies.

Page. Fie, fie, M. Ford, are you not aſham'd? What ſpirit, what devil ſuggeſts this imagination? I would not ha your diſtemper in this kind, for the wealth of Windſor caſtle

Ford. 'Tis my fault (M. Page) I ſuffer for it.

Evan. You ſuffer for a pad conſcience: your wife is as honeſt a o'mans, as I will deſires among five thouſand, and five hundred too.

Cai. By gar, I ſee 'tis an honeſt woman.

Ford. Well, I promis'd you a dinner: come, come, walk in the Park, I pray you pardon me: I will hereafter make known to you why I have done this. Come wife, come Mi. Page, I pray you pardon me. Pray hartly pardon me.

Page. Let's go in Gentlemen, but (truſt me) we'l mock him: I doe invite you to morrow morning to my houſe to breakfaſt: after we'll a Birding together, I have a fine Hawk for the buſh. Shall it be ſo:

Ford. Any thing.

Ev. If there is one, I ſhall make two in the Company.

Cai. If there be one or two, I ſhall make-a the turd.

Ford. Pray you go, M. Page.

Evan. I pray you now remembrance to morrow on the lowſie knave, mine Hoſt.

Cai. Dat is good by gar, with all my heart.

Evan. A lowſie knave, to have his gibes, and his mockeries.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Fenton, Anne Page, Shallow, Slender, Quickly, Page, Miſ. Page.

Fen. I ſee I cannot get thy Fathers love,
Therefore no more, turn me to him (ſweet Nan.)

Anne. Alaſs, how then?

Fen. Why thou muſt be thy ſelf.
He doth object, I am too great of birth,
And that my ſtate being gall'd with my expence,
I ſeek to heal it onely by his wealth.
Beſides theſe, other barrs he layes before me,
My Riots paſt, my wild Societies,
And tells me 'tis a thing impoſſible
I ſhould love thee, but as a property.

Anne. May be he tells you true.

Fen. No, heaven ſo ſpeed me in my time to come,
Albeit I will confeſſe, thy Fathers wealth
Was the firſt motive that I woo'd the (Anne:)
Yet wooing thee, I found thee of more value
Then ſtamps in Gold, or ſummes in ſealed bags:
And 'tis the very riches of thy ſelf,
That now I aim at.

An. Gentle M. Fenton,
Yet ſeek my Fathers love, ſtill ſeek it ſir,
If oportunity and humbleſt ſuit
Cannot attain it, why then hark you hither.

Shal. Break their talk Miſtreſſe Quickly,
My Kinſman ſhall ſpeak for himſelf.

Slen. I'le make a ſhaft or a bolt on't, 'd'slid 'tis but (venturing.

Shal. Be not diſmaid.

Slen. No, ſhe ſhall not diſmay me:
I care not for that, but I am affeard.

Qui. Hark ye, M. Slender would ſpeak a word with you.

An. I come to him. This is my Fathers choice:
O, what a world of vilde ill-favour'd faults
Looks handſome in three hundred pounds a year?

Qui. And how do's good Maſter Fenton?
Pray you a word with you.

Shal. She's comming: to her Coz.
O boy, thou hadſt a Father.

Slen. I had a Father (M. An.) my Uncle can tell you good jeſts of him: pray you Uncle, tell M. An. the jeſt how my Father ſtole two Geeſe out of a Pen, good Uncle.

Shal. Miſtreſſe Anne, my Couſin loves you.

Slen. I that I doe, as well as I love any woman in Glocesterſhire.

Shal. He will maintain you like a Gentlewoman.

Slen. I that I will, come cut and long-tail, under the degree of a Squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifty pounds Jointure,

Anne. Good Maſter Shallow, let him wope for himſelf.

Shal. Marry I thank you for it: I thank you for that; good comfort: ſhe calls you (Coz) I'le leave you.

Anne. Now Maſter Slender.

Slen. Now good Miſtreſſe Anne.

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will? Od's-heart-lings, that's a pretty jeſt indeed: I ne're made my Will yet, (I thank Heaven:) I am not ſuch a ſickly creature; I give Heaven praiſe.

Anne. I mean (M. Slender) what would you with me?
Slen. Truly, for mine own part, I would little or nothing with you: your Father and my Uncle hath made motions: if it be my luck, ſo: if not happy man be his dole, they can tell you how things go, better then I can: you may ask your Father, here he comes.
Page. Now Maſter Slender; Love him daughter Anne.
Why how now? What do's Maſter Fenton here?
You wrong me Sir, thus ſtill to haunt my houſe.
I told you Sir, my daughter is diſpos'd of.
Fen. Nay Maſter Page, be not impatient.
Miſ. Page. Good Maſter Fenton, come not to my child.
Page. She is no match for you.
Fen. Sir, will you hear me?
Page. No, good Maſter Fenton.
Come Maſter Shallow: Come Son Slender, in;
Knowing my mind, you wrong me, Maſter Fenton.
Qui. Speak to Miſtris Page.
Fen. Good Miſtris Page, for that I love your daughter
In ſuch a righteous faſhion as I doe,
Perforce, againſt all checks, rebukes, and manners,
I muſt advance the colours of my love,
And not retire. Let me haye your good will.
Anne. Good Mother, doe not marry me to yon fool.
Miſ. Page. I mean it not, I ſeek you a better huſband.
Qui. That's my Maſter, Maſter Doctor.
Anne. Alaſs I had rather be ſet quick i'th earth,
And bowl'd to death with Turnips.
Miſ. Page. Come, trouble not your ſelf good Maſter Fenton, I will not be your friend, nor enemy:
My daughter will, I queſtion how ſhe loves you,
And as I find her, ſo am I affected:
Till then, farewell Sir, ſhe muſt needs go in,
Her Father will be angry.
Fen. Farewell gentle Miſtris: farewell Nan.
Qui. This is my doing now; Nay, ſaid I, will you caſt away your child on a Fool, and a Phyſician?
Look on Maſter Fenton, this is my doing.
Fen. I thank thee: and I pray thee once to night,
Give my ſweet Nan this Ring: there's for thy pains. Exit.
Qui. Now heaven ſend thee good fortune, a kind heart he hath: a woman would run through fire and water for ſuch a kind heart. But yet, I would my Maſter had Miſtris Anne, or I would Maſter Slender had her: or (in ſooth) I would Maſter Fenton had her; I will do what I can for them all three, for ſo I have promis'd, and I'le be as good as my word, but ſpeciouſly for Maſter Fenton. Well, I muſt of another errand to Sir John Falſtaffe from my two Miſtreſſes: what a beaſt am I to ſlack it. Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falſtaffe, Bardolfe, Quickly, Ford.
Fal. Bardolfe I ſay.
Bar. Here Sir.
Fal. Go, fetch me a quart of Sack, put a toſt in't. Have I liv'd to be carried in a Basket like a barrow of butchers Offall; and to be thrown in the Thames? Well, if I be ſerv'd ſuch a another trick, I'le have my brains tane out and butter'd, and give them to a dog for a New-years gift. The rogues ſlighted me into the river with as little remorſe, as they would have drown'd a blind bitches Puppies, fifteen i'th litter: and you may know by my ſize, that I have a kind of alacrity in ſinking: if the bottom were as deep as hell, I ſhould down. I had been drown'd, but that the ſhore was ſhelvy and ſhallow: a death that I abhorre: for the water ſwells a man; and what a thing ſhould I have been, when I had been ſwell'd? I ſhould have been a Mountain of Mummy.
Bar. Here's Miſtris Quickly Sir, to ſpeak with you.
Fal. Come, let me poure in ſom Sack to the Thames water: for my belly's as cold as if I had ſwallow'd ſnowballs, for pills to cool the reins. Call her in.
Bar. Come in woman. Enter Quickly.
Qui. By your leave: I cry you mercy?
Give your worſhip good morrow.
Fal. Take away theſe Challices:
Go, brew me a pottle of Sack finely.
Band. With Egges, Sir?
Fal. Simple of it ſelf: I'le no Pullet-Sperme in my brewage. How now?
Qui. Marry Sir, I come to your worſhip from Mi. Ford.
Fal. Miſtris Ford? I have had Ford enough: I was thrown into the Ford; I have my belly full of Ford.
Qui. Alaſs the day (good-heart) that was not her fault: ſhe do's ſo take on with her men; they miſtook their erection. (promiſe.
Fal. So did I mine, to build upon a fooliſh Womans
Qui. Well, ſhe laments ſir for it, that it would yern your heart to ſee it: her husband goes this morning a birding; ſhe deſires you once more to come to her, between eight and nine: I muſt carry her word quickly, ſhe'll make you amends I warrant you.
Fal. Well, I will viſit her, tell her ſo; and bid her think what a man is: Let her conſider his frailty, and then judge of my merit.
Qui. I will tell her.
Fal. Doe ſo. Between nine and ten ſaiſt thou?
Qui. Eight and nine Sir.
Fal. Well, be gone: I will not miſſe her.
Qui. Peace be with you Sir. Exit.
Fal. I marvell I hear not of Maſter Broom: he ſent me word to ſtay within: I like his money well.
Oh, here he comes. Enter Ford.
Ford. Bleſſe you Sir.
Fal. Now Maſter Broom, you come to know what hath paſt between me and Fords wife.
Ford. That indeed (Sir John) is my buſineſſe.
Fal. Maſter Broom I will not lie to you,
I was at her houſe the hour ſhe appointed me.
Ford. And ſped you Sir?
Fal. Very ill-favour'dly Maſter Broom.
Ford. How Sir, did ſhe change her determination?
Fal. No (M. Broom) but the peaking Cornuto her huſband (M. Broom) dwelling in a continuall larum of jelouſie, comes me in the inſtant of our encounter, after we had embrac'd, kis'd, proteſted, & (as it were) ſpoke the prologue of our Comedy: and at his heels, a rabble of his companions, thither provoked and inſtigated by his diſtemper, and (forſooth) to ſearch his houſe for his wives love.
Ford. What? While you were there?
Fal. While I was there.
Ford. And did he ſearch for you, & could not find you?
Fal. You ſhall hear. As good luck would have it, comes in one Miſtris Page, gives intelligence of Fords approach: and in her invention, and Fords wives diſtraction, they convey'd me into a Buck-basket.

Ford.

Ford. A Buck-basket?

Fal. Yea: a Buck-basket: ram'd me in with foul Shirts and Smocks, Socks, foul Stockings, greaſie Napkins, that (Maſter Broom) there was the rankeſt compound of villanous ſmell, that ever offended noſtrill.

Ford. And how long lay you there;

Fal. Nay, you ſhall hear (Maſter Broom) what I have ſuffered, to bring this woman to evil, for your good: Being thus cram'd in the basket, a couple of Lords Knaves, his hindes were call'd forth by their Miſtris, to carry me in the name of foul Cloathes to Datchet-lane: they took me on their ſhoulders: met the jealous Knave their Maſter in the door; who ask'd them once or twice what they had in their Basket? I quak'd for fear, leaſt the Lunatick Knave, would have ſearch'd it: but Fate (ordaining he ſhould be a Cuckold) held his hand: well, on went he for a ſearch, and away went I for foul Cloathes: But mark the ſequell (Maſter Broom) I ſuffered the pangs of three ſeverall deaths: firſt, an intollerable fright, to be detected with a jealous rotten Bell-weather: next, to be compaſs'd like a good Bilbo in the circumference of a Peck, hilt to point, heel to head. And then to be ſtopt in like a ſtrong diſtillation with ſtinking Cloathes, that fretted in their own greaſe: think of that, a man of my Kidney; think of that that am as ſubject to heat as Butter: a man of continuall diſſolution, and thaw: it was a miracle to ſcape ſuffocation. And in the height of this Bath (when I was more then halfe ſtew'd in greaſe (like a Dutch-diſh) to be thrown into the Thames, and cool'd, glowing hot, in that ſerge like a Horſeſhoe; think of that: hiſſing hot, think of that (Maſter Broom.)

Ford. In good ſadneſſe Sir, I am ſorry, that for my ſake you have ſuffered all this. My ſuit then is deſperate: You'll undertake her no more?

Fal. Maſter Broom: I will be thrown into Etna, as I have been into Thames, ere I will leave her thus; her husband is this morning gone a birding: I have received from her another ambaſſie of meeting: 'twixt eight and nine is the hour (Maſter Broom,)

Ford. 'Tis paſt eight already Sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then addreſſe me to my appointment: Come to me at your convenient leiſure, and you ſhall know how I ſpeed: and the concluſion ſhall be crowned with your enjoying her: adiew, you ſhall have her (Maſter Broom) Maſter Broom, you ſhall cuckold Ford. Exit.

Ford. Hum: ha? is this a viſion? is this a dream? doe I ſleep? Maſter Ford awake, awake Maſter Ford; there's a hole made in you beſt coat (Maſter Ford:) this 'tis to be married; this 'tis to have Linnen, and Buck-baskets: Well, I will proclaim my ſelf what I am: I will now take the Leacher: he is at my houſe: he cannot ſcape me: 'tis impoſſible he ſhould: he cannot creep into a halfe-penny purſe, nor into a Pepper-box: But leaſt the Devil that guides him, ſhould aide him, I will ſearch impoſſible places: though what I am, I cannot avoid; yet to be what I would not, ſhall not make me tame: If I have horns, to make one mad, let the proverbe go with me, I'le be horn-mad.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Miſtris Page, Quickly, William, Evans.

Miſ. Page. Is he at M. Fords already think'ſt thou?

Qui. Sure he is by this; or will be preſently; but truly he is very couragious mad, about his throwing into the water. Miſtris Ford deſires you to come ſuddenly.

Miſ. Page. I'le be with her by and by: I'le but bring my young man here to Schoole: look where his Maſter comes, 'tis a playing day I ſee: how now Sir Hugh, no Schoole to day?

Eva. No: Maſter Slender is let the Boyes leave to play.

Qui. 'Bleſſing of his heart.

Miſ. Page. Sir Hugh, my Husband ſayes my Son profits nothing in the world at his Book: I pray you aske him ſome queſtions in his Accidence.

Eva. Come hither William; hold up your head; come.

Miſ. Page. Come ſirrha; hold up your head; anſwer your Maſter, be not afraid.

Evan. William, how many Numbers is in Nouns?

Will. Two.

Qui. Truly, I thought there had been one Number more, becauſe they ſay od's-Nowns.

Evan. Peace, your tatlings. What is (Fair) William?

Will. Pulcher.

Qui. Poulcats? there are fairer things then Poulcats, ſure.

Evan. You are a very ſimplicity o'man: I pray you peace. What is (Lapis) William?

Will. A Stone.

Evan. And what is a Stone (William?)

Will. A Peeble.

Evan. No; it is Lapis: I pray you remember in your prain.

Will. Lapis.

Evan. That is a good William: what is he (William) that do's lend Articles.

Will. Articles are borrowed of the Pronoun; and be thus declined, Singulariter nominativo, hic, hæc, hoc.

Eva. Nominativo hig, hag, hog: pray you mark: Genitivo hujus: Well, what is your Accuſative caſe.

Will. Accuſative hinc.

Evan. I pray you have your remembrance (child) Accuſativo, hing, hang, hog.

Qui. Hang-hog, is Latine for Bacon, I warrant you.

Eva. Leave your prabbles (o'man) What is the Focative caſe (William?)

Will. O, Vocativo, O.

Evan. Remember Welliam, Focative, is caret.

Qui. And that's a good root.

Qui. O'man, forbear.

Miſ. Page. Peace.

Evan. What is your Genitive caſe plurall (William?)

Will. Genitive caſe?

Evan. I.

Will. Genitive horum, harum, horum.

Qui. 'Vengeance of Ginyes caſe; fie on her: never name her (child) if ſhe be a whore.

Eva. For ſhame o'man.

Qui. You doe ill to teach the child ſuch words: he teaches him to hic, and to hac; which they'll doe faſt enough of themſelves, and to call horum; fie upon you.

Evan. O man, art thou Lunaties? Haſt thou no underſtandings for thy Caſes, and the numbers of the Genders? Thou art as fooliſh Chriſtian creatures as I would deſires.

Miſ. Page. Prethee hold thy peace.

Evan. Shew me now (William) ſome declenſions of your Pronouns.

Will. Forſooth, I have forgot.

Eva. It is Qui, que, quod; if you forget your Quies, your Ques, and your Quods, you muſt be preeches: Go your wayes and play, go.

M. Pa. He is a better Schollar then I thought he was.

Eva. He is a good ſprag-memory: Farewell M. Pa.

Miſ. Page. Adieu good Sir Hugh.
Get you home boy, Come we ſtay too long. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falſtaffe. Miſ. Ford, Miſ. Page, Servants, Ford, Page, Caius, Evans, Shallow.

Fal. Miſtris Ford, your ſorrow hath eaten up my ſufferance; I ſee you are obſequious in your love, and I profeſſe requitall to a hairs breadth, not onely Miſtris Ford, in the ſimple office of love, but in all the accouſtrement, complement, and ceremony of it: but are you ſure of your husband now?

Miſ. Ford. He's a birding (ſweet ſir John.)

Miſ. Page. What hoa, goſſip Ford: what hoa.

Miſ. Ford. Step into th'chamber, Sir John. Enter.

Miſ. Page. How now (ſweet heart) who's at home beſides your ſelf?

Miſ. Ford. Why none but mine own people.

Miſ. Page. Indeed?

Miſ. Ford. No certainly: ſpeak louder.

Miſ. Page. Truly, I am ſo glad you have no body here.

Miſ. Ford. Why?

Miſ. Page. Why woman, your husband is in his old lines again: he ſo takes on yonder with my husband, ſo rails againſt all married mankind; ſo curſes all Eves daughters, of what complexion ſoever; and ſo buffets himſelf on the forehead: crying peere-out, peere-out, that any madneſſe I ever yet beheld, ſeem'd but tameneſſe, civility, and patience to this his diſtemper he is in now: I am glad the fat Knight is not here.

Miſ. Ford. Why do's he talk of him?

Miſ. Page. Of none but him, and ſwears he was carried out the laſt time he ſearch'd for him, in a Basket: Proteſts to my husband he is now here, and hath drawn him and the reſt of their company from their ſport, to make another experiment of his ſuſpition: But I am glad the Knight is not here; now he ſhall ſee his own foolery.

Miſ. Ford. How near is he Miſtris Page?

Miſ. Page. Hard by, at ſtreets end, he will be here anon.

Miſ. Ford. I am undone, the Knight is here.

Miſ. Page. Why then you are utterly ſham'd, and he's but a dead man. What a woman are you? away with him, away with him: Better ſhame then murther.

Miſ. Ford. Which way ſhould he go? How ſhould I beſtow him? Shall I put him into the basket again?

Fal. No, i'le come no more i'th Basket: Enter.
May I not go out ere he come?

Miſ. Page. Alaſs: three of Maſter Fords brothers watch the door with Piſtolls, that none ſhall iſſue out: otherwiſe you might ſlip away ere he came: But what make you here?

Fal. What ſhall I do? I'le creep up into the chimney.

Miſ. Ford. There they alwayes uſe to diſcharge their Birding-pieces: creep into the Kill-hole.

Fal. Where is it?

Miſ. Ford. He will ſeek there on my word: Neither Preſſe, Coffer, Cheſt, Trunk, Well, Vault, but he hath an abſtract for the remembrance of ſuch places, and goes to them by his Note: There is no hiding you in the houſe.

Fal. I'le go out then.

Miſ. Ford. If you go out in your own ſemblance, you die Sir John, unleſſe you go out diſguis'd. How might we diſguiſe him?

Miſ. Page. Alaſs-the-day I know not, there is no womans Gown big enough for him: otherwiſe he might put on a Hat, a Muffler, a Kerchiffe, and ſo eſcape.

Fal. Good hearts deviſe ſomething: any extremity, rather then a miſchief.

Miſ. Ford. My Maids Aunt, the fat woman of Brainford, has a Gown above.

Miſ. Page. On my word it will ſerve him: ſhe's as big as he is: and there's her thrum'd Hat, and her Muffler too: run up Sir John.

Miſ. Ford. Go, go, ſweet Sir John: Miſtris Page and I will look ſome linnen for your head.

Miſ. Page. Quick, quick, we'll come dreſſe you ſtraight: put on the Gown the while. Exit.

Miſ. Ford. I would my husband would meet him in this ſhape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brainford: he ſwears ſhe's a Witch, forbad her my houſe, and hath threatned to beat her.

Miſ. Page. Heaven guide him to thy husbands cudgell: and the devil guide his cudgell afterwards.

Miſ. Ford. But is my Husband comming?

Miſ. Page. I in good ſadneſſe is he, and talks of the Basket too, howſoever he hath had intelligence.

Miſ. Ford. We'll try that; for I'le appoint my men to carry the basket again, to meet him at the door with it, as they did laſt time.

Miſ. Page. Nay, but he'll be here preſently: let's go dreſſe him like the Witch of Brainford.

Miſ. Ford. I'le firſt direct my men, what they ſhall doe with the Basket: Go up, I'le bring linnen for him ſtraight.

Miſ. Page. Hang him diſhoneſt Varlet,
We cannot miſuſe him enough:
We'll leave a proof by that which we will doe,
Wives may be merry, and yet honeſt too:
We doe not act, that often jeſt and laugh,
'Tis old, but true, ſtill Swine eats all the draugh.

Miſ. Ford. Go Sirs, take the Basket again on your ſhoulders: your Maſter is hard at door: if he bid you ſet it down, obey him: quickly, diſpatch. Enter Ser.

1 Ser. Come, come, take it up.

2 Ser. Pray heaven it be not full of the Knight again.

1 Ser. I hope not, I had as liefe bear ſo much Lead.

Ford. I, but if it prove true (Maſter Page) have you any way then to unfool me again? Set down the Basket villain: ſomebody call my wife: Youth in a Basket: Oh you Panderly Raſcalls, there's a knot: a ging, a pack, a conſpiracy againſt me: Now ſhall the devil be ſham'd. What Wife I ſay: Come, come forth: behold what honeſt neſt clothes you ſend for to bleaching.

Page. Why, this paſſes Mr. Ford: you are not to go loole any longer, you muſt be pinnion'd.

Evans. Why, this is Lunaticks: this is mad as a mad dog.

Shal. Indeed M. Ford, this is not well indeed.

Ford. So ſay I too ſir, come hither Miſtris Ford, Miſtris Ford, the honeſt woman, the modeſt wife, the vertuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband: I ſuſpect without cauſe (Miſtris) do I?

Miſ. Ford. Heaven be my witneſs you do, if you ſuſpect me in any diſhoneſty.

Ford. Well ſaid brazen-face, hold it out: Come forth ſirrah.

Miſ. Ford. Are you not aſham'd, let the cloathes alone.

Ford. I ſhall find you anon.

Evans. 'Tis unreaſonable; will you take up your wives cloathes? Come, away.

Ford. Empty the basket I ſay.

Miſ. Ford. Why man, why?

Ford. Maſter Page, as I am a man, there was one convey'd out of my houſe yeſterday in this basket: why may not he be there again? in my houſe I am ſure he is: my intelligence is true, my jealouſie is reaſonable, pluck me out all the linnen.

Miſ. Ford. If you find a man there, he ſhall die a Fleas death.

Shal. By my fidelity this is not well Mr. Ford: This wrongs you.

Evan. M. Ford, you muſt pray, and not follow the imaginations of your own heart: this is jealouſies.

Ford. Well, hee's not here I ſeek for.

Page. No, nor no where elſe but in your brain.

Ford. Help to ſearch my houſe this one time: if I find not what I ſeek, ſhew no colour of my extremity: Let me for ever be your Table-ſport: Let them ſay of me as jealous as Ford, that ſearch'd a hollow Wall-nut for his Wives Lemman. Satisfie me once more, once more ſearch with me.

Miſ. Ford. What hoa (Miſtris Page) come you and the old Woman down: my husband will come into the Chamber.

Ford. Old woman? what old woman's that?

Miſ. Ford. Why it is my Maids Aunt of Brainford.

Ford. A Witch, a Queen, an old cozening Queen: Have I not forbid her my houſe? She comes of errands do's ſhe? We are ſimple men, we do not know what's brought to paſs under the profeſſion of Fortune-telling. She works by Charmes, by Spels, by th'Figure, and ſuch dawbry, as this is, beyond our Element: we know nothing. Come down you Witch, you Hag you, come down I ſay.

Miſ. Ford. Nay, good ſweet husband, good Gentlemen, let him not ſtrike the old Woman. Enter Fal.

Miſ. Page. Come Mother Prat, Come give me your hand.

Ford. I'le Prat her: Out of my door you Witch, you Hag, you Baggage, you Poulcat, you Runnion, out, out: I'le conjure you, I'le Fortune-tell you. Exit Fal.

Miſ. Page Are you not aſham'd?
I think you have kill'd the poor woman.

Miſ. Ford. Nay he will do it; 'tis a goodly credit for you.

Ford. Hang her Witch.

Evans. By yea, and no, I think the o'man is a Witch indeed: I like not when a o'man has a great peard; I ſpie a great peard under his Muffler.

Ford. Will you follow Gentlemen, I beſeech you follow: ſee but the iſſue of my jealouſie: If I cry out thus upon no trail, never truſt me when I open again.

Page. Let's obey his humour a little further:
Come Gentlemen. Exeunt.

Miſ. Page. Truſt me he beat him moſt pitifully.

Miſ. Ford. Nay by th'Maſs that he did not: he beat him moſt unpitifully, me thought.

Miſt. Page. I'le have the cudgell hallow'd, and hung o're the Altar, it hath done meritorious ſervice.

Miſt. Ford. What think you? May we with the warrant of woman-hood, and the witneſs of a good conſcience, purſue him with any further revenge?

M. Page. The ſpirit of wantonneſſe is ſure ſcar'd out of him; if the Devil have him not in fee-ſimple, with fine and recovery, he will never, I think, in the way of waſte, attempt us again.

Miſt. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how we have ſerved him?

Miſt. Page. Yes, by all means: if it be but to ſcrape the figures out of your husbands brain: if they can find in their hearts, the poor unvertuous fat Knight ſhall be any further afflicted, we two will ſtill be the miniſters.

Miſt. Ford. I'le warrant they'l have him publickly ſham'd, and me thinks there would be no period to the jeſt, ſhould he not be publickly ſham'd.

Miſt. Page. Come to the Forge with it, then ſhape it: I would not have things coole. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Hoſt and Bardolfe.

Bar. Sir, the Germane deſires to have three of your horſes: the Duke himſelf will be to morrow at Court, and they are going to meet him.

Hoſt. What Duke ſhould that be comes ſo ſecretly? I hear not of him in the Court: let me ſpeak with the Gentlemen, they ſpeak Engliſh.

Bar. Sir? I'le call them to you.

Hoſt. They ſhall have my horſes, but I'le make them pay: I'le ſawce them, they have had my houſes a week at command: I have turn'd away my other gueſts, they muſt come off, I'le ſawce them, come. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Page, Ford, Miſtris Page, Miſtris Ford, and Evans.

Evans. 'Tis one of the beſt diſcretions of a o'man as ever I did look upon.

Page. And did he ſend you both theſe Letters at an inſtant?

Miſt. Page. Within a quarter of an hour.

Ford. Pardon me (wife) henceforth do what thou wilt:
I rather will ſuſpect the Sun with gold,
Then thee with wantonneſs; Now doth thy honor ſtand

(In

(In him that was of late an Heretick)
As firm of faith.
Page. 'Tis well, 'tis well, no more:
Be not extream in ſubmiſſion, as in offence,
But let our plot go forward: Let our Wives
Yet once again (to make us publick ſport)
Appoint a meeting with this old fat fellow,
Where we may take him, and diſgrace him for it.
Ford. There is no better way then that they ſpoke of.
Page. How? to ſend him word they'll meet him in the Park at midnight? Fie, fie, he'll never come.
Evan. You ſay he hath been thrown into the River: and has been grievouſly peaten, as an old o'man: me thinks there ſhould be terrours in him, that he ſhould not come: Me thinks his fleſh is puniſh'd, he ſhall have no deſires.
Page. So think I too.
M. Ford. Deviſe but how you'll uſe him when he comes,
And let us two deviſe to bring him thither.
M. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the Hunter (ſometime a Keeper here in Windſor Forreſt)
Doth all the Winter time at ſtill of midnight
Walk round about an Oake, with great ragg'd horns,
And there he blaſts the tree, and takes the Cattel,
And makes milch-kine yield blood, and ſhakes a chain
In a moſt hideous and dreadfull manner.
You have heard of ſuch a ſpirit, and well you know
The ſuperſtitious idle-headed-Eld
Receiv'd, and did deliver to our age
This tale of Herne the Hunter for a truth.
Page. Why yet there want not many that doe fear
In deep of night to walk by this Hernes Oake:
But what of this?
Miſ. Ford. Marry this is our device,
That Falſtaffe at that Oake ſhall meet with us.
Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'l come,
And in this ſhape when you have brought him thither,
What ſhall be done with him? What is your plot?
M. Page. That likewiſe have we thought upon, and Nan Page (my daughter) and my little Son, (thus:
And three or four more of their growth, we'l dreſſe
Like Urchins, Ouphes, and Fairies, green and white,
With rounds of waxen Tapers on their heads.
And Rattles in their hands; upon a ſudden,
As Falſtaffe, ſhe, and I, are newly met,
Let them from forth a Saw-pit ruſh at once
With ſome diffuſed ſong: Upon their ſight
We two, in great amazedneſſe will flie:
Then let them all encircle him about,
And Fairy-like to pinch the unclean Knight;
And aske him why that hour of Fairy Revell,
In their ſo ſacred paths, he dares to tread
In ſhape prophane.
Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the ſuppoſed Fairies pinch him ſound,
And burn him with their Tapers.
M. Pa. The truth being known,
We'll all preſent our ſelves; diſ-horn the ſpirit,
And mock him home to Windſor.
Ford. The Children muſt
Be practis'd well to this, or they'll ne're doe't.
Evan. I will teach the children their behaviours: and I will be like a Jack-a-napes alſo, to burn the Knight with my Taber.
Ford. That will be excellent,
I'le go buy them vizards.
Miſt. Page. My Nan ſhall be the Queen of all the Fairies, finely attired in a robe of white.
Page. That ſilk would I go buy, and in that time
ſhall M. Slender ſteal my Nan away,
And marry her at Eaton: go, ſend to Falſtaffe ſtraight.
Ford. Nay, I'le to him again in name of Broom,
He'll tell me all his purpoſe: ſure he'l come.
Mi. Pa. Fear not you that: Go get us properties
And tricking for your Fairies.
Evans. Let us about it,
It is admirable pleaſures, and ferry honeſt knaveries.
Miſ. Page. Go Miſt. Ford,
Send quickly to Sir John, to know his mind:
I'le to the Doctor, he hath my good will,
And none but he to marry with Nan Page:
That Slender (though well landed) is an Ideot:
And he, my Husband beſt of all affects:
The Doctor is well moneyed, and his friends
Potent at Court: he, none but he ſhall have her,
Though twenty thouſand worthier come to crave her.
Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Hoſt, Simple, Falſtaffe, Bardolfe, Evans, Caius, Quickly.

Hoſt. What would'ſt thou have? (Boor) what? (thick skin) ſpeak, breathe, diſcuſſe: brief, ſhort, quick, ſnap.
Sim. Marry ſir, I come to ſpeak with Sir John Falſtaffe from M. Slender.
Hoſt. There's his Chamber, his Houſe, his Caſtle, his Standing-bed and Truckle-bed: 'tis painted about with the ſtory of the Prodigall, freſh and new: go, knock and call: he'll ſpeak like an Anthropophaginian unto thee: Knock I ſay.
Sim. There's an old woman, a fat woman gone up into his Chamber: I'le be ſo bold as ſtay ſir till ſhe come down: I come to ſpeak with her indeed.
Hoſt. Ha? a fat woman? The Knight may be robb'd: I'le call, Bully-Knight, Bully-Sir John: ſpeak from thy Lungs Military: Art thou there? It is thine Hoſt, thine Epheſian calls.
Fal. How now, mine Hoſt?
Hoſt. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar tarries the comming down of thy fat woman: Let her deſcend (Bully) let her deſcend: my Chambers are honourable: Fie, privacy? Fie.
Fal. There was (mine Hoſt) an old fat woman even now with me, but ſhe's gone.
Sim. Pray you ſir, was't not the wiſe woman of Brainford?
Fal. I marry was it (Muſſel-ſhell) what would you with her?
Sim. My Maſter (Sir) my Maſter Slender ſent to her, ſeeing her go through the ſtreets, to know (Sir) whether one Nim (Sir) that beguiled him of a chain, had the chain, or no.
Fal. I ſpake with the old woman about it.
Sim. And what ſayes ſhe, I pray Sir?
Fal. Marry ſhe ſayes, that the very ſame man that beguil'd Maſter Slender of his Chain, cozen'd him of it.
Simp. I would I could have ſpoken with the woman her her ſelfe, I had other things to have ſpoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let us know.

Hoſt. I, come: quick.

Fal. I may not conceal them (ſir.)

Hoſt. Conceal them, or thou di'ſt.

Sim. Why ſir, they were nothing but about Miſtris Anne Page, to know if it were my Maſters fortune to have her or no.

Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.

Sim. What Sir.

Fal. To have her, or no: go; ſay the woman told me ſo.

Sim. May I be bold to ſay ſo ſir?

Fal. I ſir: like who more bold.

Sim. I thank your worſhip: I ſhall make my maſter glad with theſe tidings.

Hoſt. Thou art clarkly: thou art clarkly (Sir John) was there a wiſe woman with thee?

Fal. I, that there was (mine Hoſt) one that hath taught me more wit, then ever I learn'd before in my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning. Enter Bardolph.

Bar. Out alas (ſir) cozonage: meer cozonage.

Hoſt. Where be my horſes? ſpeak well of them varletto.

Bar. Run away with the cozoners: for ſo ſoon as I came beyond Eaton, they threw me of from behinde one of them in a ſlow of myre; and ſet ſpurres, and away; like three Germane-Devils; three Doctor Fauſtuſſes.

Hoſt. They are gone but to meet the Duke (villaine) do not ſay they be fled: Germanes are honeſt men.

Enter Evans.

Evan. Where is mine Hoſt?

Hoſt. What is the matter ſir?

Evan. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to town, tells me there is three Cozen-Jermans, that has cozen'd all the Hoſts of Readins, of Maidenhead; of Cole-Brooke, of horſes and money: I tell you for good wil (look you) you are wiſe, and full of gibes, and vlouting-ſtocks: and 'tis not convenient you ſhould be cozoned. Fare you well. Exit. Enter Caius.

Cai. Ver' is mine Hoſt de Jarteer?

Hoſt. Here (Maſter Doctor) in perplexity and doubtfull delemma.

Cai. I cannot tell vat is dat: but it is tell-a-me, dat you make a grand preparation for a Duke de Jamany: by my trot: der is no Duke dat the Court is know, to come: I tell you for good will: adieu. Exit.

Hoſt. Huy and cry (villane) goe: aſſiſt me Knight, I am undone: flye, run: hu and cry (villaine) I am undone Exit.

Fal. I would all the world might be cozen'd, for I have been cozened and beaten too: if it ſhould come to the ear of the Court, how I have been transform'd; and how my transformation hath been waſh'd and cudgel'd, they would melt me out of my fat, drop by drop, and liquor Fiſhermens boots with me: I warrant they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as creſt-faln as a dri'd Pear: I never proſper'd, ſince I forſwore my ſelf at Primero: well, if my wind were but long enough; I would repent: Now? whence come you?

Enter Quickly.

Qui. From the two parties forſooth.

Fal. The Devill take one party, and his Dam the other: and ſo they ſhall be both beſtow'd; I have ſuffer'd more for their ſakes; more than the villanous inconſtancy of mans diſpoſition is able to bear.

Qui. And have not they ſuffer'd? Yes, I warrant, ſpecioufly one of them; Miſtris Ford (good heart) is beaten black and blew, that you cannot ſee a white ſpot about her.

Fal. What tell'ſt thou me of black and blew? I was beaten my ſelf into all the colours of the Rain-bow: and I was like to be apprehended for the Witch of Brainford, but that my admirable dexterity of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old Woman deliver'd me, the Knave Conſtable had ſet me ith' Stocks, ith' common Stocks for a Witch.

Qui. Sir, let me ſpeak with you in your Chamber, you ſhall hear how things go, and (I warrant) to your content: here is a letter will ſay ſomewhat: (good hearts) what a-do here is to bring you together? Sure one of you do's not ſerve heaven well, that you are ſo croſs'd.

Fal. Come up into my Chamber. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Fenton, Hoſt.

Hoſt. Maſter Fenton, talke not to me, my minde is heavy: I will give over all.

Fen. Yet hear me ſpeak: aſſiſt me in my purpoſe,
And (as I am a Gantleman) I'le give thee.
A hundred pound in gold, more then your loſs.

Hoſt. I will hear you (Maſter Fenton) and I will (at the leaſt) keep your counſell.

Fen. From time to time, I have acquainted you
With the dear love I bear to fair Anne Page,
Who, mutually, hath anſwer'd my affection,
(So far forth, as her ſelf might be her chuſer)
Even to my wiſh; I have a letter from her
Of ſuch contents, as you will wonder at;
The mirth whereof, ſo larded with my matter,
That neither ſingly can be manifeſted
Without the ſhew of both: fat Sir John Falſtaffe
Hath a great Scene; the image of the jeſt
I'le ſhew you here at large (hark good mine Hoſt:)
To night at Hernes Oke, juſt 'twixt twelve and one,
Muſt my ſweet Nan preſent the Fairie Queen:
The purpoſe why, is here: in which diſguiſe
While other jeſts are ſomething rank on foot,
Her father hath commanded her to ſlip
Away with Slender, and with him at Eaton
Immediately to marry: She hath conſented: Now Sir,
Her mother, (even ſtrong againſt that match
And firme for Doctor Caius) hath appointed
That he ſhall likewiſe ſhuffle her away,
While other ſports are tasking of their mindes,
And at the Deanry, where a Prieſt attends.
Straight marry her: to this her Mothers plot
She (ſeemingly obedient) likewiſe hath
Made promiſe to the Doctor: Now, thus it reſts,
Her father means ſhe ſhall be all in white;
And in that habit, when Slender ſees his time
To take her by the hand, and bid her go,
She ſhall go with him: her Mother hath intended
(The better to devote her to the Doctor;
For they muſt all be maſk'd and vizarded)

That

That quaint in green, ſhe ſhall be looſe enroab'd,
With Ribands-pendant, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the Doctor ſpies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and on that token,
The maid hath given conſent to go with him.

Hoſt. Which means ſhe to deceive? Father, or Mother?

Fen. Both (my good Hoſt) to go along with me,
And here it reſts, that you'l procure the Vicar
To ſtay for me at Church, 'twixt twelve and one,
And in the lawfull name of marrying,
To give our hearts united ceremony.

Hoſt. Well, husband your device; I'le to the Vicar,
Bring you the Maid, you ſhall not lack a Prieſt.

Fen. So ſhall I evermore be bound to thee;
Beſides, I'le make a preſent recompence. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus, Scena Prima.

Enter Falſtaffe, Quickly, and Ford.

Fal. Prethee no more prattling: go, I'le hold, this is the third time: I hope good luck lies in odde numbers, Away, go, they ſay there is Divinity in odde numbers, either in Nativity, chance, or death: away.

Qui. I'le provide you a chain, and I'le do what I can to get you a pair of horns.

Fal. Away I ſay, time weares, hold up your head and mince. How now M. Broom? Maſter Broom, the matter will be known to night, or never. Be you in the Parke about midnight, at Hernes-Oake, and you ſhall ſee wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yeſterday (Sir) as you told me you had appoimted?

Fal. I went to her (Maſter Broom) as you ſee, like a poor-old-man, But I came from her (Maſter Broom) like a poor-old-woman; that ſame Knave (Ford her huſband) hath the fineſt mad Devil of jealouſie in him (Maſter Broom) that ever govern'd Frenzie. I will tell you, he beat me grievouſly, in the ſhape of a woman: (for in the ſhape of a man (Maſter Broom) I fear not Goliah with a Weavers beam, (becauſe I know alſo, life is a Shuttle) I am in haſte, go along with me, I'le tell you all (Maſter Broom:) ſince I pluckt Geeſe, plaid Trewant and whipt Top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten, till lately. Follow me I'le tell you ſtrange things of this Knave Ford, on whom to night I will be revenged, and I will deliver his wife into your hand. Follow, ſtrange things in hand (Maſter Broom) follow. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Page, Shallow Slender.

Page. Come, come: wee'll couch i'th Caſtle-ditch, till we ſee the light of our Fairies. Remember ſon Slender, my daughter.

Slen. I forſooth, I have ſpoke with her, and we have a nay-word how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry Mum; ſhe cryes Budget, and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: but what needs either your Mum, or her Budget? The white will decipher her well enough. It hath ſtruck ten a'clock.

Page. The night is dark, Light and Spirits will become it well: Heaven proſper our ſport. No man means evill but the Devill, and we ſhall know him by his horns. Let's away: follow me. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Miſt. Page, Miſt. Ford, Caius.

Miſt. Page. Mr. Doctor, my daughter is in green, when you ſee your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the Deanry, and diſpatch it quickly: goe before into the Park: we two muſt go together.

Cai. I know vat I have to do, adieu. Exit.

Miſ. Page. Fare you well (ſir) my husband will not rejoyce ſo much at the abuſe of Falſtaffe, as he will chafe at the Doctors marrying my daughter: But 'tis no matter; better a little chiding, then a great deal of heart-break.

Miſ. Ford. Where is Nan now? and her troop of Fairies? and the Welch Devil Herne.

Miſ. Page. They are all couch'd in a pit hard by Hernes Oak, with obſcur'd Lights; which at the very inſtant of Falſtaffes and our meeting, they will at once diſplay to the night.

Miſ. Ford. That cannot chooſe but amaze him.

Miſt. Page. If he be not amaz'd he will be mock'd: If he be amaz'd, he will be mock'd.

Miſ. Ford. Wee'll betray him finely.

Miſ. Page. Againſt ſuch Lewdſters, and their Lechery, Thoſe that betray them do no trechery.

Miſ. Ford. The hour drawes on: to the Oak, to the Oake. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Evans and Fairies.

Evans. Trib, trib, Fairies: Come, and remember your parts: be pold (I pray you) follow me into the pit, and when I give the watch-'ords: do as I bid you: come, come, trib, trib. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falſtaffe, Miſtris Page, Miſtris Ford, Evans, Anne Page, Fairies, Page, Ford, Quickly Slender, Fenton, Caius, Piſtoll.

Fal. The Windſor Bell hath ſtruck twelve: the Minute drawes on: Now the hot-bloudied-god aſſiſt me: Remember Jove, thou waſt a Bull for thy Europa, Love ſet on thy horns. O powerfull Love, that in ſome reſpects makes a Beaſt a Man: in ſome other, a Man, a Beaſt. You were alſo (Jupiter) a Swan, for the love of Leda: O omnipoomnipotent Love, how neere the God drew to the complexion of a Gooſe: a fault done firſt in the forme of a Beaſt, (O Jove, a beaſtly fault:) and then another fault, in the ſemblance of a Fowle, think on't (Jove) a fowle-fault. When gods have hot backs, what ſhall poor men doe? For me, I am here a Windſor Stag, and the fatteſt (I think) i'th Forreſt. Send me a coole rut-time (Jove) or who can blame me to piſſe my Tallow? Who comes here? my Doe?

M. Ford. Sir John? Art thou there (my Deer?) My male-Deer?

Fal. My Doe with the black Scut? Let the skie rain Potatoes: let it thunder, to the tune of Greene-ſleeves, hail-kiſſing Comfits, and ſnow Eringoes: Let there come a tempeſt of provocation, I will ſhelter me here.

M. Ford. Miſtris Page is come with me (ſweetheart.)

Fal. Divide me like a Brib'd-Buck, each a Haunch: I will keep my ſides to my ſelf, my ſhoulders for the fellow of this walke; and my hornes I bequeath your husbands. Am I a Woodman, ha? Speak I like Herne the Hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of Conſcience, he makes reſtitution. As I am a true ſpirit, welcome.

M. Page. Alas, what noyſe?

M. Ford. Heaven forgive our ſins.

Fal. What ſhould this be?

M. Ford. M. Page. Away, away.

Fal. I think the Devil will not have me damn'd, Leaſt the Oyle that's in me ſhould ſet hell on fire; He would never elſe croſs me thus.

Enter Fairies.

Qui. Fairies, black, gray, green, and white, You Moon-ſhine Revellers, and ſhades of night. You Orphan heirs of fixed deſtiny, Attend your office, and your quality. Crier Hob-goblin, make the Fairy Oyes.

Piſt. Elves, liſt your names: Silence you airy toyes. Cricket, to Windſor Chimneys ſhalt thou leap: Where fires thou find'ſt unrak'd, and Hearths unſwept, There pinch the Maids as blue as Bilbery, Our radiant Queen hates Sluts and ſluttery.

Fal. They are Fairies, he that ſpeaks to them ſhall die. I'le wink and couch: No man their works muſt eye.

Ev. Where's Bede? Go you, and where you find a Maid That ere ſhe ſleep has thrice her prayers ſaid, Raiſe up the Organs of her fantaſie, Sleep ſhe as ſound as careleſs infancy, But thoſe as ſleep and think not on their ſins, Pinch them, armes, legs, backs, ſhoulders, ſides and ſhins.

Qui. About, about: Search Windſor Caſtle (Elves) within, and out. Strew good luck (Ouphes) on every ſacred room, That it may ſtand till the perpetuall doome, In ſtate as wholſome, as in ſtate 'tis fit, Worthy the Owner, and the Owner it. The ſeveral Chairs of Order, looke you ſcowre, With joyce of Balme; and every precious flowre, Each fair Inſtalment, Coat and ſev'ral Creſt, With loyal Blazon evermore be bleſt. And Nightly-medow-Fairies, looke you ſing Like to the Garter-Compaſs in a Ring, Th' expreſſure that it bears: Green let it be, More fertile-freſh then all the field to ſee: And, Hony Soit Qui Mal-y-Panſe, write In Emrold-tuffes, Flowers, purple, blue, and white, Like Saphire-pearle, and rich Embroiderie, Buckled below fair Knight-hoods bending knee; Fairies uſe Flowers for their Characterie, Away, diſperſe: But till 'tis one a clock, Our dance of cuſtome round about the Oke Of Herne the Hunter, let us not forget.

Ev. Pray you lock hand in hand, your ſelves in order ſet: And twenty Glow-worms ſhall our Lant-horns be To guide our Meaſure round about the tree. But ſtay, I ſmell a man of middle earth.

Fal. Heavens defend me from that Welch Fairie, Leſt he transforme me to a peece of Cheeſe.

Piſt. Vilde worm, thou waſt ore-look'd even in thy birth.

Qui. With triall-fire touch me his finger end: If he be chaſte, the flame will back deſcend And turn him to no pain: but if he ſtart, It is the fleſh of a corrupted heart.

Piſt. A triall, come.

Evans. Come, will this wood take fire?

Fal. Oh, oh, oh.

Qui. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in deſire. About him (Fairies) ſing a ſcornfull Rime, And as you trip, ſtill pinch him to your time.

The Song.

Fie on ſinfull phantaſie: Fie on Luſt and Luxurie:
Luſt is but a bloudy fire, kindled with unchaſt deſire.
Fed in heart whoſe flames aſpire,
As thoughts do blow them higher and higher.
Pinch him (Fairies) mutually: pinch him for his Villanie.
Pinch him, and burn him, and turn him about,
Till Candles, and Star-light, and Moon-ſhine be out.

Page. Nay do not flye, I think I have watcht you now: Will none but Herne the Hunter ſerve your turn?

M. Page. I pray you come, hold up the jeſt no higher. Now (good Sir John) how like you Windſor Wives? See you theſe husbands? Do not theſe fair Okes Become the Forreſt better then the Town?

Ford. Now Sir, who's a Cuckold now? Mr. Broom, Falſtaff's a Knave, a Cuckoldly Knave, Here are his horns Maſter Broom: And Maſter Broom, he hath enjoyed nothing of Fords, but his buck-basket, his Cudgell, and twenty pounds of money, which muſt be paid to Mr. Broom, his horſes are arreſted for it, M. Broom.

M. Ford. Sir John, we have had ill luck: we could never meet: I will never take you for my Love again, but I will alwayes count you my Deer.

Fal. I do begin to perceive that I am made an Aſſe.

Ford. I, and an Oxe too: both the proofes are extant.

Fal. And theſe are not Fairies: I was three or four times in the thought they were not Fairies, and yet the guiltineſs of my minde, the ſodain ſurprize of my powers, drove the groſsneſſe of the foppery into a receiv'd belief, in deſpight of the teeth of all rime and reaſon, that they were Fairies. See now how wit may be made a Jack-a-Lent, when 'tis upon ill imployment.

Evan. Sir John Falſtaffe, ſerve Got, and leave your deſires, and Fairies will not pinſe you.

Ford. Well ſaid Fairy Hugh.

Evan. And leave you your jealouzies too, I pray you.

Ford.

Ford. I will never take it of my wife again, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my braine in the Sunne and dri'd it, that it wants matter to prevent so grosse ore-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welch Goat too? Shall I have a Coxcombe of Frize? 'Tis time I were choak'd with a piece of toasted Cheese.

Evans. Seese is not good to give putter; your pelly is all putter.

Fal. Seese and Putter? Have I liv'd to stand at the taunt of one that makes Fritters of English? This is enough to be the decay of Lust and late-walking through the Realm.

Mist. Page. Why Sir John, do you think, though we would have thrust vertue out of our hearts by the head and shoulders, and have given our selves without scruple to Hell, that ever the Devil could have made you our delight?

Ford. What, a Hodge-pudding? A bag of Flax?

Mist. Page. A puft man?

Page. Old, cold, wither'd, and of intollerable entrails?

Ford. And one that is as slanderous as Sathan?

Page. And as poor as Job.

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Evan. And given to Fornications, and to Taverns, and Sack, and Wine, and Metheglin, and to drinkings, and swearings, and staring? Pribbles and prabbles?

Fal. Well, I am your Theame: you have the start of me, I am dejected: I am not able to answer the Welch Flannel, Ignorance it self is a Plummet ore me, use me as you will.

Ford. Marry sir, wee'l bring you to Windsor to one Mr. Broome, that you have cozon'd of money, to whom you should have been a Pander: over and above that you have suffer'd, I think, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerefull Knight, thou shalt eat a Posset to night at my house, where I will desire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughes at thee: Tell her Mr. Slender hath married her daughter.

Mist. Page. Doctors doubt that;
If Anne Page be my daughter, she is (by this) Doctor Cajus wife.

Enter Slender.

Slen. Whoa hoe, hoe, Father Page.

Pag. Son? How now? How now son,
Have you dispatch'd?

Slen. Dispatch'd? Ile make the best in Glostershire know on't: would I were hang'd la, else.

Page. Of what, son?

Slen. I came yonder at Eaton to marry Mistris Anne Page, and shee's a great lubberly Boy. If it had not been ith' Church, I would have swing'd him, or he should have swing'd mee. If I did not think it had been Anne Page, would I might never stir, and 'tis a Post-masters Boy.

Page. Upon my life then, you took the wrong.

Slen. What need you tell me that? I think so, when I took a Boy for a Girle: If I had been married to him, (for all he was in womans apparel) I would not have had him.

Page. Why, this is your own folly,
Did not I tell you how you should know my daughter
By her garments?

Slen. I went to her in green, and cryed Mum, and she cry'd Budget, as Anne and I had appointed, and yet it was not Anne, but a Post-masters Boy.

Mist. Page. Good George be not angry, I knew of your purpose: turn'd my daughter into white, and indeed she is now with the Doctor at the Deanry, and there married.

Enter Cajus.

Caj. Ver is Mistris Page: by gar I am cozoned, I ha married one Garsoon, a Boe; oon Pesant, by gar. A Boy, it is not Anne Page, by gar, I am cozoned.

M. Pa. Why? did you take her in white?

Caj. I be gar, and 'tis a Boy: be gar, Ile raise all Windsor.

Ford. This is strange: Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart misgives me, here comes M. Fenton.
How now M. Fenton?

An. Pardon good father, good my mother pardon.

Page. Now Mistris:
How chance you went not with M. Slender?

Mi. Pa. Why went you not with Mr. Doctor Maid?

Fen. You do amaze her: hear the truth of it,
You would have married her most shamefully,
Where there was no proportion held in love:
The truth is, she and I (long since contracted)
Are now so sure that nothing can dissolve us:
Th'offence is holy that she hath committed,
And this deceit loses the name of craft,
Of disobedience, or unduteous title,
Since therein she doth evitate and shun
A thousand irreligious cursed houres
Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

Ford. Stand not amaz'd, here is no remedy:
In Love, the heavens themselves do guide the state,
Money buyes Lands, and wives are sold by fate.

Fal. I am glad, though you have tane a special stand to strike at me, that your Arrow hath glanc'd.

Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heaven give thee joy, what cannot be eschew'd, must be embrac'd.

Fal. When night-dogs runne, all sorts of Deere are chac'd.

Mi. Pa. Well, I will muse no further: M. Fenton,
Heaven give you many, many merry dayes:
Good husband, let us every one go home,
And laugh this sport ore by a countrey fire,
Sir John and all.

Ford. Let it be so (Sir John:)
To Master Broome, you yet shall hold your word,
For he, to night, shall lye with Mistris Ford. Exeunt.

FINIS.

MEASURE

For Measure.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords.

Duke.

Scalus.

Esca. My Lord.

Duk. Of government, the properties to unfold,
Would seem in me t'affect speech and discourse.
Since I am put to know, that your own Science
Exceeds (in that) the lists of all advice
My strength can give you: Then no more remains
But that, to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them work: The nature of our people,
Our Cities institutions, and the Tearms
For Common Justice, y'are as pregnant in
As Art, and practise hath enriched any
That we remember: There is our Commission,
From which, we would not have you warp; call hither,
I say, bid come before us Angelo:
What figure of us think you, he will bear.
For you must know, we have with speciall soul
Elected him our absence to supply;
Lent him our terror, dresst him with our love,
And given his Deputation all the Organs
Of our own power: what think you of it?

Esc. If any in Vienna be of worth
To undergoe such ample grace and honour,
It is Lord Angelo.

Enter Angelo.

Duke. Look where he comes.

Ang. Always obedient to your Graces will,
I come to know your Graces pleasure.

Duke. Angelo:
There is a kinde of Character in thy life,
That to th'observer, doth thy history
Fully unfold: Thy self and thy belongings
Are not thine own so proper, as to waste
Thy self upon thy vertues; they on thee:
Heaven doth with us, as we with Torches do,
Not light them for themselves: For if our vertues
Did not go forth of us, 'twere all alike
As if we had them not: Spirits are not finely touch'd,
But to fine issues: nor Nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But like a thrifty goddesse, she determines
Her self the glory of a creditour,
Both thanks and use; but I do bend my speech
To one that can my part in him advertise;
Hold therefore Angelo:
In our remove, be thou at full, our self:
Mortality and Mercy in Vienna
Live in thy tongue and heart: Old Escalus
Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy Commission.

Ang. Now good my Lord
Let there be some more test, made of my mettle,
Before so noble and so great a figure
Be stampt upon it.

Duk. No more evasion:
We have with a leaven'd, and prepared choyce
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honours:
Our haste from hence is of so quick condition,
That it prefers it self, and leaves unquestion'd
Matters of needfull value: We shall write to you
As time, and our concernings shall importune,
How it goes with us, and do look to know
What doth befall you here. So fare you well:
To th'hopefull execution do I leave you,
Of your Commission.

Ang. Yet give leave (my Lord,)
That we may bring you something on the way.

Duke. My haste may not admit it,
Nor need you (on mine honour) have to do
With any scruple: your scope is as mine own,
So to inforce, or qualifie the Laws,
As to your soul seems good: Give me your hand,
Ile privily away: I love the people,
But do not like to stage me to their eyes:
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause, and aves vehement:
Nor do I think the man of safe discretion
That do's affect it. Once more fare you well.

Ang. The heavens give safety to your purposes.

Esc. Lead forth and bring you back in happinesse.

Duke. I thank you, fare you well. Exit.

Esc. I shall desire you, Sir, to give me leave
To have free speech with you; and it concerns me
To look into the bottome of my place:
A power I have, but of what strength and nature,
I am not yet instructed.

Ang. 'Tis so with me: Let us with-draw together,
And we may soon our satisfaction have
Touching that point.

Esc. Ile wait upon your honour.

Exeunt.

Scæna secunda.

Enter Lucio, and two other Gentlemen.

Luc. If the Duke, with the other Dukes, come not to composition with the King of Hungary, why then all the Dukes fall upon the King.

1 Gent. Heaven grant us its peace, but not the King of Hungaries.

2 Gent. Amen.

Luc. Thou conclud'ſt like the Sanctimonious Pyrat, that went to Sea with the ten Commandements, but ſcrap'd one out of the Table.

2 Gent. Thou ſhalt not ſteale?

Luc. I, that he raz'd.

1 Gent. Why? 'twas a Commandement to command the Captain and all the reſt from their functions: they put forth to ſteale: There's not a Souldier of us all, that in the thankſgiving before meat, do relliſh the petition well that prays for peace.

2 Gent. I never heard any Souldier diſlike it.

Luc. I believe thee: for I think thou never was't where Grace was ſaid.

2 Gent. No? a dozen times at leaſt.

1 Gent. What? in meeter?

Luc. In any proportion, or in any language.

1 Gent. I think, or in any Religion.

Luc. I, why not? Grace, is Grace, deſpight of all controverſie: as for example; Thou thy ſelf art a wicked villain, deſpight of all Grace.

1 Gent. Well: there went but a paire of ſheers between us.

Luc. I grant: as there may between the Liſts and the Velvet. Thou art the Liſt.

1 Gent. And thou the Velvet; thou art good Velvet; thou'rt a three pil'd-piece I warrant thee: I had as liefe be a Liſt of an Engliſh Kerſey, as be pil'd, as thou art pil'd, for a French Velvet. Do I ſpeak feelingly now?

Luc. I think thou doſt: and indeed with moſt painfull feeling of thy ſpeech: I will, out of thine own confeſſion, learn to begin thy health; but whilſt I live, forget to drink after thee.

1 Gent. I think I have done my ſelf wrong, have I not?

2 Gent. Yes, that thou haſt; whether thou art tainted, or free.

Enter Bawd.

Luc. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes. I have purchas'd as many diſeaſes under her Roofe,
As come to———

2 Gent. To what I pray?

Luc. Judge.

2 Gent. To three thouſand Dollours a year.

1 Gent. I, and more.

Luc. A French crown more.

1 Gent. Thou art alwayes figuring diſeaſes in me; but thou art full of errour, I am ſound.

Luc. Nay, not (as one would ſay) healthy: but ſo ſound, as things that are hollow; thy bones are hollow; Impiety has made a feaſt of thee.

1 Gent. How now, which of your hips has the moſt profound Sciatica?

Bawd. Well, well: There's one yonder arreſted, and carried to priſon, was worth five thouſand of you all.

2 Gent. Who's that I prethee?

Bawd. Marry ſir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.

1 Gent. Claudio to priſon? 'tis not ſo.

Bawd. Nay, but I know 'tis ſo: I ſaw him arreſted; ſaw him carried away: and which is more, within theſe three dayes his head to be chopt off.

Luc. But, after all this fooling, I would not have it ſo: Art thou ſure of this?

Bawd. I am too ſure of it: and it is for getting Madam Julietta with child.

Luc. Believe me this may be: he promiſed to meet me two hours ſince, and he was ever preciſe in promiſe-keeping.

2 Gent. Beſides you know, it draws ſomething neere to the ſpeech we had to ſuch a purpoſe.

1 Gent. But moſt of all agreeing with the Proclamation.

Luc. Away, let's go learn the truth of it. Exeunt.

Bawd. Thus, what with the war; what with the ſweat, what with the gallowes, and what with poverty, I am cuſtome-ſhrunke. How now? what's the newes with you?

Enter Clowne.

Clow. Yonder man is carried to priſon.

Baw. Well: what has he done?

Clow. A woman.

Baw. But what's his offence?

Clow. Groping for Trowts, in a peculiar River.

Baw. What? is there a Maid with child by him?

Clow. No: but there's a woman with Maid by him: you have not heard of the Proclamation, have you?

Baw. What Proclamation, man?

Clow. All houſes in the Suburbes of Vienna muſt be pluck'd down.

Baw. And what ſhall become of thoſe in the Citie?

Clow. They ſhall ſtand for ſeed: they had gone down too, but that a wiſe Burger put in for them.

Baw. But ſhall all our houſes of reſort in the Suburbes be pull'd down?

Clow. To the ground Miſtris.

Baw. Why here's a change indeed in the Commonwealth: what ſhall become of me?

Clow. Come: feare not you: good Counſellours lack no Clients: though you change your place, you need not change your Trade: Ile be your Tapſter ſtill; courage, there will be pitty taken on you; you that have worn your eyes almoſt out in the ſervice, you will be conſidered.

Bawd. What's to do here, Thomas Tapſter? let's withdraw.

Clow. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the Provoſt to priſon: and there's Madam Juliet. Exeunt.

Scæna tertia.

Enter Provoſt, Claudio, Juliet, Officers, Lucio, and two Gent.

Cla. Fellow, why doſt thou ſhow me thus to th'world?
Beare me to priſon, where I am committed.

Pro. I do it not in evill diſpoſition,
But from Angelo by ſpeciall charge.

Clau. Thus can the demy-god (Authority)
Make us pay down, for our offence, by waight
The words of heaven; on whom it will, it will,
On whom it will not (ſo) yet ſtill 'tis juſt. (ſtraint.

Luc. Why how now Claudio? whence comes this re-

Clau. From too-much liberty, (my Lucio) liberty,
As ſurfet is the father of much faſt,
So every ſcope by the immoderate uſe
Turnes to reſtraint: our Natures do purſue

Like

Like Rats that ravin down their proper Bane,
A thirſty evill, and when we drink, we die.

Luc. If I could ſpeak ſo wiſely, under an arreſt, I would ſend for certain of my Creditors: and yet, to ſay the truth, I had as liefe have the foppery of freedome, as the mortality of impriſonment: what's thy offence, Claudio?

Cla. What (but to ſpeak of) would offend againe.

Luc. What is't murder?

Cla. No.

Luc. Lechery?

Cla. Call it ſo.

Pro. Away, ſir, you muſt go.

Cla. One word, good friend: Lucio, a word with you.

Luc. A hundred:
If they'l do you any good: Is Lechery ſo look'd after?

Cla. Thus ſtands it with me: upon a true contract
I got poſſeſſion of Julietta's bed,
You know the Lady, ſhe is faſt my wife,
Save that we do the denunciation lack
Of outward Order. This we came not to,
Only for propagation of a Dowre
Remaining in the Coffer of her friends,
From whom we thought it meet to hide our Love
Till Time had made them for us. But it chances
The ſtealth of our moſt mutuall entertainment
With Character too groſſe, is writ in Juliet.

Luc. With Childe, perhaps?

Cla. Unhappily, even ſo.
And the new Deputy, now for the Duke,
Whether it be the fault and glimpſe of newneſſe,
Or whether that the body publique, be
A horſe whereon the Governour doth ride,
Who newly in the ſeat, that it may know
He can command; lets it ſtrait feel the ſpur:
Whether the tyranny be in his place,
Or in his eminence that fils it up
I ſtagger in: But this new Governour
Awakes me all the enrolled penalties
Which have (like unſcowr'd Armour) hung by th'wall
So long, that nineteen Zodiacks have gone round,
And none of them been worn; and for a name
Now puts the drowſie and neglected Act
Freſhly on me: 'tis ſurely for a name.

Luc. I warrant it is: and thy head ſtands ſo tickle on thy ſhoulders, that a Milk-maid, if ſhe be in love, may ſigh it off: Send after the Duke and appeale to him.

Cla. I have done ſo, but he's not to be found.
I prethee (Lucio) do me this kinde ſervice:
This day, my ſiſter ſhould the Cloyſter enter,
And there receive her approbation.
Acquaint her with the danger of my ſtate,
Implore her, in my voyce, that ſhe make friends
To the ſtrict Deputy: bid her ſelf aſſay him,
I have great hope in that: for in her youth
There is a prone and ſpeechleſſe Dialect,
Such as move men: beſide ſhe hath proſperous Art
When ſhe will play with reaſon, and diſcourſe,
And well ſhe can perſwade.

Luc. I pray ſhe may; as well for the encouragement of the like, which elſe would ſtand upon grievous impoſition: as for the enjoying of thy life, who I would be ſorry ſhould be thus fooliſhly loſt, at a game of Tick-tack: Ile to her.

Cla. I thank you good friend Lucio.

Luc. Within two houres.

Cla. Come Officer, away. Exeunt.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Duke and Frier Thomas.

Duke. No: holy Father, throw away that thought,
Believe not that the dribbling dart of love
Can pierce a compleat boſome: why, I deſire thee
To give me ſecret harbour, hath a purpoſe
More grave and wrinkled, than the aimes and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. May your Grace ſpeak of it.

Duke. My holy ſir, none better knows than you
How I have ever lov'd the life remov'd
And held in idle price, to haunt aſſemblies
Where youth and coſt, and witleſſe bravery keeps.
I have delivered to Lord Angelo
(A man of ſtricture and firme abſtinence)
My abſolute power, and place here in Vienna,
And he ſuppoſes me travail'd to Poland,
(For ſo I have ſtrew'd it in the common eare)
And ſo it is receiv'd: Now (pious ſir)
You will demand of me, why I do this.

Fri. Gladly, my Lord.

Duke. We have ſtrict Statutes, and moſt biting Laws,
(The needfull bits and curbs for head-ſtrong weeds,)
Which for this fourteen years, we have let ſlip,
Even like an ore-grown Lyon in a Cave
That goes not out to prey: Now, as fond Fathers,
Having bound up the threatning twigs of Birch,
Only to ſtick it in their childrens ſight,
For errour, not to uſe: in time the rod
More mock'd than fear'd; ſo our Decrees,
Dead to infliction, to themſelves are dead,
And liberty plucks Juſtice by the noſe;
The Baby beats the Nurſe, and quite athwart
Goes all decorum.

Fri. It reſted in your Grace
To unlooſe this tyde-up Juſtice, when you pleas'd:
And it in you more dreadfull would have ſeem'd
Than in Lord Angelo.

Duke. I do feare, too dreadfull:
Sith 'twas my fault to give the people ſcope,
'Twould be my tyranny to ſtrike and gall them,
For what I bid them do: For we bid this be done
When evill deeds have their permiſſive paſſe,
And not the puniſhment: therefore indeed (my father)
I have on Angelo impos'd the office,
Who may in th'ambuſh of my name, ſtrike home,
And yet, my nature never in the fight
To do in ſlander: And to behold his ſway
I will, as 'twere a brother of your Order,
Viſit both Prince and people: Therefore I prethee
Supply me with the habit, and inſtruct me
How I may formally in perſon beare
Like a true Frier: Moe reaſons for this action
At your more leiſure, ſhall I render you;
Only this one: Lord Angelo is preciſe,
Stands at a guard with Envie: ſcarce confeſſes
That his blood flowes: or that his appetite
Is more to bread than ſtone: hence ſhall we ſee
If power change purpoſe: what our Seemers be. Exeunt.

Scæna Quinta.

Enter Isabell, and Franciſca a Nun.

Isa. And have you Nuns no farther priviledges?
Nun. Are not theſe large enough?
Isa. Yes truly; I ſpeak not as deſiring more,
But rather wiſhing a more ſtrict reſtraint
Upon the Siſterhood, the Votariſts of Saint Clare.

Lucio within.

Luc. Hoa? peace be in this place.
Isa. Who's that which cals?
Nun. It is a mans voyce, gentle Isabella,
Turn you the key, and know his buſineſſe of him;
You may; I may not: you are yet unſworn:
When you have vow'd, you muſt not ſpeak with men,
But in the preſence of the Prioreſſe;
Then if you ſpeak, you muſt not ſhew your face;
Or if you ſhew your face, you muſt not ſpeak:
He cals again: I pray you anſwer him.
Isa. Peace and proſperity: who is't that cals?
Luc. Haile Virgin, (if you be) as thoſe cheek-Roſes
Proclaime you are no leſſe: can you ſo ſteed me,
As bring me to the ſight of Isabella,
A novice of this place, and the faire Siſter
To her unhappy brother Claudio?
Isa. Why her unhappy brother? Let me aske,
The rather for I now muſt make you know
I am that Isabella, and his Siſter.
Luc. Gentle and faire: your brother kindly greets you;
Not to be weary with you; he's in priſon.
Isa. Woe me; for what?
Luc. For that, which if my ſelf might be his Judge,
He ſhould receive his puniſhment in thankes:
He hath got his friend with Childe.
Isa. Sir, make me not your ſtory.
Luc. 'Tis true; I would not, though 'tis my familiar ſin,
With Maids to ſeem the Lapwing, and to jeſt
Tongue, farre from heart: play with all Virgins ſo:
I hold you as a thing en-skied and ſainted,
By your renouncement, an immortall ſpirit
And to be talk'd with in ſincerity,
As with a Saint.
Isa. You do blaſpheme the good, in mocking me.
Luc. Do not believe it: fewneſſe, and truth; tis thus
Your brother and his Lover have imbrac'd;
As thoſe that feed, grow full: as bloſſoming Time
That from the ſeedneſſe, the bare fallow brings
To teeming foyſon: even ſo her plenteous wombe
Expreſſeth his full Tilth and Husbandry.
Isa. Some one with child by him? my Coſen Juliet?
Luc. Is ſhe your Coſen?
Isa. Adoptedly, as ſchool-maids change their names
By vaine, though apt affection.
Luc. She it is.
Isa. Let him marry her.
Luc. This is the point.
The Duke is very ſtrangely gone from hence;
Bore many Gentlemen (my ſelf being one)
In hand, and hope of action: but we do learne,
By thoſe that know the very Nerves of State,
His giving-out, were of an Infinite diſtance
From his true meant deſigne: upon his place,
(And with full line of his authority)
Governs Lord Angelo; A man, whoſe blood
Is very ſnow-broth: one, who never feels
The wanton ſtings, and motions of the ſenſe;
But doth rebate, and blunt his naturall edge
With profits of the minde: Study, and faſt.
He (to give feare to uſe, and liberty,
Which have, for long, run-by the hideous Law,
As Myce by Lyons) hath pickt out an act,
Under whoſe heavy ſenſe, your brothers life
Fals into forfeit: he arreſts him on it,
And follows cloſe the rigour of the Statute
To make him an example: all hope is gone,
Unleſſe you have the grace, by your faire prayer
To ſoften Angelo: And that's my pith of buſineſſe
'Twixt you, and your poor brother.
Isa. Doth he ſo,
Seek his life?
Luc. Has cenſur'd him already,
And as I heare, the Provoſt hath a warrant
For's execution.
Isa. Alas: what poor
Abilitie's in me, to do him good?
Luc. Aſſay the power you have.
Isa. My power? alas, I doubt.
Luc. Our doubts are traytors
And makes us loſe the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt: Go to Lord Angelo,
And let him learn to know, when Maidens ſue
Men give like gods: but when they weep and kneel,
All their petitions, are as truly theirs
As they themſelves would owe them.
Isa. Ile ſee what I can do.
Luc. But ſpeedily.
Isa. I will about it ſtrait;
No longer ſtaying, but to give the Mother
Notice of my affaire: I humbly thank you:
Commend me to my brother: ſoon at night
Ile ſend him certain word of my ſucceſſe.
Luc. I take my leave of you.
Isa. Good ſir, adieu. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Angelo, Eſcalus, and ſervants, Juſtice.

Ang. We muſt not make a ſcar-crow of the Law,
Setting it up to feare the Birds of prey,
And let it keep one ſhape, till cuſtome make it
Their Pearch, and not their terrour.
Eſc. I, but yet
Let us be keen, and rather cut a little
Than fall, and bruiſe to death: alas, this Gentleman
Whom I would ſave, had a moſt noble father,
Let but your honour know
(Whom I believe to be moſt ſtrait in vertue)
That in the working of your own affections,
Had Time co-heard with Place, or place with wiſhing,
Or that the reſolute acting of our blood
Could have attain'd th'effect of your own purpoſe,
Whether you had not ſometime in your life
Err'd in this point, which now you cenſure him,
And pull'd the Law upon you.
Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted (Eſcalus)

Another thing to fall: I not deny
The Jury passing on the prisoners life
May in the sworn-twelve have a theef, or two
Guiltier than him they try; what's open made to Justice,
That Justice seizes; What knows the Laws
That theeves do passe on theeves? 'Tis very pregnant,
The Jewel that we finde, we stoop, and take't,
Because we see it; but what we do not see,
We tread upon, and never think of it.
You may not so extenuate his offence,
For I have had such faults; but rather tell me
When I, that censure him, do so offend,
Let mine own Judgement pattern out my death,
And nothing come in partiall. Sir, he must die.

Enter Provost.

Esc. Be it as your wisdome will.

Ang. Where is the Provost?

Pro. Here if it like your Honour.

Ang. See that Claudio
Be executed by nine to morrow morning,
Bring him his Confessor, let him be prepar'd,
For that's the utmost of his Pilgrimage.

Esc. Well: heaven forgive him; and forgive us all:
Some rise by sinne, and some by vertue fall:
Some Run from brakes of Ice, and answer none,
And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clowne, Officers.

Elb. Come, bring them away: if these be good people in a Common-weale, that do nothing but use their abuses in common houses, I know no law: bring them away.

Ang. How now sir, what's your name? And what's the matter?

Elb. If it please your honour, I am the poor Dukes Constable, and my name is Elbow; I do leane upon Justice sir, and do bring in here before your good honour, two notorious Benefactors.

Ang. Benefactors? Well: What Benefactors are they? Are they not Malefactors?

Elb. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are: But precise villaines they are, that I am sure of, and voyd of all prophanation in the world, that good Christians ought to have.

Esc. This comes off well: here's a wise Officer.

Ang. Go to: What quality are they of? Elbow is your name?
Why do'st thou not speak Elbow?

Clo. He cannot sir: he's out at Elbow.

Ang. What are you sir?

Elb. He sir, a Tapster sir: parcell Bawd: one that serves a bad woman: whose house sir was (as they say) pluckt down in the Suburbs: and now she professes a hot-house; which, I think is a very ill house too.

Esc. How know you that?

Elb. My wife Sir, whom I detest before heaven and your honour.

Esc. How? thy wife?

Elb. I Sir: whom I thank heaven is an honest woman.

Esca. Do'st thou detest her therefore?

Elb. I say sir, I will detest my self also, as well as she that this house, if it be not a Bawds house, it is pitty of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Esca. How do'st thou know that, Constable?

Elb. Marry sir, by my wife, who, if she had been a woman Cardinally given, might have been accus'd in fornication, adultery, and all uncleanesse there.

Esc. By the womans means?

Elb. I sir, by Mistris Over-dons means: but as she spit in his face, so she defi'd him.

Clo. Sir, if it please your honour, this is not so.

Elb. Prove it before these Varlets here, thou honourable man, prove it.

Esc. Do you hear how he misplaces?

Clo. Sir, she came in great with child; and longing (saving your honors reverence) for stew'd Prewynes; sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very instant time stood, as it were in a fruit dish, (a dish of some three pence; your honours have seen such dishes) they are not China-dishes, but very good dishes.

Esc. Go too, go too: no matter for the dish sir.

Clo. No indeed sir not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but, to the point: as I say, this Mistris Elbow, being (as I say) with child, and being great bellied, and longing (as I said) for Prewynes: and having no more in the dish (as I said) Master Froth here, this very man, having eaten the rest (as I said) and (as I say) paying for them very honestly: for, as you know Master Froth, I could not give you three pence again.

Fro. No indeed.

Clo. Very well: you being then (if you be remembred) cracking the stones of the foresaid Prewyns.

Fro. I, so I did indeed.

Clo. Why, very well: I telling you then (if you be remembred) that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of, unless they kept very good diet, as I told you.

Fro. All this is true.

Clo. Why very well then.

Esc. Come: you are a tedious fool: to the purpose: what was done to Elbows wife that he hath cause to complain of? Come me to what was done to her.

Clo. Sir, your honour cannot come to that yet.

Esc. No sir, nor I mean it not.

Clo. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your Honours leave: And I beseech you, look into Master Froth here sir, a man of four-score pound a year; whose Father died at Hallowmas: Was't not at Hallowmas Master Froth?

Fro. All-hallond-Eve.

Clo. Why very well: I hope here be truths: he Sir, sitting (as I say) in a lower Chaire, Sir, 'twas in the bunch of Grapes, where indeed you have a delight to sit, have you not?

Fro. I have so, because it is an open room, and good for Winter.

Clo. Why very well then: I hope here be truths.

Ang. This will last out a night in Russia,
When nights are longest there: Ile take my leave,
And leave you to the hearing of the cause;
Hoping you'l find good cause to whip them all. Exit.

Esc. I think no lesse: good morrow to your Lordship. Now sir, come on: What was done to Elbows wife, once more?

Clo. Once sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Elb. I beseech you sir, ask him what this man did to my wife.

Clo. I beseech your honour, ask me.

Esc. Well sir, what did this Gentleman to her?

Clo. I beseech you sir, look in this Gentlemans face: good Master Froth look upon his honour; 'tis for a good purpose; doth your honour mark his face?

Esc. I sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you marke it well.

Esc. Well, I doe so.

Clo. Doth your honour see any harme in his face?

Esc. Why no.

Clo. Ile be supposd upon a booke, his face is the worst thing about him: good then: if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth doe the Constables wife any harme? I would know that of your honour.

Esc. He's in the right (Constable) what say you to it?

Elb. First, and it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his Mistris is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand sir, his wife is a more respected person then any of us all.

Elb. Varlet, thou lyest; thou lyest wicked Varlet: the time is yet to come that shee was ever respected with man, woman, or childe.

Clo. Sir, she was respected with him before he married with her.

Esc. Which is the wiser here; Justice, or Iniquity? Is this true?

Elb. O thou Caytiffe: O thou Varlet: O thou wicked Hannibal; I respected with her, before I was married to her? If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your Worship thinke me the poore Dukes Officer: prove this, thou wicked Hannibal, or Ile have mine action of battery on thee.

Esc. If he tooke you a box 'oth'eare, you might have your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry I thanke your good Worship for it: what is't your Worships pleasure I shall doe with this wicked Caytiffe?

Esc. Truely Officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst discover, if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses, till thou know'st what they are.

Elb. Marry I thanke your Worship for it: Thou seest thou wicked Varlet now, what's come upon thee. Thou art to continue now thou Varlet, thou art to continue.

Esc. Where were you borne, friend?

Froth. Here in Vienna, Sir.

Esc. Are you of fourescore pounds a yeare?

Froth. Yes, and't please you sir.

Esc. So: what trade are you of, sir?

Clo. A Tapster, a poore Widdowes Tapster.

Esc. Your Mistris name?

Clo. Mistris Over-don.

Esc. Hath she had any more then one husband?

Clo. Nine, sir: Over-don by the last.

Esc. Nine? come hither to me, Master Froth; Master Froth, I would not have you acquainted with Tapsters; they will draw you Master Froth, and you will hang them: get you gone, and let me heare no more of you.

Fro. I thanke your Worship: for mine owne part, I never come into any roome in a Tap-house, but I am drawne in.

Esc. Well: no more of it Master Froth: farewell: Come you hither to me, M. Tapster: what's your name M. Tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Esc. What else?

Clo. Bum, Sir.

Esc. Troth, and your Bum is the greatest thing about you, so that in the beastliest sense, you are Pompey the great; Pompey, you are partly a Bawd, Pompey; howsoever you colour it being a Tapster, are you not? come, tell me true, it shall be the better for you.

Clo. Truely sir, I am a poore fellow that would live.

Esc. How would you live Pompey? by being a Bawd? what doe you thinke of the Trade Pompey? is it a lawfull Trade?

Clo. If the Law would allow it, sir.

Esc. But the Law will not allow it Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Do's your Worship meane to geld and splay all the youth in the Citie?

Esc. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truely Sir, in my poore opinion they will too't then: if your Worship will take order for the Drabs and Knaves, you need not to feare the Bawds.

Esc. There are pretty orders beginning I can tell you: It is but heading and hanging.

Clo. If you head and hang all that offend that way but for ten yeare together; you'll be glad to give out a Commission for more heads: if this Law hold in Vienna ten yeares, Ile rent the fairest house in it after three pence a Bay: if you live to see this come to passe, say Pompey told you so.

Esc. Thanke you good Pompey; and in requitall of your Prophesie, harke you: I advise you let me not finde you before me againe upon any complaint whatsoever: no, not for dwelling where you doe: if I doe Pompey, I shall beat you to your Tent, and prove a shrewd Cæsar to you: in plaine dealing Pompey, I shall have you whipt; so for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thanke your Worship for your good counsell; but I shall follow it as the flesh and fortune shall better determine. Whip me? no, no, let Carman whip his Jade, The valiant heart's not whipt out of his Trade. Exit.

Esc. Come hither to me, Master Elbow: come hither Master Constable: how long have you been in this place of Constable?

Elb. Seven yeare and a halfe sir.

Esc. I thought by the readinesse in the office, you had continued in it some time: you say seaven yeares together.

Elb. And a halfe sir.

Esc. Alas, it hath been great paines to you: they doe you wrong to put you so oft upon't. Are there not men in your Ward sufficient to serve it?

Elb. 'Faith sir, few of any wit in such matters: as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them; I doe it for some peece of money, and goe through with all.

Esc. Looke you bring me in the names of some sixe or seven, the most sufficient of your Parish.

Elb. To your Worships house sir?

Esc. To my house: fare you well: what's a clocke, thinke you?

Just. Eleven, sir.

Esc. I pray you goe home to dinner with me.

Just. I humbly thanke you.

Esc. It grieves me for the death of Claudio,
But there's no remedy.

Just. Lord Angelo is severe.

Esc. It is but needfull.
Mercy is not it selfe, that oft lookes so,
Pardon is still the nurse of second woe:
But yet, poore Claudio; there is no remedy.
Come Sir. Exeunt.

Scena

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Provoſt, Servant.

Ser. Hee's hearing of a Cauſe; he will come ſtraight,
I'le tell him of you.

Pro. Pray you do; Ile know
His pleaſure, may be he will relent; alas
He hath but as offended in a dream,
All Sects, all Ages ſmack of this vice, and he
To dye for't!

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now, what's the matter Provoſt?

Pro. Is it your will Claudio ſhall dye to morrow?

Ang. Did not I tell thee yea? hadſt thou not order?
Why do'ſt thou ask again?

Pro. Leſt I might be too raſh:
Under your good correction, I have ſeen
When after execution, Judgement hath
Repented ore his doom.

Ang. Go to: let that be mine,
Do you your office, or give up your Place,
And you ſhall well be ſpar'd.

Pro. I crave your Honors pardon:
What ſhall be done ſir, with the groaning Juliet?
Shee's very neer her houre.

Ang. Diſpoſe of her
To ſome more fitter place, and that with ſpeed.

Ser. Here is the ſiſter of the man condemn'd,
Deſires acceſſe to you.

Ang. Hath he a ſiſter?

Pro. I my good Lord, a very vertuous maid,
And to be ſhortly of a Siſter-hood,
If not already.

Ang. Well: let her be admitted,
See you the Fornicatreſſe be remov'd,
Let her have needfull, but not laviſh means,
There ſhall be order for't.

Enter Lucio, and Iſabella.

Pro. 'Save your Honor,

Ang. Stay a little while: y'are welcome: what's your will?

Iſab. I am a wofull Sutor to your Honor,
'Pleaſe but your Honor hear me.

Ang. Well: what's your ſuite?

Iſab. There is a vice that moſt I do abhorre,
And moſt deſire ſhould meet the blow of juſtice;
For which I would not plead, but that I muſt,
For which I muſt not plead, but that I am
At warre, twixt will, and will not.

Ang. Well: the matter?

Iſab. I have a brother is condemn'd to dye,
I do beſeech you let it be his fault,
And not my brother.

Pro. Heaven give thee moving graces.

Ang. Condemn the fault, and not the actor of it,
Why every fault's condemn'd ere it be done:
Mine were the very Cipher of a Function
To fine the faults, whoſe fine ſtands in record,
And let go by the Actor.

Iſab. Oh juſt, but ſevere law:
I had a brother then; heaven keep your honor.

Luc. Give 't not o're ſo: to him again, entreat him,
Kneel down before him, hang upon his gown,
You are too cold: if you ſhould need a pin,
You could not with more tame a tongue deſire it:
To him, I ſay.

Iſab. Muſt he needs dye?

Ang. Maiden, no remedy.

Iſab. Yes: I do think that you might pardon him,
And neither heaven, nor man grieve at the mercy.

Ang. I will not do't.

Iſab. But can you if you would?

Ang. Look what I will not, that I cannot do.

Iſab. But might you do't and do the world no wrong
If ſo your heart were touch'd with that remorſe,
As mine is to him?

Ang. Hee's ſentenc'd, tis too late.

Luc. You are too cold.

Iſab. Too late? why ſo: I that do ſpeak a word,
May call it back again: well, believe this
No ceremony that to great ones longs,
Not the Kings Crown; nor the deputed ſword,
The Marſhals Truncheon, nor the Judges Robe
Become them with one half ſo good a grace
As mercy does: If he had been as you, and you as he,
You would have ſlipt like him, but he like you
Would not have been ſo ſtern.

Ang. Pray you be gone.

Iſab. I would to heaven I had your potency,
And you were Iſabell: ſhould it then be thus?
No: I would tell what 'twere to be a judge,
And what a priſoner.

Luc. I touch him: there's the veine.

Ang. Your brother is a forfeit of the Law,
And you but waſte your words.

Iſab. Alas, alas:
Why all the ſouls that were, were forfeit once,
And he that might the vantage beſt have took,
Found out the remedy: how would you be,
If he, which is the top of judgement, ſhould
But judge you, as you are? Oh, think on that,
And mercy then will breathe within your lips
Like man new made.

Ang. Be you content, (faire Maid)
It is the Law, not I, condemn your brother,
Were he my kinſman, brother, or my ſon;
It ſhould be thus with him: he muſt dye to morrow.

Iſab. To morrow? oh, that's ſudden,
Spare him, ſpare him:
Hee's not prepar'd for death; even for our kitchins
We kill the fowle of ſeaſon: ſhall we ſerve heaven
With leſſe reſpect then we do miniſter
To our groſſe-ſelves? good, good my Lord, bethink you;
Who is it that hath di'd for this offence?
There's many have committed it.

Luc. I, well ſaid.

Ang. The Law hath not been dead, though it hath ſlept
Thoſe many had not dar'd to do that evil
If the firſt, that did th'Edict infringe
Had anſwer'd for his deed. Now 'tis awake,
Takes note of what is done, and like a Prophet
Looks in a glaſſe that ſhews what future evils
Either now, or by remiſsneſs, new conceiv'd,
And ſo in progreſs to be hatch'd, and born,
Are now to have no ſucceſſive degrees,
But here they live to end.

Iſab. Yet ſhow ſome pitty.

Ang. I ſhew it moſt of all, when I ſhew Juſtice;
For then I pitty thoſe I do not know,
Which a diſmis'd offence would after gaule

And do him right, that answering one foul wrong
Lives not to act another. Be satisfied;
Your Brother dies to morrow; be content.
Isa. So you must be the first that gives this sentence,
And he, that suffers: Oh, it is excellent
To have a Giants strength: but it is tyrannous
To use it like a Giant.
Luc. That's well said.
Isab. Could great men thunder
As Jove himself do's, Jove would nere be quiet,
For every pelting petty Officer
Would use his heaven for thunder;
Nothing but thunder: Mercifull heaven,
Thou rather with thy sharp and sulphurous bolt
Splitst the un-wedgable and gnarled Oke,
Then the soft Mertill: O But man! proud man!
Drest in a little brief authority,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
(His glassie Essence) like an angry Ape
Playes such phantastique tricks before high heaven,
As makes the Angels weep: who with our spleens
Would all themselves laugh mortall.
Luci. Oh, to him, to him wench: he will relent,
He's comming: I perceive't.
Pro. Pray heaven she win him.
Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with our self,
Great men may jest with Saints: tis wit in them,
But in the lesse foul prophanation.
Luc. Thou'rt i'right (Girle) more o'that
Isab. That in the Captain's but a chollerick word,
Which in the Souldier is flat blasphemy.
Luc. Art advis'd o'that? more on't.
Ang. Why do you put these sayings upon me?
Isab. Because Authority, though it erre like others,
Hath yet a kind of medicine in it self
That skins the vice o'th top; go to your bosom,
Knock there, and ask your heart what it doth know
That's like my brothers fault: if it confesse
A naturall guiltinesse, such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought upon your tongue
Against my brothers life.
Ang. She speaks, and 'tis such sence
That my sence breeds with it; fare you well.
Isab. Gentle my Lord, turn back.
Ang. I will bethink me: come again to morrow.
Isab. Hark, how Ile bribe you: good my Lord turn back.
Ang. How? bribe me?
Isa. I, with such gifts that heaven shall share with you.
Luc. You had mar'd all else.
Isab. Not with fond Sickles of the tested-gold,
Or stones, whose rate are either rich, or poore
As fancy values them: but with true prayers,
That shall be up at heaven, and enter there
Ere Sunne rise: prayers from preserved souls,
From fasting Maids, whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporall.
Ang. Well: come to me to morrow.
Luc. Go to: 'tis well; away.
Isab. Heaven keep your honor safe.
Ang. Amen.
For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers crosse.
Isab. At what houre to morrow,
Shall I attend your Lordship?
Ang. At any time 'fore-noone.
Isab. 'Save your Honor. Exeunt.

Ang. From thee: even from thy vertue.
What's this? What's this? is this her fault, or mine?
The Tempter, or the Tempted, who sins most? ha?
Not she: nor doth she tempt: but it is I,
That, lying by the Violet in the Sunne,
Do as the Carrion do's, not as the flowre,
Corrupt with vertuous season: Can it be,
That Modesty may more betray our sence
Then womans lightnesse? having waste ground enough,
Shall we desire to raze the Sanctuary
And pitch our evils there? oh fie, fie, fie:
What dost thou? or what art thou Angelo?
Dost thou desire her fowly, for those things
That make her good? oh, let her brother live:
Theeves for their robbery have authority,
When Judges steal themselves: what! do I love her,
That I desire to hear her speak again?
And feast upon her eyes? what is't I dream on?
Oh cunning enemy, that to catch a Saint,
With Saints dost bait thy hook: most dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth goad us on
To sin, in loving vertue: never could the Strumpet
With all her double vigor, Art, and Nature
Once stir my temper: but this vertuous Maid
Subdues me quite: Even till now
When men were fond, I smild, and wondred how. Exit.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Duke, and Provost.
Duk. Haile to you, Provost, so I think you are.
Pro. I am the Provost: what's your will, good Frier;
Duk. Bound by my charity, and my blest order;
I come to visit the afflicted spirits
Here in the prison: do me the common right
To let me see them: and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.
Pro. I would do more then that, if more were needfull.
Enter Juliet.
Look here comes one: a Gentlewoman of mine,
Who falling in the flaws of her own youth,
Hath blistered her report: She is with child,
And he that got it, sentenc'd: a yong man,
More fit to do another such offence,
Then dye for this.
Duk. When must he dye?
Pro. As I do think to morrow.
I have provided for you, stay a while
And you shall be conducted.
Duk. Repent you (faire one) of the sin you carry?
Jul. I do; and bear the shame most patiently.
Du. Ile teach you how you shall araign your conscience,
And try your penitence, if it be sound,
Or hollowly put on.
Jul. Ile gladly learne.
Duk. Love you the man that wrong'd you?
Jul. Yes, as I love the woman that wrong'd him.
Duk. So then it seems your most offencefull act
Was mutually committed.
Jul. Mutually.
Duk. Then was your sin of heavier kind than his.
Jul. I do confesse it, and repent it (Father.)

Duk. 'Tis

Duk. 'Tis meet so (daughter) but least you do repent
As that the sinne hath brought you to this shame,
Which sorrow is alwayes toward our selves, not heaven,
Showing we would not spare heaven, as we love it,
But as we stand in feare.
Jul. I do repent me, as it is an evill,
And take the shame with joy.
Duk. There rest:
Your partner (as I heare) must dye to morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him:
Grace go with you, Benedicite. Exit.
Jul. Must dye to morrow? oh injurious love
That respits me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror.
Pro. 'Tis pitty of him. Exeunt.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Angelo.

An. When I would pray, and think, I think, and pray
To severall subjects: heaven hath my empty words,
Whilst my Invention, hearing not my Tongue,
Anchors on Isabell: heaven in my mouth,
As if I did but only chew his name,
And in my heart the strong and swelling evill
Of my conception: the state whereon I studied
Is like a good thing, being often read
Growne fear'd, and tedious: yea, my Gravity
Wherein (let no man heare me) I take pride,
Could I, with boote, change for an idle plume
Which the ayre beats for vaine: oh place! oh form!
How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit
Wrench awe from fools, and tye the wiser souls
To thy false seeming? Blood, thou art blood,
Let's write good Angell on the Devills horne,
'Tis not the devills Crest: how now? who's there?

Enter Servant.

Ser. One Isabell, a sister, desires access to you,
Ang. Teach her the way: oh, heavens
Why doe's my blood thus muster to my heart,
Making both it unable for it self,
And dispossessing all my other parts
Of necessary fitnesse?
So play the foolish throngs with one that swounds,
Come all to help him, and so stop the ayre
By which he should revive: and even so
The general subject to a wel-wisht King
Quit their own part, and in obsequious fondnesse
Crowd to his presence, where their untaught love
Must needs appeare offence: how now faire Maid?

Enter Isabella.

Isa. I am come to know your pleasure.
An. That you might know it, would much better please (me,
Then to demand what 'tis: your brother cannot live.
Isa. Even so: heaven keep your Honor.
An. Yet may he live a while: and it may be
As long as you, or I: yet he must dye.
Isab. Under your Sentence?
Ang. Yea.
Isab. When, I beseech you? that in his Reprieve
(Longer, or shorter) he may be so fitted
That, his soul sicken not.
Ang. Ha? fie, these filthy vices: It were as good
To pardon him, that hath from nature stolne
A man already made, as to remit
Their sawcy sweetnesse, that do coyne heavens Image
In stamps that are forbid: 'tis all as easie,
Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put mettle in restrained means
To make a false one.
Isab. 'Tis set down so in heaven, but not in earth.
Ang. Say you so: then I shall poze you quickly.
Which had you rather, that the most just Law
Now took your brothers life, and to redeem him
Give up your body to such sweet uncleannesse,
As she that he hath staind?
Isab. Sir, believe this,
I had rather give my body, than my soul.
Ang. I talk not of your soul: our compel'd sinnes
Stand more for number, than for accompt.
Isab. How say you?
Ang. Nay Ile not warrant that: for I can speak
Against the thing I say: Answer to this,
I (now the voyce of the recorded Law)
Pronounce a sentence on your brothers life,
Might there not be a charity in sinne,
To save this brothers life?
Isab. Please you to do't,
Ile take it as a perill to my soul,
It is no sinne at all, but charity.
Ang. Pleas'd you to do't, at perill of your soul
Were equall poize of sinne, and charity.
Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sinne
Heaven let me beare it; you granting of my suit,
If that be sinne, Ile make it my Morne-prayer,
To have it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your answer.
Ang. Nay, but hear me.
Your sence pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,
Or seem so crafty; and that's not good.
Isab. Let me be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better.
Ang. Thus wisdome wishes to appear most bright,
When it doth tax it self: As these black Masques
Proclaime an en-shield beauty ten times louder
Than beauty could displayed: But mark me,
To be received plain, Ile speak more grosse:
Your brother is to dye.
Isab. So.
Ang. And his offence is so, as it appeares,
Accountant to the Law, upon that paine.
Isab. True.
Ang. Admit no other way to save his life
(As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the losse of question) that you, his Sister,
Finding your self desir'd of such a person,
Whose credit with the Judge, or own great place,
Could fetch your brother from the Mannacles
Of the all-building Law: and that there were
No earthly mean to save him, but that either
You must lay down the treasures of your body,
To this supposed, or else to let him suffer:
What would you do?
Isab. As much for my poor Brother, as my self;
That is: were I under the tearmes of death,
Th'impression of keen whips, I'ld wear as Rubies,
And strip my self to death, as to a bed,
That longing have been sick for, ere I'ld yeeld
My body up to shame.

Ang. Then

Ang. Then must your brother dye.
Isa. And 'twer the cheaper way:
Better it were a brother di'd at once,
Then that a sister by redeeming him
Should dye for ever.
Ang. Were not you then as cruell as the Sentence,
That you have slander'd so?
Isa. Ignominy in ransome, and free pardon
Are of two houses: lawfull mercy,
Is nothing kin to foul redemption.
Ang. You seem'd of late to make the Law a tyrant,
And rather prov'd the sliding of your brother
A merriment, than a vice.
Isa. Oh pardon me my Lord, it oft fals out
To have, what we would have,
We speak not what we mean;
I something do excuse the thing I hate,
For his advantage that I dearly love.
Ang. We are all fraile.
Isa. Else let my brother dye,
If not a feodary but only he
Owe, and succeed thy weakness.
Ang. Nay, women are fraile too.
Isa. I, as the glasses where they view themselves,
Which are as easie broke as they make formes:
Women? Help heaven; men their creation marre
In profiting by them: Nay, call us ten times fraile,
For we are soft, as our complexions are,
And credulous to false prints.
Ang. I think it well:
And from this testimony of your own sex
(Since I suppose we are made to be no stronger
Then faults may shake our frames) let me be bold;
I do arrest your words; Be that you are,
That is, a woman; if you be more, you'r none.
If you be one (as you are well expresst
By all externall warrants) shew it now,
By putting on the destin'd Livery.
Isa. I have no tongue but one; gentle my Lord,
Let me entreat you speak the former language.
Ang. Plainly conceive I love you.
Isa. My brother did love Juliet.
And you tell me that he shall dye for't.
Ang. He shall not Isabell if you give me love.
Isa. I know your vertue hath a licence in't,
Which seems a little fouler than it is,
To pluck on others.
Ang. Believe me on mine Honor,
My words expresse my purpose.
Isa. Ha? Little honor, to be much believ'd,
And most pernitious purpose: Seeming, seeming.
I will proclaime thee Angelo, look for't.
Signe me a present pardon for my brother,
Or with an out-stretcht throate Ile tell the world aloud
What man thou art.
Ang. Who will believe thee Isabell?
My unsoild name, th'austereness of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place i'th State,
Will so your accusation over-weigh,
That you shall stifle in your own report,
And smell of calumny. I have begun,
And now I give my sensuall race, the reine,
Fit thy consent to my sharp appetite,
Lay by all nicety, and prolixious blushes
That banish what they sue for: Redeem thy brother,
By yeelding up thy body to my will,
Or else he must not only dye the death,
But thy unkindness shall his death draw out
To lingring sufferance: Answer me to morrow,
Or by the affection that now guides me most,
Ile prove a Tyrant to him. As for you,
Say what you can, my false, ore-weighs your true? Exit.
Isa. To whom should I complain? Did I tell this,
Who would believe me? O perilous mouthes
That bear in them, one and the self-same tongue,
Either of condemnation, or approofe,
Bidding the Law make curtsie to their will,
Hooking both right and wrong to th'appetite,
To follow as it draws. Ile to my brother,
Though he hath falne by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a mind of Honor,
That had he twenty heads to tender down
On twenty bloody blocks, hee'ld yeeld them up,
Before his sister should her body stoop
To such abhord pollution.
Then Isabell live chaste, and brother dye;
" More than our Brother, is our Chastity.
Ile tell him yet of Angelo's request,
And fit his mind to death, for his souls rest. Exit.

Actus Tertius, Scæna Prima.

Enter Duke, Claudio, and Provost.

Duk. So then you hope of pardon from lord Angelo?
Clau. The miserable have no other medicine
But only hope: I'have hope to live, and am prepar'd to dye.
Duke. Be absolute for death: either death or life
Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with life:
If I do loose thee, I do loose a thing
That none but fools would keep: a breath thou art,
Servile to all the skyie-influences,
That dost this habitation where thou keepst
Hourely afflict: Meerely, thou art deaths fool,
For him thou labourst by thy flight to shun,
And yet runst toward him still. Thou art not noble,
For all th'accommodations that thou bearst,
Are nurst by baseness: Thou'rt by no means valiant,
For thou dost feare the soft and tender fork
Of a poor worm: thy best of rest is sleep,
And that thou oft provoakst, yet grossely fearst
Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thy self,
For thou exists on many a thousand graines
That issue out of dust. Happy thou art not,
For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,
And what thou hast, forgetst. Thou art not certain,
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
After the Moone: if thou art rich, thou'rt poor,
For like an Asse, whose back with Ingots bowes;
Thou bearst thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee; Friend hast thou none.
For thine own bowels which do call thee, fire
The meere effusion of thy proper loynes,
Do curse the Gout, Sarpego, and the Rheume
For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast nor youth, nor age
But as it were an after-dinners sleep
Dreaming on both, for all thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth beg the almes
Of palsied-Eld: and when thou art old, and rich

Thou

Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty
To make thy riches pleasant: what's yet in this
That bears the name of life? Yet in this life
Lye hid moe thousand deaths; yet death we feare
That makes these odds, all even.
Clau. I humbly thank you.
To sue to live, I find I seek to dye,
And seeking death, find life: Let it come on.
Enter Isabella.
Isab. What hoa? Peace here; Grace, and good company.
Pro. Who's there? Come in, the wish deserves a welcome.
Duk. Dear sir, ere long Ile visit you again.
Cla. Most holy sir, I thank you.
Isa. My businesse is a word or two with Claudio.
Pro. And very welcome: look Signior, here's your sister.
Duk. Provost, a word with you.
Pro. As many as you please.
Duk. Bring them to speak, where I may be conceal'd, yet hear them. Exeunt.
Cla. Now sister, what's the comfort?
Isa. Why,
As all comforts are: most good, most good indeed,
Lord Angelo having affaires to heaven
Intends you for his swift Ambassador,
Where you shall be an everlasting Leiger;
Therefore your best appointment make with speed,
To Morrow you set on.
Clau. Is there no remedy?
Isa. None but such remedy, as to save a head
To cleave a heart in twaine:
Cla. But is there any?
Isa. Yes brother, you may live;
There is a devilliſh mercy in the Judge,
If you'l implore it, that will free your life,
But fetter you till death.
Cla. Perpetuall durance!
Isa. I just, perpetuall durance, a restraint
Through all the worlds vastidity you had
To a determin'd scope.
Clau. But in what nature?
Isab. In such a one, as you consenting too't,
Would bark your honor from that trunk you bear,
And leave you naked.
Clau. Let me know the point.
Isa. Oh, I do feare thee Claudio, and I quake,
Least thou a feavorous life shouldst entertain,
And six or seven winters more respect
Than a perpetuall honor. Dar'st thou dye?
The sence of death is most in apprehension,
And the poor Beetle that we tread upon
In corporall sufferance, finds a pang as great,
As when a Giant dyes.
Cla. Why give you me this shame?
Think you I can a resolution fetch
From flowry tenderneſſe? If I must dye,
I will encounter darkneſſe as a bride,
And hugge it in mine armes.
Isa. There spake my brother: there my fathers grave
Did utter forth a voyce. Yes, thou must dye:
Thou art too noble, to conserve a life
In base appliances. This outward sainted Deputy,
Whose setled visage, and deliberate word
Nips youth i'th head, and follies doth emmew
As Falcon doth the fowle: is yet a devill:
His filth within being cast, he would appear
A pond as deep as hell.
Cla. The Princely, Angelo?
Isa. Oh 'tis the cunning Livery of hell,
The damned body to invest, and cover
In Princely gardes; dost thou think Claudio,
If I would yeeld him my virginity
Thou might'it be freed?
Cla. Oh heavens, it cannot be.
Isa. Yes, he would giv't thee; from this ranke offence
So to offend him still. This night's the time
That I should do what I abhorre to name,
Or else thou diest to morrow,
Cla. Thou shalt not do't.
Isa. O, were it but my life,
I'le throw it down for your deliverance
As frankly as a pin.
Clau. Thanks dear Isabell.
Isa. Be ready Claudio, for your death to morrow.
Clau. Yes. Has he affections in him.
That thus can make him bite the Law by th'nose,
When he would force it? sure it is no sinne.
Or of the deadly seven it is the least,
Isa. Which is the least?
Clau. If it were damnable, he being so wise,
Why would he for the momentany trick
Be perdurably fin'de? Oh Isabell.
Isa. What sayes my brother?
Cla. Death is a fearfull thing.
Isa. And shamed life, a hatefull.
Cla. I, but to dye, and go we know not where.
To lye in cold obstruction, and to rot,
This sensible warme motion, to become
A kneaded clod; and the delighted spirit
To bathe in fiery floods, or to reside
In thrilling region of thick-ribbed Ice,
To be imprison'd in the viewlesse windes
And blown with restlesse violence round about
The pendant world: or to be worse than worst
Of those, that lawlesse and incertain thought,
Imagine howling, 'tis too horrible.
The wearieſt, and most loathed worldly life
That Age, Ache, penury, and imprisonment
Can lay on nature, is a Paradise
To what we feare of death.
Isa. Alas, alas.
Cla. Sweet Sister, let me live.
What sinne you do, to save a brothers life,
Nature dispenses with the deed so farre,
That it becomes a vertue.
Isa. Oh you beast!
Oh faithlesse Coward! oh dishoneſt wretch,
Wilt thou be made a man, out of my vice?
Is't not a kind of incest, to take life
From thine own sisters shame? What should I think,
Heaven shield: my Mother plaid my Father faire:
For such a warped slip of wilderneſſe
Nere issu'd from his blood. Take my defiance,
Dye, perish: Might but my bending down
Reprieve thee from thy fate, it should proceed.
Ile pray a thousand prayers for thy death;
No word to save thee.
Cla. Nay hear me Isabell.
Isa. Oh, fie, fie, fie,
Thy sinn's not accidentall, but a Trade;

Mercy

Mercy to thee would prove it self a Bawd,
'Tis best that thou dieſt quickly.

Cla. Oh hear me Iſabella. Duke ſteps in.

Duk. Vouchſafe a word, yong ſiſter, but one word,

Iſa. What is your Will?

Duk. Might you diſpenſe with your leiſure, I would by and by have ſome ſpeech with you: the ſatisfaction I would require, is likewiſe your own benefit.

Iſa. I have no ſuperfluous leiſure, my ſtay muſt be ſtolen out of other affaires: but I will attend you a while.

Duk. Son, I have over-heard what hath paſt between you and your ſiſter. Angelo had never the purpoſe to corrupt her; only he hath made an aſſay of her vertue, to practiſe his judgement with the diſpoſition of natures. She (having the truth of honor in her) hath made him that gracious deniall, which he is moſt glad to receive: I am Confeſſor to Angelo, and I know this to be true, therefore prepare your ſelf to death: do not ſatisfie your reſolution with hopes that are fallible, to morrow you muſt dye, go to your knees, and make ready.

Cla. Let me ask my ſiſter pardon, I am ſo out of love with life, that I will ſue to be rid of it. Exit.

Duk. Hold you there: farewell: Provoſt, a word with you.

Pro. What's your will (father?)

Duk. That now you are come, you will be gone: leave me a while with the Maid, my mind promiſes with my habit, no loſſe ſhall touch her by my company.

Pro. In good time. Exit.

Duk. The hand that hath made you faire, hath made you good: the goodneſſe that is cheap in beauty, makes beauty brief in goodneſſe; but grace being the ſoul of your complexion, ſhall keep the body of it ever faire: the aſſault that Angelo hath made to you, Fortune hath convai'd to my underſtanding; and but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I ſhould wonder at Angelo: how will you do to content this Subſtitute, and to ſave your brother?

Iſab. I am now going to reſolve him: I had rather my brother dye by the Law, than my ſonne ſhould be unlawfully born. But (oh) how much is the good Duke deceiv'd in Angelo: if ever he return, and I can ſpeak to him, I will open my lips in vaine, or diſcover his government.

Duk. That ſhall not be much amiſſe: yet as the matter now ſtands, he will avoyd your accuſation: he made triall of you only. Therefore faſten your eare on my advi ſings, to the love I have in doing good; a remedy preſents it ſelf. I do make my ſelf beleeve that you may moſt uprightcouſly do a poor wronged Lady a merited benefit: redeem your brother from the angry Law; do no ſtaine to your own gracious perſon, and much pleaſe the abſent Duke, if peradventure he ſhall ever returne to have hearing of this buſineſſe.

Iſab. Let me hear you ſpeak farther; I have ſpirit to do any thing that appears not foule in the truth of my ſpirit.

Duke. Vertue is bold, and goodneſſe never fearfull: Have you not heard ſpeak of Mariana the ſiſter of Frederick the great Souldier, who miſcarried at Sea?

Iſab. I have heard of the Lady, and good words went with her name!

Duke. She ſhould this Angelo have married; was affianced to her by oath, and the nuptial appointed: between which time of the contract, and limit of the ſolemnity, her brother Frederick was wrackt at Sea, having in that periſhed veſſell, the dowry of his ſiſter: but mark how heavily this befell to the poor Gentlewoman, there ſhe loſt a noble and renowned brother, in his love toward her, ever moſt kind and naturall: with him the portion and ſinew of her fortune, her marriage dowry: with both, her combynate-husband, this well ſeeming Angelo.

Iſab. Can this be ſo? did Angelo ſo leave her?

Duk. Left her in her teares, and dried not one of them with his comfort: ſwallowed his vows whole, pretending in her, diſcoveries of diſhonor: in few words, beſtow'd her on her own lamentation, which ſhe yet wears for his ſake: and he, a marble to her eares, is waſhed with them but relents not.

Iſab. What a merit were it in death to take this poor maid from the world? what corruption in this life, that it will let this man live? But how out of this can ſhe availe?

Duk. It is a rupture that you may eaſily heal: and the cure of it not only ſaves your brother, but keeps you from diſhonor in doing it.

Iſab. Shew me how (good father.)

Duk. This forenamed Maid hath yet in her the continuance of her firſt affection: his unjuſt unkindneſſe (that in all reaſon ſhould have quenched her love) hath (like an impediment in the Current) made it more violent and unruly: Go you to Angelo, anſwer his requiring with a plauſible obedience, agree with his demands to the point: only referre your ſelfe to this advantage; firſt, that your ſtay with him may not be long: that the time may have all ſhadow, and ſilence in it: and the place anſwer to convenience: this being granted in courſe, and now follows all: we ſhall adviſe this wronged Maid to ſteed up your appointment, go in your place: if the encounter acknowledge it ſelfe hereafter, it may compell him to her recompence; and here, by this is your brother ſaved, your honor untainted, the poor Mariana advantaged, and the corrupt Deputy ſcaled. The Maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt: if you think well to carry this as you may, the doubleneſſe of the benefit defends the deceit from reproofe. What think you of it?

Iſab. The image of it gives me content already, and I truſt it will grow to a moſt proſperous perfection.

Duk. It lyes much in your holding up: haſte you ſpeedily to Angelo, if for this night he intreat you to his bed, give him promiſe of ſatisfaction: I will preſently to S*t*. Lukes, there at the moated-Grange reſides this dejected Mariana; at that place call upon me, and diſpatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Iſa. I thank you for this comfort: fare you well good father. Exit.

Enter Elbow, Clowne, Officers.

El. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needs buy and ſell men and women like beaſts, we ſhall have all the world drink brown and white baſtard.

Duk. Oh heavens, what ſtuffe is here?

Clow. 'Twas never merry world ſince of two uſuries the merrieſt was put downe, and the worſer allow'd by order of Law; a fur'd gowne to keep him warme; and fur'd with Fox and Lamb-skins too, to ſignifie, that craft being richer than innocency, ſtands for the facing.

Elbow. Come your way Sir; 'bleſſe you good father Frier.

Duk. And you good brother father: what offence hath this man made you, Sir?

Elb. Marry

Elbo. Marry sir, he hath offended the Law; and Sir, we take him to be a Theefe too sir: for we have found upon him Sir, a strange Pick-lock, which we have sent to the Deputy.

Duk. Fye, sirrah, a Bawd, a wicked bawd,
The evill that thou causest to be done,
That is thy means to live. Do thou but think
What 'tis to cram a maw, or cloath a back
From such a filthy vice: say to thy self,
From their abominable and beastly touches
I drink, I eat away my self, and live:
Canst thou believe thy living is a life,
So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Clo. Indeed, it do's stink in some sort, Sir:
But yet Sir I would prove——

Duk. Nay, if the devill have given thee proofes for sin
Thou wilt prove his. Take him to prison Officer;
Correction, and instruction must both work
Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elb. He must before the Deputy Sir, he ha's given him warning: the Deputy cannot abide a Whore-master: if he be a Whore-monger, and comes before him, he were as good goe a mile on his errand.

Duk. That we were all, as some would seem to be Free from our faults, as faults from seeming free.

Enter Lucio.

Elb. His neck will come to your waist, a Cord sir.

Clo. I spy comfort, I cry baile: Here's a Gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Luc. How now noble Pompey? What, at the wheels of Cæsar? Art thou led in triumph? What is there none of Pigmalions Images newly made woman to be had now, for putting the hand in the pocket, and extracting clutch'd? What reply? Ha? What saist thou to this Tune, Matter, and Method? Is't not drown'd i'th last raine? Ha? What saist thou Trot? Is the world as it was Man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words? Or how? The trick of it?

Duk. Still thus, and thus: still worse?

Luc. How doth my dear Morsell? thy Mistris? Procures she still? Ha?

Clo. Troth sir, she hath eaten up all her Beefe, and she is her self in the tub.

Luc. Why 'tis good: It is the right of it: it must be so. Ever your fresh Whore, and your pouder'd Baud, an unshun'd consequence, it must be so. Art going to prison Pompey?

Clo. Yes faith sir.

Luc. Why 'tis not amisse Pompey: farewell: go say I sent thee thither: for debt Pompey? Or how?

Elb. For being a baud, for being a baud.

Luc. Well, then imprison him: If imprisonment be the due of a baud, why 'tis his right. Baud is he doubtlesse, and of antiquity too: Baud born. Farewell good Pompey: Commend me to the prison Pompey, you will turn good husband now Pompey, you will keep the house.

Clo. I hope Sir, your good Worship will be my baile?

Luc. No indeed will I not Pompey, it is not the wear: I will pray (Pompey) to encrease your bondage if you take it not patiently: Why, your mettle is the more: Adieu trusty Pompey.
Blesse you Friar.

Duk. And you.

Luc. Do's Bridget paint still, Pompey? Ha?

Elb. Come your wayes sir, come.

Clo. You will not baile me then Sir?

Luc. Then Pompey, nor now: what news abroad Frier? What news?

Elb. Come your wayes sir, come.

Luc. Go to kennell (Pompey) go: Exeunt.
What news Fryer of the Duke?

Duke. I know none: can you tell me of any?

Luc. Some say he is with the Emperour of Russia: other some, he is in Rome: but where is he think you?

Duke. I know not where: but wheresoever, I wish him well.

Luc. It was a mad fantasticall trick of him to steal from the State, and usurp the beggery he was never born to: Lord Angelo Dukes it well in his absence: he puts transgression to't.

Duke. He do's well in't.

Luc. A little more lenitie to Lechery would do no harm in him: Something too crabbed that way, Fryer.

Duke. It is too generall a vice, and severity must cure it.

Luc. Yes in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred; it is well allied, but it is impossible to extirp it quite, Frier, till eating and drinking be put down. They say this Angelo was not made by Man and Woman, after this down-right way of Creation: is it true, think you?

Duk. How should he be made then?

Luc. Some report, a Sea-maid spawn'd him. Some, that he was begot between two Stock-fishes. But it is certain, that when he makes water, his Urine is congeal'd ice, that I know to be true; and he is a motion generative, that's infallible.

Duk. You are pleasant sir, and speak apace.

Luc. Why, what a ruthlesse thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a Cod-piece, to take away the life of a man? Would the Duke that is absent have done this? Ere he would have hang'd a man for the getting a hundred Bastards, he would have paid for the Nursing a thousand. He had some feeling of the sport, he knew the service, and that instructed him to mercy.

Duk. I never heard the absent Duke much detected for Women, he was not inclin'd that way.

Luc. Oh, Sir, you are deceiv'd.

Duk. 'Tis not possible.

Luc. Who, not the Duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty: and his use was, to put a ducket in her Clack-dish; the Duke had Crochets in him. He would be drunk too, that let me inform you.

Duk. You do him wrong, surely.

Luc. Sir, I was an inward of his: a shye fellow was the Duke, and I believe I know the cause of his withdrawing.

Duke. What (I prethee) might be the cause?

Luc. No, pardon: 'Tis a secret must be lockt within the teeth and the lips: but this I can let you understand, the greater file of the subject held the Duke to be wise.

Duk. Wise? Why no question but he was.

Luc. A very superficiall, ignorant, unweighing fellow.

Duk. Either this is envy in you, folly, or mistaking: The very stream of his life, and the businesse he hath helmed, must upon a warranted need, give him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his own bringings forth, and he shall appear to the envious, a Scholler, a Statesman, and a Souldier: therefore you speak unskilfully: or, if your knowledge be more, it is much darkned in your malice.

Luc. Sir, I know him, and I love him.

Duk. Love talks with better knowledge, and knowledge with dear love.

Luc. Come Sir, I know what I know.

Duk. I can hardly believe that, since you know not what you speak. But if ever the Duke returne (as our prayers are he may) let me desire you to make your answer before him: if it be honest you have spoke, you have courage to maintain it; I am bound to call upon you, and I pray you your name?

Luc. Sir my name is Lucio, well known to the Duke.

Duk. He shall know you better Sir, if I may live to report you.

Luc. I feare you not.

Duk. O, you hope the Duke will returne no more: or you imagine me too unhurtfull an opposite: but indeed I can do you little harme: You'll for-swear this again?

Luc. Ile be hang'd first: Thou art deceiv'd in me Friar. But no more of this. Canst thou tell if Claudio dye to morrow, or no?

Duk. Why should he dye Sir?

Luc. Why? For filling a bottle with a Tun-dish: I would the Duke we talke of were return'd again: this ungenitur'd Agent will un-people the Province with Continency. Sparrows must not build in his house-eeves, because they are lecherous: The Duke yet would have dark deeds darkly answered, he would never bring them to light: would he were return'd. Marry this Claudio is condemned for untrussing. Farewell good Friar, I prethee pray for me: The Duke (I say to thee againe) would eat Mutton on Fridayes. He's now past it, yet (and I say to thee) he would mouth with a beggar, though she smelt brown-bread and Garlick: say that I said so: Farewell. Exit.

Duke. No might, nor greatnesse in mortality
Can censure scape: Back-wounding calumny
The whitest vertue strikes, What King so strong,
Can tye the gall up in the slanderous tongue?
But who comes here?

Enter Escalus, Provost, and Bawd.

Esc. Go, away with her to prison.

Bawd. Good my Lord be good to me, your Honor is accounted a mercifull man: good my Lord.

Esc. Double, and trebble admonition, and still forfeit in the same kind? This would make mercy swear and play the Tyrant.

Pro. A Baud of eleven years continuance, may it please your Honor.

Bawd. My Lord, this is one Lucio's information against me, Mistris Kate Keep-downe was with child by him in the Dukes time, he promis'd her marriage: his Child is a year and a quarter old come Philip and Jacob: I have kept it my self; and see how he goes about to abuse me.

Esca. That fellow is a fellow of much License: Let him be call'd before us. Away with her to prison: Go to, no more words. Provost, my Brother Angelo will not be alter'd, Claudio must dye to morrow: Let him be furnish'd with Divines, and have all charitable preparation. If my brother wrought by my pitty, it should not be so with him.

Pro. So please you, this Friar hath been with him, and advis'd him for th'entertainment of death.

Esca. Good'even, good father.

Duk. Blisse, and goodnesse on you.

Esca. Of whence are you?

Duke. Not of this Country, though my chance is now
To use it for my time: I am a brother
Of gracious Order, late come from the Sea,
In speciall businesse from his Holinesse.

Esca. What newes abroad i'th World?

Duk. None, but that there is so great a Feavor on goodnesse, that the dissolution of it must cure it. Novelty is only in request; and it is as dangerous to be aged in any kind of course, as it is vertuous to be constant in any undertaking. There is scarce truth enough alive to make Societies secure, but Security enough to make Fellowships accurst. Much upon this riddle runs the wisdome of the world: This newes is old enough, yet it is every dayes newes. I pray you Sir, of what disposition was the Duke?

Esca. One, that above all other strifes,
Contended especially to know himself.

Duk. What pleasure was he given to?

Esca. Rather rejoycing to see another merry, than merry at any thing which profest to make him rejoyce. A Gentleman of all temperance. But leave him to his events, with a prayer they may prove prosperous; and let me desire to know, how you find Claudio prepar'd? I am made to understand, that you have lent him visitation.

Duk. He professes to have received no finister measure from his Judge, but most willingly humbles himself to the determination of Justice: yet had he framed to himself (by the instruction of his frailty) many deceiving promises of life, which I (by my good leisure) have discredited to him, and now is he resolv'd to dye.

Esca. You have paid the heavens your Function, and the prisoner the very debt of your Calling. I have labour'd for the poor Gentleman, to the extremest shore of my modesty, but my Brother-Justice have I found so severe, that he hath forc'd me to tell him, he is indeed Justice.

Duk. If his own life,
Answer the straitnesse of his proceeding,
It shall become him well: wherein if he chance to faile,
he hath sentenc'd himself.

Es. I am going to visit the prisoner, Fare you well. Exit.

Duk. Peace be with you.
He who the sword of Heaven will beare,
Should be as holy, as severe:
Pattern in himself to know,
Grace to stand, and Vertue go:
More, nor lesse to others paying,
Then by self-offences weighing.
Shame to him, whose cruell striking,
Kils for faults of his own liking:
Twice trebble shame on Angelo,
To weed my vice, and let his grow.
Oh, what may Man within him hide,
Though Angell on the outward side?
How may likenesse made in crimes,
Making practise on the Times,
To draw with idle Spiders strings
Most ponderous and substantiall things?
Craft against vice, I must apply.
With Angelo to night shall lye
His old betroathed (but despised:)
So disguise shall by th'disguised
Pay with falshood, false exacting,
And performe an old contracting. Exit.

Actus

Actus Quartus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Mariana, and Boy singing.

Sono. Take, oh take those lips away,
that so sweetly were forsworn,
And those eyes: the break of day
lights that do mislead the Morn;
But my kisses bring again, bring again,
Seals of love, but seal'd in vain, seal'd in vain.

Enter Duke.

Mari. Break off thy song, and haste thee quick away,
Here comes a man of comfort, whose advise
Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.
I cry you mercy, Sir, and well could wish
You had not found me here so musicall.
Let me excuse me, and believe me so,
My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my wo.

Duk. 'Tis good: though Musick oft hath such a charm
To make bad, good; and good provoke to harm.
I pray you tell me, hath any body enquir'd for me here to day? much upon this time have I promis'd here to meet.

Mari. You have not been enquir'd after: I have sat here all day.

Enter Isabell.

Duk. I do constantly believe you: the time is come even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little, may be I will call upon you anon for some advantage to your self.

Mari. I am always bound to you. Exit.

Duk. Very well met, and well come:
What is the newes from this good Deputy?

Isa. He hath a Garden circummur'd with Brick,
Whose western side is with a Vineyard back't;
And to that Vineyard is a planched gate,
That makes his opening with this bigger Key:
This other doth command a little door,
Which from the Vineyard to the Garden leads,
There have I made my promise, upon the
Heavy middle of the night, to call upon him.

Duk. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?

Isa. I have tane a due and wary note upon't,
With whispering, and most guilty diligence,
In action all of precept, he did show me
The way twice ore.

Duke. Are there no other tokens
Between you'greed, concerning her observance?

Isa. No: none but only a repair ith' dark,
And that I have possest him, my most stay
Can be but brief: for I have made him know,
I have a Servant comes with me along,
That stays upon me, whose perswasion is,
I come about my brother,

Duk. 'Tis well born up.
I have not yet made known to Mariana;

Enter Mariana.

A word of this: what hoa, within; come forth,
I pray you be acquainted with this Maid,
She comes to do you good.

Isa. I do desire the like.

Duk. Do you perswade your self that I respect you?

Mari. Good Fryer, I know you do, and have found it.

Duk. Take then this your companion by the hand,
Who hath a story ready for your eare:
I shall attend your leisure, but make haste
The vaporous night approaches.

Mari. Wilt please you walk aside? Exit.

Duk. Oh Place, and greatness: millions of false eyes
Are stuck upon thee: volumes of report
Run with these false, and most contrarious Quests
Upon thy doings: thousand escapes of wit
Make thee the father of their idle dream,
And rack thee in their fancies. Welcome, how agreed?

Enter Mariana, and Isabell.

Isa. She'll take the enterprize upon her, father,
If you advise it.

Duk. It is not my consent,
But my entreaty too.

Isa. Little have you to say
When you depart from him, but soft and low,
Remember now my brother,

Mar. Feare me not.

Duk. Nor gentle daughter, feare you not at all:
He is your husband on a pre-contract:
To bring you thus together 'tis no sinne,
Sith that the Justice of your title to him
Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let us go,
Our Corn's to reap, for yet our Tithes to sow. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Provost, and Clown.

Pro. Come hither sirrha; can you cut off a mans head?

Clo. If the man be a Bachelor Sir, I can:
But if he be a married man, he's his wives head,
And I can never cut off a womans head.

Pro. Come sir, leave me your snatches, and yeeld me a direct answer. To morrow morning are to dye Claudio, and Barnardine: here is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper, if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeem you from your Gyves: if not, you shall have your full time of imprisonment, and your deliverance with an unpittied whipping; for you have been a notorious baud.

Clo. Sir, I have been an unlawfull baud, time out of mind, but yet I will be content to be a lawfull hangman: I would be glad to receive some instruction from my fellow partner.

Pro. What hoa, Abhorson: where's Abhorson there?

Enter Abhorson.

Abho. Do you call sir?

Pro. Sirrha, here's a fellow will help you to morrow in your execution: if you think it meet, compound with him by the year, and let him abide here with you, if not, use him for the present, and dismisse him, he cannot plead his estimation with you: he hath been a Baud.

Abho. A Baud Sir? fie upon him, he will discredit our mystery.

Pro. Go too Sir, you waigh equally; a feather will turn the Scale. Exit.

Clo. Pray sir, by your good favour: for surely sir, a good favour you have, but that you have a hanging look: Do you call sir, your occupation a Mystery?

Abho. I, Sir, a Mystery.

Clo. Painting Sir, I have heard say, is a Mystery: and your Whores sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my Occupation, a Mystery: but what Mystery there should be in hanging, if I should be hang'd, I cannot imagine.

Abho. Sir, it is a Mystery.

Clo. Proofe.

Abho. Every true mans apparell fits your Theefe.

Clo. If it be too little for your Theefe, your true man thinks it big enough. If it be too big for your Theefe, your Theefe thinkes it little enough: So every true mans apparell fits your Theefe.

Enter Provost.

Pro. Are you agreed?

Clo. Sir, I will serve him: For I do find your Hangman is a more penitent Trade than your Baud: he doth oftner ask forgiveneſſe.

Pro. You sirrha, provide your Block and your Axe to morrow, foure a clock.

Abho. Come on (Baud) I will instruct thee in my Trade: follow.

Clo. I do desire to learne sir: and I hope, if you have occasion to use me for your own turne, you shall find me y'are. For truly Sir, for your kindneſſe, I owe you a good turne. Exit.

Pro. Call hither Barnardine and Claudio:
Th'one has my pitty; not a jot the other,
Being a Murtherer, though he were my brother.

Enter Clandio.

Look, here's the Warrant Claudio, for thy death,
'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to morrow
Thou must be made immortall. Where's Barnardine?

Cla. As fast lock'd up in sleep, as guiltleſſe labour,
When it lyes starkely in the Travellers bones.
He will not awake.

Pro. Who can do good on him?
Well, go, prepare your self. But hark, what noiſe?
Heaven give your spirits comfort: by, and by,
I hope it is some pardon, or reprieve
For the most gentle Claudio. Welcome father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The best, and wholsomst spirits of the night,
Invellop you, good Provost: who call'd here of late?

Pro. Now since the Curphew rung.

Duk. Not Isabell.

Pro. No.

Duke. They will then er't be long.

Pro. What comfort is for Claudio?

Duke. There's some in hope.

Pro. It is a bitter Deputy.

Duk. Not so, not so: his life is paralel'd
Even with the stroke and line of his great Justice:
He doth with holy abstinence subdue
That in himself, which he spurres on his power
To qualifie in others: were he meal'd with that
Which he corrects, then were he tyrannous,
But this being so, he's just. Now are they come.
This is a gentle Provost, sildome when
The steeled Gaoler is the friend of men:
How now? what noiſe? That spirit's possest with haste,
That wounds th'unsisting Postern with these strokes.

Pro. There he must stay untill the Officer
Arise to let him in: he is call'd up.

Duk. Have you no countermand for Claudio yet?
But he must dye to morrow?

Pro. None Sir, none.

Duk. As neer the dawning Provost, as it is,
You shall hear more ere Morning.

Pro. Happily.
You something know: yet I believe there comes
No countermand: no such example have we:
Besides, upon the very siege of Justice,
Lord Angelo hath to the publike eare,
Profest the contrary.

Enter a Messenger.

Duk. This is his Lords man.

Pro. And here comes Claudio's pardon.

Mess. My Lord hath sent you this note,
And by me this further charge:
That you swerve not from the smalleſt Article of it,
Neither in time, matter, or other circumstance.
Good morrow: for as I take it, it is almost day.

Pro. I shall obey him.

Duk. This is his Pardon purchas'd by such sinne,
For which the Pardoner himself is in:
Hence hath offence his quick celerity,
When it is born in high Authority.
When Vice makes Mercy; Mercy's so extended,
That for the faults love, is th'offender friended.
Now Sir, what newes?

Pro. I told you:
Lord Angelo (be-like) thinking me remisſe
In mine Office, awakens me
With this unwonted putting on, methinks strangely:
For he hath not us'd it before.

Duk. Pray you let's hear.

The Letter.

Whatsoever you may hear to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by four of the clock, and in the afternoone Barnardine: For my better satisfaction, let me have Claudio's head sent me by five. Let this be duely performed with a thought that more depends on it, than we must yet deliver. Thus faile not to do your office, as you will answer it at your perill.

What say you to this Sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in th'afternoone?

Pro. A Bohemian born: But here nurst up and bred,
One that is a prisoner nine years old.

Duk. How came it, that the absent Duke had not either deliver'd him to his liberty, or executed him? I have heard it was ever his manner to do so.

Pro. His friends still wrought Reprieves for him:
And indeed his fact till now in the government of Lord Angelo, came not to an undoubtfull proof.

Duk. It is now apparent?

Pro. Most manifeſt, and not denied by himself.

Duk. Hath he born himself penitently in prison?
How seems he to be touch'd?

Pro. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken sleep, careleſſe, wreakleſſe, and feareleſſe of what's past, present, or to come: insensible of mortality, and desperately mortall.

Duk. He wants advice.

Pro. He will hear none: he hath evermore had the liberty of the prison: give him leave to escape hence, he would not. Drunk many times a day, if not many dayes entirely drunk. We have very oft awak'd him, as if to carry him to execution, and shew'd him a seeming Warrant for it, it hath not moved him at all.

Duke.

Duk. More of him anon: There is written in your brow Provoſt, honeſty and conſtancy; if I reade it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me: but in the boldneſſe of my cunning, I will lay my ſelf in hazard: Claudio, whom here you have warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the Law, than Angelo who hath ſentenc'd him. To make you underſtand this in a manifeſted effect, I crave but four dayes reſpit: for the which, you are to do me both a preſent, and a dangerous courteſie.

Pro. Pray Sir, in what?

Duk. In the delaying death.

Pro. Alack, how may I do it? Having the hour limited, and an expreſſe command, under penalty, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my caſe as Claudio's, to croſſe this in the ſmalleſt.

Duk. By the vow of mine Order, I warrant you,
If my inſtructions may be your guide,
Let this Barnardine be this morning executed,
And his head born to Angelo.

Pro. Angelo hath ſeen them both,
And will diſcover the favour.

Duk. Oh, death's a great diſguiſer, and you may adde to it; Shave the head, and tye the beard, and ſay it was the deſire of the penitent to be ſo bar'de before his death: you know the courſe is common. If any thing fall to you upon this, more than thanks and good fortune, by the Saint whom I profeſſe, I will plead againſt it with my life.

Pro. Pardon me, good father, it is againſt my oath.

Duk. Were you ſworn to the Duke, or to the Deputy?

Pro. To him, and to his Subſtitutes.

Duk. You will think you have made no offence, if the Duke avouch the juſtice of your dealing?

Pro. But what likelihood is in that?

Duk. Not a reſemblance, but a certainty; yet ſince I ſee you fearfull, that neither my coate, integrity, nor perſwaſion, can with eaſe attempt you, I will go further than I meant, to pluck all fears out of you. Look you Sir, here is the hand and Seale of the Duke: you know the Character I doubt not, and the Signet is not ſtrange to you.

Pro. I know them both.

Duk. The Contents of this, is the return of the Duke; you ſhall anon over-reade it at your pleaſure: where you ſhall find within theſe two dayes, he will be here. This is a thing that Angelo knows not, for he this very day receives Letters of ſtrange tenor, perchance of the Dukes death, perchance entering into ſome Monaſtery, but by chance nothing of what is writ. Look, th'unfolding Starre calls up the Shepheard; put not your ſelf into amazement, how theſe things ſhould be; all difficulties are but eaſie when they are known. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardines head: I will give him a preſent ſhrift, and adviſe him for a better place. Yet you are amaz'd, but this ſhall abſolutely reſolve you: Come away, it is almoſt clear dawn. Exit.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Clown.

Clo. I am as well acquainted here, as I was in our houſe of profeſſion: one would think it were Miſtris Over-dons own houſe, for here be many of her old Cuſtomers. Firſt, here's young Mr. Raſh, he's in for a commodity of brown paper, and old Ginger, nineſcore and ſeventeen pounds, of which he made five Marks ready money: marry then, Ginger was not much in requeſt, for the old Women were all dead. Then is there here one Mr. Caper, at the ſuit of Maſter Three-Pile the Mercer, for ſome four ſuits of Peach-colour'd Satten, which now peaches him a beggar. Then have we here, young Dizy, and young Mr. Deep-vow, and Mr. Copperſpure, and Maſter Starve Lackey the Rapier and dagger man, and young Drop-heire that kild luſty Pudding, and Mr. Forthlight the Tilter, and brave Mr. Shoory the great Traveller, and wilde Halfe-Canne that ſtabb'd Pots, and I think forty more, all great doers in our Trade, and are now for the Lords ſake.

Enter Abhorſon.

Abho. Sirrha, bring Barnardine hither.

Clo. Maſter Barnardine, you muſt riſe and be hang'd, Maſter Barnardine.

Abh. What hoa Barnardine.

Barnardine within.

Bar. A pox o'your throats: who makes that noyſe there? What are you?

Clo. Your friend Sir, the Hangman:
You muſt be ſo good Sir to riſe, and be put to death.

Bar. Away you Rogue, away, I am ſleepy.

Abh. Tell him he muſt awake,
And that quickly too.

Clo. Pray Maſter Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and ſleep afterwards.

Abh. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clo. He is coming Sir, he is coming: I hear his Straw ruſtle.

Enter Barnardine.

Abh. Is the Axe upon the Block, Sirrha?

Clo. Very ready Sir.

Bar. How now Abhorſon?
What's the newes with you?

Abh. Truly Sir, I would deſire you to clap into your prayers: for look you, the Warrant's come.

Bar. You Rogue, I have been drinking all night, I am not fitted for't.

Clo. Oh, the better Sir: for he that drinks all night and is hanged betimes in the morning, may ſleep the ſounder all the next day.

Enter Duke.

Abh. Look you Sir, here comes your ghoſtly father: do we jeſt now think you?

Duke. Sir, induced by my charity, and hearing how haſtily you are to depart, I am come to adviſe you, comfort you, and pray with you.

Bar. Friar, not I: I have been drinking hard all night, and I will have more time to prepare me, or they ſhall beat out my brains with billets: I will not conſent to dye this day, that's certain.

Duk. Oh Sir, you muſt: and therefore I beſeech you look forward on the journey you ſhall go.

Bar. I ſwear I will not dye to day for any mans perſwaſion.

Duk. But hear you:

Bar. Not a word: if you have any thing to ſay to me, come to my Ward: for thence will not I to day. Exit.

Enter Provoſt.

Duk. Unfit to live, or dye: oh gravell heart,

After him (Fellows) bring him to the block.

Pro. Now sir, how do you finde the prisoner?

Duk. A creature unpre-par'd, unmeet for death,
And to transport him in the minde he is,
Were damnable.

Pro. Here in the prison, father,
There died this morning of a cruell Feaver,
One Ragozine, a most notorious Pirate,
A man of Claudio's years: his beard, and head
Just of colour. What if we do omit
This Reprobate, till he were well enclin'd,
And satisfie the Deputy with the visage
Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio?

Duke. Oh, 'tis an accident that heaven provides:
Dispatch it presently, the houre draws on
Prefixt by Angelo: See this be done,
And sent according to command, whiles I
Perswade this rude wretch willingly to dye.

Pro. This shall be done (good father) presently:
But Barnardine must dye this afternoone,
And how shall we continue Claudio,
To save me from the danger that might come,
If he were known alive?

Duk. Let this be done.
Put them in secret holds, both Barnardine and Claudio,
Ere twice the Sun hath made his journall greeting
To yond generation, you shall finde
Your safety manifested.

Pro. I am your free dependant. Exit.

Duk. Quick, dispatch, and send the head to Angelo.
Now will I write Letters to Angelo,
(The Provost he shall bear them) whose contents
Shall witnesse to him I am neer at home:
And that by great injunctions I am bound
To enter publickly: him Ile desire
To meet me at the consecrated Fount,
A League below the City: and from thence,
By cold gradation, and weale-ballanc'd forme,
We shall proceed with Angelo.

Enter Provost.

Pro. Here is the head, Ile carry it my self.

Duk. Convenient is it: Make a swift return,
For I would commune with you of such things,
That want no eare but yours.

Pro. Ile make all speed. Exit.

Isabell within.

Isa. Peace hoa, be here.

Duk. The tongue of Isabell. She's come to know,
If yet her brothers pardon be come hither:
But I will keep her ignorant of her good,
To make her heavenly comforts of despaire,
When it is least expected.

Enter Isabella.

Isa. Hoa, by your leave.

Duk. Good morning to you, faire, and gracious daughter.

Isa. The better given me by so holy a man,
Hath yet the Deputy sent my brothers pardon?

Duk. He hath releas'd him, Isabell, from the world,
His head is off, and sent to Angelo.

Isa. Nay, but it is not so.

Duk. It is no other.
Shew your wisdome daughter in your close patience.

Isa. Oh, I will to him, and pluck out his eyes.

Duke. You shall not be admitted to his sight.

Isa. Unhappy Claudio, wretched Isabell.
Injurious world, most damned Angelo.

Duk. This nor hurts him, nor profits you a jot.
Forbear it therefore, give your cause to heaven,
Mark what I say, which you shall find
By every syllable a faithfull verity.
The Duke comes home to morrow: nay dry your eyes,
One of our Covent, and his Confessor
Gives me this instance: Already he hath carried
Notice to Escalus and Angelo,
Who do prepare to meet him at the gates, (dome,
There to give up their power: if you can pace your wis-
In that good path that I would wish it go,
And you shall have your bosome on this wretch,
Grace of the Duke, revenges to your heart,
And generall Honor.

Isa. I am directed by you.

Duk. This Letter then to Friar Peter give,
'Tis that he sent me of the Dukes return:
Say, by this token, I desire his company
At Mariana's house to night. Her cause, and yours
Ile perfect him withall, and he shall bring you
Before the Duke; and to the head of Angelo
Accuse him home and home. For my poor self,
I am combined by a sacred Vow,
And shall be absent. Wend you with this Letter:
Command these fretting waters from your eyes
With a light heart; trust not my holy Order
If I pervert your course: who's here?

Enter Luci.

Luc. Good 'even;
Fryer, where's the Provost?

Duke. Not within Sir.

Luc. Oh pretty Isabella, I am pale at mine heart, to see thine eyes so red: thou must be patient; I am faine to dine and sup with water and bran: I dare not for my head fill my belly. One fruitfull Meale would set me too't: but they say the Duke will be here to Morrow. By my troth Isabell I lov'd thy brother, if the old fantasticall Duke of dark corners had been at home, he had lived.

Duke. Sir, the Duke is marvellous little beholding to your reports, but the best is, he lives not in them.

Luc. Friar, thou knowest not the Duke so well as I do: he's a better woodman than thou tak'st him for.

Duke. Well: you'll answer this one day. Fare ye well.

Luc. Nay tarry, Ile go along with thee.
I can tell thee pretty tales of the Duke.

Duke. You have told me too many of him already sir, if they be true: if not true, none were enough.

Luc. I was once before him for getting a Wench with child.

Duk. Did you such a thing?

Luc. Yes marry did I; but I was fain to forswear it, They would else have married me to the rotten Medler.

Duke. Sir, your company is fairer than honest, rest you well.

Luc. By my troth Ile go with thee to the lanes end: if baudy talk offend you, we'll have very little of it: nay Friar I am a kinde of a Burre, I shall stick. Exeunt.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Angelo, and Escalus.

Esc. Every Letter he hath writ, hath disvouch'd other.

Ang.

Ang. In most uneven and distracted manner, his actions shew much like to madnesse, pray heaven his wisdome be not tainted: and why meet him at the gates and deliver our authorities there?

Esc. I guesse not.

Ang. And why should we proclaim it in an houre before his entring, that if any crave redresse of injustice, they should exhibite their petitions in the street?

Esc. He shews his reason for that: to have a dispatch of Complaints, and to deliver us from devices hereafter, which shall then have no power to stand against us.

Ang. Well: I beseech you let it be proclaim'd betimes i'th morne, Ile call you at your house: give notice to such men of sort and suit as are to meet him.

Esc. I shall sir: fare you well. Exit.

Ang. Good night.
This deed unshapes me quite, makes me unpregnant
And dull to all proceedings. A defloured Maide,
And by an eminent Body, that enforc'd
The Law against it? But that her tender shame
Will not proclaim against her Maiden losse,
How might she tongue me? yet reason dares her no,
For my Authority bears of a credent bulk,
That no particular scandall once can touch
But it confounds the breather. He should have liv'd,
Save that his riotous youth with dangerous sense,
Might in the times to come have ta'ne revenge
By so receiving a dishonour'd life,
With ransome of such shame: would yet he had liv'd.
Alack, when once our grace we have forgot,
Nothing goes right, we would, and we would not. Exit.

Scæna Quinta.

Enter Duke and Fryer Peter.

Duk. These Letters at fit time deliver me.
The Provost knows our purpose and our plot,
The matter being afoot, keep your instruction,
And hold you ever to our speciall drift,
Though sometimes you do blench from this to that
As cause doth minister: Go call at Flavia's house,
And tell him where I stay: give the like notice
To Valencius, Rowland, and to Crassus,
And bid them bring the Trumpets to the gate:
But send me Flavius first.

Peter. It shall be speeded well.

Enter Varrius.

Duke. I thank thee Varrius, thou hast made good hast,
Come, we will walk: There's other of our friends
Will greet us here anon: my gentle Varrius. Exeunt.

Scæna Sexta.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Isab. To speak so indirectly I am loath,
I would say the truth, but to accuse him so
That is your part, yet I am advis'd to do it,
He says, to vaile full purpose.

Mar. Be rul'd by him.

Isa. Besides, he tels me, that if peradventure
He speak against me on the adverse side,
I should not think it strange, for 'tis a Physick
That's bitter, to sweet end.

Enter Peter.

Mar. I would Fryer Peter.——

Isab. Oh peace, the Fryer is come.

Peter. Come I have found you out a stand most fit,
Where you may have such vantage on the Duke
He shall not passe you:
Twice have the Trumpets sounded.
The generous and gravest Citizens
Have hent the gates, and very neer upon
The Duke is entring:
Therefore hence away. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Duke, Varrius, Lords, Angelo, Escalus, Lucio, Citizens at severall doors.

Duke. My very worthy Cosen, fairly met,
Our old and faithfull friend, we are glad to see you.

Ang. Esc. Happy return be to your Royall Grace.

Duke. Many and hearty thankings be to you both:
We have made enquiry of you, and we hear
Such goodnesse of your Justice, that our soul
Cannot but yeeld you forth to publike thanks
Forerunning more requitall.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.

Du. Oh your desert speaks loud, and I should wrong
To lock it in the wards of covert bosome
When it deserves with Characters of Brasse
A forted residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And razure of oblivion: Give me your hand
And let the subject see, to make them know
That outward curtesies would fain proclaim
Favours that keep within: Come Escalus,
You must walk by us on our other hand:
And good supporters are you.

Enter Peter and Isabella.

Peter. Now is your time
Speak loud, and kneel before him.

Isab. Justice, O Royall Duke, vaile your regard
Upon a wrong'd (I would faine have said a Maid)
Oh worthy Prince dishonour not your eye
By throwing it on any other object,
Till you have heard me, in my true complaint,
And given me Justice, Justice, Justice, Justice.

Duke. Relate your wrongs;
In what, by whom? be brief:
Here is Lord Angelo shall give you Justice,
Reveal your self to him.

Isab. Oh worthy Duke,
You bid me seek redemption of the Devill,
Hear me your self: for that which I must speak
Must either punish me, not being believ'd,
Or wring redresse from you:
Hear me: oh hear me, here.

Ang. My Lord, her wits, I feare me, are not firm:
She hath been a suitor to me, for her brother
Cut off by course of Justice.

Isab. By course of Justice!

Ang. And she will speak most bitterly.

Isab. Most

Isab. Most strange: but yet most truly will I speak,
That Angelo's forsworne, is it not strange?
That Angelo's a murtherer, is't not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous theefe,
An hypocrite, a virgin violator,
Is it not strange? and strange?
Du. Nay it is ten times strange?
Isa. It is not truer he is Angelo,
Than this is all as true, as it is strange;
Nay, it is ten times true, for truth is truth
To th'end of reckoning.
Du. Away with her: poor soul
She speaks this, in th'infirmity of sense.
Isab. Oh Prince, I conjure thee, as thou beleev'st
There is another comfort, than this world,
That thou neglect me not, with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madnesse: make not impossible
That which but seems unlike, 'tis not impossible
But one, the wickedst Caitiffe on the ground
May seem as shie, as grave, as just, as absolute:
As Angelo, even so may Angelo
In all his dressings, caracts, titles, formes,
Be an arch-villaine: Believe it, royall Prince,
If he be lesse, he's nothing, but he's more,
Had I more name for Badnesse.
Du. By mine honesty
If she be mad, as I believe no other,
Her madnesse hath the oddest frame of sense,
Such a dependency of thing on thing
As ere I heard in madnesse.
Isab. O gracious Duke
Harp not on that; nor do not banish reason,
For inequality, but let your reason serve
To make the truth appear, where it seems hid,
And hide the false seems true.
Duke. Many that are not mad
Have sure more lack of reason:
What would you say?
Isab. I am the sister of one Claudio,
Condemn'd upon the act of Fornication
To lose his head, condemn'd by Angelo:
I, (in probation of a Sisterhood)
Was sent to by my brother; one Lucio
As then the Messenger.
Luc. That's I, and't like your Grace:
I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo:
For her poor brothers pardon.
Isab. That's he indeed.
Du. You were not bid to speak.
Luc. No, my good Lord,
Nor wish'd to hold my peace.
Du. I wish you now then,
Pray you take note of it: and when you have
A businesse for your self: pray heaven you then
Be perfect.
Luc. I warrant your honour.
Du. The warrant's for your self: take heed to't.
Isab. This Gentleman told something of my Tale.
Luc. Right.
Du. It may be right, but you are i'th wrong
To speak before your time, proceed.
Isab. I went
To this pernicious Caitiff Deputy.
Du. That's somewhat madly spoken.
Isab. Pardon it.
The phrase is to the matter.
Du. Mended again: the matter: proceed.
Isab. In brief, to set the needlesse by:
How I perswaded, how I prayd, and kneel'd,
How he refeld me, and how I replide
(For this was of much length) the vilde conclusion
I now begin with griefe and shame to utter.
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust
Release my brother; and after much debatement,
My sisterly remorse, confutes mine honour,
And I did yeeld to him: But the next morne betimes,
His purpose surfetting, he sends a warrant
For my poor brothers head.
Du. This is most likely.
Isab. Oh that it were as like as it is true.
Du. By heaven (fond wretch) thou know'st not what thou (speak'st,
Or else thou art suborn'd against his honour
In hatefull practise: first his Integrity
Stands without blemish: next it imports no reason,
That with such vehemency he should pursue
Faults proper to himself: if he had so offended
He would have weigh'd thy brother by himself,
And not have cut him off: some one hath set you on:
Confesse the truth, and say by whose advice,
Thou cam'st here to complain.
Isab. And is this all?
Then oh you blessed Ministers above,
Keep me in patience, and with ripened time
Unfold the evill which is here wrapt up
In countenance: heaven shield your Grace from wo,
As I thus wrong'd, hence unbelieved go.
Du. I know you'ld fain be gone: An Officer:
To prison with her: Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall,
On him so neer us? This needs must be a practise;
Who knew of your intent and coming hither?
Isab. One that I would were here, Fryer Lodowick.
Du. A ghostly Father belike:
Who knows that Lodowick?
Luc. My Lord, I know him, 'tis a medling Fryer,
I do not like the man: had he been Lay, my Lord,
For certain words he spake against your Grace
In your retirement, I had swing'd him soundly.
Du. Words against me? this 'a good Fryer belike
And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our Substitute: Let this Fryer be found.
Luc. But yesternight my Lord, she and that Fryer
I saw them at the prison: a sawcy Fryer,
A very scurvy fellow.
Peter. Blessed be your Royall Grace:
I have stood by my Lord, and I have heard
Your Royall eare abus'd: first hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your Substitute,
Who is as free from touch, or soyle with her
As she from one ungot.
Du. We did believe no lesse.
Know you that Fryer Lodowick which she speaks of?
Peter. I know him for a man Divine and holy,
Not scurvy, nor a temporary medler
As he's reported by this Gentleman:
And on my trust, a man that never yet
Did (as he vouches) misreport your Grace.
Luc. My Lord, most villanously, believe it.
Peter. Well: he in time may come to clear himself;
But at this instant he is sick, my Lord:

Of a ſtrange Feaver: upon his meer requeſt
Being come to knowledge, that there was complaint
Intended againſt Lord Angelo, came I hither
To ſpeak as from his mouth, what he doth know
Is true and falſe: and what he with his oath
And all probation will make up full cleare
Whenſoever he is conventeds: Firſt, for this woman,
To juſtifie this worthy Nobleman,
So vulgarly and perſonally accus'd,
Her ſhall you hear diſproved to her eyes,
Till ſhe her ſelf confeſſe it.

Duke. Good Fryer let's hear it:
Do you not ſmile at this, Lord Angelo?
Oh heaven, the vanity of wretched fools.
Give us ſome ſeats, Come Coſen Angelo,
In this Ile be impartiall: be you Judge
Of your own Cauſe: Is this the Witneſſe Fryer?

Enter Mariana.

Firſt, let her ſhew her face, and after ſpeak.

Mar. Pardon my Lord, I will not ſhew my face
Untill my husband bid me.

Duke. What, are you married?

Mar. No, my Lord.

Duke. Are you a Maid?

Mar. No, my Lord.

Duke. A Widdow then?

Mar. Neither my Lord.

Duke. Why are you nothing then: neither Maid, Widdow, nor Wife?

Luc. My Lord, ſhe may be a Punk: for many of them, are neither Maid, Widdow, nor Wife.

Duke. Silence that fellow: I would he had ſome cauſe to prattle for himſelf.

Luc. Well my Lord.

Mar. My Lord, I do confeſſe I nere was married,
And I confeſſe beſides, I am no Maid,
I have known my husband, yet my husband
Knowes not that ever he knew me.

Luc. He was drunk then, my Lord, it can be no better.

Duk. For the benefit of ſilence, would thou wert ſo too.

Luc. Well my Lord.

Du. This is no Witneſſe for Lord Angelo.

Mar. Now I come to't, my Lord.
She that accuſes him of Fornication,
In ſelf-ſame manner doth accuſe my husband,
And charges him, my Lord, with ſuch a time,
When Ile depoſe I had him in mine Armes
With all th'effect of Love.

Ang. Charges ſhe moe than me?

Mar. Not that I know.

Du. No? you ſay your husband.

Mar. Why juſt my Lord, and that is Angelo,
Who thinks he knows, that he neere knew my body,
But knows, he thinks, that he knows Iſabels.

Ang. This is a ſtrange abuſe: Let's ſee thy face.

Mar. My husband bids me, now I will unmask.
This is that face, thou cruell Angelo
Which once thou ſworſt, was worth the looking on:
This is the hand, which with a vow'd contract
Was faſt belockt in thine: This is the body
That took away the match from Iſabell,
And did ſupply thee at thy Garden-houſe
In her Imagin'd perſon.

Du. Know you this woman?

Luc. Carnally ſhe ſays.

Du. Sirrha, no more.

Luc. Enough my Lord.

Ang. My Lord, I muſt confeſſe, I know this woman,
And five years ſince there was ſome ſpeech of marriage
Betwixt my ſelf and her: which was broke off,
Partly for that her promis'd proportions
Came ſhort of Compoſition: but in chief
For that her reputation was diſ-valued
In levity: Since which time of five years
I never ſpake with her, ſaw her, nor heard from her
Upon my faith and honour.

Mar. Noble Prince,
As there comes light from heaven, and words from breath,
As there is ſenſe in truth, and truth in vertue,
I am affianced this mans wife, as ſtrongly
As words could make up Vowes: And my good Lord,
But Tueſday night laſt gone, in's Garden-houſe
He knew me as a wife. As this is true,
Let me in ſafety raiſe me from my knees,
Or elſe for ever be confixed here
A Marble Monument.

Ang. I did but ſmile till now.
Now, good my Lord, give me the ſcope of Juſtice,
My patience here is touch'd: I do perceive
Theſe poor informall women, are no more
But inſtruments of ſome more mightier member
That ſets them on. Let me have way, my Lord,
To finde this practiſe out.

Duke. I, with my heart,
And puniſh them to your height of pleaſure.
Thou fooliſh Fryer, and thou pernicious woman
Compact with her that's gone: think'ſt thou thy oaths,
Though they would ſwear down each particular Saint,
Were teſtimonies 'gainſt his worth, and credit
That's ſeald in approbation? you, Lord Eſcalus,
Sit with my Coſen, lend him your kinde pains
To finde out this abuſe, whence 'tis deriv'd.
There is another Fryer that ſet them on,
Let him be ſent for.

Peter. Would he were here, my Lord, for he indeed
Hath ſet the women on to this complaint;
Your Provoſt knows the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

Duke. Go, do it inſtantly:
And you my Noble and well-warranted Coſen
Whom it concerns to hear this matter forth,
Do with your injuries as ſeems you beſt
In any chaſtiſement; I for a while
Will leave you; but ſtirre not you till you have
Well determin'd upon theſe Slanderers. Exit.

Eſc. My Lord, wee'll do it throughly: Signior Lucio, did not you ſay, you knew that Fryer Lodowick to be a diſhoneſt perſon?

Luc. Cucullus non facit Monachum, honeſt in nothing but in his Cloaths, and one that hath ſpoke moſt villanous ſpeeches of the Duke.

Eſc. We ſhall intreat you to abide here till he come, and inforce them againſt him: we ſhall finde this Fryer a notable fellow.

Luc. As any in Vienna on my word.

Eſca. Call that ſame Iſabell here once againe, I would ſpeak with her: pray you, my Lord, give me leave to queſtion, you ſhall ſee how Ile handle her.

Luc. Not better than he, by her own report.

Eſca. Say you?

Luc. Marry Sir, I think, if you handled her privately

She

She should sooner confesse, perchance publikely she'll be asham'd.

Enter Duke, Provost, Isabella.

Esc. I will go darkly to work with her.

Luc. That's the way: for women are light at midnight.

Esc. Come on Mistris, here's a Gentlewoman Denies all that you have said.

Luc. My Lord, here comes the Rascall I spoke of, Here with the Provost.

Esc. In very good time: speak not you to him, till we call upon you.

Luc. Mum.

Esc. Come sir, did you set these women on to slander Lord Angelo? they have confes'd you did.

Duke. 'Tis false.

Esc. How? know you where you are?

Duke. Respect to your great place; and let the Devill Be sometime honour'd, for his burning throne. Where is the Duke? 'tis he should hear me speak.

Esc. The Duke's in us: and we will hear you speak, Look you speak justly.

Duke. Boldly at least. But oh poor souls, Come you to seek the Lamb here of the Fox? Good night to your redresse: is the Duke gone? Then is your cause gone too: The Duke's unjust, Thus to retort your manifest appeale, And put your tryall in the villaines mouth, Which here you come to accuse.

Luc. This is the Rascall: this is he I spoke of.

Esc. Why thou unreverend and unhallowed Fryer: Is't not enough thou hast suborn'd these women, To accuse this worthy man? but in foul mouth, And in the witnesse of his proper eare, To call him villaine; and then to glance from him, To th'Duke himself, to tax him with Injustice? Take him hence; to th'rack with him: we'll towze you Joynt by joynt, but we will know his purpose: What? unjust?

Duke. Be not so hot: the Duke dare No more stretch this finger of mine, than he Dare rack his own: his Subject am I not, Nor here Provinciall: My businesse in this State Made me a looker on here in Vienna, Where I have seen corruption boyl and bubble, Till it ore-run the Stew: Laws for all faults, But faults so countenanc'd, that the strong Statutes Stand like the forfeits in a Barbers shop, As much in mock, as mark.

Esc. Slander to th'State: Away with him to prison.

Ang. What can you vouch against him Signior Lucio? Is this the man that you did tell us of?

Luc. 'Tis he, my Lord: come hither goodman baldpate, do you know me?

Duke. I remember you sir by the sound of your voyce, I met you at the prison in the absence of the Duke?

Luc. Oh, did you so? and do you remember what you said of the Duke?

Duke. Most notedly sir?

Luc. Do you so sir: And was the Duke a flesh-monger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duke. You must (sir) change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you indeed spoke so of him, and much more, much worse.

Luc. Oh thou damnable fellow: did not I pluck thee by the nose, for thy speeches?

Duke. I protest, I love the Duke as I love my self.

Ang. Hark how the villaine would close now, after his treasonable abuses.

Esc. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withall: Away with him to prison: Where is the Provost? away with him to prison: lay bolts enough upon him: let him speak no more: away with those Giglets too, and with the other confederate companion.

Duke. Stay sir, stay a while.

Ang. What, resists he? Help him Lucio.

Luc. Come sir, come sir, come sir: foh sir, why you baldpated lying Rascall: you must be hooded must you? show your knaves visage with a pox to you: show your sheep-biting face, and be hang'd an houre: wilt not off?

Duke. Thou art the first knave that ere mad'st a Duke. First Provost, let me bayle these gentle three: Sneak not away sir, for the Fryer and you, Must have a word anon: lay hold on him.

Luc. This may prove worse than hanging.

Duke. What you have spoke, I pardon: sit you down. We'll borrow place of him; Sir, by your leave: Has't thou or word or wit, or impudence, That yet can do thee office? If thou has't, Rely upon it, till my tale be heard, And hold no longer out.

Ang. Oh my dread Lord. I should be guiltier than my guiltinesse, To think I can be undiscernable, When I perceive your Grace, like power Divine, Hath look'd upon my passes. Then good Prince, No longer Session hold upon my shame, But let my tryall be mine own Confession: Immediate sentence then, and sequent death, Is all the grace I beg.

Duke. Come hither Mariana, Say: was't thou ever contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was my Lord.

Duke. Go take her hence, and marry her instantly. Do you the office (Fryer) which consummate, Return him here again: go with him Provost. Exit.

Esc. My Lord, I am more amaz'd at his dishonor, Than at the strangenesse of it.

Duke. Come hither Isabel, Your Fryer is now your Prince: As I was then Advertising, and holy to your businesse, (Not changing heart with habit) I am still, Atturnied at your service.

Isab. Oh give me pardon That I, your vassaile, have imploy'd and pain'd, Your unknown Soveraignty.

Duke. You are pardon'd Isabel: And now dear Maid, be you as free to us. Your brothers death, I know, sits at your heart: And you may marvaile, why I obscur'd my self, Labouring to save his life; and would not rather Make rash remonstrance of my hidden power, Then let him so be lost: Oh most kinde Maid, It was the swift celerity of his death, Which I did think with slower foot came on, That brain'd my purpose: but peace be with him, That life is better life past fearing death, Then that which lives to feare: make it your comfort,

So

So happy is your Brother.

Enter Angelo, Maria, Peter, Provoſt.

Iſa. I do my Lord.

Duke. For this new-married man, approaching here,
Whoſe ſalt imagination yet hath wrong'd
Your well defended honour; you muſt pardon
For Mariana's ſake: But as he adjudg'd your Brother,
Being criminall, in double violation
Of ſacred chaſtitie, and of promiſe-breach,
Thereon dependant for your brothers life,
The very mercy of the Law cryes out
Moſt audible, even from his proper tongue,
An Angelo for Claudio, death for death:
Haſte ſtill payes haſte, and leaſure anſwers leaſure;
Like doth quit like, and Meaſure ſtill for Meaſure:
Then Angelo thy fault's thus manifeſted:
Which though thou wouldſt deny, denyes thee vantage.
We do condemn thee to the very Block
Where Claudio ſtoop'd to death, and with like haſte.
Away with him.

Mar. Oh my moſt gracious Lord,
I hope you will not mock me with a husband?

Duke. It is your husband mock'd you with a husband,
Conſenting to the ſafe-guard of your honour,
I thought your marriage fit: elſe Imputation,
For that he knew you, might reproach your life.
And choak your good to come: for his poſſeſſions,
Although by confiſcation they are ours;
We do enſtate, and widdow you withall,
To buy you a better husband.

Mar. Oh my dear Lord,
I crave no other, nor no better man.

Duke. Never crave him, we are definitive.

Mar. Gentle my Liege.

Duke. You do but loſe your labour.
Away with him to death: Now ſir, to you.

Mar. Oh my good Lord, ſweet Iſabel, take my part,
Lend me your knees, and all my life to come,
Ile lend you all my life to do you ſervice.

Duke. Againſt all ſenſe you do importune her,
Should ſhe kneel down, in mercy of this fact,
Her brothers ghoſt his paved bed would break,
And take her hence in horror.

Mar. Iſabel:
Sweet Iſabel, do yet but kneel by me,
Hold up your hands, ſay nothing: I'le ſpeak all.
They ſay beſt men are moulded out of faults,
And for the moſt, become much more the better
For being a little bad: So may my husband.
Oh Iſabel: will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dyes for Claudio's death.

Iſab. Moſt bounteous Sir.
Look, if it pleaſe you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my brother liv'd: I partly think,
A due ſincerity governed his deeds,
Till he did look on me: Since it is ſo,
Let him not dye: my brother had but Juſtice,
In that he did the thing for which he di'd.
For Angelo, his act did not ore-take his bad intent,
And muſt be buried but as an intent
That periſh'd by the way: thoughts are no ſubjects
Intents, but meerely thoughts.

Mar. Meerely my Lord.

Duke. Your ſuit's unprofitable: ſtand up I ſay:
I have bethought me of another fault.
Provoſt, how came it Claudio was beheaded
At an unuſuall houre?

Pro. It was commanded ſo.

Duk. Had you a ſpeciall warrant for the deed?

Pro. No my good Lord, it was by private meſſage.

Duke. For which I do diſcharge you of your office,
Give up your keys,

Pro. Pardon me, Noble Lord.
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not,
Yet did repent me after more advice,
For teſtimony whereof, one in the priſon
That ſhould by private order elſe have dy'd,
I have reſerv'd alive.

Duke. What's he?

Pro. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I wouldſt thou hadſt done ſo by Claudio:
Go fetch him hither, let me look upon him.

Eſc. I am ſorry, one ſo learned, and ſo wiſe
As you, Lord Angelo, have ſtill appear'd,
Should ſlip ſo groſly, both in the heat of blood
And lack of temper'd judgement afterward.

Ang. I am ſorry, that ſuch ſorrow I procure,
And ſo deep ſticks it in my penitent heart,
That I crave death more willingly than mercy,
'Tis my deſerving, and I do intreat it.

Enter Barnardine and Provoſt, Claudio, Julietta.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine?

Pro. This my Lord.

Duke. There was a Fryer told me of this man,
Sirrha, thou art ſaid to have a ſtubborn ſoul,
That apprehends no further than this world,
And ſquar'ſt thy life according: Thou'rt condemn'd,
But for thoſe earthly faults, I quit them all,
I pray thee take this mercy to provide
For better times to come: Fryer, adviſe him,
I leave him to your hand. What muffled fellow's that?

Pro. This is another priſoner that I ſav'd,
Who ſhould have dy'd when Claudio loſt his head,
As like almoſt to Claudio, as himſelf.

Duke. If he be like your brother, for his ſake
Is he pardon'd, and for your lovely ſake
Give me your hand, and ſay you will be mine,
He is my brother too: But fitter time for that:
By this Lord Angelo perceives hee's ſafe,
Methinks I ſee a quickning in his eye:
Well Angelo, your evill quits you well.
Look that you love your wife: her worth, worth yours.
I finde an apt remiſſion in my ſelf:
And yet here's one in place I cannot pardon,
You ſirrha, that knew me for a fool, a Coward,
One all of Luxurie, an Aſſe, a mad man:
Wherein have I ſo deſerv'd of you
That you extoll me thus?

Luc. 'Faith my Lord, I ſpoke it but according to the trick: if you will hang me for it, you may: but I had rather it would pleaſe you, I might be whipt.

Duke. Whipt firſt ſir, and hang'd after.
Proclaime it Provoſt round about the City:
If any woman wrong'd by this lew'd fellow
(As I have heard him ſwear himſelf there's one Whom he begot with childe) let her appear,
And he ſhall marry her: the nuptiall finiſh'd,
Let him be whip'd and hang'd.

Luc. I beſeech your Highneſſe, do not marry me to a Whore: your Highneſſe ſaid even now, I made you a Duke, good my Lord do not recompence me, in making me a Cuckold.

Duke. Upon

Duke. Upon mine honor thou shalt marry her;
Thy slanders I forgive, and therewithall
Remit thy other forfeits: take him to prison,
And see our pleasure herein executed.
Luc. Marrying a punk my Lord, is pressing to death,
Whipping and hanging.
Duk. Slandering a Prince deserves it.
She Claudio that you wrong'd, look you restore.
Joy to you Mariana, love her Angelo:
I have confes'd her, and I know her vertue.
Thanks good friend, Escalus, for thy much goodnesse,
There's more behind that is more gratulate,
Thanks Provost for thy care, and secrecy,
We shall imploy thee in a worthier place.
Forgive him Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's,
Th'offence pardons it self. Dear Isabell,
I have a motion much imports your good,
Whereto if you'll a willing eare incline;
What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine,
So bring us to our Pallace, where wee'll show
What's yet behind, that's meet you all should know.

The Comedie of Errors.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, with the Merchant of Syracusa, Jaylor, and other attendants.

Merchant.

PRoceed Salinus to procure my fall,
And by the doom of death end woes and all.
Duke. Merchant of Siracusa, plead no more.
I am not partiall to infringe our Lawes;
The enmitie and discord which of late
Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your Duke,
To Merchants our well-dealing Countrimen,
Who wanting gilders to redeem their lives,
Have seal'd his rigorous statutes with their blouds,
Excludes all pitty from our threatening looks:
For since the mortall and intestine jarres
Twixt thy seditious Countrimen and us,
It hath in solemn Synods been decreed,
Both by the Siracusians and our selves,
T'admit no traffick to our adverse Towns:
Nay more, if any born at Ephesus
Be seen at any Siracusian Marts and Faires:
Again, if any Siracusian born
Come to the Bay of Ephesus, he dies:
His goods confiscate to the Dukes dispose,
Unlesse a thousand marks be levied
To quit the penalty, and ransom him:
Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount unto a hundred Marks,
Therefore by Law thou art condemn'd to die.
Mer. Yet this my comfort, when your words are done,
My woes end likewise with the evening Sunne.
Duk. Well Siracusian; say in brief the cause
Why thou departedst from thy native home?
And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus?
Mer. A heavier task could not have been impos'd,
Then I to speak my grief unspeakable:
Yet that the world may witnesse, that my end
Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,
Ile utter what my sorrow gives me leave.
In Syracusa was I born, and wed
Unto a woman, happy but for me;
And by me too, had not our hap been bad:
With her I liv'd in joy, our wealth increast
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidamium, till my factors death:
And he great store of goods at random leaving,
Drew me from kinde embracements of my spouse;
From whom my absence was not six moneths old,
Before her self (almost at fainting under
The pleasing punishment that women bear)
Had made provision for her following me,
And soon, and safe arrived where I was:
There had she not been long, but she became
A joyfull mother of two goodly sonnes:
And, which was strange, the one so like the other,
As could not be distinguish'd but by names.
That very hour, and in the self-same Inne,
A poor mean woman was delivered
Of such a burthen, Male-twins both alike:
Those, for their parents were exceeding poor,
I bought, and brought up to attend my sonnes.
My wife, not meanly proud of two such boys,
Made daily motions for our home return:
Unwilling I agreed, alas, too soon we came aboord.
A league from Epidamium had we sayld
Before the alwayes winde-obeying deep
Gave any tragick Instance of our harm:
But longer did we not retain much hope;
For what obscured light the heavens did grant,
Did but convey unto our fearfull minds
A doubtfull warrant of immediate death;
Which though my self would gladly have imbrac'd,
Yet the incessant weeping of my wife,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And pitteous plainings of the prety babes
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to fear,
Forc't me to seek delays for them and me,
And this it was: (for other means was none)
The Sailors sought for safety by our boate,
And left the Ship then sinking-ripe to us.
My wife, more carefull for the latter born,
Had fastened him unto a small spare Mast,
Such as Sea-faring men provide for storms:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whil'st I had been like heedfull of the other.
The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fixt,
Fastned our selves at either end the Mast,
And floating straight, obedient to the streame,
Was carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length the Sunne gazing upon the earth,
Dispersed those vapours that offended us,
And by the benefit of his wish'd light
The Seas wax calme, and we discovered
Two Ships from farre, making amain to us:
Of Corinth that, of Epidaurus this;
But ere they came, oh let me say no more,
Gather the sequell by that went before.
Duke. Nay forward old man, do not break off so,

For we may pitty, though not pardon thee.
Merch. Oh had the gods done ſo, I had not now
Worthily tearm'd them mercileſſe to us:
For ere the Ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encountred by a mighty rock,
Which being violently born up upon,
Our helpfull Ship was ſplitted in the midſt;
So that in this unjuſt divorce of us,
Fortune had left to both of us alike,
What to delight in, what to ſorrow for,
Her part, poor ſoul, ſeeming as burdened,
With leſſer weight, but not with leſſer woe,
Was carried with more ſpeed before the winde,
And in our ſight they three were taken up
By Fiſhermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length another Ship had ſeiz'd on us,
And knowing whom it was their hap to ſave,
Gave helpfull welcome to their Shipwrackt gueſts,
And would have reft the Fiſhers of their prey,
Had not their Bark been very ſlow of ſail;
And therefore homeward did they bend their courſe.
Thus have you heard me ſever'd from my bliſſe,
That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell ſad ſtories of my own miſhaps.
Duke. And for the ſakes of them thou ſorroweſt for,
Do me the favour to dilate at full,
What hath befaln of them and thee till now.
Merch. My yongeſt boy, and yet my eldeſt care,
At eighteen years became inquiſitive
After his brother; and importun'd me
That his attendant, (for his caſe was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name,)
Might bear him company in the queſt of him:
Whom whil'ſt I laboured of a love to ſee,
I hazarded the loſſe of whom I lov'd.
Five Sommers have I ſpent in fartheſt Greene,
Roming clean through the bounds of Aſia,
And coaſting homeward, came to Epheſus:
Hopeleſſe to finde, yet loath to leave unſought
Or that, or any place that harbours men:
But here muſt end the ſtory of my life,
And happy were I in my timely death,
Could all my travells warrant me they live.
Duke. Hapleſſe Egeon whom the fates have markt
To bear th'extremitie of dire miſhap:
Now truſt me, were it not againſt our Lawes,
Againſt my Crowne, my oath, my dignity,
Which Princes would, they may not diſanull,
My ſoul ſhould ſue as advocate for thee:
But though thou art adjudged to the death,
And paſſed ſentence may not be recal'd
But to our honours great diſparagement:
Yet will I favour thee in what I can,
Therefore Merchant, Ile limit thee this day
To ſeek thy help by beneficiall help,
Try all the friends thou haſt in Epheſus,
Beg thou, or borrow, to make up the ſumme,
And live: if no, then thou art doom'd to die:
Jaylor take him to thy cuſtodie.
Jaylor. I will my Lord.
Merch. Hopeleſſe and helpleſſe doth Egeon wend,
But to procraſtinate his liveleſſe end. Exeunt.

Enter Antipholis, Erotes, a Merchant, and Dromio.

Mer. Therefore give out you are of Epidamium,
Leſt that your goods too ſoon be confiſcate:
This very day a Syracuſan Merchant
Is apprehended for arrivall here,
And not being able to buy out his life,
According to the ſtatute of the Town,
Dies ere the weary Sunne ſet in the Weſt;
There is your money that I had to keep.
Ant. Go bear it to the Centaure, where we hoſt,
And ſtay there Dromio, till I come to thee;
Till that Ile view the manners of the Town,
Within this hour it will be dinner time:
Peruſe the traders, gaze upon the buildings,
And then return and ſleep within mine Inne,
For with long travaile I am ſtiffe and weary.
Get thee away.
Dro. Many a man would take you at your word,
And go indeed, having ſo good a means.
Exit Dromio.
Ant. A truſty villain ſir, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholly,
Lightens my humor with his merry jeſts:
What, will you walk with me about the Town,
And then go to the Inne and dine with me?
E. Mer. I am invited ſir to certain Merchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit:
I crave your pardon, ſoon at five a clock,
Pleaſe you, Ile meet with you upon the Mart,
And afterward conſort you till bed time:
My preſent buſineſſe cals me from you now.
Ant. Farewell till then: I will go looſe my life,
And wander up and down to view the Citie.
E. Mer. Sir I commend you to your own content.
Exeunt.
Ant. He that commends me to my own content,
Commends me to the thing I cannot get:
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the Ocean ſeeks another drop,
Who falling there to finde his fellow forth,
(Unſeen, inquiſitive) confounds himſelf,
So I, to finde a Mother and a Brother,
Inqueſt of him (unhappie) looſe my ſelf.

Enter Dromio of Epheſus.

Here comes the almanack of my true date:
What now? How chance thou art return'd ſo ſoon,
E. Dro. Return'd ſo ſoon, rather approacht too late:
The Capon burnes, the Pig fals from the ſpit;
The clock hath ſtrucken twelve upon the bell:
My Miſtris made it one upon my cheek:
She is ſo hot becauſe the meat is cold:
The meat is cold becauſe you come not home;
You come not home, becauſe you have no ſtomack:
You have no ſtomack, having broke your faſt:
But we that know what 'tis to faſt and pray,
Are penitent for your default to day.
Ant. Stop in your winde ſir, tell me this I pray,
Where have you left the money that I gave you?
E. Dro. Oh? ſix pence that I had a wenſday laſt,
To pay the Sadler for my Miſtris crupper:
The Sadler had it Sir, I kept it not.
Ant. I am not in a ſportive humor now:
Tell me, and dally not, where is the money?
We being ſtrangers here, how dar'ſt thou truſt
So great a charge from thine own cuſtodie.
E. Dro. I pray you jeſt ſir as you ſit at dinner:
I from my Miſtris come to you in poſt:
If I return I ſhall be poſt indeed.

For

For the will scoure your fault upon my pate:
Methinks your maw, like mine, should be your cook,
And strike you home without a messenger.
Ant. Come Dromio, come, these jests are out of season,
Reserve them till a merrier houre than this:
Where is the gold I gave in charge to thee?
E. Dro. To me sir? why you gave no gold to me?
Ant. Come on sir knave, have done your foolishness,
And tell me how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.
E. Dro. My charge was but to fetch you from the Mart
Home to your house, (the Phœnix sir) to dinner;
My Mistris and her sister staies for you.
Ant. Now as I am a Christian answer me,
In what safe place you have bestow'd my money:
Or I shall break that merry sconce of yours
That stands on tricks, when I am undispos'd:
Where is the thousand Marks thou hadst of me?
E. Dro. I have some marks of yours upon my pate:
Some of my Mistris marks upon my shoulders:
But not a thousand marks between you both.
If I should pay your worship those again,
Perchance you will not bear them patiently.
Ant. Thy Mistris marks? what mistris slave hast thou?
E. Dro. Your worships wife, my mistris at the Phœnix;
She that doth fast till you come home to dinner:
And prays that you will hie you home to dinner.
Ant. What wilt thou flout me thus unto my face
Being forbid? There take you that sir knave.
E. Dro. What mean you sir, for God sake hold your hands:
Nay, and you will not sir, Ile take my heels.
Exit Dromio Ep.
Ant. Upon my life by some device or other,
The villain is ore-wrought of all my money.
They say this Town is full of cosenage:
As nimble Juglers that deceive the eye:
Dark-working Sorcerers that change the minde:
Soul-killing Witches, that deforme the body:
Disguised Cheaters, prating Mountebanks;
And many such like liberties of sinne:
If it prove so, I will be gone the sooner:
Ile to the Centaure to go seek this slave,
I greatly feare my money is not safe.
Exit.

Actus Secunda.

Enter Adriana, wife to Antipholis Sereptus, with Luciana her Sister.

Adr. Neither my husband nor the slave return'd,
That in such haste I sent to seek his Master?
Sure Luciana it is two a clock.
Luc. Perhaps some Merchant hath invited him,
And from the Mart he's somewhere gone to dinner:
Good Sister, Let us dine, and never fret;
A man is Master of his libertie;
Time is their Master, and when they see time,
They'll go or come; if so, be patient Sister.
Adr. Why should their libertie than ours be more?
Luc. Because their businesse still lyes out adore.
Adr. Look when I serve him so, he takes it ill.
Luc. Oh, know he is the bridle of your will.
Adr. There's none but asses will be bridled so.
Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is lasht with woe:
There's nothing situate under heavens eye,
But hath his bound in earth, in sea, in skie.
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowles
Are their males subjects, and at their controules:
Man more divine, the Master of all these,
Lord of the wide world, and wide watry seas,
Indued with intellectuall sence and soul,
Of more preheminence than fish and fowle.
Are masters to their females, and their Lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.
Adri. This servitude makes you to keep unwed.
Luci. Not this but troubles of the marriage bed.
Adr. But were you wedded, you would bear some sway.
Luc. Ere I learn love, Ile practise to obey.
Adr. How if your husband start some other where?
Luc. Till he come home again, I would forbeare.
Adr. Patience unmov'd, no marvell though she pause,
They can be meek, that have no other cause:
A wretched soul bruis'd with adversitie,
We bid be quiet when we hear it crie.
But were we burdned with like waight of pain,
As much, or more, we should our selves complain:
So thou that hast no unkinde mate to grieve thee,
With urging helpelesse patience would relieve me;
But if thou live to see like right bereft,
This fool-beg'd patience in thee will be left.
Luci. Well, I will marry one day but to trie:
Here comes your man, now is your husband nie.

Enter Dromio Eph.

Adr. Say, is your tardie master now at hand?
E. Dro. Nay, he's at two hands with me, and that my two eares can witnesse.
Adr. Say, didst thou speak with him? knowst thou his minde?
E. Dro. I, I, he told his minde upon mine eare,
Beshrew his hand, I scarce could understand it.
Luc. Spake he so doubtfully, thou couldst not feel his meaning.
E. Dro. Nay, he struck so plainly, I could too well feel his blows; and withall so doubtfully, that I could scarce understand them.
Adri. But say, I prethee, is he coming home?
It seems he hath great care to please his wife.
E. Dro. Why Mistresse, sure my Master is horn mad.
Adri. Horn mad, thou villain?
E. Dro. I mean not Cuckold-mad,
But sure he is stark mad:
When I desir'd him to come home to dinner;
He ask'd me for a 1000. marks in gold:
Tis dinner time, quoth I: my gold, quoth he:
Your meat doth burn, quoth I: my gold, quoth he:
Will you come, quoth I: my gold, quoth he;
Where is the thousand marks I gave thee villain?
The Pigge, quoth I, is burn'd: my gold, quoth he:
My mistresse, sir, quoth I: hang up thy mistresse;
I know not thy mistresse, out on my mistresse.
Luc. Quoth who?
E. Dro. Quoth my Master, I know, quoth he, no house, no wife, no mistresse: so that my arrant due unto my tongue, I thank him, I bare home upon my shoulders: for in conclusion, he did beat me there.
Adr. Go back again thou slave, and fetch him home.
Dro. Go back again, and be new beaten home?
For Gods sake send some other messenger.

Adri. Back ſlave, or I will break thy pate acroſſe.
Dro. And he will bleſſe that croſſe with other beating:
Between you, I ſhall have a holy head.
Adri. Hence prating peſant, fetch thy maſter home.
Dro. Am I ſo round with you, as you with me,
That like a foot-ball you do ſpurn me thus:
You ſpurn me hence, and he will ſpurn me hither,
If I laſt in this ſervice, you muſt caſe me in leather. Exit.
Luci. Fie how impatience lowreth in your face:
Adri. His company muſt do his minions grace,
Whil'ſt I at home ſtarve for a merry look:
Hath homely age th'alluring beauty took
From my poor cheek? then he hath waſted it.
Are my diſcourſes dull? Barren my wit,
If voluble and ſharp diſcourſe be mar'd,
Unkindneſſe blots it more than marble hard.
Do their gay veſtments his affections baite?
That's not my fault, he's maſter of my ſtate.
What ruines are in me that can be found,
By him not ruin'd? Then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayed faire,
A ſunny look of his, would ſoon repaire.
But (too unruly Deer,) he breaks the pale,
And feeds from home; poor I am but his ſtale.
Luci. Self-harming jealouſie, fie beat it hence.
Ad. Unfeeling fools can with ſuch wrongs diſpence:
I know his eye doth homage other-where,
Or elſe, what lets it but he would be here?
Siſter, you know he promiſed me a chain,
Would that alone, alone he would detain,
So he would keep faire quarter with his bed.
I ſee the Jewel beſt enamaled
Will loſe his beauty: yet the gold bides ſtill
That others touch, and often touching will:
Since that my beauty cannot pleaſe his eie,
Ile weep (what's left) away and weeping die.
Luc. How many fond fools ſerve mad Jealouſie?
Exeunt.

Enter Antipholis Erotes.

Ant. The gold I gave to Dromio is laid up
Safe at the Centaur, and the heedfull ſlave
Is wandred forth in care to ſeek me out
By computation and mine hoſts report.
I could not ſpeak with Dromio, ſince at firſt
I ſent him from the Mart: ſee here he comes.

Enter Dromio Siracuſan.

How now ſir, is your merry humor alter'd?
As you love ſtroaks, ſo jeſt with me again:
You know no Centaur? you receiv'd no gold?
Your miſtris ſent to have me home to dinner?
My houſe was at the Phœnix? Waſt thou mad,
That thus ſo madly thou didſt anſwer me?
S. Dro. What anſwer ſir? when ſpake I ſuch a word?
E. Ant. Even now, even here, not half an houre ſince.
S. Dro. I did not ſee you ſince you ſent me hence
Home to the Centaur with the gold you gave me?
Ant. Villain, thou didſt deny the golds receit,
And ſtor'dſt me of a Miſtris, and a dinner.
For which I hope thou felt'ſt I was diſpleas'd.
S. Dro. I am glad to ſee you in this merry veine,
What means this jeſt, I pray you Maſter tell me?
Ant. Yea, do'ſt thou jeer and flowt me in the teeth?
Think'ſt thou I jeſt? hold, take thou that, & that. Beats Dro.
S. Dro. Hold ſir, for Gods ſake, now your jeſt is earneſt,
Upon what bargain do you give it me?
Antiph. Becauſe that I familiarly ſometimes
Do uſe you for my fool, and chat with you,
Your ſawcineſſe will jeſt upon my love,
And make a Common of my ſerious houres.
When the Sunne ſhines, let fooliſh gnats make ſport,
But creep in crannies, when he hides his beames;
If you will jeſt with me, know my aſpect,
And faſhion your demeanor to my looks,
Or I will beat this method in your ſconce.
S. Dro. Sconce call you it? ſo you would leave battering, I had rather have it a head, and you uſe theſe blows long, I muſt get a ſconce for my head, and Inſconce it too, or elſe I ſhall ſeek my wit in my ſhoulders, but I pray ſir, why am I beaten?
Ant. Doſt thou not know?
S. Dro. Nothing ſir, but that I am beaten.
Ant. Shall I tell you why?
S. Dro. I ſir, and wherefore; for they ſay, every why hath a wherefore.
Ant. Why firſt for flouting me, and then wherefore, for urging it the ſecond time to me.
S. Dro. Was there ever any man thus beaten out of ſeaſon, when in the why and the wherefore, is neither rime nor reaſon. Well ſir, I thank you.
Ant. Thank me ſir, for what?
S. Dro. Marry ſir, for this ſomething that you gave me for nothing.
Ant. Ile make you amends next, to give you nothing for ſomething. But ſay ſir, is it dinner time?
S. Dro. No ſir, I think the meat wants that I have.
Ant. In good time ſir, what's that?
S. Dro. Baſting.
Ant. Well ſir, then 'twill be dry.
S. Dro. If it be ſir, I pray you eat not of it.
Ant. Your reaſon?
S. Dro. Leſt it make you chollerick, and purchaſe me another dry baſting.
Ant. Well ſir, learn to jeſt in good time, there's a time for all things.
S. Dro. I durſt have denied that before you were ſo chollerick.
Anti. By what rule ſir?
S. Dro. Marry ſir, by a rule as plain as the plain bald pate of Father time himſelf.
Ant. Let's hear it.
S. Dro. There's no time for a man to recover his haire that grows bald by nature.
Ant. May he not do it by fine and recovery?
S. Dro. Yes, to pay a fine for a perewig, and recover the loſt haire of another man.
Ant. Why, is Time ſuch a niggard of haire, being (as it is) ſo plentifull an excrement?
S. Dro. Becauſe it is a bleſſing that he beſtows on beaſts, and what he hath ſcanted them in haire, he hath given them in wit.
Ant. Why, but there's many a man hath more haire than wit.
S. Dro. Not a man of thoſe but he hath the wit to loſe his haire.
Ant. Why, thou didſt conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.
S. Dro. The plainer dealer, the ſooner loſt; yet he looſeth it in a kind of jollitie.
Ant. For what reaſon?
S. Dro. For two, and ſound ones too.

An. Nay

An. Nay not found ones I pray you.
S. Dro. Sure ones then.
An. Nay, not sure in a thing falsing.
S. Dro. Certain ones then.
An. Name them.
S. Dro. The one to save the money that he spends in trying: the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his porrage.
An. You would all this time have prov'd, there is no time for all things.
S. Dro. Marry and did sir: namely, no time to recover haire lost by Nature.
An. But your reason was not substantiall, why there is no time to recover.
S. Dro. Thus I mend it: Time himself is bald, and therefore to the worlds end, will have bald followers.
An. I knew 'twould be a bald conclusion: but soft, who wafts us yonder?

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adri. I, I, Antipholis, look strange and frowne,
Some other Mistresse hath some sweet aspects:
I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.
The time was once, when thou un-urg'd wouldst vow,
That never words were musick to thine eare,
That never object pleasing in thine eye,
That never touch well welcome to thy hand;
That never meat sweet-savour'd in thy taste;
Unlesse I spake, or look'd, or touch'd or carv'd to thee.
How comes it now, (my Husband) oh how comes it,
That thou art then estranged from thy self?
Thy self I call it, being strange to me:
That undividable Incorporate
Am better than thy deer selfs better part.
Ah do not tear away thy self from me;
For know my love: as easie maist thou fall
A drop of water in the breaking gulfe,
And take unmingled thence that drop again
Without addition or diminishing,
As take from me thy self, and not me too.
How dearly would it touch thee to the quick,
Shouldst thou hear I were licencious?
And that this body consecrate to thee,
By Ruffian Lust should be contaminate?
Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurn at me,
And hurl the name of husband in my face,
And tear the stain'd skin of my Harlot brow,
And from my false hand cut the wedding ring,
And break it with a deep-divorcing vow?
I know thou canst, and therefore see thou do it.
I am possest with an adulterate blot,
My bloud is mingled with the crime of lust:
For if we too be one, and thou play false,
I do digest the poyson of my flesh,
Being strumpeted by thy contagion.
Keep then faire league and truce with thy true bed,
I live distain'd, thou undishonoured.
Antip. Plead you to me faire dame? I know you not:
In Ephesus I am but two houres old,
As strange unto your town, as to your talk,
Who every word by all my wit being scan'd,
Wants wit in all, one word to understand.
Luci. Fie brother, how the world is chang'd with you:
When were you wont to use my sister thus?
She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.
Ant. By Dromio? Drom. By me.
Adr. By thee, and thus thou didst return from him.
That he did buffet thee, and in his blows,
Denied my house for his, me for his wife.
Ant. Did you converse sir with this Gentlewoman:
What is the course and drift of your compact?
S. Dro. I sir? I never saw her till this time.
Ant. Villain thou liest, for even her very words,
Didst thou deliver to me on the Mart.
S. Dro. I never spake with her in all my life.
Ant. How can she thus then call us by our names?
Unlesse it be by inspiration.
Adr. How ill agrees it with your gravitie,
To counterfeit thus grosely with your slave,
Abetting him to thwart me in my moode;
Be it my wrong, you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.
Come I will fasten on this sleeve of thine:
Thou art an Elme my husband, I a Vine:
Whose weakneese married to thy stranger state,
Makes me with thy strength to communicate:
If ought possesse thee from me, it is drosse,
Usurping Ivie, Brier, or idle Mosse,
Who all for want of pruning, with intrusion,
Infect thy Sap, and live on thy confusion.
Ant. To me she speaks, she moves me for her theame;
What, was I married to her in my dreame?
Or sleep I now, and think I hear all this?
What error drives our eyes and eares amisse?
Until I know this sure uncertaintie,
Ile entertain the free'd fallacie.
Luc. Dromio, Go bid the servants spred for dinner.
S. Dro. Oh for my beads, I crosse me for a sinner.
This is the fairy land, oh spite of spights,
We talk with Goblins, Owles and Elves Sprights;
If we obey them not, this will insue:
They'l suck our breath, or pinch us black and blew.
Luc. Why prat'st thou to thy self,
Dromio, thou Dromio, snaile, thou slug, thou sot.
S. Dro. I am transformed Master, am I not?
Ant. I think thou art in minde, and so am I.
S. Dro. Nay Master, both in minde, and in my shape.
Ant. Thou hast thine own forme.
S. Dro. No, I am an Ape.
Luc. If thou art chang'd to ought, 'tis to an Asse.
S. Dro. 'Tis true she rides me, and I long for grasse.
'Tis so, I am an Asse, else it could never be,
But I should know her as well as she knows me.
Adr. Come, come, no longer will I be a fool,
To put the finger in thy eye and weep;
Whil'st man and master laughs my woes to scorn:
Come sir to dinner, Dromio keep the gate:
Husband Ile dine above with you to day,
And shrive you of a thousand idle pranks:
Sirra, if any ask you for your Master,
Say he dines forth, and let no creature enter:
Come sister, Dromio play the Porter well.
Ant. Am I in earth, in heaven, or in hell?
Sleeping or waking, mad or well advisde:
Known unto these, and to my self disguisde I
Ile say as they say, and persever so:
And in this mist at all adventures go.
S. Dro. Master, shall I be Porter at the gate?
Adr. I, and let none enter, least I break your pate.
Luci. Come, come, Antipholis, we dine too late.

Actus Tertius. Scæna Prima.

Enter Antipholis of Ephesus, his man Dromio, Angelo the Goldsmith, and Balthazar the Merchant.

E. Ant. Good signior Angelo you must excuse us all,
My wife is shrewish when I keep not houres,
Say that I lingerd with you at your shop
To see the making of her Carkanet,
And that to morrow you will bring it home.
But here's a villaine that would face me down,
He met me on the Mart, and that I beat him,
And charg'd him with a thousand marks in gold,
And that I did deny my wife and house;
Thou drunkard thou, what didst thou mean by this?
E. Dro. Say what you will sir, but I know what I know,
That you beat me at the Mart I have your hand to show;
If the skin were parchmēt,& the blows you gave were ink,
Your hand-writing would tell you what I think.
E. Ant. I think thou art an asse.
E. Dro. Marry so it doth appear
By the wrongs I suffer, and the blows I bear:
I should kick being kickt, and being at that passe,
You would keep from my heels, and beware of an asse.
E. An. Y'are sad signior Balthazar, pray God our cheer
May answer my good will, and your good welcom here.
Bal. I hold your dainties cheap sir,& your welcom deer.
E. Ant. Oh signior Balthazar, either at flesh or fish.
A table full of welcome, makes scarce one dainty dish.
Bal. Good meat sir is common that every churle affords.
Ant. And welcome more common, for that's nothing but words.
Bal. Small cheere and great welcome, makes a merry feast.
Ant. I, to a niggardly Host, and more sparing guest:
But though my cates be mean, take them in good part,
Better cheere may you have, but not with better hart.
But soft, my door is lockt; go bid them let us in.
E. Dro. Maud, Briget, Marian, Cisly, Gillian, Ginn.
S. Dro. Mome, Malt-horse, Capon, Coxcombe, Idiot, Patch.
Either get thee from the door; or sit down at the hatch:
Dost thou conjure for wenches, that thou call'st for such store,
When one is one too many, go get thee from the doore.
E. Dro. What patch is made our porter? my Master stays in the street.
S. Dro. Let him walk from whence he came, lest he catch cold on's feet.
E. Ant. Who talks within there? hoa, open the door.
S. Dro. Right sir, Ile tell you when, and you'll tell me wherefore.
Ant. Wherefore? for my dinner: I have not din'd to day.
S. Dro. Nor to day here you must not, come again when you may.
Ant. What art thou that keep'st me out from the house I owe?
S. Dro. The Porter for this time Sir, and my name is Dromio.
E. Dro. O villaine, thou hast stolne both mine office and my name.
The one ne're got me credit, the other mickle blame:
If thou hadst bid Dromio to day in my place,
Thou wouldst have chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an asse.

Enter Luce.

Luc. What a coile is there Dromio? who are those at the gate?
E. Dro. Let my Master in Luce.
Luc. Faith no, he comes too late, and so tell your Master.
E. Dro. O Lord I must laugh, have at you with a Proverb.
Shall I set in my staffe.
Luc. Have at you with another, that's when? can you tell?
S. Dro. If thy name be called Luce, Luce thou hast answer'd him well.
Ant. Do you hear you minion, you'll let us in I hope?
Luce. I thought to have askt you.
S. Dro. And you said no.
E. Dro. So come help, well struck, there was blow for blow.
Ant. Thou baggage let me in.
Luce. Can you tell for whose sake?
E. Drom. Master, knock the door hard.
Luc. Let him knock till it ake.
Ant. You'll cry for this minion, if I beat the door down.
Luc. What needs all that, and a paire of stocks in the Town?

Enter Adriana.

Adr. Who is that at the door that keeps all this noise?
S. Dro. By my troth your Town is troubled with unruly boys.
Anti. Are you there Wife? you might have come before.
Adr. Your wife sir knave? go get you from the door.
E. Dro. If you went in paine Master, this knave would go sore.
Angelo. Here is neither cheer sir, nor welcome, we would faine have either.
Baltz. In debating which was best, we shall part with neither.
E. Dro. They stand at the Door, Master, bid them welcome hither.
Ant. There is something in the winde, that we cannot get in.
E. Dro. You would say so Master, if your garments were thin.
Your cake here is warme within: you stand here in the cold.
It would make a man as mad as a Buck to be so bought and sold.
Ant. Go fetch me something, Ile break ope the gate.
S. Dro. Break any breaking here, and Ile break your knaves pate.
E. Dro. A man may break a word with you sir, and words are but winde;
I and break it in your face, so he break it not behinde.
S. Dro. It seems thou want'st breaking, out upon thee hinde.
E. Dro. Heer's too much, out upon thee, I pray thee let me in.
S. Dro. I, when fowles have no feathers and fish have no fin.
Ant. Well, Ile break in: go borrow me a crow.
E. Dro. A crow without feather, Master mean you so;

For

For a fiſh without a fin, there's a fowle without a feather,
If a crow help us in ſirra, wee'll pluck a crow together.
Ant. Go, get thee gon, fetch me an iron Crow.
Balth. Have patience ſir, oh let it not be ſo,
Herein you warre againſt your reputation,
And draw within the compaſſe of ſuſpect
Th' unviolated honour of your wife.
Once this your long experience of your wiſdome,
Her ſober vertue, years and modeſty,
Plead on your part ſome cauſe to you unknown;
And doubt not ſir, but ſhe will well excuſe
Why at this time the doors are made againſt you.
Be rul'd by me, depart in patience,
And let us to the Tyger all to dinner,
And about evening come your ſelf alone,
To know the reaſon of this ſtrange reſtraint:
If by ſtrong hand you offer to break in
Now in the ſtirring paſſage of the day,
A vulgar comment will be made of it;
And that ſuppoſed by the common rowt
Againſt your yet ungalled eſtimation,
That may with foule intruſion enter in,
And dwell upon your grave when you are dead;
For ſlander lives upon ſucceſſion;
For ever houſ'd, where it once gets poſſeſſion.
Ant. You have prevail'd, I will depart in quiet,
And in deſpight of mirth mean to be merry:
I know a wench of excellent diſcourſe,
Pretty and witty; wilde, and yet too gentle;
There will we dine: this woman that I mean
My wife (but I proteſt without deſert)
Hath oftentimes upbraided me withall:
To her will we to dinner, get you home
And fetch the chaine, by this I know 'tis made,
Bring it I pray you to the Porpentine,
For there's the houſe: That chain I will beſtow
(Be it for nothing but to ſpight my wife)
Upon my hoſteſſe there, good ſir make haſte:
Since mine own doors refuſe to entertain me,
Ile knock elſe-where, to ſee if they'll diſdain me.
Ang. Ile meet you at that place ſome houre ſir hence.
Ant. Do ſo, this jeſt ſhall coſt me ſome expence.
Exeunt.

Enter Luciana, with Antipholis of Siracuſa.

Julia. And may it be that you have quite forgot
A husbands office? ſhall Antipholis
Even in the ſpring of Love, thy Love-ſprings rot?
Shall love in buildings grow ſo ruinate?
If you did wed my ſiſter for her wealth,
Then for her wealths-ſake uſe her with more kindneſſe:
Or if you like elſewhere, do it by ſtealth,
Muffle your falſe love with ſome ſhew of blindneſſe:
Let not my ſiſter reade it in your eye:
Be not thy tongue thy own ſhames Orator:
Look ſweet, ſpeak faire, become diſloyaltie:
Apparell vice-like vertues harbenger:
Beare a faire preſence, though your heart be tainted,
Teach ſinne the carriage of a holy Saint,
Be ſecret falſe: what need ſhe be acquainted?
What ſimple thiefe brags of his own attaine?
'Tis double wrong to truant with your bed,
And let her reade it in thy looks at boord:
Shame hath a baſtard fame, well mannaged,
Ill deeds are doubled with an evill word:
Alas poor women, make us not beleeve
(Being compact of credit) that you love us,
Though others have the arme, ſhew us the ſleeve:
We in your motion turne; and you may move us.
Then gentle brother get you in again;
Comfort my ſiſter, cheere her, call her wife;
'Tis holy ſport to be a little vain,
When the ſweet breath of flattery conquers ſtrife.
S. Ant. Sweet Miſtris: what your name is elſe I know not;
Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine:
Leſſe in your knowledge, and your grace you ſhow not,
Then our earths wonder, more than earth divine.
Teach me deere creature how to think and ſpeak:
Lay open to my earthy groſſe conceit:
Smothred in errors, feeble, ſhaddow, weak,
The foulded meaning of your words deceit;
Againſt my ſouls pure truth, why labour you,
To make it wander in an unknown field?
Are you a god? would you create me new?
Transforme me then, and to your powre Ile yeeld.
But if that I am I, then well I know,
Your weeping ſiſter is no wife of mine,
Nor to her bed a homage do I owe:
Far more, far more, to you do I decline:
Oh traine me not ſweet Mermaide with thy note
To drown me in thy ſiſters floud of teares:
Sing Siren for thy ſelf, and I will dote:
Spred ore the ſilver waves thy golden haires;
And as a bed Ile take thee, and there lie:
And in that glorious ſuppoſition think,
He gains by death, that hath ſuch means to die:
Let Love, being light, be drowned if ſhe ſinke.
Luc. What are you mad, that you do reaſon ſo?
Ant. Not mad, but mated, how I do not know.
Luc. It is a fault that ſpringeth from your eye.
Ant. For gazing on your beames, faire Sun being by.
Luc. Gaze when you ſhould, and that will cleere your ſight.
Ant. As good to wink ſweet love, as look on night.
Luc. Why call you me love? call my ſiſter ſo.
Ant. Thy ſiſters ſiſter.
Luc. That's my ſiſter.
Ant. No: it is thy ſelf, mine own ſelfs better part:
Mine eyes cleere eye, my deere hearts dearer heart,
My food, my fortune, and my ſweet hopes aime;
My ſole earths heaven, and my heavens claime.
Luc. All this my ſiſter is, or elſe ſhould be.
Ant. Call thy ſelf ſiſter ſweet, for I am thee:
Thee will I love, and with thee lead my life;
Thou haſt no husband yet, nor I no wife;
Give me thy hand.
Luc. Oh ſoft ſir, hold you ſtill:
Ile fetch my ſiſter to get her good will.

Enter Dromio, Siracuſia.

Ant. Why how now Dromio, where run'ſt thou ſo faſt.
S. Dro. Do you know me ſir? Am I Dromio? Am I your man? Am I my ſelf?
Ant. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thy ſelf.
Dro. I am an aſſe, I am a womans man, and beſides my ſelf.
Ant. What womans man? and how beſides thy ſelf?
Dro. Marry ſir, beſides my ſelf, I am due to a woman:
One that claimes me, one that haunts me, one that will have me.

Ant. What

Ant. What claime layes she to thee?

Dro. Marry sir, such claime as you would lay to your horse, and she would have me as a beast; not that I being a beast she would have me, but that she being a very beastly creature lays claime to me.

Ant. What is she?

Dro. A very reverent body: I such a one, as a man may not speak of, without he say sir reverence: I have but leane luck in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.

Anti. How dost thou mean a fat marriage?

Dro. Marry sir, she's the Kitchin wench, and all grease, and I know not what use to put her too, but to make a Lamp of her, and run from her by her own light. I warrant, her ragges and the Tallow in them, will burne a Poland Winter: If she lives till doomesday, she'l burne a week longer than the whole World.

Ant. What complexion is she of?

Dro. Swart like my shooe, but her face nothing like so cleane kept: for why? she sweates a man may goe over-shooes in the grime of it.

Ant. That's a fault that water will mend.

Dro. No sir, 'tis in graine, Noahs flood could not do it.

Ant. What's her name?

Dro. Nell Sir: but her name is three quarters, that's an Ell and three quarters, will not measure her from hip to hip.

Ant. Then she beares some bredth?

Dro. No longer from head to foot, then from hip to hip: she is spherically like a globe: I could find out Countries in her.

Ant. In what part of her body stands Ireland?

Dro. Marry sir in her buttockes, I found it out by the bogges.

Ant. Where Scotland?

Dro. I found it by the barrennesse, hard in the palme of the hand.

Ant. Where France?

Dro. In her forehead, arm'd and reverted, making warre against her haire.

Ant. Where England?

Dro. I look'd for the chalky Cliffes, but I could find no whitenesse in them. But I guesse, it stood in her chin by the salt rheume that ran between France, and it.

Ant. Where Spaine?

Dro. Faith I saw it not: but I felt it hot in her breath.

Ant. Where America, the Indies?

Dro. Oh sir, upon her nose, all ore embellished with Rubies, Carbuncles, Saphires, declining their rich Aspect to the hot breath of Spaine, who sent whole Armadoes of Carracts to be ballast at her nose.

Ant. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. Oh sir, I did not look so low. To conclude, this drudge or Diviner layd claime to me, call'd me Dromio, swore I was assur'd to her, told me what privie marks I had about me, as the marks of my shoulder, the Mole in my neck, the great Wart on my left arme, that I amaz'd ran from her as a Witch. And I think, if my brest had not been made of faith, and my heart of steel, she had transform'd me to a Curtall dog, and made me turn i'th wheel.

Ant. Go hie thee presently, post to the rode,
And if the winde blow any way from shore,
I will not harbour in this Town to night.
If any Bark put forth, come to the Mart,
Where I will walk till thou return to me:
If every one knows us, and we know none,
'Tis time I think to trudge, pack, and be gone.

Dro. As from a Bear a man would run for life,
So flie I from her that would be my wife. Exit.

Ant. There's none but witches do inhabite here,
And therefore 'tis hie time that I were hence:
She that doth call me husband, even my soul
Doth for a wife abhorre. But her faire sister
Possest with such a gentle soveraigne grace,
Of such inchanting presence and discourse,
Hath almost made me Traytor to my self:
But least my self be guilty to self-wrong,
Ile stop mine eares against the Mermaids song.

Enter Angelo with the Chain.

Ang. M. Antipholis.

Ant. I that's my name.

Ang. I know it well sir, loe here's the Chain,
I thought to have tane you at the Porpentine,
The Chain unfinisht made me stay thus long.

Ant. What is your will that I shall do with this?

Ant. What please your self sir: I have made it for you.

Ant. Made it for me sir? I bespoke it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twentie times you have:
Go home with it, and please your Wife withall,
And soon at supper time Ile visit you,
And then receive my money for the Chain.

Ant. I pray you sir receive the money now,
For fear you ne're see Chain, nor money more.

Ang. You are a merry man sir, fare you well. Exit.

Dro. What I should think of this, I cannot tell:
But this I think, there's no man is so vain,
That would refuse so faire an offer'd Chain.
I see a man here needs not live by shifts,
When in the streets he meets such Golden gifts:
Ile to the Mart, and there for Dromio stay,
If any Ship put out, then strait away. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter a Merchant, Goldsmith, and an Officer.

Mer. You know since Pentecost the sum is due,
And since I have not much importun'd you,
Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
To Persia, and want Gilders for my voyage:
Therefore make present satisfaction,
Or Ile attach you by this Officer.

Gold. Even just the sum that I do owe to you,
Is growing to me by Antipholis,
And in the instant that I met with you,
He had of me a Chain: at five a clock
I shall receive the money for the same:
Pleaseth you walk with me down to his house,
I will discharge my bond, and thank you too.

Enter Antipholis Ephes. Dromio from the Courtizans.

Offi. That labour may you save: See where he comes.

Ant. While I go to the Goldsmiths house, go thou

And

And buy a ropes end, that will I bestow
Among my wife, and their confederates,
For locking me out of my doors by day:
But soft I see the Goldsmith; get thee gone,
Buy thou a rope and bring it home to me.
Dro. I buy a thousand pound a yeare, I buy a rope.
Exit Dromio.
Eph. Ant. A man is well holp up that trusts to you,
I promised your presence, and the Chain,
But neither Chain nor Goldsmith came to me:
Belike you thought our love would last too long
If it were chain'd together: and therefore came not.
Gold. Saving your merry humor, here's the note
How much your Chain weighs to the utmost Raccat,
The fineness of the Gold, and chargefull fashion,
Which doth amount to three odde Duckets more
Then I stand debted to this Gentleman,
I pray you see him presently discharg'd,
For he is bound to Sea, and stays but for it.
Ant. I am not furnish'd with the present money:
Besides I have some businesse in the Town,
Good Signior take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the Chain, and bid my wife
Disburse the summe, on the receit thereof,
Perchance I will be there as soon as you.
Gold. Then you will bring the Chain to her your self.
Ant. No, bear it with you, least I come not time enough.
Gold. Well sir, I will? Have you the Chain about you?
Ant. And if I have not sir, I hope you have:
Or else you may return without your money.
Gold. Nay come I pray you sir, give me the Chain:
Both winde and tide stays for the Gentleman,
And I to blame have held him here too long.
Ant. Good Lord, you use this dalliance to excuse
Your breach of promise to the Porpentine,
I should have chid you for not bringing it,
But like a shrew you first begin to brawle.
Mer. The houre steals on, I pray you sir dispatch.
Gold. You hear how he importunes me, the Chain:
Ant. Why give it to my wife, and fetch your money.
Gold. Come, come, you know I gave it you even now.
Either send the Chain, or send me by some token.
Ant. Fie, now you run this humor out of breath,
Come where's the Chain, I pray you let me see it.
Mer. My businesse cannot brook this dalliance,
Good sir say, whe'r you'l answer me, or no:
If not, Ile leave him to the Officer.
Ant. I answer you? Why should I answer you?
Gold. The money that you owe me for the Chain.
Ant. I owe you none till I receive the Chain.
Gold. You know I gave it you half an houre since.
Ant. You gave me none, you wrong me much to say so.
Gold. You wrong me sir in denying it:
Consider how it stands upon my credit.
Mer. Well Officer, arrest him at my suite,
Offi. I do, and charge you in the Dukes name to obey me.
Gold. This touches me in reputation.
Either consent to pay the sum for me,
Or I attach you by this Officer.
Ant. Consent to pay that I never had:
Arrest me foolish fellow if thou dar'st.
Gold. Here is thy fee, arrest him, Officer.
I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorn me so apparantly.
Offi. I do arrest you sir, you hear the suite.
Ant. I do obey thee, till I give thee baile.
But sirrah you shall buy this sport as deer,
As all the mettall in your shop will answer.
Gold. Sir, sir, I shall have Law in Ephesus,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dromio Sira. from the Bay.

Dro. Master, there's a Bark of Epidamium,
That stays but till her Owner comes aboord,
Then sir she bears away. Our fraughtage sir,
I have convey'd aboord, and I have brought
The Oyle, the Balsamum, and Aqua-vitæ.
The Ship is in her trim, the merry winde
Blows faire from land: they stay for nought at all,
But for their Owner, Master, and your self.
Ant. How now! a Madman! Why thou peevish sheep,
What Ship of Epidamium stays for me?
S. Dro. A Ship you sent me to, to hier waftage.
Ant. Thou drunken slave, I sent thee for a rope,
And told thee to what purpose and what end.
S. Dro. You sent me for a ropes end as soon,
You sent me to the Bay sir, for a Bark.
Ant. I will debate this matter at more leisure,
And teach your eares to list me with more heed:
To Adriana Villain hie thee straight:
Give her this key, and tell her in the Desk
That's cover'd o're with Turkish Tapistry,
There is a purse of Duckets, let her send it:
Tell her, I am arrested in the street,
And that shall baile me: hie thee slave, be gone,
On Officer to prison, till it come. Exeunt.
S. Dro. To Adriana, that is where we din'd,
Where Dowsabell did claime me for her husband,
She is too big I hope for me to compasse,
Thither I must, although against my will:
For servants must their Masters minds fulfill. Exit.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adri. Ah Luciana, did he tempt thee so,
Might'st thou perceive austeerely in his eye,
That he did plead in earnest, yea or no:
Look'd he or red or pale, or sad or merrily?
What observation mad'st thou in this case?
Of his hearts Meteors tilting in his face?
Luc. First he denied you had in him no right.
Adr. He meant he did me none: the more my spight.
Luc. Then swore he that he was a stranger here.
Adr. And true he swore, though yet forsworne he were.
Luc. Then pleaded I for you.
Adr. And what said he?
Luc. That love I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me.
Adr. With what perswasion did he tempt thy love?
Luc. With words, that in an honest suit might move.
First, he did praise my beautie, then my speech.
Adr. Did'st speak him faire?
Luc. Have patience I beseech.
Adr. I cannot, nor I will not hold me still,
My tongue, though not my heart, shall have his will.
He is deformed, crooked, old and sere,
Ill-fac'd, worse bodied, shapelesse every where:
Vicious, ungentle, foolish, blunt, unkinde,

Stigma-

Stigmaticall in making, worſe the minde.
Luc. Who would be jealous then of ſuch a one?
No evill loſt is wail'd, when it is gone.
Adr. Ah but I think him better than I ſay:
And yet would herein others eyes were worſe:
Far from her neſt the Lapwing cryes away;
My heart prays for him, though my tongue do curſe.

Enter S. Dromio.

Dro. Here, go: the desk, the purſe, ſweet now make haſte.
Luc. How haſt thou loſt thy breath?
S. Dro. By running faſt.
Adr. Where is thy Maſter Dromio? Is he well?
S. Dro. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worſe than hell:
A devill in an everlaſting garment hath him;
One whoſe hard heart is button'd up with ſteel:
A Feind, a Fairie, pittileſſe and ruffe:
A Wolfe, nay worſe, a fellow all in buffe,
A back friend, a ſhoulder-clapper, one that countermands
The paſſages of allies, creeks, and narrow lands:
A hound that runs Counter, and yet draws drifoot well,
One that before the Judgement carries poor ſouls to hell.
Adr. Why man, what is the matter?
S. Dro. I do not know the matter, he is reſted on the caſe.
Adr. What is he arreſted? tell me at whoſe ſuite?
S. Dro. I know not at whoſe ſuite he is arreſted, well; but he's in a ſuite of buffe which reſted him, that I can tell: Will you ſend him Miſtris redemption, the money in his desk?
Adr. Go fetch it Siſter: this I wonder at.
Exit Luciana.
That he unknown to me ſhould be in debt:
Tell me, was he arreſted on a band?
S. Dro. Not on a band, but on a ſtronger thing:
A chain, a chain, do you not hear it ring?
Adria, What, the chain?
S. Dro. No, no, the bell, 'tis time that I were gone:
It was two ere I left him, and now the clock ſtrikes one.
Adr. The hours come back! that did I never hear.
S. Dro. Oh yes, if any hour meet a Sergeant, a turns back for very fear.
Adri. As if time were in debt: how fondly do'ſt thou reaſon?
S. Dro. Time is a very bankrout, and owes more than he's worth to ſeaſon.
Nay, he's a theef too: have you not heard men ſay,
That time comes ſtealing on by night and day?
If I be in debt and theft, and a Sergeant in the way,
Hath he not reaſon to turn back an hour in a day?

Enter Luciana.

Luc. Go Dromio, there's the money, bear it ſtraight,
And bring thy Maſter home immediately.
Come ſiſter, I am preſt down with conceit:
Conceit, my comfort and my injurie. Exit.

Enter Antipholis Siracuſian.

An. S. There's not a man I meet but doth ſalute me,
As if I were their well acquainted friend,
And every one doth call me by my name:
Some tender money to me, ſome invite me;
Some other give me thanks for kindneſſes;
Some offer me Commodities to buy.
Even now a tailor call'd me in his ſhop,
And ſhow'd me Silks that he had bought for me,
And therewithall took meaſure of my body.
Sure theſe are but imaginary wiles,
And Lapland Sorcerers inhabite here.

Enter Dromio, Sir.

S. Dro. Maſter, here's the gold you ſent me for: what have you got the picture of old Adam new apparel'd?
Ant. What gold is this? What Adam do'ſt thou mean?
S. Dro. Not that Adam that kept the Paradiſe: but that Adam that keeps the priſon; he that goes in the calves-skin, that was kil'd for the Prodigall: he that came behinde you ſir, like an evill Angel, and bid you forſake your liberty.
Ant. I underſtand thee not.
S. Dro. No? why 'tis a plain caſe: he that went like a Baſe Viole in a caſe of leather; the man ſir, that when Gentlemen are tired gives them a fob, and reſts them: he ſir, that takes pitty on decayed men, and gives them ſuits of durance: he that ſets up his reſt to do more exploits with his Mace, than a Moris Pike.
Ant. What! thou mean'ſt an Officer?
S. Dro. I Sir, the Serjeant of the Band: he that brings any man to anſwer it that breaks his Band: one that thinks a man alwayes going to bed, and ſaith, God give you good reſt.
Ant. Well ſir, there reſt in your foolery:
Is there any Ship puts forth to night? may we be gone?
S. Dro. Why ſir, I brought you word an houre ſince that the Bark Expedition put forth to night, and then, were you hindred by the Serjeant to tarry for the Hoy Delay; Here are the angels that you ſent for to deliver you.
Ant. The fellow is diſtract, and ſo am I,
And here we wander in illuſions:
Some bleſſed power deliver us from hence.

Enter a Curtizan.

Cur. Well met, well met, Maſter Antipholis:
I ſee ſir, you have found the Goldſmith now:
Is that the Chain you promis'd me to day?
Ant. Sathan avoide, I charge thee tempt me not.
S. Dro. Maſter, is this Miſtris Sathan?
Ant. It is the devill.
S. Dro. Nay, ſhe is worſe, ſhe is the devils dam:
And here ſhe comes in the habit of a light wench, and thereof comes that the wenches ſay God dam me, That's as much to ſay, God make me a light wench: It is written, they appeare to men like angels of light, light is an effect of fire, and fire will burne: ergo, light wenches will burne, come not neere her.
Cur. Your man and you are marveilous merry ſir.
Will you go with me, wee'll mend our dinner here?
S. Dro. Maſter, if you do, expect ſpoon-meate, or beſpeak a long ſpoon.
Ant. Why Dromio?
S. Dromio. Marry he muſt have a long ſpoon that muſt eat with the devill.
Ant. Avoid then fiend, what tel'ſt thou me of ſupping?
Thou art, (as you are all,) a ſorcereſſe?
I conjure thee to leave me, and be gon.
Cur. Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or for my Diamond the chain you promis'd,
And Ile be gon ſir, and not trouble you.
S. Dro. Some devils ask but the parings of ones naile,

a rush, a haire, a drop of bloud, a pin, a nut, a cherry-stone: but she more covetous, would have a chain: Master be wise, and if you give it her, the devill will shake her Chain, and fright us with it.

Cur. I pray you sir, my Ring, or else the Chain, I hope you do not mean to cheat me so?

Ant. Avant thou witch: Come Dromio let us go.

S. Dro. Flie pride says the Pea-cock, Mistris that you know. Exeunt.

Cur. Now out of doubt Antipholis is mad, Else would he never so demean himself, A Ring he hath of mine worth fortie Duckets, And for the same he promis'd me a Chain, Both one and other he denies me now: The reason that I gather he is mad, (Besides this present instance of his rage,) Is a mad tale he told to day at dinner, Of his own doors being shut against his entrance, Belike his wife acquainted with his fits, On purpose shut the doors against his way. My way is now to hie home to his house, And tell his wife that being Lunatick, He rush'd into my house, and took perforce My Ring away. This course I fittest choose, For forty Duckets is too much to loose. Exit.

Enter Antipholus Ephes. with a Jaylor.

An. Fear me not man, I will not break away, Ile give thee ere I leave thee so much money To warrant thee as I am rested for. My wife is in a wayward mood to day, And will not lightly trust the Messenger, That I should be attach'd in Ephesus, I tell you 'twill sound harshly in her eares.

Enter Dromio Eph. with a ropes end.

Here comes my Man, I think he brings the money. How now sir? Have you that I sent you for?

E. Dro. Here's that I warrant you will pay them all.

Anti. But where's the Money?

E. Dro. Why sir, I gave the Money for the Rope.

Ant. Five hundred Duckets villain for a rope?

E. Dro. Ile serve you sir five hundred at the rate.

Ant. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home?

E. Dro. To a ropes end sir, and to that end am I return'd.

Ant. And to that end sir, I will welcome you.

Offi. Good sir be patient.

E. Dro. Nay 'tis for me to be patient, I am in adversitie.

Offi. Good now hold thy tongue.

E. Dro. Nay, rather perswade him to hold his hands.

Anti. Thou whorson senseless Villain.

E. Dro. I would I were senseless sir, that I might not feel your blows.

Anti. Thou art sensible in nothing but blows, and so is an Asse.

E. Dro. I am an Asse indeed, you may prove it by my long eares. I have served him from the hour of my Nativitie to this instant, and have nothing at his hands for my service but blows. When I am cold, he heats me with beating; when I am warme, he cools me with beating: I am wak'd with it when I sleep, rais'd with it when I sit, driven out of doors with it when I go from home, welcom'd home with it when I return, nay I bear it on my shoulders, as a beggar woont her brat, and I think when he hath lam'd me, I shall begge with it from door to door.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtizan, and a Schoolemaster, called Pinch.

Ant. Come go along, my wife is comming yonder.

E. Dro. Mistris respice finem, respect your end, or rather the prophesie like the Parrot, beware the ropes end.

Anti. Wilt thou still talke? Beats Dro.

Cur. How say you now? Is not your husband mad?

Adri. His incivility confirmes no lesse: Good Doctor Pinch, you are a Conjurer, Establish him in his true sence againe, And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas how fiery and how sharp he looks,

Cur. Mark, how he trembles in his extasie.

Pinch. Give me your hand, and let me feel your pulse.

Ant. There is my hand, and let it feel your eare.

Pinch. I charge thee Sathan, hous'd within this man To yeeld possession to my holy prayers, And to thy state of darkenesse hie thee straight, I conjure thee by all the Saints in heaven.

Ant. Peace doting wizard, peace; I am not mad,

Adr. Oh that thou wer't not, poor distressed soul.

Ant. You Minion you, are these your Customers? Did this companion with the saffron face Revell and feast it at my house to day, Whil'st upon me the guiltie doors were shut, And I denied to enter in my house.

Adr. O husband, God doth know you din'd at home, Where would you had remaind untill this time, Free from these slanders, and this open shame.

Ant. Din'd at home? Thou Villain, what sayest thou?

Dro. Sir sooth to say, you did not dine at home.

Ant. Were not my doors lockt up, and I shut out?

Dro. Perdie, your doors were lockt, and you shut out.

Anti. And did not she her self revile me there?

Dro. Sans Fable, she her self revil'd you there.

Ant. Did not her Kitchen maide raile, taunt, and scorne me?

Dro. Certis she did, the Kitchen vestall scorn'd you:

Ant. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dro. In veritie you did, my bones bear witnesse, That since have felt the vigor of his rage.

Adr. It's good to smooth him in these contraries?

Pinch. It is no shame, the fellow finds his veine, And yeelding to him, humors well his frensie.

Ant. Thou hast suborn'd the Goldsmith to arrest me.

Adr. Alas, I sent you Money to redeem you, By Dromio here, who came in hast for it.

Dro. Money by me? Heart and good will you might, But surely Master not a ragge of Money.

Ant. Went'st not thou to her for a purse of Duckets?

Adri. He came to me and I deliver'd it.

Luci. And I am witnesse with her that she did:

Dro. God and the Rope-maker bear me witnesse, That I was sent for nothing but a rope.

Pinch. Mistris, both Man and Master is possest, I know it by their pale and deadly looks.

They

They must be bound and laid in some dark room.
Ant. Say wherefore didst thou lock me forth to day,
And why dost thou deny the bag of gold?
Adr. I did not gentle husband lock thee forth.
Dro. And gentle M. I receiv'd no gold:
But I confesse sir, that we were lock'd out.
Adr. Dissembling Villain, thou speak'st false in both.
Ant. Dissembling harlot, thou art false in all,
And art confederate with a damned pack,
To make a loathsome abject scorn of me:
But with these nails Ile pluck out these false eyes,
That would behold in me this shamefull sport.

Enter three or foure, and offer to binde him: He strives.

Adr. Oh binde him, binde him, let him not come neer me.
Pinch. More company, the fiend is strong within him.
Luc. Aye me poor man, how pale and wan he looks.
Ant. What, will you murther me, thou Jaylor thou?
I am thy prisoner, wilt thou suffer them to make a rescue?
Offi. Masters let him go: he is my prisoner, and you shall not have him.
Pinch. Go binde this man, for he is frantick too.
Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peevish Officer?
Hast thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displeasure to himself?
Offi. He is my prisoner, if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.
Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee,
Bear me forthwith unto his Creditor,
And knowing how the debt grows I will pay it.
Good Master Doctor see him safe convey'd
Home to my house, oh most unhappy day.
Ant. Oh most unhappy strumpet.
Dro. Master, I am here entred in bond for you.
Ant. Out on thee Villain, wherefore dost thou mad me?
Dro. Will you be bound for nothing, be mad good master, cry the devill.
Luc. God help poor souls, how idlely do they talk.
Adr. Go bear him hence, sister go you with me:
Say now, whose suite is he arrested at?
Exeunt. Manet Offic. Adri. Luci. Courtizan.
Offi. One Angelo a Goldsmith, do you know him?
Adr. I know the man: what is the summe he owes?
Offi. Two hundred Duckets.
Adr. Say, how grows it due.
Offi. Due for a Chain your husband had of him.
Adr. He did bespeak a Chain for me, but had it not.
Cour. When as your husband all in rage to day
Came to my house, and took away my Ring,
The Ring I saw upon his finger now,
Straight after did I meet him w[illegible] a Chain,
Adr. It may be so, but I did never see it.
Come Jaylor, bring me where the Goldsmith is,
I long to know the truth hereof at large.

Enter Antipholis Siracusian with his Rapier drawn, and Dromio Sirac.

Luc. God for thy mercy, they are loose again.
Adr. And come with naked swords,
Let's call more help to have them bound again.
Run all out.
Offi. Away, they'l kill us.
Exeunt omnes, as fast as may be, frighted.
S. Ant. I see these Witches are afraid of swords.
S. Dro. She that would be your wife, now ran from you.
Ant. Come to the Centaure, fetch our stuffe from thence:
I long that we were safe and sound aboord.
Dro. Faith stay here this night, they will surely do us no harm: you saw they spake us faire, give us gold: me thinks they are such a gentle Nation, that but for the Mountain of mad flesh that claims marriage of me, I could finde in my heart to stay here still, and turn Witch.
Ant. I will not stay to night for all the Town,
Therefore away, to get our stuffe aboord. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

Enter the Merchant and the Goldsmith.

Gold. I am sorry Sir that I have hindred you,
But I protest he had the Chain of me,
Though most dishonestly he did deny it.
Mer. How is the man esteem'd here in the Citie?
Gold. Of very reverent reputation sir,
Of credit infinite, highly belov'd.
Second to none that lives here in the Citie:
His word might bear my wealth at any time.
Mer. Speak softly, yonder as I think he walks.

Enter Antipholis and Dromio again.

Gold. 'Tis so: and that self-chain about his neck,
Which he forswore (most monstrously) to have.
Good sir draw neer to me, Ile speak to him:
Signior Antipholis, I wonder much
That you would put me to this shame and trouble,
And not without some scandall to your self,
With circumstance and oaths, so to deny
This chain, which now you wear so openly,
Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
You have done wrong to this my honest friend,
Who but for staying on our Controversie,
Had hoisted sail, and put to sea to day:
This chain you had of me, can you deny it?
Ant. I think I had, I never did deny it.
Mer. Yes that you did sir, and forswore it too.
Ant. Who heard me to deny it or forsweare it?
Mer. These eares of mine thou knowst did hear thee:
Fie on thee wretch, 'tis pitty that thou liv'st
To walk where any honest men resort.
Ant. Thou art a Villain to impeach me thus,
Ile prove mine honour, and mine honesty
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand:
Mer. I dare and do defie thee for a villain.

They draw. Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtezan, and others.

Adr. Hold, hurt him not for Gods sake, he is mad,
Some get within him, take his sword away:
Binde Dromio too, and bear them to my house.
S. Dro. Run master run, for Gods sake take a house,
This is some Priorie, in, or we are spoyl'd.
Exeunt to the Priorie.
Enter

Enter Lady Abbeſſe.

Abb. Be quiet people, wherefore throng you hither?
Adr. To fetch my poor diſtracted husband hence;
Let us come in, that we may bind him faſt,
And bear him home for his recovery.
Gold. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.
Mer. I am ſorry now that I did draw on him.
Ab. How long hath this poſſeſſion held the man?
Adr. This week he hath been heavy, ſower, ſad,
And much much different from the man he was:
But till this afternoon his paſſion
Ne're brake into extremity of rage.
Ab. Hath he not loſt much wealth by wrack at Sea,
Buried ſome dear friend, hath not elſe his eye
Stray'd his affection in unlawfull love,
A ſin prevailing much in youthful men,
Who give their eyes the liberty of gazing.
Which of theſe ſorrows is he ſubject to?
Adr. To none of theſe except it be the laſt,
Namely, ſome love that drew him oft from home.
Ab. You ſhould for that have reprehended him.
Ad. Why ſo I did.
Ab. I, but not rough enough.
Ad. As roughly as my modeſty would let me.
Ab. Haply in private.
Ad. And in aſſemblies too.
Ab. I, but not enough.
Ad. It was the copie of our conference.
In bed he ſlept not for my urging it,
At board he fed not for my urging it:
Alone, it was the ſubject of my Theam:
In company I often glanced it:
Still did I tell him, it was vilde and bad.
Ab. And thereof came it that the man was mad.
The venomous clamours of a jealous woman,
Poyſons more deadly then a mad dogs tooth.
It ſeems his ſleeps were hindred by thy railing,
And thereof comes it that his head is light.
Thou ſai'ſt his meat was ſawc'd with thy upbraidings,
Unquiet meals makes ill digeſtions,
Thereof the raging fire of feaver bred,
And what's a Feaver but a fit of Madneſſe?
Thou ſay'ſt his ſports were hindred by thy brawles.
Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth enſue
But muddy and dull melancholly,
Kinſman to grim and comfortleſſe deſpair,
And at her heels a huge infectious troop
Of pale diſtemperatures, and foes to life?
In food, in ſport, and life-preſerving reſt
To be diſturb'd, would mad or man or beaſt:
The conſequence is then, thy jealous fits
Have ſcar'd thy Husband from the uſe of wits.
Luc. She never reprehended him but mildely,
When he demean'd himſelf rough, rude, and wildely.
Why hear you thoſe rebukes, and anſwer not?
Ad. She did betray me to my own reproof,
Good people enter and lay hold on him.
Ab. No, not a creature enters in my houſe.
Ad. Then let your ſervants bring my husband forth.
Ab. Neither: he took this place for ſanctuary,
And it ſhall priviledge him from your hands,
Till I have brought him to his wits again,
Or loſe my labour in aſſaying it.
Ad. I will attend my Husband, be his Nurſe,
Diet his ſickneſſe, for it is my Office,
And will have no Attourney but my ſelf,
And therefore let me have him home with me.
Ab. Be patient, for I will not let him ſtirre,
Till I have us'd the approved means I have,
With wholſome Sirrups, Drugs, and holy Prayers
To make of him a formal man again:
It is a branch and parcell of mine oath,
A charitable duty of my order,
Therefore depart, and leave him here with me.
Ad. I will not hence, and leave my Husband here:
And ill it doth beſeem your holineſſe
To ſeparate the Husband and the Wife.
Ab. Be quiet and depart, thou ſhalt not have him.
Luc. Complain unto the Duke of this indignity.
Ad. Come go, I will fall proſtrate at his feet,
And never riſe untill my tears and prayers
Have won his Grace to come in perſon hither,
And take perforce my husband from the Abbeſſe. Exeunt

Enter Merchant and Goldſmith.

Mer. By this I think the Diall points at five:
Anon I'me ſure the Duke himſelf in perſon
Comes this way to the Melancholly vale;
The place of death and ſorry execution,
Behind the ditches of the Abbey here.
Gold. Upon what cauſe?
Mer. To ſee a reverend Syracuſian Merchant;
Who put unluckily into this Bay
Againſt the Lawes and Statutes of this Town,
Beheaded publickly for his offence.
Gold. See where they come, we will behold his death.

Enter Adriana and Lucio.

Luc. Kneel to the Duke before he paſſe the Abbey.

Enter the Duke of Epheſus, and the Merchant of Syracuſe bareheaded, with the Headſman, and other Officers.

Duke. Yet once again proclaim it publickly,
If any friend will pay the ſumme for him,
He ſhall not die, ſo much we tender him.

Enter Adriana.

Adr. Juſtice moſt ſacred Duke againſt the Abbeſſe.
Duke. She is a virtuous and a reverend Lady,
It cannot be that ſhe hath done thee wrong.
Ad. May it pleaſe your Grace, Antipholis my husband,
Whom I made Lord of me, and all I had,
(At your impotent Letters) this ill day,
A moſt outragious fit of madneſſe took him,
That deſp'rately he hurried through the ſtreet,
With him his bondman, all as mad as he,
Doing diſpleaſure to the Citizens,
By ruſhing in their houſes: bearing thence
Rings, Jewels, any thing his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound, and ſent him home,
Whil'ſt to take order for the wrongs I went,
That here and there his fury had committed,
Anon, I wot not, by what ſtrong eſcape
He broke from thoſe that had the guard of him,
And with his mad attendant and himſelf,
Each one with irefull paſſion, with drawn Swords
Met us again, and madly bent on us,
Chac'd us away: till raiſing of more aid,
We came again to bind them: then they fled
Into this Abbey, whether we purſu'd them,
And here the Abbeſſe ſhuts the gates on us,
And will not ſuffer us to fetch him out,
Nor ſend him forth that we may bear him thence.

Therefore moſt gracious Duke with thy command,
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for help.
Duke. Long ſince thy husband ſerv'd me in my Wars,
And I to thee ingag'd a Princes word,
When thou did'ſt make him maſter of thy bed;
To do him all the grace and good I could.
Go ſome of you knock at the Abbey gate,
And bid the Lady Abbeſs come to me:
I will determine this before I ſtir.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſſ. O Miſtris, Miſtris, ſhift and ſave your ſelf,
My Maſter and his man are both broke looſe,
Beaten the Maids a-row, and bound the Doctor,
Whoſe beard they have ſing'd off with brands of fire,
And ever as it blaz'd, they threw on him
Great pails of pudled myre to quench the hair;
My Mr. preaches patience to him, and the while
His man with Sciſſors nicks him like a fool:
And ſure (unleſs you ſend ſome other preſent help)
Between them they will kill the Conjurer.
Ad. Peace fool, thy Maſter and his man are here,
And that is falſe thou doſt report to us.
Meſſ. Miſtris, upon my life I tell you true,
I have not breath'd almoſt ſince I did ſee it.
He cryes for you, and vows if he can take you,
To ſcorch your face, and to diſfigure you:

Cry within.

Hark, hark, I hear him Miſtris: flie, be gone.
Duke. Come, ſtand by me, fear nothing: guard with Halberds.
Ad. Ay me, it is my husband: witneſs you,
That he is borne about inviſible,
Even now we hous'd him in the Abbey here,
And now hee's there, paſt thought of humane reaſon.

Enter E. Antipholis, and E. Dromio of Epheſus.

E. Ant. Juſtice moſt gracious Duke, oh grant me Juſtice,
Even for the ſervice that long ſince I did thee,
When I beſtrid thee in the wars, and took
Deep skars to ſave thy life; even for the blóud
That then I loſt for thee, now grant me Juſtice.
Mer. Fat. Unleſs the fear of death doth make me dote, I ſee my ſon Antipholis and Dromio.
E. Ant. Juſtice (ſweet Prince) againſt that woman there:
She whom thou gav'ſt to me to be my wife;
That hath abuſed and diſhonoured me,
Even in the ſtrength and height of injury:
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That She this day hath ſhameleſs thrown on me.
Duke. Diſcover how, and thou ſhalt find me juſt.
E. Ant. This day (great Duke) ſhe ſhut the doors upon me.
Whilſt ſhe with Harlots feaſted in my houſe.
Duke. A grievous fault: ſay woman didſt thou ſo?
Ad. No, my good Lord. My ſelf, he, and my Siſter,
To day did dine together: ſo befall my ſoul,
As this is falſe he burthens me withall.
Luc. Ne're may I look on day, nor ſleep on night,
But ſhe tells to your Highneſs ſimple truth.
Gold. O perjur'd woman! They are both forſworn,
In this the Mad man juſtly chargeth them.
E. Ant. My Liege, I am adviſed what I ſay,
Neither diſturb'd with the effect of Wine,
Nor heady-raſh provok'd with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wiſer mad.
This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner;
That Goldſmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witneſs it: for he was with me then,
Who parted with me to go fetch a Chain,
Promiſing to bring it to the Porpentine,
Where Balthazar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not coming thither,
I went to ſeek him. In the ſtreet I met him,
And in his company that Gentleman.
There did this perjur'd Goldſmith ſwear me down,
That I this day from him receiv'd the Chain,
Which God he knows, I ſaw not. For the which,
He did arreſt me with an Officer.
I did obey, and ſent my Peſant home
For certain Duckets: he with none return'd.
Then fairly I beſpoke the Officer
To go in perſon with me to my houſe.
By'th'way, we met my wife, her ſiſter and a rabble more
Of vilde Confederates: Along with them
They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-fac'd Villain;
A meer Anatomy, a Mountebank,
A thred-bare Jugler, and a Fortune-teller,
A needy-hollow-ey'd-ſharp-looking-wretch;
A living dead man. This pernicious ſlave,
Forſooth took on him as a Conjurer:
And gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulſe,
And with no-face (as t'were) out-facing me,
Cryes out, I was poſſeſt. Then altogether
They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence,
And in a dark and dankiſh vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together,
Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds aſunder,
I gain'd my freedome; and immediately
Ran hither to your Grace, whom I beſeech
To give me ample ſatisfaction
For theſe deep ſhames, and great indignities.
Gold. My Lord, in truth, thus far I witneſs with him:
That he din'd not at home, but was lock'd out.
Duke. But had he ſuch a Chain of thee, or no?
Gold. He had my Lord, and when he ran in here,
Theſe people ſaw the Chain about his neck.
Mer. Beſides, I will be ſworn theſe ears of mine,
Heard you confeſs you had the Chain of him,
After you firſt forſwore it on the Mart,
And thereupon I drew my ſword on you:
And then you fled into this Abbey here,
From whence I think you are come by miracle.
E. Ant. I never came within theſe Abbey walls,
Nor ever didſt thou draw thy ſword on me:
I never ſaw the Chain, ſo help me heaven:
And this is falſe you burthen me withall.
Duke. Why what an intricate impeach is this?
I think you all have drunk of Circes Cup:
If here you hous'd him, here he would have been.
If he were mad he would not plead ſo coldly:
You ſay he din'd at home, the Goldſmith here
Denies that ſaying. Sirra, what ſay you?
E. Dro. Sir he din'd with her there, at the Porpentine.
Cur. He did, and from my finger ſnatch't that Ring.
E. Ant. 'Tis true (my Liege) this Ring I had of her.
Duke. Saw'ſt thou him enter at the Abbey here?
Cur. As ſure (my Liege) as I do ſee your Grace.
Duke. Why this is ſtrange: Goe call the Abbeſſe hither.
I think you are all mated, or ſtark mad.

Exit.

Enter one to the Abbesse.

Fa. Most mighty Duke, vouchsafe me speake a word:
Haply I see a friend will save my life,
And pay the summe that may deliver me.
Duke. Speak freely Syracusan what thou wilt.
Fath. Is not your name sir call'd Antipholis?
And is not that your bond-man Dromio?
E. Dro. Within this hour I was his bondman sir,
But he I thank him gnaw'd in two my cords,
Now am I Dromio, and his man unbound.
Fath. I am sure both of you remember me.
Dro. Our selves we doe remember sir by you:
For lately we were bound as you are now.
You are not Pinches Patient, are you Sir?
Father. Why look you strange on me? you know me well.
E. Ant. I never saw you in my life till now.
Fa. Oh! grief hath chang'd me since you saw me last,
And carefull hours with times deformed hand,
Have written strange defeatures in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voyce?
Ant. Neither.
Fat. Dromio, nor thou.
Dro. No trust me sir, nor I.
Fat. I am sure thou dost?
E. Dromio. I sir, but I am sure I doe not, and whatsoever a man denies, you are now bound to believe him.
Fat. Not know my voyce! oh times extremity,
Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poor tongue
In seven short yeares, that here my onely Son
Knowes not my feeble Key of untun'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming Winters drizled snow,
And all the Conduits of my blood froze up:
Yet hath my night of life some memory:
My wasting lamps some fading glimmer left;
My dull deaf eares a little use to hear:
All these old witnesses, I cannot erre.
Tell me, thou art my Son Antipholis.
Ant. I never saw my Father in my life.
Fa. But seven yeares since, in Syracusa Boy,
Thou know'st we parted, but perhaps my Son,
Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in misery.
Ant. The Duke, and all that know me in the City,
Can witnesse with me that it is not so.
I ne're saw Syracusa in my life.
Duke. I tell thee Syracusan, twenty yeares
Have I been Patron to Antipholis,
During which time he ne're saw Syracusa:
I see thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter the Abbesse with Antipholis Syracusan, and Dromio Sirac.

Abbesse. Most mighty Duke, behold a man much wrong'd.

All gather to see them.

Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceive me.
Duke. One of these men is genius to the other:
And so of these which is the naturall man,
And which the spirit? who deciphers them?
S. Dromio. I Sir am Dromio, command him away.
E. Dro. I Sir am Dromio, pray let me stay.
S. Ant. Egeon art thou not? or else his ghost.
S. Drom. Oh my old Master, who hath bound him here?
Abb. Who ever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gain a husband by his liberty:
Speak old Egeon, if thou be'st the man
That had'st a Wife once call'd Æmilia,
That bore thee at a burthen two fair Sons?
Oh if thou be'st the same Egeon, speak:
And speak unto the same Æmilia.
Duke. Why here begins this Morning story right:
These two Antipholis, these two so like,
And those two Dromio's, one in semblance:
Besides her urging of her wrack at Sea,
These are the Parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.
Fat. If I dream not, thou art Æmilia,
If thou art she, tell me, where is that Son
That floated with thee on the fatall rafte.
Abb. By men of Epidamium, he, and I,
And the twin Dromio, all were taken up;
But by and by, rude Fishermen of Corinth
By force took Dromio and my Son from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamium.
What then became of them I cannot tell,
I, to this fortune that you see me in.
Duke. Antipholis thou cam'st from Corinth first.
S. Ant. No sir, not I, I came from Syracuse.
Duke. Stay, stand apart, I know not which is which.
E. Ant. I came from Corinth my most gracious Lord.
E. Dro. And I with him.
E. Ant. Brought to this Town by that most famous Warriour,
Duke Menaphon, your most renowned Uncle.
Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to day?
S. Ant. I, gentle Mistris.
Adr. And are not you my husband?
E. Ant. No; I say nay to that.
S. Ant. And so doe I, yet did she call me so:
And this fair Gentlewoman here
Did call me Brother. What I told you then,
I hope I shall have leisure to make good,
If this be not a dream I see and hear.
Goldsmith. That is the Chain Sir, which you had of me.
S. Ant. I think it be Sir, I deny it not.
E. Ant. And you sir for this Chain arrested me.
Gold. I think I did Sir, I deny it not.
Adr. I sent you money Sir to be your bayle
By Dromio, but I think he brought it not.
E. Dro. No, none by me.
S. Ant. This purse of Duckets I receiv'd from you,
And Dromio my man did bring them me:
I see we still did meet each others man,
And I was tane for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these errours are arose.
E. Ant. These Duckets pawn I for my Father here.
Duk. It shall not need, thy Father hath his life.
Cur. Sir, I must have that Diamond from you.
E. Ant. There take it, and much thanks for my good cheer.
Abb. Renowned Duke, vouchsafe to take the pains
To go with us into the Abbey here,
And hear at large discoursed all our fortunes,
And all that are assembled in this place:
That by this simpathized one dayes error,
Have suffered wrong. Go, keep us company.

And we ſhall make full ſatisfaction.
Thirty three yeares have I been gone in travell
Of you my Sons, and till this preſent hour
My heavy burthens are delivered:
The Duke my Husband, and my children both,
And you the Kalenders of their Nativity,
Go to a Goſſips feaſt, and go with me,
After ſo long grief ſuch Nativity.

Duke. With all my heart I'le Goſſip at this feaſt.

Exeunt omnes. Mannet the two Dromio's and two Brothers.

S. Dro. Maſt. ſhall I fetch your ſtuffe from ſhipboord?
E. An. Dromio, what ſtuffe of mine haſt thou imbark'd.
S. Dro. Your goods that lay at hoſt ſir in the Centaur.
S. Ant. He ſpeaks to me, I am your Maſter Dromio.
Come go with us, we'l look to that anon,
Embrace thy Brother there, rejoyce with him. Exit.

S. Dro. There is a fat friend at your Maſters houſe.
That kitchin'd me for you to day at dinner:
She now ſhall be my ſiſter, not my wife.

E. D. Me thinks you are my glaſſe, and not my bro-
I ſee by you, I am a ſweet-fac'd youth, (ther:
Will you walk in to ſee their Goſſipping?

S. Dro. Not I Sir, you are my Elder.

E. Dro. That's a queſtion, how ſhall I try it.

S. Dro. We'l draw Cuts for the Signiority, till then, lead thou firſt.

E. Dro. Nay then thus:
We came into the world like Brother and Brother:
And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another.
Exeunt.

FINIS.

Much adoe about Nothing.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Leonato Governour of Messina, Innogen his wife, Hero his Daughter, and Beatrice his Neece, with a Messenger.

Leonato. I Learn in this Letter, that Don Peter of Arragon comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very near by this: he was not three Leagues off when I left him.

Leon. How many Gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mes. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A victory is twice it self, when the atchiever brings home full numbers: I find here that Don Peter hath bestowed much honour on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

Mes. Much deserv'd on his part, and equally remembred by Don Pedro, he hath born himself beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a Lamb the feats of a Lion, he hath indeed better bettered expectation, then you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leo. He hath an Uncle here in Messina will be very much glad of it.

Mes. I have already delivered him Letters, and there appears much joy in him, even so much, that joy could not shew it self modest enough, without a badge of bitterness.

Leo. Did he break out into teares?

Mes. In great measure.

Leo. A kind overflow of kindness: there are no faces truer, then those that are so wash'd; how much better is it to weep at joy, then to joy at weeping?

Beat. I pray you, is Signior Mountanto return'd from the Warrs, or no?

Mes. I know none of that name, Lady, there was none such in the Army of any sort.

Leo. What is he that you ask for Neece?

Hero. My Cousin means Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mes. O he's return'd, and as pleasant as ever he was.

Beat. He set up his Bills here in Messina, and challeng'd Cupid at the Flight: and my Uncles fool reading the Challenge, subscrib'd for Cupid, and challeng'd him at the Burbolt. I pray you, how many hath he kill'd and eaten in these Warrs? But how many hath he kill'd? for indeed, I promis'd to eat all of his killing.

Leon. 'Faith Neece, you taxe Signior Benedick too much, but he'l meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mes. He hath done good service Lady, in those wars.

Beat. You had musty victuall, and he hath holp to eat it: he's a very valiant Trencher-man, he hath an excellent stomach.

Mes. And a good Soldier too Lady.

Beat. And a good Soldier to a Lady. But what is he to a Lord?

Mes. A Lord to a Lord, a Man to a Man, stuft with all honourable virtues.

Beat. It is so indeed, he is no lesse then a stuft man: but for the stuffing well, we are all mortall.

Leon. You must not (sir) mistake my Neece. there is a kind of merry War betwixt Signior Benedick and her: they never meet, but there is a skirmish of wit between them.

Beat. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, four of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man govern'd with one: so that if he have wit enough to keep himself warm, let him bear it for a difference between himself and his horse. For it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be known a reasonable creature. Who is his Companion now? He hath every moneth a new sworn Brother.

Mes. Is't possible?

Beat. Very easily possible: he wears his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it ever changes with the next block.

Mes. I see (Lady) the Gentleman is not in your books.

Beat. No, and he were, I would burn my study. But I pray you who is his Companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the Devil?

Mes. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Beat. O Lord, he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught then the Pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God help the noble Claudio, if he have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere it be cur'd.

Mes. I will hold friends with you Lady.

Beat. Doe good friend.

Leo. You'l ne're run mad Neece.

Beat. No, not till a hot January.

Mes. Don Pedro is approach'd.

Enter Don Pedro, Claudio, Benedick, Balthazar, and John the Bastard.

Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your Grace: for, trouble being gone, comfort should remain: but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happinesse takes his leave.

Pedro. You embrace your charge more willingly: I think this is your daughter.

Leo. Her Mother hath many times told me so.

Ben. Were you in doubt, that you askt her?

Leo. Signior Benedick, no, for then were you a Child.

Pedro. You have it full Benedick, we may guesse by this, what you are, being a man, truly the Lady fathers her self: be happy, Lady, for you are like an honourable father.

Ben. If Signior Leonato be her Father, she would not have his head on her shoulders for all Messina, as like him as she is.

Beat. I wonder that you will still be talking, Signior Benedick, no body marks you.

Ben. What my dear Lady Disdain! are you yet living?

Beat. Is it possible Disdain should die, while she hath such meet food to feed it, as Signior Benedick? Courtesie it self must convert to Disdain, if you come in her presence.

Bene. Then is Courtesie a turn-coat, but it is certain I am loved of all Ladies, onely you excepted: and I would I could find in my heart that I had not an hard heart, for truly I love none.

Beat. A dear happinesse to women, they would else have been troubled with a pernicious Suitor, I thank God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that, I had rather hear my Dog bark at a Crow, then a man swear he loves me.

Ben. God keep your Ladiship still in that mind, so some Gentleman or other shall scape a Predestinate scracht face.

Beat. Scratching could not make it worse, and 'twere such a face as yours were.

Ben. Well you are a rare Parrat-teacher.

Beat. A Bird of my tongue, is better then a Beast of yours.

Ben. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer: but keep your way a God's name, I have done.

Beat. You alwayes end with a Jade's trick, I know you of old.

Pedro. This is the summe of all: Leonato, Signior Claudio, and Signior Benedick; my dear friend Leonato hath invited you all, I tell you we shall stay here, at the least a moneth, and he heartily prays some occasion may detain us longer: I dare swear he is no hypocrite, but prays from his heart.

Leon. If you swear, my Lord, you shall not be forsworn, let me bid you welcome, my Lord, being reconciled to the Prince your Brother; I owe you all duty.

John. I thank you, I am not of many words, but I thank you.

Leon. Please it your Grace lead on?

Pedro. Your hand Leonato, we will go together.

Exeunt. Manet Benedick and Claudio.

Clau. Benedick, didst thou note the daughter of Signior Leonato?

Ben. I noted her not, but I look'd on her.

Clau. Is she not a modest young Lady?

Ben. Doe you question me as an honest man should doe, for my simple true judgement? or would you have me speak after my custome, as being a professed tyrant to their sex?

Clau. No, I prethee speak in sober judgement.

Ben. Why I faith me thinks she's too low for an high praise, too brown for a fair praise, and too little for a great praise, onely this commendation I can afford her, that were she other then she is, she were unhandsome, and being no other but as she is, I doe not like her.

Clau. Thou think'st I am in sport, I pray thee tell me truly how thou lik'st her.

Ben. Would you buy her, that you enquire after her?

Clau. Can the world buy such a Jewell?

Ben. Yea, and a case to put it into, but speak you this with a sad brow? Or doe you play the flouting Jack, to tell us Cupid is a good Hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare Carpenter: Come, in what Key shall a man take you to go in the Song.

Clau. In mine eye, she is the sweetest Lady that ever I lookt on.

Ben. I can see yet without Spectacles, and I see no such matter: there's her Cosin, and she were not possest with a fury, exceeds her as much in beauty, as the first of May doth the last of December: but I hope you have no intent to turn husband, have you?

Clau. I would scarce trust my self, though I had sworn the contrary, if Hero would be my wife.

Ben. Is't come to this? in faith hath not the world one man, but he will wear his cap with suspicion? shall I never see a Batchellor of threescore again? goe to Ifaith, and thou wilt needs thrust thy neck into a yoke, wear the print of it, and sigh away Sundays: look, Don Pedro is returned to seek you.

Enter Don Pedro, John the Bastard.

Pedr. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonato?

Bened. I would your Grace would constrain me to tell.

Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegiance.

Ben. You hear, Count Claudio, I can be secret as a dumb man, I would have you think so (but on my allegiance, mark you this, on my allegiance) he is in love, with whom? now that is your Graces part: mark how short his answer is, with Hero, Leonato's short Daughter.

Clau. If this were so, so were it uttered.

Ben. Like the old Tale, my Lord, it is not so, nor 'twas not so: but indeed, God forbid it should be so.

Clau. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

Pedro. Amen, if you love her, for the Lady is very well worthy.

Clau. You speak this to fetch me in, my Lord.

Pedro. By my troth I speak my thought.

Clau. And in faith, my Lord, I spoke mine.

Ben. And by my two faiths and troths, my Lord, I speak mine.

Clau. That I love her, I feel.

Ped. That she is worthy, I know.

Ben. That I neither feel how she should be loved, nor know how she should be worthy, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me, I will die in it at the stake.

Ped. Thou wast ever an obstinate Heretick in the despight of beauty.

Clau. And never could maintain his part, but in the force of his will.

Ben.

Bene. That a woman conceived me, I thank her: that ſhe brought me up, I likewiſe give her moſt humble thanks: but that I will have a recheate winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an inviſible baldrick, all women ſhall pardon me: becauſe I will not doe them the wrong to miſtruſt any, I will doe my ſelf the right to truſt none: and the fine is, (for the which I may goe the finer) I will live a Batchelor.

Pedro. I ſhall ſee thee ere I die, look pale with love.

Bene. With anger, with ſickneſſe, or with hunger, my Lord, not with love: prove that ever I looſe more bloud with love, then I will get again with drinking, pick out mine eyes with a Ballet-makers penn, and hang me up at the door of a brothel-houſe for the ſigne of blind Cupid.

Pedro. Well, if ever thou do'ſt fall from this faith, thou wilt prove a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a Cat, and ſhoot at me, and he that hit's me, let him be clapt on the ſhoulder, and call'd Adam.

Pedro. Well, as the time ſhall try: In time the ſavage Bull doth bear the yoak.

Bene. The ſavage bull may, but if ever the ſenſible Benedick bear it, pluck off the bulls horns, and ſet them in my forehead, and let me be vildely painted, and in ſuch great Letters as they write, Here is good horſe to hire: let them ſignifie under my ſigne, Here you may ſee Benedick the married man.

Clau. If this ſhould ever happen, thou wouldſt be horn mad.

Pedro. Nay, if Cupid have not ſpent all his Quiver in Venice, thou wilt quake for this ſhortly.

Bene. I look for an earth quake too then.

Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the hours, in the mean time, good Signior Benedick, repair to Leonato's, commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at ſupper, for indeed he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I have almoſt matter enough in me for ſuch an Embaſſage, and ſo I commit you.

Clau. To the tuition of God. From my houſe, if I had it.

Pedro. The ſixth of July. Your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay mock not, mock not; the body of your diſcourſe is ſometime guarded with fragments, and the guards are but ſlightly baſted on neither: e're you flout old ends any further, examine your conſcience, and ſo I leave you. Exit.

Clau. My Liege, your Highneſs now may do me good.

Pedro. My love is thine to teach, teach it but how,
And thou ſhalt ſee how apt it is to learn
Any hard Leſſon, that may do thee good.

Clau. Hath Leonato any ſon my Lord?

Pedro. No child but Hero, ſhe's his onely heir.
Doſt thou affect her, Claudio?

Clau. O my Lord,
When you went onward on this ended action,
I look'd upon her with a ſouldiers eye,
That lik'd, but had a rougher task in hand,
Than to drive liking to the name of love:
But now I am return'd, and that war-thoughts
Have left their places vacant: in their rooms
Come thronged ſoft and delicate deſires,
All prompting me how fair young Hero is,
Saying I lik'd her ere I went to wars.

Pedro. Thou wilt be like a lover preſently,
And tire the hearer with a book of words:
If thou doſt love fair Hero, cheriſh it,
And I will break with her: waſt not to this end,
That thou beganſt to twiſt ſo fine a ſtory?

Clau. How ſweetly do you miniſter to love,
That know loves grief by his complexion!
But leſt my liking might too ſodain ſeem,
I would have ſalv'd it with a longer treatiſe.

Pedro. What need the bridge much broader then the flood?
The faireſt grant in the neceſſity:
Look what will ſerve, is fit: 'tis once, thou loveſt,
And I will fit thee with the remedy,
I know we ſhall have revelling to night,
I will aſſume thy part in ſome diſguiſe,
And tell fair Hero I am Claudio,
And in her boſome I'le unclaſp my heart,
And take her hearing priſoner with the force
And ſtrong incounter of my amorous tale:
Then after, to her father will I break,
And the concluſion is, ſhe ſhall be thine,
In practiſe let us put it preſently. Exeunt.

Enter Leonato and an old man, brother to Leonato.

Leo. How now brother, where is my coſen your ſon: hath he provided this muſick?

Old. He is very buſie about it, but brother, I can tell you news that you yet dream'd not of.

Leo. Are they good?

Old. As the event ſtamps them, but they have a good cover: they ſhew well outward: the Prince and Count Claudio walking in a thick pleached alley in my orchard, were thus over-heard by a man of mine: the Prince diſcovered to Claudio that he loved my neece your daughter, and meant to acknowledge it this night in a dance, and he found her accordant, he meant to take the preſent time by the top, and inſtantly breake with you of it.

Leo. Hath the fellow any wit, that told you this?

Old. A good ſharp fellow, I will ſend for him, and queſtion him your ſelf.

Leo. No, no: we will hold it as a dream, till it appear it ſelf: but I will acquaint my daughter with all, that ſhe may be the better prepared for anſwer, if peradventure this be true: go you and tell her of it: coſins, you know what you have to do, O I cry you mercy friend; go you with me and I will uſe your skill, good coſin have a care this buſie time. Exeunt.

Enter Sir Iohn the Baſtard, and Conrade his companion.

Con. What the good year my Lord, why are you thus out of meaſure ſad?

Iohn. There is no meaſure in the occaſion that breeds, therefore the ſadneſs is without limit.

Con. You ſhould hear reaſon.

Iohn. And when I have heard it, what bleſſing bringeth it?

Con. If not a preſent remedy, yet a patient ſufferance.

Iohn. I wonder that thou (being, as thou ſaiſt thou art, born under Saturn) goeſt about to apply a mortall medecine to a mortifying miſchief: I cannot hide what I am: I muſt be ſad when I have cauſe, and ſmile at no mans jeſts; eat when I have ſtomach, and wait for no mans leiſure: ſleep when I am drowſie, and tend on no mans buſineſs; laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humour.

Con. Yea, but you muſt not make the full ſhow of this till you may doe it without controllment, you have of late

late ſtood out againſt your brother, and he hath tane you newly into his grace, where it is impoſſible you ſhould take root, but by the fair weather that you make your ſelf, it is needfull that you frame the ſeaſon for your own harveſt.

John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, then a roſe in his grace, and it better fits my bloud to be diſdain'd of all, then to faſhion a carriage to rob love from any: in this (though I cannot be ſaid to be a flattering honeſt man) it muſt not be denied but I am a plain dealing villain, I am truſted with a muſſell, and infranchiſed with a clog, therefore I have decreed, not to ſing in my cage: if I had my mouth, I would bite: if I had my liberty, I would do my liking: in the mean time, let me be that I am, and ſeek not to alter me.

Conr. Can you make no uſe of your diſcontent?

John. I will make all uſe of it, for I uſe it onely. Who comes here? what news Borachio.

Enter Borachio.

Bora. I came yonder from a great ſupper, the Prince your brother is royally entertained by Leonato, and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

John. Will it ſerve for any Model to build miſchiefe on? What is he for a foole that betroth's himſelf to unquietneſs?

Bor. Marry it is your brothers right hand.

John. Who, the moſt exquiſite Claudio?

Bor. Even he.

John. A proper Squier, and who, and who, which way looks he?

Bor. Marry on Hero, the daughter and Heir of Leonato.

John. A very forward March-chick, how come you to this?

Bor. Being entertain'd for a perfumer, as I was ſmoaking a muſty room, comes me the Prince and Claudio, hand in hand in ſad conference: I whipt behind the Arras, and there heard it agreed upon, that the Prince ſhould wooe Hero for himſelf, and having obtain'd her, give her to Count Claudio.

John. Come, come, let us thither, this may prove food to my diſpleaſure, that young ſtart-up hath all the glory of my overthrow: if I can croſſe him any way, I bleſſe my ſelf every way; you are both ſure, and will aſſiſt me?

Conr. To the death my Lord.

John. Let us to the great ſupper, their cheer is the greater that I ſubdued, would the Cook were of my mind: ſhall we go prove what's to be done?

Bor. We'll wait upon your Lordſhip.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Leonato, his brother, his wife, Hero his daughter, and Beatrice his neece, and kinſman.

Leona. Was not Count John here at ſupper?

Brot. I ſaw him not.

Beat. How tartly that Gentleman looks, I never can ſee him, but I am heart-burn'd an hour after.

Hero. He is of a melancholly diſpoſition.

Beat. He were an excellent man that were made juſt in the mid-way between him and Benedicke, the one is too like an image and ſaies nothing, and the other too like my Ladies eldeſt ſon, evermore tatling.

Leon. Then half Signior Benedick's toungue in Count Iohns mouth, and halfe Count Iohns melancholly in Signior Benedick's face------,

Beat. With a good legge and a good foot unckle, and money enough in his purſe, ſuch a man would win any woman in the world, if he could get her good will.

Leon. By my troth Neece, thou wilt never get thee a husband, if thou be ſo ſhrewd of thy tongue.

Brot. Infaith ſhe's too curſt.

Beat. Too curſt is more then curſt, I ſhall leſſen Gods ſending that way: for it is ſaid, God ſends a curſt Cow ſhort horns, but to a Cow too curſt he ſends none.

Leon. So, by being too curſt, God will ſend no horns.

Beat. Juſt, if he ſend me no husband, for the which bleſſing, I am at him upon my knees every morning and evening: Lord, I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face, I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leona. You may light upon a husband that hath no beard.

Beat. What ſhould I doe with him? dreſſe him in my apparell, and make him my waiting-gentlewoman? he that hath a beard, is more then a youth: and he that hath no beard is leſſe then a man: and he that is more then a youth, is not for me: and he that is leſs then a man, I am not for him: therefore I will even take ſix pence in earneſt of the Bearherd and lead his Apes into hell.

Leon. Well then, go you into hell.

Beat. No, but to the gate, and there will the Devill meet me like an old Cuckold with horns on his head, and ſay, get you to heaven Beatrice, get you to heaven, here's no place for you maids, ſo deliver I up my Apes, and away to Saint Peter: for the heavens, he ſhews me where the Batchellers ſit, and there live we as merry as the day is long.

Brot. Well neece, I truſt you will be rul'd by your father.

Beat. Yes faith, it is my coſens duty to make curtſie, and ſay, as it pleaſe you: but yet for all that coſin, let him be a handſome fellow, or elſe make another curtſie, and ſay, father, as it pleaſes me.

Leon. Well neece, I hope to ſee you one day fitted with a husband.

Beat. Not till God make men of ſome other mettall then earth, would it not grieve a woman to be overmaſtred with a piece of valiant duſt? to make account of her life to a clod of cold wayward marle? no uncle, I'le none: Adams ſons are brethren, and truly I hold it a ſin to match in my kinred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you, if the Prince do ſolicit you in that kind, you know your anſwer.

Beat. The fault will be in the muſick, coſin, if you be not woo'd in good time: if the Prince be too important, tell him there is meaſure in every thing, and ſo dance out the anſwer, for hear me Hero, wooing, wedding, and repenting, is as a Scotch jigge, a meaſure, and a cinquepace: the firſt ſuit is hot and haſty like a Scotch jigge (and full as fantaſticall) the wedding mannerly modeſt, (as a meaſure) full of ſtate and anchentry, and then comes repentance, and with his bad legs falls into the cinquepace faſter and faſter, till he ſinks into his grave.

Leona.

Leon. Cosin you apprehend passing shrewdly.

Beatrice. I have a good eye uncle, I can see a Church by day light.

Leon. The revellers are entring brother, make good room.

Enter Prince, Pedro, Claudio, Benedicke, and Balthazar, or dumb John, Maskers with a drum.

Pedro. Lady, will you walke about with your friend?

Hero. So you walk softly, and look sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walke, and especially when I walke away.

Pedro. With me in your company.

Hero. I may say so when I please.

Pedro. And when please you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour, for God defend the Lute should be like the case.

Pedro. My visor is Philemons roofe, within the house is love.

Hero. Why then your visor should be thatcht.

Pedro. Speak low if you speak Love.

Bene. Well, I would you did like me.

Mask. So would not I for your own sake, for I have many ill qualities.

Bene. Which is one?

Mask. I say my prayers aloud.

Bene. I love you the better, the hearers may cry Amen.

Mas. God match me with a good dancer.

Balth. Amen.

Mas. And God keep him out of my sight when the the dance is done: answer Clerk.

Balth. No more words, the Clerk is answered.

Ursula. I know you well enough, you are Signior Anthonio.

Anth. At a word, I am not.

Ursula. I know you by the wagling of your head.

Anth. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Ursu. You could never doe him so ill well, unless you were the very man: here's his dry hand up and down, you are he, you are he.

Anth. At a word, I am not.

Ursula. Come, come, doe you think I doe not know you by your excellent wit? can vertue hide it selfe? goe to, mumme, you are he, graces will appear, and there's an end.

Beat. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Beat. Nor will you tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Beat. That I was disdainfull, and that I had my good wit out of the hundred merry tales: well, this was Signior Benedicke that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Beat. I am sure you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Beat. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you what is he?

Beat. Why is the Princes jester, a very dull foole, onely his gift is, in devising impossible slanders, none but Libertines delight in him, and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villany, for he both pleaseth men and angers them, and then they laugh at him, and beat him; I am sure he is in the Fleet, I would he had boarded me.

Bene. When I know the Gentleman, I'le tell him what you say.

Beat. Doe, doe, hee'l but break a comparison or two on me, which peradventur (not markt, or not laugh'd at) strikes him into melancholly, and then there's a Partridge wing saved, for the foole will eat no supper that night. We must follow the Leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Bea. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning. Exeunt.

Musick for the dance.

John. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawn her father to break with him about it: the Ladies follow her, and but one visor remains.

Bora. And that is Claudio, I know him by his bearing.

John. Are not you Signior Benedicke?

Clau. You know me well, I am he.

John. Signior, you are very near my brother in his love, he is enamor'd on Hero, I pray you disswade him from her, she is no equall for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Clau. How know you he loves her?

John. I heard him swear his affection.

Bora. So did I too, and he swore he would marry her to night.

Joh. Come, let us to the banquet. Exit. manet Clau.

Clau. Thus answer I in name of Benedicke,
But hear this ill news with the ears of Claudio:
'Tis certain so, the Prince woo's for himself:
Friendship is constant in all other things,
Save in the Office and affairs of love:
Therefore all hearts in love use their own tongues,
Let every eye negotiate for it selfe,
And trust no Agent: for beauty is a witch;
Against whose charmes, faith melteth into bloud:
This is an accident of hourly proofe,
Which I mistrusted not. Farewell therefore Hero.

Enter Benedicke.

Bene. Count Claudio.

Clau. Yea the same.

Bene. Come, will you go with me?

Clau. Whither?

Bene. Even to the next Willow, about your own business, Count. What fashion will you were the Garland off? About your neck, like an Usurers chain? Or under your arme, like a Lieutenants scarfe? You must wear it one way, for the Prince hath got your Hero.

Clau. I wish him joy of her.

Bene. Why that's spoken like an honest Drovier, so they sell Bullocks: but did you think the Prince would have served you thus?

Clau. I pray you leave me.

Bene. Ho no! you strike like the blind-man, 'twas the boy that stole your meat, and you'll beat the post.

Clau. If it will not be, I'le leave you. Exit.

Bene. Alas poor hurt foul, now will he creep into sedges: but that my Lady Beatrice should know me, and not know me: the Princes fool! Ha? it may be I goe under that title, because I am merry: yet but so I am apt to do my self wrong: I am not so reputed, it is the base (though bitter) disposition of Beatrice, that puts the word into her person, and so gives me out: well; ile be revenged as I may.

Enter the Prince.

Pedro. Now Signior, where's the Count, did you see him?

Bene. Troth my Lord, I have played the part of Lady Fame, I found him here as melancholly as a Lodge in a Warren, I told him, and I think, told him true, that your grace had got the will of this young Lady, and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to bind him a rod, as being worthy to be whipt.

Pedro. To be whipt, what's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a School-boy, who being over-joyed with finding a birds nest, shews it his companion, and he steals it.

Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust, a transgression? the transgression is in the stealer.

Bene. Yet it had not been amiss the rod had been made, and the garland too, for the garland he might have worn himself, and the rod he might have bestowed on you, who (as I take it) have stolne his birds nest.

Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith you say honestly.

Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrell to you, the Gentleman that danc'd with her, told her she is much wrong'd by you.

Bene. O she misus'd me past the indurance of a block: an oake but with one green leaf on it, would have answered her: my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her: she told me, not thinking I had been my self, that I was the Princes Jester, and that I was duller then a great thaw, hudling jest upon jest; with such impossible conveiance upon me, that I stood like a man at a mark, with a whole army shooting at me: she speaks poyniards, and every word stabs me: if her breath were as terrible as terminations, there were no living near her, she would infect to the north star: I would not marry her, though she were indowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgrest, she would have made Hercules have turnd spit, yea, and have cleft his club to make the fire too: come, talk not of her, you shall find her in the infernall Ate in good apparell. I would to God some scholler would conjure her, for certainly, while she is here, a man may live as quiet in hell, as in a sanctuary, and people sin upon purpose, because they would goe thither, so indeed all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follows her.

Enter Claudio, and Beatrice, Leonato, Hero.

Pedro. Look here she comes.

Bene. Will your Grace command me any service to the worlds end? I will go on the slightest errand now to the Antipodes that you can devise to send me on: I will fetch you a tooth-picker now from the furthest inch of Asia: bring you the length of Prester Johns foot: fetch you a hair off the great Chams beard: doe you any embassage to the Pigmies, rather then hold three words conference with this Harpy: you have no employment for me?

Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God sir, heres a dish I love not, I cannot indure this Ladies tongue. Exit.

Pedro. Come Lady, come, you have lost the heart of Signior Benedicke.

Beat. Indeed my Lord, he lent it me a while, and I gave him use for it, a double heart for a single one, marry once before he won it of of me, with false dice, therefore your Grace may well say I have lost it.

Pedro. You have put him down Lady, you have put him down.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my Lord, lest I should prove the mother of fools: I have brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seek.

Pedro. Why how now Count, wherefore are you sad?

Clau. Not sad my Lord.

Pedro. How then? sick?

Clau. Neither, my Lord.

Beat. The Count is neither sad, nor sick, nor merry, nor well: but civill Count, civill as an Orange, and something of a jealous complexion.

Pedro. Ifaith Lady, I think your blazon to be true, though I beswom, if he be so, his conceit is false: here Claudio, I have wooed in thy name, and fair Hero is won, I have broke with her father, and his good will obtained, name the day of marriage, and God give thee joy.

Leona. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, and all grace say, Amen to it.

Beat. Speak Count, 'tis your Qu.

Clau. Silence is the perfectest Herald of joy, I were but little happy if I could say, how much? Lady, as you are mine, I am yours, I give away my selfe for you, and doat upon the exchange.

Beat. Speak cosin, or (if you cannot) stop his mouth with a kis, and let not him speak neither.

Pedro. Infaith Lady you have a merry heart.

Beat. Yea my Lord I thank it, poore foole it keeps on the windy side of care, my cosin tells him in his eare that he is in my heart.

Clau. And so she doth cosin.

Beat. Good Lord for alliance: thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burn'd, I may sit in a corner and cry, heigh ho for a husband.

Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather have one of your fathers getting: hath your Grace ne're a brother like you? your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

Prince. Will you have me? Lady.

Beat. No, my Lord, unlesse I might have another for working-dayes, your Grace is too costly to wear every day: But I beseech your Grace pardon me, I was born to speak all mirth, and no matter.

Prince. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry, best becomes you, for out of question, you were born in a merry hour.

Beat. No sure my Lord, my mother cryed, but then there was a star danc'd, and under that I was borne: cosins God give you joy.

Leona. Neece, will you look to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy Uncle, by your Graces pardon. Exit Beatrice.

Prince. By my troth a pleasant spirited Lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholly element in her my Lord, she is never sad, but when she sleeps, and not ever sad then: for I have heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamt of unhappines, and wak't her self with laughing.

Pedro. She cannot indure to hear tell of a husband.

Leon. O, by no means, she mocks all her wooers out of suit.

Prince. She were an excellent wife for Benedicke.

Leona. O lord, my Lord, if they were but a week married, married, they would talk themselves mad.

Prince. Count Claudio, when mean you to goe to Church?

Clau. To morrow my Lord, Time goes on crutches, till love have all his rites.

Leona. Not till monday, my dear son, which is hence a just seven night, and a time too brief too, to have all things answer mind.

Prince. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing, but I warrant thee Claudio, the time shall not go dully by us; I will in the interim, undertake one of Hercules labours, which is, to bring Signior Benedicke and the Lady Beatrice into a mountain of affection, th' one with th'other, I would fain have it a match, and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall give you direction.

Leona. My Lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights watchings.

Clau. And I my Lord.

Prin. And you too gentle Hero.

Hero. I will do any modest office, my Lord, to help my cosin to a good husband.

Prin. And Benedicke is not the unhopefullest husband that I know: thus farre can I praise him, he is of a noble strain, of approved valour, and confirm'd honesty. I will teach you how to humour your cosin, that she shall fall in love with Benedicke, and I, with your two helps, will so practise on Benedicke, that in despite of his quick wit, and his queasie stomack, he shall fall in love with Beatrice: if we can do this, Cupid is no longer an Archer, his glory shall be ours, for we are the onely love-gods, go with me, and I will tell you my drift. Exeunt.

Enter John and Borachio.

Joh. It is so, the Count Claudio shall marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yea my Lord, but I can cross it.

John. Any bar, any cross, any impediment, will be medicinable to me, I am sick in displeasure to him, and whatsoever comes athwart his affection, ranges evenly with mine, how canst thou cross this marriage?

Bor. Not honestly my Lord, but so covertly, that no dishonesty shall appear in me.

Joh. Shew me briefly how.

Bor. I think I told your Lordship a year since, how much I am in the favour of Margaret, the waiting gentlewoman to Hero.

John. I remember.

Bor. I can at any unseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her Ladies chamber window.

John. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bor. The poyson of that lies in you to temper, goe you to the Prince your brother, spare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his Honor in marrying the renowned Claudio, whose estimation do you mightily hold up, to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

John. What proofe shall I make of that?

Bor. Proofe enough, to misuse the Prince, to vex Claudio, to undoe Hero, and kill Leonato, look you for any other issue?

John. Onely to despite them, I will endeavour any thing.

Bor. Goe then, find me a meet houre, to draw on Pedro and the Count Claudio alone, tell them that you know that Hero loves me, intend a kind of zeal both to the Prince and Claudio (as in a love of your brothers honor who hath made this match) and his friends reputation, who is thus like to be cosen'd with the semblance of a maid, that you have discoverd thus: they will scarcely believe this without triall: offer them instances which shall bear no lesse likelihood, than to see me at her chamber window, hear me call Margaret, Hero; hear Margaret terme me Claudio, and bring them to see this, the very night before the intended wedding, for in the mean time, I will fashion the matter, that Hero shall be absent, and there shall appear such seeming truths of Hero's disloyalty, that jealousie shall be call'd assurance, and all the preparation overthrown.

Joh. Grow this to what adverse issue it can, I will put it in practise: be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducats.

Bor. Be thou constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

John. I will presently goe learn their day of marriage. Exit.

Enter Benedicke alone.

Bene. Boy.

Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber window lies a book, bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am here already sir. Exit.

Bene. I know that, but I would have thee hence, and here again. I doe much wonder, that one man seeing how much another man is a fool, when he dedicates his behaviours to love, will after he hath laught at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his own scorne, by falling in love, and such a man is Claudio, I have known when there was no musick with him but the drum and the fife, and now had he rather hear the taber and the pipe: I have known when he would have walkt ten mile a foot, to see a good armor, and now will he lie ten nights awake carving the fashion of a new dublet: he was wont to speak plain, and to the purpose (like an honest man and a souldier) and now is he turn'd orthography, his words are a very fantastical banquet, just so many strange dishes: may I be so converted, and see with these eyes? I cannot tell, I think not: I will not be sworn, but love may transform me to an oyster, but I'le take my oath on it, till he have made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a fool: one woman is fair, yet I am well: another is wise, yet I am well: another vertuous, yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace: rich she shall be, that's certain: wise, or I'le none; vertuous, or I'le never cheapon her: fair, or I'le never look on her: milde, or come not near me: Noble, or not for an Angell: of good discourse: an excellent Musitian, and her hair shall be of what colour it please God, hah! the Prince and Monsieur Love, I will hide me in the Arbor.

Enter Prince, Leonato, Claudio, and Iack Wilson.

Prince. Come, shall we hear his this musick?

Claud. Yea my good Lord: how still the evening is,
As husht on purpose to grace harmony.

Prince. See you where Benedicke hath hid himself?

Clau. O very well my Lord: the musick ended,
We'll fit the kid-fox with a penny worth.

Prince. Come Balthazar, we'll hear that song again.

Balth. O good my Lord, taxe not so bad a voyce,
To slander musick any more then once.

Prince.

Prince. It is the witnes ſtill of excellency,
To put a ſtrange face on his own perfection,
I pray thee ſing, and let me wooe no more.

Balth. Becauſe you talk af wooing, I will ſing,
Since many a wooer doth commence his ſuit,
To her he thinks not worthy, yet he woo's,
Yet will he ſwear he loves.

Prince. Nay pray thee come,
Or if thou wilt hold longer argument,
Doe it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes,
There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

Prince. Why theſe are very crotchets that he ſpeaks,
Note notes forſooth, and nothing.

Bene. Now divine aire, now is his ſoul raviſh't, is it not ſtrange that ſheeps guts ſhould hale ſouls out of mens bodies? well, a horne for my money when all's done.

The Song.

Sigh no more Ladies, ſigh no more,
Men were deceivers ever,
One foot in Sea, and one on ſhore,
To one thing conſtant never:
Then ſigh not ſo, but let them goe,
And be you blith and bonny,
Converting all your ſounds of woe,
Into hey nony, nony.

Sing no more ditties, ſing no more,
Of dumps ſo dull and heavy.
The fraud of men were ever ſo,
Since ſummer firſt was leavy,
Then ſigh not ſo, &c.

Prince. By my troth a good ſong.

Balth. And an ill ſinger my Lord.

Prince. Ha, no, no 'faith, thou ſing'ſt well enough for a ſhift.

Bene. And he had been a dog that ſhould have howl'd thus, they would have hang'd him, and I pray God his bad voyce bode no miſchief, I had as lieve have heard the night-raven, come what plague could have come after it.

Prince. Yea marry, doſt thou hear Balthazar? I pray thee get us ſome excellent muſick: for to morrow night we would have it at the Lady Heroes chamber window.

Balth. The beſt I can my lord. Exit. Balthazar.

Prince. Doe ſo, farewell. Come hither Leonato, what was it you told me of to day, that your Niece Beatrice was in love with Signior Benedicke?

Claud. O I, ſtalke on, ſtalke on, the foul ſits. I did never think that Lady would have loved any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither, but moſt wonderfull, that ſhe ſhould ſo doat on Signior Benedicke, whom ſhe hath in all outward behaviours ſeemed ever to abhor.

Bene. Is't poſſible, ſits the wind in that corner?

Leon. By my troth my lord, I cannot tell what to think of it, but that ſhe loves him with an inraged affection, it is paſt the infinite of thought.

Prince. May be ſhe doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit? there was never counterfeit of paſſion, came ſo neer the life of paſſion as ſhe diſcovers it.

Prince. Why what effects of paſſion ſhews ſhe?

Claud. Bait the hook well, the fiſh will bite.

Leon. What effects my Lord? ſhe will ſit you, you heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did indeed.

Prin. How, how I pray you? you amaze me, I would have thought her ſpirit had been invincible againſt all aſſaults of affection.

Leo. I would have ſworne it had, my lord, eſpecially againſt Benedicke.

Bene. I ſhould think this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow ſpeaks it: knavery cannot ſure hide himſelf in ſuch reverence.

Claud. He hath tane th' infection, hold it up.

Prince. Hath ſhe made her affection known to Benedicke?

Leonato. No, and ſwears ſhe never will, that's her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true indeed, ſo your daughter ſayes: ſhall I, ſayes ſhe, that have ſo oft encountred him with ſcorn, write to him that I love him?

Leo. This ſaies ſhe now when ſhe is beginning to write to him, for ſhee'll be up twenty times a night, and there will ſhe ſit in her ſmock, till ſhe have writ a ſheet of paper: my daughter tells us all.

Cla. Now you talk of a ſheet of paper, I remember a pretty jeſt your daughter told us of.

Leon. O when ſhe had writ it, and reading it over, ſhe found Benedicke and Beatrice between the ſheet.

Clau. That.

Leon. O ſhe tore the letter into a thouſand halfpence, raild at her ſelf, that ſhe ſhould be ſo immodeſt, to write to one that ſhe knew would flout her: I meaſure him, ſaies ſhe, by my own ſpirit, for I ſhould flout him if he writ to me, yea though I love him, I ſhould.

Clau. Then down upon her knees ſhe falls, weeps, ſobs, beats her heart, tears her hair, pray's, curſes, O ſweet Benedicke, God give me patience.

Leon. She doth indeed, my daughter ſaies ſo, and the extaſie hath ſo much overborn her, that my daughter is ſometime afeard ſhe will doe a deſperate out-rage to her ſelf, it is very true.

Prince. It were good that Benedicke knew of it by ſome other, if ſhe will not diſcover it.

Clau. To what end? he would but make a ſport of it, and torment the poor Lady worſe.

Prin. And he ſhould, it were an alms to hang him, ſhe's an excellent ſweet Lady, and (out of all ſuſpition,) ſhe is vertuous.

Clau. And ſhe is exceeding wiſe.

Prin. In every thing, but in loving Benedicke.

Leon. O my lord, wiſdome and bloud combating in ſo tender a body, we have ten proofs to one, that bloud hath the victory, I am ſorry for her, as I have juſt cauſe, being her Uncle, and her Guardian.

Prince. I would ſhe had beſtowed this dotage on me, I would have daſt all other reſpects, and made her half my ſelf: I pray you tell Benedicke of it, and hear what he will ſay.

Leon. Were it good think you?

Cla. Hero thinks ſurely ſhe will die, for ſhe ſaies ſhe will die, if he love her not, and ſhe will die ere ſhe make her love known, and ſhe will die if he wooe her, rather then ſhe will bate one breath of her accuſtomed croſsneſs.

Prin. She doth well, if ſhe ſhould make tender of her love,

love, 'tis very possible he'll scorn it, for the man (as you know all) hath a contemptible spirit.

Clau. He is a very proper man.

Prin. He hath indeed a good outward happinesse.

Clau. 'Fore God, and in my mind very wise.

Prin. He doth indeed shew some sparks that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

Prin. As Hector, I assure you, and in the managing of quarrels you may see he is wise, for either he avoids them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a Christian like fear.

Leon. If he do fear God, a must necessarily keep peace, if he break the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrell with fear and trembling.

Prin. And so will he do, for the man doth fear God, howsoever it seems not in him, by some large jeasts he will make: well I am sorry for your niece, shall we goe see Benedick, and tell him of her love?

Claud. Never tell him, my Lord, let her wear it out with good counsell.

Leon. Nay that's impossible, she may wear her heart out first.

Prin. Well, we will hear further of it by your daughter, let it coole the while, I love Benedick well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himself, to see how much he is unworthy to have so good a Lady.

Leon. My Lord, will you walk? dinner is ready.

Clau. If he do not doat on her upon this, I will never trust my expectation.

Prin. Let there be the same Net spred for her, and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry: the sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of anothers dotage, and no such matter, that's the Scene that I would see, which will be meerly a dumb shew: let us send her to call him into dinner. Exeunt.

Ben. This can be no trick, the conference was sadly borne, they have the truth of this from Hero, they seem to pity the Lady: it seems her affections have the full bent: love me? why it must be requited: I hear how I am censur'd, they say I will bear my self proudly, If I perceive the love come from her: they say too, that she will rather die than give any sign of affection: I did never think to marry, I must not seem proud, happy are they that hear their detractions, and can put them to mending: they say the Lady is fair, 'tis a truth, I can bear them witnesse: and vertuous, 'tis so, I cannot reprove it: and wise, but for loving me, by my troth it is no addition to her wit, nor no great argument of her folly; for I will be horribly in love with her, I may chance have some odde quirks and remains of wit broken on me, because I have rail'd so long against marriage: but doth not the appetite alter? a man loves the meat in his youth, that he cannot indure in his age. Shall quips and sentences, and these paper bullets of the brain awe a man from the career of his humour? No, the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a batchelor, I did not think I should live till I were married: here comes Beatrice: by this day, she's a fair Lady, I doe spie some marks of love in her.

Enter Beatrice.

Beat. Against my will I am sent to bid you come into dinner.

Ben. Fair Beatrice, I thank you for your pains.

Beat. I took no more pains for those thanks, then you take pains to thank me; if it had been painfull, I would not have come.

Ben. You take pleasure then in the message.

Beat. Yea just so much as you may take upon a knives point, and choak a daw withall: you have no stomach Signior, fare you well. Exit.

Ben. Ha, against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner: there's a double meaning in that: I took no more pains for those thanks, then you took pains to thank me, that's as much as to say, any pains that I take for you is as easie as thanks: if I do not take pity of her I am a villain, if I do not love her I am a Jew, I will goe get her picture. Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Hero and two Gentlemen, Margaret, and Ursula.

Hero. Good Margaret run thee to the parlour,
There shalt thou find my Cosin Beatrice,
Proposing with the Prince and Claudio,
Whisper her ear, and tell her I and Ursula
Walk in the Orchard, and our whole discourse
Is all of her, say that thou over-heardst us,
And bid her steal into the pleached bower,
Where hony-suckles ripened by the sun
Forbid the sun to enter: like favourites,
Made proud by Princes, that advance their pride
Against that power that bred it, there will she hide her,
To listen to our purpose, this is thy Office;
Bear thee well in it, and leave us alone.

Marg. Ile make her come I warrant presently. Exit.

Hero. Now Ursula, when Beatrice doth come,
As we do trace this alley up and down,
Our talk must onely be of Benedick,
When I do name him, let it be thy part,
To praise him more then ever Man did merit,
My talk to thee must be how Benedick
Is sick in love with Beatrice: of this matter,
Is little Cupids crafty arrow made,
That onely wounds by hear-say: now begin,

Enter Beatrice.

For look where Beatrice like a Lapwing runs
Close by the ground, to hear our conference.

Urs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oars the silver stream,
And greedily devour the treacherous bait:
So angle we for Beatrice, who even now,
Is couched in the woodbine coverture,
Fear you not my part of the Dialogue.

Her. Then goe we near her that her ear lose nothing,
Of the false sweet bait that we lay for it:
No truely Ursula, she is too disdainfull,
I know her spirits are as coy and wild,
As Haggerds of the rock.

Urs. But are you sure,
That Benedick loves Beatrice so intirely?

Her. So saies the Prince, and my new trothed Lord.

Urs. And did they bid you tell her of it, Madam?

Her. They did intreat me to acquaint her of it,
But I perswaded them, if they lov'd Benedick,

To wish him wrastle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.
Urs. Why did you so, doth not the Gentleman
Deserve as full, as fortunate a bed,
As ever Beatrice shall couch upon?
Hero. O God of love! I know he doth deserve,
As much as may be yielded to a man:
But nature never fram'd a womans heart,
Of prouder stuffe then that of Beatrice:
Disdain and Scorn ride sparkling in her eye,
Mis-priz ng what they look on, and her wit
Values it self so highly, that to her
All matter else seems weak: she cannot love,
Nor take no shape nor project of affection;
She is so self indeared.
Urs. Sure I think so,
And therefore certainly it were not good
She knew his love, lest she make sport at it.
Hero. Why you speak truth, I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, young, how rarely featur'd.
But she would spell him backward: if fairfac'd,
She would swear the gentleman should be her sister:
If black, why Nature drawing of an antick,
Made a foul blot: if tall, a launce ill-headed:
If low, an agot very vildly cut:
If speaking, why a vane blown with all winds,
If silent, why a block moved with none.
So turnes she every man the wrong side out,
And never gives to truth and Vertue, that
Which simpleness and merit purchaseth.
Urs. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.
Hero. No, not to be so odde, and from all fashions,
As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable,
But who dare tell her so? if I should speak,
She would mock me into aire, O she would laugh me
Out of my self, presse me to death with wit,
Therefore let Benedick like covered fire,
Consume away in sighs, waste inwardly:
It were a bitter death, to die with mocks,
Which is as bad as die with tickling.
Urs. Yet tell her of it, hear what she will say.
Her. No, rather I will goe to Benedick,
And counsail him to fight against his passion,
And truly Ile devise some honest slanders,
To stain my cosin with: one doth not know,
How much an ill word may impoison liking.
Urs. O doe not do your cosin such a wrong.
She cannot be so much without true judgement,
Having so swift and excellent a wit
As she is priz'd to have, as to refuse
So rare a Gentleman as signior Benedick.
Her. He is the only man of Italy,
Always excepted, my dear Claudio.
Urs. I pray you be not angry with me, Madam,
Speaking my fancy: Signior Benedick,
For shape, for bearing argument and valour,
Goes formost in report through Italy.
Her. Indeed he hath an excellent good name.
Urs. His excellence did earn it ere he had it:
When are you married Madam?
Her. Why every day to morrow, come goe in,
Ile shew thee some attires, and have thy counsell,
Which is the best to furnish me to morrow.
Urs. She's tane I warrant you,
We have caught her Madam?
Hero. If it prove so, then loving goes by haps,
Some Cupids kills with arrows, some with traps. Exit.
Beat. What fire is in mine ears? can this be true?
Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorn so much?
Contempt, farewell, and maiden pride, adieu,
No glory lives behind the back of such,
And Benedick, love on, I will requite thee,
Taming my wild heart to thy loving hand:
If thou dos't love, my kindnesse shall incite thee
To bind our loves up in a holy band.
For others say thou dost deserve, and I
Believe it better then reportingly. Exit.

Enter Prince, Claudio, Benedick, and Leonato.
Prince. I doe but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then I go toward Arragon.
Clau. I'le bring you thither my Lord, if you'l vouchsafe me.
Prin. Nay, that would be as great a soil in the new gloss of your marriage, as to shew a child his new coat and forbid him to wear it, I will onely be bold with Benedick for his company; for from the crown of his head, to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth, he hath twice or thrice cut Cupids bow-string, and the little hang-man dare not shoot at him, he hath a heart as sound as a bell, and the tongue is the clapper, for what his heart thinks, his tongue speaks.
Ben. Gallants, I am not as I have bin.
Leo. So say I; methinks you are sadder.
Clau. I hope he be in love.
Prin. Hang him truant, there's no true drop of bloud in him to be truly toucht with love, if he be sad, he wants money.
Ben. I have the tooth-ach.
Prin. Draw it.
Ben. Hang it.
Clau. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.
Prin. What? sigh for the tooth-ach.
Leon. Where is but a humour or a worm.
Ben. Well, every one cannot master a grief, but he that has it.
Clau. Yet say I, he is in love.
Prin. There is no appearance of fancie in him, unless it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises, as to be a Dutchman to day, a Frenchman to morrow: unless he have a fancy to this foolery, as it appears he hath, he is no fool for fancy, as you would have it to appear he is.
Clau. If he be not in love with some woman, there is no believing old signes, a brushes his hat a mornings; What should that bode?
Prin. Hath any man seen him at the Barbers?
Clau. No, but the Barbers man hath been seen with him, and the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuft tennis balls.
Leon. Indeed he looks younger than he did, by the losse of a beard.
Prin. Nay a rubs himself with Civit, can you smell him out by that?
Clau. That's as much as to say, the sweet youth's in love.
Prin. The greatest note of it is his melancholy.
Clau. And when was he wont to wash his face?
Prin. Yea, or to paint himself? for the which I hear what they say of him.
Clau. Nay, but his jesting spirit, which is now crept into a lute-string, and now govern'd by stops.

Prince.

Prin. Indeed that tells a heavy tale for him: conclude, he is in love.

Clau. Nay, but I know who loves him.

Prin. That would I know too, I warrant one that knows him not.

Clau. Yes, and his ill conditions, and in despight of all, dies for him.

Prin. She shall be buried with her face upwards.

Ben. Yes is this no charm for the tooth-ake, old signior, walk aside with me, I have studied eight or nine wise words to speak to you, which these hobby-horses must not hear.

Prin. For my life to break with him about Beatrice.

Clau. 'Tis even so, Hero and Margaret have by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two Bears will not bite one another when they meet.

Enter John the Bastard.

Bast. My Lord and brother, God save you.

Prin. Good den brother.

Bast. If your leisure serv'd, I would speak with you.

Prin. In private?

Bast. If it please you, yet Count Claudio may hear, for what I would speak of, concerns him.

Prin. What's the matter?

Bast. Means your Lordship to be married to morrow?

Prin. You know he does.

Bast. I know not that when he knows what I know.

Clau. If there be any impediment, I pray you discover it.

Bast. You may think I love you not, let that appear hereafter, and aim better at me by that I now will manifest, for my brother (I think, he holds you well, and in dearnesse of heart) hath holpe to effect your ensuing marriage: surely sute ill spent, and labour ill bestowed.

Prin. Why, what's the matter?

Bast. I came hither to tell you, and circumstances shortned, (for she hath been too long a talking of) the Lady is disloyal.

Clau. Who! Hero!

Bast. Even she, Leonato's Hero, your Hero, every mans Hero.

Clau. Disloyal?

Bast. The word is too good to paint out her wickednesse, I could say she were worse, think you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it: wonder not till further warrant: goe but with me to night, you shall see her chamber window entred, even the night before her wedding day, if you love her, then to morrow wed her: but it would better fit your honour to change your mind.

Clau. May this be so?

Prin. I will not think it.

Bast. If you dare not trust that you see, confesse not that you know: if you will follow me, I will shew you enough, and when you have seen more, and heard more, proceed accordingly.

Clau. If I see any thing to night, why I should not marry her to morrow in the congregation, where I should wed, there will I shame her.

Prin. And as I wooed for thee to obtain her, I will join with thee to disgrace her.

Bast. I will disparage her no farther, till you are my witnesses, bear it coldly but till night, and let the issue shew it self.

Prin. O day untowardly turned?

Clau. O mischief strangely thwarting!

Bast. O plague right well prevented! so will you say, when you have seen the sequele. Exeunt.

Enter Dogbery and his compartner with the watch.

Dog. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yea, or else it were pity but they should suffer salvation body and soul.

Dog. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should have any allegiance in them, being chosen for the Princes watch.

Verg. Well, give them their charg, neighbour Dogbery.

Dog. First, who think you the most desartlesse man to be Constable?

Watch. 1. Hugh Ote-cake sir, or George Sea-cole, for they can write and reade.

Dog. Come hither neighbour Sea-coale, God hath blest you with a good name: to be a well-favoured man, is the gift of fortune, but to write and read, comes by Nature.

Watch. 2. Both which Master Constable

Dog. You have: I knew it would be your answer: well, for your favour sir, why, give God thanks, and make no boast of it, and for your writing and reading, let that appear when there is no need of such vanity; you are thought here to be the most senselesse and fit man for the Constable of the watch: therefore bear you the lanthorn: this is your charge: You shall comprehend all vagrom men, you are to bid any man stand in the Princes name.

Watch. 2. How if a will not stand?

Dog. Why then take no note of him, but let him go, and presently call the rest of the Watch together, and thank God you are ridde of a knave.

Verg. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the Princes subjects.

Dog. True, and they are to meddle with none but the Princes subjects: you shall also make no noise in the streets: for, for the Watch to babble and talk, is most tollerable, and not to be indured.

Watch. We will rather sleep then talk, we know what belongs to a Watch.

Dog. Why you speak like an ancient and most quiet watchman, for I cannot see how sleeping should offend: only have a care that your bills be not stolne: well, you are to call at all the Ale-houses, and bid them that are drunk get them to bed.

Watch. How if they will not?

Dog. Why then let them alone till they are sober, if they make you not then the better answer, you may say, they are not the men you took them for.

Watch. Well sir.

Dog. If you meet a thief, you may suspect him, by vertue of your office, to be no true man: and for such kind of men, the lesse you meddle or make with them, why the more is for your honesty.

Watch. If we know him to be a thief, shall we not lay hands on him?

Dog. Truly by your office you may, but I think they that touch pitch will be defil'd: the most peaceable way for you, if you do take a thief, is, to let him shew himself what he is, and steal out of his company.

Verg. You have bin alwaies call'd a mercifull man partner.

Dog. Truely I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath any honesty in him.

Verges. If you hear a Child cry in the night, you must call to the Nurſe, and bid her ſtill it.

Watch. How if the Nurſe be aſleep and will not hear us?

Dog. Why then depart in peace, and let the Child wake her with crying, for the Ewe that will not hear her Lamb when it baes, will never anſwer a Calf when it bleats.

Verges. 'Tis very true.

Dog. This is the end of the charge: you Conſtable are to preſent the Princes own perſon, if you meet the Prince in the night, you may ſtay him.

Verges. Nay birlady that I think a cannot.

Dog. Five ſhillings to one on't with any man that knows the Statutes, he may ſtay him, marry not without the Prince be willing, for indeed the Watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to ſtay a man againſt his will.

Verges. Birlady I think it be ſo.

Dog. Ha, ah ha, well maſters good night, and there be any matter of weight chances, call up me, keep your fellows counſells, and your own, and good night, come neighbour.

Watch. Well maſters, we hear our charge, let us go ſit here upon the Church bench till two, and then all to bed.

Dog. One word more, honeſt neighbours. I pray you watch about Signior Leonatoes door, for the wedding being there to morrow, there is a great coil to night, adiew, be vigilant I beſeech you. Exeunt.

Enter Borachio and Conrade.

Bor. What, Conrade?

Watch. Peace, ſtir not.

Bor. Conrade I ſay.

Con. Here man, I am at thy elbow.

Bor. Maſs and my elbow itcht, I thought there would a ſcabbe follow.

Con. I will owe thee an anſwer for that, and now forward with thy tale.

Bor. Stand thee cloſe then under this Pent-houſe, for it drizles rain, and I will, like a true drunkard, utter all to thee.

Watch. Some treaſon maſters, yet ſtand cloſe.

Bor. Therefore know, I have earned of Don John a thouſand Ducates.

Con. Is it poſſible that any villany ſhould be ſo dear?

Bor. Thou ſhould'ſt rather aske if it were poſſible any villany ſhould be ſo rich? for when rich villains have need of poor ones, poor ones may make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bor. That ſhews thou art unconfirm'd, thou knoweſt that the faſhion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloake, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparell.

Bor. I mean the faſhion.

Con. Yes the faſhion is the faſhion.

Bor. Tuſh, I may as well ſay the fool's the fool, but ſeeſt thou not what a deformed thief this faſhion is?

Watch. I know that deformed, a has been a vile thief this ſeven yeares, a goes up and down like a Gentleman: I remember his name.

Bor. Did'ſt thou not hear ſome body?

Con. No, 'twas the vane on the houſe.

Bor. Seeſt thou not (I ſay) what a deformed thief this faſhion is, how giddily a turns about all the Hot-bloods, between fourteen and five and thirty, ſometimes faſhioning them like Pharaoes ſoldiers in the rechie painting, ſomtimes like god-Bell's prieſts in the old Church window, ſometime like the ſhaven Hercules in the ſmircht worm-eaten tapeſtry, where his cod-piece ſeems as maſſie as his club.

Con. All this I ſee, and ſee that the faſhion wears out more apparell then the man; but art not thou thy ſelf giddie with the faſhion too, that thou haſt ſhifted out of thy tale into telling me of the faſhion?

Bor. Not ſo neither, but know that I have to night wooed Margaret the Lady Hero's gentlewoman, by the name of Hero; ſhe leans me out at her miſtris chamber window, bids me a thouſand times good night: I tell this tale vildly: I ſhould firſt tell thee how the Prince Claudio and my Maſter planted, aad placed, and poſſeſſed by my Maſter Don John, ſaw a far off in the Orchard this amiable encounter.

Con. And thought thy Margaret was Hero?

Bor. Two of them did, the Prince and Claudio, but the devil my Maſter knew ſhe was Margaret, and partly by his oathes, which firſt poſſeſt them, partly by the dark night which did deceive them, but chiefly, by my villany, which did confirm any ſlander that Don John had made, away went Claudio enraged, ſwore he would meet her as he was appointed next morning at the Temple, and there, before the whole Congregation ſhame her with what he ſaw o're night, and ſend her home again without a Husband.

Watch. 1. We charge you in the Princes name ſtand.

Watch. 2. Call up the right maſter Conſtable, we have here recovered the moſt dangerous piece of lechery that ever was known in a Common-wealth.

Watch. 1. And one Deformed is one of them, I know him, a weares a lock,

Con. Maſters, maſters.

Watch. 2. You'll be made bring Deformed forth I warrant you.

Con. Maſters, never ſpeak, we charge you, let us obey you to go with us.

Bor. We are like to prove a goodly commodity, being taken up of theſe mens bills.

Con. A commodity in queſtion I warrant you, come wee'll obey you. Exeunt.

Enter Hero and Margaret, and Vrſula.

Hero. Good Vrſula wake my Couſin Beatrice, and deſire her to riſe.

Vrſu. I will Lady.

Hero. And bid her come hither.

Vrſ. Well.

Mar. Troth, I think your other rebato were better.

Hero. No pray thee good Meg I'le wear this.

Mar. By my troth's not ſo good, and I warrant your Couſin will ſay ſo.

Hero. My Couſin's a fool, and thou art another, i'le wear none but this.

Mar. I like the new tire within excellently, if the hair were a thought browner: and your Gown's a moſt rare faſhion ifaith, I ſaw the Dutcheſſe of Millains Gown that they praiſe ſo.

Hero. O that exceeds they ſay.

Mar. By my troth's but a Night-Gown in reſpect of yours, cloth a gold and cuts, and lac'd with ſilver, ſet with pearls down-ſleeves, ſide-ſleeves, and ſkirts, round, underborn with a blewiſh tinſel, but for a fine queint gracefull and excellent faſhion, yours is worth ten on't.

Hero.

Hero. God give me joy to wear it, for my heart is exceeding heavie.

Marg. 'Twill be heavier soon, by the weight of a man.

Hero. Fie upon thee, art not asham'd?

Marg. Of what Lady? of speaking honourably? is not marriage honourable in a beggar? is not your Lord honourable without marriage? I think you would have me say, saving your reverence a husband: and bad thinking do not wrest true speaking, Ile offend no body, is there any harm in the heavier for a husband? none I think, and it be the right husband, and the right wife, otherwise 'tis light and not heavy, ask my Lady Beatrice else, here she comes.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero. Good morrow Coze.

Beat. Good morrow sweet Hero.

Hero. Why how now? do you speak in the sick tune?

Beat. I am out of all other tune me thinks.

Mar. Claps into Light a love, (that goes without a burden,) do you sing it and Ile dance it.

Beat. Ye light alove with your heels, then if your husband have stables enough, you'll look he shall lack no barnes.

Mar. O illegitimate construction! I scorn that with my heels.

Beat. 'Tis almost five a clock cosin, 'tis time you were ready, by my troth I am exceeding ill, hey ho.

Mar. For a hauk, a horse, or a husband?

Beat. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Mar. Well, and you be not turn'd Turk, there's no more sailing by the starre.

Beat. What means the fool trow?

Mar. Nothing I, but God send every one their hearts desire.

Hero. These gloves the Count sent me, they are an excellent perfume.

Beat. I am stuft cosin, I cannot smell.

Mar. A maid and stuft! there's a goodly catching of cold.

Beat. O God help me, God help me, how long have you profest apprehension?

Mar. Ever since you left it, doth not my wit become me rarely?

Beat. It is not seen enough, you should wear it in your cap, by my troth I am sick.

Mar. Get you some of this distill'd carduus benedictus and lay it to your heart, it is the onely thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prickst her with a thistell.

Beat. Benedictus, why benedictus? you have some moral in this benedictus.

Mar. Moral? no by my troth, I have no moral meaning, I meant plain holy thistel, you may think perchance that I think you are in love, nay birlady I am not such a fool to think what I list, nor I list not to think what I can, nor indeed I cannot think, if I would think my heart out of thinking, that you are in love, or that you will be in love, or that you can be in love: yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man, he swore he would never marry, and yet now in despight of his heart he eates his meat without grudging, and how you may be converted I know not, but me thinks you look with your eyes as other women do.

Beat. What pace is this that thy tongue keeps.

Mar. Not a false gallop.

Enter Ursula.

Urs. Madam, withdraw, the Prince, the Count, signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the town are come to fetch you to Church.

Hero. Help to dresse me good coze, good Meg, good Ursula.

Enter Leonata, and the Constable and the Headborough.

Leonato. What would you with me, honest neighbour?

Const. Dog. Marry sir I would have some confidence with you, that decerns you nearly.

Leon. Brief I pray you, for you see it is a busie time with me.

Const. Dog. Marry this it is sir.

Headb. Yes in truth it is sir.

Leon. What is it my good friends?

Const. Dog. Goodman Verges sir speaks a little of the matter, an old man sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as, God help, I would desire they were, but infaith honest as the skin between his browes.

Headb. Yes I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honester then I.

Const. Dog. Comparisons are odorous, palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Const. Dog. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poor Dukes Officers, but truly for mine own part, if I were as tedious as a King, I could find in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousnesse on me, ah?

Const. Dog. Yea, and 'twere a thousand times more than 'tis, for I hear as good exclamation on your Worship as of any man in the City, and though I be but a poor man, I am glad to hear it.

Headb. And so am I.

Leon. I would fain know what you have to say.

Headb. Marry sir our watch to night, excepting your worships presence, have tane a couple of as arrant knaves, as any in Messina.

Const. Dog. A good old man sir, he will be talking as they say, when the age is in the wit is out, God help us, it is a world to see: well said yfaith neighbour Verges, well, God's a good man, and two men rides an horse one must ride behind, an honest soul yfaith sir, by my troth he is, as ever broke bread, but God is to be worshipt, all men are not alike, alas good neighbour.

Leon. Indeed neighbour he comes too short of you.

Const. Dog. Gifts that God gives.

Leon. I must leave you.

Const. Dog. One word sir, our watch sir have indeed comprehended two aspitious persons, and we would have them this morning examined before your worship.

Leon. Take their examination your self, and bring it me, I am now in great haste, as may appear unto you.

Const. It shall be suffigance. [exit.

Leon. Drink some wine ere you goe: fare you well.

Mess. My Lord, they stay for you to give your daughter to her husband.

Leon. Ile wait upon them, I am ready.

Dogb. Goe good partner, goe get you to Francis Seacoale, bid him bring his pen and inkhorn to the Goale: we are now to examine those men.

Verges. And we must doe it wisely.

Dough. We will spare for no wit I warrant you here's that shall drive some of them to a non-come, only get the learned writer to set down our excommunication, and meet me at the Jaile. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Prince, Bastard, Leonato, Frier, Claudio, Benedick, Hero, and Beatrice.

Leon. Come Frier Francis, be brief, onely to the plain form of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Fran. You come hither my Lord to marry this Lady.

Clau. No.

Leon. To be married to her, Frier, you come to marrie her.

Frier. Lady, you come hither to be married to this Count.

Hero. I doe.

Frier. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conjoined, I charge you on your soules to utter it.

Clau. Know you any, Hero?

Hero. None my Lord.

Frier. Know you any, Count?

Leon. I dare make his answer, None.

Clau. O what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do!

Ben. How now! interjections? why then, some be of laughing, as ha, ha, he.

Clau. Stand thee by Frier: father, by your leave,
Will you with free and unconstrained soul
Give me this maid your daughter?

Leon. As freely son as God did give her me.

Clau. And what have I to give you back, whose worth
May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

Prin. Nothing, unlesse you render her again.

Clau. Sweet Prince, you learn me noble thankfulness:
There Leonato, take her back again,
Give not this rotten Orange to your friend,
She's but the sign and semblance of her honour:
Behold how like a maid she blushes here!
O what authority and shew of truth
Can cunning sin cover it self withall!
Comes not that blood, as modest evidence,
To witnesse simple Vertue? would you not swear
All you that see her, that she were a maid,
By these exteriour shews? But she is none:
She knows the heat of a luxurious bed:
Her blush is guiltinesse, not modestie.

Leon. What do you mean my Lord?

Clau. Not to be married,
Not knit my soul to an approved wanton.

Leon. Dear my Lord, if you in your own proofe,
Have vanquisht the resistance of your youth,
And made defeat of her virginity. (her;

Clau. I know what you would say: if I have known
You will say, she did imbrace me as a husband,
And to extenuate the forehand sin: No Leonato,
I never tempted her with word too large,
But as a brother to his sister, shewed
Bashfull sincerity and comely love.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

Clau. Out on thee seeming, I will write against it,
You seem to me as Diana in her Orb,
As chast as is the bud ere it be blown:
But you are more intemperate in your bloud,
Than Venus, or those pampered animals,
That rage in savage sensuality.

Hero. Is my Lord well, that he doth speak so wide?

Leon. Sweet Prince why speak not you?

Prin. What should I speak?
I stand dishonour'd that have gone about,
To link my dear friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken, or do I but dream?

Bast. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Ben. This looks not like a nuptial.

Hero. True! O God!

Clau. Leonato, stand I here?
Is this the Prince? is this the Princes brother?
Is this face Heroes? are our eyes our own?

Leon. All this is so, but what of this my Lord?

Clau. Let me but move one question to your daughter,
And by that fatherly and kindly power,
That you have in her, bid her answer truly.

Leon. I charge thee to do as thou art my child.

Hero. O God defend me, how am I beset,
What kind of catechizing call you this?

Leon. To make you answer truly to your name.

Hero. Is it not Hero? who can blot that name
With any just reproach?

Clau. Marry that can Hero,
Hero it self can blot out Heroes vertue.
What man was he, talkt with you yesternight,
Out at your window betwixt twelve and one?
Now if you are a maid answer to this.

Hero. I talkt with no man at that hour my Lord.

Prin. Why then you are no maiden. Leonato,
I am sorry you must hear: upon mine honour,
My self, my brother, and this grieved Count
Did see her, hear her, at that hour last night,
Talk with a ruffian at her chamber window,
Who hath indeed most like a liberal villain
Confest the vile encounters they have had
A thousand times in secret.

John. Fie, fie, they are not to be named my Lord,
Not to be spoken of,
There is not chastity enough in language,
Without offence to utter them: thus pretty Lady
I am sorry for thy much misgovernment.

Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou been
If half thy outward graces had been placed
About thy thoughts and counsels of thy heart?
But fare thee well, most foul, most fair, farewell
Thou pure impiety, and impious purity,
For thee Ile lock up all the gates of Love,
And on my eye-lids shall Conjecture hang,
To turn all beauty into thoughts of harm,
And never shall it more be gracious.

Leon. Hath no mans dagger here a point for me?

Beat. Why how now cosin, wherefore sink you down?

Bast. Come, let us go: these things come thus to light,
Smother her spirits up.

Ben. How doth the Lady?

Beat. Dead I think, help uncle,
Hero, Why Hero, Uncle, Signior Benedick, Frier.

Leon. O Fate! take not away thy heavy hand,
Death is the fairest cover for her shame
That may be wisht for.

Beat. How

Beat. How now cosin Hero?
Fri. Have comfort Lady.
Leo. Dost thou look up?
Fri. Yea, wherefore should she not?
Leo. Wherefore? Why doth not every earthly thing
Cry shame upon her? Could she here denie
The story that is printed in her blood?
Do not live Hero, do not ope thine eyes:
For did I think thou would'st not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger then thy shame's
My self would on the rearward of reproaches
Strike at thy life. Griev'd I, I had but one?
Chid I, for that at frugall Natures frame?
One too much by thee: why had I one?
Why ever was't thou lovely in my eyes?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Took up a beggar's issue at my gate's,
Who smeered thus, and mir'd with infamie,
I might have said, no part of it is mine:
This shame derive's it self from unknown loins,
But mine, and mine I lov'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was proud on, mine so much,
That I my self, was to my self not mine:
Valewing of her, why she, O she is fal'n
Into a pit of Ink, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her clean again,
And salt too little, which may season give
To her foul tainted flesh.
Ben. Sir, sir; be patient: for my part, I am so attired in wonder, I know not what to say.
Beat. O on my soul my cosin is belied.
Ben. Lady, were you her bedfellow last night?
Ben. No truly: not, although untill last night,
I have this twelvemonth been her bedfellow.
Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd, O that is stronger made
Which was before barr'd up with ribs of iron.
Would the Prince lie, and Claudio would he lie
Who lov'd her so, that speaking of her foulness,
Wash'd it with tears? Hence from her, let her die.
Fri. Hear me a little, for I have onely been silent so long, and given way unto this course of fortune, by noting of the Lady, I have mark'd
A thousand blushing apparitions,
To start into her face, a thousand innocent shame's,
In Angel whiteness bear away those blushes,
And in her eye there hath appear'd a fire
To burn the errors that these Princes hold
Against her maiden truth. Call me a fool,
Trust not my reading, nor my observations,
Which with experimentall seal doth warrant
The tenure of my book: trust not my age,
My reverence, calling, nor dignity,
If this sweet Lady lie not guiltless here,
Under some biting error.
Leon. Friar, it cannot be:
Thou seest that all the Grace that she hath left,
Is, that she will not adde to her damnation
A sin of perjury, she not denies it:
Why seek'st thou then to cover with excuse,
That which appears in proper nakedness?
Fri. Lady, what man is he you are accus'd of?
Hero. They know that do accuse me, I know none:
If I know more of any man alive
Then that which maiden modesty doth warrant,
Let all my sins lack mercy. O my Father,
Prove you that any man with me convers't,
At hour's unmeet, or that I yestern.ght
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.
Fri. There is some strange misprision in the Prince.
Ben. Two of them have the very bent of honor,
And if their wisdom's be misled in this:
The practise of it lives in John the bastard,
Whose spirits toile in frame of villanies.
Leon. I know not: if they speak but truth of her,
These hands shall tear her: if they wrong her honor,
The proudest of them shall well hear it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eat up my invention,
Nor fortune made such havock of my means,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall finde, awak'd in such a kinde,
Both strength of limbe, and policie of minde,
Ability in means, and choise of friends,
To quit me of them throughly.
Fri. Pause a while,
And let my counsell sway you in this case,
Your daughter here the Princes (left for dead)
Let her a while be secretly kept in,
And publish it, that she is dead indeed:
Maintain a mourning ostentation,
And on your Families old monument,
Hang mournfull Epitaph's, and do all rites,
That appertain unto a buriall.
Leon. What shall become of this? What will this do?
Fri. Marry this well carried, shall on her behalfe,
Change slander to remorse, that is some good:
But not for that dream I on this strange course,
But on this travail look for greater birth:
She dying, as it must be so maintain'd,
Upon the instant that she was accus'd,
Shall be lamented, pitied, and excus'd
Of every hearer: for it so falls out,
That what we have, we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enjoy it; but being lack'd and lost,
Why then we rack the value, then we finde
The vertue that possession would not shew us
Whiles it was ours; so will it fare with Claudio:
When he shall hear she dyed upon his words,
Th' Idea of her life shall sweetly creep
Into his study of imagination.
And every lovely Organ of her life,
Shall come apparel'd in more precious habit:
More moving, delicate, and full of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soul
Than when she liv'd indeed: then shall he mourn,
If ever Love had interest in his Liver,
And wish he had not so accused her:
No, though he thought his accusation true:
Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Will fashion the event in better shape
Then I can lay it down in likelihood.
But if all aim but this be level'd false,
The supposition of the Ladies death,
Will quench the wonder of her infamy.
And if it sort not well, you may conceal her,
As best befits her wounded reputation,
In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds and injuries.
Ben. Signior Leonato, let the Frier advise you,
And though you know my inwardness and love
Is very much unto the Prince and Claudio,

Yet, by mine honor, I will deal in this,
As ſecretly and juſtly, as your ſoul
Should with your body.
Leon. Being that I flow in grief,
The ſmalleſt twine may lead me.
Frier. 'Tis well conſented, preſently away,
For to ſtrange ſores, ſtrangely they ſtrain the cure,
Come Lady, die to live, this wedding day
Perhaps is but prolong'd, have patience & endure. Exit.
Bene. Lady Beatrice, have you wept all this while?
Beat. Yea, and I will weep a while longer.
Bene. I will not deſire that.
Beat. You have no reaſon, I doe it freely.
Bene. Surely I do believe your fair coſin is wrong'd.
Beat. Ah, how much might the man deſerve of me that would right her!
Bene. Is there any way to ſhew ſuch friendſhip?
Beat A very even way, but no ſuch friend.
Bene. May a man doe it?
Beat. It is a mans office, but not yours.
Bene. I do love nothing in the world ſo well as you, is not that ſtrange?
Beat. As ſtrange as the thing I know not; it were as poſſible for me to ſay, I loved nothing ſo well as you, but believe me not, and yet I lie not, I confeſs nothing, nor I deny nothing, I am ſorry for my coſin.
Bene. By my ſword Beatrice thou lov'ſt me.
Beat. Do not ſwear by it and eat it.
Bene. I will ſwear by it that you love me, and I will make him eat it that ſaies I love not you.
Beat. Will you not eat your word?
Bene. With no ſawce that can be deviſed to it, I proteſt I love thee.
Beat. Why then God forgive me.
Bene. What offence ſweet Beatrice?
Beat. You have ſtayed me in a happy hour, I was about to proteſt I loved you.
Bene. And do it with all thy heart.
Beat. I love you with ſo much of my heart, that none is left to proteſt.
Bene. Come, bid me doe any thing for thee.
Beat, Kill Claudio.
Bene. Ha, not for the wide world.
Beat. You kill me to denie, farewell.
Bene. Tarry ſweet Beatrice.
Beat. I am gone, though I am here, there is no love in you, nay I pray you let me go.
Bene. Beatrice.
Beat. Infaith I will go.
Bene. We'll be friends firſt.
Beat. You dare eaſier be friends with me, than fight with mine enemy.
Bene. Is Claudio thine enemy?
Beat. Is a not approved in the height a villain, that hath ſlandered, ſcorned, diſhonoured my kinſwoman? O that I were a man! what, bear her in hand untill they come to take hands, and then with publick accuſation, uncovered ſlander, unmittigated rancour? O God that I were a man? I would eat his heart in the market-place.
Bene. Hear me Beatrice.
Beat. Talke with a man out at a window, a proper ſaying.
Bene. Nay, but Beatrice.
Beat. Sweet Hero, ſhe is wrong'd, ſhe is ſlandered, ſhe is undone.
Bene. Bett?
Beat. Princes and Counties! ſurely a princely teſtimony, a goodly Count-Comfect, a ſweet Gallant ſurely, O that I were a man for his ſake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my ſake! But manhood is melted into curteſies, valour into complement, and men are onely turned into tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that onely tells a lie, and ſwears it: I cannot be a man with wiſhing, therefore I will die a woman with grieving.
Bene. Tarry good Beatrice, by this hand I love thee.
Beat. Uſe it for my love ſome other way then ſwearing by it.
Bene. Think you in your ſoul the Count Claudio hath wrong'd Hero?
Beat. Yea, as ſure as I have a thought, or a ſoul.
Bene. Enough. I am engag'd, I will challenge him, I will kiſs your hand, and ſo leave you: by this hand Claudio ſhall render me dear account: as you hear of me, ſo think of me: go comfort your coſin, I muſt ſay ſhe is dead, and ſo farewell. Exeunt.

Enter the Conſtables, Borachio, and the Town Clerk in gowns.

Keeper. Is our whole diſſembly appeard?
Cowley. O a ſtoole and cuſhion for the Sexton.
Sexton. Which be the Malefactors?
Andrew. Marry that am I, and my partner.
Cowley. Nay, that's certain, we have the exhibition to examine.
Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined, let them come before Maſter Conſtable.
Kemp. Yea marry, let them come before me, what is your name friend?
Bor. Borachio.
Kemp. Pray write down Borachio. Yours ſirra.
Conr. I am a Gentleman ſir, and my name is Conrade.
Keep. Write down Maſter gentleman Conrade: maiſters, do you ſerve God: maiſters, it is proved already that you are little better then falſe knaves, and it will go near to be thought ſo ſhortly, how anſwer you for your ſelves?
Conr. Marry ſir, we ſay we are none.
Kemp. A marvellous witty fellow I aſſure yon, but I will go about with him: come you hither ſirra, a word in your ear ſir, I ſay to you, it is thought you are falſe knaves.
Bor. Sir, I ſay to you, we are none.
Kemp. Well, ſtand aſide, 'fore God they are both in a tale: have you writ down that they are none?
Sext. Maſter Conſtable, you go not the way to examine, you muſt call forth the watch that are their accuſers.
Kemp. Yea marry, that's the eſteſt way, let the watch come forth: maſters, I charge you in the Princes name, accuſe theſe men.
Watch 1. This man ſaid ſir, that Don John the Princes brother was a villain.
Kemp. Write down, Prince John a vilain: why this is flat perjury, to call a Princes brother villain.
Bor. Maſter Conſtable.
Kemp. Pray thee fellow peace, I do not like thy look, I promiſe thee.
Sexton. What heard you him ſay elſe?
Watch 2. Marry that he had received a thouſand Dukats of Don John, for the accuſing the Lady Hero wrongfully. Kemp.

Kemp. Flat Burglarie as ever was committed.
Conſt. Yea by th'maſſe that it is.
Sexton. What elſe fellow?
Watch. 1. And that Count Claudio did mean upon his words, to diſgrace Hero before the whole aſſembly, and not marry her.
Kemp. O villain! thou wilt be condemn'd into everlaſting redemption for this.
Sexton. What elſe?
Watch. This is all.
Sexton. And this is more maſters then you can deny, Prince John is this morning ſecretly ſtoln away: Hero was in this manner accus'd, in this very manner refus'd, and upon the grief of this ſodainly died: Maſter Conſtable, let theſe men be bound, and brought to Leonato, I will goe before, and ſhew him their examination.
Conſt. Come, let them be opinion'd.
Sext. Let them be in the hands of Coxcomb.
Kem. Gods my life, where's the Sexton? let him write down the Princes Officers Coxcomb: come, bind them; thou naughty varlet.
Couley. Away, you are an aſſe, you are an aſſe.
Kemp. Doſt thou not ſuſpect my place? doſt thou not ſuſpect my years? O that he were here to write me down an aſſe! but maſters, remember that I am an aſſe: though it be not written down, yet forget not that I am an aſſe: No thou villain, thou art full of piety as ſhall be prov'd upon thee by good witneſſe, I am a wiſe fellow, and which is more, an officer, and which is more, a houſeholder, and which is more, as pretty a piece of fleſh as any in Meſſina, and one that knows the Law, goe to, and a rich fellow enough, go to, and a fellow that hath had loſſes, and one that hath two gowns, and every thing handſome about him, bring him away: O that I had been writ down an aſſe! Exit.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Leonato and his brother.

Brother. If you goe on thus, you will kill your ſelf,
And 'tis not wiſdome thus to ſecond grief,
Againſt your ſelf.
Leon. I pray thee ceaſe thy counſell,
Which falls into mine ears as profitleſs,
As water in a ſieve: give not me counſell,
Nor let no comfort elſe delight mine ear,
But ſuch a one whoſe wrongs doth ſute with mine.
Bring me a father that ſo lov'd his childe,
Whoſe joy of her is over-whelm'd like mine.
And bid him ſpeak of patience,
Meaſure his woe the length and breadth of mine,
And let it anſwer every ſtrain for ſtrain,
As thus for thus, and ſuch a grief for ſuch,
In every lineament, branch, ſhape, and forme:
If ſuch a one will ſmile and ſtroke his beard,
And hallow, wag, cry hem, when he ſhould groan,
Patch grief with proverbs, make misfortune drunk,
With-candlewaſters: bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather patience:
But there is no ſuch man, for brother, men
Can counſell, and give comfort to that grief,
Which they themſelves not feel, but taſting it,
Their counſell turns to paſſion, which before
Would give preceptiall medicine to rage,
Fetter ſtrong madneſſe in a ſilken thred,
Charme ache with ayre, and agonie with words.
No, no, 'tis all men's office, to ſpeak patience
To thoſe that wring under the load of ſorrow:
But no mans vertue nor ſufficiencie
To be ſo moral, when he ſhall endure
The like himſelf: therefore give me no counſaile,
My griefs cry louder then advertiſement.
Broth. Therein do men from children nothing differ.
Leo. I pray thee peace, I will be fleſh and bloud,
For there was never yet Philoſopher,
That could endure the tooth-ake patiently,
How ever they have writ the ſtile of gods,
And made a puſh at chance and ſufferance.
Broth. Yet bend not all the harme upon your ſelf,
Make thoſe that do offend you ſuffer too.
Leon. There thou ſpeak'ſt reaſon, nay I will do ſo,
My ſoul doth tell me, Hero is belied,
And that ſhall Claudio know, ſo ſhall the Prince,
And all of them that thus diſhonour her.

Enter Prince and Claudio.

Brot. Here comes the Prince and Claudio haſtily.
Prin. Good den, good den.
Clau. Good day to both of you.
Leon. Hear you my Lords?
Prin. We have ſome haſte Leonato.
Leo. Some haſte my Lord! well, fare you well my Lord,
Are you ſo haſty now? well, all is one.
Prin. Nay, doe not quarrell with us, good old man.
Brot. If he could right himſelf with quarrelling,
Some of us would lie low.
Clau. Who wrongs him?
Leon. Marry thou doſt wrong me, thou diſſembler thou:
Nay, never lay thy hand upon thy ſword,
I fear thee not.
Clau. Marry beſhrew my hand,
If it ſhould give your age ſuch cauſe of fear,
Infaith my hand meant nothing to my ſword.
Leo. Tuſh, tuſh, man, never fleer and jeſt at me,
I ſpeak not like a dotard, nor a fool,
As under priviledge of age to brag,
What I have done being young, or what would doe,
Were I not old: know Claudio to thy head,
Thou haſt ſo wrong'd my innocent Child and me,
That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by,
And with grey hairs and bruiſe of many dayes,
Doe challenge thee to triall of a man,
I ſay thou haſt bell'd mine innocent Child.
Thy ſlander hath gone through and through her heart,
And ſhe lies buried with her anceſtors:
O in a tombe where never ſcandall ſlept,
Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villany.
Clau. My villany?
Leon. Thine Claudio, thine I ſay.
Prin. You ſay not right old man.
Leon. My Lord, my Lord,
I'le prove it on his body if he dare,
Deſpight his nice fence, and his active practice,
His May of youth, and bloom of luſtyhood.
Clau. Away, I will not have to doe with you.
Leo. Canſt thou ſo daffe me? thou haſt kill'd my child,
If thou kill'ſt me boy, thou ſhalt kill a man.
Bro. He ſhall kill two of us, and men indeed,
But that's no matter, let him kill one firſt:

Win

Win me and wear me, let him answer me,
Come follow me boy, come sir boy; come follow me
Sir boy, I'le whip you from your foyning fence,
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother.

Bro. Content your selfe, God knows I lov'd my neece;
And she is dead, slander'd to death by villains,
That dare as well answer a man indeed,
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue.
Boyes, apes, braggarts, Jacks, milk-sops.

Leon. Brother Anthony.

Brot. Hold you content, what man? I know them, yea
And what they wey, even to the utmost scruple,
Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mongring boyes,
That lye, and cog, and flout, deprave, and slander,
Go antickly and show outward hidiousnes,
And speak of halfe a dozen dangerous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst,
And this is all.

Leon. But brother Anthony.

Ant. Come, 'tis no matter,
Do not you meddle, let me deal in this.

Pri. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience,
My heart is sorry for your daughters death:
But on my honour she was charg'd with nothing
But was true, and very full of proofe.

Leon. My Lord, my Lord.

Prince. I will not hear you.

Enter Benedicke.

Leon. No! come brother, away, I will be heard.

Exeunt ambo,

Bro. And shall, or some of us will smart for it.

Prin. See, see, here comes the man he went to seek.

Clau. Now Signior, what news?

Ben. Good day my Lord:

Prin. Welcome Signior, you are almost come to part almost a fray.

Clau. We had like to have had our two noses snapt off with two old men without teeth.

Prin. Leonato and his brother, what think'st thou? had we fought, I doubt we should have been too young for them.

Ben. In false quarrell there is no true valour, I came to seek you both.

Clau. We have been up and down to seek thee, for we are high proofe melancholly, and would fain have it beaten away, wilt thou use thy wit?

Ben. It is in my scabberd, shall I draw it?

Prin. Doest thou wear thy wit by thy side?

Clau. Never any did so, though very many have been beside their wit, I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrells draw to pleasure us.

Prin. As I am an honest man he looks pale, art thou sick, or angry?

Clau. What! courage man: what though care kil'd a cat, thou hast mettle enough to kill care.

Ben. Sir, I shall meet your wit in the carere, and you charge it against me, I pray you choose another subject.

Clau. Nay then give him another staffe, this last was broke cross.

Prin. By this light, he changes more and more, I think he be angry indeed.

Clau. If he be, he knows how to turn his girdle.

Ben. Shall I speak a word in your ear?

Clau. God bless me from a challenge.

Ben. You are a villain, I jest not, I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare: do me right, or I will protest your cowardise: you have kill'd a sweet Lady, and her death shall fall heavy on you, let me hear from you.

Clau. Well, I will meet you, so I may have good chear.

Prin. What, a feast?

Clau. I faith I thank him, he hath bid me to calves heads and a Capon, the which if I do not carve most curiously, say my knife's naught, shall I not finde a woodcock too?

Ben. Sir, your wit ambles well, goes easily.

Prin. I'le tell thee how Beatrice prais'd thy wit the other day: I said thou hadst a fine wit: true saies she, a fine little one: no said I, a great wit: right saies she, a great gross one: nay said I, a good wit: just said she, it hurts no body: nay said I, the gentleman is wise: certain said she, a wise gentleman: nay said I, he hath the tongues: that I believe said she, for he swore a thing to me on munday night, which he forswore on tuesday morning: there's a double tongue, there's two tongues: thus did shee an houre together trans-shape thy particular vertues, yet at last she concluded with a sigh, thou wast the proprest man in Italy.

Clau. For the which she wept heartily, and said shee car'd not.

Prin. Yea that she did, but yet for all that, and if she did not hate him deadly, she would love him dearly, the old man's daughter told us all.

Clau. All, all, and moreover, God saw him when he was hid in the garden.

Prin. But when shall we set the salvage Bulls hornes on the sensible Benedick's head?

Clau. Yea and text under-neath, heere dwells Benedick the married man.

Bene. Fare you well, Boy, you know my minde, I will leave you now to your gossep-like humor, you breake jests as braggards do their blades, which God be thanked hurt not: my Lord, for your many courtesies I thank you, I must discontinue your company, your brother the Bastard is fled from Messina: you have among you, kill'd a sweet and innocent Lady: for my Lord Lackbeard there, he and I shall meet, and till then peace be with him.

Prin. He is in earnest.

Clau. In most profound earnest, and I'le warrant you, for the love of Beatrice.

Prin. And hath challeng'd thee.

Clau. Most sinceerly.

Prin. What a pretty thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hose, and leaves off his wit.

Enter Constable, Constable, and Borachio.

Clau. He is then a Giant to an Ape, but then is an Ape a Doctor to such a man.

Prin. But soft you, let me see, pluck up my heart, and be sad, did he not say my brother was fled?

Const. Come you sir, if justice cannot tame you, she shall ne're weigh more reasons in her ballance, nay, and you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be lookt to.

Prin. How now, two of my brothers men bound? Borachio one.

Clau. Harken after their offence my Lord.

Prin. Officers, what offence have these men done:

Con. Marrie

Conſt. Marry ſir, they have committed falſe report, moreover they have ſpoken untruths, ſecondarily they are ſlanders, ſixt and laſtly, they have belyed a Lady, thirdly, they have verified unjuſt things, and to conclude they are lying knaves.

Prin. Firſt I ask thee what they have done, thirdly I ask thee what's their offence, ſixt and laſtly why they are committed, and to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

Clau. Rightly reaſoned, and in his own diviſion, and by my troth there's one meaning well ſuted.

Prin. Whom have you offended maiſters, that you are thus bound to your anſwer? this learned Conſtable is too cunning to be underſtood, what's your offence?

Bor. Sweet Prince, let me go no farther to mine anſwer: do you hear me, and let this Count kill me: I have deceived even your very eyes: what your wiſdomes could not diſcover, theſe ſhallow fooles have brought to light, who in the night overheard me confeſſing to this man, how Don John your brother incenſed me to ſlander the Lady Hero, how you were brought into the Orchard, and ſaw me court Margaret in Hero's garments, how you diſgrac'd her when you ſhould marry her: my villanie they have upon record, which I had rather ſeal with my death, then repeat over to my ſhame: the Lady is dead upon mine and my maſters falſe accuſation: and briefly, I deſire nothing but the reward of a villain.

Prince. Runs not this ſpeech like iron through your bloud?

Clau. I have drunk poiſon whiles he utter'd it.

Prin. But did my Brother ſet thee on to this?

Bor. Yea, and paid me rich for the practice of it.

Prin. He is compos'd of treachery.
And fled he is upon this villany.

Clau. Sweet Hero, now thy image doth appear
In the rare ſemblance that I lov'd it firſt.

Conſt. Come, bring away the plaintiffes, by this time our Sexton hath informed Signior Leonato of the matter: and maiſters, do not forget to ſpecifie when time and place ſhall ſerve, that I am an Aſs.

Con. 2. Here, here comes maiſter Signior Leonato, and the Sexton too.

Enter Leonato.

Leon Which is the villain? let me ſee his eyes,
That when I note another man like him,
I may avoid him: which of theſe is he?

Bor. If you would know your wronger, look on me.

Leon. Art thou, art thou the ſlave that with thy breath haſt kild mine innocent childe?

Bor. Yea, even I alone.

Leon. No, not ſo villain, thou beli'ſt thy ſelfe,
Here ſtand a pair of honourable men,
A third is fled that had a hand in it:
I thank you Princes for my daughters death,
Record it with your high and worthy deeds,
'Twas bravely done; if you bethink you of it.

Clau. I know not how to pray your patience,
Yet I muſt ſpeak, chooſe your revenge your ſelfe,
Impoſe me to what penance your invention
Can lay upon my ſin, yet ſinn'd I not,
But in miſtaking.

Prin. By my ſoul nor I,
And yet to ſatisfie this good old man,
I would bend under my heavy waight,
That hee'l enjoyn me too.

Leon. I cannot bid your daughter live,
That were impoſſible; but I pray you both.
Poſſeſs the people in Meſſina here,
How innocent ſhe died, and if your love
Can labour ought in ſad invention,
Hang her an epitaph upon her tombe,
And ſing it to her bones, ſing it to night:
To morrow morning come you to my houſe,
And ſince you could not be my ſon in law,
Be yet my Nephew: my brother hath a daughter,
Almoſt the copie of my childe that's dead,
And ſhe alone is heir to both of us,
Give her the right you ſhould have giv'n her coſin,
And ſo dies my revenge.

Clau. O noble ſir!
Your overkindneſs doth wring tears from me,
I do embrace your offer, and diſpoſe
For henceforth of poor Claudio.

Leon. To morrow then I will expect your coming;
To night I take my leave: this naughty man
Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,
Who I believe was packt in all this wrong,
Hired to it by your brother.

Bor. No by my ſoul ſhe was not,
Nor knew not what ſhe did when ſhe ſpoke to me,
But alwayes hath been juſt and vertuous,
In any thing that I do know by her.

Conſt. Moreover ſir, which indeed is not under white and black, this plaintiffe here, the offender did call me aſſe, I beſeech you let it be remembred in his puniſhment, and alſo the watch heard them talke of one Deformed, they ſay he wears a key in his ear and a lock hanging by it, and borrows money in Gods name, the which he hath us'd ſo long, and never paied, that now men grow hard-hearted and will lend nothing for Gods ſake: pray you examine him upon that point.

Leon. I thank thee for thy care and honeſt pains.

Conſt. Your worſhip ſpeaks like a moſt thankfull and reverend youth, and I praiſe God for you.

Leon. There's for thy pains.

Conſt. God ſave the foundation.

Leon. Goe, I diſcharge thee of thy priſoner, and I thank thee.

Conſt. I leave an arrant knave with your worſhip, which I beſeech your worſhip to correct your ſelfe, for the example of others: God keepe your worſhip, I wiſh your worſhip well, God reſtore you to health, I humbly give you leave to depart, and if a merry meeting may be wiſh'd, God prohibite it: come neighbour.

Leon. Untill to morrow morning, Lords, farewell.

Exeunt.

Brot. Farewell my Lords, we look for you to morrow.

Prin. We will not fail.

Clau. To night I'le mourn with Hero.

Leon. Bring you theſe fellows on, wee'l talke with Margaret, how her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow.

Exeunt.

Enter Benedick and Margaret.

Ben. Pray thee ſweet Miſtriſs Margaret, deſerve well at my hands, by helping me to the ſpeech of Beatrice.

Mar. Will

Mar. Will you then write me a Sonnet in praise of my beauty?

Ben. In so high a stile Margaret, that no man living shall come over it, for in most comely truth thou deservest it.

Mar. To have no man come over me, why, shall I always keep below stairs?

Ben. Thy wit is as quick as the grey-hounds mouth, it catches.

Mar. And yours, as blunt as the Fencers foils, which hit, but hurt not.

Ben. A most manly wit Margaret, it will not hurt a woman: and so I pray thee call Beatrice, I give thee the bucklers.

Mar. Give us the swords, we have bucklers of our own.

Ben. If you use them Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice, and they are dangerous weapons for Maids.

Mar. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I think hath legs. Exit Margaret.

Ben. And therefore will come. The god of love that sits above, and knows me, and knows me how pittifull I deserve; I mean in singing, but in loving, Leander the good swimmer, Troilous the first imployer of panders, and a whole booke full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose names yet run smoothly in the even rode of a blank verse, why they were never so truely turned over as my poor self in love: marry I cannot shew it in rime, I have tried, I can finde out no rime to Ladie but badie, an innocents rime: for scorne, horne, a hard rime: for school, fool, a babling rime: very ominous endings, no, I was not born under a riming Planet, for I cannot woo in festivall tearms:

Enter Beatrice.

Sweet Beatrice would'st thou come when I call'd thee?

Beat. Yea Signior, and depart when you bid me.

Ben. O stay but till then.

Beat. Then, is spoken: fare you well now, and yet ere I go, let me go with that I came, which is, with knowing what hath past between you and Claudio.

Ben. Onely foule words, and thereupon I will kisse thee.

Beat. Foul words and foule winde, and foule winde is but foul breath, and foul breath is noisome, therefore I will depart unkist.

Ben. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sence, so forcible is thy wit, but I must tell thee plainly, Claudio undergoes my challenge, and either I must shortly hear from him, or I will subscribe him a coward, and I pray thee now tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in love with me?

Beat. For them all together, which maintain'd so politick a state of evill, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them: but for which of my good parts did you first suffer love for me?

Ben. Suffer love! a good epithite, I do suffer love indeed, for I love thee against my will.

Beat. In spight of your heart I think, alas poor heart, if you spight it for my sake, I will spight it for yours, for I will never love that which my friend hates.

Bened. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceably.

Beat. It appears not in this confession, there's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself.

Ben. An old, an old instance Beatrice, that liv'd in the time of good neighbours, if a man do not erect in this age his own tombe ere he dies, he shall live no longer in monuments, then the Bells ring, and the Widow weeps.

Beat. And how long is that think you?

Ben. Question, why an hour in clamour and a quarter in the wine, therefore is it most expedient for the wife, if Don worme (his conscience) finde no impediment to the contrary, to be the trumpet of his own vertues, as I am to my self so much for praising my self, who I my self will bear witness is praise worthy, and now tell me how doth your cosin?

Beat. Very ill.

Ben. And how do you?

Beat. Very ill too.

Enter Ursula.

Ben. Serve God, love me, and mend, there will I leave you too, for here comes one in haste.

Ursf. Madam you must come to your Unckle, yonders old coile at home, it is proved my Lady Hero hath been falsly accus'd, the Prince and Claudio mightily abused, and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone: will you come presently?

Beat. Will you go hear this news Signior?

Ben. I will live in thy heart, die in thy lap; and be buried in thy eyes: and moreover, I will goe with thee to thy Unckles. Exeunt.

Enter Claudio, Prince, and three or four with Tapers.

Clau. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Lord. It is my Lord. Epitaph.

Done to death by slanderous tongues,
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death in guerdon of her wrongs,
Gives her fame which never dies:
So the life that died with shame,
Lives in death with glorious fame.
Hang thou there upon the tombe,
Praising her when I am dombe.

Clau. Now musick sound and sing your solemne hymne.

Song.

Pardon goddess of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight,
For the which with songs of woe,
Round about her tombe they goe:
Midnight assist our moan,
Help us to sigh and goran.
Heavily, heavily.
Graves yawn and yield your dead.
Till death be uttered,
Heavenly, heavenly.

Clau. Now unto thy bones good night, yearly will I do (this right.

Le. Good morrow masters, put your Torches out,
The wolves have preyed, and look, the gentle day
Before the wheels of Phœbus, round about
Dapples the drowsie East with spots of grey:
Thanks to you all, and leave us, fare you well.

Clau. Good morrow masters, each his severall way.

Prin. Come let us hence, and put on other weeds,
And then to Leonato's we will go.

Clau. And Hymen now with luckier issue speed;

Then

Then this for whom we rendred up this woe. Exeunt.

Enter Leonato, Ben. Marg. Vrs. Old man, Frier, Hero.

Frier. Did I not tell you she was innocent?

Leon. So are the Prince and Claudio who accus'd her.
Upon the errour that you heard debated.
But Margaret was in some fault for this;
Although against her will as it appears,
In the true course of all the question.

Old. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

Ben. And so am I, being else by faith enforc'd.
To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leon. Well daughter, and young Gentlewomen all,
Withdraw into a Chamber by your selves,
And when I send for you, come hither mask'd:
The Prince and Claudio promis'd by this hour
To visit me, you know your office Brother,
You must be father to your Brothers daughter,
And give her to young Claudio. Exeunt Ladies.

Old. Which I will doe with confirm'd countenance.

Ben. Frier, I must intreat your pains, I think.

Frier. To doe what Signior?

Ben. To bind me, or undoe me, one of them:
Signior Leonato, truth it is good Signior,
Your Neece regards me with an eye of favour.

Old. That eye my daughter lent her, 'tis most true.

Ben. And I doe with an eye of love requite her.

Leon. The sight whereof I think you had from me,
From Claudio and the Prince, but what's your will?

Ben. Your answer sir is Enigmatical,
But for my will, my will is, your good will
May stand with ours, this day to be conjoyn'd,
I'th state of honourable marriage,
In which good I shall desire your help.

Leon. My heart is with your liking.

Frier. And my help.

Enter Prince and Claudio with attendants.

Prin. Good morrow to this fair assembly.

Leon. Good morrow Prince, good morrow Claudio,
We here attend you, are you yet determin'd,
To day to marry with my brothers daughter?

Clau. Ile hold my mind were she an Ethiope.

Leon. Call her forth brother, heres the Frier ready.

Prin. Good morrow Benedick, why what's the matter?
That you have such a February face,
So full of frost, of storm, and cloudinesse.

Clau. I think he thinks upon the savage bull:
Tush, fear not man, we'll tip thy hornes with gold,
And so all Europe shall rejoyce at thee,
As once Europa did at lusty Jove,
When he would play the noble beast in love.

Ben. Bull Jove sir, had an amiable low,
And some such strange bull leapt your fathers Cow,
And got a Calf in that same noble feat,
Much like to you, for you have just his bleat.

Enter brother, Hero, Beatrice, Margaret, Ursula.

Clau. For this I owe you: here comes other reckonings.
Which is the Lady I must seize upon?

Leon. This same is she, and I doe give you her.

Clau. Why then she's mine, sweet let me see your face.

Leon. No that you shall not, till you take her hand,
Before this Frier, and swear to marry her.

Clau. Give me your hand before this holy Frier,
I am your husband if you like of me.

Hero. And when I liv'd I was your other wife,
And when you lov'd, you were my other husband.

Clau. Another Hero?

Hero. Nothing certainer.
One Hero died, but I doe live,
And surely as I live, I am a maid.

Prin. The former Hero, Hero that is dead.

Leon. She died my Lord, but whiles her slander liv'd.

Frier. All this amazement can I qualifie,
When after that the holy rites are ended,
I'le tell thee largely of fair Heroe's death:
Mean time let wonder seem familiar,
And to the chappell let us presently.

Ben. Soft and fair Frier, which is Beatrice?

Beat. I answer to that name, what is your will?

Ben. Doe not you love me?

Beat. Why, no more then reason.

Ben. Why then your Uncle, and the Prince, & Claudio, have been deceived, they swore you did.

Beat. Doe not you love me?

Ben. Troth no, no more then reason.

Beat. Why then my Cosin Margaret and Ursula
Are much deceiv'd, for they did swear you did.

Ben. They swore you were almost sick for me.

Beat. They swore you were well-nye dead for me.

Ben. 'Tis no matter, then you do not love me?

Beat. No truly, but in friendly recompence.

Leon. Come Cosin, I am sure you love the gentleman.

Clau. And I'le be sworn upon't that he loves her,
For here's a paper written in his hand,
A halting sonnet of his own pure brain,
Fashioned to Beatrice.

Hero. And here's another,
Writ in thy cosins hand, stoln from her pocket,
Containing her affection unto Benedick.

Ben. A miracle, here's our own hands against our hearts: come I will have thee, but by this light I take thee for pitty.

Beat. I would not denie you, but by this good day, I yield upon great perswasion, and partly to save your life, for as I told, you were in a consumption.

Leon. Peace, I will stop your mouth.

Prin. How dost thou Benedick the married man?

Ben. I'le tell thee what Prince: a Colledge of witty-crackers cannot flout me out of my humour, dost thou think I care for a Satyre or an Epigram? no, if a man will be beaten with brains, a shall wear nothing handsome about him: in brief, since I do purpose to marry, I will think nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it: and therefore never flout at me, for what I have said against it: for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion: for thy part Claudio, I did think to have beaten thee, but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, live unbruis'd, and love my cosin.

Clau. I had well hoped thou would'st have denied Beatrice that I might have cudgel'd thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer, which out of question thou wilt be, if my Cosin doe not looke exceeding narrowly to thee.

Ben. Come, come, we are friends, let's have a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wives heels.

Leon. We'll have dancing afterwards.

Ben. First, of my word, therefore play musick. Prince, thou art sad, get thee a wife, get thee a wife, there is no staffe more reverend then one tipt with horn. Enter Mes.

Messen. My Lord, your brother John is tane in flight.
And brought with armed men back to Messina.

Ben. Think not on him till to morrow, I'le devise thee brave punishments for him: strike up Pipers. Dance.

FINIS.

Love's Labour's loſt.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Ferdinand King of Navarre, Biron, Longavile, and Dumaine.

Ferdinand.

LEt Fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live regiſtred upon our brazen Tombes,
And then grace us in the diſgrace of death:
When ſpight of cormorant devouring Time,
Th'endeavour of this preſent breath may buy
That honour which ſhall bate his Sythes keen edge,
And make us heires of all eternitie.
Therefore brave Conquerors (for ſo you are)
That warre againſt your own affections,
And the huge Army of the worlds deſires;
Our late Edict ſhall ſtrongly ſtand in force,
Navarre ſhall be the wonder of the world.
Our Court ſhall be a little Academy,
Still and contemplative in living Art.
You three, Biron, Dumaine, and Longavile,
Have ſworn for three years tearm to live with me,
My fellow Schollers, and to keep thoſe ſtatutes
That are recorded in this ſcedule here.
Your oathes are paſt, and now ſubſcribe your names:
That his own hand may ſtrike his honour down,
That violates the ſmalleſt branch herein:
If you are arm'd to doe, as ſworn to doe,
Subſcribe to your deep oathes, and keep them too.

Long. I am reſolv'd, 'tis but a three years faſt:
The mind ſhall banquet, though the body pine,
Fat paunches have lean pates: and dainty bits,
Make rich the ribs, but bankerout the wits.

Dum. My loving Lord, Dumaine is mortified,
The groſſer manner of theſe worlds delights,
He throws upon the groſſe worlds baſer ſlaves:
To love, to wealth, to pomp, I pine and die,
With all theſe living in Philoſophy.

Biron. I can but ſay their proteſtation over,
So much (dear Liege) I have already ſworn,
That is, to live and ſtudy here three years.
But there are other ſtrict obſervances:
As not to ſee a woman in that tearm,
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
And one day in a week to touch no food:
And but one meal on every day beſide:
The which I hope is not enrolled there.
And then to ſleep but three hours in the night,
And not be ſeen to wink of all the day.
When I was wont to think no harm all night,
And make a dark night too of half the day:
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
O, theſe are barren tasks, too hard to keep,
Not to ſee Ladies, ſtudy, faſt, not ſleep.

Ferd. Your oath is paſt to paſſe away from theſe.

Biron. Let me ſay no my Liege, and if you pleaſe,
I onely ſwore to ſtudy with your Grace,
And ſtay here in your Court for three years ſpace.

Long. You ſwore to that Biron, and to the reſt.

Bir. By yea and nay ſir, then I ſwore in jeſt.
What is the end of ſtudy, let me know?

Ferd. Why that to know which elſe we ſhould not know.

Bir. Things hid and bard (you mean) from common ſenſe.

Ferd. I, that is ſtudies god-like recompence.

Bir. Come on then, I will ſwear to ſtudy ſo,
To know the thing I am forbid to know:
As thus, to ſtudy where I well may dine,
When I to faſt expreſly am forbid.
Or ſtudy where to meet ſome Miſtreſſe fine,
When Miſtreſſes from common ſenſe are hid.
Or having ſworn too hard a keeping oath.
Study to break it, and not break my troth.
If ſtudies gain be thus, and this be ſo,
Study knows that which yet it doth not know,
Swear me to this, and I will ne're ſay no.

Ferd. Theſe be the ſtops that hinder ſtudy quite,
And train our intellects to vain delight.

Bir. Why? all delights are vain, and that moſt vain,
Which with pain purchas'd, doth inherit pain,
As painfully to poar upon a book,
To ſeek the light of truth, while truth the while
Doth falſly blind the eye-ſight of his look:
Light ſeeking light, doth light beguile:
So ere you find where light in darkneſſe lies,
Your light growes dark by loſing of your eyes.
Study me how to pleaſe the eye indeed,
By fixing it upon a fairer eye,
Who dazling ſo, that eye ſhall be his heed,
And give him light that it was blinded by.
Study is like the heavens glorious Sunne,
That will not be deep ſearch'd with ſawcy looks:
Small have continual plodders ever wonne,
Save baſe authority from others Books.
Theſe earthly Godfathers of heavens lights,
That give a name to every fixed ſtarre,
Have no more profit of their ſhining nights,
Then thoſe that walk, and wot not what they are,
Too much to know, is to know nought but fame:
And every Godfather can give a name.

Ferd. How well he's read, to reaſon againſt reading.

Dum.

Dum. Proceeded well, to ſtop all good proceeding.
Long. He weeds the Corn, and ſtill lets grow the weeding.
Bir. The Spring is near, when Green Geeſe are a breeding.
Dum. How follows that?
Bir. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reaſon nothing.
Bir. Something then in rime.
Long. Biron is like an envious ſneaping Froſt,
That bites the firſt born Infants of the Spring.
Bir. Well, ſay I am, why ſhould proud Summer boaſt,
Before the Birds have any cauſe to ſing?
Why ſhould I joy in any abortive birth?
At Chriſtmas I no more deſire a Roſe,
Than wiſh a Snow in May's new fangled ſhows:
But like of each thing that in ſeaſon grows.
So you to ſtudy now it is too late,
That were to climbe ore the houſe t' unlock the gate.
Ferd. Well, ſit you out: goe home Biron: adue.
Bir. No my good Lord, I have ſworn to ſtay with you.
And though I have for barbariſme ſpoke more,
Then for that Angel knowledge you can ſay,
Yet confident I'le keep what I have ſwore,
And bide the pennance of each three years day.
Give me the Paper, let me read the ſame,
And to the ſtrict'ſt decrees I'le write my name.
Ferd. How well this yielding reſcues thee from ſhame.
Bir. Item, That no woman ſhall come within a mile of my Court.
Hath this been proclaimed?
Long. Four dayes agoe.
Bir. Let's ſee the penalty.
On pain of looſing her tongue.
Who devis'd this penalty?
Long. Marry that did I.
Bir. Sweet Lord, and why?
Long. To fright them hence with that dread penalty.
A dangerous Law againſt gentility.
Item, If any man be ſeen to talk with a woman with in the tearm of three years, he ſhall endure ſuch publick ſhame as the reſt of the Court ſhall poſſibly deviſe.
Bir. This article my Liege your ſelf muſt break,
For well you know here comes in Embaſſie
The French Kings daughter, with your ſelf to ſpeak;
A Maid of Grace and compleat Majeſty,
About ſurrender up of Aquitaine
To her decrepit, ſick, and bed-rid Father.
Therefore this Article is made in vain,
Or vainly comes the admired Princeſſe hither.
Ferd. What ſay you Lords?
Why, this was quite forgot.
Bir. So ſtudy evermore is overſhot,
While it doth ſtudy to have what it would,
It doth forget to do the thing it ſhould:
And when it hath the thing it hunteth moſt,
'Tis won as Towns with fire; ſo won, ſo loſt.
Ferd. We muſt of force diſpence with this Decree;
She muſt lie here on meer neceſſity.
Bir. Neceſſity will make us all forſworn
Three thouſand times within this three years ſpace:
For every man with his affects is born,
Not by might maſtered, but by ſpecial grace.
If I break faith, this word ſhall break for me,
I am forſworn on meer neceſſitie.
So to the Laws at large I write my name,
And he that breaks them in the leaſt degree
Stands in attainder of eternal ſhame.
Suggeſtions are to others as to me:
But I believe although I ſeem ſo loth,
I am the laſt that will laſt keep his oath.
But is there no quick recreation granted?
Ferd. I that there is, our Court you know is haunted
With a conceited Travellor of Spain,
A man in all the world new faſhion planted,
That hath a mint of phraſes in his brain:
One, whom the muſick of his own vain tongue,
Doth raviſh like inchanting harmony:
A man of complements, whom right and wrong
Have choſe as umpire of their mutinie.
This child of fancie, that Armado hight,
For interim to our ſtudies ſhall relate,
In high-born words the worth of many a Knight:
From tawny Spain loſt in the worlds debate.
How you delight my Lords, I know not I.
But I proteſt I love to hear him lie,
And I will uſe him for my Minſtrelſie.
Bir. Armado is a moſt illuſtrious wight,
A man of fire, new words, Faſhions own Knight,
Long. Coſtard the ſwain, and he ſhall be our ſport,
And ſo to ſtudie, three years is but ſhort.

Enter a Conſtable with Coſtard with a Letter.

Conſt. Which is the Dukes own perſon.
Bir. This fellow, What would'ſt?
Con. I my ſelf reprehend his own perſon, for I am his Graces Tharborough: But I would ſee his own perſon in fleſh and bloud.
Bir. This is he.
Con. Signior Arme, Arme commends you:
There's villany abroad, this letter will tell you more.
Clow. Sir, the Contempts thereof are as touching me.
Ferd. A Letter from the magnificent Armado.
Bir. How low ſoever the matter, I hope in God for high words.
Long. A high hope for a low heaven, God grant us patience.
Bir. To hear, or forbear hearing.
Long. To hear meekly ſir, and to laugh moderately, or to forbear both.
Bir. Well ſir, be it as the ſtile ſhall give us cauſe to climb in the merrineſſe.
Clow. The matter is to me ſir, as concerning Jaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.
Bir. In what manner?
Clow. In manner and form, following ſir all thoſe three. I was ſeen with her in the Manor houſe, ſitting with her upon the Forme, and taken following her into the Parke: which put together, is in manner and form following. Now ſir, for the Manner; is the manner of a man to ſpeak to a Woman; for the Forme in ſome forme.
Bir. For the following ſir.
Clow. As it ſhall follow in my correction, and God defend the right.
Ferd. Will you hear this Letter with attention?
Bir. As we would hear an Oracle.
Clow. Such is the ſimplicity of man to hearken after the fleſh.

Ferd. GReat Deputy, the Welkins Vicegerent, and ſole dominator of Navarre, my ſouls earths God, and bodies foſtring Patron:

Coſt. Not a word of Coſtard yet.

Ferd. So it is.

Coſt. It may be ſo: but if he ſay it is ſo, he is in telling true: but ſo.

Ferd. Peace,

Clow. Be to me, and every man that dares not fight.

Ferd. No words,

Clow. Of other mens ſecrets I beſeech you.

Ferd. So it is, beſieged with ſable coloured melancholly, I did commend the black oppreſſing humour to the moſt wholeſome Phyſick of thy health-giving ayre: And as I am a Gentleman, betook my ſelf to walk: the time When? about the ſixt hour, When Beaſts moſt graſe, Birds beſt peck, and men ſit down to that nouriſhment which is called Supper: So much for the time When. Now for the ground Which? which I mean I walkt upon, it is ycleped, Thy Parke. Then for the place Where, where I mean I did encounter that obſcene and moſt prepoſterous event that draweth from my ſnow white Pen the Ebon-coloured Ink, which here thou viewеſt, beholdeſt, ſurvayeſt, or ſeeſt. But to the place Where: it ſtandeth North North-Eaſt and by Eaſt from the Weſt corner of thy curious knotted Garden. There did I ſee that low ſpirited Swain, that baſe Minow of thy mirth, (Clown. Me?) that unlettered ſmall-knowing ſoul, (Clow. Me?) that ſhallow vaſſal (Clow. Still me?) which as I remember, hight Coſtard, (Clow. O me) ſorted and conſorted contrary to thy eſtabliſhed proclaimed Edict & Continent Canon: Which with, O with, but with this I paſſion to ſay wherewith:

Clown. With a Wench.

Ferd. With a child of our Grandmother Eve, a female; or, for thy more underſtanding, a woman: him, I (as my ever eſteemed duty pricks me on) have ſent to thee, to receive the meed of puniſhment by the ſweet Graces Officer Anthony Dull, a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, and eſtimation.

Ant. Me, an't ſhall pleaſe you? I am Anthony Dull.

Ferd. For Jaquenetta (ſo is the weaker veſſel called) which I apprehended with the aforeſaid Swain, I keep her as a veſſell of thy Lawes fury, and ſhall at the leaſt of thy ſweet notice, bring her to trial. Thine in all complements of devoted and heart-burning heat of duty,

Don Adriana de Armado.

Bir. This is not ſo well a I looked for, but the beſt that ever I heard.

Ferd. I the beſt for the worſt. But ſirra, What ſay you to this?

Clown. Sir I confeſſe the Wench.

Ferd. Did you hear the Proclamation?

Clown. I do confeſſe much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

Ferd. It was proclaimed a years impriſonment to be taken with a Wench.

Clown. I was taken with none ſir, I was taken with a Damoſell.

Ferd. Well, it was proclaimed Damoſell.

Clo. This was no Damoſel neither ſir, ſhe was a Virgin.

Ferd. It is ſo varied too, for it was proclaimed Virgin.

Clown. If it were, I deny her Virginity: I was taken with a Maid.

Ferd. This Maid will not ſerve your turn ſir.

Clown. This Maid will ſerve my turn ſir.

Ferd. Sir I will pronounce your ſentence: You ſhall faſt a week with Branne and Water.

Clown. I had rather pray a Moneth with Mutton and Porridge.

Ferd. And Don Armado ſhall be your Keeper.
My Lord Biron, ſee him deliver'd ore,
And goe we Lords to put in practice that,
Which each to other hath ſo ſtrongly ſworn. Exeunt.

Bir. Ile lay my head to any good mans Hat,
Theſe oathes and Lawes will prove an idle ſcorn.
Sirra, come on.

Clown. I ſuffer for the truth ſir: for true it is, I was taken with Jaquenetta, and Jaquenetta is a true Girle, and therefore welcome the ſowre cup of proſperity: affliction may one day ſmile again, and untill then ſit down ſorrow.

Enter Armado a Braggart, and Moth his Page.

Brag. Boy, What ſign is it when a man of great ſpirit grows melancholy?

Boy. A great ſign ſir, that he will look ſad.

Brag. Why? ſadneſſe is one and the ſelf-ſame thing, dear Imp.

Boy. No, no, O Lord ſir, no,

Brag. How canſt thou part ſadneſſe and melancholy, my tender Juvenal?

Boy. By a familiar demonſtration of the working, my tough Signior.

Brag. Why tough Signior? Why tough Signior?

Boy. Why tender Juvenal? Why tender Juvenal!

Brag. I ſpoke it tender Juvenal, as a congruent epitheton, appertaining to thy young dayes, which we may nominate tender.

Boy. And I tough Signior, as an appertinent title to your old time, which we may name tough.

Brag. Pretty and apt.

Boy. How mean you ſir, I pretty, and my ſaying apt? or I apt, and my ſaying pretty?

Bbrag. Thou pretty, becauſe little.

Boy. Little pretty, becauſe little: wherefore apt?

Brag. And therefore apt, becauſe quick.

Boy. Speak you this in my praiſe Maſter?

Brag. In thy condigne praiſe.

Boy. I will praiſe an Eele with the ſame praiſe.

Brag. What? that an Eele is ingenuous.

Boy. That an Eele is quick.

Brag. I doe ſay thou art quick in anſwers. Thou heat'ſt my bloud.

Boy. I am anſwer'd ſir.

Brag. I love not to be croſt.

Boy. He ſpeaks the clean contrary, croſſes love not him.

Brag. I have promis'd to ſtudy 3 years with the Duke.

Boy. You may doe it in an hour ſir.

Brag. Impoſſible.

Boy. How many is one thrice told?

Brag. I am ill at reckoning, it fits the ſpirit of a Tapſter.

Boy. You are a Gentleman and a Gameſter ſir.

Brag. I confeſſe both, they are both the varniſh of a compleat man.

Boy. Then I am ſure you know how much the groſſe ſumme of deuſ-aſe amounts to.

Brag. It doth amount to one more then two.

Boy. Which the baſe vulgar call three. Brag. True.

Boy. Why ſir is this ſuch a piece of ſtudy? Now here's three ſtudied, ere you'll thrice wink, and how eaſie it is to put years to the word three, and ſtudy three years in two words, the dancing horſe will tell you.

Brag. A

Brag. A moſt fine figure.

Boy. To prove you a Cypher.

Brag. I will hereupon confeſſe I am in love: and as it is baſe for a Souldier to love: ſo am I in love with a baſe Wench. If drawing my ſword againſt the humour of affection, would deliver me from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Deſire priſoner, and ranſome him to any French Courtier for a new devis'd courteſie. I think ſcorn to ſigh, me thinks I ſhould out-ſwear Cupid. Comfort me Boy, What great men have been in love?

Boy. Hercules, Maſter.

Brag. Moſt ſweet Hercules: more authority dear Boy, name more; and ſweet my child, let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Boy. Sampſon, Maſter, he was a man of good carriage, great carriage: for he carried the Town Gates on his back like a Porter; and he was in love.

Brag. O well-knit Sampſon, ſtrong-joynted Sampſon; I doe excell thee in my Rapier, as much as thou didſt me in carrying Gates. I am in love too. Who was Sampſons Love my dear Moth?

Boy. A woman, Maſter.

Brag. Of what complexion?

Boy. Of all the four, or the three, or the two, or one of the four.

Brag. Tell me preciſely of what complexion?

Boy. Of the Sea-water Green ſir.

Brag. Is that one of the four complexions?

Boy. As I have read ſir, and the beſt of them too.

Brag. Green indeed is the colour of Lovers: but to have a Love of that colour, me thinks Sampſon had ſmall reaſon for it. He ſurely affected her for her wit.

Boy. It was ſo ſir, for ſhe had a green wit.

Brag. My Love is moſt immaculate white and red.

Boy. Moſt immaculate thoughts Maſter, are maſk'd under ſuch colours.

Brag. Define, define, well educated infant.

Boy. My Fathers wit, and my Mothers tongue aſſiſt me.

Brag. Sweet invocation of a child, moſt pretty and patheticall.

Boy. If ſhe be made of white and red,
Her faults will ne're be known:
For bluſhing cheeks by faults are bred,
And feares by pale white ſhown:
Then if ſhe fear, or be to blame,
By this you ſhall not know,
For ſtill her cheeks poſſeſſe the ſame,
Which native ſhe doth owe:

A dangerous rime Maſter againſt the reaſon of white and red.

Brag. Is there not a Ballet Boy, of the King and the Beggar?

Boy. The world was very guilty of ſuch a Ballet, ſome three ages ſince, but I think now 'tis not to be found: or if it were, it would neither ſerve for the writing, nor the tune.

Brag. I will have that ſubject newly writ o're, that I may example my digreſſion by ſome mighty preſident. Boy, I doe love that Countrey Girl that I took in the Parke with the rationall Hind Coſtard: ſhe deſerves well.

Boy. To be whip'd: and yet a better Love then my Maſter.

Brag. Sing Boy, my ſpirit growes heavy in love.

Boy. And that's great marvell, loving a light Wench.

Brag. I ſay ſing.

Boy. Forbear till this company be paſt.

Enter Clown, Conſtable, and Wench.

Conſt. Sir, the Dukes pleaſure is, that you keep Coſtard ſafe, and you muſt let him take no delight, nor no pennance, but he muſt faſt three dayes a week: for this Damſell, I muſt keep her at the Park, ſhe is allow'd for the Day-woman. Fare you well. Exit.

Brag. I doe betray my ſelf with bluſhing: Maid.

Maid. Man.

Brag. I will viſit thee at the Lodge.

Maid. That's here by.

Brag. I know where it is ſituate.

Maid. Lord how wiſe you are!

Brag. I will tell thee wonders.

Maid. With that face?

Brag. I love thee.

Maid. So I heard you ſay.

Brag. And ſo farewell.

Maid. Fair weather after you.
Come Jaquenetta, away. Exeunt.

Brag. Villain, thou ſhalt faſt for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Clo. Well ſir, I hope when I doe it, I ſhall doe it on a full ſtomacke.

Brag. Thou ſhalt be heavily puniſhed.

Clo. I am more bound to you then your fellows, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Con. Take away this Villain, ſhut him up.

Boy. Come you tranſgreſſing ſlave, away.

Clow. Let me not be pent up ſir, I will be faſt being looſe.

Boy. No ſir, that were faſt and looſe: thou ſhalt to priſon.

Clow. Well, if ever I do ſee the merry dayes of deſolation that I have ſeen, ſome ſhall ſee.

Boy. What ſhall ſome ſee?

Clow. Nay nothing, Maſter Moth, but what they look upon. It is not for priſoners to be ſilent in their words, and therefore I will ſay nothing: I thank God, I have as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet. Exit.

Brag. I doe affect the very ground (which is baſe) where her ſhooe (which is baſer) guided by her foot (which is baſeſt) doth tread. I ſhall be forſworn (which is a great argument of falſhood) if I love. And how can that be true love, which is falſly attempted? Love is a familiar, Love is a Devil. There is no evil Angell but Love, yet Sampſon was ſo tempted, and he had an excellent ſtrength: Yet was Solomon ſo ſeduced, and he had a very good wit. Cupids But-ſhaft is too hard for Hercules Club, and therefore too much oddes for a Spaniards Rapier: The firſt and ſecond cauſe will not ſerve my turn: the Paſſado he reſpects not, the Duello he regards not; his diſgrace is to be called Boy, but his glory is to ſubdue men. Adieu Valour, ruſt Rapier, bee ſtill Drum, for your manager is in love; yea, he loveth. Aſſiſt me ſome extemporall god of Rime, for I am ſure I ſhall turn Sonnet. Deviſe Wit, write Pen, for I am for whole volumes in Folio.

Finis Actus Primi.

Actus Secundus.

Enter the Princesse of France, with three attending Ladies, and three Lords.

Boyet. Now Madam summon up your dearest spirits,
Consider whom the King your Father sends:
To whom he sends, and what's his Embassie.
Your self, held precious in the worlds esteem,
To parlee with the sole inheritour
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchlesse Navarre: the plea of no lesse weight
Than Aquitain, a Dowry for a Queen.
Be now as prodigall of all dear grace,
As Nature was in making Graces dear,
When she did starve the generall world beside,
And prodigally gave them all to you.
Prin. Good L. Boyet, my beauty though but mean,
Needs not the painted flourish of your praise:
Beauty is bought by judgement of the eye,
Not uttered by base sale of Chapmens tongues:
I am lesse proud to hear you tell my worth,
Then you much willing to be counted wise,
In spending thus your wit in praise of mine.
But now to task the tasker: good Boyet,
You are not ignorant, all-telling fame
Doth noyse abroad Navarre hath made a vow,
Till painfull study shall out-wear three yeares,
No woman may approach his silent Court:
Therefore to's seemeth it a needfull course,
Before we enter his forbidden Gates,
To know his pleasure, and in that behalfe
Bold of your worthinesse, we single you,
As our best moving fair Soliciter:
Tell him the Daughter of the King of France,
On serious businesse, craving quick dispatch,
Importunes personall conference with his Grace.
Haste, signifie so much, while we attend,
Like humble visag'd Suters his high will.
Boyet. Proud of employment, willingly I go. Exit.
Prin. All pride is willing pride, and your's is so:
Who are the Votaries my loving Lords, that are vow-fellows with this virtuous Duke?
Lor. Longavile is one.
Prin. Know you the man?
1 Lad. I knew him Madam at a Marriage Feast,
Between L. Perigort, and the beauteous heir
Of Jaques Faulconbridge solemnized.
In Normandy saw I this Longavile,
A man of soveraign parts he is esteem'd:
Well fitted in the Arts, glorious in Armes:
Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.
The onely soul of his fair virtues glosse,
(If virtues glosse will stain with any soil,)
Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a will:
Whose edge hath power to cut, whose will still wills,
It should none spare that come within his power.
Prin. Some merry mocking Lord, is't so?
Lad. 1. They say so most, that most his humours know.
Prin. Such short liv'd wits doe wither as they grow.
Who are the rest?
2. Lad. The young Dumain, a well accomplish'd youth,
Of all that Virtue love, for Virtue loved.
Most power to doe most harm, least knowing ill:
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though he had no wit.
I saw him at the Duke Alanzoes once,
And much too little of that good I saw,
Is my report to his great worthinesse.
Rosa. Another of these Students at that time,
Was there with him, as I have heard a truth.
Birone they call him but, a merrier man,
Within the limit of becomming mirth,
I never spent an hours talk withall.
His eye begets occasion for wit,
For every object that the one doth catch,
The other turns to a mirth-moving jest.
Which his fair tongue (conceits Expositor)
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged eares play Trewant at his Tales,
And younger hearings are quite ravished.
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.
Prin. God blesse my Ladies, are they all in love?
That every one her own hath garnished,
With such bedecking ornaments of praise.
Ma. Here comes Boyet.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, what admittance Lord?
Boyet. Navarre had notice of your fair approach;
And he and his Competitors in oath,
Were all addrest to meet you gentle Lady
Before I came: Marry thus I have learnt,
He rather means to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes here to besiege his Court,
Than seek a dispensation for his oath:
To let you enter his unpeopled house.

Enter Navar, Longavile, Dumain, and Birone.

Here comes Navarre.
Nav. Fair Princesse, welcome to the Court of Navar.
Prin. Fair I give you back again, and welcome I have not yet: the roof of this Court is too high to be yours, and welcome to the wide fields, too base to be mine.
Nav. You shall be welcome Madam to my Court.
Prin. I will be welcome then, Conduct me thither.
Na. Hear me dear Lady, I have sworn an oath.
Prin. Our Lady help my Lord, he'll be forsworn.
Nav. Not for the world, fair Madam, by my will.
Prin. Why, will shall break it will, and nothing else.
Nav. Your Ladiship is ignorant what it is.
Prin. Were my Lord so, his ignorance were wise,
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.
I hear your Grace hath sworn out House-keeping:
'Tis deadly sin to keep that oath my Lord,
And sin to break it:
But pardon me, I am too sudden bold,
To teach a Teacher ill beseemeth me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my comming,
And suddenly resolve me in my suit.
Nav. Madam, I will, if suddenly I may.
Prin. You will the sooner that I were away,
For you'll prove perjur'd if you make me stay.
Bir. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Rosa. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Bir.

Bir. I know you did,
Roſa. How needleſs was it then to ask the queſtion ?
Bir. You muſt not be ſo quick.
Roſ. 'Tis long of you that ſpur me with ſuch queſtions.
Bir. Your wit's too hot, it ſpeeds too faſt, 'twill tire.
Roſa. Not till it leave the Rider in the mire.
Bir. What time a day ?
Roſa. The houre that fools ſhould ask.
Bir. Now fair befall your mask.
Roſa. Fair falls the face it covers.
Bir. And ſend you many lovers.
Roſa. Amen, ſo you be none.
Bir. Nay then will I be gone.
Fer. Madam, your father here doth intimate.
The paiment of a hundred thouſand Crowns,
Being but th'one half of an intire ſum,
Disburſed by my father in his warrs.
But ſay that he, or we, as neither have
Receiv'd that ſum; yet there remains unpaid
A hundred thouſand more: in ſurety of the which,
One part of Aquitain is bound to us,
Although not valued to the moneys worth.
If then the King your father will reſtore
But that one half which is unſatisfied,
We will give up our right in Aquitain,
And hold fair friendſhip with his Majeſty:
But that it ſeems he little purpoſeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaid,
An hundred thouſand Crowns, and not demands
One paiment of a hundred thouſand Crowns,
To have his title live in Aquitain.
Which we much rather had depart withall,
And have the money by our father lent,
Then Aquitain, ſo guelded as it is.
Dear Princeſs, were not his requeſts ſo far
From reaſons yielding, your fair ſelf ſhould make
A yielding 'gainſt ſome reaſon in my breſt,
And go well ſatisfied to France again.
Prin. You do the King my Father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In ſo unſeeming to confeſs receit
Of that which hath ſo faithfully been paid.
Fer. I doe proteſt I never heard of it,
And if you prove it, I'le repay it back,
Or yield up Aquitain.
Prin. We arreſt your word:
Boyet, you can produce acquittances
For ſuch a ſum, from ſpeciall Officers, of Charls his Father.
Fer. Satisfie me ſo.
Boyet. So pleaſe your Grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other ſpecialties are bound,
To morrow you ſhall have a ſight of them.
Fer. It ſhall ſuffice me; at which enterview,
All liberall reaſon would I yield unto:
Mean time, receive ſuch welcome at my hand,
As Honor, without breach of Honor may
Make tender of, to thy true worthineſs.
You may not come fair Princeſs in my gates,
But here without you ſhall be ſo receiv'd,
As you ſhall deem your ſelf lodg'd in my heart,
Though ſo deni'd farther harbour in my houſe:
Your own good thoughts excuſe me, and farewell,
To morrow we ſhall viſit you again.
Prin. Sweet health and fair deſires conſort your grace.
Fer. Thy own wiſh, wiſh I thee, in every place. Exit.

Boy. Lady, I will commend you to my own heart.
La. Ro. Pray you doe my commendations,
I would be glad to ſee it.
Boy. I would you heard it grone.
La. Ro. Is the ſoul ſick ?
Boy. Sick at the heart.
La. Ro. Alack let it bloud.
Boy. Would that doe it good ?
La. Ro. My Phiſick ſayes I.
Boy. Will you prick't with your eye.
La. Ro. No poynt, with my knife.
Boy. Now God ſave thy life.
La. Ro. And yours from long living.
Bir. I cannot ſtay thanksgiving. Exit.

Enter Dumaine.

Dum. Sir, I pray you a word: what Lady is that ſame?
Boy. The heir of Alanſon, Roſaline her name.
Dum. A gallant Lady, Mounſier fare you well. Exit.

Enter Longaville.

Long. I beſeech you a word: what is ſhe in the white?
Boy. A woman ſometimes, if you ſaw her in the light.
Long. Perchance light in the light: I deſire her name.
Boy. She hath but one for her ſelf,
To deſire that were a ſhame.
Lon. Pray you ſir, whoſe daughter ?
Boy. Her mothers, I have heard.
Lon. Gods bleſſing a your beard.
Boy. Good ſir be not offended.
She is an heir of Faulconbridge.
Long. Nay, my choller is ended:
She is a moſt ſweet Lady. Exit Long.
Boy. Not unlike ſir, that may be.

Enter Birone.

Bir. What's her name in the Cap.
Boy. Katherine by good hap.
Bir. Is ſhe wedded, or no.
Boy. To her will ſir, or ſo.
Bir. You are welcome ſir, adieu.
Boy. Farewell to me ſir, and welcome to you. Exit.
La. Ma. That laſt is Birone, the merry mad-cap Lord.
Not a word with him, but a jeſt.
Boy. And every jeſt but a word.
Pri. It was well done of you to take him at his word.
Boy. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to boord.
Lad. Ma. Two hot Sheeps Mary;
And wherefore not Ships ? (lips.
Boy. No ſheep (ſweet Lamb) unleſſe we feed on your
La. You ſheep and I paſture: ſhall that finiſh the jeſt?
Boy. So you grant paſture for me.
La. Not ſo gentle beaſt.
My Lips are no Common though ſeverall they be.
Boy. Belonging to whom ?
La. To my fortunes and me.
Prin. Good wits will be jangling, but gentles agree.
This civil war of wits were much better uſed
On Navarre and his book-men, for here 'tis abuſed.
Boy. If my obſervation (which very ſeldome lyes
By the hearts ſtill rhetorick, diſcloſed with eyes)
Deceive me not now, Navarre is infected.
Prin. With what ?
Boy. With that which we Lovers intitle affected.
Prin. Your reaſon.
Boy. Why all his his behaviours doe make their retire,
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough deſire.
His heart like an Agot with your print impreſſed,

Proud

Proud with his forme, in his eye pride expreſſed:
His tongue all impatient to ſpeak and not ſee,
Did ſtumble with haſte in his eye-ſight to be,
All ſenſes to that ſence did make their repair,
To feel onely looking on faireſt of fair:
Me thought all his ſences were lock'd in his eye,
As Jewels in Chriſtall for ſome Prince to buy:
Who tendring their own worth from whence they were (glaſt,
Did point out to buy them along as you paſt.
His faces own margent did coat ſuch amazes,
That all eyes ſaw his eyes inchanted with gazes.
I'le give you Aquitain, and all that is his,
And you give him for my ſake, but one loving kiſs.

Prin. Come to our Pavillion, Boyet is diſpoſed.

Boy. But to ſpeak that in words, which his eye hath
I onely have made a mouth of his eye, (diſclos'd,
By adding a tongue, which I know will not lye.

Lad. Ro. Thou art an old Love-monger, and ſpeakeſt skillfully.

Lad. Ma. He is Cupids Grandfather, and learns news of him.

Lad. 2. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.

Boy. Doe you hear my mad wenches?

Lad. 1. No.

Boy. What then, doe you ſee?

Lad. 2. I, our way to be gone.

Boy. You are too hard for me. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertia.

Enter Braggart, and Boy.

Song.

Brag. Warble childe, make paſſionate my ſenſe of hearing.

Boy. Concolinell.--------

Brag. Sweet Ayer, goe tendereſſe of years: take this Key, give enlargement to the ſwain, bring him feſtinatly hither: I muſt imploy him in a letter to my Love.

Boy. Will you win your love with a French braule?

Brag. How meaneſt thou, brauling in French?

Boy. No my compleat maſter, but to jigge off a tune at the tongues end, canary to it with the feet, humour it with turning up your eye: ſigh a note and ſing a note, ſometime through the throat: if you ſwallowed love with ſinging, love ſometime through the noſe, as if you ſnuft up love by ſmelling love, with your hat penthouſe-like o're the ſhop of your eyes, with your armes croſt on your thinbelly doublet (like a Rabbet on a ſpit) or your hands in your pocket, like a man after the old painting, and keep not too long in one tune, but a ſnip and away: theſe are complements, theſe are humours, theſe betray nice wenches that would be betraid without theſe, and make them men of note: do you note men that moſt are affected to theſe?

Brag. How haſt thou purchaſed this experience?

Boy. By my pen of obſervation.

Brag. But O, but O.

Boy. The Hobby-horſe is forgot.

Brag. Call'ſt thou my love Hobby-horſe.

Boy. No Maſter, the Hobby-horſe is but a Colt, and your Love perhaps, a Hackny:
But have you forgot your Love?

Brag. Almoſt I had.

Boy. Negligent ſtudent, learn her by heart.

Brag. By heart, and in heart boy.

Boy. And out of heart Maſter: all thoſe three I will prove.

Brag. What wilt thou prove?

Boy. A man, if I live (and this) by, in, and without, upon the inſtant: by heart you love her, becauſe your heart cannot come by her: in heart you love her, becauſe your heart is in love with her: and out of heart you love her, being out of heart that you cannot enjoy her.

Brag. I am all theſe three.

Boy. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

Brag. Fetch hither the Swain, he muſt carry me a letter.

Boy. A meſſage well ſimpathiz'd, a Horſe to be embaſſadour for an Aſs.

Brag. Ha, ha, What ſayeſt thou?

Boy. Marry ſir, you muſt ſend the Aſs upon the Horſe, for he is very ſlow gated: but I goe.

Brag. The way is but ſhort, away.

Boy. As ſwift as Lead ſir.

Brag. Thy meaning pretty ingenious, is not Lead a mettall heavy, dull, and ſlow?

Boy. Minime honeſt Maſter, or rather Maſter no.

Brag. I ſay Lead is ſlow.

Boy. You are too ſwift ſir to ſay ſo.
Is that Lead ſlow which is fir'd from a Gun?

Brag. Sweet ſmoak of Rhetorick,
He reputes me a Cannon, and the Bullet that's he:
I ſhoote thee at the Swain.

Boy. Thump then, and I flee. Exit.

Brag. A moſt acute Juvenal, voluble and free of grace,
By thy favour ſweet Welkin, I muſt ſigh in thy face.
Moſt rude melancholly, Valour gives the place.
My Herald is return'd.

Enter Page, and Clown.

Pag. A wonder Maſter, here's a Coſtard broken in ſhin.

Arm. Some enigma, ſome riddle, no Lenvoy begin.

Clow. No egma, no riddle, no Lenvoy, no ſalve, in the male ſir. O ſir, Plantan, a plain Plantan: no Lenvoy, no Lenvoy, or Salveſir, but Plantan.

Arm. By vertue thou inforceſt laughter, thy ſilly thought, my ſpleen, the heaving of my lungs provokes me to ridiculous ſmiling: O pardon me my ſtarres, doth the inconſiderate take ſalve for Lenvoy, and the world Lenvoy for a ſalve?

Pag. Doe the wiſe think them other, is not Lenvoy a ſalve. (plain,

Arm. No Page, it is an epilogue or diſcourſe to make
Some obſcure precedence that hath tofore been fain.
Now will I begin your morral, and do you follow with my Lenvoy.
The Fox, the Ape, and the Humble-bee,
Were ſtill at odds, being but three.

Pag. Untill the Gooſe came out of door,
Staying the odds by adding four.
A good Lenvoy, ending in the Gooſe: would you deſire more?

Clo. The Boy hath ſold him a bargain, a Gooſe, that's flat

Sir, your penny-worth is good, and your Gooſe be fat.
To ſell a bargain well is as cunning as faſt as looſe:
Let me ſee a fat Lenvoy, I that's a fat Gooſe.
Arma. Come hither, come hither:
How did this argument begin?
Boy. By ſaying that a Coſtard was broken in a ſhin.
Then cal'd you for a Lenvoy.
Clow. True, and I for a Plantan:
Thus came your argument in:
Then the Boyes fat Lenvoy, the Gooſe that you bought,
And he ended the market.
Arma. But tell me: How was there a Coſtard broken in a ſhin?
Pag. I will tell you ſencibly,
Clow. Thou haſt no feeling of it Moth,
I will ſpeak that Lenvoy.
I Coſtard running out, that was ſafely within,
Fell over the threſhould, and broke my ſhin.
Arm. We will talk no more of this matter.
Clow. Till there be more matter in the ſhin.
Arm. Sirra Coſtard, I will infranchiſe thee.
Clow. O, marry me to one Francis, I ſmell ſome Lenvoy, ſome Gooſe in this.
Arm. By my ſweet ſoul, I mean, ſetting thee at liberty. Enfreedoming thy perſon; thou wert Immured, reſtrained, captivated, bound.
Clow. True, true, and now you will be my purgation, and let me looſe.
Arm. I give thee thy liberty, ſet thee from durance, and in lieu thereof, impoſe on thee nothing but this: Bear this ſignificant to the countrey Maid Jaquenetta: there is remuneration, for the beſt ward of mine honors, is rewarding my dependants. Moth, follow.---- Exit.
Pag. Like the ſequell I.
Signior Coſtard adieu.
Clow. My ſweet ounce of mans fleſh, my in-cony Jew:
Now will I look to his remuneration.
Remuneration, O, that's the Latine word for three-farthings: There farthings remuneration, What's the price of this yncle? i.de. no, I'le give you a remuneration: Why? It carries it's remuneration: Why? It is a fairer name then a French-Crown. I will never buy and ſell out of this word.

Enter Birone.

Bir. O my good knave Coſtard, exceedingly well met.
Clow. Pray you ſir, How much Carnation Ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?
Bir. What is a remuneration?
Coſt. Marry ſir, half penny farthing.
Bir. O, Why then three farthings worth of Silk.
Coſt. I thank your worſhip, God be wy you.
Bir. O ſtay ſlave, I muſt employ thee:
As thou wilt win my favour, good my knave,
Doe one thing for me that I ſhall intreat.
Clow. When would you have it done ſir?
Bir. O this after-noon.
Clow. Well, I will do it ſir: Fare you well.
Bir. O thou knoweſt not what it is.
Clow. I ſhall know ſir, when I have done it.
Bir. Why villain, thou muſt know it firſt.
Clow. I will come to your worſhip to morrow morning.
Bir. It muſt be done this after-noon,
Hark ſlave, it is but this:
The Princeſs comes to hunt here in the Park,
And in her train there is a gentle Lady:
When tongues ſpeak ſweetly, then they name her name,
And Roſaline they call her, ask for her:
And to her white hand ſee thou doe commend
This ſeal'd up counſell. There's thy guerdon: goe.
Clo. Guerdon, O ſweet Guerdon, better then remuneration, a leavenpence-farthing better: moſt ſweet guerdon. I will do it ſir in print: guerdon, remuneration.
Exit.
Bir. O! and I forſooth in love,
I that have been loves whip?
A very beadle to a humerous ſigh: A Critick,
Nay a night-watch Conſtable.
A dominiering pedant o're the Boy,
Then whom no mortall ſo magnificent.
This wimpled, whyning, purblind waiward Boy,
This ſignior Junios gyant dwarfe, don Cupid,
Regent of Love-rimes, Lord of folded armes,
Th'annointed ſoveraign of ſighes and groans:
Liedge of all loyterers, and malecontents:
Dread Prince of Plackets, King of Codpeeces.
Sole Emperator and great generall
Of trotting Parrators (O my little heart.)
And I to be a Corporall of his field,
And wear his colours like a Tumblers hoope?
What? I love! I ſue! I ſeek a wife,
A woman, that is like a Germane Clock,
Still a repairing: ever out of frame,
And never going aright, being but a Watch:
But being watch'd, that it may ſtill go right.
Nay to be perjur'd, which is worſt of all:
And among three, to love the worſt of all,
A whitely wanton with a velvet brow.
With two pitch balls ſtuck in her face for eyes.
I, and by heaven, one that will do the deed,
Though Argus were her Eunuch and her guard,
And I to ſigh for her! to watch for her!
To pray for her, go to: it is a plague
That Cupid will impoſe for my neglect.
Of his almighty dreadfull little might.
Well, I will love, write, ſigh, pray, ſue, and groan,
Some men muſt love my Lady, and ſome Joan.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Princeſs, a Forreſter, her Ladies, and her Lords.

Prin. Was that the King that ſpur'd his horſe ſo hard,
Againſt the ſteep unriſing of the hill?
Boy. I know not, but I think it was not he.
Prin. Who e're a was, a ſhew'd a mounting minde:
Well Lords, to day we ſhall have our diſpatch,
On Saterday we will return to France.
Then Forreſter my friend, Where is the Buſh
That we muſt ſtand and play the murtherer in?
For. Hereby upon the edge of yonder Coppice,
A Stand where you may make the faireſt ſhoote.
Prin. I thank my beauty, I am fair that ſhoot,
And thereupon thou ſpeak'ſt the faireſt ſhoote.
For. Pardon me, for I meant not ſo.
Prin. What, what? Firſt praiſe me, then again ſay no.
O ſhort liv'd pride. Not fair? alack for woe.
For Yes

For. Yes Madam, fair.
Prin. Nay, never paint me now,
Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.
Here (good my glass) take this for telling true:
Fair paiment for foul words, is more then due.
For. Nothing but fair is that which you inherit.
Prin. See, see, my beauty will be sav'd by merit.
O heresie in fair, fit for these dayes,
A giving hand, though foul, shall have the praise.
But come, the Bow: Now Mercy goes to kill,
And shooting well, is then accounted ill:
Thus will I save my credit in the shoote,
Not wounding, pitty would not let me do't:
If wounding, then it was to shew my skill,
That more for praise, then purpose meant to kill.
And out of question, so it is sometimes:
Glory grows guilty of detested crimes,
When for Fames sake, to praise an outward part,
We bend to that, the working of the heart.
As I for praise alone now seek to spill
The poor Dears bloud, that my heart means no ill.
Boy. Doe not curst wives hold that self-soveraignty
Onely for praise sake, when they strive to be
Lords o're their Lords?
Prin. Onely for praise, and praise we may afford,
To any Lady that subdues a Lord.

Enter Clown.

Boy. Here comes a member of the common-wealth.
Clo. God dig-you-den all, pray you which is the head Lady?
Prin. Thou shalt know her, fellow, by the rest that have no heads.
Clo. Which is the greatest Lady, the highest?
Prin. The thickest, and the tallest.
Clo. The thickest, and the tallest: it is so, truth is truth.
And your waste Mistris, were as slender as my wit,
One a these maids girdles for your waste should be fit.
Are not you the chief woman? You are the thickest here.
Prin. What's your will sir? What's your will?
Clow. I have a Letter from Monsieur Birone,
To one Lady Rosaline,
Prin. O thy letter, thy letter: He's a good friend of mine.
Stand aside good bearer. Boyet, you can carve,
Break up this Capon.
Boy. I am bound to serve.
This Letter is mistook: it importeth none here:
It is writ to Jaquenetta.
Prin. We will read it, I swear.
Break the neck of the Wax, and every one give ear.

Boyet reads.

BY heaven, that thou art fair, is most infallible: true that thou art beateous: truth it self that thou art lovely: more fairer then fair, beautifull then beautious, truer then truth it self: have comiseration on thy heroicall Vassall. The magnanimous and most illustrate King Cophetua set eye upon the pernicious and indubitate Begger Zenelophon: and he it was that might rightly say, Veni, vidi, vici: Which to Anatomize in the vulgar, O base and obscure vulgar; videlicet, He came, Saw, and overcame: he came one; see two; overcame three. Who came? the King. Why did he come? to see. Why did he see? to overcome. To whom came he? to the Begger. What saw he? the Begger. Who overcame he? the Begger. The conclusion is victory: On whose side? the Kings: the captive is inrich'd: On whose side? the Beggers. The catastrophe is a Nuptiall: On whose side? the Kings: no, on both in one, or one in both. I am the King (for so stands the comparison) thou the Begger, for so witnesseth thy lowlines. Shall I command thy love? I may. Shall I enforce thy love? I could. Shall I intreat thy love? I will. What, shalt thou exchange for rags? roabs: for tittles? titles: for thy selfe? me. Thus expecting thy reply, I prophane my lips on thy foot, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy every part.

Thine in the dearest designe of industry,

Don Adriana de Armado.

Thus dost thou hear the Nemean Lion roar,
Gainst thee thou Lamb, that standest as his prey:
Submissive fall his princely feet before,
And he from forrage will incline to play.
But if thou strive (poor soul) what art thou then?
Food for his rage, repasture for his den.

Prin. What plume of feather is he that indited this Letter? What vain? What Weathercock? Did you ever hear better?
Boy. I am much deceived, but I remember the stile.
Prin. Else your memory is bad, going o're it ere while.
Boy. This Armado is a Spaniard that keeps here in court;
A Phantasme, a Monarcho, and one that makes sport
To the Prince and his Book-mates.
Prin. Thou fellow, a word.
Who gave thee this Letter?
Clo. I told you, my Lord.
Prin. To whom should'st thou give it?
Clow. From my Lord to my Lady.
Prin. From which Lord, to which Lady?
Clow. From my Lord Berown, a good master of mine,
To a Lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.
Prin. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come Lords away.
Here sweet, put up this, 'twill be thine another day.
Exeunt.
Boy. Who is the shooter? who is the shooter?
Rosa. Shall I teach you to know.
Boy. I my continent of beauty.
Rosa. Why she that bears the Bow. Finely put off.
Boy. My Lady goes to kill hornes, but if thou marry,
Hang me by the neck, if horns taht year miscarry.
Finely put on.
Rosa. Well then, I am the shooter.
Boy. And who is your Dear?
Rosa. If we choose by horns, your self come not near.
Finely put on indeed.
Mari. You still wrangle with her Boyet, and she strikes at the brow.
Boy. But she her self is hit lower:
Have I hit her now.
Rosa. Shall I come upon thee with an old saying, that was a man when King Pippin of France was a little boy, as touching the hit it.
Boy. So I may answer thee with one as old, that was a woman when Queen Guinover of Brittain was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Rosa.

Rosa. Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou canst not hit it my good man.
Boy. I cannot, cannot, cannot:
And I cannot, another can. Exit.
Clo. By my troth most pleasant, how both did fit it.
Mar. A mark marvellous well shot, for they both did hit.
Boy. A mark, O mark but that mark: a mark sayes my Lady.
Let the mark have a prick in't, to meat at, if it may be.
Mar. Wide a'th bow hand, ifaith your hand is out.
Clo. Indeed a'must shoot nearer, or hee'l ne're hit the clout.
Boy. And if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.
Clo. Then will she get the upshoot by cleaving the Pin
Mar. Come, come, you talk greasily, your lips grow foule.
Clo. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir, challenge her to boule.
Boy. I fear too much rubbing: good night my good Owle.
Clo. By my soul a Swain, a most simple Clown.
Lord, Lord! how the Ladies and I have put him down.
O my troth most sweet jests, most incony vulgar wit,
When it comes io smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were, so fit.
Armado ath to side, O a most dainty man.
To see him walk before a Lady, and to bear her Fan.
To see him kiss his hand, and how most sweetly a will swear:
And his Page at other side, that handfull of wit,
Ah heavens, it is a most patheticall nit,
Sowla, Sowla. Exeunt.

Showt within.

Enter Dull. Holofernes, the Pedant, and Nathaniel.

Nath. Very reverent sport truely, and done in the testimony of a good conscience.
Ped. The Dear was (as you know) sanguis in bloud, ripe as a Pomwater, who now hangeth like a Jewell in the ear of Cælo the sky: the welken the heaven, and anon falleth like a Crab on the face of Terra, the soyle, the land, the earth.
Curat. Nath. Truly Master Holofernes, the epythites are sweetly varied like a scholler at the least: but sir I assure ye, it was a Buck of the first head.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.
Dul. 'Twas not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket.
Hol. Most barbarous intimation: yet a kind of insinuation, as it were invia, in way of explication facere: as it were replication, or rather ostentare, to show as it were his inclination after his undressed, unpolished, uneducated, unpruned, untrained, or rather unlettered, or ratherest unconfirmed fashion, to insert again my haud credo for a Deer.
Dul. I said the Deer was not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket.
Hol. Twice sod simplicity, bis coctus; O thou monster ignorance, how deformed doest thou look?
Nath. Sir he hath never fed on the dainties that are bred in a book.
He hath not eat paper as it were:
He hath not drunk ink.
His intellect is not replenished, he is onely an animal, onely sensible in the duller parts: and such barren plants are set before us, that we thankfull should be: which we taste and feeling, are for those parts that do fructifie in us more then he.
For as it would ill become me to be vain, indiscreet, or a foole;
So were there a patch set on Learning, to see him in a Schoole.
But omne bene say I, being of an old Fathers minde,
Many can brook the weather, that love not the wind.
Dul. You two are book-men: Can you tell by your wit, What was a month old at Cains birth, that's not five weeks old as yet?
Hol. Dictissima goodman Dull, Dictissima goodman Dull.
Dull. What is dictinna?
Nath. A title to Phebe, to Luna, to the Moon.
Hol. The Moon was a month old when Adam was no more. (score.
And wrought not to five-weeks when he came to five-
Th'allusion holds in the Exchange.
Dul. 'Tis true indeed, the Collusion holds in the Exchange.
Hol. God comfort thy capacity, I say th'allusion holds in the Exchange.
Dul. And I say the pollusion holds in the Exchange: for the Moon is never but a month old: and I say beside that, 'twas a Pricket that the Princess kild.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you hear an extemporall Epitaph on the death of the Dear, and to humour the ignorant call'd the Dear, the Princesse kill'd a Pricket.
Nath. Perge good Master Holofernes, perge, so it shall please you to abrogate scurrility.
Hol. I will something effect the letter, for it argues facility.

The praisfull Princeß pearst and prickt
a pretty pleasing Pricket,
Some say a Sore, but not a sore,
till now made sore with shooting.
The Dogs did yell, put ell to Sore,
then Sorell jumps from thicket:
Or Pricket-sore, or else Sorell,
the people fall a hooting.
If Sore be sore, then ell to Sore,
makes fifty sores O sorell:
Of one sore I an hundred make by adding but one more L.

Nath. A rare talent.
Dul. If a talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent.
Nath. This is a gift that I have simple: simple, a foolish extravagant spirit, full of formes, figures, shapes, objects, Ideas, apprehensions, motions, revolutions. These are begot in the ventricle of memory, nourisht in the wombe of primater, and delivered upon the mellowing of occasion: but the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankfull for it.
Hol. Sir, I praise the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners, for their Sonns are well tutor'd by you, and their Daughters profit very greatly under you: you are a good member of the commion-wealth.
Nath. Me hercule, If their Sonns be ingenuous, they shall shall want no instruction: If their Daughters be capable, I will put it to them. But Vir sapit qui pauca loquitur, a soul Feminine saluteth us.

Enter Jaquenetta and the Clown.

Jaque. God give you good morrow Master Parson.

Nath. Master Parson, quasi persone? And if one should be pierst, Which is the one?

Clo. Marry Master Schoolmaster, he that is likest to a hogshead.

Nath. Of persing a Hogshead, a good cluster of conceit in a tuph of Earth, fire enough for a Flint, Pearle enough for a Swine: 'tis pretty, it is well.

Jaqu. Good Master Parson be so good as read me this Letter, it was given me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armatho: I beseech you read it.

Nath. Fauste precor gelida, quando, pecus omne sub umbra, ruminat, and so forth. Ah good old Mantuan, I may speak of thee as the traveller doth of Venice, Venechi, venache a, qui non te vide, i non te piaech. Old Mantuan, old Mantuan. Who understandeth thee not, ut re sol la mi fa. Under pardon sir, What are the contents? or rather as Horace saies in his, What! my soul verses.

Hol. I sir, and very learned.

Nath. Let me hear a staffe, a stanza, a verse, Lege domine.

If Love make me forsworn, how shall I swear to love?
Ah, never faith could hold, if not to beautie vowed.
Though to my selfe forsworn, to thee I'le faithfull prove.
Those thoughts to me were Okes, to thee like Osiers bowed.
Study his byas leaves, and makes his book thine eyes.
Where all those pleasures live, that art would comprehend.
If knowledge be the mark, to know thee shall suffice,
Well learned is that tongue, that well can thee commend.
All ignorant that soul, that sees thee without wonder.
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire;
Thy eye Joves lightning bears, thy voyce his dreadfull thunder.
Which not to anger bent, is musick, and sweet fire.
Celestiall as thou art, Oh pardon love this wrong,
That sings heavens praise, with such an earthly tongue.

Pedro. You find not the apostraphes, and so miss the accent. Let me supervise the cangenet.

Nath. Here are onely numbers ratified, but for the elegancy, facility, and golden cadence of poesie caret: Ovidius Naso was the man. And why indeed Naso, but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy? the jerks of invention imitaty is nothing: So doth the Hound his master, the Ape his keeper, the tyred Horse his rider: But Damosella Virgin, Was this directed to you?

Jaque. I sir, from one Mounsieur Birone, one of the strange Queens Lords.

Nath. I will overglance the superscript.
To the snow-white hand of the most beautious Lady, Rosaline. I will look again on the intellect of the Letter, for the nomination of the party written to the person written unto.
Your Ladiships in all desired employment, Birone.

Per. Sir Holofernes, this Berown is one of the Votaries with the King, and here he hath framed a Letter to a sequent of the stranger Queens: which accidentally, or by the way of progression, hath miscarried. Trip and goe my sweet, deliver this Paper into the hand of the King, it may concern much: stay not thy complement, I forgive thy duty, adieu.

Maid. Good Costard goe with me;
Sir God save your life.

Cost. Have with thee my girle. Exit.

Hol. Sir you have done this in the fear of God very religiously: and as a certain father saith------.

Ped. Sir, tell not me of the father, I doe fear colourable colours. But to return to the Verses, did they please you Sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marvellous well for the pen.

Peda. I doe dine to day at the fathers of a certain Pupill of mine, where if (being repast) it shall please you to gratifie the table with a grace, I will on my priviledge I have with the parents of the foresaid Child and Pupill, undertake your bien venuto, where I will prove those Verses to be very unlearned, neither savouring of Poetry, Wit or Invention. I beseech your Society.

Nath. And thank you too: for society (saith the text) is the happiness of life.

Peda. And certes the text most infallibly concludes it. Sir I doe invite you too, you shall not say me nay: pauca verba.
Away, the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation.

Exeunt.

Enter Birone with a Paper in his hand, alone.

Biro. The King he is hunting the Dear,
I am coursing my self.
They have pitcht a Toyle, I am toyling in a pitch, pitch that defiles; defile, a foul word: Well, set thee down sorrow; for so they say the fool said, and so say I, and I thee fool: Well proved wit. By the Lord this Love is as mad as Ajax, it kills sheep, it kills me, I a sheep: Well proved again a my side. I will not love, if I doe, hang me: ifaith I will not. O but her eye: by this light, but for her eye, I would not love her; yes, for her to her eyes. Well, I doe nothing in the world but lye and lye in my throat. By heaven I doe love, and it hath taught me to Rime, and to be mallicholly: and here is part of my Rime, and here my mallicholly. Well, she hath one a'my Sonnets already, the Clown bore it, the Foole sent it, and the Lady hath it: sweet Clown, sweeter Foole, sweetest Lady. By the world, I would not care a pin, if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper, God give him grace to groan.

He stands aside. The King entreth.

King. Ay me.

Bir. Shot by heaven: proceed sweet Cupid, thou hast thumpt him with thy Birdbolt under the left pap: in faith secrets.

King. So sweet a kiss the golden Sun gives not,
To those fresh morning drops upon the Rose,
As thy eye beams when their fresh Rayes have smot
The night of dew that on my cheeks down flows.
Nor shines the silver Moon one halfe so bright,
Through the transparent bosome of the deep,
As doth thy face through tears of mine give light:
Thou shin'st in every tear that I doe weep,
No drop, but as a Coach doth carry thee,
So rid'st thou triumphing in my woe.
Doe but behold the tears that swell in me,
And they thy glory through my grief will shew:

But

But doe not love thy self, then thou wilt keep
My tears for glasses, and still make me weep.
O Queen of Queens, how far dost thou excell,
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortall tell.
How shall she know my griefs? I'le drop the paper.
Sweet leaves shade folly. Who is he comes here?

Enter Longavile. The King steps aside.

What! Longavile! and reading: listen ear.
Bir. Now in thy likenesse one more fool appears.
Long. Ay me, I am forsworn.
Bir. Why he comes in like a perjur'd, wearing papers.
Long. In love I hope, sweet fellowship in shame.
Bir. One drunkard loves another of the name.
Lon. Am I the first that have been perjur'd so? (know,
Bir. I could put thee in comfort: not by two, that I
Thou makest the triumphry, the corner cap of society,
The shape of Loves Tiburn, that hangs up simplicity.
Lon. I fear these stubborn lines lack power to move.
O sweet Maria, Empresse of my love,
These numbers will I tear, and write in prose.
Bir. O! Rimes are guards on wanton Cupids hose,
Disfigure not his Shop.
Lon. This same shall go. He reads the Sonnet.

Did not the heavenly Rhetorick of thine eye,
'Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument,
Perswade my heart to this false perjury?
Vows for thee broke deserve not punishment.
A Woman I forswore, but I will prove,
Thou being a Goddesse, I forswore not thee.
My Vow was earthy, thou a heavenly Love.
Thy grace being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.
Vowes are but breath, and breath a vapour is,
Then thou fair Sun, which on my earth doest shine,
Exhal'st this vapour-vow, in thee it is:
If broken then, it is no fault of mine:
If by me broke, what fool is not so wise,
To loose an oath, to win a Paradise?

Bir. This is the liver vein, which makes flesh a deity.
A green Goose, a Goddesse, pure, pure Idolatry.
God amend us, God amend, we are much out o'th' way.

Enter Dumaine.

Lon. By whom shall I send this! (Company?) Stay.
Bir. All hid, all hid, an old infant play,
Like a demy God, here sit I in the sky,
And wretched fools secrets heedfully o're eye.
More Sacks to th' Mill! O heavens I have my wish,
Dumain transform'd; four Woodcocks in a dish.
Dum. O most divine Kate.
Biro. O most prophane coxcombe.
Dum. By heaven the wonder of a mortall eye.
Bir. By earth she is not: corporall, there you lye.
Dum. Her Amber hairs for fowl hath Amber coted.
Bir. An Amber coloured Raven was well noted.
Dum. As upright as the Cedar.
Bir. Stoop I say, her shoulder is with child.
Dum. As fair as day.
Bir. I as some dayes, but then no sun must shine.
Dum. O that I had my wish?
Long. And I had mine.
Kin. And mine too, good Lord.
Bir. Amen, so I had mine. Is not that a good word?
Dum. I would forget her, but a Feaver she
Raigns in my bloud, and will remembred be.
Bir. A Feaver in your bloud! why then incision
Would let her out in Sawcers, sweet misprision.
Dum. Once more I'le read the Ode that I have writ.
Bir. Once more I'le mark how Love can vary Wit.

Dumain reads his Sonnet.

On a day, alack the day:
Love, whose Month is every May,
Spi'd a blossome passing fair,
Playing in the wanton aire:
Through the Velvet, leavs the wind,
All unseen, can passage find.
That the Lover sick to death,
Wish'd himself the heavens breath.
Aire (quoth he) thy cheeks to blow,
Aire, would I might triumph so.
But alack, my hand is sworn,
Ne're to pluck thee from thy throne:
Vow alack for youth unmeet,
Youth so apt to pluck a sweet.
Doe not call it sin in me,
That I am forsworn for thee.
Thou for whom Jove would swear,
Juno but an Æthiop were,
And deny himself for Jove,
Turning mortall for thy Love.

This will I send, and something else more plain,
That shall expresse my true-loves fasting pain,
O would the King, Birone, and Longavile,
Were Lovers too, ill to example ill,
Would from my fore-head wipe a perjur'd note:
For none offend, where all alike doe dote.
Lon. Dumain, thy Love is far from charity,
That in Loves grief desir'st society:
You may look pale, but I should blush I know,
To be o're-heard, and taken napping so.
King. Come sir, you blush: as his, your case is such,
You chide at him, offending twice as much.
You doe not love Maria, Longavile,
Did never Sonnet for her sake compile;
Nor never lay his wreathed armes athwart
His loving bosome, to keep down his heart.
I had been closely shrowded in this bush.
And markt you both, and for you both did blush.
I heard your guilty Rimes, observ'd your fashion;
Saw sighs reek from you, noted well your passion.
Ay me, sayes one! O Jove, the other cries!
Her hairs were Gold, Cristall the others eyes.
You would for Paradise break faith and troth,
And Jove for your Love would infringe an oath.
What will Birone say when that he shall hear
A faith infringed, which such zeal did swear.
How will he scorn? how will he spend his wit?
How will he triumph, leap, and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that ever I did see,
I would not have him know so much by me.
Bir. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisie.
Ah good my Liege, I pray thee pardon me.
Good heart, What grace hast thou thus to reprove
These wormes for loving, that are most in love?
Your eyes doe make no couches in your tears,
There is no certain Princesse that appears.
You'll not be perjur'd, 'tis a hatefull thing:
Tush, none but Minstrells like of Sonnetting.
But are you not asham'd? nay, are you not

All three of you, to be thus much o're ſhot?
You found his Moth, the King your Moth did ſee:
But I a Beam doe find in each of three.
O what a Scene of fool'ry have I ſeen,
Of ſighs, of groans, of ſorrow, and of teen:
O me, with what ſtrict patience have I ſat,
To ſee a King transformed to a Gnat?
To ſee great Hercules whipping a Gigge,
And profound Solomon tuning a Jygge?
And Neſtor play at puſh-pin with the Boyes,
And Critick Tymon laugh at idle toyes.
Where lies thy grief? O tell me good Dumain.
And gentle Longaville, where lies thy pain?
And where my Lieges? all about the breaſt.
A Candle hoa!

Kin. Too bitter is thy jeſt,
Are we betrayed thus to thy over-view?

Bir. Not you by me, but I betrayed to you.
I that am honeſt. I that hold it ſin
To break the vow I am engaged in:
I am betray'd by keeping company
With men, like men of ſtrange inconſtancy.
When ſhall you ſee me write a thing in rime?
Or groan for Joan? or ſpend a minutes time,
In pruning me? when ſhall you hear that I will praiſe a hand, a foot, a face, an eye: a gate, a ſtate, a brow, a breaſt, a waſte, a legge, a limme.

Kin. Soft, whither away ſo faſt?
A true man, or a thief, that gallops ſo.

Bir. I poſt from Love, good Lover let me go.

Enter Jaquenetta, and Clown.

Jaque. God bleſſe the King.

Kin. What Preſent haſt thou there?

Clo. Some certain treaſon.

Kin. What makes treaſon here?

Clo. Nay it makes nothing ſir.

Kin. If it marre nothing neither,
The treaſon and you go in peace together.

Jaque. I beſeech your Grace let this Letter be read,
Our perſon miſdoubts it: it was treaſon he ſaid.

Kin. Birone, read it over. He reads the Letter.
Where hadſt thou it.

Jaque. Of Coſtard.

Kin. Where hadſt thou it?

Coſt. Of Don Adramadio, Don Adramadio.

Kin. How now, what mean you? why doſt thou tear it?

Bir. A toy my Liege, a toy: your grace needs not fear it.

Long. It did move him to paſſion, and therefore let's hear it.

Dum. It is Birones writing, and here is his name.

Bir. Ah you whoreſon loggerhead, you were born to doe me ſhame.

Bir. Guilty my Lord, guilty: I confeſſe, I confeſſe.

King. What?

Bir. That you three fools lackt me fool, to make up the meſſe.
He, he, and you: and you my Liege, and I,
Are pick-purſes in Love, and we deſerve to dye.
O diſmiſſe this audience, and I ſhall tell you more.

Dum. Now the number is even.

Bir. True, true, we are four: will theſe Turtles be gone?

Kin. Hence ſirs, away. Exit.

Clo. Walk aſide the true folk, and let the traytors ſtay.

Bir. Sweet Lords, ſweet Lovers, O let us embrace:
As true we are as fleſh and bloud can be.
The Sea will ebbe and flow, heaven will ſhew his face:
Young bloud doth not obey an old decree.
We cannot croſſe the cauſe why we were born:
Therefore of all hands muſt we be forſworn.

King. What did theſe rent lines ſhew ſome love of thine? (Roſaline,

Bir. Did they, quoth you? Who ſees the heavenly
That (like a rude and ſavage man of Inde.)
At the firſt opening of the gorgeous Eaſt,
Bowes not his vaſſall head, and ſtrooken blind,
Kiſſes the baſe ground with obedient breaſt?
What peremptory Eagle-ſighted eye
Dares look upon the heaven of her brow,
That is not blinded by her Majeſty?

Kin. What zeal, what fury hath inſpir'd thee now?
My Love (her Miſtris) is a gracious Moon,
She (an attending Starre) ſcarce ſeen a light.

Bir. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Birone.
O, but for my Love, day would turn to night,
Of all complexions the cul'd ſoveraignty,
Doe meet as at a Fair in her fair cheek,
Where ſeverall Worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants, that want it ſelf doth ſeek.
Lend me the flouriſh of all gentle tongues,
Fie painted Rhetorick, O ſhe needs it not,
To things of ſale, a ſellers praiſe belongs:
She paſſes praiſe, then praiſe too ſhort doth blot.
A withered Hermite, five ſcore winters worn,
Might ſhake off fifty, looking in her eye:
Beauty doth varniſh Age, as if new born,
And gives the Crutch the Cradles infancy.
O 'tis the Sun that maketh all things ſhine.

Kin. By heaven, thy Love is black as Ebony.

Bir. Is Ebony like her? O word divine?
A Wife of ſuch Wood were felicity.
O who can give an oath? where is a book?
That I may ſwear beauty doth beauty lack,
If that ſhe learn not of her eye to look:
No face is fair that is not full ſo black.

Kin. O paradoxe, black as the badge of hell,
The hue of Dungeons, and the School of Night:
And beauties creſt becomes the heavens well.

Bir. Devils ſooneſt tempt reſembling ſpirits of light.
O, if in black my Ladies browes be deckt,
It mourns, that painting an uſurping hair
Should raviſh doters with a falſe aſpect:
And therefore is ſhe born to make black fair.
Her favour turns the faſhion of the dayes,
For native blood is counted painting now:
And therefore red that would avoid diſpraiſe,
Paints it ſelf black, to imitate her brow.

Dum. To look like her are Chimney-ſweepers black.

Lon. And ſince her time, are Colliers counted bright.

King. And Æthiops of their ſweet complexion crack.

Dum. Dark needs no Candles now, for dark is light.

Bir. Your Miſtreſſes dare never come in rain,
For fear their Colours ſhould be waſht away.

Kin. 'Twere good yours did: for ſir to tell you plain,
I'le find a fairer face not waſht to day.

Bir. I'le prove her fair, or talk till dooms-day here.

Kin. No Devil will fright thee then ſo much as ſhe.

Dum. I never knew man hold vile ſtuffe ſo dear.

Lon. Look, here's thy love, my foot and her face ſee.

Bir. O if the ſtreets were paved with thine eyes,

Her

Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.
Dum. O vile, then as she goes what upward lyes?
The street should see as she walk'd over head.
Kin. But what of this, are we not all in love?
Bir. Nothing so sure, and thereby all forsworn.
Kin. Then leave this chat, and good Birone now prove
Our loving lawfull, and our faith not torn.
Dum. I marry there, some flattery for this evill.
Long. O some authority how to proceed,
Some tricks, some quillets, how to cheat the devill.
Dum. Some salve for perjury.
Bir. O 'tis more then need.
Have at you then affections, men at armes,
Consider what you first did swear unto:
To fast, to study, and to see no woman:
Flat treason 'gainst the Kingly state of youth.
Say, Can you fast? your stomacks are too young:
And abstinence ingenders maladies.
And where that you have vow'd to study (Lords)
In that each of you have forsworn his Book.
Can you still dream and pore, and thereon look?
For when would you, my Lord, or you,
Have found the ground of studies excellence,
Without the beauty of a womans face;
From womens eyes this Doctrine I derive,
They are the Ground, the Books, the Academs,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.
Why, universall plodding, poysons up
The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion and long action tires
The sinnowy vigour of the traveller.
Now for not looking on a womans face,
You have in that forsworn the use of eyes:
And study too, the causer of your vow.
For where is any Author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a womans eye:
Learning is but an adjunct to our self,
And where we are, our learning likewise is.
Then when our selves we see in Ladies eyes,
Doe we not likewise see our learning there?
O, we have made a Vow to study, Lords,
And in that vow we have forsworn our Books:
For when would you (my Liege) or you, or you?
In Leaden contemplation have found out
Such fiery Numbers as the prompting eyes
Of beauties tutors have inrich'd you with:
Other slow Arts intirely keep the brain:
And therefore finding barren practizers,
Scarce shew a harvest of their heavy toyle.
But Love first learned in a Ladies eyes,
Lives not alone immured in the brain:
But with the motion of all elements,
Courses as swift as thought in every power,
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious seeing to the eye:
A Lovers eyes will gaze an Eagle blind.
A Lovers ear will hear the lowest sound.
When the suspicious head of theft is stopt,
Loves feeling is more soft and sensible,
Then are the tender horns of Cockled Snayles.
Loves tongue proves dainty Bacchus, gross in taste,
For Valour, is not Love a Hercules?
Still climing trees in the Hesperides.
Subtill as a Sphinx, as sweet and musicall,
As bright Apollo's Lute, strung with his hair.
And when Love speaks, the voyce of all the gods,
Make heaven drowsie with the harmony.
Never durst Poet touch a pen to write,
Untill his Ink were tempred with Loves sighes:
O then his lines would ravish savage ears;
And plant in Tyrants milde humility,
From womens eyes this doctrine I derive:
They sparkle still the right Promethean fire,
They are the Books, the Arts, the Academes,
That shew, contain, and nourish all the world:
Else none at all in ought proves excellent:
Then fools you were these women to forswear:
Or keeping what is sworn, you will prove fools.
For wisdoms sake, (a word that all men love)
Or for Loves sake, a word that loves all men:
Or for Mens sake, the author of these Women:
Or Womens sake, by whom we men are men,
Let us once loose our oaths, to find our selves,
Or else we loose our selves, to keep our oaths:
It is religion to be thus forsworn,
For Charity it self fulfills the Law;
And who can sever love from Charity?
Kin. Saint Cupid then, and Souldiers to the field.
Bir. Advance your standards, and upon them Lords:
Pell, mell, down with them: but be first advis'd,
In conflict that you get the Sun of them.
Lon. Now to plain dealing, Lay these glozes by,
Shall we resolve to woe these girls of France?
Kin. And win them too; therefore let us devise,
Some entertainment for them at their Tents.
Bir. First from the Park let us conduct them thither,
Then homeward every man attach the hand
Of his fair Mistress: in the afternoon
We will with some strange pastime solace them:
Such as the shortness of the time can shape,
For Revels, Dances, Masks, and merry hours,
Fore-run fair Love, strewing her way with flowers.
Kin. Away, away, no time shall be omitted,
That will be time, and may by us be fitted.
Bir. Alone, alone sowed Cockell, reap'd no Corn,
And Justice alwayes whirls in equall measure:
Light Wenches may prove plagues to men forsworn,
If so, our Copper buyes no better treasure.

Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Pedant, Curate, and Dull.

Ped. Satis quid sufficit.
Cur. I praise god for you sir, your reasons at dinner have been sharp and sententious: pleasant without scurrillity, witty without affectation, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresie: I did converse this quondam day with a companion of the Kings, who is intituled, nominated or called, Don Adriano de Armatho.
Ped. Novi hominem tanquam te. His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory; his tongue filed, his eye ambitious; his gate majesticall, and his generall behaviour vain, ridiculous, and thrasonicall. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odde, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it.

Curat. A most singular and choise Epithet,
Draw's out his Table book.

Ped. He draweth out the thred of his verbosity, finer then the staple of his argument. I abhor such phanaticall phantasims, such insociable and point devise companions, such rackers of ortagraphy, as to speak dout fine, when he should say doubt; det, when he should pronounce debt; d e b t, not det: he clepeth a Calfe, Cause: halfe, hause: neighbour vocatur nebour; neigh abreviated ne: this is abhominable, which we would call abominable: it insinuateth me of infamy: ne intelligis domine, to make frantick, lunatick?

Cura. Laus deo, bene intelligo.

Peda. Bome boon for boon prescian, a little scarch, 'twill serve.

Enter Braggart, Boy.

Curat. Vides-ne quis venit?

Peda. Video, & gaudeo.

Brag. Chirra.

Peda. Quare Chirra, not Sirra?

Brag. Men of peace well incountred.

Peda. Most military sir, salutation.

Boy. They have been at a great feast of Languages, and stole the scraps.

Clow. O they have liv'd long on the almes-basket of words. I marvell thy Master hath not eaten thee for a word, for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus: Thou art easier swallowed then a flap-dragon.

Brag. Monsieur, are you not lettered?

Page. Yes, yes, he teaches boyes the Horn-book: What is Ab speld backward with the horne on his head?

Peda. Ba, pueritia with a horn added.

Pag. Ba most silly Sheep, with a horn: you hear his learning.

Ped. Quis quis, thou Consonant?

Pag. The last of the five Vowels, if You repeat them, or the fifth if I.

Ped. I will repeat them: a e I.

Pag. The Sheep, the other two concludes it o u.

Brag. Now by the salt wave of the mediteraneum, a sweet tutch, a quick venew of wit, snip snap, quick and home, it rejoyceth my intellect, true wit.

Ped. What is the figure? What is the figure?

Page. Hornes.

Ped. Thou disputes't like an Infant: goe, whip thy Gigge.

Pag. Lend me your Horn to make one, and I will whip about your infamy unum cita a gigge of a Cuckolds horne.

Clown. And I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst have it to buy Ginger-bread: Hold, there is the very Remuneration I had of thy master, thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou Pidgeon-egge of discretion. O, and the heavens were so pleased, that thou wert but my Bastard; What a joyfull father wouldst thou make me? Goe to, thou hast it ad dungil, at the fingers ends, as they say.

Ped. Oh, I smell false Latine, dunghel for ungnem.

Brag. Artf-man preambulat, we will be singled from the barbarous. Doe you not educate youth at the Charge-house on the top of the Mountain?

Ped. Or Mons the hill.

Brag. At your sweet pleasure, for the Mountain.

Ped. I doe sans question.

Brag. Sir, it is the Kings most sweet pleasure and affection, to congratulate the Princesse at her Pavilion, in the posteriors of this day, which the rude multitude call the after-noon.

Ped. The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the after-noon: the word is well culd, choice, sweet, and apt I doe assure you sir, I do assure.

Brag. Sir, the King is a noble Gentleman, and my familiar, I doe assure ye very good friend: for what is inward between us, let it passe. I doe beseech thee, remember thy curtesie. I beseech thee apparell thy head: and among other importunate and most serious designes, and of great import indeed too: but let that passe, for I must tell thee it will please his Grace (by the world) sometime to lean upon my poor shoulder, and with his royal finger thus dally with my excrement, with my mustachio; but, sweet heart, let that passe. By the world I recount no fable, some certain special honours it pleaseth his Greatnesse to impart to Armado a Souldier, a man of travell, that hath seen the world: but let that passe; the very all of all is: but, sweet heart, I doe implore secrecy, that the King would have me present the Princesse (sweet chuck) with some delightfull ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antick, or fire-work: Now, understanding that the Curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and sodain breaking out of mirth (as it were) I have acquainted you withall, to the end to crave your assistance.

Ped. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies. Sir Holofernes, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to be rendred by our assistants at the Kings command: and this most gallant, illustrate and learned Gentleman, before the Princesse: I say none so fit as to present the Nine Worthies.

Curat. Where will you find men worthy enough to present them?

Ped. Josua, your self: my self, and this gallant gentleman Judas Machabeus, this Swain (because of his great limme or joint) shall passe Pompey the great, the Page Hercules.

Brag. Pardon sir, error: he is not quantity enough for that Worthies thumb, he is not so big as the end of his Club.

Peda. Shall I have audience? he shall present Hercules in minority: his enter and exit shall be strangling a Snake; and I will have an Apology for that purpose.

Pag. An excellent device: so if any of the audience hiss, you may cry, Well done Hercules, now thou crushest the Snake; that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few have the grace to do it.

Brag. For the rest of the Worthies?

Ped. I will play three my self.

Pag. Thrice worthy Gentleman.

Brag. Shall I tell you a thing?

Ped. We attend.

Brag. We will have, if this fadge not, an Antique. I beseech you follow.

Ped. Via good-man Dull, thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor understood none neither sir.

Ped. Alone, we will employ thee.

Dull. Ile make one in a dance, or so: or will play on on the taber to the Worthies, and let them dance the hey.

Ped. Moſt Dull, honeſt Dull, to our ſport away. Exit.

Enter Princeſs, and Ladies.

Prin. Sweet hearts, we ſhall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in.
A Lady wal'd about with Diamonds: look you, what I have from the King.
Roſa. Madam, came nothing elſe along with that?
Prin. Nothing but this: yes, as much love in Rime,
As would be cram'd up in a ſheet of paper,
Writ on both ſides the leaf, margent and all,
That he was fain to ſeal on Cupids name.
Roſa. That was the way to make his god-head wax,
For he hath been five thouſand years a boy.
Kath. I, and a ſhrewd unhappy gallows too.
Roſa. You'll ne're be friends with him, a kild your ſiſter.
Kath. He made her melancholly, ſad and heavy,
And ſo ſhe died: had ſhe been light like you,
Of ſuch a merry nimble ſtirring ſpirit,
She might have been a Grandam ere ſhe died.
And ſo may you: For a light heart lives long.
Roſa. What's your dark meaning mouſe of this light word?
Kath. A light condition in a beauty dark.
Roſa. We need more light to find your meaning out.
Kat. You'll mar the light by taking it in ſnuffe:
Therefore I'le darkly end the argument.
Roſ. Look what you doe, you doe it ſtill i'th dark.
Kat. So doe not you, for you are a light Wench.
Roſ. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.
Kat. You weigh me not, O that's you care not for me.
Roſ. Great reaſon: for paſt care, is ſtill paſt cure.
Prin. Well bandied both, a ſet of wit well played.
But Roſaline, you have a favour too?
Who ſent it? and what is it?
Roſ. I would you knew.
And if my face were but as fair as yours,
My favour were as great, be witneſs this.
Nay, I have Verſes too, I thank Birone,
The numbers true, and were the numbring too,
I were the faireſt goddeſs on the ground.
I am compar'd to twenty thouſand faires.
O he hath drawn my picture in his letter.
Prin. Any thing like?
Roſ. Much in the letters, nothing in the praiſe.
Prin. Beauteous as Ink: a good concluſion.
Kat. Fair as a text B. in a Copy book.
Roſ. Ware penſils. How? let me not die your debtor,
My red Dominicall, my golden letter.
O that your face were full of Oes.
Prin. A pox of that jeſt, and I beſhrew all ſhrows:
But Katharine, what was ſent to you
From fair Dumain?
Kath. Madam, this Glove.
Prin. Did he not ſend you twain?
Kath. Yes Madam: and moreover,
Some thouſand Verſes of a faithfull Lover.
A huge tranſlation of hypocriſie,
Vildly compil'd, profound ſimplicity.
Mar. This, and theſe Pearls, to me ſent Longavile.
The Letter is too long by halfe a mile.
Prin. I think no leſs: Doſt thou not wiſh in heart
The Chain were longer, and the Letter ſhort?
Mar. I, or I would theſe hands might never part.
Prin. We are wiſe girls, to mock our Lovers ſo.
Roſ. They are worſe fools to purchaſe mocking ſo.
That ſame Birone I'le torture ere I goe.
O that I knew he were but in by th'week,
How I would make him fawn, and beg, and ſeek,
And wait the ſeaſon, and obſerve the times,
And ſpend his prodigall wits in bootleſs rimes,
And ſhape his ſervice all to my beheſts,
And make him proud to make me proud with jeſts.
So pertaunt like would I o'reſway his ſtate,
That he ſhould be my fool, and I his fate.
Prin. None are ſo ſurely caught, when they are catch'd,
As wit turn'd fool: folly in wiſdom hatch'd,
Hath wiſdoms warrant, and the help of School,
And wits own grace to grace a learned Fool?
Roſ. The bloud of youth burns not in ſuch exceſs,
As gravities revolt to wantonneſs.
Mar. Folly in fools bears not ſo ſtrange a note,
As fool'ry in the Wiſe, when wit doth dote:
Since all the power thereof it doth apply,
To prove by Wit, worth in ſimplicity.

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Here comes Boyet, and mirth in his face.
Boy. O, I am ſtab'd with laughter, Where's her Grace?
Prin. Thy news Boyet?
Boy. Prepare Madam, prepare.
Arme Wenches arme, incounters mounted are
Againſt your Peace, Love doth approach, diſguis'd:
Armed in arguments, you'll be ſurpris'd.
Muſter your Wits, ſtand in your own defence,
Or hide your heads like Cowards, and flye hence.
Prin. Saint Dennis, to S. Cupid: What are they
That chargeth their breath againſt us? Say ſcout, ſay.
Boy. Under the coole ſhade of a Syccamore,
I thought to cloſe mine eyes ſome halfe an houre:
When loe to interrupt my purpos'd reſt,
Toward that ſhade I might behold addreſt
The King and his companions: warily
I ſtole into a neighbour thicket by,
And over-heard, what you ſhall over-hear:
That by and by diſguis'd they will be here.
Their Herald is a pretty knaviſh Page,
That well by heart hath con'd his embaſſage,
Action and accent did they teach him there.
Thus muſt thou ſpeak, and thus thy body bear.
And ever and anon they made a doubt,
Preſence majeſticall would put him out:
For, quoth the King, an Angell ſhalt thou ſee:
Yet fear not thou, but ſpeak audaciouſly.
The Boy reply'd, an Angell is not evill:
I ſhould have feard her, had ſhe been a devill.
With that all laugh'd, and clap'd him on the ſhoulder,
Making the bold wag by their praiſes bolder.
One rub'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd, and ſwore,
A better ſpeech was never ſpoke before.
Another with his finger, and his thumb,
Cry'd via, we will doo't, come what will come.
The third he caperd and cryed, All goes well.
The fourth turn'd on the toe, and down he fell:
With that they all did tumble on the ground,
With ſuch a zealous laughter, ſo profound,
That in this ſpleen ridiculous, appears,
To check their folly paſſions, ſolemn tears.
Prin. But what, but what, come they to viſit us?
Boy. They doe, they doe; and are apparel'd thus,
Like Muſcovites, or Ruſſians, and I gueſs,
Their purpoſe is to parlee, court, and dance,

And every one his Love-feat will advance
Unto his ſeveral Miſtreſſe: Which they'll know
By favours ſeveral, which they did beſtow.
Prin. And will they ſo? the Gallants ſhall be taskt:
For Ladies; we will every one be maskt:
And not a man of them ſhall have the grace
Deſpight of ſute, to ſee a Ladies face.
Hold Roſaline, this Favour thou ſhalt wear,
And then the King will court thee for his Dear:
Hold, take thou this my ſweet, and give me thine,
So ſhall Biron take me for Roſaline.
And change your Favours too, ſo ſhall your Loves
Wooe contrary, deceiv'd by theſe removes.
Roſ. Come on then, wear the favours moſt in ſight.
Kath. But in this changing, What is your intent?
Prin. The effect of my intent is to croſſe theirs:
They doe it but in mocking merriment,
And mock for mock is onely my intent.
Their ſeveral counſels they unboſome ſhall
To Loves miſtook, and ſo be mockt withall:
Upon the next occaſion that we meet
With Viſages diſplayed to talke and greet.
Roſ. But ſhall we dance, if they deſire us to 't?
Prin. No, to the death we will not move a foot,
Nor to their pen'd ſpeech render we no grace:
But while 'tis ſpoke, each turn away her face.
Boy. Why that contempt will kill the keepers heart,
And quite divorce his memory from his part.
Prin. Therefore I doe it, and I make no doubt,
The reſt will ne're come in, if he be out.
There's no ſuch ſport, as ſport by ſport orethrown:
To make theirs ours, and ours none but our own;
So ſhall we ſtay mocking entended game,
And they well mockt, depart away with ſhame. Sound.
Boy. The Trumpet ſounds, be maskt, the maskers come.

Enter Blackmoors with muſick, the Boy with a ſpeech, and the reſt of the Lords diſguiſed.

Pag. All haile, the richeſt Beauties on the earth.
Bir. Beauties no richer then rich Taffata.
Pag. A holy parcell of the faireſt dames that ever turn'd their backs to mortall viewes.
The Ladies turn their back to him.
Bir. Their eyes villain, their eyes.
Pag. That ever turn'd their eyes to mortall viewes. Out.
Bir. True, out indeed.
Pag. Out of your favours heavenly ſpirit, vouchſafe Not to behold.
Bir. Once to behold, rogue.
Pag. Once to behold with your Sunne beamed eyes, With your Sunne beamed eyes.
Bir. They will not anſwer to that Epithite,
You were beſt call it Daughter-beamed eyes.
Pag. They doe not mark me, and that brings me out.
Bir. Is this your perfectneſſe? be gone you rogue.
Roſ. What would theſe ſtrangers?
Know their minds Boyet.
If they do ſpeak our language, 'tis our will
That ſome plain man recount their purpoſes.
Know what they would?
Boy. What would you with the Princes?
Bir. Nothing but peace, and gentle viſitation.
Roſ. What would they, ſay they?
Boy. Nothing but peace, and gentle viſitation.
Roſ. Why that they have, and bid them ſo be gone.
Boy. She ſayes you have it, and you may be gone.
Kin. Say to her we haue meaſur'd many miles,
To tread a Meaſure with you on the graſſe.
Boy. They ſay that they have meaſur'd many a mile,
To tread a Meaſure with you on this graſſe.
Roſ. It is not ſo. Ask them how many inches
Is in one mile? If they have meaſur'd many,
The meaſure then of one is eaſily told.
Boy. If to come hither, you have meaſur'd miles,
And many miles: the Princeſſe bids you tell,
How many inches doth fill up one mile?
Bir. Tell her we meaſure them by weary ſteps.
Boy. She hears her ſelf.
Roſ. How many weary ſteps
Of many weary miles you have ore-gone,
Are numbred in the travell of one mile?
Bir. We number nothing that we ſpend for you,
Our duty is ſo rich, ſo infinite,
That we may doe it ſtill without accompt.
Vouchſafe to ſhew the ſunſhine of your face,
That we (like ſavages) may worſhip it.
Roſ. My face is but a Moon and clouded too.
Kin. Bleſſed are clouds, to doe as ſuch clouds doe.
Vouchſafe bright Moon on theſe thy ſtarres to ſhine,
(Thoſe clouds removed) upon our watery eyne,
Roſ. O vain petitioner, beg a greater matter,
Thou now requeſts but Moonſhine in the water,
Kin. Then in our meaſure, vouchſafe but one change:
Thou bidſt me beg, this begging is not ſtrange.
Roſ. Play muſick then: nay you muſt doe it ſoon.
Not yet no dance: thus change I like the Moon.
Kin. Will you not dance: How come you thus eſtranged?
Roſ. You took the Moon at full, but now ſhe's changed?
Kin. Yet ſtill ſhe is the Moon, and I the Man.
Roſ. The muſick playes, vouchſafe ſome motion to it:
Our eares vouchſafe it.
Kin. But your legges ſhould doe it.
Roſ. Since you are ſtrangers, and come here by chance,
We'll not be nice, take hands, we will not dance.
Kin. Why take you hands then?
Roſ. Onely to part friends.
Curtſie ſweet hearts, and ſo the Meaſure ends.
Kin. More meaſure of this meaſure; be not nice.
Roſ. We can afford no more at ſuch a price.
Kin. Priſe your ſelves then: what buyes your company?
Roſ. Your abſence onely.
Kin. That can never be.
Roſ. Then cannot we be bought: and ſo adieu,
Twice to your Viſor, and half once to you.
Kin. If you deny to dance, let's hold more chat.
Roſ. In private then.
Kin. I am beſt pleas'd with that.
Bir. White handed Miſtris, one ſweet word with thee.
Prin. Hony, and Milk, and Suger: there is three.
Bir. Nay then two treyes, and if you grow ſo nice
Methegline, Wort, and Malmſey; well run dice:
There's half a dozen ſweets.
Prin. Seventh ſweet adue, ſince you can cog.
Ile play no more with you.
Bir. One word in ſecret.
Prin. Let it not be ſweet.
Bir. Thou griev'ſt my gall.

Prin.

Prin. Gall, bitter.
Bir. Therefore meet.
Du. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?
Mar. Name it.
Dum. Faire Lady:
Mar. Say you so? Fair Lord;
Take you that for your fair Lady.
Dum. Please it you,
As much in private, and Ile bid adieu.
Mar. What, was your vizard made without a tongue?
Long. I know the reason Lady why you ask.
Mar. O for your reason, quickly sir, I long.
Long. You have a double tongue within your mask.
And would afford my speechlesse vizard half.
Mar. Veale quoth the Dutch-man: is not Veale a Calfe?
Long. A Calf fair Lady?
Mar. No, a fair Lord Calf.
Long. Let's part the word.
Mar. No, Ile not be your half:
Take all and wean it, it may prove an Oxe.
Long. Look how you But to your self in these sharp mocks.
Will you give horns chast Lady? Doe not so.
Mar. Then die a Calf before your hornes doe grow.
Long. One word in private with you ere I die.
Mar. Bleat softly then, the Butcher hears you cry.
Boy. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen
As is the Razors edge, invisible:
Cutting a smaller hair then may be seen,
Above the sense of sence so sensible:
Seemeth their conference, their conceits have wings,
Fleeter then arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things.
Ros. Not one word more my maids, break off, break off.
Bir. By heaven, all dry beaten with pure scoffe.
Kin. Fare-well madde Wenches, you have simple wits. Exeunt.
Prin. Twenty adieus my frozen Muscovites.
Are these the breed of wits so wondred at?
Boy. Tapers they are, with your sweet breath's puft out.
Ros. Well-liking wits they have, grosse, grosse, fat, fat.
Prin. O poverty in wit, Kingly poor flout.
Will they not (think you) hang themselves to night?
Or ever but in vizards shew their faces:
This pert Birone was out of count'nance quite.
Ros. O! They were all in lamentable cases.
The King was weeping ripe for a good word.
Prin. Birone did swear himself out of all suite.
Mar. Dumaine was at my service, and his sword:
No point (quoth I:) my servant straight was mute.
Kat. Lord Longavile said I came ore his heart:
And trow you what he call'd me?
Prin. Qualm perhaps.
Kat. Yes in good faith.
Prin. Goe sickness as thou art.
Ros. Well, better wits have worn plain statute caps,
But will you hear; the King is my love sworn.
Prin. And quick Birone hath plighted faith to me.
Kat. And Longavile was for my service born.
Mar. Dumaine is mine as sure as bark on tree.
Boy. Madam, and pretty mistresses give eare,
Immediately they will again be here
In their own shapes: for it can never be,
They will disgest this harsh indignity.
Prin. Will they return?
Boy. They will, they will, God knows,
And leap for joy, though they are lame with blowes:
Therefore change Favours, and when they repair,
Blow like sweet Roses, in this summer aire.
Prin. How blow? how blow? Speak to be understood.
Boy. Fair Ladies maskt, are Roses in their bud:
Dismaskt, their damaskt sweet commixture shown,
Are Angels vailing clouds, or Roses blown.
Prin. Avaunt perplexity: What shall we do,
If they return in their own shapes to wooe?
Ros. Good Madam, if by me you'll be advis'd,
Let's mock them still as well known as disguis'd:
Let us complain to them what fools were here,
Disguis'd like Muscovites in shapelesse gear:
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow shewes, and prologue vildely pen'd,
And their rough carriage so ridiculous,
Should be presented at our Tent to us.
Boy. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at hand.
Prin. Whip to our Tents, as Roes runs ore the Land. Exeunt.

Enter the King and the rest.

King. Fair sir, God save you. Where's the Princesse?
Boy. Gone to her Tent.
Please it your Majesty command me any service to her?
King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.
Boy. I will, and so will she, I know my Lord. Exit.
Bir. This fellow picks up wit as Pigeons pease,
And utters it again, when Jove doth please.
He is Wits Pedler, and retailes his Wares
At Wakes, and Wassels, Meetings, Markets, Faires:
And we that sell by grosse, the Lord doth know,
Have not the grace to grace it with such show.
This Gallant pins the Wenches on his sleeve:
Had he bin Adam, he had tempted Eve.
He can carve too, and lispe: Why this is he,
That kist away his hand in courtesie.
This is the Ape of Fortune, Monsieur the nice,
That when he playes at Tables, chides the Dice
In honourable tearmes: Nay he can sing
A mean most meanly, and in Ushering
Mend him who can: the Ladies call him sweet:
The staires as he treads on them kisse his feet.
This is the flower that smiles on every one,
To shew his teeth as white as Whale his bone.
And consciences that will not die in debt,
Pay him the duty of hony-tongued Boyet.
Kin. A blister on his sweet tongue with my heart,
That put Armadoes Page out of his part.

Enter Ladies.

Bir. See where it comes. Behaviour what wert thou,
Till this mad-man shew'd thee? And what art thou now?
Kin. All haile sweet madam, and fair time of day.
Prin. Fair in all Haile is foule, as I conceive.
Kin. Construe my speeches better if you may.
Prin. Then wish me better, I will give you leave.
Kin. We came to visit you, and purpose now
To lead you to our Court, vouchsafe it then.
Prin. This field shall hold me, and so hold your vow:
Nor God, nor I, delights in perjur'd men.
Kin. Rebuke me not for that which you provoke:

The vertue of your eye muſt break my oath.
Pr. You nickname vertue: vice you ſhould have ſpoke:
For vertues office never breaks men's troth.
Now by my maiden honour, yet as pure
As the unſullied Lilly, I proteſt,
A world of torments though I ſhould endure,
I would not to be your houſes gueſt:
So much I hate a breaking cauſe to be
Of heavenly oathes, vow'd with integrity.
Kin. O you have liv'd in deſolation here,
Unſeen, unviſited, much to our ſhame.
Prin. Not ſo my Lord, it is not ſo I ſwear,
We have had paſtimes here, and pleaſant game,
A meſſe of Ruſſians left us but of late.
Kin. How Madam? Ruſſians?
Prin. I in truth, my Lord.
Trim gallants, full of Courtſhip and of ſtate.
Roſ. Madam ſpeak true. It is not ſo my Lord:
My Lady (to the manner of the dayes)
In curteſie gives undeſerving praiſe.
We four indeed confronted were with four
In Ruſſian habit: Here they ſtayed an hour,
And talk'd apace: and in that hour (my Lord)
They did not bleſſe us with one happy word.
I dare not call them fools; but I think,
When they are thirſty, fools would fain have drink.
Bir. This jeſt is dry to me. Fair, gentle, ſweet,
Your wit makes wiſe things fooliſh, when we greet
With eyes beſt ſeeing, heavens fiery eye,
By light we loſe light: your capacity
Is of that nature, that to your huge ſtore
Wiſe things ſeem fooliſh, and rich things but poor.
Roſ. This proves you wiſe and rich: for in my eye---
Bir. I am a fool, and full of poverty.
Roſ. But that you take what doth to you belong,
It were a fault to ſnatch words from my tongue.
Bir. O, I am yours and all that I poſſeſſe.
Roſ. All the fool mine.
Bir. I cannot give you leſſe.
Roſ. Which of the Vizards was it that you wore?
Bir. Where? when? What Vizard?
Why demand you this?
Roſ. There, then, that vizard, that ſuperfluous caſe,
That hid the worſe, and ſhew'd the better face.
Kin. We are deſcried,
They'l mock us now down right.
Duk. Let us confeſſe and turn it to a jeſt.
Prin. Amaz'd my Lord? Why looks your Highneſſ ſadde?
Roſ. Help hold his brows, he'll ſwound: why look you pale?
Sea-ſick I think, comming from Muſcovy.
Bir. Thus pour the ſtarres down plagues for perjury.
Can any face of braſſe hold longer out?
Here ſtand I, Lady, dart thy skill at me,
Bruiſe me with ſcorn, confound me with a flout,
Thruſt thy ſharp wit quite through my ignorance;
Cut me to pieces with thy keen conceit:
And I will wiſh thee never more to dance,
Nor never more in Ruſſian habit waite.
O! never will I truſt to ſpeeches pen'd,
Nor to the motion of a Schoole-boyes tongue,
Nor never come in vizards to my friend,
Nor wooe in rime like a blind-harpers ſong,
Taffata phraſes, ſilken tearms preciſe,
Three-pil'd hyperboles, ſpruce affection;
Figures pedanticall, theſe ſummer flyes,
Have blown me full of maggot oſtentation,
I doe forſwear them, and I here proteſt,
By this, white Glove (how white the hand, God knows)
Henceforth my wooing mind ſhall be expreſt
In ruſſet yeas, and honeſt kerſie noes.
And to begin Wench, ſo God help me law,
My love to thee is ſound, ſans crack or flaw.
Roſ. Sans, Sans, I pray you.
Bir. Yet I have a trick
Of the old rage: bear with me, I am ſick.
Ile leave it by degrees: both, let us ſee,
Write Lord have mercy on us, on thoſe three,
They are infected, in their hearts it lies:
They have the plague, and caught it of your eyes:
Theſe Lords are viſited, you are not free:
For the Lords tokens on you both I ſee.
Prin. No, they are free that gave theſe tokens to us.
Bir. Our ſtates are forfeit, ſeek not to undoe us.
Roſ. It is not ſo; for how can this be true,
That you ſtand forfeit, being thoſe that ſue.
Bir. Peace, for I will not have to doe with you.
Roſ. Nor ſhall not, if I doe as I intend.
Bir. Speak for your ſelves, my wit is at an end.
King. Teach us ſweet Madam, for our rude tranſgreſſion, ſome fair excuſe.
Prin. The faireſt is confeſſion.
Were you not here but even now diſguis'd?
Kin. Madam, I was.
Prin. And were you well adviſ'd?
Kin. I was, fair Madam.
Prin. When you then were here,
What did you whiſper in your Ladies ear?
Kin. That more then all the world I did reſpect her.
Prin. When ſhe ſhall challenge this, you will reject her.
Kin. Upon mine honour no.
Prin. Peace, peace, forbear:
Your oath once broke, you force not to forſwear.
Kin. Deſpiſe me when I break this oath of mine.
Prin. I will, and therefore keep it. Roſaline,
What did the Ruſſian whiſper in your ear?
Roſ. Madam, he ſwore that he did hold me dear
As precious eye-ſight, and did value me
Above this World: adding there moreover,
That he would Wed me, or elſe die my Lover.
Prin. God give thee joy of him: the Noble Lord
Moſt honourably doth uphold his word.
Kin. What mean you Madam?
By my life, my troth.
I never ſwore this Lady ſuch an oath.
Roſ. By heaven you did; and to confirm it plain,
You gave me this: But take it ſir again.
Kin. My faith and this, to th' Princeſſe I did give,
I knew her by this Jewell on her ſleeve.
Prin. Pardon me ſir, this Jewell did ſhe wear,
And Lord Birone (I thank him) is my dear.
What? Will you have me, or your Pearle again?
Bir. Neither of either, I remit both twain.
I ſee the trick on't: Here was a conſent,
Knowing aforehand of our merriment,
To daſh it like a Chriſtmas Comedy.
Some carry-tale, ſome pleaſe-man, ſome ſlight Zany,
Some mumble-news, ſome trencher-knight, ſome Dick
That ſmiles his cheeke in years, and knows the trick
To make my Lady laugh, when ſhe's diſpos'd,

Told

Told our intents before: which once diſclos'd,
The Ladies did change Favours, and then we
Following the ſignes, woo'd but the ſign of ſhe.
Now to our perjury, to adde more terror,
We are again forſworn in will and error.
Much upon this it is: and might not you
Foreſtall our ſport, to make us thus untrue?
Doe not you know my Ladies foot by'th ſquier?
And laugh upon the apple of her eye?
And ſtand between her back ſir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, jeſting merrily?
You put our Page out: goe, you are allow'd
Die when you will, a ſmock ſhall be your ſhrow'd.
You leer upon me, do you? There's an eye
Wounds like a Leaden ſword.

Boy. Full merrily hath this brave manager, this carreere beene runne.

Bir. Loe, he is tilting ſtraight. Peace, I have done.

Enter Clown.

Welcome pure wit, thou prat'ſt a fair fray.

Clo. O Lord ſir, they would kno,
Whether the three Worthies ſhall come in, or no.

Bir. What, are there but three?

Clo. No ſir, but it is vara fine,
For every one purſents three.

Bir. And three times thrice is nine.

Clo. Not ſo ſir, under correction ſir, I hope it is not ſo. You cannot beg us ſir, I can aſſure you ſir, we know what we know: I hope three times thrice ſir.

Bir. Is not nine.

Clo. Under correction ſir, we know where-untill it doth amount.

Bir. By Jove, I alwayes took three threes for nine.

Clo. O Lord ſir, it were pitty you ſhould get your living by reckoning ſir.

Bir. How much is it?

Clo. O Lord ſir, the parties themſelves, the actors ſir will ſhew where-untill it doth amount: for mine own part, I am (as they ſay, but to perfect one man in one poor man) Pompion the great ſir.

Bir. Art thou one of the Worthies?

Clo. It pleaſed them to think me worthy of Pompey the great: for mine own part, I know not the degree of the Worthy, but I am to ſtand for him.

Bir. Goe, bid them prepare. Exit.

Clo. We will turn it finely off ſir, we will take ſome care.

King. Birone, they will ſhame us:
Let them not approach.

Bir. We are ſhame-proofe my Lord: and 'tis ſome policy, to have one ſhew worſe then the King and his company.

Kin. I ſay they ſhall not come.

Prin. Nay my good Lord, let me ore rule you now;
That ſport beſt pleaſes, that doth leaſt know how.
Where Zeal ſtrives to content, and the contents
Dies, in the Zeal of that which it preſents:
Their form confounded, makes moſt form in mirth,
When great things labouring periſh in their birth.

Bir. A right deſcription of our ſport my Lord.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Anointed, I implore ſo much expence of thy royall ſweet breath, as will utter a brace of words.

Prin. Doth this man ſerve God?

Bir. Why ask you?

Prin. He ſpeak's not like a man of God's making.

Brag. That's all one my fair ſweet honey Monarch: For I proteſt, the Schoolmaſter is exceeding fantaſticall: Too too vain, too too vain. But we will put it (as they ſay) to Fortuna delaguar. I wiſh you the peace of mind moſt royall cupplement.

King. Here is like to be a good preſence of Worthies; He preſents Hector of Troy, the Swain Pompey the great, the Pariſh Curate Alexander, Armadoes Page Hercules, the Pedant Iudas Machabeus: And if theſe four Worthies in their firſt ſhew thrive, theſe four will change habits, and preſent the other five.

Bir. There is five in the firſt ſhew.

Kin. You are deceived, 'tis not ſo.

Bir. The Pedant, the Braggart, the Hedge-Prieſt, the Fool, and the boy.
A bare throw at Novum, and the whole world again,
Cannot prich out five ſuch, take each one in's vain.

Kin. The ſhip is under ſail, and here ſhe comes amain.

Enter Pompey.

Clo. I Pompey am.

Boy. You lye, you are not he.

Clo. I Pompey am.

Boy. With Libbards head on knee.

Bir. Well ſaid old mocker,
I muſt needs be friends with thee.

I Pompey am, Pompey ſurnam'd the big.

Du. The great.

Clo. It is great ſir: Pompey ſurnam'd the great.
That oft in field, with Targe and Shield.
did make my foe to ſweat:
And travelling along this coaſt, I here am come by chance,
And lay my Armes before the legs of this ſweet Laſs of France.
If your Ladiſhip would ſay thanks Pompey, I had done.

Prin. Great thanks great Pompey.

Clo. 'Tis not ſo much worth: but I hope I was perfect. I made a little fault in great.

Bir. My hat to a half-penny, Pompey proves the beſt Worthy.

Enter Curate, for Alexander.

Curat. When in the world I liv'd, I was the worlds Commander.
By Eaſt, Weſt, North, and South, I ſpread my conquering might:
My Schutchion plain declares that I am Aliſander.

Boy. Your noſe ſaies no, you are not:
For it ſtands too right.

Bir. Your noſe ſmels no, in this moſt tender ſmelling Knight.

Prin. The Conqueror is diſmaid:
Proceed good Alexander.

Cur. When in the world I lived, I was the worlds Commander

Boy. Moſt true, 'tis right: you were ſo Aliſander.

Bir. Pompey the great.

Clo. Your ſervant and Coſtard.

Bir. Take away the Conquerer, take away Aliſander.

Clo. O ſir, you have overthrown Aliſander the conqueror: you will be ſcrap'd out of the painted cloth for this.

this: your Lion that holds his Pollax sitting on a close stool, will be given to Ajax. He will be the ninth worthy. A Conqueror, and afraid to speak? Run away for shame Alisander. There an't shall please you: a foolish milde man, an honest man, look you, and soon dash'd. He is a marvellous good neighbour insooth, and a very good Bowler: but for Alisander, alas you see, how 'tis a little ore-parted. But there are Worthies a coming, will speak their minde in some other sort.

Clo. Stand aside good Pompey. Exit Clo.

Enter Pedant for Judas, and the Boy for Hercules.

Ped. Great Hercules is presented by this Imp,
Whose Club kil'd Cerberus that three-headed Canus,
And when he was a babe, a child, a shrimp,
Thus did he strangle Serpents in his Manus:
Quoniam, he seemeth in minority,
Ergo, I come with this Apology.
Keep some state in thy Exit, and vanish. Exit Boy.

Ped. Judas I am.

Dum. A Judas?

Ped. Not Iscariot sir.
Judas I am yclipped Machabeus,

Dum. Judas Machabeus clipt, is plain Judas.

Bir. A kissing traitor. How art thou prov'd Judas?

Ped. Judas I am.

Dum. The more shame for you Judas.

Ped. What mean you sir?

Boy. To make Judas hang himself.

Ped. Begin sir, you are my elder.

Bir. Well follow'd, Judas was hang'd on an Elder.

Ped. I will not be put out of countenance.

Bir. Because thou hast no face.

Ped. What is this.

Boy. A Cittern head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin.

Bir. A deaths face in a ring.

Lon. The face of an old Roman coyn, scarce seen.

Boy. The pummell of Cæsars Faulchion.

Dum. The carv'd-bone face on a Flask.

Bir. Saint Georges half Cheek in a brooch.

Dum. I, and in a brooch of Lead.

Bir. I, and worn in the cap of a Tooth-drawer.
And now forward, for we have put thee in countenance.

Ped. You have put me out of countenance.

Bir. False, we have given thee faces.

Ped. But you have outfac'd them all.

Bir. And thou wer't a Lion, we would do so.

Boy. Therefore as he is an Ass, let him goe:
And so adieu sweet Iude. Nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the latter end of his name.

Bir. For the Asse to the Iude: give it him. Iud-as away.

Ped. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.

Boy. A light for monsieur Judas, it growes dark, he may stumble.

Prin. Alas poor Machabeus, how hath he been baited.

Enter Braggart.

Bir. Hide thy head Achilles, here comes Hector in Armes.

Dum. Though my mocks come home by me, I will now be merry.

King. Hector was but a Troyan in respect of this.

Boy. But this is Hector?

Kin. I think Hector was not so clean timber'd,

Lon. His leg is too big for Hector.

Dum. More Calf certain.

Boy. No; he is best indued with the small.

Bir. This can'ot be Hector.

Dum. He's a god or a Painter, for he makes faces.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars, of Launces the almighty, gave Hector a gift.

Dum. A gilt Nutmeg.

Bir. A Lemmon.

Lon. Stuck with Cloves.

Dum. No cloven.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars, of Launces the almighty, Gave Hector a gift, the heir of Illion;
A man so breathed, that certain he would fight: yea
From morn till night, out of his Pavillion.
I am that Flower.

Dum. That Mint.

Long. That Cullambine.

Brag. Sweet Lord Longavile rein thy tongue.

Lon. I must rather give it the rein: for it runns against Hector.

Dum. I, and Hector's a Grey-hound.

Brag. The sweet War-man is dead and rotten,
Sweet chucks, beat not the bones of the buried:
But I will forward with my device;
Sweet Royalty bestow on me the Sence of hearing.

Birone steps forth.

Prin. Speak brave Hector, we are much delighted.

Brag. I doe adore thy sweet Graces slipper.

Boy. Loves here by the foot.

Dum. He may not by the yard.

Brag. This Hector far surmounted Hannibal.
The party is gone.

Clo. Fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two months on her way.

Brag. What meanest thou?

Clow. Faith unless you play the honest Troyan, the poor Wench is cast away: she's quick, the child brags in her belly already: 'tis yours.

Brag. Dost thou infamonize me among Potentates? Thou shalt die.

Clo. Then shall Hector be whipt for Iaquenetta that is quick by him, and hang'd for Pompey, that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey.

Boy. Renowned Pompey.

Bir. Greater then great, great, great, great Pompey: Pompey the huge.

Dum. Hector trembles.

Bir. Pompey is moved, more Atees, more Atees stir them, or stir them on.

Dum. Hector will challeng him.

Bir. I, if a have no more mans bloud in's belly, then will sup a Flea.

Brag. By the North-pole I doe challenge thee.

Clo. I will not fight with a pole like a Northern man; I'le slash, I'le do it by the sword: I pray you let me borrow my Armes again.

Dum. Room for the incensed Worthies.

Clo. I'le doe it in my shirt.

Dum. Most resolute Pompey.

Pag. Master, let me take you a button hole lower:
Do you not see Pompey is uncasing for the combat: what mean

mean you? you will loſe your reputation.

Brag. Gentlemen and Souldiers pardon me, I will not combate in my ſhirt.

Du. You may not deny it, Pompey hath made the challenge.

Brag. Sweet bloods, I both may, and will.

Bir. What reaſon have you for't?

Bra. The naked truth of it is, I have no Shirt, I go woolward for penance.

Boy. True, and it was enjoyned him in Rome for want of Linnen: ſince when, I'le be ſworn he wore none, but a Diſhclout of Jaquenettaes, and that he weares next his heart for a favour.

Enter a Meſſenger, Monſieur Marcade.

Mar. God ſave you Madam.

Prin. Welcome Marcade, but that thou interrupteſt our merriment.

Marc. I am ſorry Madam, for the newes I bring is heavy in my tongue. The King your Father.

Prin. Dead for my life.

Mar. Even ſo: My tale is told.

Bir. Worthies away, the Scene begins to cloud.

Bra. For mine own part, I breathe free breath: I have ſeen the day of wrong, through the little hole of diſcretion, and I will right my ſelf like a Souldier.

Exeunt Worthies.

Kin. How fare's your Majeſty?

Prin. Boyet prepare, I will away to night.

Kin. Madam not ſo, I doe beſeech you ſtay.

Prin. Prepare I ſay. I thank you gracious Lords
For all your fair endeavours and entreats:
Out of a new ſad-ſoul, that you vouchſafe,
In your rich wiſedome to excuſe or hide,
The liberall oppoſition of our ſpirits,
If over-boldly we have born our ſelves,
In the converſe of breath (your gentleneſſe
Was guilty of it.) Farewell worthy Lord:
An heavy heart bears not an humble tongue;
Excuſe me ſo, comming ſo ſhort of thanks,
For my great ſuit ſo eaſily obtain'd.

Kin. The extream parts of time, extreamly forms
All cauſes to the purpoſe of his ſpeed:
And often at his very looſe decides
That, which long proceſſe of time could not arbitrate.
And though the mourning brow of progeny
Forbid the ſmiling courteſie of Love:
The holy ſuit which fain it would convince,
Yet ſince Love's argument was firſt on foot,
Let not the cloud of ſorrow juſtle it
From what it purpoſed: ſince to wail friends loſt,
Is not by much ſo wholſome profitable,
As to rejoyce at friends but newly found.

Prin. I underſtand you not, my griefs are double.

Bir. Honeſt plain words, beſt pierce the eares of grief
And by theſe badges underſtand the King,
For your fair ſakes have we neglected time,
Play'd foul play with our oathes: your beauty Ladies
Hath much deformed us, faſhioning our humours
Even to the oppoſed end of our intents.
And what in us hath ſeem'd ridiculous:
As Love is full of unbefitting ſtrains,
All wanton as a child, skipping and vain.
Form'd by the eye, and therefore like the eye.
Full of ſtraying ſhapes, of habits, and of formes,
Varying in ſubjects as the eye doth rowl,
To every varied object in his glance:
Which party-coated, preſence of looſe Love
Put on by us, if in your heavenly eyes,
Have misbecom'd our oathes and gravities,
Thoſe heavenly eyes that look into theſe faults,
Suggeſted us to make: therefore Ladies
Our love being yours, the errour that Love makes
Is likewiſe yours. We to our ſelves prove falſe,
By being once falſe, for ever to be true
To thoſe that make us both, fair Ladies you,
And even that falſhood in it ſelf a ſin,
Thus purifies it ſelf, and turns to grace.

Prin. We have receiv'd your Letters, full of Love:
Your Favours, the Ambaſſadours of Love.
And in our maiden council rated them
At courtſhip, pleaſant jeſt, and courteſie,
As bumbaſt, and as lining to the time:
But more devout then theſe are our reſpects
Have we not been, and therefore met your loves
In their own faſhion, like a merriment.

Du. Our Letters Madam, ſhew'd much more then jeſt.

Long. So did our looks.

Roſa. We did not coate them ſo.

King. Now at the lateſt minute of the hour,
Grant us your loves.

Prin. A time me thinks too ſhort,
To make a world-with-out end bargain in;
No, no, my Lord, your Grace is perjur'd much,
Full of dear guiltineſſe, and therefore this:
If for my Love (as there is no ſuch cauſe)
You will doe ought, this ſhall you doe for me,
Your oath I will not truſt: but go with ſpeed
To ſome forlorn and naked Hermitage,
Remote from all the pleaſures of the world:
There ſtay, untill the twelve Celeſtiall Signs
Have brought about their annuall reckoning.
If this auſtere inſociable life,
Change not your offer made in heat of blood:
If froſts, and faſts, hard lodging, and thin weeds
Nip not the gaudy bloſſoms of your Love,
But that it bear this triall, and laſt love:
Then at the expiration of the year,
Come challenge me, challenge by theſe deſerts,
And by this Virgin palme, now kiſſing thine,
I will be thine: and till that inſtant ſhut
My wofull ſelf up in a mourning houſe,
Raining the teares of lamentation,
For the remembrance of my Fathers death.
If this thou doe deny, let our hands part,
Neither intitled in the others heart.

King. If this, or more then this, I would deny;
To flatter up theſe powers of mine with reſt,
The ſudden hand of death cloſe up mine eye:
Hence ever then, my heart is in thy breaſt.

Bir. And what to me my Love? and what to me?

Roſ. You muſt be purged too, your ſins are rack'd;
You are attaint with fault and perjury:
Therefore if you my favour mean to get,
A twelve-month ſhall you ſpend, and never reſt,
But ſeek the weary beds of people ſick.

Dum. But what to me my love? but what to me?

Kat. A wife? a beard, fair health, and honeſty;
With three-fold love, I wiſh you all theſe three.

Dum. O ſhall I ſay, I thank you gentle wife?

Kat. Not ſo my Lord, a twelve-month and a day,

I'le

I'le mark no words that ſmooth-fac'd wooers ſay.
Come when the King doth to my Lady come:
Then if I have much love, I'le give you ſome.
Dum. I'le ſerve thee true and faithfully till then.
Kath. Yet ſwear not, leaſt ye be forſworn agen.
Long. What ſays Maria?
Mari. At the twelve-moneths end,
I'le change my black Gown, for a faithfull friend.
Son. I'le ſtay with patience: but the time is long.
Mari. The liker you, few taller are ſo young.
Bir. Studies my Lady? Miſtreſſe, look on me,
Behold the window of my heart, mine eye:
What humble ſuit attends thy anſwer there,
Impoſe ſome ſervice on me for my Love.
Roſa. Oft have I heard of you my Lord Birone,
Before I ſaw you: and the worlds large tongue
Proclaims you for a man repleat with mocks,
Full of compariſons, and wounding flouts,
Which you on all eſtates will execute,
That lie within the mercy of your wit,
To weed this Wormwood from your fruitfull brain,
And therewithall to win me, if you pleaſe,
Without the which I am not to be won;
You ſhall this twelve-moneth term from day to day,
Viſit the ſpeechleſſe ſick, and ſtill converſe
With groaning wretches: and your task ſhall be,
With all the fierce endeavour of your wit,
To enforce this pained impotent to ſmile.
Bir. To move wild laughter in the throat of death?
It cannot be, it is impoſſible.
Mirth cannnot move a ſoul in agony.
Roſa. Why that's the way to choke a gibing ſpirit,
Whoſe influence is begot of that looſe grace,
Which ſhallow laughing hearers give to fools:
A jeſts proſperity, lies in the ear
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it: then, if ſickly ears,
Deaft with the clamours of their own dear groans,
Will hear your idle ſcorns; continue then,
And I will have you, and that fault withall.
But if they will not, throw away that ſpirit,
And I ſhall find you empty of that fault,
Right joyfull of your reformation.
Bir. A twelve-moneth? Well: befall what will befall,
I'le jeſt a twelve-moneth in an Hoſpitall.
Prin. I, ſweet my Lord, and ſo I take my leave.
King. No Madam, we will bring you on your way.
Bir Our wooing doth not end like an old Play:
Jack hath not Jill: theſe Ladies courteſie
Might well have made our ſport a Comedy.
King. Come Sir, it wants a twelve-moneth and a day,
And then 'twill end.
Bir. That's too long for a Play.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Sweet Majeſty vouchſafe me.
Prin. Was not that Hector?
Dum. The worthy Knight of Troy.
Brag. I will kiſſe thy Royall finger, and take leave.
I am a Votary, I have vow'd to Jaquenetta to hold the Plough for her ſweet love three yeares. But moſt eſteemed greatneſſe, will you hear the Dialogue that the two Learned men have compiled, in praiſe of the Owle and the Cuckow? It ſhould have followed in the end of our ſhew.
Kin. Call them forth quickly, we will doe ſoe.
Brag. Holla, Approach.

Enter all.

This ſide is Hiems, Winter.
This Ver, the Spring: the one maintained by the Owle,
The other by the Cuckow.
Ver, begin.

The Song.

When Daſies pied, and Violets blew,
And Cuckow-buds of yellow hue:
And Lady-Smocks all ſilver white,
Doe paint the Medowes with delight,
The Cuckow then on every Tree,
Mocks married men, for thus ſings he,
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of fear,
Unpleaſing to a married ear.

When Shepheards pipe on Oaten Straws,
And merry Larks are Ploughmens Clocks:
When Turtles tread, and Rooks and Daws,
And Maidens bleach their ſummer Smocks:
The Cuckow then on every Tree
Mocks married men; for thus ſings he,
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of fear,
Unpleaſing to a married ear.

Winter.

When Iſickles hang by the wall,
And Dick the Shepheard blows his nail;
And Tom bears Logs into the Hall,
And Milk comes frozen home in pail:
When blood is nipt, and wayes be foul,
Then nightly ſings the ſtaring Owle
Tu-whit to-who.
A merry note,
While greaſie Jone doth keel the pot.

When all alond the Wind doth blow,
And coſſing drownes the Parſons Saw:
And Birds ſit brooding in the Snow,
And Marrians Noſe looks red and raw:
When roaſted Crabs hiſſe in the bowl,
Then nightly ſings the ſtaring Owle,
Tu-whit to-who:
A merry note,
While greaſie Jone doth keel the pot.

Brag. The words of Mercury,
Are harſh after the Songs of Apollo:
You that way; we this way.

Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

A Midſummers nights DREAM.

Actus Primus.

Enter Theſeus, Hippolita, with others.

Theſeus.

NOw fair Hippolita, our nuptiall hour
Drawes on apace: four happy dayes bring in
Another Moon: but oh, me thinks, how ſlow
This old Moon wanes? She lingers my deſires
Like to a Step-dame or a Dowager,
Long withering out a young mans revenue.
Hip. Four dayes will quickly ſteep themſelves in nights,
Four nights will quickly dream away the time:
And then the Moon, like to a ſilver bow,
Now bent in heaven, ſhall behold the night
Of our ſolemnities.
The. Go Philoſtrate,
Stirre up the Athenian youth to merriments,
Awake the pert and nimble ſpirit of mirth,
Turn melancholly forth to Funerals:
The pale companion is not for our pomp.
Hippolita, I woo'd thee with my ſword,
And won thy love, doing thee injuries:
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pomp, with triumph, and with revelling.

Enter Egeus and his daughter Hermia, Lyſander, and Demetrius.

Ege. Happy be Theſeus, our renowned Duke.
The. Thanks good Egeus: what's the newes with thee?
Ege. Full of vexation, come I, with complaint
Againſt my child, my daughter Hermia.

Stand forth Demetrius.

My Noble Lord,
This man hath my conſent to marry her.

Stand forth Lyſander.

And my gracious Duke,
This hath bewitch'd the boſome of my child:
Thou, thou Lyſander, thou haſt given her rimes,
And interchang'd love-tokens with my child:
Thou haſt by Moon-light at her window ſung,
With faining voyce, verſes of faining love,
And ſtoln the impreſſion of her fantaſie,
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gawdes, conceits,
Knacks, trifles, Noſegayes, ſweet meats (meſſengers
Of ſtrong prevailment in unhardned youth)
With cunning haſt thou filch'd my daughters heart,
Turn'd her obedience (which is due to me)
To ſtubborn harſhneſſe. And my gracious Duke,
Be it ſo ſhe will not here before your Grace,
Conſent to marry with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient priviledge of Athens,
As ſhe is mine, I may diſpoſe of her;
Which ſhall be either to this Gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our Law,
Immediately provided in that caſe.
The. What ſay you Hermia? be adviſ'd fair Maid.
To you your Father ſhould be as a God;
One that compos'd your beauties; yea, and one
To whom you are but as a form in wax
By him imprinted: and within his power,
To leave the figure, or disfigure it:
Demetrius is a worthy Gentleman.
Her. So is Lyſander.
The. In himſelf he is.
But in this kind, wanting your Fathers voyce
The other muſt be held the worthier.
Her. I would my Father look'd but with my eyes.
The. Rather your eyes muſt with his judgement look.
Her. I doe entreat your Grace to pardon me,
I know not by what power I am made bold.
Nor how it may concern my modeſty
In ſuch a preſence here to plead my thoughts:
But I beſeech your Grace, that I may know
The worſt that may befall me in this caſe,
If I refuſe to wed Demetrius.
The. Either to die the death, or to abjure
For ever the ſociety of men.
Therefore fair Hermia queſtion your deſires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood.
Whether (if you yield not to your Fathers choyce)
You can endure the livery of a Nunne,
For aye to be in ſhady Cloiſter mew'd,
To live a barren ſiſter all your life,
Chanting faint hymnes to the cold fruitleſſe Moon,
Thrice bleſſed they that maſter ſo their blood,
To undergo ſuch maiden pilgrimage.
But earthlier happy is the Roſe diſtill'd,
Then that which withering on the virgin thorn,
Growes, lives, and dies, in ſingle bleſſedneſſe.

Her. So will I grow, ſo live, ſo die my Lord,
Ere I will yield my virgin Patent up
Unto his Lordſhip, to whoſe unwiſhed yoak,
My ſoul conſents not to give ſoveraignty.
The. Take time to pauſe, and by the next new Moon,
The ſealing day betwixt my Love and me,
For everlaſting bond of fellowſhip.
Upon that day either prepare to die,
For diſobedience to your Fathers will,
Or elſe to wed Demetrius as he would,
Or on Dianaes Altar to proteſt
For aye, auſterity and ſingle life.
Dem. Relent ſweet Hermia, and Lyſander, yield
Thy crazed title to my certain right.
Lyſ. You have her Fathers love, Demetrius:
Let me have Hermiaes: doe you marry him.
Egeus. Scornfull Lyſander: true, he hath my Love;
And what is mine, my love ſhall render him.
And ſhe is mine, and all my right of her
I doe eſtate unto Demetrius.
Lyſ. I am my Lord, as well deriv'd as he,
As well poſſeſt: my love is more then his:
My fortunes every way as fairly ranck'd
(If not with vantage) as Demetrius:
And (which is more then all theſe boaſts can be)
I am belov'd of beauteous Hermia.
Why ſhould not I then proſecute my right?
Demetrius, I'le avouch it to his head,
Made love to Nedars Daughter, Helena,
And won her ſoul: and ſhe (ſweet Lady) dotes,
Devoutly dotes, dotes in Idolatry,
Upon this ſpotted and inconſtant man.
The. I muſt confeſſe, that I have heard ſo much,
And with Demetrius thought to have ſpoke thereof:
But being over-full of ſelf-affairs,
My mind did loſe it. But Demetrius come,
And come Egeus, you ſhall go with me,
I have ſome private ſchooling for you both.
For you fair Hermia, look you arme your ſelf,
To fit your fancies to your Fathers will;
Or elſe the Law of Athens yields you up
(Which by no means we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of ſingle life.
Come my Hippolita, what cheer my Love?
Demetrius and Egeus go along:
I muſt employ you in ſome buſineſſe
Againſt our nuptialls, and conferre with you
Of ſomething, nearly that concerns your ſelves.
Ege. With duty and deſire we follow you. Exeunt.

Manet Lyſander and Hermia.

Lyſ. How now my Love? Why is your cheek ſo pale?
How chance the Roſes there doe fade ſo faſt?
Her. Belike for want of rain, which I could well
Beteem them, from the tempeſt of mine eyes.
Lyſ. Hermia, for ought that ever I could read,
Could ever hear by Tale or Hiſtory,
The courſe of true love never did run ſmooth,
But either it was different in blood.
Her. O croſſe! too high to be enthrall'd to love.
Lyſ. Or elſe miſgraffed, in reſpect of yeares.
Her. O ſpight! too old to be engag'd to young.
Lyſ. Or elſe it ſtood upon the choiſe of merit.
Her. O hell! to chooſe love by anothers eye.
Lyſ. Or if there were a ſimpathy in choiſe,
War, death, or ſickneſſe, did lay ſiege to it;
Making it momentary, as a ſound:
Swift as a ſhadow, ſhort as any dream,
Brief as the lightning in the collied night,
That (in a ſpleen) unfolds both heaven and earth;
And ere a man hath power to ſay, behold,
The jawes of darkneſſe to devoure it up:
So quick bright things come to confuſion.
Her. If then true Lovers have been ever croſt,
It ſtands as an Edict in deſtiny:
Then let us teach our triall patience,
Becauſe it is a cuſtomary croſſe,
As due to love, as thoughts, and dreames, and ſighs,
Wiſhes and teares, poor Fancies followers.
Lyſ. A good perſwaſion; therefore hear me Hermia,
I have a Widow Aunt, a Dowager,
Of great revenue, and ſhe hath no Child:
From Athens is her houſe remov'd ſeven leagues,
And ſhe reſpects me as her onely Son:
There gentle Hermia, may I marry thee,
And to that place, the ſharp Athenian Law
Cannot purſue us. If thou lov'ſt me, then
Steal forth thy Fathers houſe to morrow night:
And in the Wood, a league without the Town,
(Where I did meet thee once with Helena,
To doe obſervance for a morn of May)
There will I ſtay for thee.
Her. My good Lyſander,
I ſwear to thee, by Cupid's ſtrongeſt bow,
By his beſt arrow with the golden head,
By the ſimplicity of Venus Doves,
By that which knitteth ſouls, and proſpers love,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage Queen,
When the falſe Troyan under ſail was ſeen,
By all the vowes that ever men have broke,
(In number more then ever women ſpoke)
In that ſame place thou haſt appointed me,
To morrow truly will I meet with thee.
Lyſ. Keep promiſe Love: look here comes Helena.

Enter Helena.

Her. God ſpeed fair Helena, whither away?
Hel. Call you me fair? that fair again unſay,
Demetrius loves you fair: O happy fair!
Your eyes are load-ſtarres, and your tongues ſweet ayre
More tuneable then Larke to Shepheards ear,
When Wheat is green, when Haw-thorn Buds appear,
Sickneſſe is catching: O were favour ſo,
Your words I'de catch, fair Hermia ere I go,
My ear ſhould catch your voyce, my eye, your eye,
My tongue ſhould catch your tongues ſweet melody,
Were the World mine, Demetrius being bated,
The reſt I'le give to be to you tranſlated.
O teach me how you look, and with what art
You ſway the motion of Demetrius heart.
Her. I frown upon him, yet he loves me ſtill.
Hel. O that your frowns would teach my ſmiles ſuch ſkill.
Her. I give him curſes, yet he gives me love.
Hel. O that my prayers could ſuch affection move.
Her. The more I hate, the more he follows me.
Hel. The more I love, the more he hateth me.
Her. His folly Helena is none of mine.
Hel. None but your beauty, would that fault were mine.
Her. Take comfort: he no more ſhall ſee my face,
Lyſander and my ſelf will flie this place.
Before the time I did Lyſander ſee,
Seem'd Athens like a Paradiſe to me.

O then, what graces in my Love do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heaven into Hell?
Lyſ. Helen, to you our minds we will unfold,
To morrow night when Phœbe doth behold.
Her ſilver viſage, in the watry glaſſe,
Decking with liquid pearl, the bladed graſſe
(A time that Lovers flights doth ſtill conceal)
Through Athens gate, have we devis'd to ſteal.
Her. And in the wood, where often you and I,
Upon faint Primroſe beds, were wont to lie,
Emptying our boſomes, of their counſell ſweld;
There my Lyſander, and my ſelf ſhall meet,
And thence from Athens turn away our eyes
To ſeek new friends and ſtrange companions,
Farewell ſweet play-fellow, pray thou for us,
And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius.
Keep word Lyſander, we muſt ſtarve our ſight,
From lovers food, till morrow deep midnight.
Exit Hermia.
Lyſ. I will my Hermia. Helena adieu,
As you on him, Demetrius dotes on you.
Exit Lyſander.
Hel. How happy ſome, o're otherſome can be?
Through Athens I am thought as fair as ſhe.
But what of that? Demetrius thinks not ſo:
He will not know, what all, but he doth know,
And as he erres, doting on Hermiaes eyes;
So I, admiring of his qualities:
Things baſe and vilde, holding no quantity,
Love can tranſpoſe to forme and dignity,
Love looks not with the eyes, but with the minde,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blind.
Nor hath loves mind of any judgement taſte:
Wings and no eyes, figure, unheedy haſte.
And therefore is Love ſaid to be a childe,
Becauſe in choiſe he often is beguil'd,
As waggiſh boyes themſelves in game forſwear;
So the boy Love is perjur'd every where.
For ere Demetrius lookt on Hermiaes eyne,
He hail'd down oathes that he was onely mine.
And when this Hail ſome heat from Hermia felt,
So he diſſolv'd, and ſhowres of oathes did melt.
I will go tell him of fair Hermiaes flight:
Then to the Wood will he to morrow night,
Purſue her; and for his intelligence,
If I have thanks, it is a dear expence:
But herein mean I to enrich my pain,
To have his ſight thither, and back again. Exit.

Enter Quince the Carpenter, Snug the Joyner, Bottom the Weaver, Flute the Bellows-mender, Snowt the Tinker, and Starveling the Taylor.

Qu. Is all our company here?
Bot. You were beſt to call them generally, man by man, according to the ſcrip.
Qu. Here is the ſcrowle of every mans name, which is thought fit through all Athens, to play in our Enterlude before the Duke and the Dutcheſſe, on his wedding day at night.
Bot. Firſt, good Peter Quince, ſay what the Play treats on: then read the names of the Actors: and ſo grow on to a point.
Qu. Marry our Play is the moſt lamentable Comedy, and moſt cruell death of Pyramus and Thisby.
Bot. A very good piece of work I aſſure you, and a merry. Now good Peter Quince, call forth your Actors by the ſcrowle. Maſters ſpread your ſelves.
Quince. Anſwer as I call you. Nick Bottom the Weaver.
Bottom. Ready: name what part I am for, and proceed.
Quince. You Nick Bottom are ſet down for Pyramus.
Bot. What is Pyramus, a lover, or a tyrant?
Quince. A Lover that kills himſelf moſt gallantly for love.
Bot. That will aske ſome teares in the true performing of it: if I doe it, let the audience look to their eyes; I will move ſtormes; I will condole in ſome meaſure. To the reſt yet, my chief humour is for a tyrant. I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to tear a Cat in, to make all ſplit the raging Rocks, and ſhivering ſhocks ſhall break the locks of priſon gates, and Phibbus carre ſhall ſhine from farre, and make and marre the fooliſh Fates. This was lofty. Now name the reſt of the Players. This is Ercles vein, a tyrants vein: a lover is more condoling.
Quin. Francis Flute the Bellows-mender.
Flu. Here Peter Quince.
Qu. You muſt take Thisbie on you.
Flu. What is Thisbie, a wandring Knight?
Qu. It is the Lady that Pyramus muſt love.
Flu. Nay faith, let not me play a woman, I have a Beard comming.
Qu. That's all one, you ſhall play it in a Maske, and you may ſpeak as ſmall as you will.
Bot. And I may hide my face, let me play Thisbie too: I'le ſpeak in a monſtrous little voyce, Thiſne, Thiſne, ah Pyramus my lover dear, thy Thisbie dear, and Lady dear.
Quin. No no, you muſt play Pyramus; and Flute you Thisbie.
Bot. Well, proceed.
Qu. Robin Starveling, the Taylor.
Star. Here Peter Quince.
Quince. Robin Starveling, you muſt play Thisbies Mother?
Tom Snowt, the Tinker.
Snowt. Here Peter Quince.
Qu. You Pyramus father; my ſelf, Thisbies father; Snug the Joyner, you the Lyons part; and I hope there is a Play fitted.
Snug. Have you the Lyons part written? pray you if it be, give it me, for I am ſlow of ſtudy.
Qu. You may doe it extempore, for it is nothing but roaring.
Bot. Let me play the Lyon too, I will roar that, I will doe any mans heart good to hear me. I will roar, that I will make the Duke ſay, Let him roare again, let him roare again.
Qu. If you ſhould doe it too terribly, you would fright the Dutcheſſe and the Ladies, that they would ſhrike, and that were enough to hang us all.
All. That would hang us every mothers ſon.
Bottome. I grant you friends, if that you ſhould fright the Ladies out of their Wits, they would have no more diſcretion but to hang us: but I will aggravate my voyce ſo, that I will roare you as gently as any ſucking Dove; I will roare and 'twere any Nightingale.
Quince. You can play no part but Pyramus, for Pyra-

mus is a ſweet-fac'd man, a proper man as one ſhall ſee in a ſummers day; a moſt lovely Gentleman-like-man, therefore you muſt needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will undertake it. What Beard were I beſt to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will diſcharge it, in either your ſtraw-colour beard, your orange tawny beard, your purple in grain beard, or your French-crown colour'd beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French-Crowns have no hair at all, and then you will play bare-fac'd. But maſters here are your parts, and I am to entreat you, requeſt you, and deſire you, to con them by to morrow night: and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the Town, by Moon-light, there we will rehearſe: for if we meet in the City, we ſhall be dog'd with company, and our devices known. In the mean time, I will draw a Bill of properties, ſuch as our Play wants. I pray you fail me not.

Bot. We will meet, and there we may rehearſe more obſcenely and courageouſly. Take pain, be perfect, adieu.

Quin. At the Dukes oak we meet.

Bot. Enough, hold or cut bow-ſtrings. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter a Fairie at one door, and Robin Good-fellow at another.

Rob. How now ſpirit, whether wander you?

Fai. Over hill, over dale, through buſh, through briar,
Over park, over pale, through flood, through fire,
I doe wander every where, ſwifter then the Moons ſphere;
And I ſerve the Fairy Queen, to dew her orbs upon the green.
The Cowſlips tall, her penſioners be,
In their gold coats: ſpots you ſee,
Thoſe be Rubies, Fairy favors,
In thoſe freckles, live their ſavors,
I muſt go ſeek ſome dew drops here,
And hang a pearl in every cowſlips ear.
Farewell thou Lob of ſpirits, I'le be gon,
Our Queen and all her Elves come here anon.

Rob. The King doth keep his Revels here to night,
Take heed the Queen come not withjn his ſight,
For Oberon is paſſing fell and wrath,
Becauſe that ſhe, as her attendant, hath
A lovely boy ſtoln from an Indian King,
She never had ſo ſweet a changeling,
And jealous Oberon would have the child
Knight of this train, to trace the Forreſts wild.
But ſhe (per-force) with-holds the loved boy,
Crowns him with flowers, and makes him all her joy.
And now they never meet in grove, or green,
By fountain clear, or ſpangled ſtar-light ſheen,
But they doe ſquare, that all their Elves for fear
Creep into Acorn cups and hide them there.

Fai. Either I miſtake your ſhape and making quite,
Or elſe you are that ſhrew'd and knaviſh ſpirit
Call'd Robin Good-fellow. Are you not he,
That fright the maidens of the Villagree,
Skim milk, and ſometimes labour in the Quern,
And bootleſſe make the breathleſſe huſwife chern,
And ſometime make the drink to bear no barme,
Miſlead night-wanderers, laughing at their harm,
Thoſe that Hobgoblin call you, and ſweet Puck,
You doe their work, and they ſhall have good luck,
Are not you he?

Rob. Thou ſpeak'ſt aright;
I am that merry wanderer of the night:
I jeſt to Oberon, and make him ſmile,
When I a fat and Bean-fed Horſe beguile,
Neighing in likeneſſe like a ſilly foal,
And ſometimes lurk I in a Goſſips bole,
In very likeneſſe of a roaſted crab:
And when ſhe drinks, againſt her lips I bob,
And on her withered dewlop poure the Ale.
The wiſeſt Aunt telling the ſaddeſt tale,
Sometime for three-foot ſtool, miſtaketh me,
Then ſlip I from her bum, down topples ſhe,
And tailour cries, and falls into a coffe.
And then the whole quire hold their hips, and loffe,
And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and ſwear,
A merrier hour was never waſted there.
But room Fairy, here comes Oberon.

Fai. And here my Miſtreſſe:
Would that we were gone.

Enter King of Fairies at one door with his train, and the Queen at another with hers.

Ob. Ill met by Moon-light,
Proud Titania.

Qu. What, jealous Oberon? Fairy skip hence.
I have forſworn his bed and company.

Ob. Tarry raſh Wanton, am not I thy Lord?

Qu. Then I muſt be thy Lady: but I know
When thou waſt ſtoln away from Fairy Land,
And in the ſhape of Corin, ſate all day,
Playing on pipes of Corn, and verſing love
To amorous Phillida. Why art thou here
Come from the fartheſt ſteep of India?
But that forſooth the bouncing Amazon
Your buskin'd Miſtreſſe, and your Warriour love,
To Theſeus muſt be Wedded, and you come,
To give their bed joy and proſperity.

Ob. How canſt thou thus for ſhame, Titania,
Glance at my credit, with Hippolita?
Knowing I know thy love to Theſeus?
Didſt thou not lead him through the glimmering night
From Peregenia, whom he raviſhed?
And make him with fair Eagles break his faith
With Ariadne, and Antiopa?

Qu. Theſe are the forgeries of jealouſie,
And never ſince the middle Summers ſpring
Met we on hill, in dale, forreſt, or mead,
By paved fountain, or by ruſhie brook,
Or in the beached margent of the ſea,
To dance our ringlets to the whiſtling wind,
But with thy brawles thou haſt diſturb'd our ſport.
Therefore the winds, piping to us in vain,
As in revenge, have ſuck'd up from the ſea
Contagious fogges: Which falling in the Land,
Hath every petty River made ſo proud,
That they have over-born their Continents.
The Oxe hath therefore ſtretch'd his yoak in vain,
The Ploughman loſt his ſweat, and the green Corn
Hath rotted, ere his youth attain'd a beard:
The fold ſtands empty in the drowned field,
And Crows are fatted with the murrion flock,

The

The nine mens morris is fild up with mud,
And the queint Mazes in the wanton green,
For lack of tread are undiſtinguiſhable.
The humane mortals want their winter here,
No night is now with hymn or caroll bleſt;
Therefore the Moon (the governeſs of flouds)
Pale in her anger, waſhes all the air;
That Rheumatick diſeaſes do abound.
And thorough this diſtemperature, we ſee,
The ſeaſons alter; hoary-headed froſts
Fall in the freſh lap of the crimſon Roſe,
And on old Hyems chin and Icie crown,
An odorous Chaplet of ſweet Summer buds
Is as in mockry ſet. The ſpring, the Summer,
The childing Autumn, angry Winter change
Their wonted Liveries, and the amazed world,
By their increaſe, now knows not which is which:
And this ſame progeny of evills comes
From our debate, from our diſſenſion,
We are their parents and originall.

Ob. Do you amend it then, it lies in you,
Why ſhould Titania croſs her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my Henchman.

Qu. Set your heart at reſt,
The Fairy land buyes not the child of me.
His mother was a Votreſs of my Order,
And in the ſpiced Indian air, by night
Full often ſhe hath goſſipt by my ſide,
And ſat with me on Neptunes yellow ſands,
Marking th'embarked traders of the flood,
When we laught to ſee the ſails conceive,
And grow big bellied with the wanton winde:
Which ſhe with pretty and with ſwimming gate,
Following (her womb then rich with my young ſquire)
Would imitate, and ſail upon the Land,
To fetch me trifles and return again,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandize.
But ſhe being mortall of that boy did dye,
And for her ſake I do rear up her boy,
And for her ſake I will not part with him.

Ob. How long within this wood intend you ſtay?

Qu. Perchance till after Theſeus wedding day.
If you will patiently dance in our Round,
And ſee our Moon-light revels, go with us;
If not, ſhun me and I will ſpare your haunts.

Ob. Give me that boy, and I will go with thee.

Qu. Not for thy Fairy Kingdome. Fairies away:
We ſhall chide down right, if I longer ſtay. Exeunt.

Ob. Well, go thy way: thou ſhalt not from this grove,
Till I torment thee for this injury.
My gentle Puck come hither; thou remembreſt
Since I ſat upon a promontory,
And heard a Mear-maid on a Dolphins back,
Uttering ſuch dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude ſea grew civill at her ſong,
And certain ſtars ſhot madly from their Shpears,
To hear the Sea-maids muſick.

Pu. I remember.

Ob. That very time I ſay (but thou could'ſt not)
Flying between the cold Moon and the earth,
Cupid all arm'd; a certain aim he took
At a fair Veſtall, throned by the Weſt,
And loos'd his love-ſhaft ſmartly from his bow,
As it ſhould pierce a hundred thouſand hearts,
But I might ſee young Cupids fiery ſhaft
Quench in the chaſt beams of the watry Moon;
And the imperiall Votreſs paſſed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.
Yet mark'd I where the bolt of Cupid fell.
It fell upon a little weſtern flower:
Before, milk-white: now purple with loves wound,
And maidens call it, Love in idleneſs.
Fetch me that flower; the herb I ſhew'd thee once,
The juyce of it, on ſleeping eye-lids laid,
Will mak a man or woman madly doat
Upon the next live creature that it ſees.
Fetch me this herb, and be thou here again,
Ere the Leviathan can ſwim a league.

Pu. I'le put a girdle about the earth in forty minutes.
Exit.

Ob. Having once this juyce,
I'le watch Titania, when ſhe is a ſleep,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes:
The next thing when ſhe waking looks upon,
(Be it on Lyon, bear, or Wolfe, or Bull,
On medling Monkey, or on buſie Ape)
She ſhall purſue it, with the ſoul of love.
And ere I take this charm off from her ſight,
(As I can take it with another herb)
I'le make her render up her Page to me.
But who comes here? I am inviſible,
And I will over-hear their conference.

Enter Demetrius, Helena following him.

Dem. I love thee not, therefore purſue me not,
Where is Liſander, and fair Hermia?
The one I'e ſtay, the other ſtayeth me.
Thou told'ſt me they were ſtoln into this wood;
And here am I, and wood within this wood,
Becauſe I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence get the gone, and follow me no more.

Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted Adamant,
But yet you draw not Iron, for my heart
Is true as ſteel. Leave your power to draw,
And I ſhall have no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? do I ſpeak you fair?
Or rather do I not in plaineſt truth,
Tell you I do not, nor I cannot love you?

Hel. And even for that do I love thee the more;
I am your ſpaniell, and Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawn on you.
Uſe me but as your ſpaniell; ſpurn me, ſtrike me,
Neglect me, loſe me; onely give me leave
(Unworthy as I am) to follow you.
What worſer place can I beg in your love,
(And yet a place of high reſpect with me)
Then to be uſed as you do your dog?

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my ſpirit,
For I am ſick when I do look on thee.

Hel. And I am ſick when I look not on you.

Dem. You do impeach your modeſty too much,
To leave the City, and commit your ſelf
Into the hands of one that loves you not,
To truſt the opportunity of night,
And the ill counſell of a deſert place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.

Hel. Your virtue is my priviledge: for that
It is not night when I do ſee your face.
Therefore I think I am not in the night,
Nor doth this wood lack worlds of company,

For you in my reſpect are all the world.
Then how can it be ſaid I am alone,
When all the world is here to look on me?

Dem. I'le run from thee, and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wilde beaſts.

Hel. The wildeſt hath not ſuch a heart as you;
Run when you will, the ſtory ſhall be chang'd:
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chaſe;
The Dove purſues the Griffin, the milde Hinde
Makes ſpeed to catch the Tyger. Bootleſs ſpeed,
When cowardiſe purſues, and valour flies.

Dem. I will not ſtay thy queſtions, let me go;
Or if thou follow me, do not believe,
But I ſhall do thee miſchief in the wood.

Hel. I, in the Temple, in the Town, and Field.
You do me miſchief. Fye Demetrius,
Your wrongs do ſet a ſcandall on my ſex:
We cannot fight for love, as men may do;
We ſhould be woo'd, and were not made to wooe.
I follow thee, and make a heaven of hell,
To die upon the hand I love ſo well. Exit.

Ob. Fare thee well Nymph, ere he do leave this grove.
Thou ſhalt fly him, and he ſhall ſeek thy love.
Haſt thou the flower there? Welcome wanderer.

Enter Puck.

Pu. I, there it is.

Ob. I pray thee give it me.
I know a bank where the wilde time blows,
Where the Oxſlips and the nodding Violet grows,
Quite over-cannoped with luſcious woodbine,
With ſweet muſk roſes, and with Eglantine,
There ſleeps Titania, ſometime of the night,
Lul'd in theſe flowers, with dances and delight:
And there the ſnake throws her enammel'd ſkin,
Weed wide enough to wrap a Fairy in.
And with the juyce of this I'le ſtreak her eyes,
And make her full of hatefull fantaſies.
Take thou ſome of it, and ſeek through this grove;
A ſweet Athenian Lady is in love
With a diſdainfull youth: annoint his eyes,
But do it when the next thing he eſpies,
May be the Lady. Thou ſhalt know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with ſome care, that he may prove
More fond on her, then ſhe upon her love;
And look thou meet me, ere the firſt Cock crow.

Pu. Fear not my Lord, your ſervant ſhall do ſo. Exit.

Enter Queen of Fairies, with her train.

Qu. Come, now a Roundell, and a Fairy ſong:
Then for the third part of a minute hence,
Some to kill Kankers in the muſk roſe buds,
Some war with Reremiſe, for their leathern wings,
To make my ſmall Elves coats, and ſome keep back
The clamorous Owle that nightly hoots and wonders
At our queint ſpirits: Sing me now aſleep,
Then to your offices, and let me reſt.

Fairies Sing.

You ſpotted Snakes with double tongue,
Thorny Hedgehoggs be not ſeen,
Newts and blind wormes do no wrong,
Come not near our Fairy Queen.
Philomele with melodie,
Sing in your ſweet Lullaby,
Lulla, lulla, lullaby, lulla lulla, lullaby:
Never harm, nor ſpell, nor charm.
Come our lovely Lady nye,
So good night with Lullaby.

2. Fairy.

Weaving Spiders come not here,
Hence you long leg'd Spinners, hence:
Beetles black approach not near:
Worme nor Snayle do no offence.
Philomele with melody, &c.

1. Fairy.

Hence away, now all is well:
One aloofe, ſtand Centinell.

Enter Oberon.

Ob. What thou ſeeſt when thou doſt wake,
Do it for thy true love take:
Love and languiſh for his ſake.
Be it Ounce, or Cat, or Bear,
Pard, or Boar, with briſtled hair,
In thy eye that ſhall appear,
When thou wak'ſt, it is thy dear,
Wake when ſome vile thing is near.

Enter Lyſander and Hermia.

Lyſ. Fair love, you faint with wandring in the woods;
And to ſpeak troth, I have forgot our way:
We'll reſt us Hermia, if you think it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.

Her. Be it ſo Lyſander: finde you out a bed,
For I upon this bank will reſt my head.

Lyſ. One turfe ſhall ſerve as pillow for us both,
One heart, one bed, two boſomes, and one troth.

Her. Nay good Lyſander, for my ſake, my dear,
Lie further off yet, do not lie ſo near.

Lyſ. O take the ſence ſweet, of my innocence,
Love takes the meaning, in loves conference,
I mean that my heart unto yours is knit,
So that but one heart can you make of it.
Two boſomes interchanged with an oath,
So then two boſomes, and a ſingle troth.
Then by your ſide, no bed-room me deny,
For lying ſo, Hermia, I do not lye.

Her. Lyſander riddles very prettily:
Now much beſhrew my manners, and my pride,
If Hermia meant to ſay, Lyſander lied.
But gentle friend, for love and curteſie
Lie further off in humane modeſty,
Such ſeparation, as may well be ſaid,
Becomes a vertuous batchelor, and a maid,
So far be diſtant, and good night ſweet friend:
Thy love ne're alter till thy ſweet life end.

Lyſ. Amen, amen, to that fair prayer, ſay I,
And then end life, when I end loyalty:
Here is my bed, ſleep give thee all his reſt.

Her. With half that wiſh, the wiſhers eyes be preſt.

Enter Puck. They ſleep.

Pu. Through the Forreſt have I gone,
But Athenian finde I none,
On whoſe eyes I might approve
This flowers force in ſtirring love.
Night and ſilence: who is here?
Weeds of Athens he doth wear:
This is he (my maſter ſaid)
Deſpiſed the Athenian maid:
And here the maiden ſleeping ſound,

On

On the dank and durty ground.
Pretty ſoul, ſhe durſt not lie
Near this lack-love, this kill-curteſie.
Churle upon the eyes I throw
All the power this charm doth owe:
When thou wak'ſt, let love forbid
Sleep his ſeat on thy eye-lid.
So awake when I am gone:
For I muſt now to Oberon. Exit.

Enter Demetrius and Helena running.

Hel. Say, though thou kill me, ſweet Demetrius. Stay
De. I charge thee hence, and do not haunt me thus.
Hel. O wilt thou darkling leave me? do not ſo.
De. Stay on thy perill, I alone will go.
Exit Demetrius.

Hel. O I am out of breath, in this fond chace,
The more my prayer, the leſſer is my grace,
Happy is Hermia, wherefoere ſhe lies:
For ſhe hath bleſſed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes ſo bright? Not with ſalt tears.
If ſo, my eyes are ofner waſht then hers.
No, no, I am as ugly as a Bear.
For beaſts that meet me, runne away for fear,
Therefore no marvaile, though Demetrius
Do, as a monſter, fly my preſence thus.
What wicked and diſſembling glaſſe of mine,
Made me compare with Hermias ſphery eyne?
But who is here? Lyſander on the ground:
Dead or aſleep? I ſee no bloud, no wound,
Lyſander, if you live, good ſir, awake.
Lyſ. And run through fire I will for thy ſweet ſake.
Tranſparent Helena, nature here ſhews art,
That through thy boſome makes me ſee thy heart,
Where Demetrius? oh how fit a word
Is that vile name, to periſh on my ſword?
Hel. Do not ſay ſo Lyſander, ſay not ſo:
What though he love your Hermia? Lord, what though?
Yet Hermia ſtill loves you, then be content,
Lyſ. Content with Hermia? No, I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her have ſpent.
Not Hermia, but Helena now I love:
Who will not change a Raven for a Dove?
The will of man is by his reaſon ſway'd:
And reaſon ſayes you are the worthier Maid.
Things growing are not ripe untill their ſeaſon:
So I being young, till now ripe not to reaſon,
And touching now the point of humane skill,
Reaſon becomes the Marſhall to my will,
And leads me to your eyes, where I orelook
Loves ſtories, written in Loves richeſt book.
Hel. Wherefore was I to this keen mockery born?
When at your hands did I deſerve this ſcorn?
Iſt not enough, iſt not enough, young man,
That I did never, no nor never can,
Deſerve a ſweet look from Demetrius eye,
But you muſt flout my inſufficiency?
Good troth you do me wrong (good ſooth you do)
In ſuch diſdainfull manner, me to wooe.
But fare you well: perforce I muſt confeſſe,
I thought you Lord of more true gentleneſſe.
Oh, that a Lady of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd. Exit.
Lyſ. She ſees not Hermia ſleep thou there,
And never maiſt thou come Lyſander near:
For as a ſurfeit of the ſweeteſt things
The deepeſt loathing to a ſtomach brings:
Or as the hereſies that men do leave,
Are hated moſt of thoſe that did deceive:
So thou, my ſurfeit, and my hereſie,
Of all be hated: but the moſt of me,
And all my powers addreſſe your love and might,
To honour Helen, and to be her Knight. Exit.
Her. Help me Lyſander, help me, do thy beſt.
To pluck this crawling ſerpent from my breſt.
Aye me, for pitty, what a dream was here?
Lyſander look, how I do quake with fear:
Me-thought a ſerpent eat my heart away,
And yet ſate ſmiling at his cruell prey.
Lyſander, what remov'd? Lyſander, Lord,
What out of hearing, gone? No ſound, no word?
Alack where are you? ſpeak and if you hear:
Speak of all loves: I ſwound almoſt with fear.
No, then I well perceive you are not nye,
Either death or you Ile find immediately. Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Clownes.

Bot. Are we all met?
Quin. Par, pat, and here's a marvailous convenient place for our rehearſall. This green plot ſhall be our ſtage, this hauthorn brake our tyring houſe, and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the Duke.
Bot. Peter Quince?
Peter. What ſaiſt thou, bully Bottome?
Bot. There are things in this Comedy of Piramus and Thisby, that will never pleaſe. Firſt, Piramus muſt draw a ſword to kill himſelf: which the Ladies cannot abide. How anſwer you that?
Snout. Berlaken, a parlous fear.
Star. I believe we muſt leave the killing out, when all is done.
Bot. Not a whit, I have a device to make all well. Write me a Prologue, and let the Prologue ſeem to ſay, we will do no harm with our ſwords, and that Pyramus is not kill'd indeed: and for the more better aſſurance, tell them, that I Pyramus am not Pyramus, but Bottome the Weaver; this will put them out of fear.
Quin. Well, we will have ſuch a Prologue, and it ſhall be written in eight and ſix.
Bot. No, make it two more, let it be written in eight and eight.
Snout. Will not the Ladies be afear'd of the Lion?
Star. I fear it, I promiſe you.
Bot. Maiſters, you ought to conſider with your ſelves, to bring in (God ſhield us) a Lion among Ladies, is a moſt dreadful thing. For there is not a more fearful wild fowle then your Lyon living: and we ought to look to it.
Snout. Therefore another Prologue muſt tell he is not a Lion.
Bot. Nay, you muſt name his name, and half his face muſt be ſeen through the Lions neck, and he himſelf muſt ſpeak through, ſaying thus, or to the ſame defect: Ladies, or fair Ladies, I would wiſh you, or I would request you, or I would entreat you, not to fear, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a Lion, it were pitty of my life. No, I am no such thing, I am a man as other men are; and there indeed let him name his name, and tell him plainly he is Snug the Joiner.

Quince. Well, it shall be so; but there is two hard things, that is, to bring the Moon-light into a chamber: for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meet by Moon-light.

Snug. Doth the Moon-shine that night we play our Play?

Bot. A Calender, a Calender, look in the Almanack, find out Moon-shine, find out Moon-shine.

Enter Puck.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why then may you leave a casement of the great chamber window (where we play) open, and the Moon may shine in at the casement.

Qu. I, or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lanthorn, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present the person of Moon-shine. Then there is another thing, we must have a wall in the great Chamber; for Piramus and Thisby (sayes the story) did talk through the chink of a wall.

Snug. You can never bring in a wall. What say you Bottome?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall, and let him have some Plaster, or some Lome, or some rough-cast about him, to signifie wall; or let him hold his fingers thus; and through that cranny, shall Pyramus, and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit down every mothers son, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin; when you have spoken your speech, enter into that Brake, and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Robin.

Rob. What hempen home-spuns have we swaggering here,
So near the Cradle of the Fairy Queen?
What, a Play toward? Ile be an auditor:
An Actor too perhaps, if I see cause.

Qu. Speak Pyramus: Thisby stand forth.

Pir. Thisby, the flowers of odious savors sweet.

Quin. Odours, odours.

Pir. Odours savors sweet,
So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby dear.
But hark, a voice: stay thou but here a while,
And by and by I will to thee appear. Exit. Pir.

Puck. A stranger Pyramus, then ere plaid here.

Thisb. Must I speak now?

Pet. I marry must you. For you must understand he goes but to see a noise that he heard, and is to come again.

This. Most radiant Piramus, most Lilly white of hue,
Of colour like the red rose on triumphant bryer,
Most brisky Juvenall, and eke most lovely Jew,
As true as truest horse, that yet would never tire,
Ile meet thee Piramus, at Ninnies tomb.

Pet. Ninus tomb, man: why, you must not speak that yet; that you answer to Piramus: you speak all your part at once, cues and all. Piramus enter, your cue is past; it is never tire.

Thisb. O, as true as truest horse, that yet would never tire:

Pir. If I were fair, Thisby I were onely thine.

Pet. O monstrous. O strange. We are hanted; pray masters, flie masters, help.

The Clowns all Exeunt.

Puck. Ile follow you, Ile lead you about a Round,
Through bogge, through bush, through brake, through bryer,
Sometime a horse Ile be, sometimes a hound;
A hogge, a headlesse Bear, sometime a fire,
And neigh, and bark, and grunt, and rore, and burne,
Like horse, hound, hog, Bear, fire, at every turn. Exit.

Enter Piramus with the Asse head.

Bot. Why do they run away? This is a knavery of them to make me afeard. Enter Snout.

Sn. O Bottome, thou art chang'd; What do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? You see an Asse-head of your own, do you?

Enter Peter Quince.

Pet. Blesse thee Bottome, blesse thee; thou art translated. Exit.

Bot. I see their knavery: this is to make an asse of me, to fright me if they could; but I will not stirre from this place, do what they can. I will walk up and down here, and will sing that they shall here I am not afraid.
The Woosell cock, so black of hew,
With Orenge-tawny bill.
The Throstle, with his note so true,
The Wren and little quill.

Tita. What Angell wakes me from my flowry bed?

Bot. The Finch, the Sparrow, and the Lark,
The plainsong Cuckow gray;
Whose note full many a man doth mark,
And dares not answer, nay.
For indeed, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird?
Who would give a bird the lye, though he cry Cuckow, never so?

Tita. I pray thee gentle mortall, sing again,
Mine ear is much enamored of thy note;
On the first view to say, to swear I love thee.
So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape.
And thy fair vertues force (perforce) doth move me.

Bot. Me-thinks maistresse, you should have little reason for that: and yet to say the truth, reason and love keep little company together, now-adayes. The more the pity, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gleek upon occasion.

Tyta. Thou art as wise as thou art beautifull.

Bot. Not so neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine own turn.

Tyta. Out of this wood, do not desire to go,
Thou shalt remain here, whether thou wilt or no.
I am a spirit of no common rate:
The Summer still doth tend upon my state,
And I do love thee; therefore goe with me,
Ile give thee Fairies to attend on thee;
And they shall fetch thee Jewels from the deep,
And sing, while thou on pressed flowers doth sleep:
And I will purge thy mortal grossenesse so,
That thou shalt like an airy spirit go.

Enter Pease-blossome, Cobweb, Moth, Mustard-seed, and four Fairies.

Fair. Ready; and I, and I, and I, Where shall we go?

Tit. Be-

Tita. Be kind and courteous to this Gentleman.
Hop in his walks, and gambole in his eyes,
Feed him with Apricocks, and Dewberries,
With purple Grapes, green Figs, and Mulberries,
The honie-bags steal from the humble Bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighes.
And light them at the fiery-Glow-wormes eyes,
To have my love to bed, and to arise:
And pluck the wings from painted Butterflies,
To fan the Moon-beames from his sleeping eyes.
Nod to him Elves, and doe him courtesies.

1. Fai. Hail mortall, hail.

2. Fai. Hail.

3. Fai. Hail.

Bot. I cry your worships mercy heartily, I beseech your worships name.

Cob. Cobweb.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good Master Cobweb: if I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you.
Your name honest Gentleman?

Peas. Pease-blossom.

Bot. I pray you commend me to Mistresse Squash, your Mother, and to Master Peascod your Father. Good Master Pease-blossom, I shall desire of you more acquaintance too. Your name I beseech you sir?

Mus. Mustard-seed.

Bot. Good Master Mustard-seed; I know your patience well: that same cowardly gyant-like Oxe-beef hath devoured many a Gentleman of your house. I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire your more acquaintance, good Master Mustard-seed.

Tita. Come wait upon him, lead him to my bower.
The Moon me thinks, looks with a watry eye,
And when she weeps, weep every little flower,
Lamenting some enforced chastity.
Tye up my Lovers tongue, bring him silently. Exit.

Enter King of Fairies, solus.

Ob. I wonder if Titania be awak't:
Then what it was that next came in her eye,
Which she must dote on, in extremity.

Enter Puck.

Here comes my messenger: how now mad spirit,
What night-rule now about this haunted Grove?

Puck. My Mistresse with a monster is in love,
Near to her close and consecrated bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping houre,
A crew of patches, rude Mechanicals,
That work for bread upon Athenian stalls,
Were met together to rehearse a Play,
Intended for great Theseus nuptiall day:
The shalloweſt thick-skin of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented, in their sport,
Forsook his Scene, and entred in a brake,
When I did him at this advantage take,
An Asses nole I fixed on his head.
Anon his Thisbie must be answered,
And forth my Mimmick comes: when they him spie,
As wild-Geese, that the creeping Fowler eye,
Or russed-pated choughs, many in sort
(Rising and cawing at the Guns report)
Sever themselves, and madly sweep the skye:
So at his sight, away his fellows flie,
And at our stamp, here o're and o're one falls;
He murther cries, and help from Athens calls.
Their sense thus weak, lost with their fears thus strong,
Made senseleſſe things begin to doe them wrong.
For briars and thorns at their apparell snatch,
Some sleeves, some hats, from yielders all things catch,
I led them on in this distracted fear,
And left sweet Pyramus translated there:
When in that moment (so it came to passe)
Titania wak't, and straight way lov'd an Asse.

Ob. This falls out better then I could devise:
But hast thou yet latcht the Athenians eyes,
With the love juyce as I did bid thee doe?

Rob. I took him sleeping (that is finisht too)
And the Athenian Woman by his side,
That when he wak't, of force she must be ey'd.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Ob. Stand close, this is the same Athenian.

Rob. This is the woman, but not this the man.

Dem. O why rebuke you him that loves you so?
Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Her. Now I but chide, but I should use thee worse.
For thou (I fear) hast given me cause to curse,
If thou hast slain Lysander in his sleep,
Being o're shooes in blood, plunge in the deep, and kill me too:
The Sun was not so true unto the day,
As he to me. Would he have stollen away,
From sleeping Hermia? I'le believe as soon
This whole earth may be bord, and that the Moon
May through the Center creep, and so displease
Her brothers noon-tide, with th' Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou hast murdred him,
So should a murtherer look, so dead, so grim.

Dem. So should the murderer look, and so should I,
Pierst through the heart with your stearn cruelty:
Yet you the murderer looks as bright as clear,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering spheare.

Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he?
Ah good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Dem. I'de rather give his carkasse to my hounds.

Her. Out dog, out cur, thou driv'st me past the bounds
Of maidens patience. Hast thou slain him then?
Henceforth be never numbred among men.
Oh, once tell true, and even for my sake,
Durst thou a lookt upon him, being awake?
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brave tutch:
Could not a worm, an Adder doe so much?
An Adder did it: for with doubler tongue
Then thine (thou serpent) never Adder stung,

Dem. You spend your passion on a mispris'd mood;
I am not guilty of Lysanders blood:
Nor is he dead for ought that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee tell me then that he is well.

Dem. And if I could, what should I get therefore?

Her. A priviledge, never to see me more;
And from thy hated presence part I: see me no more
Whether he be dead or no. Exit.

Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vein,
Here therefore for a while I will remain.
So sorrows heavineſſe doth heavier grow:
For debt that bankrout slip doth sorrow owe,
Which now in some slight measure it will pay,

If for his tender here I make ſome ſtay. Lie down.
Ob. What haſt thou done? Thou haſt miſtaken quite
And laid the love juyce on ſome true-loves ſight:
Of thy miſpriſion, muſt perforce enſue
Some true love turn'd, and not a falſe turn'd true.
Rob. Then fate o're-rules, that one man holding troth,
A million fail, confounding oath on oath.
Ob. About the wood, go ſwifter then the wind,
And Helena of Athens look thou find.
All fancy-ſick ſhe is, and pale of cheer,
With ſighs of love, that coſts the freſh bloud dear.
By ſome illuſion ſee thou bring her here,
I'le charm his eyes againſt ſhe doth appear,
Rob. I go, I go, look how I go,
Swifter then arrow from the Tartars bow. Exit.
Ob. Flower of this purple die,
Hit with Cupids archery,
Sink in apple of his eye,
When his love he doth eſpy,
Let her ſhine as gloriouſly
As the Venus of the skie.
When thou wak'ſt if ſhe be by
Beg of her for remedy.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Captain of our Fairy band,
Helena is here at hand,
And the youth, miſtook by me,
Pleading for a Lovers fee.
Shall we their fond Pageant ſee?
Lord, what fools theſe mortalls be!
Ob. Stand aſide: the noyſe they make,
Will cauſe Demetrius to awake.
Puck. Then will two at once wooe one,
That muſt needs be ſport alone:
And thoſe things doe beſt pleaſe me,
That befall prepoſterouſly.

Enter Lyſander and Helena.

Lyſ. Why ſhould you think that I ſhould wooe in Scorn and deriſion never comes in teares: (ſcorn?
Look when I vow I weep, and vowes ſo born,
In their nativity all truth appears.
How can theſe things in me ſeem ſcorn to you?
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true.
Hel. You doe advance your cunning more and more,
When truth kills truth, O deviliſh holy fray!
Theſe vowes are Hermiaes. Will you give her o're?
Weigh oath with oath, and you will nothing weigh.
Your vowes to her and me, (put in two ſcales)
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.
Lyſ. I had no judgement, when to her I ſwore.
Hel. Nor none in my mind, now you give her o're.
Lyſ. Demetrius loves her, and he loves not you. Aſide.
Dem. O Helen, goddeſſe, nymph, perfect, divine,
To what? my love, ſhall I compare thine eyne,
Chriſtall is muddy, O how ripe in ſhow,
Thy lips, thoſe kiſſing cherries, tempting grow!
That pure congealed white, high Taurus ſnow,
Fann'd with the Eaſtern wind, turns to a Crow,
When thou hold'ſt up thy hand. O let me kiſſe
This Princeſſe of pure white, this ſeal of bliſſe.
Hel. O ſpight! O hell! I ſee you are all bent
To ſet againſt me, for your merriment:
If you were civil, and knew courteſie,
You would not doe me thus much injury.
Can you not hate me, as I know you doe,
But you muſt joyn in ſouls to mock me too?
If you are men, as men you are in ſhow,
You would not uſe a gentle Lady ſo?
To vow, and ſwear, and ſuperpraiſe my parts,
When I am ſure you hate me with your hearts.
You both are Rivals, and love Hermia,
And now both Rivals, to mock Helena.
A trim exploit, a manly enterprize,
To conjure teares up in a poor maids eyes,
With your deriſion; none of noble ſort,
Would ſo offend a Virgin, and extort
A poor ſouls patience, all to make you ſport.
Lyſ. You are unkind Demetrius; be not ſo,
For you love Hermia; this you know I know;
And here with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermiaes love I yield you up my part;
And yours of Helena, to me bequeath,
Whom I doe love, and will doe to my death.
Hel. Never did mockers waſte more idle breath.
Dem. Lyſander, keep thy Hermia, I will none:
If e're I lov'd her, all that love is gone.
My heart to her, but as gueſt-wiſe ſojourn'd,
And now to Helen it is home return'd,
There to remain.
Lyſ. It is not ſo.
Dem. Diſparage not the faith thou doſt not know,
Leſt to thy perill thou abide it dear.
Look where thy Love comes, yonder is thy dear.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes
The ear more quick of apprehenſion makes,
Wherein it doth impair the ſeeing ſenſe,
It pays the hearing double recompence.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lyſander found,
Mine ear (I thank it) brought me to that ſound,
But why unkindly didſt thou leave me ſo? (to go?
Lyſan. Why ſhould he ſtay whom Love doth preſſe
Her. What love could preſſe Lyſander from my ſide?
Lyſ. Lyſander's love (that would not let him bide)
Fair Helena, who more engilds the night,
Then all yon fiery oes, and eyes of light.
Why ſeek'ſt thou me? Could not this make thee know,
The hate I bare thee, made me leave thee ſo?
Her. You ſpeak not as you think; it cannot be.
Hel. Loe, ſhe is one of this confederacy,
Now I perceive they have conjoyn'd all three;
To faſhion this falſe ſport in ſpight of me.
Injurious Hermia, moſt ungratefull maid,
Have you conſpir'd, have you with theſe contriv'd
To bait me, with this foul deriſion?
Is all the counſell that we two have ſhar'd,
The ſiſters vowes, the hours that we have ſpent,
When we have chid the haſty footed time,
For parting us; O, and is all forgot?
All ſchool-dayes friendſhip, child-hoods innocence?
We, Hermia, like two Artificiall gods,
Have with our needles, created both one flower,
Both on one ſampler, ſitting on one cuſhion;
Both warbling of one ſong, both in one key;
As if our hands, our ſides, voyces, and minds
Had been incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, ſeeming parted,
But a union in partition,

Two

Two lovely berries molded on one ſtem,
So with two ſeeming bodies, but one heart,
Two of the firſt life, coats in Heraldry,
Due but to one, and crowned with one creſt.
And will you rent our ancient love aſunder,
To joyn with men in ſcorning your poor friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly.
Our ſex as well as I may chide you for it,
Though I alone doe feel the injury.
Her. I am amazed at your paſſionate words,
I ſcorn you not; it ſeems that you ſcorn me.
Hel. Have you not ſet Lyſander, as in ſcorn
To follow me, and praiſe my eyes and face?
And made your other love, Demetrius
(Who even but now did ſpurn me with his foot)
To call me goddeſſe, nymph, divine, and rare,
Precious, celeſtiall? Wherefore ſpeaks he this
To her he hates? And wherefore doth Lyſander
Deny your love (ſo rich within his ſoul)
And tender me (forſooth) affection,
But by your ſetting on, by your conſent?
What though I be not ſo in grace as you,
So hung upon with love, ſo fortunate?
(But miſerable moſt, to love unlov'd)
This you ſhould pity rather then deſpiſe.
Her. I underſtand not what you mean by this.
Hel. I, doe, perſever, counterfeit ſad looks,
Make mouthes upon me when I turn my back,
Wink each at other, hold the ſweet jeſt up:
This ſport well carried, ſhall be chronicled.
If you have any pitty, grace, or manners,
You would not make me ſuch an argument:
But fare ye well, 'tis partly mine own fault,
Which death or abſence ſoon ſhall remedy.
Lyſ. Stay gentle Helena, hear my excuſe,
My love, my ſoul, fair Helena.
Hel. O excellent!
Her. Sweet, doe not ſcorn her ſo.
Dem. If ſhe cannot entreat, I can compell.
Lyſ. Thou canſt compell no more then ſhe entreat.
Thy threats have no more ſtrength then her weak praiſe.
Helen, I love thee, by my life I doe;
I ſwear by that which I will loſe for thee,
To prove him falſe that ſayes I love thee not.
Dem. I ſay, I love thee more then he can doe.
Lyſ. If thou ſay ſo, withdraw and prove it too.
Dem. Quick, come.
Her. Lyſander, whereto tends all this?
Lyſ. Away, you Ethiope.
Dem. No, no, Sir, ſeem to break looſe;
Take on as you would follow,
But yet come not: you are a tame man, go.
Lyſ. Hang off thou cat, thou burr; vile thing let looſe,
Or I will ſhake thee from me like a ſerpent.
Her. Why are you grown ſo rude?
What change is this, ſweet Love?
Lyſ. Thy love? out tawny Tartar, out;
Out loathed medicine; O hated poyſon hence.
Her. Doe you not jeſt?
Hel. Yes ſooth, and ſo doe you.
Lyſ. Demetrius, I will keep my word with thee.
Dem. I would I had your bond: for I perceive
A weak bond holds you; I'le not truſt your word.
Lyſ. What, ſhould I hurt her, ſtrike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, I'le not harm her ſo.
Her. What, can you doe me greater harm then hate?
Hate me, wherefore? O me, what newes my Love?
Am not I Hermia? are not you Lyſander?
I am as fair now, as I was ere while.
Since night you lov'd me; yet ſince night you left me.
Why then you left me (O the Gods forbid)
In earneſt, ſhall I ſay?
Lyſ. I, by my life;
And never did deſire to ſee thee more.
Therefore be out of hope, of queſtion, of doubt;
Be certain, nothing truer: 'tis no jeſt,
That I doe hate thee, and love Helena.
Her. O me, you jugler, you canker-bloſſome,
You thief of love; What have you come by night,
And ſtoln my loves heart from him?
Hel. Fine ifaith:
Have you no modeſty, no maiden ſhame,
No touch of baſhfulneſſe? What will you tear
Impatient anſwers from my gentle tongue)
Fie, fie, you counterfeit, you puppet, you.
Her. Puppet? why ſo? I, that way goes the game.
Now I perceive that ſhe hath made compare
Between our ſtatures, ſhe hath urg'd her height,
And with her perſonage, her tall perſonage,
Her height (forſooth) ſhe hath prevail'd with him.
And are you grown ſo high in his eſteem,
Becauſe I am ſo dwarfiſh, and ſo low?
How low am I, thou painted May-pole? Speak,
How low am I? I am not yet ſo low,
But that my nails can reach unto thine eyes.
Hel. I pray you though you mock me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me, I was never curſt:
I have no gift at all in ſhrewiſhneſſe;
I am a right maid for my cowardize;
Let her not ſtrike me: you perhaps may think,
Becauſe ſhe is ſomething lower then my ſelf,
That I can match her.
Her. Lower? hark again.
Hel. Good Hermia, doe not be ſo bitter with me,
I evermore did love you Hermia,
Did ever keep your counſells, never wronged you,
Save that in love unto Demetrius,
I told him of your ſtealth unto this Wood.
He followed you, for love I followed him,
But he hath chid me hence, and threatned me
To ſtrike me, ſpurn me, nay, to kill me too;
And now, ſo you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I bear my folly back,
And follow you no further. Let me go,
You ſee, how ſimple, and how fond I am.
Her. Why get you gone: who is't that hinders you?
Hel. A fooliſh heart, that I leave here behind.
Her. What, with Lyſander?
Hel. With Demetrius.
Lyſ. Be not afraid, ſhe ſhall not harm thee Helena.
Dem. No ſir, ſhe ſhall not, though you take her part.
Hel. O, when ſhe's angry, ſhe is keen and ſhrewd,
She was a vixen when ſhe went to ſchoole,
And though ſhe be but little ſhe is fierce.
Her. Little again? nothing but low and little?
Why will you ſuffer her to flout me thus?
Let me come to her.
Lyſ. Get you gone you dwarfe,
You minimus, of hindring knot-graſſe made,
You Bead, you Acorn.
Dem. You are too officious,
In her behalf that ſcorns your ſervices.

Let

Let her alone, ſpeak not of Helena,
Take not her part. For if thou doſt intend
Never ſo little ſhew of love to her,
Thou ſhalt abide it.
Lyſ. Now ſhe holds me not,
Now follow if thou dar'ſt, to try whoſe right,
Of thine or mine is moſt in Helena.
Dem. Follow? Nay, I'le go with thee cheek by jowle.
Exit Lyſander and Demetrius.
Her. You Miſtris, all this coyl is long of you.
Nay, go not back.
Hel. I will not truſt you I,
Nor longer ſtay in your curſt company.
Your hands then mine are quicker for a fray,
My legs are longer though to run away. Exeunt.

Enter Oberon and Puck.
Ob. This is thy negligence, ſtill thou miſtak'ſt,
Or elſe committ'ſt thy knaveries willingly.
Puck. Believe me, King of ſhadows, I miſtook,
Did not you tell me, I ſhould know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on?
And ſo far blameleſſe proves my enterprize,
That I have nointed an Athenian's eyes,
And ſo far am I glad, it ſo did ſort,
As this their jangling I eſteem a ſport.
Ob. Thou ſeeſt theſe Lovers ſeek a place to fight,
Hie therefore Robin, overcaſt the night,
The ſtarry Welkin cover thou anon,
With drooping fogge as black as Acheron,
And lead theſe teſty Rivals ſo aſtray,
As one come not within anothers way.
Like to Lyſander, ſometime frame thy tongue,
Then ſtirre Demetrius up with bitter wrong;
And ſometime rail thou like Demetrius;
And from each other look thou lead them thus,
Till o're their browes, death-counterfeiting ſleep
With leaden legs, and Battie-wings doth creep;
Then cruſh this hearbe into Lyſanders eye,
Whoſe liquor hath this virtuous property,
To take from thence all errour, with his might,
And make his eye-balls rowl with wonted ſight.
When they next wake, all this deriſion
Shall ſeem a dream, and fruitleſſe viſion,
And back to Athens ſhall the Lovers wend
With league, whoſe date till death ſhall never end.
Whiles I in this affaire doe thee imply,
I'le to my Queen, and beg her Indian Boy;
And then I will her charmed eye releaſe
From monſters view, and all things ſhall be peace.
Puck. My Fairy Lord, this muſt be done with haſte,
For nights-ſwift Dragons cut the Clouds full faſt,
And yonder ſhines Auroras harbinger;
At whoſe approch Ghoſts wandring here and there,
Troop home to Church-yards; damned ſpirits all,
That in croſſe-wayes and floods have buriall,
Already to their wormy beds are gone,
For fear leaſt day ſhould look their ſhames upon,
They wilfully exile themſelves from light,
And muſt for aye conſort with black-browd night.
Ob. But we are ſpirits of another ſort:
I with the morning love have oft made ſport,
And like a Forreſter, the groves may tread,
Even till the Eaſtern gate all fiery red,
Opening on Neptune, with fair bleſſed beames,
Turns into yellow gold, his ſalt green ſtreames.
But notwithſtanding haſte, make no delay:
We may effect this buſineſſe, yet ere day.
Puck. Up and down, up and down, I will lead them up and down: I am fear'd in field and town. Goblin, lead them up and down: here comes one.

Enter Lyſander
Lyſ. Where art thou, proud Demetrius?
Speak thou now.
Rob. Here villain, drawn and ready. Where art thou?
Lyſ. I will be with thee ſtraight.
Rob. Follow me then to plainer ground.

Enter Demetrius.
Dem. Lyſander, ſpeak again;
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?
Speak in ſome buſh: Where doſt thou hide thy head?
Rob. Thou coward, art thou begging to the ſtars,
Telling the buſhes that thou look'ſt for Wars,
And wilt not come? Come recreant, come thou child,
I'le whip thee with a rod. He is defil'd
That drawes a ſword on thee.
Dem. Yea, art thou there?
Ro. Follow my voyce, wee'l try no manhood here. Exit.
Lyſ. He goes before me, and ſtill dares me on,
When I come where he calls me, then he's gone.
The villain is much lighter heel'd then I:
I followed faſt, but faſter he did flye; ſhifting places.
That faln am I in dark uneven way,
And here will reſt me. Come thou gentle day: lie down.
For if but once thou ſhew me thy gray light,
I'le find Demetrius, and revenge this ſpight.

Enter Robin and Demetrius.
Rob. Ho, ho, ho, coward, why com'ſt thou not?
Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'ſt. For well I wot.
Thou runn'ſt before me, ſhifting every place,
And dar'ſt not ſtand, nor look me in the face.
Where art thou?
Rob. Come hither, I am here.
Dem. Nay then thou mock'ſt me; thou ſhalt buy this dear,
If ever I thy face by day-light ſee.
Now go thy way: faintneſſe conſtraineth me,
To meaſure out my length on this cold bed,
By dayes approach look to be viſited.

Enter Helena.
Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious night,
Abate thy houres, ſhine comforts from the Eaſt,
That I may back to Athens by day-light,
From theſe that my poor company deteſt,
And ſleep that ſometimes ſhuts up ſorrows eye,
Steal me a while from mine own company. Sleep.
Rob. Yet but three? Come one more,
Two of both kindes make up four.
Here ſhe comes, curſt and ſad,
Cupid is a knaviſh lad,
Thus to make poor females mad.

Enter Hermia.
Her. Never ſo weary, never ſo in woe,
Bedabbled with the dew, and torn with briars,
I can no further crawl, no further go;
My legs can keep no pace with my deſires.
Here will I reſt me till the break of day,
Heavens ſhield Lyſander, if they mean a fray.
Rob. On the ground ſleep ſound,
I'le apply your eye, gentle lover, remedy.
When thou wak'ſt, thou tak'ſt
True delight in the ſight of thy former Ladies eye,

And

And the Countrey Proverb known,
That every man should take his own,
In your waking shall be shown.
Jack shall have Jill, naught shall go ill,
The man shall have his Mare again, and all shall be well.

They sleep all the Act.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Queen of Fairies, and Clown, and Fairies, and the King behind them.

Tita. Come, sit thee down upon this flowry bed,
While I thy amiable cheeks do coy,
And stick musk roses in thy sleek smooth head,
And kiss thy fair large ears, my gentle joy.
Clow. Where's Pease Blossome?
Pease. Ready.
Clo. Scratch my head, Pease-Blossome. Where's Mounsieur Cobweb.
Cob. Ready.
Clo. Mounsieur Cobweb, good Mounsieur get your weapons in your hand, and kill me a red hipt humble-Bee on the top of a thistle; and good Mounsieur bring me the hony bag. Doe not fret your self too much in the action, Mounsieur; and good Mounsieur have a care the hony bag break not, I would be loth to have you overflown with a hony-bag signior. Where's Mounsieur Mustardseed?
Mus. Ready.
Clo. Give me your newse, Mounsieur Mustard,
Pray you leave your curtesie good Mounsieur.
Mus. What's your will?
Clo. Nothing good Mounsieur, but to help Cavalero Cobweb to scratch. I must to the Barbers Mounsieur, for me thinks I am marvellous hairy about the face. And I am such a tender asse, if my hair do but tickle me, I must scratch.
Tita. What, wilt thou hear some musick, my sweet love?
Clo. I have a reasonable good ear in musick. Let us have the tonges and the bones.

Musick Tongs, Rurall Musick.

Tita. Or say sweet Love, what thou desirest to eat.
Clo. Truely a peck of Provender; I would munch your good dry Oats. Me thinks I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweet hay hath no fellow.
Tita. I have a venturous Fairy,
That shall seek the Squirrels hoard,
And fetch thee new Nuts.
Clo. I had rather have a handfull or two of dried pease. But I pray you let none of your people stir me, I have an exposition of sleep come upon me.
Tita. Sleep thou, and I will winde thee in my arms,
Fairies be gone, and be alwayes away.
So doth the woodbine, the sweet Honisuckle,
Gently entwist; the female Ivy so
Enrings the barky fingers of the Elme,
O how I love thee! how I dote on thee?

Enter Robin Goodfellow, and Oberon.

Ob. Welcome good Robin:
Seest thou this sweet sight?
Her dotage now I do begin to pitty.
For meeting her of late behind the wood,
Seeking sweet savors for this hatefull foole,
I did upbraid her, and fall out with her.
For she his hairy temples then had rounded,
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers.
And that same dew which sometime on the buds,
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearls;
Stood now within the pretty flouriets eyes,
Like teares that did their own disgrace bewaile.
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in milde tearms beg'd my patience,
I then did ask of her, her changeling childe,
Which straight she gave me, and her Fairy sent
To bear him to my Bower in Fairy Land.
And now I have the Boy, I will undoe
This hatefull imperfection of her eyes,
And gentle Puck, take this transformed scalpe,
From off the head of this Athenian swain;
That he awaking when the other doe,
May all to Athens back again repair,
And think no more of this nights accidents,
But as the fierce vexation of a dream.
But first I will release the Fairy Queen.

Be thou as thou wast wont to be;
See as thou wast wont to see.
Dians bud, or Cupids flower,
Hath such force and blessed power.

Now my Titania wake you my sweet Queen.
Tita. My Oberon, what visions have I seen!
Me-thought I was enamoured of an Asse.
Ob. There lyes your love.
Tita. How came these things to pass?
Oh how mine eyes doe loath this visage now!
Ob. Silence a while. Robin take off his head:
Titania, musick call, and strike more dead
Then common sleep; of all these find the sense.
Tita. Musick, ho musick, such as charmeth sleep.

Musick still.

Rob. When thou awak'st, with thine own fools eyes peep.
Ob. Sound musick; come my Queen, take hand with me
And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be.
Now thou and I are new in amity,
And will to morrow midnight, solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus house triumphantly,
And bless it to all fair posterity.
There shall these paires of faithfull Lovers be
Wedded, with Theseus, all in jollity.
Rob. Fair King attend, and mark;
I doe hear the morning Lark.
Ob. Then my Queen in silence sad,
Trip we after the nights shade;
We the Globe can compass soon,
Swifter then the wandring Moon.
Tita. Come my Lord, and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I sleeping here was found,

Sleepers lie still.

With theſe mortals on the ground. Exeunt.

Winde Horns.

Enter Theſeus, Egæus, Hippolita and all his traine.

Theſ. Go one of you, finde out the Forreſter,
For now our obſervation is perform'd;
And ſince we have the vaward of the day,
My Love ſhall hear the muſick of my hounds.
Uncouple in the Weſtern valley, let them go;
Diſpatch I ſay, and finde the Forreſter.
We will fair Queen, up to the Mountains top,
And mark the muſicall confuſion
Of hounds and eccho in conjunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Creet they bayed the Bear
With hounds of Sparta; never did I hear
Such gallant chiding. For beſides the groves,
The skies, the fountains, every region near,
Seem'd all one mutuall cry. I never heard
So muſicall a diſcord, ſuch ſweet thunder.

Theſ. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind,
So flew'd, ſo ſanded, and their heads are hung
With ears that ſweep away the morning dew,
Crook-kneed, and dew-lapt, like Theſſalian Buls,
Slow in purſuit, but match'd in mouth like bels,
Each under each. A cry more tuneable
Was never hollawed to, nor cheer'd with horn,
In Creet, in Sparta, nor in Theſſaly;
Judge when you hear. But ſoft, what nimphs are theſe?

Ege. My Lord, this is my daughter here aſleep,
And this Lyſander, this Demetrius is,
This Helena, old Nedars Helena,
I wonder of this being here together,

Theſ. No doubt they roſe up early, to obſerve
The right of May; and hearing our intent,
Came here in grace of our ſolemnity.
But ſpeak Egæus, is not this the day
That Hermia ſhould give anſwer of her choice?

Ege. It is my Lord.

Theſ. Goe bid the huntſ-men wake them with their horns.

Horns and they wake.

Shout within, they all ſtart up.

Theſ. Good morrow friends: Saint Valentine is paſt,
Begin theſe wood-birds but to couple now?

Lyſ. Pardon my Lord.

Theſ. I pray you all ſtand up.
I know you two are Rivall enemies.
How comes thus gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is ſo far from jealouſie,
To ſleep by hate, and fear no enmity,

Lyſ. My Lord, I ſhall reply amazedly,
Half ſleep, half waking. But as yet, I ſwear,
I cannot truly ſay how I came here.
But as I think (for truly would I ſpeak)
And now I do bethink me, ſo it is;
I came with Hermia hither. Our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the perill of the Athenian Law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my Lord: you have enough;
I beg the Law, the Law, upon his head:
They would have ſtoln away, they would Demetrius,
Thereby to have defeated you and me:
You of your wife, and me of my conſent;
Of my conſent, that ſhe ſhould be your wife.

Dem. My Lord, fair Helen told me of their ſtealth,
Of this their purpoſe hither, to this wood,
And I in fury hither followed them;
Fair Helena, in fancy followed me.
But my good Lord, I wot not by what power,
(But by ſome power it is) my love
To Hermia (melted as the ſnow)
Seems to me now as the remembrance of an idle gaude,
Which in my childhood I did doat upon:
And all the faith, the vertue of my heart,
The object and the pleaſure of mine eye,
Is only Helena. To her, my Lord,
Was I betroth'd, ere I ſee Hermia,
But like a ſickneſſe did I loath this food:
But as in health, come to my naturall taſte,
Now do I wiſh it, love it, long for it,
And will for evermore be true to it.

Theſ. Fair Lovers, you are fortunately met;
Of this diſcourſe we ſhall hear more anon.
Egæus, I will over-bear your will;
For in the Temple, by and by with us,
Theſe couples ſhall eternally be knit.
And for the morning now is ſomething worn,
Our purpos'd hunting ſhall be ſet aſide.
Away, with us to Athens; three and three,
We'll hold a feaſt in great ſolemnity.
Come Hippolita. Exit Duke and Lords.

Dem. Theſe things ſeem ſmall and undiſtinguiſhable,
Like far off mountains turned into Clouds.

Her. Me-thinks I ſee theſe things with parted eye,
When every thing ſeems double.

Hel. So me-thinks:
And I have found Demetrius, like a jewell,
Mine own, and not mine own.

Dem. It ſeems to me,
That we ſleep, we dream. Do not you think,
The Duke was here, and bid us follow him?

Her. Yea, and my Father.

Hel. And Hippolita.

Lyſ. And he bid us follow to the Temple.

Dem. Why then we are awake; lets follow him, and by the way let us recount our dreams.

Bottome Wakes. Exit Lovers.

Clo. When my cue comes, call me, and I will anſwer. My next is, moſt fair Piramus, Hey ho, Peter Quince? Flute the Bellowes-mender? Snout the Tinker? Starveling? Gods my life! Stoln hence, and left me aſleep: I have had a moſt rare viſion. I had a dream, paſt the wit of man, to ſay, what dream it was. Man is but an Aſſe, if he goe about to expound this dream. Me-thought I was, there is no man can tell what. Me-thought I was, and me-thought I had. But man is but a patch'd foole, if he will offer to ſay, what me-thought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the ear of man hath not ſeen, mans hand is not able to taſte, his tongue to conceive, nor his heart to report, what my dream was. I will get Peter Quince to write a ballet of this dream, it ſhall be called Bottomes Dream, becauſe it hath no bottome; and I will ſing it in the latter end of a play, before the Duke. Peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I ſhall ſing it at her death. Exit.

Enter Quince, Flute, Thisby, Snout, and Starveling.

Qui. Have you ſent to Bottomes houſe? Is he come home yet?

Star. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt he is tranſported.

Thiſ. If

Thisb. If he come not, then the play is mar'd. It goes forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not poſſible: you have not a man in all Athens, able to diſcharge Piramus but he.

This. No, he hath ſimply the beſt wit of any handy-craft man in Athens.

Quin. Yea, and the beſt perſon too, and he is a very Paramour, for a ſweet voice.

This. You muſt ſay, Paragon. A Paramour is (God bleſſe us) a thing of naught.

Enter Snug the Joiner.

Snug. Maſters, the Duke is coming from the Temple, and there is two or three Lords and Ladies more married. If our ſport had gone forward, we had all been made men.

This. O ſweet bully Bottome: thus hath he loſt ſixpence a day, during his life; he could not have ſcaped ſixpence a day. And the Duke had not given him ſixpence a day for playing Piramus, Ile be hang'd: He would have deſerved it. Sixpence a day in Piramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottome.

Bot. Where are theſe Lads? Where are theſe hearts?

Quin. Bottome, O moſt couragious day! O moſt happy hour!

Bot. Maſters, I am to diſcourſe wonders; but ask me not what, for if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you every thing as it fell out.

Quin. Let us hear, ſweet Bottome.

Bot. Not a word of me: all that I will tell you, is, that the Duke hath dined. Get your apparell together, good ſtrings to your beards, new ribbands to your pumps, meet preſently at the Palace, every man look ore his Part: for the ſhort and the long is, our Play is preferred: In any caſe let Thisby have clean linnen: and let not him that playes the Lion, pare his nailes, for they ſhall hang out for the Lion's claws. And moſt dear Actors, eat no Onions, nor Garlick; for we are to utter ſweet breath, and I do not doubt to hear them ſay, it is a ſweet Comedy. No more words: away, goe away.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Theſeus, Hippolita, Egæus and his Lords.

Hip. 'Tis ſtrange my Theſeus, that theſe lovers ſpeak of Theſ. More ſtrange then true. I never may believe

Theſe antick fables, nor theſe Fairy toyes,
Lovers and mad men, have ſuch ſeething brains,
Such ſhaping phantaſies, that apprehend more
Then coole reaſon ever comprehends.
The Lunatick, the Lover, and the Poet,
Are of imagination all compact.
One ſees more devils then vaſt hell can hold;
That is the mad-man. The Lover, all as frantick,
Sees Helens beauty in a brow of Egypt.
The Poets eye in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven.
And as imagination bodies forth the forms of things
Unknown; the Poets pen turns them to ſhapes,
And gives to aire nothing, a locall habitation,
And a name. Such tricks hath ſtrong imagination,
That if it would but apprehend ſome joy,
It comprehends ſome bringer of that joy.
Or in the night, imagining ſome fear
How eaſie is a buſh ſuppos'd a Bear?

Hip. But all the ſtory of the night told over,
And all their minds transfigur'd ſo together,
More witneſſeth than fancies images,
And grows to ſomething of great conſtancy;
But howſoever, ſtrange, and admirable.

Enter Lovers, Lyſander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

Theſ. Here come the lovers, full of joy and mirth:
Joy, gentle friends, joy, and freſh dayes of Love
Accompany your hearts.

Lyſ. More then to us,
Wait in your royal walks, your boord, your bed.

Theſ. Come now, what masks, what dances ſhall we have,
To wear away this long age of three houres:
Between our after ſupper, and bed-time?
Where is our uſual manager of mirth?
What Revels are in hand? Is there no play,
To eaſe the anguiſh of a torturing hour?
Call Egæus.

Egæus. Here mighty Theſeus.

Theſ. Say, what abridgement have you for this evening?
What maſk? What muſick? How ſhall we beguile
The lazy time, if not with ſome delight?

Eg. There is a brief how many ſports are rife:
Make choice of which your Highneſſe will ſee firſt.

Lyſ. The battell with the Centaurs to be ſung
By an Athenian Eunuch, to the Harp.

Theſ. We'll none of that. That have I told my love
In glory of my kinſman Hercules.

Lyſ. The riot of the tipſie Bachanals,
Tearing the Thraſian ſinger in their rage?

Theſ. That is an old device, and it was plaid
When I from Thebes came laſt a Conqueror,

Lyſ. The thrice three Muſes, mourning for the death of Learning, late deceaſt in beggery.

Theſ. That is ſome Satyr keen and criticall,
Not ſorting with a nuptial ceremony.

Lyſ. A tedious brief Scene of young Piramus,
And his love Thisby; very tragicall mirth.

Theſ. Merry and tragical? Tedious, and brief? That is, hot ice, and wondrous ſtrange ſnow. How ſhall we find the concord of this diſcord?

Eg. A Play there is my Lord, ſome ten words long,
Which is as brief, as I have known a Play;
But by ten words, my Lord, it is too long;
Which makes it tedious. For in all the Play,
There is not one word apt, one Player fitted.
And tragicall my noble Lord it is:
For Piramus therein doth kill himſelf.
Which when I ſaw rehearſt, I muſt confeſſe,
Made mine eyes water: but more merry tears,
The paſſion of loud laughter never ſhed.

Theſ. What are they that do play it?

Eg. Hard handed men, that work in Athens here,
Which never labour'd in their minds till now;
And now have toiled their unbreathed memories
With this ſame Play, againſt your Nuptials

Theſ. And we will hear it.

Phil. No my noble Lord, it is not for you. I have heard
It ever, and it is nothing, nothing in the world;
Unleſſe you can find ſport in their intents,
Extreamly ſtretcht, and cond with cruell pain,
To doe you ſervice.
Theſ. I will hear that play. For never any thing,
Can be amiſs, when ſimpleneſs and duty tender it.
Go bring them in, and take your places, Ladies.
Hip. I love not to ſee wretchedneſs o'recharged;
And duty in his ſervice periſhing.
Theſ. Why gentle ſweet, you ſhall ſee no ſuch thing.
Hip. He ſayes, they can do nothing in this kind.
Theſ. The kinder we, to give them thanks for nothing:
Our ſport ſhall be, to take what they miſtake;
And what poor duty cannot do, noble reſpect
Takes it in might, not merit.
Where I have come, great Clearks have purpoſed
To greet me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I have ſeen them ſhiver and look pale,
Make periods in the midſt of ſentences,
Throttle their practiz'd accent in their fears,
And in concluſion, dumbly have broke off,
Not paying me a welcome. Truſt me ſweet,
Out of this ſilence yet, I pickt a welcome:
And in the modeſty of fearfull duty,
I read as much, as from the ratling tongue
Of ſaucy and audacious eloquence.
Love therefore, and tong-tide ſimplicity,
In leaſt, ſpeak moſt, to my capacity.
Ege. So pleaſe your Grace, the Prologue is addreſt.
Duk. Let him approach. Flor. Trum.

Enter Prologue. Quince.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you ſhould think, we come not to offend,
But with good will. To ſhew our ſimple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Conſider then, we come but in deſpight.
We do not come as minding to content you,
Our true intent is. All for your delight,
We are not here. That you ſhould here repent you,
The Actors are at hand; and by their ſhow,
You ſhall know all, that you are like to know.
Theſ. This fellow doth not ſtand upon points.
Lyſ. He hath rid his Prologue, like a rough Colt: he knows not the ſtop. A good morall my Lord. It is not enough to ſpeak, but to ſpeak true.
Hip. Indeed he hath plaid on his Prologue, like a child on the Recorder, a ſound, but not in government.
Theſ. His ſpeech was like a tangled chain: nothing impaired, but all diſordered. Who is the next?

Tawyer with a Trumpet before them.

Enter Pyramus, and Thisby, Wall, Moon-ſhine, and Lyon.

Pro. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this ſhow,
But wonder on, till truth make all things plain.
This man is Piramus, if you would know;
This beauteous Lady, Thisby is certain.
This man with lyme and rough-caſt, doth preſent
Wall, the vile wall, which did theſe lovers ſunder:
And through walls chink (poor ſouls) they are content
To whiſper. At the which, let no man wonder.
This man with Lanthorn, dog, and buſh of thorn,
Preſenteth moon-ſhine. For if you will know,
By moon-ſhine did theſe Lovers think no ſcorn
To meet at Ninus toomb, there, there to wooe:
This grizly beaſt (which Lyon night by name)
The truſty Thisby, coming firſt by night,
Did ſcare away, or rather did affright:
And as ſhe fled, her mantle ſhe did fall;
Which Lyon vile with bloudy mouth did ſtain.
Anon comes Piramus, ſweet youth and tall,
And finds his gentle Thisbies Mantle ſlain;
Whereat, with blade, with bloudy blamefull blade,
He bravely broach'd his boiling bloudy breaſt,
And Thisby, tarrying in the Mulberry ſhade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the reſt,
Let Lion, Moon-ſhine, Wall, and Lovers twain,
At large diſcourſe, while here they do remain.

Exit all but Wall.

Theſ. I wonder if the Lion be to ſpeak,
Dem. No wonder, my Lord: one Lion may, when many Aſſes doe.

Exit Lion, Thisby, and Moon-ſhine.

Wall. In this ſame interlude, it doth befall,
That I, one Snowt (by name) preſent a wall:
And ſuch a wall, as I would have you think,
That had in it a crannied hole or chink:
Through which the Lovers, Piramus and Thisby,
Did whiſper often, very ſecretly.
This loam, this rough-caſt and this ſtone doth ſhew,
That I am that ſame Wall; the truth is ſo.
And this the cranny is, right and ſiniſter,
Through which the fearfull Lovers are to whiſper.
Theſ. Would you deſire Lime and Hair to ſpeak better?
Dem. It is the wittieſt partition that ever I heard diſcourſed, my Lord.
Theſ. Piramus draws near the Wall, ſilence.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. O grim look'd night, O night with hue ſo black,
O night, which ever art, when day is not:
O night, O night, alack, alack, alack,
I fear my Thisbies promiſe is forgot.
And thou O wall, thou ſweet and lovely wall,
That ſtands between her fathers ground and mine,
Thou wall, O wall, O ſweet and lovely wall,
Shew me thy chink, to blink through with mine eyne.
Thanks curteous wall. Jove ſhield thee well for this.
But what ſee I? No Thisby do I ſee.
O wicked wall, through whom I ſee no bliſs,
Curſt be thy ſtones for thus deceiving me.
Theſ. The wall me-thinks being ſenſible, ſhould curſe again.
Pyr. No in truth ſir, he ſhould not. Deceiving me,
Is Thisbies cue; ſhe is to enter, and I am to ſpy
Her through the wall. You ſhall ſee it will fall

Enter Thisbie.

Pat as I told you; yonder ſhe comes.
Thiſ. O wall, full often haſt thou heard my moans,
For parting my fair Pyramus, and me.
My cherry lips have often kiſt thy ſtones;
Thy ſtones with Lime and Hair knit up in thee.
Pyr. I hear a voyce; now will I to the chink,
To ſpy and I can ſee my Thisbies face. Thisby?
Thiſ. My love thou art, my Love I think.
Pyr. Think what thou wilt, I am thy Lovers grace,
And like Limander am I truſty ſtill.
Thiſ. And like Helen till the Fates me kill.
Pyr. Not Shafalus to Procrus, was ſo true,
Thiſ. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pyr.

Pir. O kiſſe me through the hole of this vile wall.
Thisb. I kiſſe the walls hole, not your lips at all.
Pir. Wilt thou at Ninnies tomb meet me ſtraight way?
Thisb. Tide life, tide death, I come without delay.
Wall. Thus have I Wall, my part diſcharged ſo;
And being done, thus Wall away doth go. Exit Clow.
Duk. Now is the morall down between the two Neighbours.
Dem. No remedy my Lord, when Walls are ſo wilful, to hear without warning.
Dut. This is the ſillieſt ſtuffe that ere I heard.
Duk. The beſt in this kind are but ſhadowes, and the worſt are no worſe if imagination amend them.
Dut. It muſt be your imagination then, and not theirs.
Duk. If we imagine no worſe of them then they of themſelves, they may paſſe for excellent men. Here comes two noble beaſts, in a Man and a Lion.

Enter Lion, and Moon-ſhine.

Lion. You Ladies, you (whoſe gentle hearts do fear
The ſmalleſt monſtrous mouſe that creeps on floore)
May now perchance, both quake and tremble here,
When Lion rough in wildeſt rage doth roare.
Then know that I, one Snug the Joiner am
A Lion fell, nor elſe no Lions damme:
For if I ſhould as Lion come in ſtrife
Into this place, 'twere pitty of my life.
Duk. A very gentle beaſt, and of a good conſcience.
Dem. The very beſt at a beaſt, my Lord, that ere I ſaw.
Lif. This Lion is a very Fox for his valor.
Duk. True, and a Gooſe for his diſcretion.
Dem. Not ſo my Lord: for his valour cannot carry his diſcretion, and the Fox carries the Gooſe.
Duk. His diſcretion I am ſure cannot carry his valor: for the Gooſe carries not the Fox. It is well: leave it to his diſcretion, and let us hearken to the Moon.
Moon. This Lanthorn doth the horned Moon preſent.
Dem. He ſhould have worn the hornes on his head.
Duk. He is no creſcent, and his hornes are inviſible, within the circumference.
Moon. This lanthorne doth the horned Moon preſent:
My ſelf, the man i'th Moon doth ſeem to be.
Duk. This is the greateſt error of all the reſt; the man ſhould be put into the Lanthorne. How is it elſe the man i'th Moon?
Dem. He dares not come there for the candle.
For you ſee, it is already in ſnuffe.
Dut. I am weary of this Moon; would he would change.
Duk. It appears by his ſmall light of diſcretion, that he is in the wane: but yet in courteſie, in all reaſon, we muſt ſtay the time.
Lyſ. Proceed Moon.
Moon. All that I have to ſay, is to tell you, that the Lanthorne is the Moon; I, the man in the Moon; this thorn buſh, my thorn buſh; and this dog, my dog.
Dem. Why all theſe ſhould be in the Lanthorne: for they are in the Moon. But ſilence, here comes Thisby.

Enter Thisby.

Thiſ. This is old Ninnies tomb: where is my love?
Lion. Oh.
The Lion roares, Thisby runs off.
Dem. Well roar'd Lion.
Duk. Well run Thisby.
Dut. Well ſhone Moon.
Truly the Moon ſhines with a good grace.
Duk. Well mouz'd Lion.
Dem. And then came Piramus.
Lyſ. And ſo the Lion vaniſht.

Enter Piramus.

Pir. Sweet Moon, I thank the for thy ſunny beams,
I thank thee Moon, for ſhining now ſo bright:
For by thy gracious, golden, glittering ſtreams,
I truſt to taſte of trueſt Thisbies ſight.
But ſtay: O ſpight! but mark, poor Knight,
What dreadful dole is here?
Eyes doe you ſee! How can it be!
O dainty Duck: O Deer!
Thy mantle good; what ſtaind with bloud!
Approach you Furies fell:
O Fates! come, come: Cut thred and thrum,
Quaile, cruſh, conclude, and quell.
Duk. This paſſion, and the death of a dear friend,
Would goe near to make a man look ſad.
Dut. Beſhrew my heart, but I pity the man.
Pir. O wherefore Nature, did'ſt thou Lions frame?
Since Lion vild hath here deflour'd my Deer:
Which is: no, no, which was the faireſt Dame
That liv'd, that lov'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheer.
Come tears, confound: Out ſword, and wound
The pap of Piramus:
I, that left pap, where heart doth hop;
Thus die I, thus, thus, thus.
Now am I dead, now am I fled, my ſoul is in the ſky,
Tongue loſe thy light, Moon take thy flight,
Now, die, die, die, die, die.
Dem. No die, but an ace for him: for he is but one.
Lyſ. Leſſe then an ace man. For he is dead, he is nothing.
Duk. With the help of a Surgeon, he might yet recover, and prove an Aſſe.
Dut. How chance the Moon-ſhine is gone before?
Thisby comes back, and finds her Lover.

Enter Thisby.

Duk. She will find him by ſtarre-light.
Here ſhe comes, and her paſſion ends the play.
Dut. Methinks ſhe ſhould not uſe a long one for ſuch a Piramus: I hope ſhe will be brief.
Dem. A Moth will turn the ballance, which Piramus, which Thisby is the better. (eyes.
Lyſ. She hath ſpied him already, with thoſe ſweet
Dem. And thus ſhe means, videlicet.
Thisb. Aſleep my Love? What, dead my Dove?
O Piramus ariſe:
Speak, ſpeak. Quite dumb? Dead, dead? A tomb
Muſt cover my ſweet eyes.
Theſe Lilly Lips, this cherry noſe,
Theſe yellow Cowſlip cheeks
Are gone, are gone: Lovers make mone:
His eyes were green as Leeks.
O ſiſters three, come come to me,
With hands as pale as Milk,
Lay them in gore, ſince you have ſhore
With ſheeres, this thred of ſilk.
Tongue not a word: Come truſty ſword:
Come blade; my breſt imbrue:

And farewell friends, thus Thisby ends;
Adieu, adieu, adieu.

Duk. Moon-shine and Lion are left to bury the dead.

Dem. I, and Wall too.

Bot. No, I assure you, the wall is down, that parted their Fathers. Will it please you to see the Epilogue, or to hear a Bergomask dance, between two of our company?

Duk. No Epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the Players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had plaid Piramus, and hung himself in Thisbies garter, it would have been a fine Tragedy: and so it is truely, and very notably discharg'd. But come, your Burgomask; let your Epilogue alone.

The iron tongue of midnight hath told twelve.
Lovers to bed, 'tis almost Fairy time.
I fear we shall out-sleep the comming morn,
As much as we this night have over-watcht.
This palpable grosse play hath well beguil'd
The heavy gate of night. Sweet friends to bed.
A fortnight hold we this solemnity,
In nightly Revels; and new jollity. Exeunt.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry Lions roars,
And the Wolf beholds the Moon:
Whilest the heavy ploughman snores,
All with weary task fore-done.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whil'st the scritch-owle, scritching loud,
Puts the wretch that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a shrowd.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graves, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his spright,
In the Church-way paths to glide,
And we Fairies, that do run,
By the triple Hecates team,
From the presence of the Sun,
Following darknesse like a dream,
Now are frolick; not a Mouse
Shall disturb this hallowed house,
I am sent with broom before,
To sweep the dust behind the door.

Enter King and Queen of Fairies with their train.

Ob. Through the house give glimmering light,
By the dead and drowsie fire,
Every Elfe and fairy spright,
Hop as light as bird from brier,
And this Ditty after me, sing and dance it trippingly.

Tita. First rehearse this song by roate,
To each word a warbling note.
Hand in hand, with Fairy grace,
Will we sing and blesse this place.

The Song.

Now untill the break of day,
Through this house each Fairy stray,
To the best Bride-bed will we,
Which by us shall blessed be;
And the issue there create,
Ever shall be fortunate:
So shall all the couples three,
Ever true in loving be:
And the blots in Natures hand:
Shall not in their issue stand,
Never mole, harelip, nor scarre,
Nor mark prodigious, such as are
Despised in Nativity,
Shall upon their children be.
With this field dew consecrate,
Every Fairy take his gate.
And each severall chamber blesse,
Through this Pallace with sweet peace,
Ever shall in safety rest,
And the owner of it blest.
Trip away, make no stay;
Meet me all by break of day.

Robin. If we shadows have offended,
Think but (this and all is mended)
That you have but slumbred here,
While these visions did appear.
And this weak and idle theame,
No more yielding but a dream,
Gentles, do not reprehend.
If you pardon, we will mend.
And As I am honest Puck,
If we have unearned luck,
Now to scape the Serpents tongue,
We will make amends ere long:
Else the Puck a lyar call.
So good night unto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.

FINIS.

The MERCHANT of VENICE.

Actus Primus.

Enter Anthonio, Solarino, and Salanio.

Anth. IN ſooth I know not why I am ſo ſad,
It wearies me: you ſay it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
What ſtuff 'tis made of, whereof it is born,
I am to learn: and ſuch a Want-wit ſadneſs makes of me,
That I have much adoe to know my ſelf.
Sal. Your mind is toſſing on the Ocean,
There where your Argoſies with portly ſail
Like Signiors and rich Burgers on the floud,
Or as it were the Pageants of the ſea,
Do over-peer the petty Traffickers
That curtſie to them, do them reverence,
As they flye by them with their woven wings.
Sola. Believe me ſir, had I ſuch venture forth,
The better part of my affections would
Be with my hopes abroad. I ſhould be ſtill
Plucking the graſs to know where ſits the winde,
Peering in Maps for ports, and peers, and rodes:
And every object that might make me fear
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt
Would make me ſad.
Sal. My wind cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an Ague, when I thought
What harm a winde too great might do at ſea.
I ſhould not ſee the ſandy hour-glaſs run,
But I ſhould think of ſhallows, and of flats,
And ſee my wealthy Andrew docks in ſand,
Vailing her high top lower then her ribs
To kiſs her buriall; ſhould I go to Church
And ſee the holy edifice of ſtone,
And not bethink me ſtraight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle Veſſels ſide
Would ſcatter all her ſpices on the ſtream,
Enrobe the roring waters with my ſilks,
And in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing. Shall I have the thought
To think on this, and ſhall I lack the thought
That ſuch a thing bechanc'd would make me ſad?
But tell not me, I know Anthonio
Is ſad to think upon his merchandize.
Anth. Believe me no, I thank my fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottome truſted,
Nor to one place; nor is my whole eſtate
Upon the fortune of this preſent year:
Therefore my merchandize makes me not ſad:
Sola. Why then you are in love.
Anth. Fie, fie.
Sola. Not in love neither! then let us ſay you are ſad
Becauſe you are not merry; and 'twere as eaſie
For you to laugh and leap, and ſay you are merry
Becauſe you are not ſad. Now by two-headed Janus,
Nature hath fram'd ſtrange fellows in her time:
Some that will evermore peep through their eyes,
And laugh like Parrats at a bag-piper.
And other of ſuch vineger aſpect,
That they'll not ſhew their teeth in way of ſmile,
Though Neſtor ſwear the jeſt be laughable.

Enter Baſſanio, Lorenſo, and Gratiano.

Sola. Here comes Baſſanio,
Your moſt noble Kinſman,
Gratiano, and Lorenſo. Fare ye well,
We leave you now with better company.
Sala. I would have ſtaid till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not prevented me,
Anth. Your worth is very dear in my regard.
I take it your own buſineſs calls on you,
And you embrace th'occaſion to depart.
Sal. Good morrow my good Lords. (when?
Baſſ. Good ſigniors both, when ſhall we laugh? ſay,
You grow exceeding ſtrange: muſt it be ſo?
Sal. We'll make our leiſures to attend on yours.

Exeunt Salarino, and Solanio.

Lord. My Lord Baſſanio, ſince you have found Anthonio
We two will leave you, but at dinner time
I pray you have in minde where we muſt meet,
Baſſ. I will not fail you.
Grat. You look not well Signior Anthonio,
You have too much reſpect upon the world:
They looſe it that do buy it with much care,
Believe me you are marvellouſly chang'd.
Anth. I hold the world but as the world, Gratiano,
A ſtage, where every man muſt play a part,
And mine a ſad one.
Grati. Let me play the fool,
With mirth and laughter: let old wrincles come,
And let my Liver rather heat with wine,
Then my heat cool with mortifying groans.
Why ſhould a man whoſe bloud is warm within,
Sit like his Grandſire, cut in Alablaſter?
Sleep when he wakes? and creep into the Jaundies.

By

By being peeviſh? I tell thee what Anthonio,
I love thee, and it is my love that ſpeaks:
There are a ſort of men, whoſe viſages
Do cream and mantle like a ſtanding pond,
And do a willfull ſtilneſs entertain,
With purpoſe to be dreſt in an opinion
Of wiſdome, gravity, profound conceit,
As who ſhould ſay, I am ſir an Oracle,
And when I ope my lips, let no dog bark.
O my Anthonio, I do know of theſe
That therefore onely are reputed wiſe,
For ſaying nothing; when I am very ſure
If they ſhould ſpeak, would almoſt damme thoſe ears
Which hearing them would call their brothers fools:
I'le tell thee more of this another time.
But fiſh not with this melancholly bait
For this fool Gudgion, this opinion:
Come good Lorenzo, fare yee well a while,
I'le end my exhortation after dinner.

Lor. Well, we will leave you then till dinner time.
I muſt be one of theſe ſame dumb wiſe men,
For Gratiano never let's me ſpeak.

Gra. Well, keep me company but two years mo,
Thou ſhalt not know the ſound of thine own tongue.

Anth. Fare you well, I'le grow a talker for this gear.

Gra. Thanks ifaith, for ſilence is onely commendable
In a neats tongue dri'd, and a maid not vendible Exit.

Anth. Is that any thing now.

Baſſ. Gratiano ſpeaks an infinite deal of nothing, more then any man in all Venice, his reaſons are two grains of wheat hid in two buſhells of chaff: you ſhall ſeek all day ere you finde them, and when you have them, they are not worth the ſearch.

Anth. Well: tell me now, what Lady is the ſame
To whom you ſwore a ſecret Pilgrimage
That you to day promis'd to tell me of?

Baſſ. 'Tis not unknown to you Anthonio
How much I have diſabled mine eſtate,
By ſomething ſhewing a more ſwelling port
Then my faint means would grant continuance:
Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd
From ſuch a noble rate, but my chief care
Is to come fairly off from the great debts
Wherein my time ſomething too prodigall
Hath left me gag'd: to you Anthonio
I ow the moſt in money, and in love,
And from your love I have a warranty
To unburthen all my plots and purpoſes,
How to get clear of all the debts I owe.

Anth. I pray you good Baſſanio let me know it,
And if it ſtands as you your ſelf ſtill doe,
Within the eye of honor, be aſſur'd
My purſe, my perſon, my extreameſt means
Lye all unlock'd to your occaſions.

Baſſ. In my ſchoole dayes, when I had loſt one ſhaft,
I ſhot his fellow of the ſelf ſame flight
The ſelf ſame way, with more adviſed watch
To finde the other forth, and by adventuring both,
I oft found both. I urge this child-hood proofe,
Becauſe what follows is pure innocence.
I ow you much, and like a willfull youth,
That which I owe is loſt: but if you pleaſe
To ſhoot another arrow that ſelf way
Which you did ſhoot the firſt, I do not doubt,
As I will watch the aim: Or to finde both,
Or bring your latter hazard back again,
And thankfully reſt debter for the firſt.

Anth. You know me well, and herein ſpend but time
To wind about my love with circumſtance,
And out of doubt you do to me more wrong
In making queſtion of my uttermoſt,
Than if you had made waſte of all I have:
Then do but ſay to me what ſhould I do
That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am preſt unto it: therefore ſpeak.

Baſſ. In Belmont is a Lady richly left,
And ſhe is fair, and fairer then that word,
Of wondrous vertues: ſometimes from her eyes,
I did receive fair ſpeechleſs meſſages:
Her name is Portia, nothing undervalu'd
To Cato's daughter, Brutus Portia:
Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth,
For the four windes blow in from every coaſt
Renowned ſutors, and her ſunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece,
Which makes her ſeat of Belmont Cholchos ſtrond,
And many Jaſons come in queſt of her.
O my Anthonio, had I but the means
To hold a rivall place with one of them,
I have a minde preſages me ſuch thrift,
That I ſhould queſtionleſs be fortunate.

Anth. Thou know'ſt that all my fortunes are at ſea,
Neither have I mony, nor commodity
To raiſe a preſent ſum, therefore go forth
Try what my credit can in Venice doe,
That ſhall be rack'd even to the uttermoſt,
To furniſh thee to Belmont to fair Portia.
Go preſently enquire, and ſo will I
Where money is, and I no queſtion make
To have it of my truſt, or for my ſake. Exeunt.

Enter Portia with her waiting woman Neriſſa.

Porti. By my troth, Neriſſa, my little body is weary of this great world.

Ner. You would be, ſweet Madam, if your miſeries were in the ſame abundance as your good fortunes are: and yet for ought I ſee, they are as ſick that ſurfet with too much, as they that ſtarve with nothing; it is no ſmall happineſs therefore to be ſeated in the mean, ſuperfluity comes ſooner by white hairs, but competency lives longer.

Por. Good ſentences, and well pronounc'd.

Ner. They would be better if well followed.

Por. If to do were as eaſie as to know what were good to do, Chappels had been Churches, and poor mens cottages Princes Pallaces: it is a good Divine that followes his own inſtructions; I can eaſier teach twenty what were good to be done, then be one of the twenty to follow mine own teaching: the brain may deviſe lawes for the bloud, but a hot temper leaps o're a cold decree, ſuch a hare is Madneſſe the youth, to ſkip o're the meſhes of good counſell the Cripple; but this reaſon is not in faſhion to chooſe me a husband: O me, the word chooſe, I may neither chooſe whom I would, nor refuſe whom I diſlike, ſo is the will of a living daughter curb'd by thee will of a dead father: is it not hard Neriſſa, that I cannot chooſe one, nor refuſe none?

Ner. Your father was ever vertuous, and holy men at their death have good inſpirations, therefore the lottery that he hath deviſed in theſe three cheſts of Gold, Silver, and Lead, whereof who chooſes his meaning, chooſes

chooſes you, will no doubt never be choſen by any rightly, but one who you ſhall rightly love: but what warmth is there in your affection towards any of theſe Princely ſuters that are already come?

Por. I pray thee over-name them, and as thou nameſt them, I will deſcribe them, and according to my deſcription, levell at my affection.

Ner. Firſt there is the Neapolitan Prince.

Por. I that's a colt indeed, for he doth nothing but talk of his horſe, and he makes it a great appropriation to his owne good parts that he can ſhew himſelf: I am much afraid my Lady his mother plaid falſe with a Smith.

Ner. Then is there the County Palentine.

Por. He doth nothing but frown (as who ſhould ſay and you will not have me, chooſe: he hears merry tales and ſmiles not, I fear he will prove the weeping Philoſopher when he grows old, being ſo full of unmannerly ſadneſs in his youth.) I had rather to be married to a deaths head with a bone in his mouth, then to either of theſe: God defend me from theſe two.

Ner. How ſay you by the French Lord, Mounſieur Le Boun?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him paſs for a man, in truth I know it is ſinne to be a mocker, but he! why he hath a horſe better then the Neapolitans, a better bad habit of frowning then the Count Palentine, he is every man in no man, a if a Taſſell ſing, he fals ſtraight a capring, he will fence with his own ſhadow. If I ſhould marry him, I ſhould marry twenty husbands: if he would deſpiſe me, I would forgive him, for if he love me to madneſs, I ſhould never requite him.

Ner. What ſay you then to Faulconbridge, the young Baron of England?

Por. You know I ſay nothing to him, for he underſtands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latine, French, nor Italian, and you will come into the Court and ſwear that I have a poor penny-worth in the Engliſh: he is a proper mans picture, but alas who can converſe with a dumb ſhow? how odly he is ſuited, I think he bought his doublet in Italy his round hoſe in France, his bonnet in Germany, and his behaviour every where.

Ner. What think you of the other Lord his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charity in him, for he borrowed a box of the ear of the Engliſhman, and ſwore he would pay him again when he was able. I think the Frenchman became his ſurety, and ſeald under for another.

Ner. How like you the young Germain the Duke of Saxonies Nephew?

Por. Very vildely in the morning when he is ſober, and moſt vildely in the afternoon when he is drunk: when he is beſt, he is a little worſe then a man, and when he is worſt, he is little better then a beaſt: and the worſt fall that ever fell, I hope I ſhall make ſhift to go without him.

Ner. If he ſhould offer to chooſe, and chooſe the right Casket, you ſhould refuſe to perform your Fathers will, if you ſhould refuſe to accept him.

Por. Therefore for fear of the worſt, I pray thee ſet a deep glaſs of Renniſh-wine on the contrary Casket, for if the devill be within, and the temptation without, I know he will chooſe it. I will do any thing Neriſſa ere I will be married to a ſpunge.

Ner. You need not fear Lady the having any of theſe Lords, they have acquainted me with their determinations, which is indeed to return to their home, and to trouble you with no more ſuit, unleſs you may be won by ſome other ſort then your Fathers impoſition, depending on the Caskets.

Por. If I live to be as old as Sibilla, I will dye as chaſte as Diana: unleſſe I be obtained by the manner of my Fathers will: I am glad this parcell of wooers are ſo reaſonable, for there is not one among them but I doat on his very abſence: and wiſh them a faire departure.

Ner. Doe you not remember Lady in your Fathers time, a Venetian, a Scholler and a Souldier that came hither in company of the Marqueſſe of Mounferrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Baſſanio, as I think, ſo was he call'd.

Ner. True Madam, he of all the men that ever my fooliſh eyes look'd upon, was the beſt deſerving a faire Lady.

Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praiſe.

Enter a Serving-man.

Ser. The four ſtrangers ſeek you Madam to take their leave: and there is a fore-runner come from a fift, the Prince of Morocco, who brings word the Prince his Maſter will be here to night.

Por. If I could bid the fift welcome with ſo good heart as I can bid the other four farewell, I ſhould be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a Saint, and the complexion of a devill, I had rather he ſhould ſhrive me then wive me. Come Neriſſa, ſirra go before; whiles we ſhut the gate upon one wooer, another knocks at the door. Exeunt.

Enter Baſſanio with Shylock the Jew.

Shy. Three thouſand Ducats, well.

Baſſ. I ſir, for three months.

Shy. For three months, well.

Baſſ. For the which, as I told you, Anthonio ſhall be bound.

Shy. Anthonio ſhall become bound, well.

Baſſ. May you ſtead me? Will you pleaſure me? Shall I know your anſwer.

Shy. Three thouſand Ducats for three months, And Anthonio bound.

Baſſ. Your anſwer to that.

Shy. Anthonio is a good man.

Baſſ. Have you heard any imputation to the contrary.

Shy. No, no, no, no: my meaning in ſaying he is a good man, is to have you underſtand me that he is ſufficient, yet his means are in ſuppoſition: he hath an Argoſie bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies. I underſtand moreover upon the Ryalto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures he hath quandred abroad, but ſhips are but boords, Sailers but men, there be land rats, and water rats, water theeves, and land theeves, I mean Pyrats; and then there is the perrill of waters, windes, and rocks: the man is notwithſtanding ſufficient, three thouſand Ducats, I think I may take his bond.

Baſſ. Be aſſured you may.

Jew.

Jew. I will be assured I may: and that I may be assured, I will bethink me, may I speak with Anthonio.

Bass. If it please you to dine with us.

Jew. Yes, to smell pork, to eat of the habitation which your Prophet the Nazarite conjured the devill into: I will buy with you, sell with you, talk with you, walk with you, and so following: but I will not eat with you, drink with you, nor pray with you.
What news on the Ryalto, who is he comes here?

Enter Anthonio.

Bass. This is signior Anthonio.

Jew. How like a fawning publican he looks.
I hate him, for he is a Christian:
But more, for that in low simplicity
He lends out money gratis, and brings down
The rate of usance here with us in Venice,
If I can catch him once upon the hip,
I will feed fat the antient grudge I bear him.
He hates our sacred Nation, and he railes
Even there where Merchants most do congregate
On me, my bargains, and my well-worne thrift,
Which he calls interest: Cursed be my Tribe
If I forgive him.

Bass. Shylock, do you hear.

Shy. I am debating of my present store,
And by the near guess of my memory
I cannot instantly raise up the gross
Of full three thousand Ducats: what of that?
Tuball a wealthy Hebrew of my Tribe
Will furnish me; but soft, how many months
Do you desire? Rest you fair good signior,
Your worship was the last man in our mouth's.

Anth. Shyloc, albeit I neither lend nor borrow
By taking, nor by giving of excess,
Yet to supply the ripe wants of my friend,
I'le break a custome: is he yet possest
How much he would?

Shy. I, I, three thousand Ducats.

Anth. And for three month's.

Shy. I had forgot, three months, you told me so.
Well then, your bond: but let me see, but hear you,
Me thoughts you said, you neither lend nor borrow
Upon advantage.

Anth. I do never use it.

Shy. When Jacob graz'd his Uncle Labans sheep,
This Jacob from our holy Abram was
(As his wise mother wrought in his behalf)
The third possessor, I, he was the third.

Anth. And what of him, did he take interest?

Shy. No, not take interest, not as you would say
Directly interest, mark what Jacob did,
When Laban and himself were comprimyz'd
That all the eanelings which were streak'd and pied
Should fall as Jacobs hier, the Ewes being ranck,
In end of Autumn turned to the Ram's,
And when the work of generation was.
Between these woolly breeders in the act,
The skilfull shepheard pil'd me certain wands,
And in the doing of the deed of kinde,
He stuck them up before the fulsome Ewes,
Who then conceiving, did in yeaning time
Fall party-colour'd lambs, and those were Iacobs.
This was a way to thrive, and he was blest:
And thrift is blessing if men steal it not.

Anth. This was a venture sir that Iacob serv'd for,
A thing not in his power to bring to pass,
But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of heaven.
Was this inserted to make interest good?
Or is your gold and Silver Ewes and Rams?

Shy. I cannot tell, I make it breed as fast,
But note me signior.

Anth. Mark you this Bassanio,
The devill can cite Scripture for his purpose,
An evill soul producing holy witness,
Is like a villain with a smiling cheek,
A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O what a goodly outside falsehood hath.

Shy. Three thousand Ducats, 'tis a good round summe.
Three months from twelve, then let me see the rate.

Anth. Well Shylock, shall we be beholding to you?

Shy. Signior Anthonio, many a time and oft
In the Ryalto you have rated me
About my moneys and my usances:
Still have I borne it with a patient shrug,
(For sufferance is the badge of all our Tribe.
You call me misbeliever, cut-throat dog,
And spit upon my Jewish gaberdine,
And all for use of that which is mine own.
Well then, it now appears you need my help:
Go to then, you come to me, and you say,
Shylock, we would have moneys, you say so:
You that did void your rheume upon my beard,
And foot me as you spurn a stranger cur
Over your threshold, moneys is your suit.
What should I say to you? Should I not say,
Hath a dog money? it is possible
A curre should lend three thousand Ducats? or Shall I bend low, and in a bond-mans key
With bated breath, and whispring humbleness,
Say this: Fair sir, you spet on me on Wednesday last;
You spurn'd me such a day; another time
You call'd me dog: and for these curtesies
I'le lend you thus much moneys.

Anth. I am as like to call thee so again,
To spet on thee again, to spurn thee too.
If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friend, for when did friendship take
A breed of barren mettall of his friend?
But lend it rather to thine enemy,
Who if he break, thou maist with better face
Exact the penalties.

Shy. Why look you how you storm,
I would be friends with you, and have your love,
Forget the shames that you have stain'd me with,
Supply your present wants, and take no doit
Of usance for my monies, and you'l not hear me,
This is kinde I offer.

Bass. This were kindness.

Shy. This kindness will I show,
Go with me to a Notary, seal me there
Your single bond, and in a merry sport
If you repay me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum or sums as are
Expresst in the condition, let the forfeit
Be nominated for an equall pound
Of your fair flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your body it pleaseth me.

Anth. Content in faith, I'le seal to such a bond,
And say there is much kindness in the Jew.

Bas. You

Baſſ. You ſhall not ſeal to ſuch a bond for me,
I'le rather dwell in my neceſſity.
Anth. Why fear not man, I will not forfeit it,
Within theſe two months, that's a month before
This bond expires, I do expect return
Of thrice three times the value of this bond.
Shy. O father Abram, what theſe Chriſtians are,
Whoſe own hard dealing teaches them ſuſpect
The thoughts of others: Pray you tell me this,
If he ſhould break his day, what ſhould I gain
By the exaction of the forfeiture?
A pound of mans fleſh taken from a man,
Is not ſo eſtimable, profitable neither
As fleſh of Muttons, Beefs, or Goats. I ſay
To buy his favour, I extend this friendſhip,
If he will take it, ſo: if not adieu,
And for my love I pray you wrong me not.
Anth. Yes Shylock, I will ſeal unto this bond.
Shy. Then meet me forthwith at the Notaries,
Give him direction for this merry bond,
And I will go and purſe the Ducats ſtraight:
See to my houſe left in the fearfull guard
Of an unthrifty knave: and preſently
I'le be with you. Exit.
Anth. Hye thee gentle Jew. This Hebrew will turn Chriſtian, he grows kind.
Baſſ. I like not fair tearms, and a villains mind.
Anth. Come on, in this there can be no diſmay,
My Ship's come home a month before the day.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Morocchius a tawny Moor all white, and three or four followers accordingly, with Portia, Nerriſſa and their train. Flo. Cornets.

Mor. Miſlike me not for my complexion,
The ſhadowed livery of the burniſh'd ſun,
To whom I am a neighbour, and near bred.
Bring me the faireſt creature Northward born,
Where Phœbus fire ſcarce thawes the yſicles,
And let us make inciſion for your love,
To prove whoſe bloud is reddeſt, his or mine.
I tell the Lady this aſpect of mine
Hath feard the valiant, (by my love I ſwear)
The beſt regarded Virgins of our Clyme
Have lov'd it too: I would not change this hue,
Except to ſteal your thoughts my gentle Queen.
Por. In terms of choice I am not ſoly led
By nice direction of a maidens eyes:
Beſides, the lottry of my deſtiny
Bars me the right of voluntary chuſing:
But if my father had not ſcanted me,
And hedg'd me by his wit to yield my ſelf
His wife, who wins me by that means I told you,
Your ſelf (renowned Prince) then ſtood as fair
As any commer I have look'd on yet
For my affection.
Mor. Even for that I thank you,
Therefore I pray you lead me to the Caskets
To try my fortune: By this Symitar
That ſlew the Sophy, and a Perſian Prince,
That won three fields of Sultan Solyman,
I would o're-ſtare the ſterneſt eyes that look:
Out-brave the heart moſt daring on the earth:
Pluck the young ſucking Cubs from the ſhee Bear,
Yea, mock the Lion when he roars for prey
To win the Lady. But alas the whiſe,
If Hercules and Lychas play at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turn by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcides beaten by his rage,
And ſo may I, blind fortune leading me,
Miſs that which one unworthier may attain,
And dye with grieving.
Por. You muſt take your chance,
And either not attempt to chooſe at all,
Or ſwear before you chooſe, if you chooſe wrong
Never to ſpeak to Lady afterward
In way of marriage, therefore be advis'd.
Mor. Nor will not, come bring me unto my chance.
Por. Firſt forward to the temple, after dinner
Your hazard ſhall be made.
Mor. Good fortune then, Cornets.
To make me bleſt or curſed'ſt amongſt men. Exeunt.

Enter Clown alone.

Clo. Certainly, my conſcience will ſerve me to run from this Jew my Maſter: the fiend is at mine elbow, and attempts me, ſaying to me, Job, Launcelet Job, good Launcelet, or good Job, or good Launcelet Job, uſe your legs, take the ſtart, run away: my conſcience ſayes no; take heed honeſt Launcelet, take heed honeſt Job, or as afore-ſaid honeſt Launcelet Job; doe not runne, ſcorne running with thy heeles; well, the moſt couragious fiend bids me pack, fia ſayes the fiend, away ſayes the fiend, for the heavens rouſe up a brave minde ſayes the fiend, and runne; well, my conſcience hanging about the neck of my heart, ſayes very wiſely to me: my honeſt friend Launcelet, being an honeſt mans ſon, or rather an honeſt womans ſonne, for indeed my father did ſomething ſmack, ſomething grow too; he had a kind of taſte; well, my conſcience ſaies Launcelet budge not, budge ſayes the fiend, budge not ſayes my conſcience, conſcience ſay I you counſell well, fiend ſay I you counſell well, to be rul'd by my conſcience I ſhould ſtay with the Jew my Maſter, who (God bleſſe the mark) is a kinde of devill; and to run away from the Jew I ſhould be ruled by the fiend, who ſaving your reverence is the devill himſelf: certainly the Jew is the very devill incarnation; and in my conſcience, my conſcience is a kinde of hard conſcience, to offer to councell me to ſtay with the Jew; the fiend gives the more friendly counſell: I will runne fiend, my heeles are at your commandement, I will runne.

Enter old Gobbo with a Basket.

Gob. Maſter young-man, you I pray you, which is the way to Maſter Jewes?
Laun. O heavens, this is my true begotten Father, who being more then ſand-blind, high gravell blind, knows me not, I will try confuſions with him.
Gob. Maſter young Gentleman, I pray you which is the way to Maſter Jewes.
Laun. Turn upon your right hand at the next turning

ning, but at the next turning of all on your left; marry at the very next turning, turn of no hand, but turn down indirectly to the Jewes house.

Gob. Be Gods sonties 'twill be a hard way to hit, can you tell me whether one Launcelet that dwells with him, dwell with him or no.

Laun. Talk you of yong Master Launcelet, mark me now, now will I raise the waters; talk you of yong Master Launcelet?

God. No Master sir, but a poor mans son, his Father though I say't is an honest exceeding poor man, and God be thanked well to live.

Laun. Well, let his Father be what a will, we talk of yong Master Launcelet.

Gob. Your worships friend and Launcelet.

Laun. But I pray you ergo old man, ergo I beseech you, talk you of yong Master Launcelet.

Gob. Of Launcelet, ant please your mastership.

Laun. Ergo Master Launcelet, talk not of master Launcelet Father, for the yong gentleman according to fates and destinies, and such odde sayings, the sisters three, and such branches of learning, is indeed deceased, or as you would say in plain termes, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marry God forbid, the boy was the very staffe of my age, my very prop.

Laun. Do I look like a cudgell or a hovell-post, a staff or a prop: do you know me Father.

Gob. Alack the day, I know you not young Gentleman, but I pray you tell me, is my boy, God rest his soul, alive or dead.

Laun. Do you not know me Father,

Gob. Alack sir I am sand blind, I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeed if you had your eyes you might faile of the knowing me: it is a wise Father that knowes his own child. Well, old man, I will tell you news of your sonne, give me your blessing, truth will come to light, murder cannot be hid long, a mans sonne may, but in the end truth will out.

Gob. Pray you sir stand up, I am sure you are not Launcelet my boy.

Laun. Pray you let's have no more fooling about it, but give me your blessing: I am Launcelet your boy that was, your son that is, your child that shall be.

Gob. I cannot think you are my son.

Laun. I know not what I shall think of that: but I am Launcelet the Jewes man, and I am sure Margery your wife is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery indeed, I'le be sworn if thou be Launcelet, thou art mine own flesh and bloud: Lord worshipt might he be, what a beard hast thou got; thou hast got more hair on thy chin, then Dobbin my philhorse has on his taile.

Laun. It should seem then that Dobbins taile growes backward. I am sure he had more hair of his tail then I have on my face when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord how art thou chang'd: how dost thou and thy Master agree, I have brought him a present; how gree you now?

Laun. Well, well, but for mine own part, as I have set up my rest to run away, so I will not rest till I have run some ground; my Master's a very Jew, give him a present, give him a halter, I am famisht in his service. You may tell every finger I have with my ribs: father I am glad you are come, give me your present to one Master Bassanio, who indeed gives rare new Liveries, if I serve not him, I will runn as farre as God has any ground. O rare fortune, here comes the man, to him Father, for I am a Jew if I serve the Jew any longer.

Enter Bassanio with a follower or two.

Bass. You may do so, but let it be so hasted that supper be ready at the farthest by five of the clock: see these Letters delivered, put the Liveries to making, and desire Gratiano to come anon to my lodging.

Laun. To him Father.

Gob. God blesse your worship.

Bass. Gramercy, would'd thou ought with me.

Gob. Here's my son sir, a poor boy.

Laun. Not a poor boy sir, but the rich Jews man that would sir as my Father shall specifie.

Gob. He hath a great infection sir, as one would say to serve.

Laun. Indeed the short and the long is, I serve the Jew, and have a desire as my Father shall specifie.

Gob. His Master and he (savin your worships reverence) are scarce catercosins.

Laun. To be brief, the very truth is, that the Jew having done me wrong, doth cause me as my Father being I hope an old man shall frutifie unto you.

Gob. I have here a dish of Doves that I would bestow upon your worship, and my suit is.

Laun. In very brief, the suit is impertinent to my self, as your worship shall know by this honest old man, and though I say it, though old man yet poor man my Father.

Bass. One speak for both, what would you?

Laun. Serve you sir.

Gob. This is the very defect of the matter sir.

Bass. I know thee well, thou hast obtain'd thy suit,
Shylock thy Master spoke with me this day,
And hath prefer'd thee, if it be preferment
To leave a rich Jews service, to become
The follower of so poor a Gentleman.

Clo. The old proverb is very well parted between my Master Shylock and you sir, you have the grace of God sir, and he hath enough.

Bass. Thou speak'st it well; go Father with thy sonne,
Take leave of thy old Master, and enquire
My lodging out, give him a Livery
More garded then his fellows: see it done.

Clo. Father in, I cannot get a service, no, I have ne're a tongue in my head well: if any man in Italy have a fairer table which doth offer to swear upon a book, I shall have good fortune; go too, here's a simple line of life, here's a small trifle of wives, alas, fifteen wives is nothing, a leaven widdowes and nine maids is a simple coming in for one man, and then to scape drowning thrice, and to be in perill of my life with the edge of a featherbed, here are simple scapes: well if Fortune be a woman, she's a good wench for this gere: Father come, I'le take my leave of the Jew in the twinkling.

Exit Clown.

Bass. I pray thee good Leonardo think on this,
These things being bought and orderly bestowed
Return in haste, for I do feast to night
My best esteem'd acquaintance, hie thee gone.

Leon. My best endeavours shall be done herein.

Exit Leonato.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where's your Master.

Leon.

Leon. Yonder sir he walks.
Gra. Signior Bassanio.
Bas. Gratiano.
Gra. I have a suit to you.
Bas. You have obtain'd it.
Gra. You must not deny me, I must go with you to Belmont.
Bas. Why then you must: but hear thee Gratiano,
Thou art too wild, too rude, and bold of voyce,
Parts that become thee happily enough,
And in such eyes as ours appear not faults;
But where they are not known, why there they show
Something too liberall, pray thee take pain
To allay with some cold drops of modesty
Thy skipping spirit, least through thy wild behaviour
I be misconsterd in the place I go to,
And lose my hopes.
Gra. Signior Bassanio, hear me,
If I doe not put on a sober habit,
Talk with respect, and swear but now and then,
Wear prayer-books in my pocket, look demurely,
Nay more, while Grace is saying, hood mine eyes
Thus with my hat, and sigh and say Amen,
Use all the observance of civility,
Like one well studied in a sad ostent
To please his Grandam, never trust me more.
Bas. Well, we shall see your bearing.
Gra. Nay but I barre to night, you shall not gage me
By what we doe to night.
Bas. No that were pity.
I would entreat you rather to put on
Your boldest suit of mirth, for we have friends
That purpose merriment: but fare you well,
I have some businesse.
Gra. And I must to Lorenzo and the rest,
But we will visit you at supper time. Exeunt.

Enter Jessica and the Clown.

Jes. I am sorry thou wilt leave my Father so,
Our house is hell, and thou a devil
Did'st rob it of some taste of tediousnesse;
But fare thee well, there is a Ducat for thee,
And Lancelet, soon at supper shalt thou see
Lorenzo, who is thy Masters guest,
Give him this Letter, doe it secretly,
And so farewell: I would not have my Father
See me talk with thee.
Clo. Adieu, teares exhibit my tongue, most beautifull Pagan, most sweet Jew, if a Christian did not play the knave and get thee, I am much deceived; but adieu, these foolish drops doe somewhat drown my manly spirit: adieu. Exit.
Jes. Farewell good Lancelet.
Alack, what hainous sin is it in me
To be ashamed to be my Fathers child,
But though I am a daughter to his blood,
I am not to his manners: O Lorenzo,
If thou keep promise I shall end this strife,
Become a Christian, and thy loving Wife.

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Salarino, and Solania.
Lo. Nay, we will slinke away in supper time,
Disguise us at my lodging, and return all in an hour.
Gra. We have not made good preparation.
Sal. We have not spoke us yet of Torch-bearers.
Sol. 'Tis vile unlesse it may be quaintly ordered,
And better in my mind not undertook.
Lor. 'Tis now but four a clock, we have two hours
To furnish us; friend Lancelet what's the newes?

Enter Lancelet with a Letter.

Lan. And it shall please you to break up this, it shall seem to signifie.
Lo. I know the hand, in faith 'tis a fair hand,
And whiter then the paper it writ on,
I the fair hand that writ.
Gra. Love-newes in faith.
La. By your leave sir.
Lor. Whether goest thou?
La. Marry to bid my old Master the Jew to sup to night with my new Master the Christian.
Lor. Hold here, take this, tell gentle Jessica
I will not fail her, speak it privately:
Go Gentlemen, will you prepare you for this Maske to night?
I am provided of a Torch-bearer. Exit Clown.
Sal. I marry, i'le be gone about it straight.
Sol. And so will I.
Lor. Meet me and Gratiano at Gratianos lodging
Some hour hence.
Sal. 'Tis good we doe so. Exit.
Gra. Was not that Letter from fair Jessica?
Lo. I must needs tell thee all, she hath directed
How I shall take her from her Fathers house,
What gold and jewels she is furnisht with,
What Pages suit she hath in readinesse:
If e're the Jew her Father come to heaven,
It will be for his gentle daughters sake;
And never dare misfortune crosse her foot,
Unlesse she doe it under this excuse,
That she is issue to a faithlesse Jew:
Come go with me, peruse this as thou goest,
Fair Jessica shall be my Torch-bearer. Exit.

Enter Jew, and his man that was the Clown.

Jew. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy judge,
The difference of old Shylocke and Bassanio;
What Jessica, thou shalt not gurmandize
As thou hast done with me: what Jessica?
And sleep, and snore, rend apparell out.
Why Jessica I say.
Clo. Why Jessica.
Shy. Who bids thee call? I doe not bid thee call.
Clo. Your worship was wont to tell me
I could doe nothing without bidding.

Enter Jessica.

Jes. Call you? what is your will?
Shy. I am bid forth to supper Jessica,
There are my Keyes: but wherefore should I go?
I am not bid for love, they flatter me,
But yet I'le go in hate, to feed upon
The prodigall Christian. Jessica my girle,
Look to my house, I am right loath to go,
There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
For I did dream of money bags to night.
Clo. I beseech you sir go, my young Master
Doth expect your reproach.
Shy. So doe I his.
Clo. And they have conspired together, I will not say you shall see a Maske, but if you doe, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on black Munday laſt, at ſix a clock ith' morning, falling out that year on Aſhwedneſday was four year in th'afternoon.

Shy. What are their masks? hear you me Ieſsica,
Lock up my doores, and when you hear the Drum
And the vile ſqueaking of the wry-neckt Fife,
Clamber not you up to the Caſements then,
Nor thruſt your head into the publick ſtreet
To gaze on Chriſtian fools with varniſht faces:
But ſtop my houſes eares, I mean my Caſements,
Let not the ſound of ſhallow foppery enter
My ſober houſe. By Iacobs ſtaffe I ſwear,
I have no minde of feaſting forth to night:
But I will go; go you before me ſirrah,
Say I will come.

Clow. I will go before ſir.
Miſtreſſe look out at window for all this;
There will come a Chriſtian by,
Will be worth a Jew's eye.

Shy. What ſayes that fool of Hagars off-ſpring? ha.

Ieſ. His words were farewell miſtris, nothing elſe.

Shy. The patch is kind enough, but a huge feeder:
Snail-ſlow in profit, but ſleeps by day
More then the wild-cat: drones hive not with me,
Therefore I part with him, and part with him
To one that I would have him help to waſte
His borrowed purſe. Well Ieſsica go in,
Perhaps I will return immediately;
Doe as I bid you, ſhut doors after you, faſt bind, faſt finde,
A proverbe never ſtale in thrifty minde. Exit.

Ieſ. Farewell, and if my fortune be not croſt,
I have a Father, you a Daughter loſt. Exit.

Enter the Maskers, Gratiano and Salino.

Gra. This is the penthouſe under which Lorenzo
Deſired us to make a ſtand.

Sal. His hour is almoſt paſt.

Gra. And it is marvell he out-dwells his hour,
For lovers ever run before the clock.

Sal. O ten times faſter Venus Pigeons flie
To ſteal loves bonds new made, then they are wont
To keep obliged faith unforfeited.

Gra. That ever holds, who riſeth from a feaſt
With that keen appetite that he ſits down?
Where is the Horſe that doth untread again
His tedious meaſures with the unbated fire
That he did pace them firſt? all things that are,
Are with more ſpirit chaſed then enjoy'd.
How like a younger or a prodigall
The skarfed barke puts from her native bay,
Hugg'd and embraced by the ſtrumpet winde:
How like a prodigall ſhe doth return
With over-wither'd ribs and ragged ſailes,
Lean, rent, and begger'd by the ſtrumpet winde?

Enter Lorenzo.

Salino. Here comes Lorenzo, more of this hereafter.

Loren. Sweet friends, your patience for my long abode,
Not I, but my affaires have made you wait:
When you ſhall pleaſe to play the thieves for Wives
I'le watch as long for you then: approach
Here dwells my Father Jew. Hoa, who's within?

Ieſsica above.

Ieſ. Who are you? tell me for more certainty,
Albeit I'le ſwear that I doe know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy Love.

Ieſ. Lorenzo certain, and my love indeed,
For who love I ſo much? and now who knows
But you Lorenzo, whether I am yours?

Lo. Heaven and thy thoughts are witneſs that thou art.

Ieſ. Here, catch this casket, it is worth the pains,
I am glad 'tis night, you doe not look on me,
For I am much aſham'd of my exchange:
But love is blind, and lovers cannot ſee
The pretty follies that themſelves commit,
For if they could, Cupid himſelf would bluſh
To ſee me thus tranformed to a boy.

Lor. Deſcend, for you muſt be my torch-bearer.

Ieſ. What, muſt I hold a Candle to my ſhame?
They in themſelves goodſooth are too too light.
Why, 'tis an office of diſcovery, Love,
And I ſhould be obſcur'd.

Lor. So you are ſweet,
Even in the lovely garniſh of a boy: but come at once,
For the cloſe night doth play the run-away,
And we are ſtaid for at Baſſanio's feaſt.

Ieſ. I will make faſt the doors and guild my ſelf
With ſome more Ducats, and be with you ſtraight.

Gra. Now by my Hood, a Gentile, and no Jew.

Lor. Beſhrew me but I love her heartily.
For ſhe is wiſe, if I can judge of her,
And fair ſhe is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true ſhe is, as ſhe hath prov'd her ſelf:
And therefore like her ſelf, wiſe, fair, and true,
Shall ſhe be placed in my conſtant ſoul.

Enter Ieſsica.

What, art thou come? on gentlemen, away,
Our masking mates by this time for us ſtay. Exit.

Enter Authonio.

Ant. Who's there?

Gra. Signior Anthonio.

Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano, where are all the reſt?
'Tis nine a clock, our friends all ſtay for you,
No maske to night, the wind is come about,
Baſſanio preſently will go aboord,
I have ſent twenty out to ſeek for you.

Gra. I am glad on't, I deſire no more delight
Then to be under ſail, and gone to night. Exeunt.

Enter Portia with Morrocho, and both their trains.

Por. Go, draw aſide the curtains, and diſcover
The ſeverall Caskets to this noble Prince:
Now make your choyſe.

Mor. The firſt of gold, who this inſcription beares,
Who chooſeth me, ſhall gain what men deſire.
The ſecond ſilver, which this promiſe carries,
Who chooſeth me, ſhall get as much as he deſerves.
This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt,
Who chooſeth me, muſt give and hazard all he hath.
How ſhall I know if I doe chooſe the right?

Por.

Por. The one of them contains my picture Prince,
If you chooſe that, then I am yours withall.
Mar. Some God direct my judgement, let me ſee,
I will ſurvey the inſcriptions, back again:
What ſayes this leaden casket?
Who chooſeth me, muſt give and hazard all he hath.
Muſt give, for what? for lead?
This casket threatens men that hazard all,
Doe it in hope of fair advantages:
A golden mind ſtoops not to ſhowes of droſſe,
I'le then nor give nor hazard ought for lead.
What ſayes the Silver with her virgin hue?
Who chooſeth me, ſhall get as much as he deſerves.
As much as he deſerves, pauſe there Morocho,
And weigh thy value with an even hand,
If thou beeſt rated by thy eſtimation
Thou doſt deſerve enough, and yet enough
May not extend ſo far as to the Lady:
And yet to be afeard of my deſerving,
Were but a weak diſabling of my ſelf.
As much as I deſerve, why that's the Lady.
I doe in birth deſerve her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of breeding:
But more then theſe, in love I doe deſerve.
What if I ſtray'd no farther, but chooſe here?
Let's ſee once more this ſaying grav'd in gold.
Who chooſeth me, ſhall gain what many men deſire:
Why that's the Lady, all the world deſires her:
From the four corners of the earth they come
To kiſſe this ſhrine, this mortall breathing Saint.
The Hircanian deſerts, and the vaſt wildes
Of wide Arabia are as through fares now
For Princes to come view fair Portia.
The watery Kingdome, whoſe ambitious head
Spets in the face of heaven, is no barre
To ſtop the forrain ſpirits, but they come
As o're a Brook to ſee fair Portia.
One of theſe three contains her heavenly picture.
Is't like that Lead contains her? 'twere damnation
To think ſo baſe a thought, it were too groſſe
To rib her ſearcloth in the obſcure grave:
Or ſhall I think in Silver ſhe's immur'd
Being ten time undervalued to tri'd gold;
O ſinfull thought, never ſo rich a Jem
Was ſet in worſe then gold! They have in England
A Coin that beares the figure of an Angell
Stampt in gold, but that's inſculpt upon:
But here an Angell in a golden Bed
Lies all within. Deliver me the Key;
Here doe I chooſe, and thrive I as I may.
Por. There take it Prince, and if my form lie there
Then I am yours.
Mor. O hell! what have we here, a carrion death,
Within whoſe empty eye there is a written ſcrowl;

All that glisters is not gold,
Often have you heard that told;
Many a man his life hath ſold
But my outſide to behold;
Guilded timber doe wormes infold:
Had you been as wiſe as bold,
Young in limbs, in judgement old,
Your anſwer had not been inſcrold:
Fare you well, your ſuit is cold,

Mor. Cold indeed, and labour loſt,
Then farewell heat, and welcome froſt:
Portia adieu, I have too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus looſers part. Exit.
Por. A gentle riddance: draw the curtains, go:
Let all of his complexion chooſe me ſo. Exeunt.

Enter Salarino and Solanio.
Flo. Cornets.

Sal. Why man I ſaw Baſſanio under ſail;
With him is Gratiano gone along;
And in their ſhip I am ſure Lorenzo is not.
Sol. The villain Jew with outcries rais'd the Duke,
Who went with him to ſearch Baſſanio's ſhip.
Sal. He comes too late, the ſhip was under ſail;
But there the Duke was given to underſtand
That in a Gondilo were ſeen together
Lorenzo and his amorous Jeſſica.
Beſides, Anthonio certified the Duke
They were not with Baſſanio in his ſhip.
Sol. I never heard a paſſion ſo confus'd,
So ſtrange, outragious, and ſo variable,
As the dog Jew did utter in the ſtreets;
My Daughter, O my Ducats, O my Daughter,
Fled with a Chriſtian, O my Chriſtian Ducats!
Juſtice, the Law, my Ducats, and my Daughter;
A ſealed bag, two ſealed bags of Ducats,
Of double Ducats, ſtoln from me by my Daughter,
And Jewels, two rich and precious Stones,
Stoln by my Daughter: juſtice, find the Girl,
She hath the Stones upon her, and the Ducats.
Sal. Why all the Boyes in Venice follow him,
Crying his Stones, his Daughter, and his Ducats,
Sol. Let good Anthonio look he keep his day
Or he ſhall pay for this.
Sal. Marry well remembred,
I reaſon'd with a Frenchman yeſterday,
Who told me, in the narrow ſeas that part
The French and Engliſh, there miſcarried
A veſſell of our countrey richly fraught:
I thought upon Anthonio when he told me,
And wiſht in ſilence that it were not his.
Sol. You were beſt to tell Anthonio what you hear,
Yet doe not ſuddenly, for it may grieve him.
Sal. A kinder Gentleman treads not the earth,
I ſaw Baſſanio and Anthonio part,
Baſſanio told him he would make ſome ſpeed
Of his return: he anſwered, doe not ſo,
Slubber not buſineſſe for my ſake Baſſanio,
But ſtay the very riping of the time,
And for the Jew's bond which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your mind of love:
Be merry, and employ your chiefeſt thoughts
To courtſhip, and ſuch fair oſtents of love
As ſhall conveniently become you there;
And even there his eye being big with tears,
Turning his face, he put his hand behind him,
And with affection wondrous ſenſible
He wrung Baſſanio's hand, and ſo they parted.
Sal. I think he only loves the world for him,
I pray thee let us go and find him out
And quicken his embraced heavineſſe
With ſome delight or other.
Sal. Doe we ſo. Exeunt.

Enter Neriſſa and a Serviter.
Ner. Quick, quick I pray thee, draw the curtain ſtrait,

The Prince of Arragon hath tane his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Enter Arragon, his train, and Portia.
Flor. Cornets.

Por. Behold there stand the caskets noble Prince,
If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptiall rights be solemniz'd:
But if thou fail, without more speech my Lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoyn'd by oath to observe three things;
First, never to unfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose, next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To wooe a Maid in way of marriage:
Lastly, if I doe fail in fortune of my choyse,
Immediately to leave you, and be gone.

Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear
That comes to hazard for my worthlesse selfe.

Ar. And so have I addrest me, fortune now
To my hearts hope: gold, silver, and base lead.
Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he hath.
You shall look fairer ere I give or hazard.
What sayes the golden chest, ha, let me see:
Who chooseth me, shall gain what many men desire:
What many men desire, that many may be meant
By the fool multitude that choose by show,
Not learning more then the fond eye doth teach,
Which payes not to th'interior, but like the Martlet
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and rode of casualty.
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not jump with common spirits,
And rank me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why then to thee thou Silver treasure house,
Tell me once more, what title thou dost bear;
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves:
And well said too, for who shall go about
To cozen fortune, and be honourable
Without the stamp of merit, let none presume
To wear an undeserved dignity:
O that estates, degrees, and offices,
Were not deriv'd corruptly, and that clear honour
Were purchast by the merit of the wearer;
How many then should cover that stand bare?
How many be commanded that command?
How much low pleasantry would then be gleaned
From the true seed of honour? And how much honour
Pickt from the chaffe and ruine of the times,
To be new varnisht: Well, but to my choyse.
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserves.
I will assume desert; give me a key for this,
And instantly unlock my fortunes here.

Por. Too long a pause for that which you find there.

Ar. What's here, the portrait of a blinking idiot
Presenting me a scedule, I will read it:
How much unlike art thou to Portia?
How much unlike my hopes and my deservings?
Who chooseth me, shall have as much as he deserves.
Did I deserve no more then a fools head?
Is that my prize? are my deserts no better?

Po. To offend and judge are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here?

The fire seaven times tried this,
Seaven times tried that judgement is,
That did never choose amiss,
Some there be that shadows kisse,
Such have but a shadowes blisse:
There be fools alive I wis
Silver'd o're, and so was this:
Take what Wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So be gone sir, you are sped.

Ar. Still more fool I shall appear
By the time I linger here,
With one fools head I came to woo,
But I go away with two.
Sweet adieu, I'le keep my oath,
Patiently to bear my wroath.

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moth:
O these deliberate fools when they do choose,
They have the wisdome by their wit to loose.

Ner. The ancient saying is no heresie,
Hanging and wiving goes by destiny.

Por. Come draw the curtain Nerrissa.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. Where is my Lady?

Por. Here, what would my Lord?

Mes. Madam, there is a-lighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To signifie th'approaching of his Lord,
From whom he bringeth sensible regreets;
To wit (besides commends and courteous breath)
Gifts of rich value; yet I have not seen
So likely an Ambassadour of love.
A day in April never came so sweet
To show how costly Summer was at hand,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his Lord.

Por. No more I pray thee, I am half a feard
Thou wilt say anon he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising him:
Come come Nerrissa, for I long to see
Quick Cupids Post, that comes so mannerly.

Ner. Bassanio Lord, love if thy will it be. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Solanio and Salarino.

Sol. Now, what newes on the Ryalto?

Sal. Why yet it lives there uncheckt, that Anthonio hath a ship of rich lading wrackt on the narrow Seas; the Goodwins I think they call the place, a very dangerous flat, and fatall, where the carcasses of many a tall ship lie buried, as they say, if my gossips report be an honest woman of her word.

Sol. I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as ever knapt Ginger, or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband: but it is true, without any slips of prolixity, or crossing the plain high-way of talk, that the good Anthonio, the honest Antho. O that I had a title good enough to keep his name company!

Sal. Come, the full stop.

Sol. Ha, what sayest thou, why the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Sal.

Sal. I would it might prove the end of his losses.

Sol. Let me say Amen betimes, least the Devil erosse my prayer, for here he comes in the likenesse of a Jew. How now Shylocke, what newes among the Merchants?

Enter Shylocke.

Shy. You knew, none so well, none so well as you, of my daughters flight.

Sal. That's certain, I for my part knew the Tailor that made the wings she flew withall.

Sol. And Shylocke for his own part knew the bird was fledg'd, and then it is the complexion of them all to leave the Dam.

Shy. She is damn'd for it.

Sal. That's certain, if the devil may be her Judge.

Shy. My own flesh and blood to rebell.

Sol. Out upon it old carrion, rebells it at these yeares.

Shy. I say my Daughter is my flesh and blood.

Sal. There is more difference between thy flesh and hers, then between Jet and Ivory, more between your bloods, then there is between red wine and rhenniſh: but tell us, doe you hear whether Anthonio have had any losse at sea or no?

Shy. There I have another bad match, a bankrout, a prodigall, who dare scarce shew his head on the Ryalta, a beggar that was us'd to come so smug upon the Mart: let him look to his bond, he was wont to call me Usurer, let him look to his bond, he was wont to lend money for a Christian curtsie, let him look to his bond.

Sal. Why I am sure if he forfeit, thou wilt not take his flesh, what's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withall, if it will feed nothing else, it will feed my revenge, he hath disgrac'd me, and hindred me halfe a million, laught at my losses, mockt at my gains, scorned my Nation, thwarted my bargains, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies, and what's the reason? I am a Jew: Hath not a Jew eyes? hath not a Jew hands, organs, dimentions, senses, affections, passions? fed with the same food, hurt with the same weapons, subject to the same diseases, healed by the same means, warmed and cooled by the same Winter and Summer as a Christian is? if you prick us, doe we not bleed? if you tickle us, doe we not laugh? if you poyson us, doe we not die? and if you wrong us, shall we not revenge? if we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Jew wrong a Christian, what is his humility, revenge? If a Christian wrong a Jew, what should his sufferance be by a Christian example? why revenge. The villany you teach me I will execute, and it shall go hard but I will better the instruction,

Enter a man from Anthonio.

Gentlemen, my Master Anthonio is at his house, and desires to speak with you both.

Sal. We have been up and down to seek him.

Enter Tuball.

Sol. Here comes another of the tribe, a third cannot be matcht, unlesse the devil himself turn Jew.

Exeunt Gentlemen.

Shy. How now Tuball, what newes from Genowa? hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did hear of her, but cannot find her.

Shy. Why there, there, there, there, a Diamond gone cost me two thousand Ducats in Franckford, the curse never fell upon our Nation till now, I never felt it till now, two thousand Ducats in that, and other precious, precious jewels: I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the jewels in her eare: would she were hearst at my foot, and the Ducats in her Coffin: no newes of them, why so? and I know not how much is spent in the search: why then losse upon losse, the thief gone with so much, and so much to find the thief, and no satisfaction, no revenge, nor no ill luck stirring, but what lights a my shoulders, no sighs but a my breathing, no teares but a my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men have ill luck too, Anthonio as I heard in Genowa.

Shy. What, what, what, ill luck, ill luck.

Tub. Hath an Argosie cast away comming from Tripolis.

Shy. I thank God, I thank God, is it true, is it true?

Tu. I spoke with some of the Saylers that escaped the wrack.

Shy. I thank thee good Tuball, good newes, good newes: ha, ha, here in Genowa.

Tu. Your daughter spent in Genowa, as I heard, one night fourscore Ducats.

Shy. Thou stick'st a Dagger in me, I shall never see my gold again, fourscore Ducats at a sitting, fourscore Ducats.

Tu. There came divers of Anthonio's Creditors in my company to Venice, that swear he cannot choose but break.

Shy. I am very glad of it, I'le plague him, I'le torture him, I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them shewed me a Ring that he had of your Daughter for a Monkie.

Shy. Out upon her, thou torturest me Tuball, it was my Turkis, I had it of Leah when I was a Batchelor: I would not have given it for a wildernesse of Monkies.

Tub. But Anthonio is certainly undone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true, go Tuball, see me an Officer, bespeak him a fortnight before, I will have the heart of him if he forfeit, for were he ought of Venice, I can make what merchandize I will: go Tuball, and meet me at our Synagogue, go good Tuball, at our Synagogue Tuball. Exeunt.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, and all their train.

Por. I pray you tarry, pause a day or two
Before you hazard; for in choosing wrong
I lose your company; therefore forbear a while,
There's something tells me (but it is not love)
I would not lose you, and you know your self,
Hate counsells not in such a quality;
But least you should not understand me well,
And yet a maiden hath no tongue but thought,
I would detain you here some moneth or two
Before you venture for me. I could teach you
How to choose right, but then I am forsworn;
So will I never be, so may you misse me,
But if you doe, you'll make me wish a sin,
That I had been forsworn: Beshrew your eyes,
They have o're-lookt me and divided me,
One half of me is yours, the other halfe
Mine own I would say: but first mine, then yours,
And so all yours; O these naughty times
Put bars between the owners and their rights.
And so though yours, not yours (prove it so)
Let fortune go to hell for it, not I.
I speak too long, but 'tis to peize the time,
To eche it, and draw it out in length,
To stay you from election.

Baſ. Let me chooſe,
For as I am, I live upon the rack.
Por. Upon the rack Baſſanio, then confeſſe
What treaſon there is mingled with your love.
Baſ. None but that ugly treaſon of miſtruſt,
Which makes me fear the enjoying of my love:
There may as well be amity and life,
'Tween ſnow and fire, as treaſon and my love,
Por. I, but I fear you ſpeak upon the rack,
Where men enforced do ſpeak any thing.
Baſ. Promiſe me life, and I'le confeſſe the truth.
Por. Well then, confeſſe and live.
Baſ. Confeſſe and love
Had been the very ſumme of my confeſſion:
O happy torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me anſwers for deliverance:
But let me to my fortune and the caskets.
Por. Away then, I am lockt in one of them,
If you doe love me, you will find me out.
Nerriſſa and the reſt, ſtand all aloof,
Let muſick ſound while he doth make his choyce,
Then if he looſe he makes a Swan-like end,
Fading in muſick. That the compariſon
May ſtand more proper, my eye ſhall be the ſtream
And watry death-bed for him: he may win,
And what is muſick then? Then muſick is
Even as the flouriſh, when true ſubjects bowe
To a new crowned Monarch: Such it is,
As are thoſe dulcet ſounds in break of day,
That creep into the dreaming bride-grooms ear,
And ſummon him to marriage. Now he goes
With no leſſe preſence, but with much more love
Then young Alcides, when he did redeem
The Virgin-tribute, paid by howling Troy
To the Sea-monſter: I ſtand for ſacrifice,
The reſt aloof are the Dardanian wives:
With bleared viſages come forth to view
The iſſue of th'exploit: Go Hercules,
Live thou, I live, with much much more diſmay
I view the fight, than thou that mak'ſt the fray.

Here Muſick.

A Song the whilſt Baſſanio comments on the Caskets to himſelf.

Tell me where is fancie bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head:
How begot, how nouriſhed. Replie, replie.
It is engendred in the eyes,
With gazing fed, and Fancie dies,
In the cradle where it lies:
Let us all ring Fancies knell.
I'le begin it.
Ding, dong, bell,
All. Ding, dong, Bell.

Baſſ. So may the outward ſhowes be leaſt themſelves,
The world is ſtill deceiv'd with ornament.
In Law what Plea ſo tainted and corrupt,
But being ſeaſon'd with a gracious voyce,
Obſcures the ſhow of evil? In Religion,
What damned errour, but ſome ſober brow
Will bleſſe it, and approve it with a text,
Hiding the groſſeneſſe with fair ornament:
There is no vice ſo ſimple, but aſſumes
Some mark of virtue on his outward parts;
How many cowards, whoſe hearts are all as falſe
As ſtayres of ſand, wear yet upon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars?
Who inward ſearcht, have livers white as milk,
And theſe aſſume but valours excrement,
To render them redoubted. Look on beauty,
And you ſhall ſee 'tis purchaſt by the weight,
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Make them lighteſt that wear moſt of it:
So are thoſe criſped ſnakie golden locks
Which makes ſuch wanton gambols with the winde
Upon ſuppoſed fairneſſe, often known
To be the dowrie of a ſecond head,
The ſcull that bred them in the Sepulcher.
Thus ornament is but the guilded ſhore
To a moſt dangerous ſea: the beautious ſcarfe
Vailing an Indian beauty: In a word,
The ſeeming truth which cunning times put on
To intrap the wiſeſt. Therefore thou gaudy gold,
Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee,
Nor none of thee thou pale and common drudge
'Tween man and man: but thou, thou meager lead,
Which rather threatneſt than doſt promiſe ought,
Thy paleneſſe moves me more than eloquence,
And here chooſe I, joy be the conſequence.
Por. How all the other paſſions fleet to ayre,
As doubtfull thoughts, and raſh embrac'd deſpair:
And ſhuddring fear, and green-eyed jealouſie.
O love be moderate, allay thy extaſie,
In meaſure rain thy joy, ſcant this exceſſe,
I feel too much thy bleſſing, make it leſſe,
For fear I ſurfet.
Baſ. What find I here?
Fair Portias counterfeit. What demy god
Hath come ſo near creation? move theſe eyes?
Or whether riding on the bals of mine
Seem they in motion? Here are ſever'd lips
Parted with ſugar breath, ſo ſweet a barre
Should ſunder ſuch ſweet friends: here in her haires
The Painter playes the Spider and hath woven
A golden meſh t'intrap the hearts of men
Faſter then Gnats in Cobwebs: but her eyes,
How could he ſee to doe them? having made one,
Me thinks it ſhould have power to ſteal both his
And leave it ſelfe unfurniſht: Yet look how far
The ſubſtance of my praiſe doth wrong this ſhadow
In underpriſing, ſo far this ſhadow
Doth limp behind the ſubſtance. Here's the ſcrowle,
The continent, and ſummary of my fortune.

You that chooſe not by the view,
Chance as fair, and chooſe as true.
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and ſeek no new.
If you be well pleaſed with this,
And hold your fortune for your bliſſe,
Turn you where your Lady is,
And claim her with a loving kiſſe.

A gentle ſcrowle; Fair Lady, by your leave,
I come by note to give, and to receive,
Like one of two contending in a prize
That thinks he hath done well in peoples eyes:
Hearing applauſe and univerſall ſhout,
Giddy in ſpirit, ſtill gazing in a doubt
Whether thoſe peales of praiſe be his or no.

So

So thrice fair Lady ſtand I even ſo,
As doubtfull whether what I ſee be true,
Untill confirm'd, ſign'd, ratified by you.
Por. You ſee my Lord Baſſanio where I ſtand,
Such as I am; though for my ſelf alone
I would not be ambitious in my wiſh,
To wiſh my ſelf much better, yet for you,
I would be trebled twenty times my ſelf,
A thouſand times more fair, ten thouſand times
More rich, that to ſtand high in your account,
I might in virtues, beauties, livings, friends,
Exceed account: but the full ſumme of me
Is ſumme of nothing: which to terme in groſſe,
Is an unleſſoned Girl, unſchool'd, unpractiz'd:
Happy is this, ſhe is not yet ſo old
But ſhe may learn: happier then in this
She is not bread ſo dull but ſhe can learn;
Happieſt of all is, that her gentle ſpirit
Commits it ſelf to yours to be directed,
As from her Lord, her Governour, her King.
My ſelf, and what is mine, to you and yours
Is now converted. But now I was the Lord
Of this fair Manſion, Maſter of my Servants,
Queen o're my ſelf, and even now: but now
This Houſe, theſe Servants, and this ſame my ſelf
Are yours, my Lord, I give them with this Ring,
Which when you part from, looſe or give away,
Let it preſage the ruine of your love,
And be my vantage to exclaim on you.
Baſ. Madam, you have bereft me of all words,
Onely my blood ſpeaks to you in my veins,
And there is ſuch confuſion in my powers,
As after ſome oration fairly ſpoke
By a beloved Prince, there doth appear
Among the buzzing pleaſed multitude,
Where every ſomething being blent together,
Turns to a wild of nothing, ſave of joy
Expreſt, and not expreſt: but when this Ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence,
O then be bold to ſay Baſſanio's dead.
Ner. My Lord and Lady, it is now our time
That have ſtood by and ſeen our wiſhes proſper,
To cry good joy, good joy my Lord and Lady.
Gra. My Lord Baſſanio, and my gentle Lady,
I wiſh you all the joy that you can wiſh:
For I am ſure you can wiſh none from me;
And when your honours mean to ſolemnize
The bargain of your faith: I doe beſeech you
Even at that time I may be married too.
Baſ. With all my heart, ſo thou canſt get a Wife.
Gra. I thank yout Lordſhip, you have got me one.
My eyes my Lord can look as ſwift as yours:
You ſaw the Miſtris, I beheld the Maid:
You lov'd, I lov'd for intermiſſion,
No more pertains to me my Lord than you;
Your fortune ſtood upon the caskets there,
And ſo did mine too, as the matter falls:
For wooing heat untill I ſweat again,
And ſwearing till my very rough was dry
With oathes of love, at laſt, if promiſe laſt,
I got a promiſe of this fair one here
To have her love: provided that your fortune
Atchiev'd her Miſtreſſe.
Por. Is this true Nerriſſa.
Ner. Madam it is ſo, ſo you ſtand pleas'd withall.
Baſ. And doe you Gratiano mean good faith?
Gra. Yes faith my Lord.
Baſ. Our feaſt ſhall be much honoured in your marriage.
Gra. We'll play with them, the firſt boy for a thouſand Ducats.
Ner. What and ſtake down?
Gra. No, we ſhall ne're win at that ſport, and ſtake down.
But who comes here? Lorenzo and his Infidell?
What and my old Venetian friend Salerio?

Enter Lorenzo, Jeſſica, and Salerio

Baſ. Lorenzo and Salerio, welcome hither.
If that the youth of my new intereſt here
Have power to bid you welcome: by your leave
I bid my very friends and Countrimen
Sweet Portia welcome.
Por. So doe I my Lord, they are intirely welcome.
Lor. I thank your honour; for my part my Lord,
My purpoſe was not to have ſeen you here,
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
Hee did intreat me paſt all ſaying nay
To come with him along.
Sal. I did my Lord,
And have reaſon for it, Signior Anthonio
Commends him to you.
Baſ. Ere I ope this Letter
I pray you tell me how my good friend doth.
Sal. Not ſick my Lord, unleſſe it be in mind,
Nor well, unleſſe in mind: his Letter there
Will ſhew you his eſtate.

Opens the Letter.

Gra. Nerriſſa, cheer yond ſtranger, bid her welcome.
Your hand Salerio, what's the newes from Venice?
How doth that royall Merchant good Anthonio,
I know he will be glad of our ſucceſſe,
We are the Jaſons, we have won the fleece.
Sal. I would you had won the fleece that he hath loſt.
Por. There are ſome ſhrewd contents in yond ſame Paper,
That ſteals the colour from Baſſanio's cheek,
Some dear friend dead, elſe nothing in the world
Could turn ſo much the conſtitution
Of any conſtant man. What worſe and worſe?
With leave Baſſanio I am half your ſelf,
And muſt freely have the halfe of any thing
That this ſame paper brings you.
Baſ. O ſweet Portia,
Here are a few of the unpleaſant'ſt words
That ever blotted paper. Gentle Lady,
When I did firſt impart my love to you,
I freely told you all the wealth I had
Ran in my veins: I was a Gentleman,
And then I told you true: and yet dear Lady,
Rating my ſelf at nothing, you ſhall ſee
How much I was a Braggart, when I told you
My ſtate was nothing, I ſhould then have told you
That I was worſe then nothing: for indeed
I have ingag'd my ſelf to a dear friend,
Ingag'd my friend to his meer enemy,
To feed my meanes. Here is a Letter Lady,
The paper as the body of my friend,
And every word in it a gaping wound
Iſſuing life blood. But is it true Salerio?

Hath all his ventures fail'd ! what not one hit !
From Tripolis, from Mexico, and England,
From, Lisbon, Barbary, and India,
And not one Veſſell ſcape the dreadfull touch
Of Merchant-marring Rocks?
Sal. Not one my Lord.
Beſides, it ſhould appear, that if he had
The preſent money to diſcharge the Jew,
He would not take it : never did I know
A creature that did bear the ſhape of man
So keen and greedy to confound a man.
He plies the Duke at morning and at night,
And doth impeach the freedome of the ſtate
If they deny him juſtice. Twenty Merchants,
The Duke himſelf, and the Magnificoes
Of greateſt port have all perſwaded with him,
But none can drive him from the envious plea
Of forfeiture of juſtice, and his bond.
Jeſ. When I was with him, I have heard him ſwear
To Tuball and to Chus, his Countrimen,
That he would rather have Anthonio's fleſh,
Then twenty times the value of the ſumme
That he did owe him : and I know my Lord,
If law, authority, and power deny not,
It will go hard with poor Anthonio.
Por. Is it your dear friend that is thus in trouble?
Baſ. The deareſt friend to me, the kindeſt man,
The beſt condition'd, and unwearied ſpirit
In doing courteſies : and one in whom
The ancient Romane honour more appeares
Then any that drawes breath in Italy.
Por. What ſumme owes he the Jew?
Baſ. For me three thouſand Ducats.
Por. What, no more?
Pay him ſix thouſand, and deface the bond :
Double ſix thouſand, and then treble that,
Before a friend of this deſcription
Shall loſe a hair through my Baſſanio's fault.
Firſt go with me to Church, and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend :
For never ſhall you lie by Portia's ſide
With an unquiet ſoul. You ſhall have gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times over.
When it is paid, bring your true friend along,
My maid Nerriſſa, and my ſelf mean time
Will live as Maids and Widows ; come away,
For you ſhall hence upon your wedding day :
Bid your friends welcome, ſhow a merry cheer,
Since you are dear bought, I will love you dear.
But let me hear the Letter of your friend.

Sweet Baſſanio, my ſhips have all miſcarried, my Creditors grow cruell, my eſtate is very low, my bond to the Jew is forfeit, & ſince in paying it, it is impoſsible I ſhould live, all debts are cleared between you and I, if I might ſee you at my death : notwithſtanding uſe your pleaſure, if your love doe not perſwade you to come, let not my Letter.

Por. O love ! diſpatch all buſineſſe and be gone.
Baſ. Since I have your good leave to go away,
I will make haſte ; but till I come again,
No bed ſhall e're be guilty of my ſtay,
Nor reſt be interpoſer 'twixt us twain. Exeunt.

Enter the Jew. and Solanio, and Anthonio, and the Jaylor.

Jew. Jaylor, look to him, tell not me of mercy,
This is the fool that lends out money gratis.
Jaylor, look to him.
Ant. Hear me yet good Shylocke.
Jew. I'le have my bond, ſpeak not againſt my bond,
I have ſworn an oath that I will have my bond :
Thou call'dſt me dog before thou hadſt a cauſe,
But ſince I am a dog, beware my phangs,
The Duke ſhall grant me juſtice : I doe wonder
Thou naughty Jaylor, that thou art ſo fond
To come abroad with him at his requeſt.
Ant. I pray thee hear me ſpeak.
Jew. I'le have my bond, I will not hear thee ſpeak,
I'le have my bond, and therefore ſpeak no more.
I'le not be made a ſoft and dull-ey'd fool,
To ſhake the head, relent, and ſigh, and yield
To Chriſtian interceſſours : follow not,
I'le have no ſpeaking, I will have my bond. Exit. Jew.
Sol. It is the moſt impenetrable curre
That ever kept with men.
Ant. Let him alone,
I'le follow him no more with bootleſſe prayers :
He ſeeks my life, his reaſon well I know ;
I oft deliver'd from his forfeitures
Many that have at times made mone to me,
Therefore he hates me.
Sol. I am ſure the Duke will never grant this forfeiture to hold.
An. The Duke cannot deny the courſe of law ;
For the commodity that ſtrangers have
With us in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the juſtice of the State,
Since that the trade and profit of the City
Conſiſteth of all Nations. Therefore go,
Theſe griefs and loſſes have ſo bated me,
That I ſhall hardly ſpare a pound of fleſh
To morrow to my bloody Creditor.
Well Jaylor, on, pray God Baſſanio come
To ſee me pay his debt, and then I care not. Exeunt.

Enter Portia, Nerriſſa, Lorenzo, Jeſſica, a man of Portiaes.

Lor. Madam, although I ſpeak it in your preſence,
You have a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity, which appears moſt ſtrongly
In bearing thus the abſence of your Lord.
But if you knew to whom you ſhew this honour,
How true a Gentleman you ſend relief,
How dear a lover of my Lord your Husband,
I know you would be prouder of the work
Then cuſtomary bounty can enforce you.
Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor ſhall not now : for in companions
That doe converſe and waſte the time together,
Whoſe ſoules doe bear an equal yoke of love,
There muſt be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners and of ſpirit,
Which makes me think that this Anthonio
Being the boſome lover of my Lord,
Muſt needs be like my Lord. If it be ſo,
How little is the coſt I have beſtowed
In purchaſing the ſemblance of my ſoul,
From out the ſtate of helliſh cruelty.
This comes too near the praiſing of my ſelf,
Therefore no more of it : here other things,
Lorenzo, I commit into your hands,

The husbandry and manage of my house,
Untill my Lords return; for mine own part
I have toward heaven breath'd a secret vow,
To live in prayer and contemplation,
Onely attended by Nerrissa here,
Untill her husband and my Lords return:
There is a monastery two miles off,
And there we will abide. I doe desire you
Not to deny this imposition,
The which my love and some necessity
Now layes upon you.

Lor. Madam, with all my heart,
I shall obey you in all fair commands.

Por. My people doe already know my minde,
And will acknowledge you and Jessica
In place of Lord Bassanio and my self.
So fare you well till we shall meet again.

Lor. Fair thoughts and happy houres attend on you.

Ies. I wish your Ladiship all hearts content.

Por. I thank you for your wish, and am well pleas'd
To wish it back on you: fare you well Iessica. Exeunt.
Now Balthazar, as I have ever found thee honest true,
So let me find thee still: take this same Letter,
And use thou all the endeavour of a man,
In speed to Mantua, see thou render this
Into my Cousin's hand, Doctor Bellario,
And look what notes and garments he doth give thee,
Bring them I pray thee with imagin'd speed
Unto the Tranect, to the common Ferrie
Which trades to Venice; waste no time in words,
But get thee gone, I shall be there before thee.

Bal. Madam, I go with all convenient speed.

Po. Come on Nerrissa, I have work in hand
That you yet know not of, we'll see our husbands
Before they think of us?

Ner. Shall they see us?

Por. They shall Nerrissa: but in such a habit,
That they shall think we are accomplished
With that we lack; I'le hold thee any wager,
When we are both accoutred like young men,
I'le prove the prettier fellow of the two,
And wear my Dagger with the braver graee,
And speak between the change of man and boy,
With a reed voyce, and turn two mincing steps
Into a manly stride, and speak of frayes
Like a fine bragging youth: and tell quaint lies
How honourable Ladies sought my love,
Which I denying, they fell sick and died.
I could not doe withall: then I'le repent,
And wish for all that, that I had not kill'd them;
And twenty of these puny lies I'le tell
That men shall swear I have discontinued schoole
Above a twelvemoneth: I have within my minde
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Jacks,
Which I will practice.

Ner. Why, shall we turn to men?

Por. Fie, what a question's that,
If thou wert near a leud interpreter?
But come, I'le tell thee all my whole device
When I am in my Coach, which stayes for us
At the Parke Gate; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to day. Exeunt.

Enter Clown and Iessica.

Clown. Yes truly; for look you, the sins of the Father are to be laid upon the children, therefore I promise you, I fear you, I was alwayes plain with you, and so now I speak my agitation of the matter: therefore be of good cheer, for truly I think you are damn'd, there is but one hope in it that can doe you any good, and that is but a kind of bastard hope neither.

Ies. And what hope is that I pray thee?

Clow. Marry you may partly hope that your father got you not, that you are not the Jew's Daughter.

Ies. That were a kind of bastard hope indeed, so the sins of my Mother should be visited upon me.

Clow. Truly then I fear you are damned both by Father and Mother, thus when I shun Scilla your Father, I fall into Charibdis your Mother; well, you are gone both wayes.

Ies. I shall be saved by my Husband, he hath made me a Christian.

Clow. Truly the more to blame he, we were Christians enow before, e'ne as many as could well live one by another: this making of Christians will raise the price of Hogs, if we grow all to be Porke-eaters; we shall not shortly have a rasher on the coales for money.

Enter Lorenzo.

Ies. I'le tell my Husband Lancelet what you say, here he comes.

Lor. I shall grow jealous of you shortly Lancelet, if you thus get my Wife into corners?

Ies. Nay you need not fear us Lorenzo, Lancelet and I are out, he tells me flatly there is no mercy for me in heaven, because I am a Jewes daughter: and he sayes you are no good member of the common-wealth, for in converting Jewes to Christians, you raise the price of Porke.

Lor. I shall answer that better to the Common-wealth than you can the getting up of the Negroes belly: the Moore is with Childe by you Lancelet.

Clow. It is much that the Moore should be more then reason: but if she be lesse then an honest woman, she is indeed more then I took her for.

Lor. How every fool can play upon the word, I think the best grace of wit will shortly turn into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none onely but Parrats: go in sirra, bid them prepare for dinner?

Clow. That is done sir, they have all stomacks?

Lor. Goodly Lord, what a wit-snapper are you, then bid them prepare dinner.

Clow. That is done too sir, onely cover is the word.

Lor. Will you cover than sir?

Clow. Not so sir neither, I know my duty.

Lor. Yet more quarrelling with occasion, wilt thou shew the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant; I pray thee understand a plain man in his plain meaning: go to thy fellows, bid them cover the table, serve in the meat and we will come in to dinner.

Clow. For the table sir, it shall be serv'd in, for the meat sir, it shall be covered, for your comming in to dinner sir, why let it be as humours and conceits shall govern. Exit Clown.

Lor. O dear discretion, how his words are suted,
The fool hath planted in his memory
An Army of good words, and I doe know
A many fools that stand in better place,
Garnisht like him, that for a tricksie word
Defie the matter: how cheer'st thou Jessica,
And now good sweet say thy opinion,

How

How doſt thou like the Lord Baſſanio's wife?
Jeſ. Paſt all expreſſing, it is very meet
The Lord Baſſanio live an upright life
For having ſuch a bleſſing in his Lady,
He findes the joyes of heaven here on earth,
And if on earth he doe not mean it, it
Is reaſon he ſhould never come to heaven?
Why, if two gods ſhould play ſome heavenly match,
And on the wager lay two earthly women,
And Portia one; there muſt be ſomething elſe
Pawn'd with the other, for the poor rude world
Hath not her fellow.
Lo. Even ſuch a husband
Haſt thou of me, as ſhe is for a wife.
Jeſ. Nay, but aske my opinion too of that?
Lor. I will anon, firſt let us go to dinner?
Jeſ. Nay, let me praiſe you while I have a ſtomack?
Lor. No pray thee, let it ſerve for table talke,
Then howſom ere thou ſpeak'ſt 'mong other things,
I ſhall digeſt it?
Jeſ. Well, I'le ſet you forth. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Duke, the Magnificoes, Anthonio, Baſſanio, and Gratiano.

Duk. What, is Anthonio here?
Ant. Ready, ſo pleaſe your grace?
Du. I am ſorry for thee, thou art come to anſwer
A ſtony adverſary, an inhumane wretch,
Uncapable of pitty, void, and empty
From any dramme of mercy.
Ant, I have heard
Your grace hath tane great pains to qualifie
His rigorous courſe: but ſince he ſtands obdurate,
And that no lawfull means can carry me
Out of his envies reach, I doe oppoſe
My patience to his fury, and am arm'd
To ſuffer with a quietneſſe of ſpirit,
The very tiranny and rage of his.
Du. Go one and call the Jew into the Court.
Sal. He is ready at the door, he comes my Lord.

Enter Shylocke.

Du. Make room, and let him ſtand before our face.
Shylocke, the world thinks, and I think ſo too,
That thou but lead'ſt this faſhion of thy malice
To the laſt hour of act, and then 'tis thought
Thou'lt ſhew thy mercy and remorſe more ſtrange,
Than is thy ſtrange apparent cruelty,
And where thou now exact'ſt the penalty,
Which is a pound of this poor Merchant's fleſh,
Thou wilt not onely looſe the forfeiture,
But touch'd with humane gentleneſſe and love,
Forgive a moiety of the principall,
Glancing an eye of pitty on his loſſes
That have of late ſo hudled on his back,
Enow to preſſe a royall Merchant down;
And pluck commiſeration of his ſtate
From braſſie boſomes, and rough hearts of flint,
From ſtubborn Turks and Tarters never traind
To offiees of tender courteſie,
We all expect a gentle anſwer Jew?
Jew. I have poſſeſt your grace of what I purpoſe,
And by our holy Sabbath have I ſworn
To have the due and forfeit of my bond.
If you deny it, let the danger light
Upon your Charter, and your Cities freedome.
You'll aske me why I rather chooſe to have
A weight of carrion fleſh, then to receive
Three thouſand Ducats? I'le not anſwer that:
But ſay it is my humour; Is it anſwered?
What if my houſe be troubled with a Rat,
And I be pleas'd to give ten thouſand Ducats
To have it bain'd? What, are you anſwer'd yet?
Some men there are love not a gaping Pigge:
Some that are mad, if they behold a Cat:
And others, when the Bag-pipe ſings i'th' noſe,
Cannot contain their Urine for affection.
Maſters of paſſion ſwayes it to the mood
Of what it likes or loathes, now for your anſwer:
As there is no firm reaſon to be rendred
Why he cannot abide a gaping Pigge?
Why he a harmleſſe neceſſary Cat?
Why he a woollen Bag-pipe: but of force
Muſt yield to ſuch inevitable ſhame,
As to offend himſelf being offended:
So can I give no reaſon, nor I will not,
More then a lodg'd hate, and a certain loathing
I bear Anthonio, that I follow thus
A looſing ſuit againſt him? Are you anſwered?
Baſ. This is no anſwer thou unfeeling man,
To excuſe the current of thy cruelty.
Jew. I am not bound to pleaſe thee with my anſwer.
Baſ. Doe all men kill the thing they doe not love?
Jew. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?
Baſ. Every offence is not a hate at firſt.
Jew. What, would'ſt thou have a Serpent ſting thee twice?
Ant. I pray you think you queſtion with a Jew:
You may as well go ſtand upon the beach,
And bid the main flood be at his uſuall height,
Or even as well uſe queſtion with the Wolfe,
The Ewe bleat for the Lamb: when you behold,
You may as well forbid the Mountain Pines
To wagge their high tops, and to make no noiſe
When they are fretted with the guſts of heaven:
You may as well doe any thing moſt hard,
As ſeek to ſoften that, than which what harder?
His Jewiſh heart. Therefore I doe beſeech you
Make no more offers, uſe no farther meanes,
But with all brief and plain conveniency
Let me have judgement, and the Jew his will.
Baſ. For thy three thouſand Ducats here is ſix.
Jew. If every Ducat in ſix thouſand Ducats
Were in ſix parts, and every part a Ducat,
I would not draw them, I would have my bond?
Du. How ſhalt thou hope for mercy, rendring none?
Jew. What judgement ſhall I dread doing no wrong?
You have among you many a purchas'd ſlave,
Which like your Aſſes, and your Dogs and Mules,
You uſe in abject and in ſlaviſh part,
Becauſe you bought them. Shall I ſay to you,
Let them be free, marry them to your heirs?
Why ſweat they under burthens? Let their beds
Be made as ſoft as yours: and let their pallats
Be ſeaſon'd with ſuch Viands: you will anſwer

The ſlaves are ours. So doe I anſwer you.
The pound of fleſh which I demand of him
Is dearly bought, 'tis mine, and I will have it.
If you deny me, fie upon your Law,
There is no force in the decrees of Venice;
I ſtand for judgement, anſwer, ſhall I have it?

Du. Upon my power I may diſmiſſe this Court,
Unleſſe Bellario a learned Doctor,
Whom I have ſent for to determine this,
Come here to day.

Sal. My Lord, here ſtayes without
A Meſſenger with Letters from the Doctor,
New come from Padua.

Du. Bring us the Letters, Call the Meſſengers.

Baſ. Good. cheer Anthonio. What man, courage yet:
The Jew ſhall have my fleſh, blood, bones, and all,
Ere thou ſhalt looſe for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a tainted Weather of the flock,
Meeteſt for death, the weakeſt kind of fruit
Drops earlieſt to the ground, ſo let me;
You cannot better be employ'd Baſſanio,
Then to live ſtill, and write mine Epitaph.

Enter Neriſſa.

Du. Came you from Padua from Bellario?

Ner. From both.
My Lord Bellario greets your Grace.

Baſ. Why doſt thou whet thy knife ſo earneſtly?

Iew. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrout there.

Gra. Not on thy ſoale, but on thy ſoul harſh Jew
Thou mak'ſt thy knife keen: but no mtetall can,
No, not the hangmans Axe bear half the keenneſſe
Of thy ſharp envy. Can no prayers pierce thee?

Iew. No, none that thou haſt wit enough to make.

Gra. O be thou damn'd inexorable dog,
And for thy life let juſtice be accus'd:
Thou almoſt mak'ſt me waver in my faith;
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That ſouls of animals infuſe themſelves
Into the trunks of men. Thy curriſh ſpirit
Govern'd a Woolf, who hang'd for humane ſlaughter,
Even from the Gallows did his fell ſoul fleet;
And whil'ſt thou layeſt in thy unhallowed Damme,
Infus'd it ſelf in thee: For thy deſires
Are Woolviſh, bloody, ſtarv'd, and ravenous.

Iew. Till thou canſt rail the ſeal from off my bond:
Thou but offend'ſt thy Lungs to ſpeal ſo loud:
Repair thy wit good youth, or it will fall
To endleſſe ruine. I ſtand here for Law.

Du. This Letter from Bellario doth commend
A young and Learned Doctor in our Court;
Where is he?

Ner. He attendeth here hard by
To know your anſwer, whether you'll admit him.

Du. With all my heart. Some three or four of you
Go give him courteous conduct to this place,
Mean time the Court ſhall hear Bellario's Letter.

YOur Grace ſhall underſtand, that at the receit of your Letter I am very ſick: but in the inſtant that your meſſenger came, in loving viſitation was with me a young Doctor of Rome, his name is Balthaſar: I acquainted him with the Caſe in controverſie, between the Iew and Anthonio the Merchant: We turn'd ore many Books together: he is furniſhed with my opinion, which bettered with his own learning, the greatneſſe whereof I cannot enough commend, comes with him at my importunity, to fill up your Graces requeſt in my ſtead. I beſeech you, let his lack of yeares be no impediment to let him lack a reverend eſtimation: for I never knew ſo young a body, with ſo old a head. I leave him to your gracious acceptance, whoſe triall ſhall better publiſh his commendation.

Enter Portia for Balthaſar

Du. You hear the learn'd Bellario what he writes,
And here (I take it) is the Doctor come.
Give me your hand: Came you from old Bellario?

Por. I did my Lord.

Du. You are welcome: take your place;
Are you acquainted with the difference
That holds this preſent queſtion in the Court.

Por. I am informed throughly of the Caſe.
Which is the Merchant here? and which the Jew?

Du. Anthonio and old Shylocke, both ſtand forth.

Por. Is your name Shylocke.

Iew. Shylocke is my name.

Por. Of a ſtrange nature is the ſute you follow,
Yet in ſuch rule, that the Venetian Law
Cannot impugne you as you doe proceed.
You ſtand within his danger, doe you not?

Ant. I, ſo he ſayes.

Por. Doe you confeſſe the bond?

An. I doe.

Por. Then muſt the Jew be merciſull.

Iew. On what compulſion muſt I? Tell me that.

Por. The quality of mercy is not ſtrain'd,
It droppeth as the gentle rain from heaven
Upon the place beneath. It is twice bleſt,
It bleſſeth him that gives, and him that takes,
'Tis mightieſt in the mightieſt, it becomes
The throned Monarch better than his Crown.
His Scepter ſhewes the force of temporall power,
The attribute to awe and Majeſty,
Wherein doth ſit the dread and fear of Kings:
But mercy is above this ſceptred ſway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of Kings,
It is an attribute to God himſelf;
And earthly power doth then ſhew likeſt Gods
When mercy ſeaſons Juſtice. Therefore Jew,
Though Juſtice be thy plea, conſider this,
That in the courſe of Juſtice, none of us
Should ſee ſalvation: we doe pray for mercy,
And that ſame prayer, doth teach us all to render
The deeds of mercy. I have ſpoke thus much
To mitigate the juſtice of thy plea:
Which if thou follow, this ſtrict courſe of Venice
Muſt needs give ſentence againſt the Merchant there.

Shy. My deeds upon my head, I crave the Law,
The penalty and forfeit of my bond.

Por. Is he not able to diſcharge the money?

Baſ. Yes, here I tender it for him in the Court,
Yea, twice the ſumme, if that will not ſuffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times o're,
On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart:
If this will not ſuffice, it muſt appear
That malice beares down truth. And I beſeech you
Wreſt once the Law to your authority.
To doe a great right, doe a little wrong.
And curbe this cruell devil of his will.

Por. It muſt not be, there is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree eſtabliſhed:
'Twill be recorded for a Preſident,

And many an errour by the ſame example;
Will rush into the ſtate: It cannot be.
Iew. A Daniel come to judgement, yea a Daniel.
O wiſe young Judge, how doe I honour thee.
Por. I pray you look upon the bond.
Iew. Here 'tis moſt reverend Doctor, here it is.
Por. Shylocke, ther's thrice thy money offered thee.
Shy. An oath, an oath, I have an oath in heaven:
Shall I lay perjury upon my Soul?
No not for Venice.
Por. Why this bond is forfeit,
And lawfully by this the Jew may claime
A pound of fleſh, to be by him cut off
Neareſt the Merchants heart; be mercifull,
Take thrice thy money, bid me tear the bond.
Iew. When it is paid according to the tenure.
It doth appear you are a worthy Judge:
You know the Law, your expoſition
Hath been moſt ſound. I charge you by the Law,
Whereof you are a well-deſerving pillar,
Proceed to judgement: By my ſoul I ſwear,
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me: I ſtay here on my bond.
An. Moſt heartily I doe beſeech the Court
To give the judgement.
Por. Why then thus it is:
You muſt prepare your boſome for his knife.
Iew. O noble Judge, O excellent young man.
Por. For the intent and purpoſe of the Law
Hath full relation to the penalty,
Which here appeareth due upon the bond.
Iew. 'Tis very true: O wiſe and upright Judge,
How much more elder art thou then thy looks?
Por. Therefore lay bare your boſome.
Iew. I, his breſt,
So ſayes the bond, doth itnot noble Judge?
Neareſt his heart, thoſe are the very words.
Por. It is ſo: Are there balance here to weigh the fleſh?
Iew. I have them ready.
Por. Have by ſome Surgeon, Shylock, on your charge
To ſtop his wounds, leaſt he ſhould bleed to death.
Iew. It is not nominated in the bond?
Por. It is not ſo expreſt: but what of that?
'Twere good you doe ſo much for charity.
Iew. I cannot find it, 'tis not in the bond.
Por. Come Merchant, have you any thing to ſay,
Ant. But little: I am arm'd and well prepar'd,
Give me your hand Baſſanio, fare you well.
Grieve not that I am faln to this for you:
For herein fortune ſhewes her ſelf more kind
Then is his cuſtome. It is ſtill her uſe
To let the wretched man out-live his wealth,
To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow
An age of poverty. From which lingring penance
Of ſuch a miſery, doth ſhe cut me off:
Commend me to your honourable Wife,
Tell her the proceſſe of Anthonio's end:
Say how I lov'd you; ſpeak me fair in death:
And when the tale is told, bid her be judge,
Whether Baſſanio had not once a Love:
Repent not you that you ſhall loſe your friend,
And he repents not that he payes your debt,
For if the Jew doe cut but deep enough,
I'le pay it inſtantly, with all my heart.
Baſ. Anthonio, I am married to a wife,
Which is as dear to me as life it ſelf,
But life it ſelf, my wife and all the world,
Are not with me eſteem'd above thy life.
I would loſe all, I ſacrifice them all
Here to this devil, to deliver you.
Por. Your wife would give you little thanks for that,
If ſhe were by to hear you make the offer.
Gra. I have a Wife whom I proteſt I love,
I would ſhe were in heaven, ſo ſhe could
Intreat ſome power to change this curriſh Jew.
Ner. 'Tis well you offer it behind her back,
The wiſh would make elſe an unquiet houſe. (ter
Iew. Theſe be the Chriſtian husbands: I have a daugh-
Would any of the ſtock of Barrabas
Had been her husband, rather then a Chriſtian.
We triſle time, I pray thee purſue ſentence.
Por. A pound of that ſame Merchants fleſh is thine,
The Court awards it, and the law doth give it.
Iew. Moſt rightfull Judge.
Por. And you muſt cut this fleſh from off his breaſt,
The Law allows it, and the Court awards it.
Iew. Moſt learned Judge, a ſentence, come prepare.
Por. Tarry a little, there is ſomething elſe,
This bond doth give thee here no jot of bloud,
The words expreſly are a pound of fleſh:
Then take thy bond, take thou thy pound of fleſh,
But in the cutting it, if thou doſt ſhed
One drop of Chriſtian blood, thy lands and goods
Are by the Lawes of Venice confiſcate
Unto the State of Venice.
Gra. O upright Judge.
Mark Jew, O learned Judge.
Shy. Is that the law?
Por. Thy ſelf ſhalt ſee the Act:
For as thou urgeſt juſtice, be aſſur'd
Thou ſhalt have juſtice more then thou deſireſt.
Gra. O learned Judge, mark Jew, a learned Judge.
Iew. I take this offer then, pay the bond thrice.
And let the Chriſtian go.
Baſ. Here is the money.
Por. Soft, the Jew ſhall have all juſtice, ſoft, no haſte,
He ſhall have nothing but the penalty.
Gra. O Jew, an upright Judge, a learned Judge.
Por. Therefore prepare thee to cut off the fleſh,
Shed thou no blood, nor cut thou leſſe nor more
But juſt a pound of fleſh: if thou tak'ſt more
Or leſſe then a juſt pound, be it ſo much
As makes it light or heavy in the ſubſtance,
Or the diviſion of the twentieth part
Of one poor ſcruple, nay if the ſcale doe turn
But in the eſtimation of a hair,
Thou dieſt, and all thy goods are confiſcate.
Gra. A ſecond Daniel, a Daniel Jew,
Now infidell I have thee on the hip.
Por. Why doth the Jew pauſe, take thy forfeiture.
Shy. Give me my principall, and let me go.
Baſ. I have it ready for thee, here it is.
Por. He hath refus'd it in the open Court,
He ſhall have meerly juſtice and his bond.
Gra. A Daniel ſtill ſay I, a ſecond Daniel,
I thank thee Jew for teaching me that word.
Shy. Shall I not have barely my principall?
Por. Thou ſhalt have nothing but the forfeiture,
To be taken ſo at thy perill Jew.
Shy. Why then the Devil give him good of it:
I'le ſtay no longer queſtion.

Por.

Por. Tarry Jew,
The Law hath yet another hold on you.
It is enacted in the Lawes of Venice,
If it be proved against an Alien,
That by direct, or indirect attempts
He seek the life of any Citizen,
The party 'gainst the which he doth contrive,
Shall seize one half his goods, the other half
Comes to the privy Coffer of the State,
And the offenders life lies in the mercy
Of the Duke onely, 'gainst all other voyce.
In which predicament I say thou standst:
For it appeares by manifest proceeding,
That indirectly, and directly too
Thou had contriv'd against the very life
Of the defendant: and thou hast incurr'd
The danger formerly by me rehearst.
Down therefore, and beg mercy of the Duke.
Gra. Beg that thou maist have leave to hang thy self,
And yet thy wealth being forfeit to the state,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord,
Therefore thou must be hang'd at the states charge.
Duk. That thou shalt see the difference of our spirit,
I pardon thee thy life before thou aske it:
For half thy wealth, it is Anthonio's;
The other halfe comes to the generall state,
Which humblenesse may drive unto a fine.
Por. I, for the state, not for Anthonio.
Shy. Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that,
You take my house, when you doe take the prop
That doth sustain my house: you take my life
When you doe take the meanes whereby I live.
Por. What mercy can you render him Anthonio?
Gra. A Halter Gratis, nothing else for Gods sake.
Ant. So please my Lord the Duke, and all the Court
To quit the fine for one half of his goods,
I am content: so he will let me have
The other halfe in use, to render it
Upon his death, unto the Gentleman
That lately stole his daughter.
Two things provided more, that for this favour
He presently become a Christian:
The other, that he doe record a gift
Here in the Court of all he dies possest
Unto his Son Lorenzo, and his Daughter.
Duk. He shall doe this, or else I doe recant
The pardon that I late pronounced here.
Por. Art thou contented Jew? what dost thou say?
Shy. I am content.
Por. Clarke, draw a deed of gift.
Shy. I pray you give me leave to go from hence,
I am not well, send the deed after me,
And I will sign it.
Duk. Get thee gone, but doe it.
Gra. In Christning thou shalt have two Godfathers,
Had I been Judge, thou shouldst have had ten more,
To bring thee to the Gallows, not to the Font. Exit.
Duk. Sir, I entreat you with me home to dinner.
Por. I humbly doe desire your Grace of pardon,
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meet I presently set forth.
Duk. I am sorry that your leisure serves you not:
Anthonio gratifie this Gentleman,
For in my mind, you are much bound to him.
Exit Duke and his train.
Bass. Most worthy Gentleman, I and my friend
Have by your wisedome been this day acquitted
Of grievous penalties, in lieu whereof
Three thousand Ducats due unto the Jew
We freely cope your courteous pains withall.
Ant. And stand indebted over and above
In love and service to you evermore.
Por. He is well paid that is well satisfied,
And I delivering you, am satisfied,
And therein doe account my self well paid.
My mind was never yet more mercinary.
I pray you know me when we meet again,
I wish you well, and so I take my leave.
Bass. Dear sir, of force I must attempt you further,
Take some remembrance of us as a tribute,
Not as a fee: grant me two things, I pray you
Not to deny me, and to pardon me.
Por. You presse me far, and therefore I will yield,
Give me your Gloves, I'le wear them for your sake,
And for your love I'le take this Ring from you,
Doe not draw back your hand, I'le take no more,
And you in love shall not deny me this?
Bass. This Ring good sir, alas it is a trifle,
I will not shame my self to give you this.
Por. I will have nothing else but onely this,
And now me thinks I have a mind to it.
Bass. There's more depends on this then on the value,
The dearest Ring in Venice will I give you,
And find it out by proclamation,
Onely for this I pray you pardon me.
Por. I see sir you are liberall in offers,
You taught me first to beg, and now me thinks
You teach me how a beggar should be answer'd.
Bass. Good sir, this Ring was given me by my Wife,
And when she put it on, she made me vow
That I should neither sell, nor give, nor lose it.
Por. That scuse serves many men to save their gifts,
And if your Wife be not a mad woman,
And know how well I have deserv'd this Ring,
She would not hold out enemy for ever
For giving it to me: well, peace be with you. Exeunt.
Ant. My Lord Bassanio, let him have the Ring,
Let his deservings and my love withall
Be valued against your Wives commandement.
Bass. Go Gratiano, run and overtake him,
Give him the Ring, and bring him if thou canst
Unto Anthonio's house, away, make haste. Exit Grati.
Come, you and I will thither presently,
And in the morning early will we both
Flie toward Belmont, come Anthonio. Exeunt.

Enter Portia and Nerrissa.

Por. Enquire the Jews house out, give him this deed,
And let him sign it, we'll away to night,
And be a day before our Husbands home:
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Fair sir, you are well o'retane:
My Lord Bassanio upon more advice,
Hath sent you here this Ring, and doth intreat
Your company at dinner.
Por. That cannot be;
His Ring I doe accept most thankfully,
And so I pray you tell him: furthermore,
I pray you shew my youth old Shylock's house.
Grati. That will I doe.
Ner. Sir, I would speak with you:

I'le see if I can get my Husbands Ring
Which I did make him swear to keep for ever.
Por. Thou maist I warrant, we shall have old swearing
That they did give the Rings away to men;
But we'll out-face them, and out-swear them too:
Away, make haste, thou know'st where I will tarry.
Ner. Come good sir, will you shew me to this house.
Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Lorenzo and Jessica.

Lor. The Moon shines bright. In such a night as this,
When the sweet wind did gently kisse the trees,
And they did make no noyse: in such a night
Troylus me thinks mounted the Troyan wall,
And sigh'd his soul toward the Grecian tents
Where Cressed lay that night
Jes. In such a night.
Did Thisbie fearfully o're-trip the dew,
And saw the Lyons shadow ere himself,
And ran dismayed away.
Loren. In such a night
Stood Dido with a Willow in her hand
Upon the wild Sea banks, and waft her Love
To come again to Carthage.
Jes. In such a night
Medea gathered the inchanted herbs
That did renew old Eson.
Loren. In such a night
Did Jessica steal from the wealthy Jew,
And with an Unthrift Love did run from Venice,
As far as Belmont.
Jes. In such a night.
Did young Lorenzo swear he lov'd her well,
Stealing her soul with many vowes of faith,
And ne're a true one.
Loren. In such a night
Did pretty Iessica (like a little shrow)
Slander her Love, and he forgave it her.
Ies. I would out-night you did no body come:
But hark, I hear the footing of a man.

Enter Messenger.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?
Mes. A friend. (friend?
Loren. A friend, what friend, your name I pray you
Mes. Stephano is my name, and I bring word
My Mistresse will before the break of day
Be here at Belmont, she doth stray about
By holy crosses, where she kneels and prayes
For happy wedlock houres.
Loren. Who comes with her?
Mes. None but a holy Hermit and her maid,
I pray you is my Master yet return'd?
Loren. He is not, nor we have not heard from him,
But go we in I pray thee Iessica,
And ceremoniously let us prepare
Some welcome for the Mistresse of the house.

Enter Clown.

Clow. Sola, sola: wo ha ho, sola, sola.
Loren. Who calls?
Clo. Sola, did you see M. Lorenzo, and Mrs. Lorenza,
Lor. Leave hollowing man, here. (sola, sola.
Clo. Sola, where, where?
Lor. Here?
Clo. Tell him there's a Post come from my Master, with his horn full of good newes, my Master will be here ere morning sweet love.
Loren. Let's in, and there expect their comming.
And yet no matter: why should we go in?
My friend Stephano signifie pray you
Within the house, your Mistresse is at hand,
And bring your musick forth into the aire.
How sweet the Moon-light sleeps upon this bank,
Here will we sit, and let the sounds of Musick
Creep in our eares; soft stilnesse, and the night
Become the tutches of sweet harmony:
Sit Iessica, looke how the floor of heaven
Is thick inlayed with patterns of bright gold,
There's not the smallest orbe which thou behold'st
But in his motion like an Angel sings,
Still quiring to the young eyed Cherubims;
Such harmony is in immortall souls,
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grosly close in it, we cannot hear it:
Come hoe, and wake Diana with a hymne,
With sweetest tutches pierce your Mistresse eare,
And draw her home with Musick.
Ies. I am never merry when I hear sweet Musick.
Play Musick.
Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentive:
For doe but note a wild and wanton herd
Or race of youthfull and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood,
If they but hear perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any ayre of Musick touch their eares,
You shall perceive them make a mutuall stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze
By the sweet power of musick: therefore the Poet
Did fain that Orpheus drew teares, stones, and floods.
Since naught so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But musick for the time doth change his nature:
The man that hath no Musick in himself,
Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoyles,
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections darke as Erebus,
Let no such man be trusted: marke the Musick.

Enter Portia and Nerrissa.

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall:
How farre that little candle throws his beames,
So shines a good deed in a naughty world. (dle?
Ner. When the Moon shone, we did not see the can-
Por. So doth the greater glory dim the lesse,
A substitute shines brightly as a King
Untill a King be by, and then his state
Empties it self, as doth an inland brook
Into the main of waters: musick, hark. Musick.
Ner. It is your musick Madam of the house.
Por. Nothing is good I see without respect,
Me thinks it sounds much sweeter then by day?
Ner. Silence bestowes that vertue on it Madam,
Por. The Crow doth sing as sweetly as the Larke

When

When nothers is attended : and I think
The Nightingale if she should sing by day
When every Goote is cackling, would be thought
No better a Musician then the Wren?
How many things by season, season'd are.
To their right praise, and true perfection :
Peace, how the Moon sleeps with Endimion,
And would not be awak'd.

Musick ceases.

Lor. That is the voyce,
O. I am much deceiv'd of Portia.

Por. He knows me as the blind man knows the Cuckow by the bad voyce.

Lor. Dear Lady welcome home.

Por. We have been praying for our husbands welfare,
Which speed we hope the better for our words,
Are they return'd?

Lor. Madam, they are not yet :
But there is come a Messenger before
To signifie their comming.

Por. Go in Nerrissa,
Give order to my servants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence,
Nor you Lorenzo, Jessica nor you.

A Tucket sounds.

Lor. Your husband is at hand, I hear his Trumpet,
We are no tell-tales Madam, fear you not.

Por. This night me thinks is but the day-light sick,
It looks a little paler, 'tis a day :
Such as the day is, when the Sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Anthonio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Bas. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walke in absence of the Sun.

Por. Let me give light, but let me not be light,
For a light Wife doth make a heavy Husband,
And never be Bassanio so from me,
But God sort all : you are welcome home my Lord.

Bas. I thank you Madam, give welcome to my friend,
This is the man, this is Anthonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.

Por. You should in all sence be much bound to him,
For as I hear he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more then I am well acquitted of.

Por. Sir, you are very welcome to our house :
It must appear in other wayes then words,
Therefore I scant this breathing courtesie.

Gra. By yonder Moon I swear you doe me wrong,
Infaith I gave it to the Judges Clerk,
Would he were gelt that had it for my part,
Since you doe take it, Love, so much at heart.

Por. A quarrell hoe already, what's the matter?

Gra. About a hoop of Gold, a paltry Ring
That she did give me, whose Poesie was
For all the world like Cutlers Poetrie
Upon a Knife ; Love me, and leave me not.

Ner. What talke you of the Poesie or the value :
You swore to me when I did give it you,
That you would wear it till the hour of death,
And that it should lie with you in your grave,
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oathes,
You should have been respective and have kept it.
Gave it a Judges Clerk : but well I know
The Clerk will ne're wear hair on's face that had it.

Gra. He will, and if he live to be a man.

Ner. If, if a woman live to be a man.

Gra. Now by this hand I gave it to a youth,
A kind of boy, a little scrubbed boy,
No higher then thy self, the Judges Clerk,
A prating boy that begg'd it as a Fee,
I could not for my heart deny it him.

Por. You were too blame, I must be plain with you,
To part so slightly with your wives first gift,
A thing stuck on with oathes upon your finger,
And so riveted with faith unto your flesh.
I gave my Love a Ring, and made him swear
Never to part with it, and here he stands ;
I dare be sworn to him, he would not leave it,
Nor pluck it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world masters. Now in faith Gratiano,
You give your wife too unkind a cause of grief,
And 'twere to me I should be mad at it.

Bas. Why I were best to cut my left hand off,
And swear I lost the Ring defending it.

Gra. My Lord Bassanio gave his Ring away
Unto the Judge that begg'd it, and indeed
Deserv'd it too : and then the boy his Clerk
That took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine,
And neither man nor master would take ought
But the two Rings.

Por. What Ring gave you my Lord?
Not that, I hope, which you receiv'd of me.

Bas. If I could adde a lye unto a fault,
I would deny it : but you see my finger
Hath not the Ring upon it, it is gone.

Por. And even so void is your false heart of truth.
By heaven I will ne're come in your bed
Untill I see the Ring.

Ner. Nor I in yours, till I again see mine.

Bas. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gave the Ring,
If you did know for whom I gave the Ring,
And would conceive for what I gave the Ring,
And how unwillingly I left the Ring,
When nought would be accepted but the Ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure?

Por. If you had known the virtue of the Ring,
Or half her worthinesse that gave the Ring,
Or your own honour to contain the Ring,
You would not then have parted with the Ring :
What man is there so much unreasonable,
If you had pleas'd to have defended it
With any tearmes of Zeale : wanted the modesty
To urge the thing held as a ceremony :
Nerrissa teaches me what to believe,
I'le die for't, but some Woman had the Ring?

Bas. No by mine honour Madam, by my soul
No woman had it, but a civil Doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand Ducats of me,
And begg'd the Ring ; the which I did deny him,
And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away :
Even he that had held up the very life
Of my dear friend. What should I say, sweet Lady?
I was inforc'd to send it after him,
I was beset with shame and courtesie,
My honour would not let ingratitude
So much besmear it. Pardon me good Lady,
And by these blessed Candles of the night,
Had you been there, I think you would have begg'd
The Ring of me, to give thee worthy Doctor.

Por. Let not that Doctor e're come near my house,
Since he hath got the Jewell that I loved,
And that which you did swear to keep for me,
I will become as liberall as you,
I'le not deny him any thing I have,
No, not my body, nor my husbands bed:
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it.
Lie not a night from home. Watch me like Argus,
If you doe not, if I be left alone,
Now by mine honour which is yet mine own,
I'le have the Doctor for my bedfellow.
Ner. And I his Clerk: therefore be well advis'd
How you doe leave me to mine own protection.
Gra. Well, doe you so: let not me take him then,
For if I doe, I'le marre the young Clerks pen.
Ant. I am th' unhappy subject of these quarrells.
Por. Sir, grieve not you,
You are welcome notwithstanding.
Bas. Portia, forgive me this enforced wrong,
And in the hearing of these many friends
I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes
Wherein I see my self.---------
Por. Mark you but that?
In both mine eyes he doubly sees himself:
In each eye one, swear by your double self,
And there's an oath of credit.
Bas. Nay, but hear me.
Pardon this fault, and by my soul I swear
I never more will break an oath with thee.
Anth. I once did lend my body for thy wealth,
Which but for him that had your husbands Ring
Had quite miscarried. I dare be bound again,
My soul upon the forfeit, that your Lord
Will never more break faith advisedly.
Por. Then you shall be his surety: give him this,
And bid him keep it better then the other.
Ant. Here Lord Bassanio, swear to keep this Ring.
Bas. By heaven it is the same I gave the Doctor.
Por. I had it of him: pardon Bassanio,
For by this Ring the Doctor lay with me.
Ner. And pardon me my gentle Gratiano,
For that same scrubbed boy the Doctor's Clerk
In lieu of this, last night did lie with me.
Gra. Why this is like the mending of high wayes
In Summer, where the wayes are fair enough:
What, are we Cuckolds ere we have deserv'd it?
Por. Speak not so grossely, you are all amaz'd;
Here is a Letter, read it at your leisure,
It comes from Padua from Bellario.
There you shall find that Portia was the Doctor,
Nerissa there her Clerk. Lorenzo here
Shall witnesse I set forth as soon as you,
And but even now return'd: I have not yet
Entred my house. Anthonio you are welcome,
And I have better newes in store for you
Than you expect: unseale this Letter soon,
There you shall find three of your Argosies
Are richly come to harbour suddenly.
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanced on this Letter.
Anth. I am dumbe.
Bas. Were you the Doctor, and I knew you not?
Gra. Were you the Clerk, that is to make me Cuckold?
Ner. I, but the Clerk that never meanes to doe it,
Unlesse he live untill he be a man.
Bas. (Sweet Doctor) you shall be my bedfellow,
When I am absent, then lie with my wife.
Ant. (Sweet Lady) you have given me life and living;
For here I read for certain that my ships
Are safely come to Rhodes.
Por. How now Lorenzo?
My Clerk hath some good comforts too for you.
Ner. I, and I'le give them him without a fee.
There doe I give to you and Jessica
From the rich Jew, a speciall deed of gift
After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.
Loren. Fair Ladies you drop Manna in the way
Of starved people.
Por. It is almost morning,
And yet I am sure you are not satisfied
Of these events at full. Let us go in,
And charge us there upon interrogatories,
And we will answer all things faithfully.
Gra. Let it be so, the first interrogatory
That my Nerissa shall be sworn on, is,
Whether till the next night she had rather stay,
Or go to bed, now being two hours to day,
But were the day come, I should wish it dark,
Till I were couching with the Doctors Clerk.
Well, while I live, I'le fear no other thing
So sore, as keeping safe Nerissaes Ring.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

As you like it.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orlando.

AS I remember Adam, it was upon this fashion bequeathed me by will, but a poor thousand Crowns, and as thou saist, charged my brother on his blessing to breed me well; and there begins my sadnesse: My brother Iaques he keeps at schoole, and report speaks goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keeps me rustically at home, or (to speak more properly) stayes me here at home unkept: for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an Oxe? his horses are bred better, for besides that they are fair with their feeding, they are taught their mannage, and to that end Riders dearly hir'd: but I (his brother) gain nothing under him but growth, for the which his Animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I: besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gave me, his countenance seems to take from me: he lets me feed with his Hindes, barres me the place of a brother, and as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it Adam that grieves me, and the spirit of my Father, which I think is within me, begins to mutiny against this servitude. I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to avoid it.

Enter Oliver.

Adam. Yonder comes my Master, your brother.

Orlax. Go apart Adam, and thou shalt hear how he will shake me up.

Oli. Now Sir, what make you here;

Orla. Nothing: I am not taught to make any thing.

Oli. What marre you then sir?

Orla. Marry sir, I am helping you to marre that which God made, a poor unworthy brother of yours with idlenesse.

Oli. Marry sir be better employed, and be naught a while.

Orla. Shall I keep your hogs, and eat huskes with them? what prodigall portion have I spent, that I should come to such penury?

Oli. Know you where you are sir?

Orla. O sir, very well: here in your Orchard.

Oli. Know you before home sir?

Orla. I, better then him I am before, knowes me: I know you are my eldest brother, and in the gentle condition of blood you should so know me: the courtesie of nations allowes you my better, in that you are the first born, but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt us: I have as much of my father in me, as you; albeit I confesse your coming before me is nearer to his reverence.

Oli. What Boy. (this.

Orla. Come, come elder brother, you are too young in

Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me villain?

Orla. I am no villain: I am the youngest Son of sir Rowland de Boyes: he was my father, and he is thrice a villain that sayes such a father begot villains: wert thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pull'd out thy tongue, for saying so, thou hast rail'd on thy self.

Adam. Sweet Master be patient, for your Fathers remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me go I say.

Orla. I will not till I please: you shall hear me: my father charg'd you in his will to give me good education: you have train'd me up like a pezant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities: the spirit of my father growes strong in me, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or give me the poor allottery my father left me by testament, with that I will go buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what wilt thou doe? beg when that is spent? Well sir, get you in. I will not long be troubled with you: you shall have some part of your will, I pray you leave me.

Orla. I will no further offend you, then becomes me for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you old dogge.

Adam. Is old dogge my reward: most true, I have lost my teeth in your service: God be with my old master, he would not have spoke such a word. Exit Orl. Ad.

Oli. Is it even so, begin you to grow upon me? I will physick your rankenesse, and yet give no thousand crowns neither: holla Dennis.

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship.

Oli. Was not Charles the Duke's Wrastler here to speak with me?

Den. So please you, he is here at the door, and importunes accesse to you.

Oli. Call him in: 'twill be a good way: and to morrow the wrastling is.

Enter Charles.

Char. Good morrow to your worship.

Oli. Good Mounsieur Charles: what's the new newes at the new Court?

Char. There's no newes at the Court sir, but the old newes: that is, the old Duke is banished by his younger brother the new Duke, and three or four loving Lords have put themselves into a voluntary exile with him, whose Lands and revenues enrich the new Duke, therefore he gives them good leave to wander.

Oli. Can you tell if Rosalind the Dukes daughter be banished with her Father?

Cha. O no; for the Dukes Daughter her Cousin so loves her, being ever from their Cradles bred together, that she would have followed their exile, or have died to stay behind her; she is at the Court, and no lesse beloved of her Uncle, then his own Daughter, and never two Ladies loved as they doe.

Oli. Where will the old Duke live?

Cha. They say he is already in the Forrest of Arden, and a many merry men with him; and there they live like the old Robin Hood of England: they say many young Gentlemen flock to him every day, and fleet the time carelesly as they did in the golden world.

Oli. What, you wrastle to morrow before the new Duke?

Charl. Marry doe I sir: and I came to acquaint you with a matter: I am given, sir, secretly to understand, that your younger brother Orlando hath a disposition to come in disguis'd against me to try a fall: to morrow, sir, I wrastle for my credit, and he that escapes me without some broken limbe, shall acquit him well: your brother is but young and tender, and for your love I would be loth to foyle him, as I must for mine own honour if he come in: therefore out of my love to you, I came hither to acquaint you withall, that either you might stay him from his intendment, or brook such disgrace well as he shall run into, in that it is a thing of his own search, and altogether against my will.

Oli. Charles, I thank thee for thy love to me, which thou shalt find I will most kindly requite: I had my self notice of my Brothers purpose herein, and have by under-hand meanes laboured to disswade him from it; but he is resolute. I tell the Charles, It is the stubbornest young fellow of France, full of ambition, an envious emulator of every mans good parts, a secret and villanous contriver against me his naturall brother: therefore use thy discretion, I had as lief thou didst break his neck as his finger. And thou wert best look too't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if he doe not mightily grace himself on thee, he will practice against thee by poyson, to entrap thee by some treacherous device, and never leave thee till he hath tane thy life by some indirect meanes or other: for I assure thee, (and almost with teares I speak it) there is not one so young, and so villanous this day living. I speak but brotherly of him, but should I anatomize him to thee, as he is, I must blush, and weep, and thou must look pale and wonder.

Cha. I am heartily glad I came hither to you: if he come to morrow, I'le give him his payment: if ever he go alone again, I'le never wrastle for prize more: and so God keep your worship. Exit.

Oli. Farewell good Charles. Now will I stirre this Gamester: I hope I shall see an end of him, for my soul (yet I know not why) hates nothing more then he: yet he's gentle, never school'd and yet learned, full of noble device, of all sorts enchantingly beloved, and indeed so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my own people, who best know him, that I am altogether misprised: but it shall not be so long, this wrastler shall clear all: nothing remains, but that I kindle the boy thither, which now I'le go about. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Rosalind, and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee Rosalind, sweet my Coz, be merry.

Ros. Dear Celia; I show more mirth then I am mistresse of, and would you yet were merrier: unlesse you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learn me how to remember my extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Herein I see thou lov'st me not with the full waight that I love thee; if my Uncle thy banished father had banished thy Uncle the Duke my Father, so thou hadst been still with me, I could have taught my love, to take thy father for mine; so wouldst thou, if the truth of thy love to me were so righteously temper'd, as mine is to thee.

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to rejoyce in yours.

Cel. You know my Father hath no child but I, nor none is like to have, and truly when he dies, thou shalt be his heir? for what he hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee again in affection: by mine honour I will, and when I break that oath, let me turn monster: therefore my sweet Rose, my dear Rose be merry.

Ros. From henceforth I will, Coz, and devise sports: let me see, what think you of falling in love?

Cel. Marry I prethee doe, to make sport withall: but love no man in good earnest, nor no further in sport neither, then with safety of a pure blush, thou maist in honour come off again.

Ros. What shall be our sport then?

Cel. Let us sit and mock the good housewife Fortune from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be bestowed equally.

Ros. I would we could doe so: for her benefits are mightily misplaced, and the bountifull blind woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Cel. 'Tis true, for those that she makes fair, she scarce makes honest, and those that she makes honest, she makes very ill-favouredly.

Ros. Nay now thou goest from Fortunes Office to Natures: Fortune reigns in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of Nature.

Enter Clown.

Cel. No; when Nature hath made fair a creature, may she not by Fortune fall into the fire? though Nature hath given us wit to flout at Fortune, hath not Fortune sent in this fool to cut off this argument?

Ros. Indeed Fortune is there too hard for Nature, when Fortune makes Natures naturall, the cutter off of Natures wit.

Cel. Peradventure this is not Fortunes work neither, but Natures, who perceiving our naturall wits too dull to reason of such goddesses, hath sent this Naturall for our whetstone: for alwayes the dulnesse of the fool, is the whetstone of the wits. How now Wit, whether wander you?

Clow. Mistresse, you must come away to your father,

Cel. Were you made the Messenger?

Clo. No by mine honour, but I was bid to come for you.

Ros.

Ros. Where learned you that oath foole?

Clo. Of a certain Knight, that swore by his Honour they were good Pancakes, and swore by his Honour the Mustard was naught: Now I'le stand to it, the Pancakes were naught, and the Mustard was good, and yet was not the Knight forsworn.

Cel. How prove you that in the great heap of your knowledge?

Ros. I marry, now unmuzzle your wisdome.

Clo. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chinnes, and swear by your beards that I am a knave.

Cel. By our beards (if we had them) thou art.

Clo. By my knavery (if I had it) then I were: but if you swear by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this Knight swearing by his Honour, for he never had any; or if he had, he had sworn it away, before ever he saw those Pancakes, or that Mustard.

Cel. Prethee, who is't that thou means't?

Clo. One that old Fredrick your Father loves.

Ros. My Fathers love is enough to honour him enough; speak no more of him, you'll be whipt for taxation, one of these dayes.

Clo. The more pity that fooles may not speak wisely, what Wise men do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth thou saiest true: For, since the little wit that fooles have was silenced, the little foolery that wise men have makes a great shew; Here comes Mounsieur Le Beu.

Enter Le Beu.

Ros. With his mouth full of news.

Cel. Which he will put on us, as Pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shall we be news-cram'd.

Cel. All the better: we shall be the more marketable. Boon-jour Mounsieur le Beu, what newes?

Le Beu. Fair Princess,
You have lost much sport.

Cel. Sport: of what colour?

Le Beu. What colour Madam? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Clo. Or as the destinies decrees,

Cel. Well said, that was laid on with a trowell.

Clo. Nay, if I keep not my rank.

Ros. Thou loosest thy old smell.

Le Beu. You amaze me Ladies: I would have told you of good wrastling, which you have lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell us the manner of the Wrastling.

Le Beu. I will tell you the beginning: and if it please your Ladiships, you may see the end, for the best is yet to doe, and here where you are, they are coming to perform it.

Cel. Well, the beginning that is dead and buried.

Le Beu. There comes an old man, and his three sons.

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beu. Three proper young men, of excellent growth and presence.

Ros. With bils on their necks: Be it known unto all men by these presents.

Le Beu. The eldest of the three, wrastled with Charles the Dukes Wrastler, which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribbes, that there is little hope of life in him: So he serv'd the second, and so the third: yonder they lye, the poor old man their Father, making such pitifull dole over them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas.

Clo. But what is the sport Mounsieur, that the Ladies have lost?

Le Beu. Why this that I speak of.

Clo. Thus men may grow wiser every day. It is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribbes was sport for Ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken Musick in his sides? Is there yet another doats upon rib-breaking? Shall we see this wrastling Cosin?

Le Beu. You must if you stay here, for here is the place appointed for wrastling, and they are ready to perform it.

Cel. Yonder sure they are coming. Let us now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke, Lords, Orlando, Charles and Attendants

Duk. Come on, since the youth will not be entreated, His own perill on his forwardnesse.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beu. Even he, Madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too young: yet he lookes successfully.

Duk. How now daughter, and Cosin:
Are you crept hither to see the wrastling?

Ros. I my Liege, so please you give us leave.

Du. You will take little delight in it, I can tell you, there is such odds in the man: In pity of the challengers youth, I would fain dissuade him, but he will not be entreated. Speak to him Ladies, see if you can move him.

Cel. Call him hither good Mounsieur Le Beu.

Duk. Do so: I'le not be by.

Le Beu. Mounsieur the Challenger, the Princesse calls for you.

Orla. I attend them with all respect and duty.

Ros. Young man, have you challeng'd Charles the Wrastler?

Orl. No fair Princesse: he is the generall challenger; I come but as others doe, to try with him the strength of my youth.

Cel. Young Gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your years: you have seen cruell proofe of this mans strength, if you saw your selfe with your eyes, or knew your selfe with your judgement, the fear of your adventure would counsell you to a more equall enterprise. We pray you for your own sake to embrace your own safety, and give over this attempt.

Ros. Do young Sir, your reputation shall not therefore be mispriſed: we will make it our suit to the Duke, that the wrastling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish me not with your hard thoughts, wherein I confesse me much guilty to deny so fair and excellent Ladies any thing. But let your fair eyes, and gentle wishes go with me to my triall; wherein if I be foil'd, there is but one sham'd that was never gracious: if kil'd, but one dead that is willing to be so: I shall doe my friends no wrong, for I have none to lament me; the world no injury, for in it I have nothing: onely in the world I fill up a place, which may be better supplyed, when I have made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I have, I would it were with you.

Cel.

Cel. And mine to eek out hers.

Ros. Fare you well: pray heaven I be deceiv'd in you.

Cel. Your hearts desires be with you.

Char. Come, where is this young gallant, that is so desirous to lye with his mother earth?

Orla. Ready sir, but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duk. You shall try but one fall.

Char. No, I warrant your Grace you shall not entreat him to a second, that have so mightily perswaded him from a first.

Orla. You mean to mock me after: you should not have mockt before: but come your wayes.

Ros. Now Hercules, be thy speed young man,

Cel. I would I were invisible, to catch the strong fellow by the leg. They Wrastle.

Ros. Oh excellent young man.

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eye, I can tell who should down. Shout.

Duk. No more, no more.

Orla. Yes I beseech your Grace, I am not yet well breath'd.

Duk. How do'st thou Charles?

Le Beu. He cannot speak my Lord.

Duk. Bear him away:
What is thy name young man?

Orl. Orlando my Liege, the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Boyes.

Duk. I would thou had'st been son to some man else,
The world esteem'd thy father honourable,
But I did find him still mine enemy:
Thou should'st have better pleas'd me with this deed,
Had'st thou descended from another house:
But fare thee well, thou art a gallant youth,
I would thou had'st told me of another Father.
Exit Duke.

Cel. Were I my Father (Coze) would I do this?

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Rowlands son,
His youngest son, and would not change that calling
To be adopted heir to Fredrick.

Ros. My Father lov'd Sir Rowland as his soul,
And all the world was of my Fathers minde,
Had I before known this young man his son,
I should have given him tears unto entreaties,
Ere he should thus have ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle Cosin,
Let us go thank him, and encourage him:
My Fathers rough and envious disposition
Sticks me at heart: Sir, you have well deserv'd,
If you do keep your promises in love,
But justly as you have exceeded all in promise,
Your Mistris shall be happy.

Ros. Gentleman,
Wear this for me: one out of suits with fortune,
That could give more, but that her hand lacks means.
Shall we go Coze?

Cel. I: fare you well fair Gentleman,

Orla. Can I not say, I thank you? My better parts
Are all thrown down, and that which here stands up
Is but a quintine, a meer liveleese block.

Ros. He calls us back: my pride fell with my fortunes
I'le ask him what he would: Did you call Sir?
Sir, you have wrastled well, and overthrown
More then your enemies.

Cel. Will you go Coze?

Ros. Have with you: fare you well. Exit.

Or. What passion hangs these waights upon my tongue?
I cannot speak to her, yet she urg'd conference.

Enter Le Beu.

O poor Orlando! thou art overthrown
Or Charles, or something weaker masters thee.

Le Beu. Good sir, I do in friendship counsell you
To leave this place; Albeit you have deserv'd
High commendation, true applause, and love;
Yet such is now the Dukes condition,
That he misconsters all that you have done:
The Duke is humorous, what he is indeed
More suits you to conceive, then I to speak of.

Orl. I thank you sir; and pray you tell me this,
Which of the two was daughter to the Duke,
That here was at the Wrastling?

Le Beu. Neither his daughter, if we judge by manners,
But yet indeed the taller is his daughter,
The other is daughter to the banish'd Duke,
And here detain'd by her usurping Uncle
To keep his daughter company, whose loves
Are dearer then the naturall bond of Sisters:
But I can tell you, that of late this Duke
Hath tane displeasure 'gainst his gentle Neice,
Grounded upon no other argument,
But that the people praise her for her vertues,
And pitty her, for her good fathers sake;
And on my life his malice 'gainst the Lady
Will suddenly break forth: Sir, fare you well,
Hereafter in a better world then this,
I shall desire more love and knowledge of you.

Orl. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well;
Thus must I from the smoke into the smother,
From tyrant Duke, unto a tyrant Brother,
But heavenly Rosaline. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Celia, and Rosaline.

Cel. Why Cosin, why Rosaline: Cupid have mercy,
Not a word?

Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.

Cel. No, my words are too precious to be cast away upon curres, throw some of them at me; come, lame me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two Cosins laid up, when the one should be lam'd with reasons, and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for your Father?

Ros. No, some of it is for my childes Father: Oh how full of briers is this working day world.

Cel. They are but burs, Cosin, thrown upon thee in holiday foolery, if we walk not in the trodden paths, our very petti-coats will catch them.

Ros. I could shake them off my coat, these burs are in my heart.

Cel. Hem them away.

Ros. I would try if I could cry hem, and have him.

Cel. Come, come, wrastle with thy affections.

Ros. O they take the part of a better wrastler then my self.

Cel. O, a good wish upon you: you will try in time

in

in despight of a fall: but turning these jests out of service, let us talk in good earnest: Is it possible on such a sudden, you should fall into so strange a liking with old Sir Rowlands youngest son?

Ros. The Duke my Father lov'd his Father dearly.

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue that you should love his Son dearly? By this kinde of chase, I should hate him, for my father hated his father dearly; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No faith, hate him not for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not? doth not he deserve well?

Enter Duke with Lords.

Ros. Let me love him for that, and doe you love him
Because I doe. Look, here comes the Duke.

Cel. With his eyes full of anger.

Duk. Mistris, dispatch you with your safest haste,
And get you from our Court.

Ros. Me Uncle!

Duk. You Cosin,
Within these ten dayes if that thou beest found
So near our publick Court as twenty miles,
Thou diest for it.

Ros. I doe beseech your Grace.
Let me the knowledge of my fault bear with me:
If with my self I hold intelligence,
Or have acquaintance with mine own desires,
If that I do not dream, or be not frantick,
(As I do trust I am not) then dear Uncle,
Never so much as in a thought unborne,
Did I offend your Highnesse.

Duk. Thus do all Traitors,
If their purgation did consist in words,
They are as innocent as grace it self;
Let it suffice thee that I trust thee not.

Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a Traitor;
Tell me whereon the likelihood depends?

Duk. Thou art thy Fathers daughter, there's enough.

Ros. So was I when your highness took his Dukedome,
So was I when your highnesse banish'd him;
Treason is not inherited my Lord,
Or if we did derive it from our friends,
What's that to me, my Father was no Traitour:
Then good my Liege, mistake me not so much,
To think my poverty is treacherous.

Cel. Dear Soveraign hear me speak.

Duk. I Celia, we staid her for your sake,
Else had she with her Father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then intreat to have her stay.
It was your pleasure, and your own remorse,
I was too young that time to value her,
But now I know her: if she be a Traitour,
Why so am I; we still have slept together,
Rose at an instant, learn'd, plaid, eat together,
And wheresoere we went, like Iuno's Swans,
Still we went coupled and inseparable.

Duk. She is too subtile for thee, and her smoothness
Her very silence and her patience,
Speak to the people, and they pitty her:
Thou art a foole, she robs thee of thy name,
And thou wilt show more bright, and seem more vertuous
When she is gone: then open not thy lips,
Firm, and irrevocable is my doombe,
Which I have past upon her, she is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me my Liege,
I cannot live out of her company.

Duk. You are a foole: you Neice provide your self,
If you out-stay the time, upon mine honour,
And in the greatnesse of my word you dye.

Exit Duke, &c.

Cel. O my poor Rosaline, whither wilt thou go?
Wilt thou change father? I will give thee mine:
I charge thee be not thou more griev'd then I am.

Ros. I have more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not Cosin,
Prethee be cheerefull; know'st thou not the Duke
Hath banish'd me his daughter?

Ros. That he hath not.

Cel. No, hath not? Rosaline lacks then the love
Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one,
Shall we be sundred? shall we part sweet girle?
No, let my Father seek another heir:
Therefore devise with me how we may flye,
Whither to go, and what to bear with us,
And do not seek to take your charge upon you,
To bear your griefs your self, and leave me out:
For by this heaven (now as our sorrowes pale;)
Say what thou canst, I'le go along with thee.

Ros. Why, whither shall we go?

Cel. To seek my Unkle in the Forrest of Arden.

Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to us,
(Maids as we are) to travell forth so far?
Beauty provoketh theeves sooner then gold.

Cel. I'le put my self in poor and mean attire,
And with a kind of umber smutch my face,
The like do you, so shall we passe along,
And never stir assailants.

Ros. Were it not better,
Because that I am more then common tall,
That I did suit me all points like a man,
A gallant curtelax upon my thigh,
A boare-spear in my hand, and in my heart
Lye there what hidden womans fear there will,
We'll have a swashing and a marshall outside,
As many other mannish cowards have,
That do outface it with their semblances.

Cel. What shall I call thee when thou art a man?

Ros. I'le have no worse a name then Ioves own Page,
And therefore look you call me Ganimed,
But what will you be call'd?

Cel. Something that hath a reference to my state:
No longer Celia, but Aliena.

Ros. But Cosin, what if we assaid to steal
The clownish Foole out of your Fathers Court:
Would he not be a comfort to our travell?

Cel. He'll go along o're the wide world with me,
Leave me alone to wooe him; Let's away
And get our Jewels and our wealth together;
Devise the fittest time, and safest way
To hide us from pursuit that will be made
After my flight: now go we in content
To liberty and not to banishment. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke Senior: Amyens, and two or three Lords like Forresters.

Duk. Sen. Now my Coe-mates, and brother in exile:
Hath not old custome made this life more sweet

Then

Then that of painted pomp? Are not these woods
More free from perill then the envious Court?
Here feel we not the penalty of Adam,
The seasons difference, as the Icie phange
And churlish chiding of the winters winde,
Which when it baits and blowes upon my body
Even till I shrink with cold, I smile, and say
This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly perswade me what I am:
Sweet are the uses of adversity
Which like the toad, ougly and venemous,
Wears yet a precious Jewell in his head:
And this our life exempt from publick haunt,
Findes tongues in trees, books in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.

Amien. I would not change it, happy is your Grace
That can translate the stubbornnesse of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a stile.

Duk.Sen. Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me the poor dapled fooles
Being native Burgers of this desert City,
Should in their own confines with forked heads
Have their round haunches goard.

1. Lord. Indeed my Lord
The melancholly Jaques grieves at that,
And in that kinde swears you do more usurp
Then doth your brother that hath banish'd you:
To day my Lord of Amiens, and my self,
Did steal behind him as he lay along
Under an oak, whose antick roop peeps out
Upon the brook that brawls along this wood,
To the which place a poor sequestred Stag
That from the hunters aim had tane a hurt,
Did come to languish; and indeed my Lord
The wretched animall heav'd forth such groans
That their discharge did stretch his leathern coat
Almost to bursting, and the big round tears
Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
In pitteous chase: and thus the hairy foole,
Much marked of the melancholly Iaques,
Stood on th'extreamest verge of the swift brook,
Augmenting it with tears.

Duk.Sen. But what said Iaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1. Lord. O yes, into a thousand similies.
First, for his weeping into the needlesse stream;
Poor Deer, quoth he, thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings doe, giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much: then being alone,
Left and abandoned of his velvet friend;
'Tis right, quoth he, thus misery doth part
The Flux of company: anon a careless Heard
Full of the pasture, jumps along by him
And never stayes to greet him: I, quoth Iaques,
Sweep on, you fat and greazy Citizens,
'Tis just the fashion; wherefore do you look
Upon that poor and broken bankrupt there?
Thus most invectively he pierceth through
The body of the Country, City, Court,
Yea, and this our life, swearing that we
Are meer usurpers, tyrants, and whats worse,
To fright the Animals, and to kill them up
In their assign'd and native dwelling place.

Du.Sen. And did you leave him in this contemplation?

2. Lord. We did my Lord, weeping and commenting Upon the sobbing Deer.

Du. Sen. Show me the place,
I love to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

2. Lor. I'le bring you to him straight. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke with Lords.

Duk. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be, some villains of my Court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.

1. Lord, I cannot hear of any that did see her,
The Ladies, her attendants of her chamber,
Saw her abed, and in the morning early,
They found the bed untreasur'd of their Mistris.

2. Lor. My Lord, the roynish Clown, at whom so oft,
Your Grace was wont to laugh, is also missing:
Hisperia, the Princesse Gentlewoman,
Confesses that she secretly ore-heard
Your daughter and her Cosin much commend
The parts and graces of the Wrastler
That did but lately foile the synowy Charles,
And she believes where ever they are gone
That youth is surely in their company.

Duk. Send to his brother, fetch that gallant hither,
If he be absent, bring his Brother to me.
I'le make him finde him: do this suddenly;
And let not search and inquisition quaile,
To bring again these foolish runawayes. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Orlando, and Adam.

Orl. Who's there?

Ad. What my young master, oh my gentle master,
Oh my sweet master, O you memory
Of old Sir Rowland? Why, what make you here?
Why are you vertuous? Why do people love you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be so fond to overcome
The bonny priser of the humorous Duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not Master, to some kind of men,
Their graces serve them but as enemies,
No more do yours: your vertues gentle Master
Are sanctified and holy traitours to you:
Oh what a world is this, when what is comely
Envenoms him that bears it?

Orl. Why, what's the matter?

Ad. O unhappy youth,
Come not within these doors: within this roofe,
The enemy of all your graces lives.
Your brother, no, no brother, yet the son
(Yet not the son, I will not call him son)
Of him I was about to call his Father,
Hath heard your praises, and this night he means,
To burn the lodging where you use to lye,
And you within it: if he fail of that

He

He will have other means to cut you off;
I overheard him: and his practises:
This is no place, this house is but a butchery;
Abhor it, fear it, do not enter it.
Orl. Why whither Adam would'st thou have me go?
Ada. No matter whither, for you come not here.
Orl. What, would'st thou have me go and beg my food,
Or with a base and boistrous Sword enforce
A theevish living on the common rode?
This I must do, or know not what to do:
Yet this I will not do, do how I can:
I rather will subject me to the malice
Of a diverted bloud, and bloudy brother.
Ada. But do not so: I have five hundred Crowns,
The thrifty hire I saved under you father,
Which I did store to be my foster Nurse,
When service should in my old limbs lie lame,
And unregarded age in corners thrown,
Take that, and he that doth the Ravens feed,
Yea providently caters for the Sparrow,
Be comfort to my age: here is the gold,
All this I give you, let me be your servant,
Though I look old, yet I am strong and lusty;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors in my bloud,
Nor did not with unbashfull forhead woo,
The means of weakness and debility,
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frosty but kindly; let me go with you,
I'le do the service of a younger man
In all your business and necessities.
Orl. Oh good old man, how well in thee appears
The constant service of the antick world,
When service sweat for duty, not for meed:
Thou art not for the fashion of these times.
Where none will sweat, but for promotion,
And having that, do choak their service up,
Even with the having, it is not so with thee:
But poor old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossome yield,
In lieu of all thy pains and husbandry:
But come thy wayes, we'll go along together,
And ere we have thy youthfull wages spent,
We'll light upon some setled low content.
Ada. Master go on, and I will follow thee
To the last gasp with truth and loyalty,
From seventy years, till now almost fourscore
Here liv'd I, but now live here no more.
At seventeen years, many their fortunes seek,
But at fourscore, it is too late a week,
Yet fortune cannot recompence me better
Then to dye well, and not my Masters debter. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Rosaline for Ganimed, Celia for Aliena, and Clown, alias Touchstone.

Ros. O Jupiter, how merry are my spirits?
Clo. I care not for my spirits, if my legges were not weary.
Ros. I could finde in my heart to disgrace my mans apparell, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vessell, as doublet and hose ought to show it self couragious to a pettycoat; therefore courage, good Aliena.
Cel. I pray you bear with me, I can goe no further.
Clo. For my part, I had rather bear with you, then bear you: yet I should bear no crosse if I did bear you, for I think you have no money in your purse.
Ros. Well, this is the Forrest of Arden.
Clo. I, now am I in Arden, the more foole I, when I was at home I was in a better place, but Travellers must be content.

Enter Corin, and Silvius.

Ros. I, be so good Touchstone: look you who comes here, a young man and an old in solemn talk.
Cor. That is the way to make her scorn you still.
Sil. O Corin, that thou knew'st how I do love her.
Cor. I partly guesse: for I have lov'd ere now.
Sil. No Corin, being old, thou can'st not guesse,
Though in thy youth thou wast as true a lover
As ever sigh'd upon a midnight pillow:
But if thy love were ere like to mine,
As sure I think did never man love so:
How many actions most ridiculous,
Hast thou been drawn to by thy fantasie?
Cor. Into a thousand that I have forgotten.
Sil. Oh thou didst then never love so heartily;
If thou remembrest not the slightest folly,
That ever love did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lov'd.
Or if thou hast not sate as I do now,
Wearying thy hearer in thy Mistris praise,
Thou hast not lov'd.
Or if thou hast not broke from company,
Abruptly as my passion now makes me,
Thou hast not lov'd.
O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe. Exeunt.
Ros. Alas poor Shepheard! searching of their wound,
I have by hard adventure found mine own.
Clo. And I mine: I remember when I was in love, I broke my sword upon a stone, and bid him take that for coming a nights to Jane Smile and I remember the kissing of her batlet, and the Cowes dugs that her pretty chopt hands had milk'd; and I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her, from whom I took two cods, and giving her them again, said with weeping teares, wear these for my sake: we that are true Lovers, run into strange capers; but as all is mortall in nature, so is all nature in love, mortall in folly.
Ros. Thou speak'st wiser then thou art ware of.
Clo. Nay, I shall ne're be ware of mine own wit, till I break my shins against it.
Ros. Iove, Iove, this Shepheards passion
Is much upon my fashion.
Clo. And mine, but it growes something stale with me.
Cel. I pray you, one of you question yon'd man;
If he for gold will give us any food,
I faint almost to death.
Clo. Holla; you Clown.
Ros. Peace fool, he's not thy kinsman.
Cor. Who calls?
Clo. Your betters Sir.
Cor. Else are they very wretched.

Ros.

Ros. [illegible] good even to you friend.
Cor. And to you gentle Sir, and to you all.
Ros. I prithee, shepheard, if that love or gold
Can in this Desert place buy entertainment,
Bring us where we may rest our selves, and feed:
Here's a young Maid with travell much oppressed,
And faints for succour.
Cor. Fair sir, I pitty her,
And wish for her sake more then for mine own,
My fortunes were more able to relieve her:
But I am shepheard to another man,
And do not sheer the Fleeces that I graze:
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little wreaks to finde the way to heaven
By doing deeds of hospitality.
Besides his Coat, his Flocks, and bounds of feed
Are now on sale, and at our sheep-coat now
By reason of his absence there is nothing
That you will feed on: but what is, come see,
And in my voyce most welcome shall you be.
Ros. What is he that shall buy his flock and pasture?
Cor. That young Swain that you saw here but erewhile.
That little cares for buying any thing.
Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honesty,
Buy thou the Cottage, and the pasture, and the flock,
And thou shalt have to pay for it of us.
Cel. And we will mend thy wages:
I like this place, and willingly could
Waste my time in it.
Cor. Assuredly the thing is to be sold:
Go with me, if you like upon report,
The soile, the profit, and this kinde of life,
I will your very faithfull Feeder be,
And buy it with your gold right suddenly. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter, Amyens, Jaques, and others.

Song.

Under the greenwood tree,
who loves to lye with me,
And turn his merry Note,
unto the sweet Birds throte:
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see no enemy,
But Winter and rough Weather.

Jaq. More, more, I prethee more.
Amy. It will make you melancholly Mounsieur Iaques.
Iaq. I thank it: More, I prethee more,
I can suck melancholly out of a song.
As a Weazel sucks eggs: More, I prethee more.
Amy. My voyce is ragged, I know I cannot please you.
Iaq. I do not desire you to please me,
I do desire you to sing:
Come, more, another stanzo: Call you'em stanzo's?
Amy. What you will Mounsieur Iaques.
Iaq. Nay, I care not for their names, they own me nothing. Will you sing.
Amy. More at your request, then to please my self
Iaq. Well then, if ever I thank any man, I'le thank you: but that they call complement is like th'encounter of two dog-Apes. And when a man thanks me heartily, methinks I have given him a penny, and he renders me the beggarly thanks. Come sing, and you that will not, hold your tongues.
Amy. Well, I'le end the song. Sirs, cover the while, the Duke will drink under this tree; he hath been all this day to look you.
Iaq. And I have been all this day to avoid him:
He is too disputeable for my company:
I think of as many matters as he, but I give
Heaven thanks, and make no boast of them.
Come, warble, come.

Song. Altogether here.

Who doth ambition shun,
and loves to live i'th Sun,
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleas'd with what he gets:
Come hither, come hither, come hither,
Here shall he see, no enemy,
But Winter, and rough Weather.

Iaq. I'le give you a verse to this note,
That I made yesterday in despight of my invention.
Amy. And I'le sing it.
Iaq. Thus it goes.

If it doe come to pass,
That any man turn Asse:
Leaving his wealth and ease,
A stubborn will to please,
Ducdame, ducdame, ducdame:
Here shall he see, grosse fooles as he,
And if he will come to me.

Amy. What's that Ducdame?
Iaq. 'Tis a Greek invocation, to call fools into a circle. I'le go sleep if I can: if I cannot, I'le raile against all the first born of Egypt.
Amy. And I'le go seek the Duke,
His banket is prepar'd. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Orlando, and Adam.

Adam. Dear Master, I can go no further:
O I dye for food. Here lye I down,
And measure out my grave. Farewell kinde master.
Orl. Why how now Adam? No greater heart in thee?
Live a little, comfort a little, cheer thy self a little.
If this uncouth Forrest yield any thing savage,
I will either be food for it, or bring it for food to thee:
Thy conceit is nearer death, then thy powers.
For my sake be comfortable, hold death a while
At the armes end: I will here be with thee presently,
And if I bring thee not something to eat,
I will give thee leave to dye: but if thou diest
Before I come, thou art a mocker of my labour.
Well said, thou look'st cheerely,
And I'le be with thee quickly: yet thou liest
In the bleak aire. Come I will bear thee
To some shelter, and thou shalt not dye
For lack of a dinner,
If there live any thing in this Desert.
Cheerely good Adam. Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Septima.

Enter Duke Sen. and Lord, like out-lawes.

Du. Sen. I think he be transform'd into a beaſt,
For I can no where finde him, like a man.

1. Lord. My Lord, he is but even now gone hence,
Here was he merry, hearing of a Song.

Du. Sen. If he compact of jarres, grow Muſicall,
We ſhall have ſhortly diſcord in the Spheres:
Go ſeek him, tell him I would ſpeak with him.

Enter Jaques.

1. Lord. He ſaves my labour by his own approach.

Du. Sen. Why how now Monſieur, what a life is this
That your poor friends muſt woode your company,
What, you look merrily.

Jaq. A fool, a fool: I met a fool i'th Forreſt,
A motley fool (a miſerable world:)
As I doe live by food, I met a fool,
Who laid him down, and bask'd him in the Sun,
And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good termes,
In good ſet termes, and yet a motley fool.
Good morrow fool (quoth I:) no Sir, quoth he,
Call me not fool, till heaven hath ſent me fortune,
And then he drew a Diall from his poake,
And looking on it, with lack-luſtre eye,
Sayes, very wiſely, it is ten a clock:
Thus we may ſee (quoth he) how the world wagges:
'Tis but but an hour ago, ſince it was nine,
And after one hour more, 'twill be eleven,
And ſo from hour to hour, we ripe, and ripe,
And then from hour to hour, we rot, and rot,
And thereby hangs a tale. When I did hear
The motley fool, thus morall on the time,
My Lungs began to crow like Chanticleere,
That Fools ſhould be ſo deep contemplative:
And I did laugh, ſans intermiſſion
An hour by his Diall. Oh noble fool,
A worthy fool: Motley's the onely wear.

Du. Sen. What fool is this?

Jaq. O worthy fool: one that hath been a Courtier
And ſayes, if Ladies be young, and fair,
They have the gift to know it: and in his brain,
Which is as dry as the remainder bisket
After a voyage: He hath ſtrange places cram'd
With obſervation, the which he vents
In mangled formes. O that I were a fool,
I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Du. Sen. Thou ſhalt have one.

Jaq. It is my onely ſuite,
Provided that you weed your better judgements
Of all opinion that growes rank in them,
That I am wiſe. I muſt have liberty
Withall, as large a Charter as the winde,
To blow on whom I pleaſe, for ſo fools have:
And they that are moſt gauled with my folly,
They moſt muſt laugh: And why ſir muſt they ſo?
The why is plain, as way to Pariſh Church:
He, that a fool doth very wiſely hit,
Doth very fooliſhly, although he ſmart
Seem ſenſeleſſe of the bob. If not,
The Wiſe-man's folly is anatomiz'd
Even by the ſquandring glances of a fool.
Inveſt me in the motley: Give me leave
To ſpeak my minde, and I will through
Cleanſe the foul body of th'infected world,
If they will patiently receive my medicine.

Du. Sen. Fie on thee, I can tell what thou wouldſt do.

Jaq. What, for a Counter, would I doe, but good?

Du. Sen. Moſt miſchievous foul ſin, in chiding ſin:
For thou thy ſelf haſt been a Libertine,
As ſenſuall as the bruitiſh ſting it ſelf,
And all th'imboſſed ſores, and headed evils,
That thou with licenſe of free foot haſt caught,
Would'ſt thou diſgorge into the generall world.

Jaq. Why who cries out on pride,
That can therein tax any private party:
Doth it not flow as hugely as the Sea,
Till that the weary very meanes doe ebbe.
What woman in the City doe I name,
When that I ſay the City woman beares
The coſt of Princes on unworthy ſhoulders?
Who can come in, and ſay that I mean her,
When ſuch a one as ſhe, ſuch is her neighbour?
Or what is he of baſeſt function,
That ſayes his bravery is not on my coſt,
Thinking that I mean him, but therein ſuits
His folly to the mettle of my ſpeech,
There then, how then, what then, let me ſee wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him: if it doe him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himſelf: if he be free,
Why then my taxing like a wild-gooſe flies
Unclaim'd of any man. But who comes here?

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Forbear, and eat no more.

Jaq. Why I have eat none yet.

Orl. Nor ſhalt not, till neceſſity be ſerv'd.

Jaq. Of what kinde ſhould this Cock come of?

Du. Sen. Art thou thus bolden'd man by thy diſtreſs?
Or elſe a rude deſpiſer of good manners,
That in civility thou ſeem'ſt ſo empty?

Orl. You touch'd my vein at firſt, the thorny point
Of bare diſtreſſe, that hath tane from me the ſhew
Of ſmooth civility: yet am I in-land bred,
And know ſome nurture: But forbear, I ſay,
He dies that touches any of this fruit,
Till I, and my affaires are anſwered.

Jaq. And you will not be anſwer'd with reaſon,
I muſt die.

Du. Sen. What would you have?
Your gentleneſſe ſhall force, more then your force
Move us to gentleneſſe.

Orl. I almoſt die for food, and let me have it.

Du. Sen. Sit down and feed, and welcome to our table

Orl. Speak you ſo gently? Pardon me, I pray you,
I thought that all things had been ſavage here,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of ſtern command'ment. But what e're you are
That in this deſart inacceſſible,
Under the ſhade of melancholly boughs.
Looſe, and neglect the creeping houres of time:
If ever you have look'd on better dayes:
If ever been where bells have knoll'd to Church:
If ever ſate at any good mans feaſt:
If ever from your eye-lids wip'd a tear,
And know what 'tis to pitty, and be pitied,
Let gentleneſſe my ſtrong enforcement be,
In the which hope, I buſh, and hide my Sword.

Helen's cheeks, but not his heart,
Cleopatra's Majesty:
Attalanta's better part;
sad Lucretiaes Modesty.
Thus Rosalinde of many parts,
by Heavenly Synod was devis'd,
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
to have the touches dearest priz'd.
Heaven would that she these gifts should have,
and I to live and die her slave.

Ros. O most gentle Jupiter, what tedious homily of Love have you wearied your Parishioners withall, and never cri'd, Have patience good people.

Cel. How now! back friends: Shepheard go off a little: go with him sirrah.

Clo. Come Shepheard, let us make an honourable retreat, though not with bag and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage. Exit.

Cel. Didst thou hear these Verses?

Ros. O yes, I heard them all, and more too, for some of them had in them more feet then the Verses would bear.

Cel. That's no matter: the feet might bear the Verses.

Ros. I, but the feet were lame, and could not bear themselves without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou hear without wondring, how thy name should be hang'd and carved upon these trees?

Ros. I was seven of the nine dayes out of wonder, before you came: for look here what I found on a Palme tree; I was never so berim'd since Pythagoras time that I was an Irish Rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Tro you, who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chain that you once wore, about his neck: change your colour?

Ros. I prethee who?

Cel. O Lord, Lord, it is a hard matter for friends to meet; but Mountains may be remov'd with Earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I prethee now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderfull, wonderfull, and most wonderfull wonderfull, and yet again wonderfull, and after that out of all hooping.

Ros. Good my complection, dost thou think though I am caparison'd like a man, I have a doublet and a hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more, is a South-sea of discovery. I prethee tell me, who is it quickly, and speak apace: I would thou couldst stammer, that thou might'st powre this conceal'd man out of thy mouth, as Wine comes out of a narrow-mouth'd bottle: either too much at once, or none at all. I prethee take the Corke out of thy mouth, that I may drink thy tidings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.

Ros. Is he of Gods making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat? or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why God will send more, if the man will be thankfull; let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is young Orlando, that tript up the Wrastlers heeles, and your heart, both in an instant.

Ros. Nay, but the Devil take mocking: speak sad brow, and true maid:

Cel. I'faith (Coz) 'tis he.

Ros. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day, what shall I doe with my doublet and hose? What did he when thou saw'st him? What said he? How look'd he? Wherein went he? What makes he here? Did he ask for me? Where remains he? How parted he with thee? And when shalt thou see him again? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantuas mouth first: 'tis a Word too great for any mouth of this Ages size: to say I and no, to these particulars, is more then to answer in a Catechisme.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this Forrest, and in mans apparell? Looks he as freshly, as he did the day he Wrastled?

Cel. It is as easie to count Atomes as to resolve the propositions of a Lover: but take a taste of my finding him, and relish it with good observance. I found him under a tree like a dropp'd Acorn.

Ros. It may well be call'd Joves tree, when it drops forth such fruit.

Cel. Give me audience, good Madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay he stretch'd along like a Wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pitty to see such a sight; it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry holla, to the tongue, I prethee: it curvettes unseasonably. He was furnish'd like a Hunter.

Ros. O ominous, he comes to kill my Hart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burthen, thou bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Doe you not know I am a woman, when I think, I must speak: sweet, say on.

Enter Orlando and Jaques.

Cel. You bring me out. Soft, comes he not near?

Ros. 'Tis he, sling by, and note him.

Jaq. I thank you for your company; but, good faith, I had lief have been my self alone.

Orl. And so had I: but yet for fashion sake
I thank you too, for your society.

Jaq. God buy you, let's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I doe desire we may be better strangers.

Jaq. I pray you marre no more trees with Writing Love-songs in their barkes.

Orl. I pray you marre no more of my verses with reading them ill-favouredly.

Jaq. Rosalinde is your loves name?

Orl. Yes, Just.

Jaq. I doe not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christen'd.

Jaq. What stature is she of?

Orl. Just as high as my heart.

Ja. You are full of pretty answers: have you not bin acquainted with goldsmiths wives, & cond them out of rings.

Orl. Not so: but I answer you right painted cloath, from whence you have studied your questions.

Jaq. You have a nimble wit; I think 'twas made of Atalanta's heeles. Will you sit down with me, and we two will raile against our Mistresse the world, and all our misery.

Orl. I will chide no breather in the world but my self against againſt whom I know no faults.

Jaq. The worſt fault you have, is to be in love.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change for your beſt virtue: I am weary of you.

Jaq. By my troth, I was ſeeking for a Fool, when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brook, look but in, and you ſhall ſee him.

Jaq. There I ſhall ſee mine own figure.

Orl. Which I take to be either a Fool, or a Cipher.

Jaq. I'le tarry no longer with you, farewell good ſignior Love.

Orl. I am glad of your departure: Adieu good Monſieur Melancholly.

Roſ. I will ſpeak to him like a ſawcie Lacky, and under that habit play the knave with him: doe you hear (Forreſter.

Orl. Very well, what would you?

Roſ. I pray you, what i'ſt a clock?

Orl. You ſhould aske me what time o' day: there's no clock in the Forreſt.

Roſ. Then there is no true Lover in the Forreſt, elſe ſighing every minute, and groaning every hour would detect the lazy foot of time, as well as a clock.

Orl. And why not the ſwift foot of time? Had not that bin as proper?

Roſ. By no meanes ſir; Time travels in divers places, with divers perſons: I'le tell you who Time ambles withall, who Time trots withall, who time gallops withall, and who he ſtands ſtill withall.

Orl. I prethee, whom doth he trot withall?

Roſ. Marry he trots hard with a young maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is ſolemniz'd: if the interim be but a ſennight, Times pace is ſo hard, that it ſeems the length of ſeven year.

Orl. Who ambles time withall?

Roſ. With a Prieſt that lacks Latine, and a rich man that hath not the Gowte: for the one ſleeps eaſily becauſe he cannot ſtudy, and the other lives merrily, becauſe he feels no pain: the one lacking the burthen of lean and waſtefull Learning; the other knowing no burthen of heavy tedious penury. Theſe time ambles withall.

Orl. Whom doth he gallop withall?

Roſ. With a thief to the gallows: for though he go as ſoftly as foot can fall, he thinks himſelf too ſoon there.

Orl. Whom ſtayes it ſtill withall?

Roſ. With Lawyers in the vacation: for they ſleep between Terme and Terme, and then they perceive not how time moves.

Orl. Where dwell you pretty youth?

Roſ. With this Shepheardeſſe my ſiſter: here in the skirts of the Forreſt, like Fringe upon a Petticoat.

Orl. Are you native of this place?

Roſ. As the Cony that you ſee dwell where ſhe is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is ſomething finer, than you could purchaſe in ſo removed a dwelling.

Roſ. I have bin told ſo of many: but indeed, an old religious Unckle of mine taught me to ſpeak, who was in his youth an inland man, one that knew Courtſhip too well: for there he fell in love, I have heard him read many Lectures againſt it, I thank God, I am not a Woman to be touch'd with ſo many giddy offences as he hath generally tax'd their whole ſex withall.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principal evils, that he laid to the charge of women?

Roſ. There were none principall, they were all like one another, as half-pence are, every ones fault ſeeming monſtrous, till his fellow-fault came to match it.

Orl. I prethee recount ſome of them.

Roſ. No: I will not caſt away my phyſick, but on thoſe that are ſick. There is a man haunts the Forreſt, that abuſes our young plants with carving Roſalind on their barkes; hangs Odes upon Hawthorns, and Elegies on brambles; all (forſooth) deifying the name of Roſalind. If I could meet that Fancy-monger, I would give him ſome good counſell, for he ſeems to have the Quotidian of Love upon him.

Orl. I am he that is ſo Love-ſhak'd; I pray you tell me your remedy.

Roſ. There is none of my Unckles markes upon you: he taught me how to know a man in love: in which cage of ruſhes, I am ſure you are not priſoner.

Orl. What were his markes?

Roſ. A lean cheek, which you have not: a blew eye and ſunken, which you have not: an unqueſtionable ſpirit, which you have not: a beard neglected, which you have not: (but I pardon you for that, for ſimply your having no beard, is a younger brothers revenue) then your hoſe ſhould be ungarter'd, your bonnet unbanded, your ſleeve unbutton'd, your ſhooe unti'd, and every thing about you demonſtrating a careleſſe deſolation: but you are no ſuch man, you are rather a point device in your accouſtrements, as loving your ſelf, than ſeeming the Lover of any other. (I Love.

Orl. Fair youth, I would I could make thee believe

Roſ. Me believe it? You may as ſoon make her that you Love believe it, which I warrant ſhe is apter to doe, than to confeſſe ſhe do's: that is one of the points, in the which women ſtill give the lye to their conſciences. But in good ſooth, are you he that hangs the verſes on the Trees, wherein Roſalind is ſo admired?

Orl. I ſwear to thee youth, by the white hand of Roſalind I am he, that unfortunate he.

Roſ. But are you ſo much in love as your rimes ſpeak?

Orl. Neither rime nor reaſon can expreſſe how much.

Roſ. Love is meerly a madneſſe, and I tell you, deſerves as well a darke houſe, and a whip, as mad men doe: and the reaſon why they are not ſo puniſh'd and cured, is that the Lunacy is ſo ordinary, that the whippers are in love too: yet I profeſſe curing it by counſell.

Orl. Did you ever cure any ſo?

Roſ. Yes one, and in this manner. Hee was to imagine me his Love, his Miſtreſſe: and I ſet him every day to wooe me. At which time would I, being but a mooniſh youth, grieve, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking, proud, fantaſticall, apiſh, ſhallow, inconſtant, full of teares, full of ſmiles; for every paſſion ſomething, and for no paſſion truly any thing, as boyes and women are for the moſt part cattel of this colour: would now like him, now loathe him: then entertain him, then forſwear him: now weep for him, then ſpit at him; that I drave my Suitor from his mad humour of love, to a living humour of madneſſe, which was to forſwear the full ſtream of the world, and to live in a nook meerly Monaſtick: and thus I cur'd him, and this way will I take upon me to waſh your Liver as cleer as a ſound ſheeps heart, that there ſhall not be one ſpot of love in't.

Orl. I would not be cur'd, youth.

Roſ. I would cure you, if you would but call me Roſalind, and come every day to my Coat, and wooe me.

Orlan. Now by the faith of my love, I will; Tell me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and I'le shew it you: and by the way, you shall tell me, where in the Forrest you live: Will you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call me Rosalind: Come sister will you go? Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clown, Audrey, and Jaques.

Clo. Come apace good Audrey, I will fetch up your Goates, Audrey: and now Audrey am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features, Lord warrant us: what features?

Clo. I am here with thee, and thy Goats, as the most capricious Poet honest Ovid was among the Gothes.

Jaq. O knowledge ill inhabited, worse then Jove in a thatch'd house.

Clo. When a mans verses cannot be understood, nor a mans good wit seconded with the forward childe, understanding: it strikes a man more dead then a great reckoning in a little room: truly, I would the Gods had made the Poeticall.

Aud. I do not know what Poeticall is: is it honest in deed and word: is it a true thing?

Clo. No truly: for the truest Poetry is the most fayning, and Lovers are given to Poetry: and what they swear in Poetry, may be said as Lovers, they doe feign.

Aud. Doe you wish then that the Gods had made me Poeticall?

Clo. I doe truly: for thou swear'st to me thou art honest: Now if thou wert a Poet, I might have some hope thou didst feign.

Aud. Would you not have me honest?

Clo. No truly, unlesse thou wert hard-favour'd: for honesty coupled to beauty, is to have Hony a sawce to Sugar.

Jaq. A materiall foole.

Aud. Well, I am not fair, and therefore I pray the Gods make me honest.

Clo. Truly, and to cast away honesty upon a foul slut, were to put good meat into an unclean dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thank the Gods I am foul.

Clo. Well, praised be the Gods, for thy foulenesse; sluttishnesse may come hereafter. But be it, as it may be, I will marry thee: and to that end, I have been with Sir Oliver Mar-text, the Vicar of the next Village, who hath promis'd to meet me in this place of the Forrest, and to couple us.

Jaq. I would fain see this meeting.

Aud. Well, the Gods give us joy.

Clo. Amen. A man may if he were of a fearfull heart, stagger in this attempt: for here we have no Temple but the Wood: no assembly but Horn-beasts. But what though? Courage. As hornes are odious, they are necessary. It is said, many a man knowes no end of his goods; right: Many a man has good Horns, and knowes no end of them. Well, that is the dowry of his wife, 'tis none of his own getting; hornes, even so poor men alone: No, no, the noblest Deer hath them as huge as the Rascall: Is the single man therefore blessed? No, as a wall'd Town is more worthier then a village, so is the forehead of a married man, more honourable then the bare brow of a Batchellour: and by how much defence is better then no skill, by so much is a horn more precious then to want.

Enter Sir Oliver Mar-text.

Here comes Sir Oliver: Sir Oliver Mar-text you are well met. Will you dispatch us here under this tree, or shall we go with you to your Chappell?

Ol. Is there none here to give the woman?

Clo. I will not take her on gift of any man.

Ol. Truly she must be given, or the marriage is not lawfull.

Jaq. Proceed, proceed: I'le give her.

Clo. Good even, good M. what ye call't: how doe you Sir, you are very well met: godild you for your last company, I am very glad to see you, even a toy in hand here Sir: Nay, pray be cover'd.

Jaq. Will you be married, Motley?

Clo. As the Oxe hath his bow sir, the horse his curb, and the Falkon his bells, so man hath his desire, and as Pigeons bill, so wedlock would be nibling.

Jaq. And will you (being a man of your breeding) be married under a bush like a beggar? Get you to Church, and have a good Priest that can tell you what marriage is: this fellow will but joyn you together, as they joyn Wainscot, then one of you will prove a shrunk pannell, and like green timber, warpe, warpe.

Clo. I am not in the minde, but I were better to be married of him then of another, for he is not like to marry me well: and not being well married, it will be a good excuse for me hereafter to leave my wife.

Jaq. Go thou with me.
And let me counsell thee.

Clo. Come sweet Audrey,
We must be married, or we must live in bawdrey:
Farewell good M. Oliver: Not O sweet Oliver, O brave Oliver leave me not behind thee: But winde away, be gone I say, I will not to wedding with thee.

Ol. 'Tis no matter; ne're a fantasticall knave of them all shall flout me out of my calling. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. Never talk to me, I will weep.

Cel. Doe I prethee, but yet have the grace to consider, that teares doe not become a man.

Ros. But have I not cause to weep?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire,
Therefore weep.

Ros. His very hair
Is of the dissembling colour.

Cel. Something browner then Judas's:
Marry his kisses are Judas's own children.

Ros. I'faith his hair is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour:
Your Chesnut was ever the onely colour:

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctity,
As the touch of holy bread.

Cel.

Cel. He hath bought a pair of chaſt lips of Diana: a Nun of winters ſiſterhood kiſſes not more religiouſlie, the very ice of chaſtity is in them.

Roſ. But why did he ſwear he would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay certainly, there is no truth in him.

Roſ. Do you think ſo?

Cel. Yes, I think he is not a pick purſe, nor a horſe-ſtealer, but for his verity in love, I do think him as concave as a covered goblet, or a Worme-eaten nut.

Roſ. Not true in love?

Cel. Yes, when he is in, but I think he is not in.

Roſ. You have heard him ſwear downright he was.

Cel. Was, is not is: beſides, the oath of a Lover is no ſtronger then the word of a Tapſter, they are both the confirmer of falſe reckonings, he attends here in the forreſt on the Duke your father.

Roſ. I met the Duke yeſterday, and had much queſtion with him: he askt me of what parentage I was; I told him of as good as he, ſo he laugh'd and let me go. But what talk we of Fathers, when there is ſuch a man as Orlando?

Cel. O that's a brave man, he writes brave verſes, ſpeaks brave words, ſwears brave oaths, and breaks them bravely, quite travers athwart the heart of his lover, as a puiſny Tilter, that ſpurres his horſe but on one ſide, breaks his ſtaffe like a noble gooſe; but all's brave that youth mounts, and folly guides: who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Corin. Miſtreſs and Maſter, you have enquired
After the Shepheard that complaind of love,
Whom you ſaw ſitting by me on the Turffe,
Praiſing the proud diſdainfull Shepheardeſs
That was his Miſtreſs.

Cel. Well: and what of him?

Cor. If you will ſee a pageant truely plaid
Between the pale complection of true Love,
And the red glow of ſcorn and proud diſdain,
Go hence a little and I ſhall conduct you,
If you will mark it.

Roſ. O come, let us remove,
The ſight of Lovers feedeth thoſe in love:
Bring us to this ſight, and you ſhall ſay
Ile prove a buſie actor in their play. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe do not ſcorn me, do not, Phebe,
Say that you love me not, but ſay not ſo
In bitterneſs; the common executioner,
Whoſe heart th'accuſtom'd ſight of death makes hard,
Falls not the axe upon the humbled neck,
But firſt begs pardon: will you ſterner be
Then he that dies and lives by bloudy drops?

Enter Roſalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner,
I flie thee, for I would not injure thee:
Thou tel'ſt me there is murther in mine eye,
'Tis pretty ſure, and very probable,
That eyes that are the frail'ſt, and ſofteſt things,
Who ſhut their coward gates on atomyes,
Should be called tyrants, butchers, murtherers.
Now I do frown on thee with all my heart,
And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee:
Now counterfeit to ſwound, why now fall down,
Or if thou can'ſt not, oh for ſhame, for ſhame,
Lye not, to ſay mine eyes are murtherers:
Now ſhew the wound mine eye hath made in thee,
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remains
Some ſcar of it: Lean but upon a ruſh,
The Cicatrice and capable impreſſure
Thy Palme ſome moment keeps: but now mine eyes
Which I have darted at thee, hurt thee not,
Nor I am ſure there is no force in eyes
That can do hurt.

Sil. O dear Phebe,
If ever (as that ever may be near)
You met in ſome freſh cheek the power of fancie,
Then ſhall you know the wounds inviſible
That Loves keen arrows make.

Phe. But till that time
Come not thou near me: and when that time comes,
Afflict me with thy mocks, pitty me not,
As till that time I ſhall not pitty thee.

Roſ. And why I pray you? who might be your mother
That you inſult, exult, and all at once
Over the wretched? what though you have no beauty
As by my faith, I ſee no more in you
Then without Candle may go dark to bed:
Muſt you be therefore proud and pittileſs?
Why what means this? why do you look on me?
I ſee no more in you then in the ordinary
Of natures ſale-work? 'ods my little life,
I think ſhe means to tangle mine eyes too:
No faith, proud Miſtreſs, hope not after it,
'Tis not your inkie browes, your black ſilk hair,
Your bugle eye-balls, nor your cheek of cream
That can entame my ſpirits to your worſhip.
You fooliſh Shepheard, wherefore do you follow her
Like foggy South, puffing with winde and rain,
You are a thouſand times a properer man
Then ſhe a woman. 'Tis ſuch fooles as you
That makes the world full of ill-favour'd children:
'Tis not her glaſs, but you that flatters her,
And out of you ſhe ſees her ſelf more proper
Then any any of her lineaments can ſhow her:
But Miſtris, know your ſelf, down on your knees
And thank heaven, faſting for a good mans love;
For I muſt tell you friendly in your ear,
Sell when you can, you are not for all markets:
Cry the man mercy, love him, take his offer,
Foul is moſt foul, being foule to be a ſcoffer.
So take her to thee, Shepheard, fare you well.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a year together,
I had rather hear you chide then this man wooe.

Roſ. He's fal'n in love with your foulneſs, and ſhe'll
Fall in love with my anger. If it be ſo, as faſt
As ſhe anſwers thee with frowning looks, I'le ſauce
Her with bitter words: why look you ſo upon me?

Phe. For no ill will I bear you.

Roſ. I pray you do not fall in love with me,
For I am falſer then vowes made in wine:
Beſides, I like you not: if you will know my houſe,
'Tis at the tuft of Olives, here hard by:
Will you go Siſter? Shepheard ply her hard:

Come

Come Sister, Shepherdess, look on him better
And be not proud, though all the world could see,
None could be so abus'd in sight as he.
Come to our flock. Exit.

Phe. Deed Shepheard, now I finde thy saw of might,
Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?

Sil. Sweet Phebe.

Phe. Hah: what sayest thou Silvius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe, pitty me.

Phe. Why I am sorry for thee, gentle Silvius.

Sil. Where ever sorrow is, relief would be:
If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love your sorrow, and my grief
Were both extermin'd.

Phe. Thou hast my love, is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would have you.

Phe. Why that were covetousness:
Silvius; the time was, that I hated thee;
And yet it is not, that I bear thee love,
But since that thou canst talk of love so well,
Thy company, which earst was irkesome to me
I will endure; and I'le employ thee too:
But do not look for further recompence.
Then thine own gladness, that thou art employed.

Sil. So holy, and so perfect is my love,
And such a poverty of grace,
That I shall think it a most plentious crop
To glean the broken ears after the man
That the main harvest reaps: loose now and then
A scattered smile, and that I'le live upon. (while?

Phe. Know'st thou the youth that spoke to me yere-

Sil. Not very well, but I have met him oft,
And he hath bought the Cottage and the bounds,
That the old Carlot once was Master of.

Phe. Think not I love him, though I ask for him,
'Tis but a peevish boy, yet he talks well,
But what care I for words? yet words do well,
When he that speaks them pleases those that hear:
It is a pretty youth, not very pretty,
But sure he's proud, and yet his pride becomes him;
He'll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion: and faster then his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heal it up:
He is not very tall, yet for his years he's tall:
His leg is but so so, and yet 'tis well:
There was a pretty redness in his lip,
A little riper, and more lusty red
Then that mix'd in his cheek: 'twas just the difference
Betwixt the constant red, and mingled Damask.
There be some women, Silvius, had they mark'd him
In parcels as I did, would have gone near
To fall in love with him: but for my part
I love him not, nor hate him not: and yet
I have more cause to hate him then to love him,
For what had he to do to chide at me?
He said mine eyes were black and my hair black,
And now I am remembred, scorn'd at me:
I marvell why I answer'd not again,
But that's all one: omittance is no quittance:
I'le write to him a very tanting Letter,
And thou shalt bear it, wilt thou, Silvius?

Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.

Phe. I'le write it straight:
The matter's in my head, and in my heart,
I will be bitter with him, and passing short;
Go with me, Silvius. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Rosalinde, and Celia,, and Jaques.

Jaq. I prethee, pretty youth, let me be better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are a melancholly fellow.

Jaq. I am so: I do love it better then laughing.

Ros. Those that are in extremity of either, are abominable fellows, and betray themselves to every modern censure, worse then drunkards.

Jaq. Why, 'tis good to be sad and say nothing.

Ros. Why then 'tis good to be a post.

Jaq. I have neither the Schollers melancholly, which is emulation: nor the Musitians, which is fantasticall; nor the Courtiers, which is proud: nor the Souldiers, which is ambitious: nor the Lawyers, which is politick: nor the Ladies, which is nice: nor the Lovers, which is all these: but it is a melancholly of mine own, compounded of many simples, extracted from many objects, and indeed the sundrie contemplations of travells, in which my often rumination, wraps me in a most humorous sadness.

Ros. A Traveller: by my faith you have great reason to be sad: I fear you have sold your own Lands, to see other mens; then to have seen much, and to have nothing, is to have rich eyes and poor hands.

Jaq. Yes, I have gain'd my experience.

Enter Orlando.

Ros. And your experience makes you sad: I had rather have a foole to make me merry, then experience to make me sad, and to travell for it too.

Orl. Good day, and happiness, dear Rosalinde.

Jaq. Nay then God buy you, and you talk in blank verse. Exit.

Ros. Farewell Mounsieur Traveller: look you lisp, and wear strange suits; disable all the benefits of your own Countrie: be out of love with your nativity, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think you have swam in a Gundello. Why how now Orlando, where have you bin all this while? you a lover? and you serve me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Orl. My fair Rosalinde, I come within an hour of my promise.

Ros. Break an hours promise in love? he that will divide a minute into a thousand parts, and break but a part of the thousand part of a minute in the affairs of love, it may be said of him that Cupid hath clapt him oth' shoulder, but I'le warrant him heart hole.

Orl. Pardon me dear Rosalinde.

Ros. Nay, and you be so tardy, come no more in my sight, I had as lief be woo'd of a Snaile.

Orl. Of a Snaile?

Ros. I, of a Snaile: for though he comes slowly, he carries his house on his head: a better joynture I think then you make a woman: besides, he brings his destiny with him.

Orl. What's that?

Ros. Why horns: which such as you are fain to be beholding to your wives for: but he come armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Vertue

Orl. Vertue is no horn-maker: and my Rosalinde is vertuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalinde.

Cel. It pleases him to call you so: but he hath a Rosalinde of a better leer then you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo, me: for now I am in a holy-day humour, and like enough to consent: What would you say to me now, and I were your very, very Rosalinde?

Orl. I would kiss before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speak first, and when you were gravel'd, for lack of matter, you might take occasion to kiss: very good Orators when they are out, they will spit, and for lovers, lacking (God warn us) matter, the cleanliest shift is to kiss.

Orl. How if the kiss be deni'd?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreaty, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved Mistris?

Ros. Marry that should you if I were your Mistris, or I should think my honesty ranker then my wit.

Orl. What, of my suit?

Ros. Not out of your apparell, and yet out of your suit.
Am not I your Rosalinde?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say I will not have you.

Orl. Then in mine own person, I doe.

Ros. No faith, die by Attorney: the poor world is almost six thousand years old, and in all this time there was not any man dyed in his own person (videlicet) in a love cause: Troilus had his brain dash'd out with a Grecian club, yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patterns of love. Leander, he would have liv'd many a fair year, though Hero had turn'd Nun; if it had not been for a hot Midsummer-night, for (good youth) he went but forth to wash in the Hellespont, and being taken with the cramp, was droun'd, and the foolish Chroniclers of that age, found it was Hero of Sestos. But these are all lies, men have died from time to time, and wormes have eaten them, but not for love.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalinde, of this mind, for I protest her frown might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a flie: but come, now I will be your Rosalinde in a more comming-on disposition: and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then love me, Rosalinde.

Ros. Yes faith will I, Fridayes and Saturdayes, and all

Orl. And wilt thou have me?

Ros. I, and twenty such.

Orl. What sayest thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so.

Rosalind. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing: Come sister, you shall be the Priest, and marry us: give me your hand Orlando: What doe you say sister?

Orl. Pray thee marry us.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin, will you Orlando.

Cel. Go too: will you Orlando, have to wife this Rosalinde?

Orl. I wil.

Ros. But when?

Orl. Why now, as fast as she can marry us.

Ros. Then you must say, I take thee Rosalinde for wife.

Orl. I take thee Rosalinde for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your Commission,
But I do take thee Orlando for my husband: there's a girle goes before the Priest, and certainly a Womans thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts, they are wing'd.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have possest her?

Orl. For ever, and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever: No, no Orlando, men are Aprill when they woo, December when they wed: Maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives: I will be more jealous of thee, then a Barbary cock-pigeon over his hen, more clamorous then a Parrat against rain, more new-fangled then an ape, more giddy in my desires, then a monkey: I will weep for nothing, like Diana in the Fountain, and I will doe that when you are dispos'd to be merry: I will laugh like a Hyen, and that when thou art inclin'd to sleep.

Orl. But will my Rosalinde do so?

Ros. By my life, she will do as I do.

Orl. O but she is wise.

Ros. Or else she could not have the wit to do this: the wiser, the waywarder: make the doores upon a womans wit, and it will out at the casement: shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole: stop that, 'twill flie with the smoak out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say, wit whether wilt?

Ros. Nay, you might keep that check for it, till you met your wives wit going to your neighbours bed,

Orl. And what wit could wit have to excuse that?

Ros. Marry to say, she came to seek you there: you shall never take her without her answer, unless you take her without her tongue: O that woman that cannot make her fault her husbands occasion, let her never nurse her childe her self, for she will breed it like a foole.

Orl. For these two houres, Rosalinde, I will leave thee.

Ros. Alas, dear love, I cannot lack thee two hours.

Orl. I must attend the Duke at dinner, by two a clock I will be with thee again.

Ros. I, go your wayes, go your wayes: I knew what you would prove, my friends told me as much, and I thought no less: that flattering tongue of yours wonne me: 'tis but one cast away, and so come death: two o' clock is your houre.

Orl. I sweet Rosalinde.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend me, and by all pretty oathes that are not dangerous, if you break one jot of your promise, or come one minute behinde your houre, I will think you the most pathetical break-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most unworthy of her you call Rosalind, that may be chosen out of the grosse band of the unfaithfull: therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no less religion, then if thou wert indeed my Rosalinde: so adieu.

Ros. Well, Time is the old Justice that examines all such offenders, and let time try: adieu. Exit.

Cel. You have simply misus'd our sex in your love-prate:

prate: we muſt have your doublet and hoſe pluckt over your head, and ſhew the world what the bird hath done to her own neſt.

Roſ. O coz, coz, coz: my pretty little coz, that thou did'ſt know how many fathome deep I am in love: but it cannot be ſounded: my affection hath an unknown bottome, like the Bay of Portugall.

Cel. Or rather bottomleſſe, that as faſt as you poure affection in, it runs out.

Roſ. No, that ſame wicked Baſtard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceiv'd of ſpleen, and borne of madneſs, that blind raſcally boy, that abuſes every ones eyes, becauſe his own are out, let him be judge, how deep I am in love: I'le tell thee Aliena, I cannot be out of the ſight of Orlando: I'le go finde a ſhadow, and ſigh till he come.

Cel. And I'le ſleep. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Jaques and Lords, Forreſters.

Jaq. Which is he that killed the Deer?

Lord. Sir, it was I.

Jaq. Let's preſent him to the Duke like a Roman Conquerour, and it would do well to ſet the Deers horns upon his head, for a branch of Victory; have you no ſong Forreſter for this purpoſe?

Lord. Yes Sir.

Jaq. Sing it: 'tis no matter how it be in tune, ſo it make noyſe enough.

Muſick, Song.

What ſhall he have that kil'd the Deer?
His Leather skin, and horns to wear:
Then ſing him home, the reſt ſhall bear this burthen;
Take thou no ſcorn to wear the horn,
It was a creſt ere thou waſt born,
Thy fathers father wore it,
And thy father bore it,
The horn, the horn, the luſty horn,
Is not a thing to laugh to ſcorn. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Roſalinde and Celia.

Roſ. How ſay you now, is it not paſt two a clock? And here much Orlando.

Cel. I warrant you with pure love, and troubled brain.

Enter Silvius.

He hath t'ane his bow and arrows, and is gone forth
To ſleep: look who comes here.

Sil. My errand is to you, fair youth,
My gentle Phebe, bid me give you this:
I knew not the contents, but as I gueſs
By the ſtern brow, and waſpiſh action
Which ſhe did uſe, as ſhe was writing of it,
It bears an angry tenure; pardon me,
I am but as a guiltleſs meſſenger.

Roſ. Patience her ſelf would ſtartle at this letter,
And play the ſwaggerer, bear this, bear all:
She ſaies I am not fair, that I lack manners,
She calls me proud, and that ſhe could not love me
Were man as rare as Phenix: 'od's my will,
Her love is not the Hare that I did hunt,
Why writes ſhe ſo to me? well Shepheard, well,
This is a Letter of your own device.

Sil. No, I proteſt, I know not the contents,
Phebe did write it.

Roſ. Come, come, you are a foole,
And turn'd into the extremity of love.
I ſaw her hand, ſhe has a leathern hand,
A free-ſtone coloured hand: I verily did think
That her old gloves were one, but 'twas her hands:
She has a huſwifes hand, but that's no matter:
I ſay ſhe never did invent this letter,
This is a mans invention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure it is hers.

Roſ. Why, 'tis a boyſterous and a cruell ſtile,
A ſtile for challengers: why, ſhe defies me,
Like Turk to Chriſtian: womens gentle brain
Could not drop forth ſuch giant rude invention,
Such Ethiop words, blacker in their effect
Then in their countenance: will you hear the letter?

Sil. So pleaſe you, for I never heard it yet:
Yet heard too much of Phebes crueltie.

Roſ. She Phebes me: mark how the tyrant writes.
Read. Art thou god, to ſhepheard turn'd?
That a maidens heart hath burn'd?
Can a woman rail thus.

Sil. Call you this railing?

Roſ. Read. Why, thy godhead laid apart,
War'ſt thou with a womans heart?
Did you ever hear ſuch railing?
Whiles the eye of man did wooe me,
That could do no vengeance to me.
Meaning me a beaſt.
If the ſcorn of your bright eine
Have power to raiſe ſuch love in mine,
Alack, in me, what ſtrange effect
Would they work in mild aſpect?
Whiles you chid me, I did love,
How then might your prayers move?
He that brings this love to thee,
Little knowes this love in me:
And by him ſeal up thy minde,
Whether that thy youth and kinde
Will the faithfull offer take
Of me, and all that I can make,
Or elſe by him my love deny,
And then I'le ſtudy how to dy.

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas poor Shepheard,

Roſ. Doe you pitty him? No, he deſerves no pitty: wilt thou love ſuch a woman? what to make thee an inſtrument, and play falſe ſtrings upon thee? not to be endur'd. Well, go your way to her; (for I ſee Love hath made thee a tame ſnake) and ſay this to her; That if ſhe love me, I charge her to love thee: if ſhe will not, I will never have her, unleſs thou entreat for her: if you be a true lover, hence, and not a word; for here comes more company. Exit. Sil.

Enter Oliver.

Oliv. Good morrow, fair ones: pray you, (if you know)
Wherein the Purlews of this Forreſt ſtands.

A sheep-coat, fenc'd about with Olive-trees.
Cel. West of this place down in the neighbour bottome
The rank of Oziers, by the murmering stream
Left on your right hand, bring you to the place:
But at this hour the house doth keep it selfe,
There's none within.
Oli. If that an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description,
Such garments, and such years: the boy is fair,
Of female favour, and bestowes himself
Like a ripe sister: But the woman low
And browner then her brother: are not you
The owner of the house I did enquire for?
Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say we are.
Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both,
And to that youth he calls his Rosalinde,
He sends this bloudy napkin; are you he?
Ros. I am: what must we understand by this?
Oli. Some of my shame, if you will know of me
What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was stain'd.
Cel. I pray you tell it.
Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from you,
He left a promise to return again
Within an houre, and pacing through the Forrest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancie,
Loe what befell: he threw his eye aside,
And mark what object did present it self
Under an old Oak, whose bows were moss'd with age,
And high top bald with drie antiquity:
A wretched ragged man, ore-grown with hair
Lay sleeping on his back; about his neck
A green and guilded snake had wreath'd it self,
Who with her head, nimble in threats approach'd
The opening of his mouth; but suddenly
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd it self,
And with indented glides, did slip away
Into a bush, under whose bushes shade
A Lioness, with udders all drawn drie,
Lay couching head on ground, with catlike watch
When that the sleeping man should stir; for 'tis
The royall disposition of that beast
To prey on nothing, that doth seem as dead:
This seen, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.
Cel. O I have heard him speak of that same brother,
And he did render him the most unnaturall
That liv'd amongst men.
Oli. And well he might so doe,
For well I know he was unnaturall.
Ros. But to Orlando: did he leave him there
Food to the suck'd and hungry Lioness?
Oli. Twice did he turn his back and purpos'd so:
But kindness, nobler ever then revenge,
And nature stronger then his just occasion,
Made him give battle to the Lioness:
Who quickly fell before him, in which hurtling
From miserable slumber I awaked.
Cel. Are you his brother?
Ros. Was't you he rescu'd?
Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?
Oli. 'Twas I: but 'tis not I: I do not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.
Ros. But for the bloudy napkin?
Oli. By and by:
When from the first to last betwixt us two,
Tears our recountments had most kindly bath'd,
As how I came into that Desart place.
In brief, he led me to the gentle Duke,
Who gave me fresh array, and entertainment,
Committing me unto my brothers love,
Who led me instantly unto his Cave,
There stript himself, and here upon his arme
The Lioness had torn some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,
And cri'd in fainting upon Rosalinde.
Brief, I recover'd him, bound up his wound,
And after some small space, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am
To tell this, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to give this napkin
Died in his bloud, unto the Shepheard youth,
That he in sport doth call his Rosalinde.
Cel. Why how now Ganimed, sweet Ganimed.
Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on bloud.
Cel. There is no more in it; Cosen Ganimed.
Oli. Look, he recovers.
Ros. I would I were at home.
Cel. We'll lead you thither:
I pray you take him by the arme.
Oli. Be of good cheer, youth: you a man?
You lack a mans heart.
Ros. I do so, I confess it:
Ah, sirra, a body would think this was well counterfeited, I pray you tell your brother how well I counterfeited: heigh-ho.
Oli. This was not counterfeit, there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was passion of earnest.
Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.
Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.
Ros. So I do: but Ifaith, I should have been a woman by right.
Cel. Come, you look paler and paler: pray you draw homewards: good sir, go with us.
Oli. That will I: for I must bear answer back
How you excuse my brother, Rosalinde.
Ros. I shall devise something: but I pray you commend my counterfeiting to him: will you goe?

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clown and Audrie.

Clo. We shall finde a time Audrie, patience gentle Audrie.
Aud. Faith the Priest was good enough, for all the old gentlemans saying.
Clo. A most wicked Sir Oliver, Audrie, a most vile Mar-text. But Audrie, there is a youth here in the Forrest layes claim to you.
Aud. I, I know who 'tis: he hath no interest in me in the world: here comes the man you mean.

Enter William.

Clo. It is meat and drink to me to see a Clown, by my my troth, we that have good wits, have much to answer for: we shall be flouting: we cannot hold.

Will. Good ev'n Audrey.

Aud. God ye good ev'n William.

Will. And good ev'n to you Sir.

Clo. Good ev'n gentle friend, Cover thy head, cover thy head: Nay prethee be cover'd. How old are you Friend?

Will. Five and twenty Sir.

Clo. A ripe age: is thy name William?

Will. William, sir.

Clo. A fair name. Was't born i'th Forrest here?

Will. I sir, I thank God.

Clo. Thank God: A good answer: Art rich?

Will. 'Faith sir, so, so.

Clo. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good: and yet it is not, it is but so, so: Art thou wise?

Will. I sir, I have a pretty wit.

Clo. Why, thou sayest well. I do now remember a saying: The foole doth think he is wise, but the wiseman knowes himself to be a Foole. The Heathen Philosopher, when he had a desire to eat a Grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby, that Grapes were made to eat, and lips to open. You do love this maid?

Will. I do sir.

Clo. Give me your hand: Art thou Learned?

Will. No sir.

Clo. Then learn this of me, To have, is to have. For it is a figure in Rhetorick, that drink being powr'd out of a cup into a glass, by filling the one, doth empty the other. For all your Writers do consent, that ipse is he: now you are not ipse, for I am he.

Will. Which he sir?

Clo. He sir, that must marry this woman: Therefore you Clown, abandon: which is in the vulgar, leave the societie: which in the booriſh, is company, of this female: which in the common is woman: which together, is, abandon the society of this Female, or Clown thou perishest: or to thy better understanding, dyest; or (to wit) I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy liberty into bondage: I will deal in poyson with thee, or in bastinado, or in steel: I will bandy with thee in faction, I will ore-run thee with policy: I will kill thee a hundred and fifty wayes, therefore tremble and depart.

Aud. Do good William.

Will. God rest you merry sir. Exit.

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our Master and Mistresse seeks you: come away, away.

Clo. Trip Audrey, trip Audrey, I attend, I attend. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlando and Oliver.

Orl. Is't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her? And loving woo? and wooing, she should grant? And will you persevere to enjoy her?

Ol. Neither call the giddinesse of it in question; the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sudden wooing, nor sudden consenting: but say with me, I love Aliena: say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good: for my fathers house, and all the revenue, that was old Sir Rowlands, will I estate upon you, and here live and die a Shepheard.

Enter Rosalind.

Orl. You have my consent.
Let your wedding be to morrow: thither will I
Invite the Duke, and all's contented followers:
Go you, and prepare Aliena; for look you,
Here comes my Rosalinde.

Ros. God save you brother.

Orl. And you fair sister.

Ros. Oh my dear Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee wear thy heart in a scarfe

Orl. It is my arme.

Ros. I thought my heart had been wounded with the clawes of a Lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a Lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeited to sound, when he shew'd me your handkercher?

Orl. I and greater wonders then that.

Ros. O, I know where you are: nay, 'tis true: there was never any thing so sudden, but the fight of two Rammes, and Cesars Thrasonicall brag, of, I came, saw, and overcame. For your brother, and my sister, no sooner met, but they look'd: no sooner look'd, but they lov'd; no sooner lov'd, but they sigh'd: no sooner sigh'd, but they ask'd one another the reason: no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedy: and in these degrees, have they made a pair of staires to marriage, which they will climbe incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage; they are in the very wrath of love, and they will together. Clubbes cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to morrow: and I will bid the Duke to the Nuptiall. But O, how bitter a thing it is, to look into happines through another mans eyes: by so much the more shall I to morrow be at the height of heart heavines, by how much I shall think my brother happy, in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then to morrow, I cannot serve your turn for Rosalinde?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weary you then no longer with idle talking. Know of me then (for now I speak to some purpose) that I know you are a Gentleman of good conceit: I speak not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge: insomuch (I say) I know you are: neither do I labour for a greater esteem then may in some little measure draw a belief from you, to do your self good, and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can doe strange things: I have since I was three year old conversst with a Magitian, most profound in his heart, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalinde so near the heart, as your gesture cries it out: when your brother marries Aliena, you shall marry her. I know into what straights of fortune she is driven, and it is not impossible to me, if it appear not inconvenient to you, to to set her before your eyes to morrow, humane as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speak'st thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life I doe, which I tender dearly, though I say I am a Magician: Therefore put you in your best aray, bid your friends: for if you will be married to morrow, you shall: and to Rosalind if you will.

Enter Silvius and Phebe.

Look, here comes a Lover of mine, and a Lover of hers

Phe. Youth, you have done me much ungentlenesse,
To shew the Letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not if I have: it is my study
To seem despightfull and ungentle to you:
You are there followed by a faithfull Shepheard,
Look upon him, love him: he worships you.

Phe. Good Shepheard, tell this youth what 'tis to love.

Sil. It is to be made all of sighes and teares,
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganimed.

Or. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and service,
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganimed.

Or. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasie,
All made of passion, and all made of wishes,
All adoration, duty and observance,
All humblenesse, all patience, and impatience,
All purity, all triall, all observance:
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganimed.

Or. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no woman.

Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Or. If this be so, why blame you me to love you?

Ros. Why doe you speak too? Why blame you me to love you?

Orl. To her that is not here, nor doth not hear.

Ros. Pray you no more of this, 'tis like the howling of Irish Wolves against the Moon: I will help you if I can: I would love you if I could: To morrow meet me altogether: I will marry you, if ever I marry Woman, and I'le be married to morrow: I will satisfie you, if ever I satisfi'd man, and you shall be married to morrow. I will content you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shall be married to mortow: As you love Rosalind meet, as you love Phebe meet, and as I love no woman I'le meet: so fare you well, I have left you commands.

Sil. I'le not fail, if I live.

Phe. Nor I.

Orl. Nor I. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clown and Audrey.

Clo. To morrow is the joyfull day, Audrey to morrow will we be married.

Au. I doe desire it withall my heart: and I hope it is no dishonest desire, to desire to be a woman of the world?

Here come two of the banish'd Dukes Pages.

Enter two Pages.

1. Pa. Well met honest Gentleman.

Clo. By my troth well met: come, sit, sit, and a song.

2. Pa. We are for you, sit i'th middle.

1. Pa. Shall we clap into't roundly, without hauking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse, which are the onely prologues to a bad voice.

2. Pa. I'faith, i'faith, and both in tune, like two Jipsies on a horse.

Song.

It was a Lover, and his Lasse,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
That o're the green corn field did passe,
In the spring time; the onely pretty rang time,
When Birds doe sing, hey ding a ding, ding.
Sweet Lovers love the spring.
And therefore take the present time,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
For love is crowned with the prime.
In spring time, &c.

Between the acres of the Rie,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino:
These pretty Country folks would lie,
In the spring time, &c.

The Carroll they began that houre,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino,
How that a life was but a Flower,
In the spring time, &c.

Clo. Truly young Gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditty, yet the note was very untunable.

1. Pa. You are deceiv'd Sir, we keep time, we lost not our time.

Clo. By my troth yes: I count it but time lost to hear such a foolish song. God buy you, and God mend your voyces. Come Audrey. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke Senior, Amyens, Jaques, Orlando, Oliver, Celia.

Du. Sen. Dost thou believe Orlando, that the boy
Can doe all this that he hath promised?

Or. I sometimes doe believe, and sometimes doe not,
As those that fear they hope, and know they fear.

Enter Rosalinde, Silvius, and Phebe.

Ros. Patience once more, whiles our compact is urg'd:
You say, if I bring in your Rosalinde,
You will bestow her on Orlando here? (her.

Du. Sen. That would I, had I Kingdomes to give with

Ros. And you say you will have her, when I bring her?

Or. That would I, were I of all Kingdomes King.

Ros. You say, you'l marry me, if I be willing.

Phe. That will I, should I die the hour after.

Ros. But if you doe refuse to marry me,
You'l give your self to this most faithfull Shepheard.

Phe. So is the bargain.

Ros. You say that you'l have Phebe if she will.

Sil. Though to have her and death, were both one thing.

Ros. I have pro mis'd to make all this matter even:
Keep you your word, O Duke, to give your Daughter,
You yours, Orlando, to receive his Daughter:
Keep you your word, Phebe, that you'l marry me,
Or else refusing me to wed th s Shepheard:
Keep your word, Silvius, that you'l marry her,
If she refuse me, and from hence I go
To make these doubts all even. Exit Ros. and Celia.

Du. Sen. I doe remember in this Shepheard boy,
Some lively touches of my daughters favour.

Or. My Lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
Me thought he was a brother to your daughter:
But, my good Lord, this Boy is Forrest born,
And hath bin tutor'd in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies, by his Uncle,
Who he reports to be a great Magician.

Enter Clown and Audrey.

Obscured in the circle of this Forrest.

Jaq. There is sure another flood toward, and these couples are comming to the Arke. Here comes a pair of very strange beasts, which in all tongues, are call'd Fooles.

Clo. Salutation and greeting to you all.

Jaq. Good my Lord, bid him welcome: This is the Motley-minded Gentleman, that I have so often met in the Forrest: he hath bin a Courtier he sweares.

Clo. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation, I have trod a measure, I have flattred a Lady, I have bin politick with my friend, smooth with mine enemy, I have undone three Tailors, I have had four quarrels, and like to have fought one.

Jaq. And how was that tane up?

Clo. Faith we met, and found the quarrell was upon the seventh cause.

Jap. How the seventh cause? Good my Lord, like this fellow.

Du. Sen. I like him very well.

Clo. God'ild you sir, I desire you of the like: I presse in here, sir, amongst the rest of the Countrey copulatives to swear, and to forswear, according as marriage bindes and blood breakes: a poor virgin, sir, an ill-favour'd thing, sir, but mine own, a poor humour of mine, sir, to take that that no man else will: rich honesty dwells like a miser, sir, in a poor house, as your Pearl in your Oyster.

Du. Sen. By my faith he is very swift, and sententious.

Clo. According to the fooles bolt, sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Jaq. But for the seventh cause: How did you finde the quarrell on the seaventh cause?

Clo. Upon a lye seven times removed: (bear your body more seeming Audry) as thus sir: I did dislike the cut of a certain Courtiers beard: he sent me word, If I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the minde it was: this is call'd the retort courteous. If I sent him word again it was well cut, he would send me word he cut it to please himself? this is call'd the quip modest. If again, it was not well cut, he disabled my judgement: this is call'd the reply churlish. If again it was not well cut, he would answer I spake not true: this is call'd the reproof valiant. If again it was not well cut, he woold say, I lie: this is call'd the counter-check quarrelsome: and so to the lie circumstantiall, and the lie direct.

Jaq. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

Clo. I durst go no further then the lye circumstantiall: nor he durst not give me the lye direct: and so we measur'd swords, and parted

Jaq. Can you nominate in order now the degrees of the lye.

Clo. O sir, we quarrell in print, by the book: as you have books for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous: the second, the Quip modest: the third, the Reply churlish: the fourth, the Reproof valiant: the fifth, the Countercheck quarrelsome: the sixth, the Lye with circumstance: the seventh, the Lye direct: all these you may avoid, but the Lye direct: and you may avoid that too, with an If. I knew when seven Justices could not take up a Quarrell, but when the parties were met themselves, one of them thought but of an If; as, If you said so, then I said so: and they shook hands, and swore brothers. Your If is the onely peace-maker: much virtue in If.

Jaq. Is not this a rare fellow my Lord? He's as good at any thing, and yet a fool.

Du. Sen. He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.

Enter Hymen, Rosalind, and Celia.
Still Musick.

Hymen. Then is there mirth in heaven,
When earthly things made even attone together.
Good Duke receive thy daughter,
Hymen from heaven brought her,
Yea brought her hither.
That thou mightst joyn her hand with his,
Whose heart within his bosome is.

Ros. To you I give my self, for I am yours.

Or. To you I give my self, for I am yours.

Du. Se. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Or. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phe. If sight and shape be true, why then my love adieu.

Ros. I'le have no Father, if you be not he:
I'le have no Husband, if you be not he:
Nor ne're wed woman, if you be not she.

Hy. Peace hoa: I bar confusion,
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events:
Here's eight that must take hands,
To joyn in Hymens bands,
If truth holds true contents.
You and and you, no crosse shall part;
You and you, are heart in heart;
You, to his love must accord,
Or have a Woman to your Lord.
You and you, are sure together,
As the Winter to foul weather:
Whiles a Wedlock Hymn we sing,
Feed your selves with questioning:
That reason, wonder may diminish
How thus we met, and these things finish.

Song.

Wedding is great Junos crown,
O blessed bond of board and bed:
'Tis Hymen peoples every town,
High wedlock then be honoured:
Honour, high honour and renown
To Hymen, God of every Town.

Du. Sen. O my dear Niece, welcome thou art to me,
Even daughter welcome, in no lesse degree.

Phe.

Phe. I will not eat my word, now thou art mine,
Thy faith, my fancy to thee doth combine.

Enter second Brother.

2. Bro. Let me have audience for a word or two:
I am the second son of old Sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this fair assembly.
Duke Frederick, hearing how that every day,
Men of great worth resorted to this Forrest,
Addrest a mighty power which were on foot
In his own conduct, purposely to take
His brother here, and put him to the sword:
And to the skirts of this wilde Wood he came;
Where, meeting with an old religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprize, and from the world:
His crown bequeathing to his banish'd Brother,
And all their Lands restor'd to him again
That were with him exil'd. This to be true,
I doe engage my life.

Du. Sen. Welcome young man:
Thou offer'st fairly to thy brothers wedding:
To one his lands with-held, and to the other
A land it selfe at large, a potent Dukedome.
First, in this Forrest, let us doe those ends
That here were well begun, and well begot:
And after, every of this happy number
That have endur'd shrew'd dayes and nights with us,
Shall share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Mean time, forget this new-fain dignity,
And fall into our Rustick Revelry:
Play Musick, and you Brides and Bride-grooms all,
With measure heap'd in joy, to th' Measures fall.

Jaq. Sir, by your patience: If I heard you rightly,
The Duke hath put on a religious life,
And thrown into neglect the pompous Court.

2. Bro. He hath.

Jaq. To him will I: out of these convertites,
There is much matter to be heard, and learn'd:
You to your former Honour, I bequeathe
Your patience, and your virtue well deserves it.
You to a love, that your true faith doth merit:
You to your land, and love, and great allies:
You to a long, and well-deserved bed:
And you to wrangling, for thy loving voyage
Is but for two moneths victuall'd: So to your pleasures,
I am for other, then for dancing measures.

Du. Sen. Stay, Jaques, stay.

Jaq. To see no pastime, I: what you would have,
I'le stay to know, at your abandon'd cave. Exit.

Du. Sen. Proceed, proceed, we will begin these rights,
As we doe trust, they'l end in true delights.

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the Lady the Epilogue: but it is no more unhandsome, then to see the Lord the Prologue. If it be true, that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true, that a good Play needs no Epilogue. Yet to good wine they do use good bushes: and good Playes prove the better by the help of good Epilogues: What a case am I in then, that am neither a good Epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalf of a good Play? I am not furnish'd like a Beggar, therefore to beg will not become mee. My way is to conjure you, and I'le begin with the Women. I charge you (O women) for the love you bear to men, to like as much of this Play, as pleases you: And I charge you (O men) for the love you bear to women (as I perceive by your simpring, none of you hates them) that between you, and the women, the Play may please. If I were a Woman, I would kisse as many of you as had beards that pleas'd me, complexions that lik'd me, and breaths that I defi'd not: And I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will for my kind offer, when I make curt'sie, bid me farewell. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Taming of the Shrew.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Beggar and Hoſteſſe, Chriſtophero Sly.

Beggar.

I'Le pheeze you infaith.

Hoſt. A pair of Stocks you Rogue.

Beg. Y'are a baggage, the Slies are no Rogues. Look in the Chronicles, we came in with Richard Conquerour: therefore Paucas pallabris, let the world ſlide: Seſſa.

Hoſt. You will not pay for the glaſſes you have burſt?

Beg. No, not a deniere: go by S. Jeronimy, go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.

Hoſt. I know my remedy, I muſt go fetch the Headborough.

Beg. Third, or fourth, or fift Borough, I'le anſwer him by Law. I'le not budge an inch boy: Let him come, and kindly. Falls aſleep.

Wind horns. Enter a Lord from hunting, with his train.

Lo. Huntſman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds,
Brach Merriman, the poor Curre is imboſt,
And couple Clowder with the deep-mouth'd brach,
Saw'ſt thou not boy how Silver made it good
At the hedge corner, in the coldeſt fault,
I would not loſe the dog for twenty pound.

Hun. Why Belman is as good as he, my Lord,
He cried upon it at the meereſt loſſe,
And twice to day pick'd out the dulleſt ſent;
Truſt me, I take him for the better dog.

Lord. Thou art a fool, if Eccho were as fleet,
I would eſteem him worth a dozen ſuch:
But ſup them well, and look unto them all,
To morrow I intend to hunt again.

Hun. I will my Lord.

Lord. What's here? one dead, or drunk? See doth he breathe?

2. Hun. He breathes, my Lord. Were he not warm'd with Ale, this were a bed but cold to ſleep ſo ſoundly.

Lord. O monſtrous beaſt, how like a ſwine he lies.
Grim death, how foul and loathſome is thine image!
Sirs, I will practiſe on this drunken man.
What think you, if he were convey'd to bed,
Wrap'd in ſweet cloathes: Rings put upon his fingers:
A moſt delicious banquet by his bed,
And brave attendants near him when he wakes,
Would not the Beggar then forget himſelf?

1. Hun. Believe me, Lord, I think he cannot chooſe.

2. Hun. It would ſeem ſtrange unto him when he wak'd.

Lord. Even as a flatt'ring dream, or worthleſs fancy.
Then take him up, and manage well the jeſt:
Carry him gently to my faireſt Chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures:
Balm his foul head in warm diſtilled waters,
And burn ſweet Wood to make the Lodging ſweet:
Procure me Muſick ready when he wakes,
To make a dulcet and a heavenly ſound:
And if he chance to ſpeak, be ready ſtraight
(And with a low ſubmiſſive reverence)
Say, what is it your Honour will command:
Let one attend him with a ſilver Baſon
Full of Roſe-water, and beſtrew'd with Flowers,
Another bear the Ewer: the third a Diaper,
And ſay, wilt pleaſe your Lordſhip cool your hands.
Some one be ready with a coſtly ſuit,
And aske him what apparell he will wear:
Another tell him of his Hounds and Horſe,
And that his Lady mourns at his diſeaſe,
Perſwade him that he hath bin Lunatick,
And when he ſayes he is, ſay that he dreames,
For he is nothing but a mighty Lord:
This doe, and doe it kindly, gentle ſirs,
It will be paſtime paſſing excellent,
If it be husbandad with modeſty.

1. Hun. My Lord, I warrant you we will play our part,
As he ſhall think by our true diligence
He is no leſſe then what we ſay he is.

Lord. Take him up gently, and to bed with him,
And each one to his office when he wakes.
Sound Trampets.
Sirrah, go ſee what Trumpet 'tis that ſounds,
Belike ſome Noble Gentleman that meanes
(Travelling ſome journey) to repoſe himſelf here.

Enter Servingman.

How now? who is it?

Ser. An't pleaſe your Honour, Players
That offer ſervice to your Lordſhip.

Enter Players.

Lord. Bid them come near:
Now fellows, you are welcome.

Pla. We thank your Honour.

Lor. Doe you intend to ſtay with me to night?

2. Pla. So pleaſe your Lordſhip to accept our duty.

Lord. With all my heart. This fellow I remember,
Since once he plaid a Farmer's eldeſt ſon,
'Twas where you woo'd the Gentlewoman ſo well:
I have forgot your name: but ſure that part

Was

Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd
Sim. I think 'twas Soto that your Honour meanes.
Lord. 'Tis very true, thou didst it excellent:
Well you are come to me in happy time,
The rather for I have some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a Lord will hear you play to night;
But I am doubtfull of your modesties,
Least (over-eying of his odde behaviour,
For yet his Honour never heard a Play)
You break into some merry passion,
And so offend him: for I tell you sirs,
If you should smile, he growes impatient.
Pla. Fear not my Lord, we can contain our selves,
Were he the veriest antick in the world.
Lord. Go sirra, take them to the Buttery,
And give them friendly welcome every one,
Let them want nothing that my house affords.
Exit one with the Players.
Sirra go you to Bartholmew my Page,
And see him drest in all suits like a Lady:
That done, conduct him to the Drunkards chamber,
And call him Madam, doe him obeisance:
Tell him from me (as he will win my love)
He bear himself with honourable action
Such as he hath observ'd in noble Ladies
Unto their Lords, by them accomplished,
Such duty to the Drunkard let him doe:
With soft low tongue, and lowly courtesie,
And say: What is't your Honour will command,
Wherein your Lady, and your humble Wife,
May shew her duty, and make known her love.
And then with kind embracements, tempting kisses,
And with declining head into his bosome
Bid him shed teares, as being over-joyed
To see her noble Lord restor'd to health,
Who for this seven yeares hath esteemed him
No better then a poor and loathsome beggar:
And if the boy have not a womans gift
To rain a shower of commanded teares,
An Onion will doe well for such a shift,
Which in a Napkin (being close convey'd)
Shall in despight enforce a watry eye:
See this dispatch'd with all the hast thou canst,
Anon I'le give thee more instructions.
Exit a Servingman.
I know the boy will well usurpe the grace,
Voyce, gate, and action of a Gentlewoman.
I long to hear him call the Drunkard, Husband,
And how my men will stay themselves from laughter,
When they doe homage to this simple peasant,
I'le in to counsell them: haply my presence
May well abate the over-merry spleen,
Which otherwise would grow into extreames.

Enter aloft the Drunkard with attendants, some with apparel, Bason & Ewer, & other appurtenances, & Lord.
Beg. For Gods sake a pot of small Ale.
1. Ser. Wil't please your Lordship drink a cup of sack?
2. Ser. Wil't please your Honour taste of these Conserves?
3. Ser. What raiment will your Honour wear to day.
Beg. I am Christophero Slie, call not me Honour nor Lordship: I ne're drank sack in my life: and if you give me any Conserves, give me Conserves of Beef: ne're ask me what raiment I'le wear, for I have no more Doublets then Backs: no more Stockings then Legges: nor no more Shooes then Feet, nay sometimes more Feet then Shooes, or such Shooes as my Toes look through the over-leather.
Lor. Heaven cease this idle humour in your Honour.
Oh that a mighty man of such descent,
Of such possessions, and so high esteem,
Should be infused with so foul a spirit.
Beg. What, would you make me mad? Am not I Christophero Slie, old Slie's son of Burton-heath, by birth a Pedler, by education a Card-maker, by transmutation a Bear-heard, and now by present profession a Tinker? Ask Marrian Hacket the fat Ale-wife of Wincot, if she know me not: if she say I am not xiv.d. on the score for sheere Ale, score me up for the lyingst knave in Christendome. What I am not bestraught: here's------
1. Man. Oh this it is that makes your Lady mourn.
2. Man. Oh this is it that makes your servants droop.
Lord. Hence comes it that your kindred shuns your house.
As beaten hence by your strange Lunacy.
Oh Noble Lord, bethink thee of thy birth,
Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,
And banish hence the abject lowly dreames:
Look how thy servants doe attend on thee,
Each in his office ready at thy beck.
Wilt thou have Musick? Heark, Apollo playes, Musick.
And twenty caged Nightingales do sing.
Or wilt thou sleep? We'l have thee to a Couch,
Softer and sweeter then the lustfull bed
On purpose trimm'd up for Semiramis.
Say thou wilt walk: we will bestrow the ground.
Or wilt thou ride? thy horses shall be trapp'd,
Their harnesse studded all with Gold and Pearl.
Dost thou love hawking? thou hast Hawkes will soare
Above the morning Larke. Or wilt thou hunt,
Thy Hounds shall make the Welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill ecchoes from the hollow earth.
1. Man. Say thou wilt course, thy Gray-hounds are as swift
As breathed Stags: I, fleeter then the Roe.
2. M. Dost thou love pictures? we will fetch thee straight
Adonis painted by a running brook,
And Citherea all in sedges hid,
Which seem to move, and wanton with her breath,
Even as the waving sedges play with winde.
Lord. We'l shew thee Jo, as she was a Maid,
And how she was beguiled and surpriz'd,
As lively painted, as the deed was done.
3. Man. Or Daphne roming through a thorny wood,
Scratching her Legs, that one shall swear she bleeds,
And at that sight shall sad Apollo weep,
So workmanly the blood and teares are drawn.
Lord. Thou art a Lord, and nothing but a Lord:
Thou hast a Lady far more beautifull,
Then any woman in this waining age.
1. Man. And till the teares that she hath shed for thee,
Like envious flouds, o're-run her lovely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world,
And yet she is inferiour to none.
Beg. Am I a Lord, and have I such a Lady?
Or doe I dream? or have I dream'd till now?
I doe not sleep: I see, I hear, I speak:
I smell sweet savours, and I feel soft things:
Upon my life I am a Lord indeed,
And not a Tinker, nor Christophero Slie.
Well, bring our Lady hither to our sight,
And once again a pot o'th' smallest Ale.

2. Man. Wil't pleaſe your Mightineſſe to waſh your hands?
Oh how we joy to ſee your wits reſtor'd,
Oh that once more you knew but what you are:
Theſe fifteen yeares you have bin in a dream,
Or when you wak'd, ſo wak'd as if you ſlept.
Beg. Theſe fifteen yeares, by my fay, a goodly nap,
But did I never ſpeak of all that time?
1. Man. Oh yes, my Lord, but very idle words,
For though you lay here in this goodly chamber,
Yet would you ſay, ye were beaten out of door,
And rail upon the Hoſteſſe of the Houſe,
And ſay you would preſent her at the Leet,
Becauſe ſhe brought Stone-Jugs, and no ſeal'd quarts:
Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket.
Beg. I, the womans maid of the houſe.
3. Ma. Why ſir, you know no houſe, nor no ſuch maid,
Nor no ſuch men as you have reckon'd up,
As Stephen Slie, and old John Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turph, and Henry Pimpernell,
And twenty more ſuch names and men as theſe,
Which never were, nor no man ever ſaw.
Beg. Now Lord be thanked for my good amends.
All. Amen.

Enter Lady with Attendants.

Beg. I thank thee, thou ſhalt not loſe by it.
Lady. How fares my noble Lord?
Beg. Marry I fare well, for here is cheer enough.
Where is my Wife?
La. Here noble Lord, what is thy will with her?
Beg. Are you my Wife, and will not call me Husband?
My men ſhould call me Lord, I am your good-man.
La. My Husband and my Lord, my Lord and Husband,
I am your Wife in all obedience.
Beg. I know it well, what muſt I call her?
Lord. Madam.
Beg. Alce Madam, or Jone Madam?
Lord. Madam, and nothing elſe, ſo Lords call Ladies.
Beg. Madam Wife, they ſay that I have dream'd,
And ſlept about ſome fifteen year or more.
Lady. I, and the time ſeems thirty unto me,
Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.
Beg. 'Tis much, ſervants leave me and her alone:
Madam undreſſe you, and come now to bed.
La. Thrice noble Lord, let me entreat of you
To pardon me yet for a night or two:
Or if not ſo, until the Sun be ſet.
For your Phyſicians have expreſſely charg'd,
In perill to incurre your former malady,
That I ſhould yet abſent me from your bed:
I hope this reaſon ſtands for my excuſe.
Beg. I, it ſtands ſo that I may hardly tarry ſo long:
But I would be loth to fall into my dreames again: I will therefore tarry in deſpight of the fleſh and the blood.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. Your Honours Players hearing your amendment,
Are come to play a pleaſant Comedy,
For ſo your Doctours hold it very meet,
Seeing too much ſadneſſe hath congeal'd your blood,
And melancholly is the Nurſe of frenzy,
Therefore they thought it good you hear a Play,
And frame your mind to mirth and merriment,
Which barres a thouſand harmes, and lengthens life.
Beg. Marry I will, let them play, it is not a Comenty, a Chriſtmas gambold, or a tumbling trick?
Lady. No my good Lord, it is more pleaſing ſtuffe.
Beg. What, houſhold ſtuffe?
Lady. It is a kind of hiſtory.
Beg. Well, we'l ſee't:
Come Madam Wife, ſit by my ſide,
And let the world ſlip, we ſhall ne're be younger.

Flouriſh. Enter Lucentio, and his man Tranio.

Luc. Tranio, ſince for the great deſire I had
To ſee fair Padua, nurſery of Arts,
I am arriv'd for fruitfull Lumbardy,
The pleaſant garden of great Italy,
And by my fathers love and leave am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good company.
My truſty ſervant well approv'd in all,
Here let us breathe, and happily inſtitute
A courſe of Learning, and ingenious ſtudies.
Piſa renowned for grave Citizens
Gave me my being, and my father firſt
A Merchant of great Traffick through the world:
Vincentio's come of the Bentivolii,
Vincentio's ſon, brought up in Florence,
It ſhall become to ſerve all hopes conceiv'd
To deck his fortune with his virtuous deeds:
And therefore, Tranio, for the time I ſtudy,
Virtue and that part of Philoſophy
Will I apply, that treats of happineſſe,
By virtue ſpecially to be atchiev'd.
Tell me thy minde, for I have Piſa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaves
A ſhallow plaſh, to plunge him in the deep,
And with ſatiety ſeeks to quench his thirſt.
Tra. Me Pardonato, gentle maſter mine:
I am in all affected as your ſelf,
Glad that you thus continue your reſolve,
To ſuck the ſweets of ſweet Philoſophy.
Onely (good maſter) while we doe admire
This virtue, and this morall diſcipline,
Let's be no Stoicks, nor no ſtocks I pray;
Or ſo devote to Ariſtotles checks,
As Ovid be an out-caſt quite abjur'd:
Balke Logick with acquaintance that you have,
And practice Rhetorick in your common talke,
Muſick and Poeſie uſe, to quicken you,
The Mathematicks, and the Metaphyſicks,
Fall to them as you find your ſtomack ſerves you:
No profit growes, where is no pleaſure tane:
In brief ſir, ſtudy what you moſt affect.
Luc. Gramercies Tranio, well doſt thou adviſe,
If Biondello thou wert come aſhore,
We could at once put us in readineſſe,
And take a Lodging fit to entertain
Such friends (as time) in Padua ſhall beget.
But ſtay a while, what company is this?
Tra. Maſter ſome ſhew to welcome us to Town.

Enter Baptiſta with his two daughters, Katherina and Bianca, Gremio a Pantalowne, Hortenſio a Suitor to Bianca, Lucen. Tranio, ſtand by.

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no farther,
For how I firmly am reſolv'd you know:
That is, not to beſtow my youngeſt daughter,
Before I have a husband for the elder:
If either of you both love Katherina,

Becauſe

Because I know you well, and love you well,
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.
Gre. To cart her rather. She's too rough for me,
There, there Hortentio, will you any Wife?
Kat. I pray you sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me among'st those mates?
Hor. Mates maid, how mean you that?
No mates for you,
Unless you were of gentler milder mould.
Kat. I'faith sir, you shall never need to fear,
I-wis it is not halfe way to her heart:
But if it were, doubt not, her care shall be,
To combe your noddle with a three-legg'd stoole,
And paint your face, and use you like a foole.
Hor. From all such devils, good Lord deliver us.
Gre. And me too, good Lord.
Tra. Husht maister, heres some good pastime toward,
That wench is stark mad or wonderfull froward.
Luc. But in the others silence do I see,
Maids milde behaviour and sobrietie.
Peace Tranio.
Tra. Well said Maister, mum, and gaze your fill.
Bap. Gentlemen, that I may soon make good
What I have said, Bianca get you in,
And let it not displease thee, good Bianca,
For I will love thee ne're the lesse my girle.
Kat. A pretty peat, it is best put finger in the eye, and she knew why.
Bian. Sister content you, in my discontent.
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My books and instruments shall be my company,
On them to look, and practise by my self.
Luc. Heark Tranio, thou maist hear Minerva speak.
Hor. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange,
Sorry am I that our good will effects
Bianca's grief.
Gre. Why will you mew her up
(Signior Baptista) for this fiend of hell,
And make her bear the penance of her tongue?
Bap. Gentlemen content ye: I am resolv'd:
Go in Bianca.
And for I know she taketh most delight
In Musick, Instruments, and Poetry,
Schoolemaisters will I keep within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth. If you Hortentio,
Or signior Gremio you know any such,
Preferre them hither: for to cunning men,
I will be very kinde and liberall,
To mine own children, in good bringing up,
And so farewell: Katherina you may stay,
For I have more to commune with Bianca. Exit.
Kat. Why, and I trust I may go too, may I not?
What shall I be appointed houres, as though (Belike) I knew not what to take,
And what to leave? Ha. Exit.
Gre. You may go to the devils dam: your gifts are so good, here's none will hold you: Our love is not so great Hortentio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairly out. Our cake's dow on both sides. Farewell: yet for the love I bear my sweet Bianca, if I can by any means light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.
Hor. So will I Signior Gremio: but a word I pray: Though the nature of our quarrell yet never brook'd parlee, know now upon advice, it toucheth us both: that we may yet again have accesse to our fair Mistris, and be happy rivals in Bianca's love, to labour and effect one thing specially.
Gre. What's that I pray?
Hor. Marry sir, to get a husband for her sister,
Gre. A husband: a devill.
Hor. I say a husband.
Gre. I say a devill: Think'st thou, Hortentio, though her father be very rich, any man is so very a foole to be married to hell?
Hor. Tush Gremio; though it passe your patience and mine to endure her lewd alarums, why man, there be good fellowes in the world, and a man could light on them, Would take her with all faults, and money enough.
Gre. I cannot tell: but I had as lief take her dowry with this condition; To be whipt at the high crosse every morning.
Hor. Faith (as you say) there's small choice in rotten apples: come, since this bar in law makes us friends, it shall be so forth friendly maintain'd, till by helping Baptista's eldest daughter to a husband, we set his youngest free for a husband, and then have to't afresh: Sweet Bianca, happy man be his dole: he that runnes fastest, gets the Ring: How say you signior Gremio?
Grem. I am agreed, and would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his wooing that would throughly wooe her, wed her, and bed her, and rid the house of her. Come on.
Exeunt ambo. Manet Tranio and Lucencio.
Tra. I pray sir tell me, is it possible
That love should on a sudden take such hold.
Luc. Oh Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I never thought it possible or likely.
But see, while idely I stood looking on,
I found the effect of Love in idlenesse,
And now in plainnesse to confesse to thee
That art to me as secret and as dear
As Anna to the Queen of Carthage was:
Tranio I burn, I pine, I perish Tranio,
If I atchieve not this young modest girle:
Councell me Tranio, for I know thou can'st:
Assist me Tranio, for I know thou wilt.
Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now.
Affection is not rated from the heart:
If love touch'd you, nought remains but so,
Redime te captum quam queas minimo.
Luc. Gramercies Lad: go forward, this contents,
The rest will comfort, for thy counsel's sound.
Tra. Master, you look'd so longly on the maid
Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all.
Luc. Oh yes, I saw sweet beauty in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Jove to humble him to her hand,
When with his knees he kist the Cretan strond.
Tra. Saw you no more? mark'd you not how her sister,
Began to scold, and raise up such a storm?
That mortall ears might hardly endure the din,
Luc. Tranio, I saw her corrall lips to move;
And with her breath she did perfume the aire,
Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.
Tra. Nay, then 'tis time to stir him from his trance:
I pray awake sir: if you love the Maid;
Bend thoughts and wits to atchieve her. Thus it stands:
Her eldest sister is so curst and shrew'd,
That till the father rid his hands of her,
Master, your love must live a maid at home,
And therefore has he closely mew'd her up,

Because

Becauſe ſhe will not be annoy'd with ſuite s.
Luc. Ah Tranio, what a cruell Fathers he:
But art thou not advis'd, he took ſome care
To get her cunning Schoolemaſters to inſtruct her.
Tra. I marry am I ſir, and now 'tis plotted.
Luc. I have it Tranio.
Tra. Maiſter, for my hand,
Both our inventions meet and jump in one.
Luc. Tell me thine firſt.
Tra. You will beſchoole-maiſter,
And undertake the teaching of the maid:
That's your device.
Luc. It is: May it be done?
Tra. Not poſſible: for who ſhall bear your part,
And be in Padua here Vincentio's ſon,
Keep houſe, and ply his book, welcome his friendes,
Viſit his Countreymen, and banquet them?
Luc. Baſta, content thee: for I have it full.
We have not yet been ſeen in any houſe,
Nor can we be diſtinguiſh'd by our faces,
For man or maiſter: then it follows thus;
Thou ſhalt be maiſter, Tranio in my ſted:
Keep houſe, and port, and ſervants, as I ſhould,
I will ſome other be, ſome Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Piſa.
'Tis hatch'd, and ſhall be ſo: Tranio at once
Uncaſe thee: take my colour'd hat and cloak,
When Biondello comes, he waits on thee,
But I will charm him firſt to keep his tongue.
Tra. So had you need:
In briefe Sir, ſith it your pleaſure is,
And I am tyed to be obedient,
For ſo your father charg'd me at our parting:
Be ſerviceable to my ſon (quoth he)
Although I think 'twas in another ſence,
I am content to be Lucentio,
Becauſe ſo well I love Lucentio.
Luc. Tranio be ſo, becauſe Lucentio loves,
And let me be a ſlave, t'atchieve that maid,
Whoſe ſudden ſight hath thral'd my wounded eye.

Enter Biondello.

Here comes the rogue. Sirra, where have you been?
Bion. Where have I been? Nay how now, where are you? Maiſter, ha's my fellow Tranio ſtol'n your cloathes, or you ſtol'n his, or both? Pray what's the news?
Luc. Sirrah come hither, 'tis no time to jeſt.
And therefore frame your manners to the time.
Your fellow Tranio here to ſave my life,
Puts my apparell, and my count'nance on,
And I for my eſcape have put on his:
For in a quarrell ſince I came aſhore,
I kill'd a man, and fear I am deſcried:
Wait you on him, I charge you, as becomes:
While I make way from hence to ſave my life:
You underſtand me?
Bion I ſir, ne're a whit.
Luc. And not a jot of Tranio in your mouth,
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.
Bion. The better for him, would I were ſo too.
Tra. So would I, 'faith boy, to have the next wiſh after, that Lucentio indeed had Baptiſta's youngeſt daughter. But ſirra, not for my ſake, but your maiſters, I adviſe you uſe your manners diſcreetly in all kind of companies: When I am alone, why then I am Tranio: but in all places elſe, your maiſter Lucentio.
Luc. Tranio let's go:
One thing more reſts, that thy ſelf execute,
To make one 'mong theſe wooers: if thou ask me why,
Sufficeth my reaſons are both good and weighty,
Exeunt. The Preſenters above ſpeaks.
1. Man. My Lord you nod, you do not mind the play.
Beg. Yes by Saint Anne do I, a good matter ſurely: Comes there any more of it?
Lad. My Lord, 'tis but begun.
Beg. 'Tis a very excellent piece of work, Madam Lady: would 'twere done. They ſit and marke.

Enter Petruchio, and his man Grumio.

Pet. Verona, for for a while I take my leave,
To ſee my friends in Padua; but of all
My beſt beloved and approued friend
Hortentio: and I trow this is the houſe:
Here ſirra Grumio, knock I ſay.
Gru. Knock ſir? whom ſhould I knock? Is there any man ha's rebus'd your worſhip?
Pet. Villain I ſay, knock me here ſoundly.
Gru. Knock you here ſir? Why ſir, what am I ſir, that I ſhould knock you here ſir?
Pet. Villain I ſay knock me at this gate,
And rap me well, or I'le knock your knaves pate.
Gru. My Maiſter is grown quarrelſome:
I ſhould knock you firſt,
And then I know after, who comes by the worſt.
Pet. Will it not be?
Faith ſirra, and you'll not knock, I'le ring it,
I'le try how you can Sol, Fa, and ſing it.
He rings him by the ears.
Gru. Help miſtris help, my maiſter is mad.
Pet. Now knock when I bid you: ſirra villain.

Enter Hortentio

Hor. How now, what's the matter? My old friend Grumio, and my good friend Petruchio? How do you all at Verona?
Pet. Signior Hortentio, come you to part the fray? Contutti le core bene trovatto, may I ſay.
Hor. Alla noſtra caſa ben venuto multo honorato ſignior mio Petruchio.
Riſe Grumio, we will compound this quarrell.
Gru. Nay 'tis no matter ſir, what he leges in Latine. If this be not a lawfull cauſe for me to leave his ſervice, look you ſir: He bid me knock him, and rap him ſoundly ſir. Well, was it fit for a ſervant to uſe his maſter ſo, being perhaps (for ought I ſee) two and thirty, a peep out? Whom would to God I had well knock't at firſt, then had not Grumio come by the worſt.
Pet. A ſenceleſſe villain: good Hortentio,
I bad the raſcall knock upon your gate,
And could not get him for my heart to do it.
Gru. Knock at the gate? O heavens: ſpeak you not theſe words plain? Sirra, Knock me here: rap me here: knock me well, and knock me ſoundly? And come you now with knocking at the gate?
Pet. Sirra, be gone, or talk not I adviſe you.
Hor. Petruchio patience, I am Grumio's pledge:
Why this a heavy chance 'twixt him and you,
Your ancient truſty pleaſant ſervant Grumio:
And tell me now (ſweet friend) what happy gale
Blows you to Padua here, from old Verona?
Pet. Such wind as ſcatters young men through the world,
To

To seek their fortunes farther than at home,
Where small experience growes but in a few.
Signior Hortentio, thus it stands with me,
Antonio my father is deceast,
And I have thrust my self into this maze,
Happily to wive and thrive, as best I may:
Crowns in my purse I have, and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world.
Hor. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee,
And wish thee to a shrew'd ill-favour'd wife?
Thou'dst thank me but a little for my councell:
And yet I'le promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich: but th'art too much my friend,
And I'le not wish thee to her.
Pet. Signior Hortentio, 'twixt such friends as we,
Few words suffice: and therefore, if thou know
One riche nough to be Petruchio's wife:
(As wealth is burthen of my wooing dance)
Be she as foul as was Florentius Love,
As old as Sibell, as curst and shrew'd
As Socrates Zantippe, or a worse:
She moves me not, or not removes at least
Affections edge in time. Were she as rough
As are the swelling Adriatick seas.
I come to wive it wealthily in Padua:
If wealthily, then happily in Padua.
Gru. Nay look you sir, he tells you flatly what his minde is: why give him Gold enough, and marry him to a Puppet or an Aglet babie, or an old trot with ne're a tooth in her head, though she have as many diseases as two and fifty horses. Why nothing comes amiss, so money comes withall.
Hor. Petruchio, since we are stept thus far in,
I will continue that I broach'd in jest,
I can Petruchio help thee to a wife
With wealth enough, and young and beautious.
Brought up as best becomes a Gentlewoman.
Her onely fault, and that is fault enough,
Is, that she is intollerable curst,
And shrew'd, and froward, so beyond all measure,
That were my state far worser then it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of Gold.
Pet. Hortentio peace: thou know'st not golds effect,
Tell me her fathers name, and 'tis enough:
For I will boord her, though she chide as loud
As thunder, when the clouds in Autumne crack.
Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous Gentleman,
Her name is Katherina Minola,
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.
Pet. I know her father, though I know not her,
And he knew my deceased father well:
I will not sleep Hortentio till I see her,
And therefore let me be thus bold with you,
To give you over at this first encounter,
Unless you will accompany me thither.
Gru. I pray you sir let him go while the humour lasts. A my word and she knew him as well as I do, she would think scolding would doe little good upon him. She may perhaps call him half a score Knaves, or so: Why that's nothing; and he begin once, he'll raile in his rope tricks. I'le tell you what sir, and she stand him but a little, he will throw a figure in her face, and so disfigure her with it, that she shall have no more eyes to see withall then a Cat: you know him not sir.
Hir. Tarry Petruchio, I must go with thee,
For in Baptista's keep my treasure is:
He hath the Jewell of my life in hold,
His youngest daughter, beautifull Bianca,
And her with-holds he from me. Other more
Suters to her, and rivals in my Love:
Supposing it a thing impossible,
For those defects I have before rehearst,
That ever Katherine will be woo'd:
Therefore this order hath Baptista tane,
That none shall have access unto Bianca,
Till Katherine the Curst, have got a husband.
Gru. Katherine the curst,
A title for a maid, of all titles the worst.
Hor. Now shall my friend Petruchio do me grace,
And offer me disguis'd in sober robes,
To old Baptista as a schoole-master.
Well seen in Musick, to instruct Bianca,
That so I may by this device at least
Have leave and leisure to make love to her,
And unsuspected court her by her self.

Enter Gremio and Lucentio disguised

Gru. Here's no knavery. See, to beguile the old folks how the young folks lay their heads together. Maister, maister, look about you: Who goes there? ha.
Hor. Peace Grumio, it is the rivall of my Love. Petruchio stand by a while.
Gru. A proper stripling, and an amorous.
Gre. O very well, I have perus'd the note.
Heark you sir, I'le have them very fairly bound,
All books of Love, see that at any hand,
And see you read no other Lectures to her:
You understand me. over and beside
Signior Baptista's Liberality
I'le mend it with a Largess. Take your paper too,
And let me have them very well perfum'd,
For she is sweeter then perfume it self
To whom they go to: what will you read to her?
Luc. What ere I read to her, I'le plead for you,
As for my Patron, stand you so assur'd;
As firmly as your self were still in place,
Yea and perhaps with more successfull words
Then you; unless you were a scholler sir.
Gre. Oh this learning, what a thing it is.
Gru. Oh this Woodcock, what an Asse it is.
Pet. Peace sirra.
Hor. Gru. mum: God save you signior Gremio.
Gre. And you are well met, Signior Hortentio.
Trow you whither I am going? To Baptista Minola,
I promis'd to enquire carefully
About a schoolemaster for the fair Bianca,
And by good fortune I have lighted well
On this young man: For learning and behaviour
Fit for her turn, well read in Poetry
And other books, good ones, I warrant ye.
Hor. 'Tis well: and I have met a Gentleman
Hath promis't me to help one to another,
A fine Musitian to instruct our Mistris,
So shall I no whit be behinde in duty
To fair Bianca, so beloved of me.
Gre. Beloved of me, and that my deeds shall prove.
Gru. And that his bags shall prove.
Hor. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our love,
Listen to me, and if you speak me fair,
I'le tell you news indifferent good for either.
Here is a Gentleman whom by chance I met

Upon agreement from us to his liking,
Will undertake to wooe curst Katerine,
Yea and to marry her, if her dowry please,
Gre. So said, so done; is well:
Hortentio, have you told him all her faults?
Pet. I know she is an irksome brawling scold:
If that be all, Masters, I hear no harm.
Gre. No, sai'st me so, friend? What Countreyman?
Pet. Born in Verona, old Butonio's son:
My father dead, my fortune lives for me,
And I do hope, good dayes and long, to see.
Gre. Oh sir, such a life with such a wife, were strange:
But if you have a stomack, to't a Gods name,
You shall have me assisting you in all.
But will you wooe this Wilde-cat?
Pet. Will I live?
Gru. Will he wooe her? I: or I'le hang her,
Pet. Why came I hither, but to that intent?
Think you a little dinne can daunt mine ears?
Have I not in my time heard Lions roar?
Have I not heard the Sea, puft up with winds,
Rage like an angry Boare, chafed with sweat?
Have I not heard great Ordinance in the field?
And heaven's Artillry thunder in the skies?
Have I not in a pitched battle heard
Loud larums, neighing steeds, and trumpets clangue?
And do you tell me of a womans tongue?
That gives not half so great a blow to hear,
As will a Chesse-nut in a Farmers fire.
Tush, tush, fear boyes with bugs.
Gru. For he fears none.
Gre. Hortentio hark:
This Gentleman is happily arriv'd,
My minde presumes for his own good, and yours.
Hor. I promis'd we would be Contributors,
And bear his charge of wooing whatsoever.
Gre. And so we will, provided that he win her.
Gru. I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio brave, and Biondello.

Tra. Gentlemen God save you. If I may be bold,
Tell me I beseech you, which is the readiest way
To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?
Bio. He that has the two fair daughters: is't he you mean?
Tra. Even he Biondello.
Gre. Hark you sir, you mean not her to------
Tra. Perhaps him, and her, what have you to do?
Pet. Not her that chides sir, at any hand I pray.
Tra. I love no chiders sir: Biondello, let's away.
Luc. Well begun Tranio.
Hor. Sir, a word ere you go:
Are you a sutor to the Maid you talk of, yea or no?
Tra. And if I be, Sir, is it any offence?
Gre. No: if without more words you will get you hence.
Tra. Why sir, I pray are not the streets as free
For me, as for you?
Gre. But so is not shee.
Tra. For what reason I beseech you.
Gre. For this reason if you'l know,
That she's the choice love of Signior Gremio.
Hor. That she's the chosen of Signior Hortentio.
Tra. Softly my Masters: If you be Gentlemen
Do me this right: hear me with patience.
Baptista is a noble Gentleman,
To whom my Father is not all unknown,
And were his daughter fairer then she is,
She may more sutors have, and me for one.
Fair Ladaes daughter had a thousand wooers,
Then well may one more fair Bianca have,
And so she shall. Lucentio shall make one,
Though Paris came, in hope to speed alone.
Gre. What, this Gentleman will out-talk us all.
Lu. Sir, give him head, I know he'll prove a Jade.
Pet. Hortentio, to what end are all these words?
Hor. Sir, let me be so bold, as to ask you,
Did you yet ever see Baptista's daughter?
Tra. No sir, but hear I do that he hath two:
The one, as famous for a scolding tongue,
As is the other, for beauteous modesty.
Pet. Sir, sir, the first's for me, let her go by.
Gre. Yea, leave that labour to great Hercules,
And let it be more then Alcides twelve.
Pet. Sir, understand you this of me (insooth)
The youngest daughter, whom you hearken for,
Her father keeps from all access of sutors,
And will not promise her to any man,
Untill the elder sister first be wed.
The younger then is free, and not before.
Tra. If it be so sir, that you are the man
Must stead us all, and me amongst the rest:
And if you break the ice, and do this seek,
Atchieve the elder: set the younger free,
For our access, whose hap shall be to have her,
Will not so graceless be, to be ingrate.
Hor. Sir you say well, and well you do conceive,
And since do you profess to be a sutor,
You must as we do, gratifie this Gentleman,
To whom we all rest generally beholding.
Tra. Sir, I shall not be slack, in signe wherof,
Please ye we may contrive this afternoon,
And quaff carowses to our Mistress health,
And do as adversaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eat and drink as friends.
Gru. Bion. O excellent motion: fellowes let's be gone.
Hor. The motion's good indeed, and be it so,
Petruchio, I shall be your Benvenuto. Exeunt.

Enter Katerine and Bianca.

Bian. Good sister wrong me not, nor wrong your self,
To make a bondmaid and a slave of me;
That I disdain: but for these other goods,
Unbind my hands, I'le pull them off my self,
Yea all my raiment, to my petticoat,
Or what you will command me, will I do,
So well I know my duty to my elders.
Kat. Of all thy sutors here I charge thee tell whom thou lov'st best: see thou dissemble not.
Bian. Believe me sister, of all the men alive,
I never yet beheld that speciall face,
Which I could fancie, more then any other.
Kat. Minion thou lyest, Is't not Hortentio?
Bian. If you affect him sister, here I swear
I'le plead for you my self, but you shall have him.
Kat. Oh then belike you fancy riches more,
You will have Gremio to keep you fair.
Bian. Is it for him you envy me so?
Nay then you jest, and now I well perceive
You have but jested with me all this while;
I prethee, sister Kate, untie my hands.
Kat. If that be jest, then all the rest was so. Strikes her.

Enter

Enter Baptista.

Bap. Why how now Dame, whence growes this insolence?
Bianca stand aside, poor girle she weeps:
Go ply thy Needle, meddle not with her.
For shame thou Hilding of a develish spirit,
Why do'st thou wrong her, that did ne're wrong thee?
When did she cross thee with a bitter word?
Kat. Her silence flouts me, and I'le be reveng'd,
Flies after Bianca.
Bap. What in my sight? Bianca get thee in. Exit
Kat. What will you not suffer me: Nay I see
She is your treasure, she must have a husband,
I must dance bare-foot on her wedding day,
And for your love to her, lead Apes in hell.
Talk not to me, I will go sit and weep,
Till I can finde occasion of revenge.
Bap. Was ever Gentleman thus griev'd as I?
But who comes here.

Enter Gremio, Lucentio, in the habit of a mean man, Petruchio with Tranio, with his boy bearing a Lute and Books.

Gre. Good morrow neighbour Baptista.
Bap. Good morrow neighbour Gremio: God save you Gentlemen.
Pet. And you good sir: pray have you not a daughter, call'd Katerina, fair and vertuous?
Bap. I have a daughter sir, call'd Katerina,
Gre. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.
Pet. You wrong me signior Gremio, give me leave.
I am a Gentleman of Verona sir,
That hearing of her beauty, and her wit,
Her affability and bashfull modesty:
Her, wondrous qualities, and mild behaviour,
Am bold to shew my self a forward guest
Within your house, to make mine eye the witness
Of that report, which I so oft have heard,
And for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do present you with a man of mine
Cunning in Musick, and the Mathematicks,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof I know she is not ignorant:
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong,
His name is Licio, born in Mantua.
Bap. Y'are welcome sir, and he for your good sake.
But for my daughter Katerina, this I know,
She is not for your turn, the more's my grief.
Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her.
Or else you like not of my company.
Bap. Mistake me not, I speak but what I finde,
Whence are you sir? What may I call your name.
Pet. Petruchio is my name, Antonio's son,
A man well known throughout all Italy.
Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.
Gre. Saving your tale Petruchio, I pray let us that are poor petitioners speak too? Baccare, you are marvailous forward.
Pet. Oh, Pardon me signior Gremio, I would fain be doing.
Gre. I doubt it not sir. But you will curse
Your wooing neighbours: this is a gift
Very gratefull, I am sure of it, to expres
The like kindnes my self, that have been
More kindly beholding to you then any:
Free leave give unto this young Scholler, that hath
Been long studying at Rhemes, as cunning
In Greek, Latine, and other Languages,
As the other in Musick and Mathematicks:
His name is Cambio: pray accept his service.
Bap. A thousand thanks signior Gremio:
Welcome good Cambio. But gentle sir,
Me thinks you walk like a stranger,
May I be so bold, to know the cause of your coming?
Tra. Pardon me, sir, the boldnes is mine own,
That being a stranger in this City here,
Do make my self a suitor to your daughter,
Unto Bianca, fair and vertuous:
Nor is your firm resolve unknown to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This liberty is all that I requeste,
That upon knowledge of my parentage,
I may have welcome 'mong'st the rest that wooe,
And free acces and favour as the rest.
And toward the education of your daughters,
I here bestow a simple instrument,
And this small packet of Greek and Latine books,
If you accept them, then their worth is great:
Bap. Lucentio is your name: of whence I pray.
Tra. Of Pisa sir, son to Vinsentio.
Bap. A mighty man of Pisa by report,
I know him well: you are very welcome sir:
Take you the Lute, and you the set of books,
You shall go see your pupils presently.
Holla, within.

Enter a Servant.

Sirrah, lead these Gentlemen
To my two daughters, and then tell them both
These are their Tutors, bid them use them well,
We will go walk a little in the Orchard,
And then to dinner: you are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to think your selves.
Pet. Signior Baptista, my business asketh haste,
And every day I cannot come to wooe,
You know my father well, and in him me,
Left solie heir to all his Lands and goods,
Which I have bettered rather then decreast,
Then tell me, if I get your daughters love,
What dowry shall I have with her to wife.
Bap. After my death, the one halfe of my Lands,
And in possession twenty thousand Crowns.
Pet. And for that dowry, I'le assure her of
Her widdow-hood, be it that she survive me,
In all my Lands and Leases whatsoever,
Let specialities be therefore drawn between us,
That covenants may be kept on either hand.
Bap. I, when the special thing is well obtain'd,
That is, her love: for that is all in all.
Pet. Why that is nothing: for I tell you father,
I am as peremptory as she proud minded:
And where two raging fires meet together
They do consume the thing that feeds their furie.
Though little fire growes great with little winde,
Yet extream gusts will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yields to me,
For I am rough, and wooe not like a babe.
Bap. Well maist thou wooe, and happy be thy speed:
But be thou arm'd for some unhappy words.
Pet. I, to the proofe, as Mountains are for windes,
That shake not, though they blow perpetually.

Enter Hortentio with his head broke.

Bap.

Bap. How now my friend, why doſt thou look ſo pale?
Hor. For fear, I promiſe you, If I look pale.
Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good Muſitian?
Hor. I think ſhe'll ſooner prove a ſouldier,
Iron may hold with her, but never Lutes.
Bap. Why then thou can'ſt not break her to the Lute?
Hor. Why no, for ſhe hath broke the Lute to me:
I did but tell her ſhe miſtook her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering,
When (with a moiſt impatient develiſh ſpirit)
Frets call you theſe? (quoth ſhe) I'le fume with them:
And with that word ſhe ſtruck me on the head,
And thorugh the inſtrument my pate made way,
And there I ſtood amazed for a while,
As on a Pillory, looking through the Lute,
While ſhe did call me Raſcall, Fidler,
And twangling Jack, with twenty ſuch vilde tearms,
As had ſhe ſtudied to miſuſe me ſo.
Pet. Now by the world, it is a luſty Wench,
I love her ten times more then ere I did,
Oh how I long to have ſome chat with her.
Bap. Well go with me, and be not ſo diſcomfited.
Proceed in practiſe with my younger daughter,
She's apt to learn, and thankfull for good turns:
Signior Petruchio; will you go with us,
Or ſhall I ſend my daughter Kate to you.
Exit. Manet Petruchio.
Pet. I pray you do. I attend her here.
And woo her with ſome ſpirit when ſhe comes.
Say that ſhe raile, why then I'le tell her plain,
She ſings as ſweetly as a Nightingale:
Say that ſhe frown, I'le ſay ſhe looks as clear
As morning Roſes newly waſh'd with dew:
Say ſhe be mute, and will not ſpeak a word,
Then I'le commend her volubility,
And ſay ſhe uttereth piercing eloquence:
If ſhe do bid me pack, I'le give her thanks,
As though ſhe bid me ſtay by her a week:
If ſhe deny to wed, I'le crave the day
When I ſhall ask the banes, and when be married.
But here ſhe comes, and now Petruchio ſpeak.

Enter Katerina.

Good morrow Kate, for that's your name I hear.
Kat. Well have you heard, but ſomething hard of hearing.
They call me Katerine, that do talk of me.
Pet. You lye in faith, for you are call'd plain Kate,
And bony Kate, and ſometimes Kate the curſt:
But Kate, the prettieſt Kate in Chriſtendome,
Kate of Kate-hall, my ſuper-dainty Kate,
For dainties are all Kates, and therefore Kate
Take this of me, Kate of my conſolation,
Hearing thy mildneſs prais'd in every Town,
Thy vertues ſpoke of, and thy beauty ſounded,
Yet not ſo deeply as to thee belongs,
My ſelf am mov'd to woo thee for my wife.
Kat. Mov'd, in good time, let him that mov'd you hither.
Remove you hence: I knew you at the firſt
You were a moveable.
Pet. Why, what's a moveable?
Kat. A joyn'd ſtoole.
Pet. Thou haſt hit it: come ſit on me.
Kat. Aſſes are made to bear, and ſo are you.
Pet. Women are made to bear, and ſo are you.
Kat. No ſuch Jade ſir as you, if me you mean.
Pet. Alas good Kate, I will not burthen thee,
For knowing thee to be but young and light.
Kat. Too light for ſuch a ſwain as you to catch,
And yet as heavy as my waight ſhould be.
Pet. Should be, ſhould: buzze.
Kat. Well tane, and like a buzzard.
Pet. Oh ſlow-wing'd Turtle, ſhall a buzzard take thee?
Kat. I, for a Turtle, as he takes a buzzard.
Pet. Come, come you Waſpe, I'faith you are too angry
Kat. If I be waſpiſh, 'beſt beware my ſting.
Pet. My remedy is then to pluck it out.
Kat. I, If the foole could finde it where it lies.
Pet. Who knowes not where a Waſpe does wear his ſting? in his taile,
Kat. In his tongue?
Pet. Whoſe tongue.
Kat. Yours if you talk of tales, and ſo fare well.
Pet. What with my tongue in your taile.
Nay, come again, good Kate, I am a Gentleman,
Kat. That I'le trie. She ſtrikes him.
Pet. I ſwear I'le cuffe you, if you ſtrike again.
Kat. So may you looſe your armes,
If you ſtrike me, you are no Gentleman,
And if no gentleman, why then no armes.
Pet. A Herald Kate? Oh put me in thy books.
Kat. What is your Creſt, a Coxcombe?
Pet. A combleſſe Cock, ſo Kate will be my Hen.
Kat. No Cock of mine, you crow too like a craven.
Pet. Nay come Kate; come; you muſt not look ſo ſowre.
Kat. It is my faſhion when I ſee a Crab.
Pet. Why here's no crab, and therefore look not ſowre,
Kat. There is, there is.
Pet. Then ſhew it me.
Kat. Had I a glaſs, I would.
Pet. What, you mean my face.
Kat. Well aim'd of ſuch a young one.
Pet. Now by S. George I am too young for you.
Kat. Yet you are wither'd.
Pet. 'Tis with cares.
Kat. I care not.
Pet. Nay hear you Kate. Inſooth you ſcape not ſo.
Kat. I chafe you if I tarry; Let me go.
Pet. No, not a whit, I finde you paſſing gentle:
'Twas told me you were rough, and coy, and ſullen,
And now I finde report a very liar,
For thou art pleaſant, gameſome, paſſing courteous,
But ſlow in ſpeech, yet ſweet as ſpring time flowers.
Thou can'ſt not frown, thou can'ſt not look a ſcance,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will,
Nor haſt thou pleaſure to be croſs in talk:
But thou with mildneſs entertain'ſt thy wooers,
With gentle conference, ſoft, and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limp?
Oh ſland'rous world: Kate like the hazle twig
Is ſtraight, and ſlender, and as brown in hue
As hazle nuts, and ſweeter then the kernels:
Oh let me ſee thee walk: thou doſt not halt.
Kat. Go foole, and whom thou keep'ſt command.
Pet. Did ever Dian ſo become a Grove,
As Kate this chamber with her princely gate;
O be thou Dian, and let her be Kate,

And then let Kate be chaſte, and Dian ſportfull.
Kate. Where did you ſtudy all this goodly ſpeech?
Pet. It is extempore, from my mother wit.
Kate. A witty mother, witleſſe elſe her ſon.
Pet. Am I not wiſe?
Kate. Yes, keep you warme.
Pet. Marry ſo I mean ſweet Katherine in thy bed:
And therefore ſetting all this chat aſide,
Thus in plain termes: your father hath conſented
That you ſhall be my wife: your dowry greed on,
And will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now Kate, I am a husband for your turn,
For by this light, whereby I ſee thy beauty,
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,
Thou muſt be married to no man but me,

Enter Baptiſta, Gremio, Trayno.

For I am he am born to tame you Kate,
And bring you from a wild Kat to a Kate
Conformable as other houſhold Kates:
Here comes your father, never make deniall,
I muſt, and will have Katherine to my wife. (daughter?
Bap. Now Signior Petruchio, how ſpeed you with my
Pet. How but well ſir? how but well?
It were impoſſible I ſhould ſpeed amiſſe. (dumps?
Bap. Why how now daughter Katherine, in your
Kat. Call you me daughter? now I promiſe you
You have ſhew'd a tender fatherly regard,
To wiſh me wed to one halfe Lunatick,
A mad-cap ruffian, and a ſwearing Jack,
That thinks with oathes to face the matter out.
Pet. Father, 'tis thus, your ſelf and all the world
That talk'd of her, have talk'd am iſſe of her:
If ſhe be curſt, it is for policy,
For ſhe's not froward, but modeſt as the Dove,
She is not hot, but temperate as the morn;
For patience ſhe will prove a ſecond Griſſel,
And Roman Lucrece for her chaſtity:
And to conclude, we have greed ſo well together,
That upon Sunday is the wedding day.
Kat. I'le ſee thee hang'd on Sunday firſt. (firſt.
Gre. Hark Petruchio, ſhe ſayes ſhe'll ſee thee hang'd
Tra. Is this your ſpeeding? nay then good night our part.
Pet. Be patient gentlemen, I chooſe her for my ſelf,
If ſhe and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?
'Tis bargain'd 'twixt us twain being alone,
That ſhe ſhall ſtill be curſt in company.
I tell you 'tis incredible to believe
How much ſhe loves me: oh the kindeſt Kate,
She hung about my neck, and kiſſe on kiſſe
She vi'd ſo faſt, proteſting oath on oath,
That in a twink ſhe won me to her love.
Oh you are novices, 'tis a world to ſee
How tame when men and women are alone,
A meacock wretch can make the curſteſt ſhrew:
Give me thy hand Kate, I will unto Venice
To buy apparell 'gainſt the wedding day;
Provide the feaſt father, and bid the gueſts,
I will be ſure my Katherine ſhall be fine.
Bap. I know not what to ſay, but give me your hands,
God ſend you joy, Petruchio, 'tis a match.
Gre. Tra. Amen ſay we, we will be witneſſes.
Pet. Father, and Wife, and Gentlemen adieu,
I will to Venice, Sunday comes apace,
We will have rings, and things, and fine aray,
And kiſſe me Kate, we will be married a Sunday.
Exit Petruchio, and Katherine.
Gre. Was ever match clapt up ſo ſuddenly?
Bap. Faith Gentlemen now I play a merchants part,
And venture madly on a deſperate Mart.
Tra. 'Twas a commodity lay fretting by you,
'Twill bring you gain, or periſh on the ſeas.
Bap. The gain I ſeek, is quiet me the match.
Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch:
But now Baptiſta, to your younger daughter,
Now is the day we long have looked for,
I am your neighbour, and was ſuiter firſt.
Tra. And I am one that love Bianca more
Then words can witneſſe, or your thoughts can gueſſe,
Gre. Youngling, thou canſt not love ſo dear as I;
Tra. Gray-beard thy love doth freeze.
Gre. But thine doth fry,
Skipper ſtand back, 'tis age that nouriſheth.
Tra. But youth in Ladies eyes that flouriſheth.
Bap. Content you gentlemen, I will compound this
'Tis deeds muſt win the prize, and he of both (ſtrife,
That can aſſure my daughter greateſt dower,
Shall have Bianca's love.
Say Signior Gremio, what can you aſſure her?
Gre. Firſt, as you know, my houſe within the City
Is richly furniſhed with plate and gold,
Baſons and Ewers to lave her dainty hands:
My Hangings all of Tirian Tapeſtry:
In Ivory Coffers I have ſtuft my Crowns:
In Cypreſſe Cheſts my Arras Counterpoints;
Coſtly apparell, Tents, and Canopies,
Fine Linnen. Turky Cuſhions boſt with Pearl,
Vallens of Venice Gold, in needle-work:
Pewter and Braſſe, and all things that belongs
To houſe or houſe-keeping: then at my Farme
I have a hundred milch-kine to the Paile,
Six ſcore fat Oxen ſtanding in my Stalls;
And all things anſwerable to this portion.
My ſelf am ſtruck in yeares I muſt confeſſe,
And if I die to morrow this is hers,
If whil'ſt I live ſhe will be onely mine.
Tra. That onely came well in: ſir, liſt to me,
I am my Fathers Heir and onely Son,
If I may have your daughter to my Wife,
I'le leave her Houſes three or four as good
Within rich Piſa Walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua,
Beſides, two thouſand Duckets by the year
Of fruitfull Land, all which ſhall be her Joynter.
What, have I pincht you Signior Gremio?
Gre. Two thouſand Duckets by the year of Land,
My Land amounts not to ſo much in all:
That ſhe ſhall have, beſides an Argoſie
That now is lying in Marſellis roade:
What, have I choak't you with an Argoſie?
Tra. Gremio, 'Tis known my Father hath no leſſe
Then three great Argoſies, beſides two Galliaſſes
And twelve tite Gallies, theſe I will aſſure her,
And twice as much what e're thou offer'ſt next.
Gre. Nay, I have offer'd all, I have no more,
And ſhe can have no more then all I have,
If you like me, ſhe ſhall have me and mine.
Tra. Why then the Maid is mine from all the world
By your firm promiſe, Gremio is out-vied.
Bap. I muſt confeſſe your offer is the beſt,
And let your Father make her the aſſurance,

She is your own, else you must pardon me:
If you should die before him, where's her dower?
Tra. That's but a cavill: he is old, I young.
Gre. And may not young men die as well as old?
Bap. Well gentlemen, I am thus resolv'd,
On sunday next, you know
My daughter Katherine is to be married:
Now on the Sunday following, shall Bianca
Be Bride to you, if you make this assurance:
If not, to Signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thank you both. Exit.
Gre. Adieu good neighbour: now I fear thee not:
Sirra, young Gamester, your Father were a fool
To give thee all, and in his waining age
Set foot under thy table: tut, a toy,
An old Italian fox is not so kind my boy. Exit.
Tra. A vengeance on your crafty withered hide,
Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten:
'Tis in my head to doe my master good:
I see no reason but suppos'd Lucentio
Must get a father, call'd suppos'd Vincentio,
And that's a wonder: fathers commonly
Doe get their children: but in this case of wooing,
A child shall get a sire, if I fail not of my cunning. Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Lucentio, Hortentio, and Bianca.

Luc. Fidler forbear, you grow too forward sir,
Have you so soon forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katherine welcom'd you withall?
Hort. But wrangling pedant, this is
The patroness of heavenly harmony:
That give me leave to have prerogative,
And when in Musick we have spent an hour,
Your Lecture shall have leisure for as much.
Luc. Preposterous Asse that never read so far,
To know the cause why musick was ordain'd:
Was it not to refresh the mind of man
After his studies, or his usuall pain?
Then give me leave to read Philosophy,
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.
Hort. Sirra, I will not bear these braves of thine.
Bian. Why gentlemen, you doe me double wrong,
To strive for that which resteth in my choyce:
I am no breeching schollar in the schooles,
I'le not be tied to hour, nor pointed times,
But learn my Lessons as I please my selfe,
And to cut off all strife: here sit we down,
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles,
His Lecture will be done e're you have tun'd.
Hort. You'll leave his Lecture when I am in tune?
Luc. That will be never, tune your instrument.
Bian. Where left we last?
Luc. Here Madam: Hic ibat Simois, hic est Sigeia tellus, hic steterat Priami regia celsa senis.
Bian. Conster them.
Luc. Hic Ibat, as I told you before, Simois, I am Lucentio, hic est, son unto Vincentio of Pisa, Sigeia tellus, disguised thus to get your love, hic steterat, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing, Priami, is my man Tranio, regia, bearing my port, celsa senis, that we might beguile the old Pantaloune.
Hort. Madam, my instruments 'in tune.
Bian. Let's hear, oh fie, the treble jarres.
Luc. Spit in the hole man, and tune againe.
Bian. Now let me see if I can conster it. Hic that Simois, I know you not, hic est Sigeia tellus, I trust you not hic steterat priami, take heed he hear us not, regia, presume not, celsa senis, despair not.
Hort. Madam, 'tis now in tune.
Luc. All but the base.
Hort. The base is right, 'tis the base knave that jars.
Luc. How fiery and froward our Pedant is,
Now for my life that knave doth court my love,
Pedascule, I'le watch you better yet:
In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.
Bian. Mistrust it not, for sure Æacides
Was Ajax, call'd so from his Grandfather.
Hort. I must believe my Master, else I promise you,
I should be arguing still upon that doubt,
But let it rest, now Litio to you:
Good master take it not unkindly pray
That I have been thus pleasant with you both.
Bian. You may go walk, and give me leave a while,
My Lessons make not musick in three parts.
Luc. Are you so formall sir, well I must wait
And watch withall, for but I be deceiv'd,
Our fine Musician groweth amorous.
Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learn the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of Art,
To teach you gamoth in a briefer sort,
More pleasant, pithy, and effectuall,
Then hath been taught by any of my trade,
And there it is in writing fairly drawn.
Bian. Why, I am past my gamoth long ago.
Hor. Yet read the gamoth of Hortensio.
Bion. Gamoth I am, the ground of all accord:
Are, to plead Hortensio's passion:
Beeme, Bianca take him for thy Lord
Cfaut, that loves me with all affection:
D sol re, one Cliffe, two notes have I,
Elams, show pitty or I die.
Call you this gamoth? tut I like it not,
Old fashions please me best, I am not so nice
To change true rules for old inventions.

Enter a Messenger.

Nick. Mistresse, your Father prayes you leave your books,
And help to dresse your sisters Chamber up,
You know to morrow is the wedding day.
Bian. Farewell sweet Masters both, I must be gone.
Luc. Faith Mistresse then I have no cause to stay.
Hor. But I have cause to pry into this pedant,
Me thinks he looks as though he were in love:
Yet if thoughts, Bianca, be so humble
To cast thy wandring eyes on every stale:
Seize thee that List, if once I find thee ranging,
Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing. Exit.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katherine, Bianca, and others, attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio, this the pointed day
That Katherine and Petruchio should be married,
And yet we hear not of our Son in Law:
What will be said, what mockery will it be?
To want the Bride-groom when the Priest attends
To speak the ceremoniall rites of marriage?
What sayes Lucentio to this shame of ours?

No

Kate. No shame but mine, I must forsooth be forc't
To give my hand oppos'd against my heart
Unto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleen,
Who woo'd in haste, and meanes to wed at leisure:
I told you I, he was a frantick fool,
Hiding his bitter jests in blunt behaviour,
And to be noted for a merry man;
He'll woo a thousand, point the day of marriage,
Make friends, invite, yes and proclaim the banes,
Yet never meanes to wed where he hath woo'd:
Now must the world point at poor Katherine,
And say, loe, there is mad Petruchio's wife,
If it would please him come and marry her.

Tra. Patience good Katherine and Baptista too,
Upon my life Petruchio meanes but well,
What ever fortune stayes him from his word,
Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise,
Though he be merry, yet withall he's honest.

Kate. Would Katherine had never seen him though.
Exit weeping.

Bap. Go girl, I cannot blame thee now to weep,
For such an injury would vex a saint,
Much more a shrew of thy impatient humour.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Master, master, newes, and such newes as you never heard of.

Bap. Is it new and old too? how may that be?

Bio. Why, is it not newes to hear of Petruchio's comming?

Bap. Is he come? (ning?

Bio. Why no sir.

Bap. What then?

Bio. He is comming.

Bap. When will he be here?

Bio. When he stands where I am, and sees you there.

Tra. But say, what to thy old newes?

Bio. Why Petruchio is comming, in a new hat and an old jerkin, a pair of old breeches thrice turn'd; a paire of boots that have been candle-cases, one buckled, another lac'd: an old rusty sword tane out of the Town Armory, with a broken hilt, and chapelesse: with two broken points: his horse hip'd with an old mothy saddle, the stirrops of no kindred: beside possest with the glanders, and like to mose in the chine, troubled with the Lampasse, infected with the fashions, full of Windegalls, sped with Spavins, raied with the Yellowes, past cure of the Fives, stark spoyl'd with the Staggers, begnawn with the Bots, Waid in the back, and shoulder-shotten, neer leg'd before, and with a halfe checkt Bit, and a headstall of sheeps leather, which being restrain'd to keep him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots: one girth six times piec'd, and a womans Crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name, fairly set down in studs, and here and there piec'd with packthred.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Bio. Oh sir, his Lacky, for all the world Caparison'd like the horse: with a linnen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gartred with a red and blew list; an old hat, and the humour of forty fancies prickt up in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparell, and not like a Christian foot-boy, or gentlemans Lackey.

Tra. 'Tis some odde humor pricks him to this fashion,
Yet oftentimes he goes but mean apparel'd.

Bap. I am glad he's come, howsoever he comes.

Bion. Why sir, he comes not.

Bap. Did'st thou not say he comes?

Bion. Who, that that Petruchio came?

Bap. I, that Petruchio came.

Bion. No sir, I say his horse comes with him on his back.

Bap. Why that's all one.

Bion. Nay by S. Jamy, I hold you a penny, a horse and a man is more then one, and yet not many.

Enter Petruchio, and Grumio.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants, who's at home?

Bap. You are welcome sir.

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Tra. Not so well aparell'd as I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better I should rush in thus:
But where is Kate? where is my lovely Bride?
How does my father? gentles methinks you frown,
And wherefore gaze this goodly company,
As if they saw some wondrous monument,
Some Comet, or some unusuall prodig?

Bap. Why sir, you know this is your wedding day:
First were we sad, fearing you would not come,
Now sadder that you come unprovided:
Fie, doff this habit, shame to your estate,
An eye-sore to our solemne festivall.

Tra. And tell us what occasion of import
Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife,
And sent you hither so unlike your self?

Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to hear,
Sufficeth I am come to keep my word,
Though in some part enforced to digresse,
Which at more leisure I will so excuse,
As you shall well be satisfied withall.
But where is Kate? I stay too long from her,
The morning wears, 'tis time we were at Church.

Tra. See not your Bride in these unreverent robes,
Go to my chamber, put on clothes of mine.

Pet. Not I, believe me, thus I'le visit her.

Bap. But thus I trust you will not marry her.

Pet. Good sooth even thus: therefore ha done with words.
To me she's married, not unto my clothes:
Could I repair what she will wear in me,
As I could change these poor accoutrements,
'Twere well for Kate, and better for my self.
But what a foole am I to chat with you,
When I should bid good morrow to my Bride?
And seal the title with a lovely kisse. Exit.

Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire,
We will perswade him be it possible,
To put on better ere he go to Church.

Bap. I'le after him, and see the event of this. Exit.

Tra. But sir, Love concerneth us to adde
Her fathers liking, which to bring to passe
As before I imparted to your worship,
I am to get a man what e're he be,
It skills not much, we'll fit him to our turn,
And he shall be Vincentio of Pisa,
And make assurance here in Padua
Of greater summes then I have promised,
So shall you quietly enjoy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolemaster
Doth watch Biancaes steps so narrowly:
'Twere good me thinks to steal our marriage,
Which once perform'd, let all the world say no,
I'le keep mine own despight of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we mean to look into,

And watch our vantage in this busineſſe,
We'll over-reach the gray-beard Gremio,
The narrow prying father Minola,
The quaint Muſician, amorous Litio,
All for my maſter's ſake Lucentio.

Enter Gremio.

Signior Gremio, came you from the Church?

Gre. As willingly as e're I came from ſchoole.

Tra. And is the Bride & Bride-groom comming home?

Gre. A Bridegroom ſay you? 'tis a groom indeed,
A grumbling groom, and that the girl ſhall find.

Tra. Curſter then ſhe, why 'tis impoſſible.

Gre. Why he's a devil, a devil, a very fiend.

Tra. Why ſhe's a devil, a devil, the devils damme.

Gre. Tut, ſhe's a Lamb, a Dove, a fool to him:
I'le tell you ſir Lucentio: when the Prieſt
Should aske if Katherine ſhould be his wife,
I, by gogs woons quoth he, and ſwore ſo loud,
That all amaz'd the Prieſt let fall the book,
And as he ſtoop'd again to take it up,
This mad-brain'd bride-groom took him ſuch a cuffe,
That down fell Prieſt and book, and book and Prieſt,
Now take them up (quoth he) if any liſt.

Tra. What ſaid the Wench when he roſe up again?

Gre. Trembled and ſhook: for why, he ſtamp'd and ſwore,
As if the Vicar meant to cozen him:
But after many ceremonies done,
He calls for wine, a health quoth he, as if
He had been aboard carowzing to his Mates
After a ſtorme; quaft off the Muſcadell,
And threw the Sops all in the Sexton's face:
Having no other reaſon, but that his beard
Grew thin and hungerly, and ſeem'd to aske
His ſops as he was drinking: This done, he took
The Bride about the neck, and kiſt her lips
With ſuch a clamorous ſmack, that at the parting
All the church did eccho: and I ſeeing this,
Came thence for very ſhame, and after me,
I know the rout is comming; ſuch a mad marriage
Never was before: hark, hark, I hear the minſtrels play

Muſick playes.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Bianca, Hortenſio, Baptiſta.

Pet. Gentlemen and friends, I thank you for your pains,
I know you think to dine with me to day,
And have prepar'd great ſtore of wedding cheer,
But ſo it is, my haſte doth call me hence,
And therefore here I mean to take my leave.

Bap. Is't poſſible you will away to night?

Pet. I muſt away to day before night come,
Make it no wonder: if you knew my buſineſſe,
You would intreat me rather go then ſtay:
And honeſt company, I thank you all,
That have beheld me give away my ſelf
To this moſt patient ſweet and virtuous wife,
Dine with my father, drink a health to me,
For I muſt hence, and farewell to you all.

Tra. Let us intreat you ſtay till after dinner.

Pet. It may not be.

Gre. Let me intreat you.

Pet. It cannot be.

Kat. Let me intreat you.

Pet. I am content.

Kat. Are you content to ſtay?

Pet. I am content you ſhall entreat me ſtay,
But yet not ſtay, entreat me how you can,

Kate. Now if you love me ſtay.

Pet. Grumio, my horſe.

Gru. I ſir, they be ready, the Oates have eaten the horſes.

Kate. Nay then,
Doe what thou canſt, I will not go to day,
No, nor to morrow, not till I pleaſe my ſelf,
The door is open ſir, there lies your way,
You may be jogging whiles your boots are green:
For me, I'le not be gone till I pleaſe my ſelf,
'Tis like you'll prove a jolly ſurly groom,
That take it on you at the firſt ſo roundly.

Pet. O Kate content thee, prethee be not angry.

Kat. I will be angry, what haſt thou to doe?
Father, be quiet, he ſhall ſtay my leiſure.

Gre. I marry ſir, now it begins to work.

Kat. Gentlemen, forward to the Bridall dinner.
I ſee a woman may be made a fool
If ſhe had not a ſpirit to reſiſt.

Pet. They ſhall go forward Kate at thy command,
Obey the Bride you that attend on her.
Go to the feaſt, revell and domineer;
Carowſe full meaſure to her maiden-head,
Be mad and merry, or go hang your ſelves:
But for my bonny Kate, ſhe muſt with me:
Nay, look not big, nor ſtamp, nor ſtare, nor fret,
I will be maſter of what is mine own,
She is my goods, my chattels, ſhe is my houſe,
My houſhold-ſtuffe, my field, my barn,
My horſe, my oxe, my aſſe, my any thing,
And here ſhe ſtands, touch her who ever dare,
I'le bring mine action on the proudeſt he,
That ſtops my way in Padua: Grumio
Draw forth thy weapon, we are beſet with thieves,
Reſcue thy Miſtreſſe if thou be a man:
Fear not ſweet wench, they ſhall not touch thee Kate,
I'le buckler thee againſt a Million, Exeunt P. Ka.

Bap. Nay, let them go, a couple of quiet ones. (ing.

Gre. Went they not quickly, I ſhould die with laugh-

Tra. Of all mad matches never was the like.

Luc. Miſtreſſe, what's your opinion of your ſiſter?

Bian. That being mad her ſelf, ſhe's madly mated.

Gre. I warrant him Petruchio is Kated.

Bap. Neighbours and friends, though Bride and Bride-
For to ſupply the places at the table, (groom wants
You know there wants no junkets at the feaſt: Lucentio, you ſhall ſupply the Bridegrooms place,
And let Bianca take her ſiſters room.

Tra. Shall ſweet Bianca practiſe how to bride it?

Bap. She ſhall Lucentio: come gentlemen let's go.

Enter Grumio. Exeunt.

Gru. Fie, fie on all tired Jades, on all mad Maſters, and all foul wayes: was ever man ſo beaten? was ever man ſo raide? was ever man ſo weary? I am ſent before to make a fire, and they are comming after to warme them: now were I not a little pot, and ſoon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roof of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I ſhould come by a fire to thaw me; but I with blowing the fire ſhall warme my ſelf: for conſidering the weather, a taller man then I will take cold: Holla, hoa Curtis.

Enter Curtis.

Curt. Who is it that calls ſo coldly?

Gru. A piece of Ice: if thou doubt it, thou maiſt ſlide from my ſhoulder to my heele, with no greater greater a run, but my head and my neck. A fire good Curtis.

Cur. Is my Master and his wife comming Grumio?

Gru. Oh I, Curtis, I; and therefore fire, fire, cast on no water.

Cur. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported.

Gru. She was good Curtis before this frost: but thou know'st winter tames man, woman, and beast: for it hath tam'd my old master, and my new mistresse, and my self, fellow Curtis.

Cur. Away you three-inch fool, I am no beast.

Gru. Am I but three inches? Why thy horn is a foot, and so long am I at the least. But wilt thou make a fire, or shall I complain on thee to our Mistresse, whose hand (she being now at hand) thou shalt soon feel, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office.

Cur. I prethee good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?

Gru. A cold world Curtis in every office but thine, and therefore fire: doe thy duty, and have thy duty, for my master and mistresse are almost frozen to death.

Cur. There's fire ready, and therefore good Grumio the newes.

Gru. Why Jack boy, ho boy, and as much newes as thou wilt.

Cur. Come, you are so full of conicatching.

Gru. Why therefore fire, for I have caught extreme cold. Where's the Cook, is supper ready, the house trimm'd, rushes strew'd, cobwebs swept, the serving-men in their new fustian, their white stockings, and every officer his wedding garment on? Be the Jacks fair within, the Jills fair without, Carpets laid, and every thing in order?

Cur. All ready: and therefore I pray thee what newes?

Gru. First know my horse is tired, my master and mistresse fall'n out.

Cur. How?

Gru. Out of their saddles into the dirt, and thereby hangs a tale.

Cur. Let's ha't good Grumio.

Gru. Lend thine ear.

Cur. Here.

Gru. There.

Cur. This 'tis to feele a tale, not to hear a tale.

Gru. And therefore 'tis cal'd a sensible tale: and this Cuffe was but to knock at your eare, and beseech listning: now I begin, Inprimis we came down a foule hill, my Master riding behinde my Mistres.

Cur. Both of one horse?

Gru. What's that to thee?

Cur. Why a horse.

Gru. Tell thou the tale: but hadst thou not crost me, thou shouldst have heard how her horse fell, and she under her horse: thou shouldst have heard in how miery a place, how she was bemoil'd, how he left her with the horse upon her, how he beat me because her horse stumbled, how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me: how he swore, how she pray'd, that never pray'd before: how I cri'd, how the horses ran away, how her bridle was burst: how I lost my crupper, with many things of worthy memory, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou return unexperienc'd to thy grave.

Cur. By this reckoning he is more shrew than she.

Gru. I, and that thou and the proudest of you all shall find when he comes home. But what talk I of this? Call forth Nathaniel, Joseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugersop and the rest: let their heads be slickly comb'd, their blew coats brush'd, and their garters of an indifferent knit, let them curtsie with their left legs, and not presume to touch a hair of my masters horse tail, till they kisse their hands. Are they all ready?

Cur. They are.

Gru. Call them forth.

Cur. Doe you hear ho? you must meet my master to countenance my mistresse.

Gru. Why she hath a face of her own.

Cur. Who knowes not that?

Gru. Thou it seems that calls for company to countenance her

Cur. I call them forth to credit her.

Enter four or five servingmen

Gru. Why she comes to borrow nothing of them.

Nat. Welcome home Grumio.

Phil. How now Grumio.

Jos. What Grumio.

Nick. Fellow Grumio.

Nath. How now old lad.

Gru. Welcome you: how now you: what you: fellow you: and thus much for greeting. Now my spruce companions, is all ready, and all things neat?

Nat. All things are ready, how near is our master?

Gru. E'ne at hand, alighted by this: and therefore be not------Cocks passion, silence, I hear my Master.

Enter Petruchio and Kate.

Pet. Where be these knaves? What no man at door to hold my stirrop, nor to take my horse? Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip.

All Ser. Here, here sir, here sir.

Pet. Here sir, here sir, here sir, here sir.
You loggerheaded and unpolisht grooms:
What? no attendance? no regard? no duty?
Where is the foolish knave I sent before?

Gru. Here sir, as foolish as I was before.

Pet. You peazant, swain, you horson malt-horse drudge,
Did I not bid thee meet me in the Parke,
And bring along the rascall knaves with thee?

Gru. Nathaniels coat sir was not fully made,
And Gabriel's pumps were all unpink't i'th heel:
There was no Link to colour Peter's hat,
And Walter's dagger was not come from sheathing:
There were none fine, but Adam, Rafe, and Gregory,
The rest were ragged, old, and beggerly,
Yet as they are, they come to meet you.

Pet. Go rascalls, go and fetch my supper in. Ex Ser.
Where is the life that late I led?
Where are those? Sit down Kate.
And welcome. Soud, soud, soud, soud.

Enter servants with supper.

Why when I say? Nay good sweet Kate be merry.
Off with my boots, you rogues: you villains, when?
It was the Friar of Orders gray,
As he forth walked on his way.
Out you rogue, you pluck my foot awry,
Take that, and mend the plucking of the other.
Be merry Kate: Some water here: what hoa.

Enter one with water.

Where's my Spaniel Troilus? Sirra, get you hence,
And bid my Cousin Ferdinand come hither:
One Kate that you must kisse, and be acquainted with.
Where are my slippers? shall I have some water?
Come Kate and wash, and welcome heartily:
You horson villain will you let it fall?

Kate. Patience I pray you, 'twas a fault unwilling.
Pet. A horson beetle-headed flap-ear'd knave:
Come Kate sit down, I know you have a stomack,
Will you give thanks, sweet Kate, or else shall I?
What's this, Mutton?
1. Ser. I.
Pet. Who brought it?
Ser. I.
Pet. 'Tis burnt, and so is all the meat:
What dogs are these? where is the ratcall Cook?
How durst you villains bring it from the dresser,
And serve it thus to me that love it not?
There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all:
You headlesse jolt-heads, and unmanner'd slaves.
What, doe you grumble? I'le be with you straight.
Kate. I pray you Husband be not so disquiet,
The meat was well, if you were so contented.
Pet. I tell thee Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away,
And I expressely am forbid to touch it:
For it engenders choller, planteth anger,
And better 'twere that both of us did fast,
Since of our selves, our selves are chollerick,
Then feed it with such over-rosted flesh:
Be patient, to morrow't shall be mended,
And for this night we'l fast for company.
Come I will bring thee to thy Bridall Chamber. Exeunt.

Enter Servants severally.

Nath. Peter, didst ever see the like?
Peter. He kills her in her own humour.
Gru. Where is he?

Enter Curtis a Servant.

Cur. In her Chamber, making a sermon of continency to her, and rails, and swears, and rates, that she (poor soul) knows not which way to stand, to look, to speak, and sits as one new risen from a dream. Away, away, for he is comming hither.

Enter Petruchio.

Pet. Thus have I politickly begun my reign,
And 'tis my hope to end successefully:
My Faulcon now is sharp, and passing empty,
And till she stoop, she must not be full gorg'd,
For then she never looks upon her lure.
Another way I have to man my Haggard,
To make her come, and know her Keepers call:
That is, to watch her, as we watch these Kites,
That bait, and beat, and will not be obedient:
She eat no meat to day, nor none shall eat.
Last night she slept not, nor to night shall not:
As with the meat, some undeserved fault
I'le find about the making of the bed.
And here I'le fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the Coverlet, another way the Sheets:
I, and amid this hurly I intend,
That all is done in reverend care of her,
And in conclusion, she shall watch all night,
And if she chance to nod, I'le raile and brawle,
And with the clamour keep her still awake:
This is a way to kill a Wife with kindnesse,
And thus I'le curbe her mad and head-strong humour.
He that knowes better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speak, 'tis charity to shew. Exit.

Enter Tranio and Hortensio.

Tra. Is't possible friend Licio, that Mistresse Bianca
Doth fancy any other but Lucentio,
I tell you sir, she beares me fair in hand.
Hor. Sir, to satisfie you in what I have said,
Stand by, and mark the manner of his teaching.

Enter Bianca.

Luc. Now Mistresse, profit you in what you read?
Bian. What Master read you first, resolve me that?
Luc. I read, that I professe the art to love.
Bian. And may you prove sir master of your art.
Luc. While you sweet dear prove mistresse of my heart.
Hor. Quick proceeders marry, now tell me I pray, you that durst swear that your mistresse Bianca lov'd me in the World so well as Lucentio.
Tra. Oh despightfull Love, unconstant woman kind,
I tell thee Licio this is wonderfull.
Hor. Mistake no more, I am not Licio,
Nor a Musician as I seem to be,
But one that scorn to live in this disguise,
For such a one as leaves a Gentleman,
And makes a God of such a Cullion;
Know sir, that I am call'd Hortensio.
Tra. Signior Hortensio, I have often heard
Of your entire affection to Bianca,
And since mine eyes are witnesse of her lightnesse,
I will with you, if you be so contented,
Forswear Bianca, and her love for ever.
Hor. See how they kisse and court: Signior Lucentio,
Here is my hand, and here I firmly vow
Never to wooe her more, but doe forswear her,
As one unworthy all the former favours
That I have fondly flatter'd her withall.
Tra. And here I take the like unfained oath,
Never to marry with her, though she would intreat,
Fie on her, see how beastly she doth court him.
Hor. Would all the world but he had quite forsworn
For me, that I may surely keep mine oath.
I will be married to a wealthy Widow,
Ere three dayes passe, which hath as long lov'd me,
As I have lov'd this proud disdainfull Haggard,
And so farewell Signior Lucentio,
Kindnesse in women, not their beauteous looks
Shall win my love, and so I take my leave,
In resolution, as I swore before.
Tra. Mistresse Bianca, blesse you with such grace,
As longeth to a Lovers blessed case:
Nay, I have tane you napping gentle Love,
And have forsworn you with Hortensio.
Bian. Tranio you jest, but have you both forsworn me?
Tra. Mistresse we have.
Luc. Then we are rid of Licio.
Tra. I'faith he'll have a lusty Widow now,
That shall be woo'd, and wedded in a day.
Bian. God give him joy.
Tra. I, and he'll tame her.
Bian. He sayes so Tranio.
Tra. Faith he is gone unto the taming schoole.
Bian. The taming schoole: what is there such a place?
Tra. I mistresse, and Petruchio is the master,
That teacheth tricks eleven and twenty long,
To tame a shrew, and charme her chattering tongue.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Oh master, master, I have watcht so long,
That I am dog-weary, but at last I spied
An ancient Angel comming down the hill,
Will serve the turn.
Tra. What is he Biondello.
Bio. Master, a Marcantant, or a pedant,

I know not what, but formall in apparell,
In gate and countenance surly like a father.
Luc. And what of him Tranio?
Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
I'le make him glad to seem Vincentio,
And give assurance to Baptista Minola
As if he were the right Vincentio.
Take me your love, and then let me alone.
Enter a Pedant.
Ped. God save you sir.
Tra. And you sir, you are welcome.
Travell you far on, or are you at the fartheſt?
Ped. Sir, at the fartheſt for a week or two,
But then up farther, and as far as Rome,
And so to Tripoly, if God lend me life.
Tra. What Countreyman I pray?
Ped. Of Mantua.
Tra. Of Mantua Sir, marry God forbid,
And come to Padua, careleſſe of your life?
Ped. My life sir? how I pray? for that goes hard.
Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua, know you not the cause?
Your ships are staid at Venice, and the Duke
For private quarrell 'twixt your Duke and him,
Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly:
'Tis marvel, but that you are but newly come,
You might have heard it else proclaim'd about.
Ped. Alas sir, it is worse for me then so,
For I have bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must here deliver them.
Tra. Well sir, to do you curteſie,
This will I do, and this I will adviſe you.
First tell me, have you ever been at Pisa?
Ped. I sir, In Pisa have I often been,
Pisa renowned for grave Citizens.
Tra. Among them know you one Vincentio?
Ped I know him not, but I have heard of him:
A Merchant of incomparable wealth.
Tra. He is my father sir, and sooth to say,
In count'nance somewhat doth reſemble you.
Bion. As much as an apple doth an oyſter, and all one.
Tra. To save your life in this extremity,
This favour will I do you for his sake,
And think it not the worſt of all your fortunes
That you are like to Sir Vincentio.
His name and credit shall you undertake,
And in my house you shall be friendly lodg'd,
Look that you take upon you as you should,
You underſtand me, sir: so shall you stay
Till you have done your buſineſſe in the City:
If this be court'ſie sir, accept of it.
Ped. Oh sir I do, and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and liberty.
Tra. Then go with me to make the matter good,
This by the way I let you underſtand,
My father is here look'd for every day,
To paſſe assurance of a dowre in marriage
'Twixt me, and one Baptista's daughter here:
In all these circumstances I'le inſtruct you,
Go with me sir to cloath you as becomes you. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Katherina and Grumio.

Gru. No, no forsooth I dare not for my life.
Kat. The more my wrong, the more his spite appears.
What, did he marry me to famish me?
Beggers that come unto my fathers door,
Upon entreaty have a preſent almes,
If not, elsewhere they meet with charity:
But I, who never knew how to intreat,
Nor never needed that I should intreat,
Am starv'd for meat, giddy for lack of sleep:
With oaths kept waking, and with brawling fed,
And that which spights me more then all theſe wants,
He does it under name of perfect love:
As who would say, if I should sleep or eat
'Twere deadly sickneſſe, or else preſent death.
I prethee go, and get me some repaſt,
I care not what, so it be wholsome food.
Gru. What say you to a Neats foot?
Kat. 'Tis paſſing good, I prethee let me have it.
Gru. I fear it is too phlegmatick a meat.
How say you to a fat Tripe finely broil'd?
Kat. I like it well, good Grumio fetch it me.
Gru. I cannot tell, I fear 'tis chollerick.
What say you to a piece of Beef and Muſtard?
Kat. A diſh that I do love to feed upon.
Gru. I, but the Muſtard is too hot a little.
Kat. Why then the Beef, and let the Muſtard reſt.
Gru. Nay then I will not, you shall have the Muſtard,
Or else you get no Beef of Grumio.
Kat. Then both or one, or any thing thou wilt.
Gru. Why then the Muſtard without the Beef.
Kat. Go get the gone, thou falſe deluding slave.
Beats him.
That feed'ſt me with the very name of meat,
Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you
That triumph thus upon my misery:
Go get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio, and Hortentio with meat.
Pet. How fares my Kate, what sweeting, all amort?
Hor. Miſtris, what cheer?
Kat. Faith as cold as can be.
Pet. Pluck up thy spirits, look cheerfully upon me.
Here Love, thou see'ſt how diligent I am,
To dreſſe thy meat my self, and bring it thee.
I am sure, sweet Kate, this kindneſſe merits thanks.
What, not a word? Nay then, thou lov'ſt it not:
And all my pains is sorted to no proof.
Here take away the diſh.
Kat. I pray you let it stand.
Pet. The pooreſt service is repaid with thanks,
And so shall mine before you touch the meat.
Kate. I thank you sir.
Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie you are too blame:
Come Miſtris Kate, I'le bear you company.
Pet. Eat it up all Hortentio, if thou loveſt me:
Much good do it unto thy gentle heart;
Kate eat apace; and now my hony Love,
Will we return unto thy fathers houſe,
And revell it as bravely as the beſt,
With silken coats and caps, and golden Rings,
With Ruffs and Cuffs, and Fardingales, and things:
With Scarfs, and Fanns, and double change of brav'ry,
With Amber Bracelets, Beads, and all this knav'ry.
With haſt thou din'd? The Tailor staies thy leaſure,
To deck thy body with his ruffling treaſure.
Enter Tailor.

Come

Come Tailor, let us see these ornaments.

Enter Haberdasher.

Lay forth the gown. What news with you sir?

Fel. Here is the cap your worship did bespeak.

Pet. Why this was moulded on a porrenger,
A Velvet dish: Fie, fie 'tis lewd and filthy,
Why 'tis a cockle or a walnut-shell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a babies cap:
Away with it, come let me have a bigger.

Kat. I'le have no bigger, this doth fit the time,
And Gentlewomen were such caps as these.

Pet. When you are gentle, you shall have one too,
And not till then.

Hor. That will not be in haste.

Kat. Why sir, I trust I may have leave to speak,
And speak I will. I am no childe, no babe,
Your betters have endur'd me, say my minde,
And if you cannot, best you stop your ears.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,
Or else my heart conceiling it will break,
And rather then it shall, I will be free,
Even to the uttermost as I please in words.

Pet. Why thou sai'st true, it is a paltry cap,
A custard coffen, a bauble, a silken pye,
I love thee well in that thou lik'st it not.

Kat. Love me, or love me not, I like the cap,
And it I will have, or I will have none.

Pet. Thy gown, why I: come Tailor let us see't,
O mercy God, what masking stuffe is here?
What? this a sleeve? 'tis like a demi-cannon,
What, up and down carv'd like an apple-Tart?
Here snip, and nip, and cut, and slish and slash,
Like to a Censor in a barbers shop:
Why what a devils name Tailor call'st thou this?

Hor. I see she's like to have neither cap nor gown.

Tai. You bid me make it orderly and well,
According to the fashion, and the time.

Pet. Marry and did: but if you be remembred,
I did not bid you mar it to the time.
Go hop me over every kennell home,
For you shall hop without my custome sir:
I'le none of it: hence, make your best of it.

Kat. I never saw a better fashion'd gown,
More queint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:
Belike you mean to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why true, he means to make a puppet of thee.

Tai. She sayes your Worship means to make a puppet of her.

Pet. Oh most monstrous arrogance:
Thou lyest, thou thred, thou thimble,
Thou yard, three quarters, half yard, quarter, nail,
Thou Flea, thou Nit, thou winter cricket thou:
Brav'd in mine own house with a skein of thred:
Away thou Rag, thou quantity, thou remnant,
Or I shall so be-meet thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt think on prating whil'st thou liv'st:
I tell thee I, that thou hast mar'd her gown.

Tail. Your worship is deceiv'd, the gown is made
Just as my Master had direction:
Grumio gave order how it should be done.

Gru. I gave him no order, I gave him the stuff.

Tail. But how did you desire it should be made?

Gru. Marry sir with needle and thred.

Tail. But did you not request to have it Cut?

Gru. Thou hast fac'd many things.

Tail. I have.

Gru. Face not me: thou hast brav'd many men, brave not me; I will neither be fac'd nor brav'd. I say unto thee, I bid thy master cut out the gown, but I did not bid him cut it to pieces. Ergo thou liest.

Tai. Why here is the note of the fashion to testifie.

Pet. Read it.

Gru. The note lyes in's throat if he say I said so.

Tail. Imprimis, a loose bodied gown.

Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gown, sow me in the skirts of it, and beat me to death with a bottome of brown thred: I said a gown.

Pet. Proceed.

Tai. With a small compast cape.

Gru. I confesse the cape.

Tai. With a trunk sleeve.

Gru. I confesse two sleeves.

Tai. The sleeves curiously cut.

Pet. I there's the villany.

Gru. Error i'th bill sir, error i'th bill? I commanded the sleeves should be cut out, and sow'd up again, and that I'le prove upon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tail. This is true that I say, and I had thee in place where, thou shouldst know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, give me thy meet-yard, and spare not me.

Hor. God-a-mercy Grumio, then he shall have no odd's.

Pet. Well sir in brief the gown is not for me.

Gru. You are i'th right sir, 'tis for my mistris.

Pet. Go take it up unto thy masters use.

Gru. Villain, not for thy life: Take up my Mistresse gown for thy masters use.

Pet. Why sir, what's your conceit in that?

Gru. Oh sir, the conceit is deeper then you think for:
Take up my Mistris gown unto his masters use.
Oh fie, fie, fie.

Pet. Hortentio, say thou wilt see the Tailor paid:
Go take it hence, be gone, and say no more.

Hor. Tailor, I'le pay thee for thy gown to morrow,
Take no unkindnesse of his hasty words:
Away I say, commend me to thy Master. Exit. Tail.

Pet. Well, come my Kate, we will unto your fathers,
Even in these honest mean habiliments:
Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor:
For 'tis the minde that makes the body rich.
And as the Sun breaks through the darkest clouds,
So honor peereth in the meanest habit.
What is the Jay more precious then the Lark,
Because his feathers are more beautifull?
Or is the Adder better then the Eele,
Because his painted skin contents the eye?
Oh no, good Kate: neither art thou the worse
For this poor furniture, and mean array.
If thou accounted'st it shame, lay it on me,
And therefore frolick, we will hence forthwith:
To feast and sport us at thy fathers house,
Go call my men, and let us straight to him,
And bring our horses unto Long-lane end,
There will we mount, and thither walk on foot.
Let's see, I think 'tis now some seaven a clock,
And well we may come there by dinner time.

Kat. I dare assure you sir, 'tis almost two,
And 'twill be supper time ere you come there.

Pet. It shall be seven ere I go to horse:
Look what I speak, or do, or think to do,

You

You are ſtill croſſing it ; ſirs let't alone,
I will not go to day, and ere I doe,
It ſhall be what a clock I ſay it is.
Hor. Why ſo:this gallant will command the ſun.

Enter Tranio,and the Pedant dreſt like Vincentio.

Tra. Sirs, this is the houſe,pleaſe it you that I call.
Ped. I what elſe, and but I be deceived,
Signior Baptiſta may remember me
Near twenty yeares ago in Genoa.
Tra. Where we were Lodgers, at the Pegaſus :
'Tis well, and hold your own in any caſe
With ſuch auſterity as longeth to a Father.

Enter Biondello.

Ped. I warrant you : but ſir here comes your boy,
'Twere good he were ſchool'd.
Tra. Fear you not him : ſirra Biondello,
Now doe your duty throughly I adviſe you :
Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.
Bion. Tut, fear not me.
Tra. But haſt thou done thy errand to Baptiſta ?
Bion. I told him that your father was in Venice,
And that you look't for him in Padua.
Tra. That's a tall fellow, hold thee that to drink,
Here comes Baptiſta : ſet your countenance ſir.

Enter Baptiſta and Lucentio : and Pedant booted and bear-headed.

Tra. Signior Baptiſta you are happily met :
Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of,
I pray you ſtand good father to me now,
Give me Bianca for my patrimony.
Ped. Soft ſon : ſir by your leave, having come to Padua
To gather in ſome debts, my ſon Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cauſe
Of love between your daughter and himſelf :
And for the good report I hear of you,
And for the love he beareth to your daughter,
And ſhe to him ; to ſtay him not too long,
I am content in a good fathers care
To have him matcht, and if you pleaſe to like
No worſe then I ſir upon ſome agreement,
Me ſhall you finde moſt ready and moſt willing
With one conſent to have her ſo beſtowed :
For curious I cannot be with you
Signior Baptiſta,of whom I hear ſo well.
Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I have to ſay,
Your plainneſſe and your ſhortneſſe pleaſe me well :
Right true it is, your ſon Lucentio here
Doth love my daughter, and ſhe loveth him,
Or both d ſſemble deeply their affections :
And therefore if you ſay no more then this,
That like a Father you will deal with him,
And paſſe my daughter a ſufficient dowre,
The match is made, and all is done,
Your ſon ſhall have my daughter with conſent.
Tra. I thank you ſir, where then doe you know beſt
We be affied, and ſuch aſſurance tane,
As ſhall with either parts agreement ſtand.
Bap. Not in my houſe Lucentio, for you know
Pitchers have eares, and I have many ſervants,
Beſides old Gremio is harkning ſtill,
And haply we might be interrupted.
Tra. Then at my lodging, and it like you ſir
There doth my father lie : and there this night
We'll paſſe the buſineſſe privately and well :
Send for your daughter by your ſervant here,
My Boy ſhall fetch the Scrivener preſently,
The worſt is this, that at ſo ſlender warning,
You are like to have a thin and ſlender pittance.
Bap. It likes we well :
Cambio hie you home, and bid Bianca make her ready ſtraight :
And if you will tell what hath hapned,
Lucentio's Father is arriv'd in Padua,
And how ſhe's like to be Lucentio's wife.
Bion. I pray the gods ſhe may with all my heart.
Exit.
Tra. Dally not with the gods, but get thee gone.

Enter Peter.

Signior Baptiſta, ſhall I lead the way,
Welcome, one meſſe is like to be your cheer,
Come ſir, we will better it in Piſa.
Bap. I follow you. Exeunt.

Enter Lucentio, and Biondello.

Bion. Cambio.
Luc. What ſaiſt thou Biondello ?
Biond. You ſaw my Maſter wink and laugh upon you.
Luc. Biondello, what of that ?
Biond. Faith nothing : but has left me here behind to expound the meaning, or morall of his ſigns and tokens.
Luc. I pray the moralize them.
Biond. Then thus : Baptiſta is ſafe talking with the deceiving Father of a deceitfull Son.
Luc. And what of him ?
Bion. His daughter is to be brought by you to the ſupper.
Luc. And then ?
Bion. The old Prieſt at Saint Luke's Church is at your command at all houres.
Luc. And what of all this ?
Bion. I cannot tell, except they are buſied about a counterfeit aſſurance : take you aſſurance of her, Cum privilegio ad Imprimendum ſolùm, to th' Church take the Prieſt, Clarke, and ſome ſufficient honeſt witneſſes :
If this be not that you look for, I have no more to ſay,
But bid Bianca farewell for ever and a day.
Luc. Hear'ſt thou Biondello.
Bion. I cannot tarry : I knew a wench married in an afternoon as ſhe went to the Garden for Parſeley to ſtuffe a Rabbit, and ſo may you ſir : and ſo adieu ſir, my Maſter hath appointed me to go to Saint Luke's to bid the Prieſt be ready to come againſt you come with your appendix. Exit.
Luc. I may and will, if ſhe be ſo contented :
She will be pleas'd, then wherefore ſhould I doubt :
Hap what hap may, I'le roundly go about her :
It ſhall go hard if Cambio go without her. Exit.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Hortenſio.

Pet. Come on a Godsname, once more toward our Fathers.
Good Lord how bright and goodly ſhines the Moon :
Kate. The Moon, the Sun : it is not Moon light now.
Pet. I ſay it is the Moon that ſhines ſo bright.
Kat. I know it is the Sun that ſhines ſo bright.
Pet. Now by my Mothers Son, and that's my ſelf,

It

It ſhall be moon, or ſtar, or what I liſt,
Or ere I journey to your fathers houſe:
Go on, and fetch our horſes back again,
Ever more croſt and croſt, nothing but croſt,
Hor. Say as he ſayes, or we ſhall never go,
Kat. Forward I pray, ſince we have come ſo farre,
And be it moon, or ſun, or what you pleaſe:
And if you pleaſe to call it a ruſh Candle,
Hence forth I vow it ſhall be ſo for me.
Pet. I ſay it is the Moon.
Kat. I know it is the Moon.
Pet. Nay then you lye: it is the bleſſed Sun.
Kat. Then God be bleſt, it is the bleſſed Sun,
But ſun it is not, when you ſay it is not.
And the Moon changes even as your minde:
What you will have it nam'd, even that it is,
And ſo it ſhall be ſo for Katherine.
Hor. Petruchio, go thy wayes, the field is won.
Pet. Well, forward, forward, thus the bowle ſhould run,
And not unluckily againſt the Bias:
But ſoft, Company is comming here.

Enter Vincentio.

Good morrow gentle Miſtris, where away:
Tell me ſweet Kate, and tell me truly too,
Haſt thou beheld a freſher Gentlewoman:
Such war of white and red within her cheeks:
What ſtarrs do ſpangle heaven with ſuch beauty,
As thoſe two eyes become that heavenly face?
Fair lovely Maid, once more good day to thee:
Sweet Kate embrace her for her beauties ſake.
Hor. A will make the man mad to make a woman of him.
Kat. Young budding Virgin, fair, and freſh, and ſweet,
Whither away, or where is thy aboad?
Happy the Parents of ſo fair a childe;
Happier the man whom favourable ſtars
Alots thee for his lovely bedfellow.
Pet. Why how now Kate, I hope thou art not mad,
This is a man, old, wrinckled, faded, withered,
And not a Maiden, as thou ſai'ſt he is.
Kat. Pardon old father my miſtaking eyes,
That have been ſo bedazled with the ſun,
That every thing I look on ſeemeth green:
Now I perceive thou art a reverend Father:
Pardon I pray thee for my mad miſtaking.
Pet. Do good old grandſire, and withall make known
Which way thou travelleſt, if along with us,
We ſhall be joyfull of thy company.
Vin. Fair Sir, and you my merry Miſtris,
That with your ſtrange encounter much amas'd me:
My name is call'd Vincentio, my dwelling Piſa,
And bound I am to Padua, there to viſit
A ſon of mine, which long I have not ſeen.
Pet. What is his name?
Vin. Lucentio, gentle ſir.
Pet. Happily met, the happier for thy ſon:
And now by Law, as well as reverent age,
I may intitle thee my loving father;
The ſiſter to my wife, this Gentlewoman,
Thy Son by this hath married: wonder not,
Nor be not grieved, ſhe is of good eſteem,
Her dowry wealthy, and of worthy birth;
Beſide, ſo qualified, as may beſeem
The Spouſe of any noble Gentleman:
Let me embrace with old Vincentio,
And wander we to ſee thy honeſt ſon,
Who will of thy arrivall be full joyous.
Vin. But is this true, or is it elſe your pleaſure,
Like preſent travellers to break a jeſt
Upon the company you overtake?
Hor. I do aſſure thee father ſo it is.
Pet. Come go along and ſee the truth hereof.
For our firſt merriment hath made thee jealous. Exeunt.
Hor. Well Petruchio, this has put me in heart:
Have to my Widdow, if ſhe be froward,
Then haſt thou taught Hortentio to be untoward. Exit.

Enter Biondello, Lucentio and Bianca, Gremio is out before.

Bion. Softly and ſwiftly ſir, for the Prieſt is ready.
Luc. I flye Biondello, but they may chance to need thee at home, therefore leave us. Exit.
Bion. Nay faith, I'le ſee the Church a your back, and then come back to my miſtris as ſoon as I can.
Gre. I marvaile Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Vincentio, Grumio with Attendants.

Pet. Sir heres the door, this is Lucentio's houſe,
My Fathers bears more toward the Market-place,
Thither muſt I, and here I leave you ſir.
Vin. You ſhall not chooſe but drink before you go,
I think I ſhall command your welcome here?
And by all likelihood ſome cheer is toward. Knock.
Gre. They're buſie within, you were beſt knock louder.
Pedant looks out of the window.
Ped. What's he that knocks as he would beat down the gate?
Vin. Is Signior Lucentio within ſir?
Ped. He's within ſir, but not to be ſpoken withall.
Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two to make merry withall.
Ped. Keep your hundred pounds to your ſelf, he ſhall need none as long as I live.
Pet. Nay, I told you your ſon was well beloved in Padua: doe you hear ſir, to leave frivolous circumſtances, I pray you tell ſignior Lucentio that his Father is come from Piſa, and is here at the door to ſpeak with him.
Ped. Thou lieſt, his Father is come from Padua, and here looking out at the window.
Vin. Art thou his father?
Ped. I ſir, ſo his mother ſayes, if I may believe her.
Pet. Why how now gentleman: why this is flat knavery to take upon you another mans name.
Ped. Lay hands on the villain, I believe he means to cozen ſome body in this City under my countenance.
Enter Biondello.
Bion. I have ſeen them in the Church together, God ſend'em good ſhipping: but who is here? mine old Maſter Vincentio: now we are undone and brought to nothing.
Vin. Come hither crackhemp.
Bion. I hope I may chooſe Sir.
Vin. Come hither you rogue, what have you forgot me?
Bion. Forgot you, no ſir: I could not forget you, for I never ſaw you before in all my life.
Vin. What, you notorious villain, did'ſt thou never ſee thy Maſters father, Vincentio?

Bion.

Bion. What my old worſhipfull old maſter? yes marry ſir, ſee where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is't ſo indeed? He beats Biondello.

Bion. Help, help, help, here's a mad man will murther me.

Peda. Help, ſon, help ſignior Baptiſta.

Pet. Prethee Kate let's ſtand aſide and ſee the end of this controverſie.

Enter Pedant with ſervants, Baptiſta, Tranio.

Tra. Sir, what are you that offer to beat my ſervant?

Vin. What am I ſir: nay what are you ſir: oh immortall God's: oh fine villain, a ſilken doublet, a velvet hoſe, a ſcarlet cloak, and a copatain hat: oh I am undone, I am undone: while I play the good husband at home, my ſon and my ſervant ſpend all at the Univerſity.

Tra. how now, what's the matter?

Bap. What is the man lunatick?

Tra. Sir, you ſeem a ſober ancient Gentleman by your habit: but your words ſhew you a mad man: why ſir, what concerns it you, if I wear Pearle and gold: I thank my good father, I am able to maintain it.

Vin. Thy father! oh villain, he is a Sail-maker in Bergamo.

Bap. You miſtake ſir, you miſtake ſir, pray what doe you think is his name?

Vin. His name, as if I knew not his name: I have brought him up ever ſince he was three years old, and his name is Tranio.

Ped. Away, away mad aſſe, his name is Lucentio, and he is mine onely ſon and heir to the Lands of me ſignior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentio! oh he hath murthered his Maſter; lay hold on him I charge you in the Dukes name: oh my ſonne, my ſonne: tell me thou villain, where is my ſon Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer: Carry this mad knave to the Jayle: father Baptiſta, I charge you ſee that he be forth comming.

Vin. Carry me to the Jayle?

Gre. Stay officer, he ſhall not go to priſon.

Bap. Talk not ſignior Gremio: I ſay he ſhall go to priſon.

Gre. Take heed ſignior Baptiſta, leaſt you be conicatch'd in this buſineſſe: I dare ſwear this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Swear if thou dar'ſt.

Gre. Nay, I dare not ſwear it.

Tra. Then thou wert beſt ſay that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be ſignior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard, to the Jayle with him.

Enter Biondello, Lucentio, and Bianca.

Tin. thus ſtrangers may be hal'd and abus'd: oh monſtrous villain.

Bion. Oh we are ſpoil'd, and yonder he is, deny him, forſwear him, or elſe we are all undone.

Exit Biondello, Tranio, and Pedant as faſt as may be.

Luc. Pardon ſweet father.

Vin. Lives my ſweet ſon?

Bian. Pardon dear father.

Bap. How haſt thou offended, where is Lucentio.

Luc. Here's Lucentio, right ſon to the right Vincentio.

That have by marriage made thy daughter mine.
While counterfeit ſuppoſes bleer'd thine eine.

Gre. Here's packing with a witneſſe to deceive us all.

Vin. Where is that damned villain Tranio,
That fac'd and brav'd me in this matter ſo?

Bap. Why, tell me if not this my Cambio?

Bian. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Love wrought theſe miracles. Bianca's love
Made me exchange my ſtate with Tranio,
While he did bear my countenance in the town;
And happily I have arriv'd at laſt
Unto the wiſhed haven of my bliſſe:
What Tranio did, my ſelf enforſt him to;
Then pardon him ſweet Father for my ſake.

Vin. I'le ſlit the villains noſe that would have ſent me to the Jayle.

Bap. But do you hear ſir, have you married my daughter without asking my good will:

Vin. Fear not Baptiſta, we will content you, go to: but I will in, to be reveng'd on this villain. Exit.

Bap. And I to ſound the depth of this knavery. Exit.

Luc. Look not pale, Bianca, thy father will not frown Exeunt.

Gre. My cake is dogh, but I'le in among the reſt,
Out of hope of all, but my ſhare of the feaſt.

Kat. Husband let's follow, to ſee the end of this adoe.

Pet. Firſt kiſs me Kate, and we will.

Kat. What in the midſt of the ſtreet?

Pet. What art thou aſham'd of me?

Kat. No ſir, God forbid, but aſham'd to kiſs.

Pet. Why then let's home again: Come ſirra let's away.

Kat. Nay, I will give the a kiſs; now pray thee Love ſtay.

Pet. Is not this well? come my ſweet Kate:
Better once then never, for never too late. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Baptiſta, Vincentio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucentio, and Bianca, Tranio, Biondello, Grumio, and Widdow: The Serving men with Tranio bringing in a banquet.

Luc. At laſt though long, our jarring notes agree,
And time it is when raging war is come,
To ſmile at ſcapes and perils overblown:
My fair Bianca bid my father welcome,
While I with ſelfe ſame kindneſſe welcome thine:
Brother Petruchio, ſiſter Katherina,
And thou Hortentio with thy loving Widdow:
Feaſt with the beſt, and welcome to my houſe,
My Banquet is to cloſe our ſtomachs up
After our great good cheer: pray you ſit down,
For now we ſit to chat as well as eat.

Pet. Nothing but ſit and ſit, and eat and eat.

Bap. Padua affords this kindneſſe, ſon Petruchio.

Pet. Padua affords nothing but what is kinde.

Hor. For both our ſakes I would that word were true.

Pet. Now for my life Hortentio fears his Widdow.

Hor. Then never truſt me if I be afeard.

Pet. You are very ſencible, and yet you miſſe my ſence:
I mean Hortentio is afeard of you.

Wid

Wid. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round.
Pet. Roundly replyed.
Kat. Mistris, how mean you that?
Wid. Thus I conceive by him.
Pet. Conceives by me, how likes Hortentio that?
Hor. My Widdow sayes, thus she conceives her tale.
Pet. Very well mended: kisse him for that, good Widdow.
Kat. He that is giddy thinks the world turns round. I pray you tell me what you meant by that.
Wid. Your husband being troubled with a shrew,
Measures my husbands sorrow by his woe:
And now you know my meaning.
Kat. A very mean meaning.
Wid. Right, I mean you.
Kat. And I am mean indeed, respecting you.
Pet. To her Kate.
Hor. To her Widdow.
Pet. A hundred marks, my Kate do put her down.
Hor. That's my office.
Pet. Spoke like an Officer: ha to thee lad.
Drinks to Hortentio.
Bap. How likes Gremio these quick witted folks?
Gre. Believe me sir, they But together well:
Bian. Head, and but an hasty witty body,
Would say your Head and But were head and horn.
Vin. I Mistris Bride, hath that awakened you?
Bian. I, but not frighted me, therefore I'le sleep again.
Pet. Nay that you shall not since you have begun:
Have at you for a better jest or two.
Bian. Am I your Bird, I mean to shift my bush,
And then pursue me as you draw your Bow.
You are welcome all. Exit Bianca.
Pet. She hath prevented me, here signior Tranio,
This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not,
Therefore a health to all that shot and mist.
Tra. Oh sir, Lucentio slipt me like his Gray-hound,
Which runns himself, and catches for his Master.
Pet. A good swift simile, but something currish.
Tra. 'Tis well sir, that you hunted for your self:
'Tis thought your Deer does hold you at a bay.
Bap. Oh, oh Petruchio, Tranio hits you now.
Luc. I thank thee for that gird good Tranio,
Hor. Confesse, confesse, hath he not hit you here?
Pet. A has a little gall'd me I confesse:
And as the Jest did glance away from me,
'Tis ten to one it maim'd you too, out-right.
Bap. Now in good sadnesse son Petruchio,
I think thou hast the veriest shrew of all.
Pet. Well, I say no: and therefore for assurance,
Let's each one send unto his wife,
And he whose wife is most obedient,
To come at first when he doth send for her,
Shall win the wager which we will propose.
Hor. Content, what's the wager?
Luc. Twenty Crowns.
Pet. Twenty Crowns.
I'le venture so much of my Hawk or Hound,
But twenty times so much upon my Wife.
Luc. A hundred then.
Hor. Content.
Pet. A match, 'tis done.
Hor. Who shall begin?
Luc. That will I.
Go Biondello, bid your Mistris come to me:
Bion. I goe. Exit.
Bap. Son, I'le be your half, Bianca comes.
Luc. I'le have no halves: I'le bear it all my self,

Enter Biondello.

How now, what newes?
Bion. Sir, my Mistris sends you word
That she is busie, and cannot come.
Pet. How? she's busie, and cannot come: is that an answer?
Gre. I, and a kinds one too:
Pray God sir your wife send you not a worse.
Pet. I hope better.
Hor. Sirra Biondello, go and intreat my wife to come to me forthwith. Exit Biondello.
Pet. Oh ho, intreat her, nay then she must needs come.
Hor. I am afraid sir, do what you can,

Enter Biondello.

Yours will not be entreated: Now, where's my wife?
Bion. she sayes you have some goodly Jest in hand,
She will not come: she bids you come to her.
Pet. Worse and worse, she will not come:
Oh vilde, intollerable, not to be indur'd:
Sirra Grumio, go to your Mistris,
Say I command her to come to me. Exit.
Hor. I know her answer.
Pet. What?
Hor. She will not.
Pet. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter Katherina.

Bap. Now by my hollidam here comes Katherina,
Kat. What is your will sir, that you send for me?
Pet. Where is your sister, and Hortentio's wife?
Kat. They sit conferring by the Parlor fire.
Pet. Go fetch them hither, if they deny to come,
Swinge me them soundly forth unto their husbands:
Away I say, and bring them hither straight.
Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talk of a wonder.
Hor. And so it is: I wonder what it boads.
Pet. Marry peace it boads, and love, and quiet life,
An awfull rule, and right supremacy:
And to be short, what not, that's sweet and happy.
Bap. Now fair befall thee good Petruchio;
The wager thou hast won, and I will adde
Unto their losses twenty thousand Crowns,
Another dowry to another daughter,
For she is chang'd as she had never been.
Pet. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,
And show more signe of her obedience,
Her new built vertue and obedience.

Enter Kate, Bianca, and Widdow.

See where she comes, and brings your froward Wives
As prisoners to her womanly perswasion:
Katherine, that Cap of yours becomes you not,
Off with that bable, and through it underfoot.
Wid. Lord let me never have a cause to sigh,
Till I be brought to such a silly passe.
Bian. Fie what a foolish duty call you this?
Luc. I would your duty were as foolish too:
The wisdome of your duty, fair Bianca,
Hath cost me five hundred Crowns since supper time.
Bian. The more foole you for laying on my duty.
Pet. Katherine, I charge thee tell these headstrong women, what duty they owe to their Lords and husbands.
Wid. Come,

Wid. Come, come, you're mocking: we will have no telling..

Pet. Come on I say, and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say she shall, and first begin with her.

Kat. Fie, fie, unknit that threatning unkinde brow,
And dart not scornfull glances from those eyes,
To wound thy Lord, thy King, thy governour.
It blots thy beauty, as frosts bite the meads,
Confounds thy fame, whirle-winds shake fair buds,
And in no sence is meet or amiable.
A woman mov'd, is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill seeming, thick, bereft of beauty,
And while it is so, none so drie or thirsty
Will dain to sip, or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy Lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy soveraign: One that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance. Commits his body
To painfull labour, both by sea and land:
To watch the night in stormes, the day in cold,
Whil'st thou ly'st warme at home, secure and safe,
And craves no other tribute at thy hands,
But love, fair looks, and true obedience;
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duty as the Subject owes the Prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband:
And when she's froward, peevish, sullen, sowre,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foule contending Rebell,
And graceless traitour to her loving Lord?
I am asham'd that women are so simple,
To offer warre where they should kneel for peace:
Or seek for rule, supremacy, and sway,
When they are bound to serve, love, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weak, and smooth,
Unapt to toyl and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions, and our hearts,
Should well agree with our externall parts?
Come, come, you froward unable wormes,
My mind hath been as big as one of yours,
My heart is great, my reason haply more,
To bandy word for word, and frown for frown;
But now I see our Launces are but strawes:
Our strength as weak, our weakness past compare,
That seeming to be most, which we indeed least are,
Then vale your stomacks, for it is no boot,
And place your hands below your husbands foot:
In token of which duty, if he please,
My hand is ready, may it doe him ease.

Pet. Why there's a wench: Come on, and kisse me Kate.

Luc. Well go thy wayes, old Lad, for thou shalt ha't.

Vin. 'Tis a good hearing, when children are toward.

Luc. But a harsh hearing, when women are froward.

Pet. Come Kate, we'll to bed,
We three are married, but you two are sped.
'Twas I won the wager, though you hit the white,
And being a winner, God give you good night.
Exit Petruchio.

Hortens. Now go thy wayes, thou hast tam'd a curst Shrow.

Luc. 'Tis a wonder, by your leave, she will be tam'd so.

FINIS.

All's well that ends well.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter young Bertram Count of Roſſillion, his Mother, and Helena, Lord Lafew, all in black.

Mother.

IN delivering my ſon from me, I bury a ſecond husband.

Roſ. And in going Madam, weep o're my Father's death anew; but I muſt attend his Majeſties command, to whom I am now in Ward, evermore in ſubjection.

Laf. You ſhall find of the King a husband, Madam, you ſir a father. He that ſo generally is at all times good, muſt of neceſſity hold his virtue to you, whoſe worthineſſe would ſtirre it up where it wanted, rather then lack it where there is ſuch abundance.

Mo. What hope is there of his Majeſties amendment?

Laf. He hath abandon'd his Phiſicians, Madam, under whoſe practiſes he hath perſecuted time with hope, and finds no other advantage in the proceſſe, but onely the loſing of hope by time.

Mo. This young Gentlewoman had a Father, O that had! how ſad a paſſage 'tis, whoſe skill was almoſt as great as his honeſty, had it ſtretch'd ſo far, would have made nature immortall, and death ſhould have play for lack of work. Would, for the Kings ſake, hee were living, I think it would be the death of the Kings diſeaſe.

Laf. How call'd you the man you ſpeak of Madam?

Mo. He was famous ſir, in his profeſſion, and it was his great right to be ſo: Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed, Madam, the King very lately ſpoke of him admiringly, and mourningly: he was skilfull enough to have liv'd ſtill, if knowledge could be ſet up againſt mortallitie.

Roſ. What is it (my good Lord) the King languiſhes of?

Laf. A Fiſtula my Lord.

Roſ. I heard not of it before.

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this Gentlewoman the Daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Mo. His ſole child my Lord, and bequeathed to my over-looking. I have thoſe hopes of her good, that her education promiſes her diſpoſitions ſhe inherits, which makes fair gifts fairer: for where an unclean mind carries vertuous qualities, there commendations go with pitty, they are vertues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their ſimpleneſſe; ſhe derives her honeſtie, and atchieves her goodneſſe.

Laſew. Your commendations, Madam, get from her teares.

Mo. 'Tis the beſt brine a Maiden can ſeaſon her praiſe in. The remembrance of her Father never approaches her heart, but the tiranny of her ſorrows takes all livelihood from her cheek. No more of this Helena, go to, no more, leaſt it be rather thought you affect a ſorrow, then to have------

Hel. I doe affect a ſorrow indeed, but I have it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentations is the right of the dead, exceſſive grief the enemy to the living.

Mo. If the living be enemy to the grief, the exceſſe makes it ſoon mortall.

Roſ. Madam, I deſire your holy wiſhes.

Laf. How underſtand we that?

Mo. Be thou bleſt Bertram, and ſucceed thy Father
In manners as in ſhape: thy blood and virtue
Contend for Empire in thee, and thy goodneſſe
Share with thy birth-right. Love all, truſt a few,
Doe wrong to none: be able for thine enemy
Rather in power then uſe: and keep thy friend
Under thy own lifes key. Be checkt for ſilence,
But never tax'd for ſpeech. What heaven more will,
That thee may furniſh, and my prayers pluck down,
Fall on thy hand. Farewell my Lord,
'Tis an unſeaſon'd Courtier, good my Lord,
Adviſe him.

Laf. He cannot want the beſt.
That ſhall attend his love.

Mo. Heaven bleſſe him: Farewell Bertram. Exit.

Roſ. The beſt wiſhes that can be forg'd in your thoughts be ſervants to you: be comfortable to my mother, your miſtreſſe, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell pretty Lady, you muſt hold the credit of your Father.

Hel. O were that all, I think not on my Father,
And theſe great tears grace his remembrance more
Then thoſe I ſhed for him. What was he like?
I have forgot him. My imagination
Carries no favour in't but Bertrams.
I am undone, there is no living, none,
If Bertram be away. 'Twere all one,
That I ſhould love a bright particular ſtarre,
And think to wed it, he is ſo above me
In his bright radience and collaterall light,

Muſt

Muſt I be comforted, not in his ſphere;
Th'ambition in my love thus plagues it ſelf:
The Hinde that would be mated by the Lion
Muſt die for love. 'Twas pretty, though a plague
To ſee him every hour ſit and draw
His arched arrows, his hawking eye, his curles
In our hearts table: heart too capable
Of every line and trick of his ſweet favour.
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancy
Muſt ſanctifie his Relick. Who comes here?

Enter Parolles.

One that goes with him: I love him for his ſake,
And yet I know him a notorious Liar,
Think him a great way fool, ſolely a coward,
Yet theſe fixt evils ſit ſo fit in him,
That they take place, when Virtues ſteely bones
Looks bleak i'th cold wind: withall, full oft we ſee
Cold wiſedome waiting on ſuperfluous folly.

Par. Save you fair Queen.

Hel. And you Monarch.

Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginity?

Hel. I: you have ſome ſtain of ſouldier in you: Let me aske you a queſtion. Man is enemy to virginity, how may we barrocado it againſt him?

Par. Keep him out.

Hel. But he aſſailes, and our virginity though valiant, in the defence yet is weak: unfold us ſome warlike reſiſtance.

Par. There is none: Man ſetting down before you, will undermine you, and blow you up.

Hel. Bleſſe our poor Virginity from Underminers, and blowers up. Is there no Military policy how Virgins might blow up men?

Par. Virginity being blown down, Man will quicklier be blown up: marry in blowing him down again, with the breach your ſelves made, you loſe your City. It is not politick, in the common-wealth of Nature, to preſerve virginity. Loſſe of Virginity, is rationall encreaſe, and there was never virgin got, till virginity was firſt loſt. That you were made of, is mettall to make Virgins. Virginity, by being once loſt, may be ten times found: by being ever kept, it is ever loſt: 'tis too cold a companion: away with't.

Hel. I will ſtand for't a little, though therefore I die a Virgin.

Par. There's little can be ſaid in't, 'tis againſt the rule of Nature. To ſpeak on the part of virginity, is to accuſe your Mothers: which is moſt infallible diſobedience. He that hangs himſelf is a Virgin: Virginity murthers it ſelf, and ſhould be buried in high-wayes out of all ſanctified limit, as a deſperate Offendreſſe againſt Nature. Virginity breeds mites, much like a Cheeſe, conſumes it ſelfe to the very pairing, and ſo dies with feeding his own ſtomack. Beſides, Virginity is peeviſh, proud, idle, made of ſelf-love, which is the moſt inhabited ſin in the Cannon. Keep it not, you cannot chooſe but looſe by't. Out with't: within ten yeares it will make it ſelf two, which is a goodly increaſe, and the principall it ſelf not much the worſe. Away with't.

Hel. How might one doe ſir, to looſe it to her own liking?

Par. Let me ſee. Marry ill, to like him that ne're it likes. 'Tis a commoditie will loſe the gloſſe with lying. The longer kept, the leſſe worth: Off with't while 'tis vendible. Anſwer the time of requeſt, Virginity like an olde Courtier, weares her cap out of faſhion, richly ſuted, but unſutable, juſt like the brooch and the tooth-pick, which were not now: your Date is better in your Pye and your Porredge, then in your cheek: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French wither'd Peares; it looks ill, it eats drily, marry 'tis a wither'd Pear: it was formerly better, marry yet 'tis a wither'd Pear. Will you any thing with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet:
There ſhall your Maſter have a thouſand loves,
A mother, and a miſtreſſe, and a friend,
A Phœnix, Captain, and an enemy,
A guide, a goddeſſe, and a ſoveraign,
A Counſellor, a Traitreſſe, and a Dear:
His humbleſt ambition, proud humility:
His jarring, concord: and his diſcord, dulcet:
His faith, his ſweet diſaſter: with a world
Of pretty fond adoptious chriſtendomes
That blinking Cupid goſſips. Now ſhall he:
I know not what he ſhall, God ſend him well.
The Court's a learning place, and he is one.

Par. What one i'faith?

Hel. That I wiſh well, 'tis pitty.

Par. What's pitty?

Hel. That wiſhing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt, that we poorer born,
Whoſe baſer ſtarres doe ſhut them up in wiſhes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And ſhew what we alone muſt think, which never
Returns us thanks.

Page. Monſieur Parolles,
My Lord calls for you.

Par. Little Hellen farewell, if I can remember thee, I will think of thee at Court.

Hel. Monſieur Parolles, you were born under a charitable ſtarre.

Par. Under Mars I.

Hel. I eſpecially think under Mars.

Par. Why under Mars?

Hel. The waters hath ſo kept you under, that you muſt needs be born under Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrogade I think rather.

Par. Why think you ſo?

Hel. You go ſo much backward when you fight.

Par. That's for advantage.

Hel. So is running away,
When fear propoſes ſafety:
But the compoſition that your valour and fear makes in you, is a virtue of a good wing, and I like the wear well.

Paroll. I am ſo full of buſineſſes, I cannot anſwer thee acutely: I will return perfect Courtier, in the which my inſtruction ſhall ſerve to naturalize thee, ſo thou wilt be capable of the Courtiers counſell, and underſtand what advice ſhall thruſt upon thee, elſe thou dieſt in thine unthankfulneſſe, and thine ignorance makes thee away, farewell: When thou haſt leiſure, ſay thy prayers: when thou haſt none, remember thy Friends:

Get thee a good husband, and use him as he uses thee:
So farewell. Exit.

Hel. Our remedies oft in our selves doe lie,
Which we ascribe to heaven: the fated skie
Gives us free scope, onely doth backward pull
Our slow designs, when we our selves are dull.
What power is it, which mounts my love so hie,
That makes me see and cannot feed mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune, Nature brings
To joyn like, likes; and kisse like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those
That weigh their pains in sence, and doe suppose
What hath been, cannot be. Who ever strove
To shew her merit, that did misse her love?
(The Kings disease) my project may deceive me,
But my intents are fixt, and will not leave me. Exit.

Flourish Cornets.
Enter the King of France with Letters, and divers Attendants.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by th' eares,
Have fought with equall fortune, and continue
A braving warre.

1. Lo. G. So 'tis reported sir.

Kin. Nay 'tis most credible, we here receive it,
A certainty vouch'd from our Cousin Austria,
With caution, that the Florentine will move us
For speedy aide: wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the businesse, and would seem
To have us make deniall.

1. L. G. His love and wisedome
Approv'd so to your Majesty, may plead
For amplest credence.

Kin. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is deni'd before he comes:
Yet for our Gentlemen that mean to see
The Tuscan service, freely have they leave
To stand on either part.

2. Lo. E. It may well serve
A nursery to our Gentry, who are sick
For breathing, and exploit.

King. What's he comes here?

Enter Bertram, Lafew and Parolles.

1. Lo. G. It 'tis the Count Rossillion, my good Lord,
Young Bertram.

King. Youth, thou bear'st thy Fathers face,
Frank Nature rather curious then in haste,
Hath well compos'd thee: Thy Fathers morall parts
Maist thou inherit too: welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thanks and duty are your Majesties.

Kin. I would I had that corporall soundnesse now,
As when thy father, and my selfe, in friendship
First tri'd our souldiership: he did look farre
Into the service of the time, and was
Discipled of the bravest. He lasted long,
But on us both did haggish Age steal on,
And wore us out of act: It much repaires me
To talke of your good father; in his youth
He had the wit, which I can well observe
To day in our young Lords: but they may jest
Till their own scorn return to them unnoted,
Ere they can hide their levity in honour:
So like a Courtier, contempt nor bitternesse
Were in his pride, or sharpnesse, if they were,
His equall had awak'd them, and his honour
Clock to it self, knew the true minute when
Exception bid him speak, and at this time
His tongue obey'd his hand. Who were below him,
He us'd as creatures of another place,
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks,
Making them proud of his humility,
In their poor praise he humbled: Such a man
Might be a copy to these younger times;
Which followed well, would demonstrate them now
But goers backward.

Ber. His good remembrance, Sir,
Lies richer in your thoughts, then on his tombe:
So in approofe lives not his Epitaph,
As in your royall speech.

King. Would I were with him: he would alwaies say,
(Me thinks I hear him now) his plausive words
He scatter'd not in eares, but grafted them
To grow there and to bear: Let me not live,
This his good melancholly oft began
On the Catastrophe and heel of pastime
When it was out: Let me not live (quoth he)
After my flame lacks oyle, to be the snuffe
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensive senses
All but new things disdain; whose judgements are
Meer fathers of their garments: whose constancies
Expire before their fashions: this he wish'd.
I after him, doe after him wish too:
(Since I, nor wax, nor honie can bring home,)
I quickly were dissolved from my hive,
To give some Labourers room.

2. L. E. You're loved Sir,
They that least lend it you, shall lack you first.

King. I fill a place I know't, how long ist, Count,
Since the Physician at your fathers died?
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six moneths since my Lord.

Kin. If he were living, I would try him yet.
Lend me an arme: the rest have worn me out
With severall applications: Nature and sicknesse
Debate it at their leisure. Welcome Count,
My son's no dearer.

Ber. Thank your Majesty. Exit.

Flourish.

Enter Countesse, Steward, and Clown.

Cou. I will now hear, what say you of this Gentlewoman.

St. Madam, the care I have had to even your content, I wish might be found in the Kalender of my past endeavours, for then we wound our modesty, and make foule the clearnesse of our deservings, when of our selves we publish them.

Cou. What do's this knave here? Get you gone sirra: the complaints I have heard of you, I doe not all believe, 'tis my slowenesse that I doe not: for I know you lack not folly to commit them, and have ability enough to make such knaveries yours.

Clo. 'Tis not unknown to you Madam, I am a poor fellow.

Cou. Well sir.

Clo. No Madam,
'Tis not so well that I am poor, though many of

of the rich are damn'd, but if I have your Ladyſhips good will to go the world, Isbell the woman and I will do as we may.

Coun. Wilt thou needs be a beggar?

Clo. I do beg your good will in this caſe.

Coun. What caſe?

Clo. In Isbels caſe and mine own: ſervice is no heritage, and I think I ſhall never have the bleſſing of God, till I have iſſue a by body, for they ſay Barns are bleſſings.

Cou. Tell me thy reaſon why thou wilt Marry?

Clo. My poor body Madam requires it, I am driven on by the fleſh, and he muſt needs goe that the devill drives.

Cou. Is this all your worſhips reaſon?

Clo. Faith Madam I have other holy reaſons, ſuch as they are.

Cou. May the world know them?

Clo. I have been (Madam) a wicked creature, as you and all fleſh and bloud are, and indeed I do marry that I may repent.

Cou. Thy marriage ſooner then thy wickedneſs.

Clo. I am out a friends, Madam, and I hope to have friends for my wives ſake.

Cou. Such friends are thine enemies knave.

Clo. Y'are ſhallow Madam, in great friends, for the knaves come to do that for me which I am a weary of: he that ears my Land, ſpares my teame, and gives me leave to Inne the crop: if I be his Cuckold, he's my drudge; he that comforts my wife, is the cheriſher of my fleſh and bloud; he that cheriſheth my fleſh and bloud, loves my fleſh and bloud; he that loves my fleſh and bloud is my friend: ergo, he that kiſſes my wife is my friend: if men could be contented to be what they are, there were no fear in marriage; for young Charbon the Puritan, and old Poyſam the Papiſt, howſoeere their hearts are ſever'd in Religion, their heads are both one, they may joule horns together like any Dear i'th Heard.

Cou. Thou wilt ever be a foule mouth'd and calumnious knave.

Clo. A prophet, I Madam, and I ſpeak the truth the next way, for I the Ballad will repeat, which men full true ſhall finde, your marriage comes by deſtiny, your Cuckow ſings by kinde.

Cou. Get you gone ſir, I'le talke with you more anon.

Stew. May it pleaſe you, Madam, that he bid Hellen come to you, of her I am to ſpeak.

Cou. Sirrah tell my Gentlewoman I would ſpeak with her, Hellen I mean.

Clo. Was this fair face the cauſe, quoth ſhe,
Why the Grecians ſacked Troy?
Fond done, done fond, was this King Priam's joy?
With that ſhe ſighed as ſhe ſtood, bis
And gave this ſentence then, among nine bad if one be good, among nine bad if one be good, there's yet one good in ten.

Cou. What, one good in ten? you corrupt the ſong ſirra.

Clo. One good woman in ten, Madam, which is the purifying a'th ſong: would God would ſerve the world ſo all the year, we'd finde no fault with the tithe woman if I were the Parſon, one in ten quoth a? and we might have a good woman born but o're every blazing ſtarre, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the Lottery well, a man may draw his heart out ere a pluck one.

Cou. You'l be gone ſir knave, and do as I command you?

Clo. That man that ſhould be at a womans command, and get no hurt done, though honeſty be no Puritan, yet it will do no hurt; it will wear the Surplis of humility over the black Gown of a big heart: I am going forſooth, the buſineſs is for Hellen to come hither. Exit.

Cou. Well now.

Stew. I know (Madam) you love your Gentlewoman intirely.

Cou. Faith I do: her Father bequeath'd her to me, and ſhe her ſelf without other advantage, may lawfully make title to as much love as ſhe findes, there is more owing her then is paid, and more ſhall be paid her then ſhe'll demand.

Stew. Madam, I was very late more near her then I think ſhe wiſh'd me: alone ſhe was, and did communicate to her ſelfe her own words to her own ears: ſhe thought, I dare vow for her, they touch'd not any ſtranger ſence: her matter was, ſhe loved your Son: Fortune ſhe ſaid was no goddeſs, that had put ſuch difference betwixt their two eſtates: Love no god, that would not extend his might onely, where qualities were levell: Queen of Virgins, that would ſuffer her poor Knight ſurpris'd without reſcue in the firſt aſſault or ranſome afterward: This ſhe deliver'd in the moſt bitter touch of ſorrow that e're I heard Virgin exclaim in, which I held my duty ſpeedily to acquaint you withall: ſithence in the loſſe that may happen, it concerns you ſomething to know it.

Coun. You have diſcharg'd this honeſty, keep it to your ſelfe; many likelihoods inform'd me of this before, which hung ſo tottring in the ballance, that I could never believe nor miſdoubt: pray you leave me, ſtall this in your boſome, and I thank you for your honeſt care: I will ſpeak with you further anon.

Exit Steward.

Enter Hellen.

Old Cou. Even ſo it was with me when I was young:
If ever we are natures theſe are ours, this thorn
Doth to our Roſe of youth rightly belong:
Our bloud to us, this to our bloud is born,
It is the ſhow and ſeale of natures truth,
Where loves ſtrong paſſion is impreſt in youth,
By our remembrances of dayes forgone,
Such were our faults, or then we thought them none:
Her eye is ſick on't, I obſerve her now.

Hel. What is your pleaſure, Madam?

Ol. Cou. You know, Hellen, I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honourable Miſtris.

Ol. Cou. Nay a mother, why not a mother? when I ſed mother,
Methought you ſaw a ſerpent, what's in mother,
That you ſtart at it? I ſay I am your mother,
And put you in the Catalogue of thoſe
That were enwombed mine; 'tis often ſeen
Adoption ſtrives with nature, and choiſe breeds
A native ſlip to us from forraine ſeeds:
You ne're oppreſt me with a mothers groan,
Yet I expreſs to you a mothers care:
(Gods mercy maiden) do's it curd thy bloud
To ſay I am thy mother? what's the matter,
That this diſtempered meſſenger of wet,

The many colour'd Iris rounds thine eye?
-------Why, that you are my daughter?
Hel. That I am not.
Ol. Cou. I say I am your Mother.
Hel. Pardon Madam.
The Count Rossillion cannot be my brother:
I am from humble, he from honoured name:
No note upon my Parents, his all noble,
My Master, my dear Lord he is, and I
His servant live, and will his vassall die:
He must not be my brother.
Ol. Cou. Nor I your Mother.
Hel. You are my mother Madam, would you were
So that my Lord your Son were not my brother,
Indeed my mother, or were you both our mothers,
I care no more for, then I do for heaven,
So I were not his sister, cant no other,
But I Your daughter, he must be my brother.
Ol. Cou. Yes Hellen, you might be my daughter in law,
God shield you mean it not, daughter and mother
So strive upon your pulse; what pale agen?
My fear hath catch'd your fondness! now I see
The mistrie of your loveliness, and finde
Your salt tears head, now to all sence 'tis gross:
You love my son, invention is asham'd
Against the proclamation of thy passion
To say thou dost not: therefore tell me true,
But tell me then 'tis so, for look, thy cheeks
Confess it 'tone to th'other, and thine eyes
See it is so grossly shown in thy behaviour,
That in their kinde, they speak it, onely sin
And hellish obstinacy tye thy tongue
That truth should be suspected, speak, is't so?
If it be so, you have wound a goodly clew:
If it be not, forswear't: how ere I charge thee,
As heaven shall work in me for mine availe
To tell me truly.
Hel. Good Madam pardon me.
Cou. Do you love my Son?
Hel. Your pardon noble Mistris.
Cou. Love you my Son?
Hel. Do not you love him Madam?
Cou. Go not about; my love hath in't a bond
Whereof the world takes note: Come, come, disclose
The state of your affection, for your passions
Have to the full appeach'd.
Hel. Then I confess
Here on my knee, before high heavens and you,
That before you, and next unto high heaven, I love your Sonne:
My friends were poor but honest, so's my love:
Be not offended, for it hurts not him
That he is lov'd of me; I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suit,
Nor would I have him, till I do deserve him,
Yet never know how that desert should be:
I know I love in vain, strive against hope:
Yet in this captious, and intenible Sive
I still pour in the waters of my love,
And lack not to loose still; thus Indian like
Religious in mine error, I adore
Th Sun that looks upon his worshipper,
But knows of him no no more. My dearest Madam,
Let not your hate incounter with my love
For loving where you do; but if your self,
Whose aged honour cites a vertuous youth,
Did ever, in so true a flame of loving,
Wish chastly, and love dearly, that your Dian
Was both her self and love: O then give pitty
To her whose state is such, that cannot choose
But lend and give where she is sure to loose;
That seeks not to finde that, search implies,
But riddle like, lives sweetly where she dies.
Cou. Had you not lately an intent, speak truly,
To go to Paris?
Hel. Madam I had.
Cou. Wherefore? tell true.
Hel. I will tell true, by grace it self I swear:
You know my Father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prov'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience, had collected
For generall soveraignty: and that he will'd me
In heedfull'st reservation to bestow them,
As notes, whose faculties inclusive were,
More then they were in note: Amongst the rest,
There is a remedy, approv'd, set down,
To cure the desperate languishings whereof
The King is render'd lost.
Cou. This was your motive for Paris, was it, speak?
Hel. My Lord, your son, made me to think of this;
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the King,
Had from the conversation of my thoughts,
Happily been absent then.
Cou. But think you Hellen,
If you should tender your supposed aid,
He would receive it? He and his physicians
Are of one minde, He, that they cannot help him:
They, that they cannot help: how shall they credit
A poor unlearned Virgin, when the Schooles
Embowel'd of their doctrine, have left off
The danger to it self.
Hel. There's something in't
More then my Fathers skill, which was the great'st
Of his profession, that his good receipt,
Shall for my legacy be sanctified
Byth' luckiest stars in heaven, and would your honour
But give me leave to succes, I'de venture
The well lost life of mine, on his Graces cure,
By such a day and houre.
Cou. Do'st thou believ't?
Hel. I Madam knowingly.
Cou. Why, Hellen, thou shalt have my leave and love,
Means and attendants, and my loving greetings
To those of mine in Court, I'le stay at home
And pray Gods blessing unto thy attempt:
Be gone to morrow, and be sure of this:
What I can help thee to, thou shalt not miss. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter the King with divers young Lords, taking leave for the Florentine warre: Count Rosse, and Parolles. Florish Cornets.

King. Farewell young Lords, these warlike principles
Do not throw from you; and you my Lords farewell:
Share the advice betwixt you, if both gain, all
The gift doth stretch it self as 'tis receiv'd,
And is enough for both.
Lord. G. 'Tis our hope sir,

After

After well entred ſouldiers, to return
And finde your grace in health.
King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confeſs he owes the mallady
That doth my life beſiege: farewell young Lords,
Whether I live or die, be you the ſons
Of worthy French men: let higher Italy
(Thoſe bated that inherit but the fall
Of the laſt Monarchy) ſee that you come
Not to wooe honour, but to wed it, when
The braveſt queſtion ſhrinks: finde what you ſeek,
That fame may cry you loud: I ſay farewell.
L.G. Health at your bidding ſerve your Majeſty.
King. Thoſe girls of Italy, take heed of them,
They ſay our French, lack language to deny
If they demand: beware of being Captives
Before you ſerve.
Bo. Our hearts receive your warnings.
King. Farewell, come hither to me. (us.
1. Lo. G. Oh my ſweet Lord that you will ſtay behind
Par. 'Tis not his fault, the ſpark.
2. Lo. E. Oh 'tis brave warrs.
Par. Moſt admirable, I have ſeen thoſe warrs.
Roſſill. I am commanded here, and kept a coyle with,
Too young, and the next year, and 'tis too early.
Par. And thy minde ſtand too't boy,
Steale away bravely.
Roſſil. I ſhall ſtay here the forehorſe to a ſmock,
Creeking my ſhooes on the plain Maſonry,
Till honour be bought up, and no ſword worne
But one to dance with: by heaven, I'le ſteale away.
1. Lo. G. There's honour in the theft.
Par. Commit it Count.
2. Lo. E. I am your acceſſary, and ſo farewell.
Roſ. I grow to you, and our parting is a tortur'd body.
1. Lo. G. Farewell Captain.
2. Lo. E. Sweet Monſieur Parolles.
Par. Noble Heroes; my ſword and yours are kinne, good ſparks and luſtrous, a word good mettalls. You ſhall finde in the Regiment of Spinii, one Captain Spurio his Cicatrice, with an Emblem of war here on his ſiniſter cheek; it was this very ſword entrench'd it: ſay to him I live, and obſerve his reports of me.
L. G. We ſhall noble Captain.
Par. Mars doat on you for his novices, what will ye do?
Roſſ. Stay: the King.
Par. Uſe a more ſpacious ceremony to the Noble Lords, you have reſtrain'd your ſelf within the Liſt of too cold an adieu: be more expreſſive to them; for they wear themſelves in the cap of the time, there do muſter true gate; eat, ſpeak, and more under the influence of the moſt receiv'd ſtarre, and though the devill lead the meaſure, ſuch are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewell.
Roſſ. And I will do ſo.
Par. Worthy fellows, and like to prove moſt ſinewie ſword-men. Exeunt.

Enter Lafew.

L. Laf. Pardon my Lord for me and for my tidings.
King. I'le ſee thee to ſtand up. (pardon,
L. Laf. Then here's a man ſtands that hath brought his
I would you had kneel'd my Lord to ask me mercy,
And that at my bidding you could ſo ſtand up.
King. I would I had, ſo I had broke thy pate
And ask't thee mercy for't.
Laf. Goodfaith a-croſs, but my good Lord 'tis thus,
Will you be cur'd of your infirmity?
King. No.
Laf. O will you eat no grapes my royall fox?
Yes but you will, my noble grapes, and if
My royall fox could reach them: I have ſeen a medicine
That's able to breath life into a ſtone,
Quicken a rock, and make you dance Canary
With ſprightly fire and motion, whoſe ſimple touch
Is powerfull to araiſe King Pippen, nay
To give great Charlemain a pen in's hand
And write to her a love-line.
Kin. What her is this?
Laf. Why doctor ſhe: my Lord, there's one arriv'd,
If you will ſee her: now by my faith and honour,
If ſeriouſly I may convoy my thoughts
In this my light deliverance, I have ſpoke
With one, that in her ſex, her years, profeſſion,
Wiſdome and conſtancy, hath amaz'd me more
Then I dare blame my weakneſs: will you ſee her?
For that is her demand, and know her buſineſs?
That done, laugh well at me.
Kin. Now good Lafew.
Bring in the admiration, that we with thee
May ſpend our wonder too, or take of thine
By wondring how thou took'k it.
Laf. Nay, I'le fit you,
And not be all day neither,
Kin. Thus he his ſpeciall nothing ever prologues.
Laf. Nay, come your wayes.

Enter Hellen.

Kin. This haſte hath wings indeed.
Laf. Nay, come your wayes,
This is his Majeſty, ſay your minde to him,
A traitor you do looke like, but ſuch traitors
His Majeſty ſeldome fears, I am Creſſeds Uncle,
That dare leave two together, fare you well. Exit.
Kin. Now fair one, do's your buſineſs follow us?
Hel. I my good Lord.
Gerard de Narbon was my father,
In what he did profeſs, well found.
King. I knew him.
Hel. The rather will I ſpare my praiſes towards him,
Knowing him is enough: on's bed of death,
Many receits he gave me, namely one,
Which as the deareſt iſſue of his practiſe
And of his old experience, th'onely darling,
He bad me ſtore up, as a triple eye,
Safer then mine own two: more dear I have ſo,
And hearing your high Majeſty is touch'd
With that malignant cauſe, wherein the honour
Of my dear fathers gift, ſtands chief in power;
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humbleneſs.
King. We thank you maiden,
But may not be ſo credulous of cure,
When our moſt learned Doctors leave us, and
The Congregated Colledge have concluded,
That labouring art can never ranſome nature
From her unaydible eſtate: I ſay me muſt not
So ſtain our judgement, or corrupt our hope,
To proſtitute our paſt-cure maladie
To empericks, or to diſſever ſo
Our great ſelf and our credit, to eſteem
A ſenceleſs help, when help paſt ſence we deem.

Hel. My

Hell. My duty then ſhall pay me for my pains:
I will no more enforce my office on you,
Humbly intreating from your royall thoughts,
A modeſt one to bear me back again.
Kin. I cannot give thee leſſe to be call'd gratefull:
Thou thought'ſt to help me, and ſuch thanks I give,
As one near death to thoſe that wiſh him live:
But what at full I know, thou know'ſt no part,
I knowing all my perill, thou no Art.
Hell. What I can doe, can doe no hurt to try,
Since you ſet up your reſt 'gainſt remedy:
He that of greateſt works is finiſher,
Oft does them by the weakeſt miniſter:
So holy Writ, in babes, hath judgement ſhown,
When Judges have been babes, great floods have flown
From ſimple ſources, and great Seas have dried,
When Miracles have by the great'ſt been denied.
Oft expectation failes, and moſt oft there
Where moſt it promiſes: and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldeſt, and deſpair moſt ſhifts.
Kin. I muſt not hear thee, fare thee well kind maid,
Thy pains not us'd, muſt by thy ſelf be paid,
Proffers not took, reap thanks for their reward.
Hell. Inſpired Merit ſo by breath is bard:
It is not ſo with him that all things knowes
As 'tis with us, that ſquare our gueſſe by ſhowes:
But moſt it is preſumption in us, when
The help of heaven we count the act of men.
Dear ſir, to my endeavours give conſent,
Of heaven, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an Impoſtor, that proclaim
My ſelf againſt the levill of mine aime,
But know, I think, and think I know moſt ſure,
My art is not paſt power, nor you paſt cure.
King. Art thou ſo confident? Within what ſpace
Hop'ſt thou my cure?
Hel. The greateſt grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horſes of the ſun ſhall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnall ring.
Ere twice in murke and occidentall damp,
Moiſt Heſperus hath quench'd her ſleepy Lamp:
Or four and twenty times the Pilots glaſſe
Hath told the thieviſh minutes, how they paſſe:
What is infirm, from your ſound parts ſhall flie,
Health ſhall live free, and ſickneſſe freely die.
King. Upon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'ſt thou venture?
Hel. Taxe of impudence,
A ſtrumpets boldneſſe, a divulged ſhame
Traduc'd by odious ballads: my maidens name
Seard otherwiſe, no worſe of worſt extended
With vileſt torture, let my life be ended.
Kin. Me thinks in thee ſome bleſſed ſpirit doth ſpeak
His powerfull ſound, wherein an organ weak:
And what impoſſibility would ſlay
In common ſenſe, ſence ſaves another way:
Thy life is dear, for all that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath eſtimate:
Youth, beauty, wiſedome, courage, all
That happineſſe and prime, can happy call:
Thou this to hazard, needs muſt intimate
Skill infinite, or monſtrous deſperate:
Sweet practiſer, Thy Phyſick I will try,
That miniſters thine own death if I die.
Hel. If I break time, or flinch in property
Of what I ſpoke, unpittied let me die,
And well deſerv'd: not helping, death's my fee,
But if I help, what doe you promiſe me.
Kin. Make thy demand.
Hel. But will you make it even?
Kin. I by my Scepter, and my hopes of help.
Hel. Then ſhalt thou give me with thy kingly hand,
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To chooſe from forth the royall blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy ſtate:
But ſuch a one thy vaſſall, whom I know
Is free for me to aske, thee to beſtow.
Kin. Here is my hand, the premiſes obſerv'd,
Thy will by my performance ſhall be ſerv'd:
So make the choyce of thine own time, for I
Thy reſolv'd Patient, on thee ſtill relie:
More ſhould I queſtion thee, and more I muſt,
Though more to know, could not be more to truſt:
From whence thou cam'ſt, how tended on, but reſt
Unqueſtion'd welcome, and undoubted bleſt.
Give me ſome help here hoa, if thou proceed,
As high as word, my deed ſhall match thy deed.

Exeunt.

Enter Counteſſe, and Clown.

Lady. Come on, ſir, I ſhall now put you to the height of your breeding.
Clown. I will ſhew my ſelf highly fed, and lowly taught, I know my buſineſſe is but to the Court.
Lady. To the Court, why what place make you ſpeciall, when you put off that with ſuch contempt, but to the Court?
Clo. Truly, Madam, if God have lent a man any manners, he may eaſily put it off at Court: he that cannot make a legge, put off's cap, kiſſe his hand, and ſay nothing, has neither legge, hands, lip, nor cap; and indeed ſuch a fellow, to ſay preciſely, were not for the Court, but for me, I have an anſwer will ſerve all men.
Lady. Marry that's a bountifull anſwer that fits all queſtions.
Clo. It is like a Barbers Chair, that fits all buttocks, the pin-buttock, the quatch-buttock, the brawn-buttock, or any buttock.
Lady. Will your anſwer ſerve fit to all queſtions?
Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an Attorney, as your French Crown for your Taffaty Punk, as Tibs Ruſh for Tom's fore-finger, as a Pancake for Shrove-tueſday, a Morris for May-day, as the naile to his hole, the Cuckold to his Horn, as a ſcolding Quean to a rangling Knave, as the Nuns lip to the Friar's mouth, nay, as the Pudding to his skin.
Lady. Have you, I ſay, an anſwer of ſuch fitneſſe for all queſtions?
Clo. From below your Duke, to beneath your Conſtable, it will fit any queſtion.
Lady. It muſt be an anſwer of moſt monſtrous ſize, that muſt fit all demands.
Clo. But a trifle neither in good faith, if the learned ſhould ſpeak truth of it: here it is, and all that belongs to't. Aske me if I am a Courtier, it ſhall doe you no harm to learn.
Lady. To be young again if we could: I will be a fool in queſtion, hoping to be the wiſer by your anſwer.

Lady.

I pray you sir, are you a Courtier?

Clo. O Lord sir there's a simple putting off: more, more, a hundred of them.

La. Sir I am a poor friend of yours, that loves you.

Clo. O Lord sir, thick, thick, spare not me.

La. I think sir, you can eat none of this homely meat.

Clo. O Lord sir; nay put me too't, I warrant you

La. You were lately whipt, sir, as I think.

Clo. O Lord, sir, spare not me.

La. Do you cry, O Lord sir, at your whipping, and spare not me? Indeed your, O Lord sir, is very sequent to your whipping: you would answer very well to a whippink if you were but bound too't.

Clo. I ne're had worse luck in my life in my, O Lord sir: I see things may serve long, but not serve ever.

La. I play the noble huswife with the time, to entertain it so merrily with a foole.

Clo. O Lord sir, why there't serves well agen.

La. And end; sir to your businesse: give Hellen this,
And urge her to a present answer back,
Commend me to my kinsmen, and my son,
This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.

La. Not much imployment for you, you understand me.

Clo. Most fruitfully, I am there, before my legs.

La. Haste you agen. Exeunt.

Enter Count, Lafew, and Parolles.

Ol. Laf. They say miracles are past, and we have our Philosophicall person, to make moderne and familiar things supernaturall and causelesse. Hence is it, that we make trifles of terrours, ensconsing our selves into seeming knowledge, when we should submit our selves to an unknown fear.

Par. Why 'tis the rarest argument of wonder, that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ros. And so 'tis.

Ol. Laf. To be relinquish'd of the Artists.

Par. So I say both of Galen and Paracelsus.

Ol. Laf. Of all the learned and authentick fellows.

Par. Right, so I say.

Ol. Laf. That gave him out incureable.

Par. Why there 'tis, so say I too.

Ol. Laf. Not to be help'd.

Par. Right, as 'twere a man assur'd of a------

Ol. Laf. Uncertain life, and sure death.

Par. Just you say well: so would I have said.

Ol. Laf. I may truly say, it is a novelty to the world.

Par. It is indeed if you will have it in the shewing, you shall read it in what do ye call there.

Ol. Laf. A shewing of a heavenly effect in an earthly Actor.

Par. That's it, I would have said, the very same.

Ol. Laf. Why your Dolphin is not lustier: for me I speak in respect-------

Par. Nay 'tis strange, 'tis very strange, that is the brief and the tedious of it, and he's of a most facinerious spirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the-----

Ol. Laf. Very hand of heaven.

Par. I, so I say.

Ol. Laf. In a most weak------

Par. And debile minister great power, great transcendence, which should indeed give us a further use to be made, then onely the recov'ry of the King, as to be----

Ol. Laf. Generally thankfull.

Enter King, Helen, and attendants.

Par. I would have said it, you said well: here comes the King.

Ol. Laf. Lustick, as the Dutchman sayes: I'le like a maid the better while I have a tooth in my head: why he's able to lead her to a Carranto.

Par. Mor du vinager, is not this Helen?

Ol. Laf. Fore God I think so.

King. Go call before me all the Lords in Court,
Sit, my preserver, by thy patients side,
And with this healthfull hand whose banish'd sence
Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receive
The confirmation of my promis'd gift,
Which but attends thy naming.

Enter three or four Lords.

Fair Maid, send forth thine eye, this youthfull parcell
Of Noble Batchellors, stand at my bestowing,
Ore whom both Soveraigne power, and fathers voice
I have to use; thy frank election make,
Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake.

Hel. To each of you, one fair and vertuous Mistris;
Fall when love please: marry to each, but one.

Ol. Laf. I'de give bay curtall, and his furniture,
My mouth no more were broken then these boyes,
And writ as little beard.

King. Peruse them well:
Not one of those, but had a Noble father.

She addresses her to a Lord.

Hel. Gentlemen, heaven hath through me, restor'd the King to health.

All. We understand it, and thank heaven for you.

Hel. I am a simple Maid, and therein wealthiest,
That I protest; I simply am a maid:
Please it your Majesty, I have done already:
The blushes in my cheeks thus whisper me.

Kin. We blush that thou should'st choose, but be refused;
Let not white death sit on thy cheeks for ever,
We'll ne're come there again.
Make choice and see,
Who shuns thy love, shuns all his love in me.

Hel. Now Dian from thy Altar do I fly,
And to impartiall Jove, that God most high
Do my sighes stream: Sir, will you hear my suit?

1. Lo. And grant it.

Hel. Thanks sir, all the rest is mute.

Ol. Laf. I had rather be in this choice, then throw
A deuse-ace for my life.

Hel. The honour sir, that flames in your fair eyes,
Before I speak too threatningly replyes:
Love make your fortunes, twenty times above
Her that so wishes, and her humble love.

2. Lo. No better if you please.

Hel. My wish receive,
Which great Jove grant, and so I take my leave.

Ol. Laf. Do all they deny her? And they were sons of mine, I'de have them whip'd, or I would send them to'th Turk to make Eunuches of.

Hel. Be not afraid that I your hand should take,
I'le never do you wrong for your own sake:
Blessing upon your vowes, and in your bed
Finde fairer fortune, if you ere wed.

Ol. Laf. These boyes are boyes of Ice, they'le none have haue her: ſure they are baſtards to the Engliſh, the French ne're got em.

Hel. You are too young, too happy, and too good
To make your ſon out of my bloud.

4. Lord. Fair one, I think not ſo,

Ol. Lord. There's one grape yet, I am ſure my father drunk wine. But if thou be'ſt not an aſſe, I am a youth of fourteen: I have known thee already.

Hel. I dare not ſay I take, but I give
Me and my ſervice, ever whil'ſt I live
Into your guiding power: This is the man.

King. Why then young Bertram take her, ſhe's thy wife.

Ber. My wife my Liege? I ſhall beſeech your highneſs,
In ſuch a buſineſſe, give me leave to uſe
The help of mine own eyes.

Kin. Know'ſt thou not, Bertram, what ſhe hath done for me?

Ber. Yes my good Lord, but never hope to know why I ſhould marry her.

King. Thou know'ſt ſhe has rais'd me from my ſickly bed.

Ber. But follows it my Lord, to bring me down
Muſt anſwer for your raiſing? I know her well:
She had her breeding at my fathers charge:
A poor Phyſicians daughter my wife? Diſdain
Rather corrupt me ever.

King. 'Tis onely Title thou diſdainſt in her, the which
I can build up: ſtrange is it that our blouds
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound diſtinction: yet ſtands off
In differences of mightie. If ſhe be
All that is virtuous (ſave what thou diſlik'ſt)
A poor Phyſician's daughter, thou diſlik'ſt
Of Virtue for the name: but do not ſo:
From loweſt place, whence virtuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by th' doer's deed.
Where great addition ſwells, and virtue none,
It is a dropſied honour, Good alone,
Is good without a name? Vileneſs is ſo:
The property by what it is, ſhould go,
Not by the title. She is young, wiſe, fair,
In theſe, to Nature ſhe's immediate heir:
And theſe breed honour: that is honours ſcorn,
Which challenges it ſelf as honours born,
And is not like the ſire: Honours beſt thrive,
When rather from our acts we them derive
Then our fore-goers: the meer word's a ſlave
Deboſh'd on every tombe, on every grave:
A lying Trophee, and as oft is dumb,
Where duſt, and damn'd oblivion is the Tomb.
Of honour'd bones indeed, what ſhould be ſaid?
If thou canſt like this creature, as a maid,
I can create the reſt: Vertue, and ſhe
Is her own dowre: Honour and wealth, from me.

Ber. I cannot love her, nor will ſtrive to doo't.

King. Thou wrong'ſt thy ſelf, if thou ſhould'ſt ſtrive to chooſe.

Hel. That you are well reſtor'd my Lord, I'me glad:
Let the reſt go.

King. My Honor's at the ſtake, which to defeat
I muſt produce my power. Here, take her hand,
Proud ſcornfull boy, unworthy this good gift,
That doſt in vile miſpriſion ſhackle up
My love, and her deſert: that can'ſt not dream,
We poizing us in her defective ſcale,
Shall weigh thee to the beam: That wilt not know,
It is in Us to plant thine Honour, where
We pleaſe to have it grow. Check thy contempt:
Obey Our will, which travells in thy good:
Believe not thy diſdain, but preſently
Do thine own fortunes that obedient right
Which both thy duty owes, and our power claims.
Or I will throw thee from my cares for ever
Into the ſtaggers and careleſſe lapſe
Of youth and ignorance: both my revenge and hate
Looſing upon thee, in the name of juſtice,
Without all terms of pitty. Speak thine anſwer.

Ber. Pardon my gracious Lord: for I ſubmit
My fancie to your eyes, when I conſider
What great creation, and what dole of honour
Flies where you bid it: I finde that ſhe which late
Was in my nobler thoughts, moſt baſe: is now
The praiſed of the King, who ſo ennobled,
Is as 'twere born ſo.

King. Take her by the hand.
And tell her ſhe is thine: to whom I promiſe
A counterpoize: If not in thy eſtate,
A ballance more repleat.

Ber. I take her hand.

Kin. Good fortune, and the favour of the King
Smile upon the contract: whoſe Ceremony
Shall ſeem expedient on the now born brief,
And be perform'd to night: the ſolemne Feaſt
Shall more attend upon the coming ſpace,
Expecting abſent friends. As thou lov'ſt her,
Thy lov's to me Religious: elſe, do's erre. Exeunt.

Parolles and Lafew ſtay behind, commenting of this wedding.

Laf. Doe you hear Monſieur? a word with you.

Par. Your pleaſure ſir.

Laf. Your Lord and Maſter did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation? my Lord? my Maſter?

Laf. I, is it not a Language I ſpeak?

Par. A moſt harſh one, and not to be underſtood without bloody ſucceeding. My Maſter?

Laf. Are you companion to the Count Roſſillion?

Par. To any Count, to all Counts: to what is man.

Laf. To what is Counts man: Counts maſter is of another ſtile.

Par. You are too old ſir: Let it ſatisfie you, you are too old.

Laf. I muſt tell thee ſirrah, I write Man: to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well doe, I dare not doe.

Laf. I did think thee for two ordinaries to be a pretty wiſe fellow: If thou didſt make tollerable vent of thy travel, it might paſſe: yet the ſcarfes and the banners about thee, did manifoldly diſſwade me from believing thee a veſſell of too great a burthen. I have now found thee, when I loſe thee again, I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking up, and that thou're ſcarce worth.

Par. Hadſt thou not the priviledge of Antiquity upon thee.

Laf. Doe not plunge thy ſelf too far in anger, leaſt thou haſten thy triall: which is, Lord have mercy on thee for a hen; ſo my good window of Lattice, fare thee well, thy caſement I need not open, I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My Lord, you give me moſt egregious indignity.

Laf.

Laf. I, withall my heart, and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I have not my Lord deſerv'd it.

Laf. Yes, good faith, ev'ry dram of it, and I will not bate thee a ſcruple.

Par. Well, I ſhall be wiſer.

Laf. Ev'n as ſoon as thou can'ſt, for thou haſt to pull at a ſmack a'th contrary. If ever thou bee'ſt bound in thy skarfe and beaten, thou ſhalt finde what it is to be proud of thy bondage, I have a deſire to hold my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may ſay in the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My Lord you do me moſt inſupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell pains for thy ſake, and my poor doing eternall: for doing I am paſt, as I will by thee, in what motion age will give me leave. Exit.

Par. Well, thou haſt a ſon ſhall take this diſgrace off me; ſcurvy, old, filthy, ſcurvy Lord: Well, I muſt be patient, there is no fettering of authority. I'le beat him (by my life) if I can meet him with any convenience, and he were double and double a Lord. I'le have no more pitty of his age then I would have of-------I'le beat him, and if I could but meet him agen.

Enter Lafew.

Laf. Sirra, your Lord and Maſter's married, there's newes for you: you have a new Miſtris.

Par. I moſt unfainedly beſeech your Lordſhip to make ſome reſervation of your wrongs. He is my good Lord, whom I ſerve above is my Maſter.

Laf. Who? God.

Par. I ſir.

Laf. The devill it is, that's thy maſter. Why dooeſt thou garter up thy armes a this faſhion? Doſt make hoſe of thy ſleeves? Do other ſervants ſo? Thou were beſt ſet thy lower part where thy noſe ſtands. By mine Honour, if I were but two houres younger, I'de beat thee: methink'ſt thou art a generall offence, and every man ſhould beat thee: I think thou waſt created for men to breath themſelves upon thee.

Par. This is hard and undeſerved meaſure my Lord.

Laf. Go to ſir, you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernell out of a Pomgranat, you are a vagabond, and no true traveller: you are more ſawcie with Lords and honorable perſonages, then the commiſſion of your birth and vertue gives you Heraldry. You are not worth another word, elſe I'de call you knave. I leave you. Exit.

Enter Count Roſſillion.

Par. Good, very good, it is ſo then: good, very good, let it be conceal'd a while.

Ros. Undone, and forfeited to cares for ever.

Par. What's the matter ſweet-heart?

Roſ. Although before the ſolemn Prieſt I have ſworn, I will not bed her.

Par. What? what ſweet heart?

Roſ. O my Parrolles, they have married me:
I'le to the Tuſcan warrs, and never bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits,
The tread of a mans foot: too'th warrs.

Roſ. There's letters from my mother: What th'import is, I know not yet.

Par. I that would be known: too'th warrs my boy, too'th warrs:
He wears his honour in a box unſeen,
That huggs his kickſie wickſie here at home,
Spending his manly marrow in her armes
Which ſhould ſuſtain the bound and high curvet
Of Marſ's fiery ſteed: to other Regions,
France is a ſtable, we that dwell in't Jades,
Therefore to th' warre.

Roſ. It ſhall be ſo, I'le ſend her to my houſe,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled: Write to the King
That which I durſt not ſpeak. His preſent gift
Shall furniſh me to thoſe Italian fields
Where noble fellows ſtrike: War is no ſtrife
To the dark houſe, and the detected wife.

Par. Will this Caprichio hold in thee, art ſure?

Roſ. Go with me to my chamber, and adviſe me.
I'le ſend her ſtraight away: To morrow
I'le to the warrs, ſhe to her ſingle ſorrow.

Par. Why theſe balls bound, there's noiſe in it. 'Tis hard
A young man married, is a man that's mar'd:
Therefore away, and leave her bravely: go,
The King ha's done you wrong: but hush 'tis ſo. Exit.

Enter Helena and Clown.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly, is ſhe well?

Clo. She is not well, but yet ſhe ha's her health, ſhe's very merry, but yet ſhe is not well: but thanks be given ſhe's very well, and want's nothing i'th world: but yet ſhe is not well.

Hel. If ſhe be very well, what do's ſhe ayle, that ſhe's not very well?

Clo. Truly ſhe's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One that ſhe is not in heaven, whither God ſend her quickly: the other that ſhe's in earth, from whence God ſend her quickly.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Bleſs you my fortunate Ladie,

Hel. I hope ſir I have your good will to have mine own good fortune.

Par. You had my prayers to lead them on, and to keep them on, have them ſtill. O my knave, how do's my old Lady?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles and I her money, I would ſhe did as you ſay.

Par. Why I ſay nothing.

Clo. Marry you are the wiſer man: for many a mans tongue ſhakes out his maſters undoing: to ſay nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing, is to be a great part of your title, which is within a very little of nothing.

Par. Away, th'art a knave.

Clo. You ſhould have ſaid ſir before a knave, th'art a knave, that's before th'art a knave: this had been truth ſir.

Par. Go to, thou art a witty foole, I have found thee.

Clo. Did you finde me in your ſelf ſir, or were you taught to finde me.

Clo. The ſearch ſir was profitable, and much Fool may you finde in you, even to the worlds pleaſure, and the encreaſe of laughter.

Par. A good knave ifaith, and well fed.
Madam, my Lord will go away to night,

A very ſerious buſineſſe calls on him :
The great prerogative and rite of love,
Which as your due time claimes, he do's acknowledge,
But puts it off by a compell'd reſtraint :
Whoſe want, and whoſe delay, is ſtrew'd with ſweets
Which they diſtill now in the curbed time,
To make the comming hour o'reflow with joy,
And pleaſure drown the brim.

Hel. What's his will elſe ?

Par. That you will take your inſtant leave a'th king,
And make this haſt as your own good proceeding
Strengthned with what Apologie you think
May make it probable need.

Hel. What more commands he ?

Par. That having this obtain'd, you preſently
Attend his further pleaſure.

Hel. In every thing I wait upon his will.

Par. I ſhall report it ſo. Exit Par.

Hel. I pray you come, ſirrah. Exit.

Enter Lafew and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope your Lordſhip thinks not him a ſouldier.

Ber. Yes my Lord, and of very valiant approoſe.

Laf. You have it from his own deliverance.

Ber. And by other warranted teſtimony.

Laf. Then my Diall goes not true, I took this Larke for a bunting.

Ber. I doe aſſure you my Lord, he is very great in knowledge, and accordingly valiant.

Laf. I have then ſinn'd againſt his experience, and tranſgreſt againſt his valour, and my ſtate that way is dangerous, ſince I cannot find in my heart to repent : Here he comes, I pray you make us friends, I will purſue the amity.

Enter Parolles.

Par Theſe things ſhall be done ſir.

Laf. Pray you ſir who's his Tailor ?

Par. Sir ?

Laf. O I know him well, I ſir, he ſir's a good workman, a very good Tailor.

Ber. Is ſhe gone to the king ?

Par. She is.

Ber. Will ſhe away to night ?

Par. As you'l have her.

Ber. I have writ my letters, casketed my treaſure,
Given order for our horſe, and to night,
When I ſhould take poſſeſſion of the Bride,
And ere I do begin.

Laf. A good traveller is ſomething at the latter end of a dinner, but on that lies three thirds, and uſes a known truth to paſſe a thouſand nothings with, ſhould be once heard, and thrice beaten. God ſave you Captain.

Ber. Is there any unkindneſſe between my Lord and you Monſieur ?

Par. I know not how I have deſerved to run into my Lords diſpleaſure.

Laf. You have made ſhift to run into't, boots and ſpurres and all : like him that leaps into the Cuſtard, and out of it you'll run again, rather then ſuffer queſtion for your reſidence.

Ber. It may be you have miſtaken him my Lord.

Laf. And ſhall doe ſo ever, though I took him at's prayers. Fare you well my Lord, and believe this of me, there can be no kernell in this light Nut : the ſoul of this man is his cloathes : Truſt him not in matter of heavy conſequence : I have kept of them tame, and know their natures. Farewell Monſieur, I have ſpoken better of you, then you have or will deſerve at my hands, but we muſt doe good againſt evill.

Par. An idle Lord, I ſwear.

Ber. I think ſo.

Par. Why doe you not know him ?

Ber. Yes, I doe know him well, and common ſpeech
Gives him a worthy paſſe. Here comes my clog.

Enter Helena.

Hel. I have ſir as I was commanded from you
Spoke with the King, and have procur'd his leave
For preſent parting, onely he deſires
Some private ſpeech with you.

Ber. I ſhall obey his will.
You muſt not marvell Helen at my courſe,
Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
The miniſtration, and required office
On my particular. Prepar'd I was not
For ſuch a buſineſſe, therefore am I found
So much unſettled : This drives me to entreat you,
That preſently you take your way for home,
And rather muſe then aske why I intreat you,
For my reſpects are better then they ſeem,
And my appointments have in them a need
Greater then ſhewes it ſelf at the firſt view,
To you that know them not. This to my mother,
'Twill be two dayes ere I ſhall ſee you, ſo
I leave you to your wiſdome.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing ſay,
But that I am your moſt obedient ſervant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And ever ſhall
With true obſervance ſeek to eeke out that
Wherein toward me my homely ſtarres have fail'd
To equall my great fortune.

Ber. Let that go : my haſte is very great. Farewell : Hie home.

Hel. Pray ſir your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you ſay ?

Hel. I am not worthy of the wealth I owe,
Nor dare I ſay 'tis mine : and yet it is,
But like a timorous thief, moſt fain would ſteal
What law do's vouch mine own.

Ber. What would you have ?

Hel. Something, and ſcarce ſo much : nothing indeed,
I would not tell you what I would my Lord : Faith yes,
Strangers and foes doe ſunder, and not kiſſe.

Ber. I pray you ſtay not, but in haſte to horſe,

Hel. I ſhall not break your bidding, good my Lord :
Where are my other men ? Monſieur, farewell. Exit.

Ber. Go thou toward home, where I will never come,
Whil'ſt I can ſhake my ſword, or hear the drumme :
Away, and for our flight.

Par. Bravely, Coragio.

Actus Tertius.

Flouriſh. Enter the Duke of Florence, the two Frenchmen, with a troop of Souldiers,

Duke. So that from point to point, now have you heard;

The

The fundamentall reasons of this warre,
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth,
And more thirsts after.

1. Lord. Holy seems the quarrell
Upon your Graces part: black and fearfull
On the opposer.

Duk. Therefore we marvell much our Cousin France
Would in so just a businesse, shut his bosome
Against our borrowing prayers.

French E. Good my Lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yield,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a Council frames,
By self unable motion, therefore dare not
Say what I think of it, since I have found
My self in my incertain grounds to fail
As often as I guest.

Du. Be it his pleasure.

Fre. G. But I am sure the younger of our nature,
That surfet on their ease, will day by day
Come here for Physick.

Du. Welcome shall they be:
And all the honours that can flye from us,
Shall on them settle: you know your places well,
When better fall, for your availes they fell.
To morrow to the field.

Enter Countesse and Clown.

Count. It hath happ'n'd; as I would have had it, save that he comes not along with her.

Clo. By my troth I take my young Lord to be a very melancholly man.

Cou. By what observance I pray you?

Clo. Why he will look upon his boot, and sing: mend the Ruffe, and sing: aske questions, and sing: pick his teeth, and sing: I know a man that had this trick of melancholly sold a goodly Mannor for a song.

Lad. Let me see what he writes, and when he meanes to come.

Clo. I have no mind to Isbell since I was at Court. Our old Ling, and our Isbels a'th Countrey, are nothing like your old Ling and your Isbels a'th Court: the brains of my Cupid's knock'd out, and I begin to love, as an old man loves money, with no stomack.

Lad. What have we here?

Clo. In that you have there. Exit.

A Letter.

I have sent you a daughter-in-Law: she hath recovered the King, and undone me: I have wedded her, Not bedded her, and sworn to make the Not eternall. You shall hear I am run away; know it before the report come. If there be breadth enough in the world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you.

Your unfortunate Son,
Bertram.

This is not well (rash and unbridled boy,)
To flye the favours of so good a King,
To pluck his indignation on thy head,
By the mispriſing of a Maid too virtuous
For the contempt of Empire.

Enter Clown.

Clo. O Madam, yonder is heavy newes within between two souldiers, and my young Lady.

La. What is the matter?

Clo. Nay there is some comfort in the newes, some comfort, your son will not be kill'd so soon as I thought he would.

La. Why should he be kill'd?

Clo. So say I, Madam, if he run a way; as I hear he does; the danger is in standing to't; that's the losse of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more. For my part, I only hear your son was run away.

Enter Hellen and two Gentlemen.

French E. Save you, good Madam.

Hel. Madam, my Lord is gone, for ever gone.

French G. Doe not say so.

La. Think upon patience; pray you Gentlemen,
I have felt so many quirks of joy and grief,
That the first face of neither on the start
Can woman me unto't. Where is my son, I pray you?

Fren. G. Madam, he's gone to serve the Duke of Florence.
We met him thitherward, for thence we came:
And after some dispatch in hand at Court,
Thither we bend again.

Hel. Look on his Letter, Madam, here's my Pasport.

When thou canst get the Ring upon my finger, which never shall come off, and shew me a child begotten of thy body, that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a [Then I write a [Never.]

This is a dreadfull sentence.

La. Brought you this Letter, Gentlemen?

1. G. I, Madam, and for the Contents sake are sorry for our paines.

Old. La. I prethee, Lady, have a better cheer,
If thou engrossest, all the griefs are thine,
Thou robb'st me of a moity: He was my son,
But I doe wash his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my childe. Towards Florence is he?

Fren. G. I, Madam.

La. And to be a soldier?

Fren. G. Such is his noble purpose, and believ't
The Duke will lay upon him all the honour
That good convenience claimes.

La. Return you thither?

Fren. E. I, Madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

Hel. Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France,
'Tis better.

La. Finde you that there?

Hel. I, Madam.

Fren. E. 'Tis but the boldnesse of his hand happily, which his heart was not consenting to.

La. Nothing in France untill he have no wife:
There's nothing here that is too good for him
But only she, and she deserves a Lord
That twenty such rude boyes might tend upon,
And call her hourely Mistresse. Who was with him?

Fren. E. A servant onely, and a Gentleman: which I have some times known.

La. Parolles, was it not?

Fren. E. I, my good Lady, he.

La. A very tainted fellow, and full of wickednesse,
My Son corrupts a well derived nature
With his inducement.

Fren. E. Indeed, good Lady, the fellow has a deal of that, too much, which holds him much to have.

La. Y'are welcome, Gentlemen, I will entreat you when you see my son, to tell him that his sword can never winne the honour that he looses: more I'le entreat you written to bear along.

Iren. G. We serve you, Madam, in that, and all your worthiest affaires.

La. Not so, but as we change our courtesies, Will you draw near? Exit.

Hel. Till I have no wife, I have nothing in France.
Nothing in France untill he has no wife:
Thou shalt have none Rossillion, none in France,
Then hast thou all again: poor Lord, is't I
That chase thee from thy Country, and expose
Those tender limbes of thine, to the event
Of the none-sparing warre? And is it I,
That drive thee from the sportive Court, where thou
Was't shot at with faire eyes, to be the marke
Of smoaky Muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride upon the violent speed of fire,
Fly with false aime, move the still-piercing aire
That stings with piercing, doe not touch my Lord:
Who ever shoots at him, I set him there.
Who ever charges on his forward brest,
I am the Caitiffe that doe hold him to it,
And though I kill him not, I am the cause
His death was so affected. Better 'twere
I met the ravine Lyon when he roar'd
With sharpe constraint of hunger: better 'twere,
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once. No, come thou home, Rossillion,
Whence honour but of danger winnes a scarre,
As oft it looses all. I will be gone:
My being here it is, that holds thee hence,
Shall I stay here to do't? No, no, although
The aire of Paradise did fan the house,
And Angels offic'd all: I will be gone,
That pittifull rumour may report my flight
To consolate thine ear. Come night, end day,
For with the darke (poor thief) I'le steal away. Exit.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Rossillion, Drumme and Trumpets, Soldiers, Parolles.

Duke. The Generall of our Horse thou art, and we
Great in our hope, lay our best love and credence
Upon thy promising fortune.

Ross. Sir, it is
A charge too heavy for my strength, but
We'l strive to bear it for your worthy sake,
To th'extreme edge of hazard.

Du. Then go thou forth,
And fortune play upon thy prosperous helm
As thy auspicious mistresse.

Ross. This very day,
Great Mars, I put my self into thy file,
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prove
A lover of thy Drumme; hater of love. Exeunt omnes.

Enter Countesse and Steward.

La. Alas! and would you take the letter of her:
Might you not know she would doe, as she has done,
By sending me a Letter. Read it agen.

Letter.

I am S. Jaques Pilgrim, thither gone:
Ambitious love hath so in me offended,
That bare-foot plod I the cold ground upon
With sainted vow my faults to have amended.
Write, write, that from the course of warre,
My dearest Master, your dear son, may hie,
Blesse him at home in peace, whil'st I from farre,
His name with zealous fervour sanctifie:
His taken labours bid him me forgive:
I his despightfull Juno sent him forth,
From Courtly friends, with camping foes to live,
Where death and danger dogs the heels of worth.
He is too good and fair for death, and me,
Whom I my self embrace, to set him free.

Ah what sharp stings are in her mildest words?
Rynaldo, you did never lack advice so much,
As letting her passe so: had I spoke with her,
I could have well diverted her intents,
Which thus she hath prevented.

Ste. Pardon me, Madam,
If I had given you this at over-night,
She might have been o'retane: and yet she writes
Pursuit would be but vain.

La. What Angel shall
Blesse this unworthy husband, he cannot thrive,
Unlesse her prayers, whom heaven delights to hear,
And loves to grant, reprieve him from the wrath
Of greatest Justice. Write, write, Rynaldo,
To this unworthy husband of his wife,
Let every word weigh heavy of her worth,
That he does weigh too light: my greatest grief,
Though little he doe feel it, set down sharply.
Dispatch the most convenient messenger,
When haply he shall hear that she is gone,
He will return, and hope I may that she
Hearing so much will speed her foot again,
Led hither by pure love: which of them both
Is dearest to me, I have no skill in sence
To make distinction: provide this Messenger:
My heart is heavy, and mine age is weak,
Grief would have teares, and sorrow bids me speak.
Exeunt.

A Tucket afarre off.

Enter an old Widow of Florence, her daughter, Violenta and Mariana, with other Citizens.

Widow. Nay come,
For if they doe approach the City,
We shall loose all the sight.

Dia. They say, the French Count has done
Most honourable service.

Wid. It is reported,
That he has taken their great'st Commander,
And that with his own hand he slew
The Dukes brother: we have lost our labour,
They are gone a contrary way: harke,
You may know by their Trumpets.

Maria. Come let's return again,
And suffice our selves with the report of it.
Well Diana, take heed of this French Earle,
The honour of a Maid is in her name,
And no Legacy is so rich
As honesty.

Wid. I have told my neighbour
How you have been sollicited by a Gentleman
His Companion.

Maria

Maria. I know that knave, hang him, one Parrolles, a filthy Officer he is in those suggestions for the young Earle: beware of them Diana; their promises, enticements, oathes, tokens, and all the engines of lust, are not the things they go under: many a maid hath been seduced by them, & the misery is example, that so terrible shewes in the wrack of maiden-hood, cannot for all that disswade succession, but that they are limed with the twigs that threatens them. I hope I need not to advise you further, but I hope your own grace will keep you where you are, though there were no further danger known, but the modesty which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not need to fear me.

Enter Hellen.

Wid. I hope so: look here comes a Pilgrim; I know she will lie at my house, thither they send one another; I'le question her. God save you Pilgrim, whether are you bound?

Hel. To S. Jaques le grand.
Where doe the Palmers lodge, I doe beseech you?

Wid. At the S. Francis here beside the Port.

Hel. Is this the way? A march afarre.

Wid. I marry is't. Harke you, they come this way:
If you will tarry, holy Pilgrim,
But till the troops come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd,
The rather for I think I know your hostesse
As ample as my self?

Hel. Is it your self?

Wid. If you shall please so Pilgrim.

Hel. I thank you, and will stay upon your leisure.

Wid. You came I think from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Here you shall see a Countriman of yours
That has done worthy service.

Hel. His name I pray you?

Dia. The Count Rossillion: know you such a one?

Hel. But by the eare that heares most nobly of him.
His face I know not.

Dia. Whatsomere he is,
He's bravely taken here. He stole from France
As 'tis reported: for the King had married him
Against his liking. Think you it is so?

Hel. I surely, meer the truth, I know his Lady.

Dia. There is a Gentleman that serves the Count,
Reports but coursely of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parrolles.

Hel. Oh, I believe with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great Count himself, she is too mean
To have her name repeated, all her deserving
Is a reserved honesty, and that
I have not heard examin'd.

Dia. Alas poor Lady.
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife
Of a detesting Lord.

Wid. I right good creature, wheresoe're she is,
Her heart weighs sadly: this young maid might doe her
A shrewd turn if she pleas'd.

Hel. How doe you mean?
May be, the amorous Count solicits her
In the unlawfull purpose.

Wid. He does indeed,
And brokes with all that can in such a suit,
Corrupt the tender honour of a Maid:
But she is arm'd for him, and keeps her guard
In honestest defence.

Drumme and Colours.
Enter Count Rossillion, Parrolles, and the whole Army.

Ma. The gods forbid else.

Wid. So, now they come:
That is Antonio the Dukes eldest son,
That Escalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchman?

Dia. He,
That with the plume, 'tis a most gallant fellow,
I would he lov'd his wife: if he were honester
He were much goodlier. Is't not a handsome Gentleman?

Hel. I like him well.

Dia. 'Tis pitty he is not honest: yonds that same knave
That leades him to these places: were I his Lady,
I would poyson that vile Rascall.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That Jack-an-apes with scarfes. Why is he melancholly?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i'th battell.

Par. Loose our drumme? Well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vext at something. Look he has spied us.

Wid. Marry hang you.

Mar. And your curtesie, for a ring-carrier. Exit.

Wid. The troop is past: Come Pilgrim, I will bring
You, where you shall host: Of injoyn'd penitents
There's four or five, to great S. Jaques bound,
Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thank you:
Please it this Matron, and this gentle Maid
To eat with us to night, the charge and thanking
Shall be for me, and to requite you further,
I will bestow some precepts on this virgin,
Worthy the note.

Both. We'l take your offer kindly. Exeunt.

Enter Count Rossillion and the Frenchmen, as at first.

Cap. E. Nay good my Lord put him to't; let him have his way.

Cap. G. If your Lordship find him not a Hilding, hold me no more in your respect.

Cap. E. On my life, my Lord, a bubble.

Ber. Doe you think I am so farre
Deceived in him?

Cap. E. Believe it, my Lord, in mine own direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speak of him as my Kinsman, he's a most notable Coward, an infinite and endlesse Lyar, an hourely promise-breaker, the owner of no one good quality, worthy your Lordships entertainment.

Cap. G. It were fit you knew him, least reposing too farre in his virtue which he hath not, he might at some great and trusty businesse, in a main danger, fail you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

Cap. G. None better then to let him fetch off his drumme, which you hear him so confidently undertake to doe.

Cap. E. I with a troop of Florentines will suddenly sur-

Prize him; such I will have whom I am sure he knowes not from the enemy: we will binde and hood-wink him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the Leager of the adversaries, when we bring him to our own tents: be but your Lordship present at his examination, if he doe not for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base fear, offer to betray you, and deliver all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the divine forfeit upon his soul upon oath, never trust my judgement in any thing.

Cap. G. O, for the love of laughter, let him fetch his drumme, he sayes he has a stratagem for't: when your Lordsh p sees the bottom of this successe in't, and to what mettle this counterfeit lump of ours will be melted, if you give him not John Drumm's entertainment, your inclining cannot be removed. Here he comes.

Enter Parolles.

Cap. E. O, for the love of laughter, hinder not the honour of his design, let him fetch off his drumme in any hand.

Ber. How now Monsieur? This drumme sticks sorely in your disposition.

Cap. G. A pox on't, let it go, 'tis but a drumme.

Par. But a drumme! Is't but a drumme? A drumme so lost. There was excellent command, to charge in with our horse upon our own wings, and to rend our own souldiers.

Cap. G. That was not to be blam'd in the command of the service, it was a disaster of warre, that Cæsar himself could not have prevented, if he had been there to command.

Ber. Well, we cannot greatly condemn our successe: some dishonour we had in the losse of that drumme, but it is not to be recovered.

Par. It might have been recovered.

Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recovered, but that the merit of service is seldome attributed to the true and exact performer, I would have that drumme or another, or hic jacet.

Ber. Why, if you have stomack to't, Monsieur: if you think your mystery in stratagem can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimous in the enterprize and go on, I will grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speed well in it, the Duke shall both speak of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatnesse, even to the utmost syllable of your worthinesse.

Par. By the hand of a souldier, I will undertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. I'le about it this evening, and I will presently pen down my dilemmaes, encourage my self in my certainty, put my self into my mortall preparation: and by midnight look to hear further from me.

Ber. May I be bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it.

Par. I know not what the successe will be, my Lord, but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know th'art valiant,
And to the possibility of thy souldier-ship,
Will subscribe for thee: Farewell. Exit.

Par. I love not many words.

Cap. E. No more then a fish loves water. Is not this a strange fellow, my Lord, that so confidently seems to undertake this businesse, which he knowes is not to be done, damnes himself to doe, and dares better be damn'd then to do't.

Cap. G. You doe not know him, my Lord, as we doe, certain it is, that he will steal himself into a mans favour, and for a week escape a great deale of discoveries, but when you find him out, you have him ever after.

Ber. Why doe you think he will make no deed at all of this, that so seriously he do's addresse himself unto?

Cap. E. None in the world, but return with an invention, and clap upon you two or three probable lies: but we have almost imbost him, you shall see his fall to night; for indeed he is not for your Lordships respect.

Cap. G. We'l make you some sport with the Fox ere we case him. He was first smoak'd by the old Lord Lafew; when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall find him, which you shall see this very night.

Cap. E. I must go look my twigs,
He shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother he shall go along with me.

Cap. G. As't please your Lordship, I'le leave you.

Ber. Now will I lead you to the house, and shew you
The Lasse I spoke of.

Cap. E. But you say she's honest.

Ber. That's all the fault: I spoke with her but once,
And found her wondrous cold, but I sent to her
By this same Coxcombe that we have i'th' winde
Tokens and Letters, which she did rebend,
And this is all I have done: She's a fair creature,
Will you go see her?

Cap. E. With all my heart, my Lord. Exeunt.

Enter Hellen, and Widow.

Hel. If you misdoubt me that I am not she,
I know not how I shall assure you further,
But I shall loose the grounds I work upon.

Wid. Though my estate be fain, I was well born,
Nothing acquainted with these businesses,
And would not put my reputation now
In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you.
First give me trust, the Count he is my husband,
And what to your sworn counsel I have spoken,
Is so from word to word: and then you cannot
By the good aide that I of you shall borrow,
Erre in bestowing it.

Wid. I should believe you,
For you have shew'd me that which well approves
Y'are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of Gold,
And let me buy your friendly help thus farre,
Which I will over-pay, and pay again
When I have found it. The Count he wooes your daughter,
Layes down his wanton siege before her beauty,
Resolves to carry her: let her in fine consent
As we'l direct her how 'tis best to bear it:
Now this important blood will naught deny,
That she'l demand: a ring the County weares,
That downward hath succeeded in his house
From son to son, some four or five descents,

Since

Since the first father wore it. This Ring he holds
In most rich choyce: yet in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not seem too dear,
How e're repented after.

Wid. Now I see the bottom of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawfull then, it is no more,
But that your daughter ere she seems as wonne,
Desires this Ring; appoints him an encounter,
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Her self most chastly absent: after this
To marry her, I'le adde three thousand Crowns
To what is past already.

Wid. I have yielded:
Instruct my daughter how she shall persever,
That time and place with this deceit so lawfull
May prove coherent. Every night he comes
With Musicks of all sorts, and songs compos'd
To her unworthinesse: It nothing steeds us
To chide him from our eeves, for he persists
As if his life lay on't.

Hel. Why then to night
Let us assay our plot, which if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawfull deed;
And lawfull meaning in a lawfull act,
Where both not sin, and yet a sinfull fact.
But let's about it.

Actus Quartus.

Enter one of the Frenchmen, with five or six other souldiers in ambush.

1. Lord E. He can come no other way but by this hedge corner: when you sally upon him, speak what terrible Language you will though you understand it not your selves, no matter: for we must not seem to understand him, unlesse some one among us, whom we must produce for an Interpreter.

1. Sol. Good Captain let me be th' Interpreter.

Lor. E. Art not acquainted with him? knowes he not thy voyce?

1. Sol. No, sir, I warrant you.

Lo. E. But what linsie-woolsie hast thou to speak to us again?

1. Sol. E'n such as you speak to me.

Lo. E. He must think us some band of strangers, i'th adversaries entertainment. Now he hath a smack of all neighbouring Languages: therefore we must every one be a man of his own fancy, not to know what we speak one to another: so we seem to know, is to know straight our purpose: Chough's language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you Interpreter, you must seem very politick. But couch hoa, here he comes, to beguile two houres in a sleep, and then to return and swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Ten a clock: Within these three houres 'twill be time enough to go home. What shall I say I have done? It must be a very plausive invention that carries it. They begin to smoak me, and disgraces have of late knock'd too often at my door: I find my tongue is too fool-hardy, but my heart hath the fear of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

Lo. E. This is the first that e're thine own tongue was guilty of.

Par. What the devil should move me to undertake the recovery of this drumme, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give my self some hurts, and say I got them in exploit: yet slight ones will not carry it. They will say, came you off with so little? And great ones I dare not give, wherefore what's the instance. Tongue, I must put you into a Butter-womans mouth, and buy my self another of Bajazeths Mules, if you prattle me into these perils.

Lo. E. Is it possible he should know what he is, and be that he is.

Par. I would the cutting of my garments would serve the turn, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

Lo. E. We cannot afford you so.

Par. Or the baring of my beard, and to say it was in stratagem.

Lo. E. 'Twould not doe.

Par. Or to drown my cloathes, and say I was stript.

Lo. E. Hardly serve.

Par. Though I swore I leapt from the window of the Citadell.

Lo. E. How deep?

Par. Thirty fadome.

Lo. E. Three great oathes would scarce make that be believed.

Pa. I would I had any drumme of the enemies, I would swear I recover'd it.

Lo. E. You shall near one anon.

Par. A drumme now of the enemies.

Alarum within.

Lo. E. Throco movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, villiando par corbo, cargo.

Par. O ransome, ransome,
Doe not hide mine eyes.

Inter. Baskos thromuldo beskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos Regiment,
And I shall loose my life for want of language.
If there be here German or Dane, low Dutch,
Italian, or French, let him speak to me,
I'le discover that which shall undoe the Florentine.

Int. Boskos vauvado, I understand thee, and can speak thy tongue: Kerelybonto sir, betake thee to thy faith, for seventeen ponyards are at thy bosome.

Par. Oh.

Int. Oh pray, pray, pray,
Manchа revancha dulche.

Lo. E. Osceorbidulchos voliverco.

Int. The Generall is content to spare thee yet,
And hood-winkt as thou art, will lead thee on
To gather from thee. Haply thou mayst inform
Something to save thy life.

Par. O let me live,
And all the secrets of our camp I'le shew,
Their force, their purposes: Nay, I'le speak that,
Which you will wonder at.

Int. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I doe not, damn me.

Int. Acordo linta.
Come on, thou art granted space. Exit.

A short Alarum within.

L. E. Go tell the Count Roſſillion and my brother,
We have caught the Woodcock, and will keep him muf-
Till we doe hear from them. (feld
Sol. Captain I will.
L. E. A will betray us all unto our ſelves,
Inform on that.
Sol. So I will ſir.
L. E. Till then I'le keep him dark and ſafely lockt.
Exit.

Enter Bertram, and the Maid called Diana.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fontibell.
Dia. No my good Lord, Diana.
Ber. Titled Goddeſſe,
And worth it with addition: but fair ſoul,
In your fine frame hath love no quality?
If the quick fire of youth light not your minde,
You are no Maiden but a monument:
When you are dead you ſhall be ſuch a one
As you are now, for you are cold and ſtern:
And now you ſhould be as your Mother was
When your ſweet ſelf was got.
Dia. She then was honeſt.
Ber. So ſhould you be.
Dia. No.
My Mother did but duty, ſuch (my Lord)
As you owe to your wife.
Ber. No more a'that:
I prethee doe not ſtrive againſt my vowes:
I was compell'd to her, but I love thee
By loves own ſweet conſtraint, and will for ever
Doe thee all rights of ſervice.
Dia. I ſo you ſerve us
Till we ſerve you: But when you have our Roſes,
You barely leave our Thorns to prick our ſelves,
And mock us with our bareneſſe.
Ber. How have I ſworn.
Dia. 'Tis not the many oathes that make the truth,
But the plain ſingle vow, that is vow'd true:
What is not holy, that we ſwear not by,
But take the high'ſt to witneſſe: then pray you tell me,
If I ſhould ſwear by Joves great attributes,
I lov'd you dearly, would you believe my oathes,
When I did love you ill? This has no holding
To ſwear by him whom I proteſt to love
That I will work againſt him. Therefore your oathes
Are words and poor conditions, but unſeal'd
At leaſt in my opinion.
Ber. Change it, change it:
Be not ſo holy cruell: Love is holy,
And my integrity ne're knew the crafts
That you doe charge men with: Stand no more off,
But give thy ſelf unto my ſick deſires,
Who then recovers. Say thou art mine, and ever
My love, as it begins, ſhall ſo perſever.
Dia. I ſee that men make ropes in ſuch a ſcarre,
That we'll forſake our ſelves. Give me that Ring.
Ber. I'le lend it thee my dear, but have no power
To give it from me.
Dia. Will you not, my Lord?
Ber. It is an honour longing to our houſe,
Bequeathed down from many Anceſtors,
Which were the greateſt obloquy i'th world,
In me to looſe.
Dia. Mine Honour's ſuch a Ring,
My Chaſtitie's the Jewell of our houſe,
Bequeathed down from many Anceſtors,
Which were the greateſt obloquy i'th world,
In me to looſe. Thus your own proper wiſedome
Brings in the Champion honour on my part,
Againſt your vain aſſault.
Ber. Here, take my Ring,
My houſe, my honour, yea my life be thine,
And I'le be bid by thee.
Dia. When midnight comes, knock at my chamber window:
I'le order take, my mother ſhall not hear.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you have conquer'd my yet maiden-bed,
Remain there but an houre, nor ſpeak to me:
My reaſons are moſt ſtrong, and you ſhall know them,
When back again this Ring ſhall be deliver'd:
And on your finger in the night, I'le put
Another Ring, that which in time proceeds,
May token to the future, our paſt deeds.
Adieu till then, then fail not: you have wonne
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.
Be. A heav'n on earth I've won by wooing thee. Exit.
Dia. For which, live long to thank both heav'n and me,
You may ſo in the end.
My mother told me juſt how he would woo,
As if ſhe ſate in's heart. She ſayes, all men
Have the like oathes: He had ſworn to marry me
When his wife's dead: therefore I'le lie with him
When I am buried. Since French-men are ſo braide,
Marry that will, I'le live and die a Maid:
Onely in this diſguiſe, I think't no ſin,
To cozen him that would unjuſtly win. Exit.

Enter the two French Captains, and ſome two or three Souldiers.

Cap. G. You have not given him his mothers letter.
Cap. E. I haue deliver'd it an houre ſince, there is ſomething in't that ſtings his nature: for on the reading it, he chang'd almoſt into another man.
Cap. G. He has much worthy blame laid upon him, for ſhaking off ſo good a wife, and ſo ſweet a Lady.
Cap. E. Eſpecially, he hath incurred the everlaſting diſpleaſure of the King, who had even tun'd his bounty to ſing happineſſe to him. I will tell you a thing, but you ſhall let it dwell darkly with you.
Cap. G. When you have ſpoken it, 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.
Cap. E. He hath perverted a young Gentlewoman here in Florence, of a moſt chaſte renown, and this night he fleſhes his will in the ſpoyle of her honour: he hath given her his monumentall Ring, and thinks himſelf made in the unchaſte compoſition.
Cap. G. Now God delay our rebellion, as we are our ſelves, what things are we.
Cap. E. Meerly our own traitors. And as in the common courſe of all treaſons, we ſtill ſee them reveale themſelves, till they attain to their abhorr'd ends: ſo he that in this action contrives againſt his own Nobility in his proper ſtreame, o're-flowes himſelf.
Cap. G. Is it not meant damnable in us, to be Trumpeters of our unlawfull intents? We ſhall not then have his company to night?
Cap. E. Not till after midnight: for he is dieted to his houre.
Cap. G. That approaches agace: I would gladly have him ſee his company anathomiz'd, that he might take a measure of his own judgements, wherein so seriously he had set his counterfeit.

Cap. E. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

Cap. G. In the mean time, what hear you of those Warres?

Cap. E. I hear there is an overture of peace.

Cap. G. Nay, I assure you a peace concluded.

Cap. E. What will Count Rossillion do then? Will he travell higher, or retrun again into France?

Cap. G. I perceive by this demand, you are not altogether of his counsell.

Cap. E. Let it be forbid, sir, so should I be a great deal of this act.

Cap. G. Sir, his wife some two months since fled from his house, her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Jaques le grand; which holy undertaking, with most austeer sanctimony she accomplish'd: and there residing, the tenderness of her Nature, became as a prey to her grief: in fine; made a groan of her last breath, and now she sings in heaven.

Cap. E. How is this justified?

Cap. G. The stronger part of it by her own Letters, which makes her story true, even to the point of her death: her death it selfe, which could not be her office to say, is come, was faithfully confirm'd by the Rector of the place.

Cap. E. Hath the Count all this intelligence?

Cap. G. I, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verity.

Cap. E. I am heartily sorry that he'l be glad of this.

Cap. G. How mightily sometimes, we make us comforts of our losses.

Cap. E. And how mightily some other times, we drown our gain in tears, the great dignity that this valour hath here requit'd for him, shall at home be encountred with a shame as ample.

Cap. G. The web of our life, is of a mingled yarne, good and ill together: our vertues would be proud, if our faults whipt them not, and our crimes would despair if they were not cherish'd by our vertues.

Enter a Messenger.

How now? Where's your maister?

Ser. He met the Duke in the street, sir, of whom he hath taken a solemn leave: his Lordship will next morning for France. The Duke hath offered him Letters of commendations to the King.

Cap. E. They shall be no more then needfull there, if they were more then they can commend.

Enter Count Rossillion.

Cap. G. They cannot be too sweet for the Kings tartnes, here's his Lordship now. How now my Lord, is't not after midnight?

Ber. I have to night dispatch'd sixteen businesses, a months length a piece, by an abstract of successe: I have congied with the Duke; done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife; mourn'd for her; writ to my Lady mother, I am returning; entertain'd my Convoy, and between these main parcells of dispatch, effected many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I have not ended yet.

Cap. E. If the businesse be of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your Lordship.

Ber. I mean the businesse is not ended, as fearing to hear of it hereafter: but shall we have this dialogue between the Foole and the Souldier. Come; bring forth this counterfeit module; 'has deceived me, like a double-meaning Prophesier.

Cap. E. Bring him forth, ha's sate i'th stocks all night, poor gallant knave.

Ber. No matter, his heels have deserv'd it, in usurping his spurrs so long. How does he carry himself?

Cap. G. I have told your Lordship already: The stocks carry him. But to answer you as you would be understood, he weeps like a wench that had shed her milk, he hath confest himself to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a Friar, from the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i'th stocks: and what think you he hath confest?

Ber. Nothing of me, ha's a?

Cap. E. His confession is taken, and it shall be read to his face; if your Lordship be in't, as I believe you are, you must have the patience to hear it.

Enter Parolles with his Interpreter.

Ber. A plague upon him, muffeld; he can say nothing of me: hush.

Cap. G. Hoodman comes: Portotartarossa.

Int. He calls for the tortures; what will you say without em.

Par. I will confesse what I know without constraint, If ye pinch me like a Pasty, I can say no more.

Int. Bosko Chimurcho.

Cap. Biblibindo chicurmurco.

Int. You are a mercifull Generall: Our Generall bids you answer to what I shall ask you out of a Note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to live.

Int. First demand of him, how many horse the Duke is strong. What say you to that?

Par. Five or six thousand, but very weak and unserviceable: the troops are all scattered, and the Commanders very poor rogues, upon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to live.

Int. Shall I set down your answer so?

Par. Do, I'le take the Sacrament on't, how and which way you will: all's one to him.

Ber. What a past-saving slave is this?

Cap. G. Y'are deceiv'd, my Lord, this Monsieur Parolles the gallant militarist, that was his own phrase, that had the whole theorick of war in the knot of his scarfe and the practise in the chap of his dagger.

Cap. E. I will never trust a man again, for keeping his sword clean, nor believe he can have every thing in him, by wearing his apparell neatly.

Int. Well, that's set down.

Par. Five or six thousand horse I sed, I will say true, or thereabouts set down, for I'le speak truth.

Cap. G. He's very near the truth in this.

Ber. But I con him no thanks for't in the nature he delivers it.

Par. Poor rogues, I pray you say.

Int. Well, that's set down.

Par. I humbly thank you, sir, a truth's a truth, the Rogues are marvailous poor.

Int. Demand of him of what strength they are a foot. What say you to that?

Par. By my troth, sir, if I were to live this present hour, I will tell true, Let me see, Spurio a hundred and fifty, fifty, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jaques so many: Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowick, and Gratii, two hundred each: Mine own Company, Chitopher, Vaumond, Bentii, two hundred fifty each: so that the muster file, rotten and sound, upon my life amounts not to fifteen thousand pole, halfe of the which, dare not shake the snow from off their Cassocks, least they shake themselves to pieces.

Ber. What shall be done to him?

Cap. G. Nothing, but let him have thanks. Demand of him my conditions: and what credit I have with the Duke.

Int. Well that's set down: you shall demand of him, whether one Captain Dumain be i'th Camp, a Frenchman: what his reputation is with the Duke, what his valour, honesty, and expertness in warrs: or whether he thinks it were not possible with well-waighing sums of gold to corrupt him to revolt. What say you to this? What do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you let me answer to the particular of the intergatories. Demand them singly.

Int. Do you know Captain Dumain?

Par. I know him, a was a Botchers Prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipt for getting the Shrieves foole with childe, dumb innocent that could not say him nay.

Ber. Nay, by your leave hold your hands, though I know his brains are forfeit to the next tile that falls.

Inter. Well, is this Captain in the Duke of Florences campe?

Par. Upon my knowledge he is, and lowsie.

Cap. G. Nay look not so upon me: we shall hear of your Lord anon.

Int. What is his reputation with the Duke?

Par. The Duke knows him for no other, but a poor Officer of mine; and writ to me the other day, to turn him out a'th band. I think I have his letter in my pocket.

Int. Marry we'll search.

Par. In good sadness I do not know, either it is there, or it is upon a file with the Dukes other Letters, in my Tent.

Int. Here 'tis, here's a paper, shall I read it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no.

Ber. Our Interpreter do's it well.

Cap. G. Excellently.

Int. Dian, the Count's a foole, and full of gold.

Par. That is not the Dukes letter sir: that is an advertisement to a proper maid in Florence, one Diana, to take heed of the allurement of one Count Rossillion, a foolish idle boy: but for all that very ruttish. I pray you sir put it up again.

Int. Nay, I'le read it first by your favour.

Par. My meaning in't I protest was very honest in the behalfe of the maid: for I knew the young Count to be a dangerous and lascivious boy, who is a whale to Virginity, and devours up all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable! both-sides rogue.

Int. Let. When he swears oaths, bid him drop gold, and take it:
After he scores, he never payes the score:
Half won is match well made, match and well make it,
He ne're payes after-debts, take it before,
And say a souldier (Dian) told thee this:
Men are to mell with, boyes are not to kiss.
For count of this, the Count's a Foole I know it,
Who payes before, but not when he does owe it.
Thine as he vow'd to thee in thine ear,
Parolles.

Ber. He shall be whipt through the Army with this rime in's forehead.

Cap. E. This is your devoted friend, sir, the manifold Linguist, and the army-potent souldier.

Ber. I could endure any thing before, but a Cat, and he's a Cat to me.

Int. I perceive, sir, by the Generals looks, we shall be fain to hang you.

Par. My life, sir, in any case: Not that I am afraid to die, but that my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of Nature. Let me live, sir, in a dungeon, i'th stocks, any where, so I may live.

Int. We'll see what may be done, so you confess freely: therefore once more to this Captain Dumain: you have answer'd to his reputation with the Duke, and to his valour. What is his honesty?

Par. He will steal, sir, an Egge out of a Cloister: for rapes and ravishments he parallels Nessus. He professes not keeping of oaths, breaking em he is stronger then Hercules. He will lye, sir, with such volubility, that you would think truth were a foole: drunkenness is his best vertue, for he will be swine-drunk, and in his sleep he does little harme, save to his bed-cloathes about him: but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I have but little more to say, sir, of his honesty, he ha's every thing that an honest man should not have: what an honest man should have, he has nothing.

Cap. G. I begin to love him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honesty? A pox upon him for me, he's more and more a Cat.

Int. What say you to his expertness in war?

Par. Faith sir, ha's led the drum before the English Tragedians: to belie him I will not, and more of his souldiership I know not, except in that Countrey, he had the honour to be the Officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files. I would do the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certain.

Cap. G. He hath out-villain'd villany so far, that the rarity redeems him.

Ber. A pox on him, he's a Cat still.

Int. His qualities being at this poor price, I need not to ask you, if Gold will corrupt him to revolt.

Par. Sir, For a Cardecue he will sell the fee-simple of his salvation, the inheritance of it, and cut th'intaile from all remainders, and a perpetuall succession for it perpetually.

Int. What's his Brother, the other Captain Dumain?

Cap. E. Why do's he ask him of me?

Int. What's he?

Par. E'n a Crow a'th same nest: not altogether so great as the first in goodness, but greater a great deal in evill. He excels his Brother for a Coward, yet his Brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreat he outruns any Lackey, marry in coming on, he ha's the Cramp.

Int. If your life be saved, will you undertake to betray the Florentine?

Par. I, and the Captain of his horse Count Rossillion.

Int. I'le whisper with the Generall, and know his pleasure.

Par. I'le no more drumming, a plague of all drums, onely to seem to deserve well, and to beguile the supposition sition of that lascivious young boy the Count, have I run into this danger: yet who would have suspected an ambush where I was taken?

Int. There is no remedy, sir, but you must die: the Generall sayes, you that have so traitorously discovered the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serve the world for no honest use: therefore you must die. Come heads-man, off with his head.

Par. O Lord, sir, let me live, or let me see my death.

Int. That shall you, and take your leave of all your friends:
So look about you, know you any here?

Coun. Good morrow noble Captain.

Lo. E. God bless you Captain Parolles.

Cap. G. God save you noble Captain.

Lo. E. Captain, what greeting will you to my Lord Lafew? I am for France.

Cap. G. Good Captain will you give me a Copy of the same sonnet you writ to Diana in behalfe of the Count Rossillion, and I were not a very Coward, I'de compell it of you, but fare you well. Exeunt.

Int. You are undone Captain all but your scarfe, that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crush'd with a plot?

Int. If you could finde out a Countrey where but women were that had received so much shame, you might begin an impudent Nation. Fare ye well sir, I am for France too, we shall speak of you there. Exit.

Par. Yet am I thankfull: if my heart were great
'Twould burst at this: Captain I'le be no more,
But I will eat, and drink, and sleep as soft
As Captain shall. Simply the thing I am
Shall make me live: who knows himself a braggart
Let him fear this; for it will come to pass,
That every braggart shall be found an Ass.
Rust sword, coole blushes, and Parolles live
Safest in shame: being fool'd, by fool'ry thrive;
There's place and means for every man alive.
I'le after them.

Enter Hellen, Widdow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceive I have not wrong'd you,
One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my surety: 'fore whose throne 'tis needfull
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneele.
Time was I did him a desired office
Dear almost as his life, which gratitude
Through flinty Tartars bosome would peep forth,
And answer thanks. I duly am inform'd,
His grace is at Marsellis, to which place
We have convenient convoy: you must know
I am supposed dead, the Army breaking,
My husband hies him home, where heaven aiding,
And by the leave of my good Lord the King,
We'll be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle Madam,
You never had a servant to whose trust
Your business was more welcome.

Hel. Nor your Mistris
Ever a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompence your love: Doubt not but heaven
Hath brought me up to be your daughters dowre,
As it hath fated her to be my motive
And helper to a husband. But O strange men,
That can such sweet use make of what they hate,
When sawcy trusting of the cosin'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night, so lust doth play
With what it loaths, for that which is away,
But more of this hereafter: you Diana,
Under my poor instructions yet must suffer
Something in my behalfe.

Dia. Let death and honesty
Go with your impositions, I am yours
Upon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet I pray you:
But with the word the time will bring on summer,
When Briars shall have leaves as well as thorns,
And be as sweet as sharp: we must away,
Our Wagon is prepar'd, and time revives us,
All's well that ends well, still that fines the Crown;
What ere the course, the end is the renown. Exeunt.

Enter Clown, old Lady, and Lafew.

Laf. No, no, no; your son was misled with a snipt taffata fellow there, whose villanous saffron would have made all the unbak'd and dowy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had been alive at this hour, and your son here at home, more advanc'd by the King, then by that red-tail'd humble-Bee I speak of.

Lad. I would I had not known him, it was the death of the most vertuous gentlewoman, that ever Nature had praise for creating, If she had partaken of my flesh and cost me the dearest groans of a mother, I could not have owed her a more rooted love.

Laf. 'Twas a good Lady, 'twas a good Lady. We may pick a thousand sallets ere we light on such another herb.

Clo. Indeed, sir, she was the sweet Margerom of the sallet, or rather the herb of grace.

Laf. They are not herbs you knave, they are nose-herbs.

Clo. I am no great Nebuchadnezar, sir, I have not much skill in grace.

La. Whether doest thou profess thy self, a knave or a foole?

Clo. A foole, sir, at a womans service, and a knave at a mans.

La. Your distinction.

Clo. I would cozen the man of his wife, and do his service.

La. So you were a knave at his service indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble, sir, to do her service.

La. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knave and foole.

Clo. At your service.

La. No, no, no.

Clo. Why, sir, if I cannot serve you, I can serve as great a prince as you are.

La. Whose that, a Frenchman?

Clo. Faith, sir, a has an English main, but his fisnony is more hotter in France then here.

La. What Prince is that?

Clo. The black prince, sir, alias the prince of darkness, alias the devil.

La. Hold thee, there's my purse, I give thee not this to suggest thee from thy Master thou talk'st of, serve him still.

Clo.

Clo. I am a woodland fellow, sir, that always loved a great fire, and the master I speak of ever keeps a good fire, but sure he is the Prince of the world, let his Nobility remain in's Court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pompe to enter: some that humble themselves may, but the many will be too chill and tender, and they'll be for the flowry way that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

La. Go thy wayes, I begin to be a weary of thee, and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy wayes, let my horses be well look'd to, without any tricks.

Clo. If I put any tricks upon em, sir, they shall be Jades tricks, which are their own right by the law of Nature. Exit.

Laf. A shrewd knave and an unhappy.

Lady. So a is. My Lord that's gone made himself much sport out of him, by his authority he remains here, which he thinks is a patent for his sawcinesse, and indeed he has no pace, but he runs where he will.

Laf. I like him well, 'tis not amisse: and I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good Ladies death, and that my Lord your son was upon his return home. I moved the King my master to speak in the behalfe of my daughter, which in the minority of them both, his Majesty out of a self gracious remembrance did first propose; his Highnesse hath promis'd me to do it, and to stop up the displeasure he hath conceived against your son, there is no fitter matter. How do's your Ladyship like it?

La. With very much content, my Lord, and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His Highnesse comes post from Marselles, of as able a body as when he number'd thirty, a will be here to morrow, or I am deceiv'd by him that in such intelligence hath seldome fail'd.

La. It rejoyces me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I have letters that my son will be here to night: I shall beseech your Lordship to remain with me: till they meet together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what Manners I might safely be admitted.

Lad. You need but plead your honourable priviledge.

Laf. Lady, of that I have made a bold charter, but I thank my God, it holds yet.

Enter Clown.

Clo. O Madam, yonders my Lord your son with a patch of velvet on's face, whether there be a scar under't or no, the Velvet knows, but 'tis a goodly patch of Velvet, his left cheek is a cheek of two pile and a half, but his right cheek is worn bare.

La. A scar nobly got:
Or a noble scar, is a good liv'ry of honour.
So belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbinado'd face.

Laf. Let us go see
Your son I pray you, I long to talk
With the young noble souldier.

Clo. Faith there's a dozen of em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at every man.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Hellen, Widdow, and Diana, with two Attendants.

Hel. But this exceeding posting day and night,
Must wear your spirits low, we cannot help it.
But since you have made the dayes and nights as one,
To wear your gentle limbs in my affairs,
Behold you do so grow in my requitall,
As nothing can unroot you. In happy time,

Enter a Gentleman a stranger.

This man may help me to his Majesties ear,
If he would spend his power. God save you sir:

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I have seen you in the Court of France.

Gent. I have been sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume, sir, that you are not falne
From the report that goes upon your goodnesse,
And therefore goaded with most sharp occasions,
Which lay nice manners by, I put you to
The use of your own vertues, for the which
I shall continue thankfull.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To give this poor petition to the King,
And aid me with that store of power you have
To come into his presence.

Gent. The Kings not here.

Hel. Not here sir?

Gent. Not indeed,
He hence remov'd last night, and with more haste
Then is his use.

Wid. Lord, how we loose our pains.

Hel. All's well that ends well yet,
Though time seem so adverse, and means unfit:
I do beseech you, whether is he gone?

Gent. Marry as I take it to Rossillion,
Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you sir,
Since you are like to see the King before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand,
Which I presume shall render you no blame,
But rather make you thank your pains for it:
I will come after you with what good speed
Our means will make us means.

Gent. This I'le do for you.

Hel. And you shall finde your self to be well thankt what e're falls more. We must to horse again, Go, go, provide. Exeunt.

Enter Clown, and Parolles.

Par. Good M. Levatch give my Lord Lafew this letter, I have ere now, sir, been better known to you, when I have held familiarity with fresher cloathes: but I am now, sir, muddied in fortunes moody, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truly, Fortunes displeasure is but sluttish, if it smell so strongly as thou speak'st of: I will henceforth eat no Fish of Fortunes butt'ring. Prethee, allow the winde.

Par. Nay you need not to stop your nose, sir: I speak but a Metaphor.

Clo. Indeed, sir, if your Metaphor stink, I will stop my nose, or against any mans Metaphor. Prethee get thee further.

Par.

Par. Pray you, sir, deliver me this paper.

Clo. Foh, prethee stand away: a paper from fortunes close-stoole, to give to a Nobleman. Look here he comes himself.

Enter Lafew.

Clo. Here is a purre of Fortunes, sir, or of Fortunes Cat, but not a Muscat; that ha's falne into the unclean fish-pond of her displeasure, and as he sayes muddied withall. Pray you, sir, use the Carp as you may, for he looks like a poor decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knave. I do pitty his distresse in my smiles of comfort, and leave him to your Lordship.

Par. My Lord, I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratch'd

Laf. And what would you have me to do? 'Tis too late to pare her nails now. Wherein have you played the knave with fortune that she should scratch you, who of her self, is a good Lady, and would not have knaves thrive long under her? There's a Cardecue for you: Let the Justices make you and fortune friends; I am for other businesse.

Par. I beseech your honour to heare me one single word.

Laf. You beg a single penny more: Come you shall ha't, save your word.

Par. My name my good Lord, is Parolles.

Laf. You beg more then one word then. Cox my passion, give me your hand: How does your drum.

Par. O my good Lord, your were the first that found me.

Laf. Was I insooth? And I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you, my Lord to bring me in some grace, for you did bring me out.

Laf. Out upon thee knave, doest thou put upon me at once both the office of God and the devill: one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. The King's coming I know by his Trumpets. Sirrah, enquire further after me, I had talk of you last night, though you are a foole and a knave, you shall eat, go to, follow.

Par. I praise God for you.

Flourish. Enter King, old Lady, Lafew, the two French Lords, with attendants.

Kin. We lost a Jewell, and our esteem
Was made much poorer by it: but your son,
As mad in folly, lack'd the sence to know
Her estimation home.

Old La. 'Tis past, my Liege,
And I beseech your Majesty to make it
Naturall rebellion, done i'th blade of youth,
When oyle and fire, too strong for reasons force,
Ore-bears it and burns on.

King. My honour'd Lady,
I have forgiven and forgotten all,
Though my revenges were high bent upon him,
And watch'd the time to shoot.

Laf. This I must say,
But first I beg my pardon: the young Lord
Did to his Majesty, his Mother, and his Lady,
Offence of mighty note; but to himself
The greatest wrong of all. He lost a wife,
Whose beauty did astonish the survey
Of richest eyes: whose words all ears took captive,
Whose deep perfection, hearts that scorn'd to serve,
Humbly call'd Mistris.

Kin. Praising what is lost,
Makes the remembrance dear. Well, call him hither,
We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill
All repetition: Let him not ask our pardon,
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper then oblivion, we do bury
Th'incensing relicks of it. Let him approach
A stranger, no offender; and inform him
So 'tis our will he should

Gent. I shall my Liege.

King. What sayes he to your daughter,
Have you spoke?

Laf. All that he is, hath reference to your Highnes.

Kin. Then shall we have a match. I have letters sent me, that sets him high in fame.

Enter Count Bertram.

Laf. He looks well on't

Kin. I am not a day of season,
For thou maist see a sun-shine, and a haile
In me at once: But to the brightest beams
Distracted clouds give way, so stand thou forth,
The time is fair again.

Ber. My high repented blames,
Dear Soveraigne, pardon me.

Kin. All is whole,
Not one word more of the consumed time,
Let's take the instant by the forward top:
For we are old, and our quick'st decrees
Th'inaudible, and noiselesse foot of time
Steals, ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this Lord?

Ber. Admiringly, my Liege, at first
I stuck my choise upon her, ere my heart
Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue:
Where the impression of mine eye enfixing,
Contempt his scornfull Perspective did lend me,
Which wrapt the line of every other favour,
Scorn'd a fair colour, or exprest it stoln,
Extended or contracted all proportions
To a most hideous object. Thence it came,
That she whom all men prais'd, and whom my self,
Since I have lost, have lov'd; was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

Kin. Well excus'd:
That thou didst love her, strikes some scores away
From the great compt: but love that comes too late,
Like a remorsefull pardon slowly carried
To the great sender, turns a sowre offence,
Crying, that's good that's gone: our rash faults
Make triall price of serious things we have,
Not knowing them, untill we know their grave.
Oft our displeasures to our selves unjust,
Destroy our friends, and after weep their dust:
Our own love waking, cries to see what's done,
While shamefull hate sleeps out the afternoon.
Be this sweet Helens knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for fair Maudlin,
The main consents are had, and here we'll stay
To see our widdowers second marriage day:
Which better then the first, O dear heaven bless,
Or, ere they meet in me, O Nature ceas.

Laf. Come on my son, in whom my houses name
Must be digested: give a favour from you
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,

That

That she may quickly come. By my old beard,
And ev'ry hair that's on't, Helen that's dead
Was a sweet creature: such a ring as this,
The last that ere I took her leave at Court,
I saw upon her finger.
Ber. Hers it was not.
Kin. Now pray you let me see it. For mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd too't:
This Ring was mine, and when I gave it Hellen,
I bad her, if her fortunes ever stood
Necessitied to help, that by this token
I would relieve her. Had you that craft to reave her
Of what should stead her most?
Ber. My gracious Soveraigne,
How ere it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.
Old La. Son, on my life
I have seen her wear it, and she reckon'd it
At her lives rate.
Laf. I am sure I saw her wear it.
Ber. You are deceiv'd, my Lord, she never saw it:
In Florence was it from a casement thrown me,
Wrap'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it: Noble she was, and thought
I stood ingag'd, but when I had subscrib'd
To mine own fortune, and inform'd her fully,
I could not answer in that course of Honour
As she had made the overture, she ceast
In heavy satisfaction, and would never Receive the Ring again.
Kin. Plutus himself,
That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,
Hath not in natures mystery more science,
Then I have in this Ring. 'Twas mine, 'twas Hellens,
Who ever gave it you: then if you know
That you are well acquainted with your self,
Confess 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She call'd the Saints to surety,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Unless she gave it to your self in bed,
Where you have never come: or sent it us
Upon her great disaster.
Ber. She never saw it.
Kin. Thou speak'st it falsely: as I love mine Honour,
And mak'st conjecturall fears to come into me,
Which I would fain shut out, if it should prove
That thou art so inhumane, 'twill not prove so.
And yet I know not, thou didst hate her deadly,
And she is dead, which nothing but to close
Her eyes my self, could win me to believe,
More then to see this Ring. Take him away,
My fore-past proofes, how ere the matter fall
Shall tax my fears of little vanity,
Having vainly fear'd too little. Away with him,
We'll sift this matter further.
Ber. If you shall prove
This Ring was ever hers, you shall as easie
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was.

Enter a Gentleman.

Kin. I am wrap'd in dismall thinkings.
Gent. Gracious Soveraigne.
Whether I have been too blame or no, I know not,
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath for four or five removes come short,
To tender it herself. I undertook it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the fair grace and speech
Of the poor suppliant, who by this I know
Is here attending: her business looks in her
With an importing visage, and she told me
In a sweet verball breef, it did concern
Your Highnesse with her self.

A Letter.

Upon his many protestations to marry me when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he won me. Now is the Count Rossillion a Widdower, his vowes are forfeited to me, & my honors paid to him. He stole from Florence, taking no leave, and I follow him to this Countrey for Justice: Grant it me, O King, in you it best lies, otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor Maid is undone.

Diana Capilet.

Laf. I will buy me a son in Law in a fear, and toule him for this. I'le none of him.
Kin. The heavens have thought well on thee, Lafew,
To bring forth this discov'ry, seek the sutors:
Go speedily, and bring again the Count.

Enter Bertram.

I am a-feard the life of Hellen (Lady)
Was fowly snatch'd.
Old La. Now justice on the doers.
Kin. I wonder, sir, wives are so monstrous to you,
And that you flye them as you swear them Lordship,
Yet you desire to marry. What woman's that?

Enter Widdow, Diana, and Parolles.

Dia. I am, my Lord, a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capilet,
My suit, as I understand, you know,
And therefore know how far I may be pittied.
Wid. I am her Mother, sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer under this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease, without your remedy.
Kin. Come hither, Count, do you know these Women?
Ber. My Lord, I neither can nor will deny,
But that I know them, do they charge me further?
Dia. Why do you look so strange upon your wife?
Ber. She's none of mine, my Lord.
Dia. If you shall marry
You give away this hand, and that is mine,
You give away heavens vowes, and those are mine:
You give away my self, which is known mine:
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you, must marry me,
Either both or none.
Laf. Your reputation comes too short for my daughter, you are no husband for her.
Ber. My Lord, this is a fond and desperate creature,
Whom sometime I have laugh'd with: Let your highnes
Lay a more noble thought upon mine honour,
Then for to think that I would sinke it here.
Kin. Sir, for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,
Till your deeds gain them fairer: prove your honour,
Then in my thought, it lies.
Dian. Good my Lord,
Ask him upon his oath, if he do's think
He had not my virginity.
Kin. What sai'st thou to her?
Ber. She's impudent, my Lord,
And was a common gamester to the Camp.
Dia. He do's me wrong, my Lord: If I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price.

Do

Doe not believe him. O behold this Ring,
Whose high respect and rich validity
Did lack a Paralell: yet for all that
He gave it to a Commoner a'th Camp
If I be one.
Old La. He blushes, and 'tis hit:
Of six preceding Ancestors, that Jemme
Conferr'd by testament to th' sequent issue
Hath it been owed and worn. This is his wife,
That Ring's a thousand proofs.
Kin. Me thought you said
You saw one here in Court could witnesse it.
Dia. I did, my Lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument; his name's Parolles.
Laf. I saw the man to day, if man he be.
Kin. Find him, and bring him hither.
Ros. What of him?
He's quoted for a most perfidious slave
With all the spots a'th world, taxt and deboish'd,
Whose nature sickens: but to speak a truth,
Am I, or that or this, for what he'll utter,
That will speak any thing.
Kin. She hath that Ring of yours.
Ros. I think she has; certain it is I lik'd her,
And boorded her i'th wanton way of youth:
She knew her distance, and did angle of me,
Madding my eagernesse with her restraint,
As all impediments in fancies course
Are motives of more fancy, and in fine,
Her insuit comming with her modern grace,
Subdu'd me to her rate; she got the Ring,
And I had that which any inferiour might
At Market price have bought.
Dia. I must be patient:
You that have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
May justly diet me. I pray you yet,
(Since you lack virtue, I will lose a husband)
Send for your Ring, I will return it home,
And give me mine again.
Ros. I have it not.
Kin. What Ring was yours, I pray you?
Dian. Sir, much like the same upon your finger.
Kin. Know you this Ring, this Ring was his of late.
Dia. And this was it I gave him being a bed.
King. The story then goes false, you threw it him
Out of a Casement.
Dia. I have spoke the truth. Enter Parolles.
Ros. My Lord, I doe confesse the Ring was hers.
Kin. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you:
Is this the man you speak of?
Dia. I, my Lord.
Kin. Tell me, sirrah, but tell me true I charge you,
Not fearing the displeasure of your Master:
(Which on your just proceeding, I'le keep off)
By him, and by this woman here, what know you?
Par. So please your Majesty, my Master hath been an honourable Gentleman. Tricks he hath had in him, which Gentlemen have.
Kin. Come, come, to th' purpose: Did he love this woman?
Par. Faith sir, he did love her, but how!
Kin. How I pray you?
Par. He did love her, sir, as a Gent. loves a Woman.
Kin. How is that?
Par. He lov'd her, sir, and lov'd her not.
Kin. As thou art a Knave and no Knave, what an equivocall Companion is this?
Par. I am a poor man, and at your Majesties command.
Laf. He's a good drumme, my Lord, but a naughty Oratour.
Dia. Doe you know he promist me marriage?
Par. Faith, I know more then I'le speak.
Kin. But wilt thou not speak all thou know'st?
Par. Yes, so please your Majesty: I did go between them, as I said, but more then that, he loved her; for indeed he was mad for her, and talkt of Sathan, and of Limbo, and of Furies, and I know not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knew of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things that would derive me ill will to speak of, therefore I will not speak what I know.
Kin. Thou hast spoken all already, unlesse thou canst say they are married, but thou art too fine in thy evidence, Therefore stand aside. This Ring you say was yours.
Dia. I, my good Lord.
Kin. Where did you buy it? or who gave it you?
Dia. It was not given me, nor did not buy it.
Kin. Who lent it you?
Dia. It was not lent me neither.
Kin. Where did you find it then?
Dia. I found it not.
Kin. If it were yours by none of all these wayes,
How could you give it him?
Dia. I never gave it him.
Laf. This woman's an easie glove, my Lord, she goes off and on at pleasure.
Kin. This Ring was mine, I gave it his first wife.
Dia. It might be yours, or hers, for ought I know.
Kin. Take her away, I doe not like her now,
To prison with her: and away with him,
Unlesse thou tell'st me where thou hadst this Ring,
Thou dies't within this houre.
Dia. I'le never tell you.
Kin. Take her away.
Dia. I'le put in bail my Liege.
Kin. I think thee now some common Customer.
Dia. By Jove if ever I knew man 'twas you.
Kin. Wherefore hast thou accus'd him all this while?
Dia. Because he's guilty, and he is not guilty:
He knowes I am no Maid, and he'll swear to't:
I'le swear I am a Maid, and he knowes not.
Great King, I am no strumpet, by my life,
I am either Maid, or else this old mans wife.
Kin. She do's abuse our eares, to prison with her.
Dia. Good mother fetch my bayle. Stay, Royal sir,
The Jeweller that owes the Ring is sent for,
And he shall surety me. But for this Lord,
Who hath abus'd me as he knowes himself,
Though yet he never heard me, here I quit him.
He knowes himself my bed he hath defil'd,
And at that time he got his wife with child:
Dead though she be, she feels her young one kick:
So there's my riddle, one that's dead is quick,
And now behold the meaning.

Enter Hellen and Widow.

Kin. Is there no exorcist
Beguiles the true Office of mine eyes?
Is't reall that I see?
Hel. No, my good Lord,

'Tis but the ſhadow of a Wife you ſee,
The name, and not the thing.

Roſ. Both, both, O pardon.

Hel. Oh, my good Lord, when I was like this Maid,
I found you wondrous kind, there is your Ring,
And look you, here's your Letter: this it ſayes,
When from my finger you can get this Ring,
And is by me with child, &c. This is done,
Will you be mine, now you are doubly wonne?

Roſ. If ſhe, my Liege, can make me know this clearly,
I'le love her dearly, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appear not plain, and prove untrue,
Deadly divorce ſtep between me and you.
O, my dear mother, doe I ſee you living?

Laf. Mine eyes ſmell Onions, I ſhall weep anon:
Good Tom Drumme, lend me a handkercher.
So I thank thee, wait on me home, I'le make ſport with thee: Let thy curtſies alone, they are ſcurvy ones.

King. Let us from point to point this ſtory know,
To make the even truth in pleaſure flow:
If thou beeſt yet a freſh uncropped flower,
Chooſe thou thy husband, and I'le pay thy dower.
For I can gueſſe, that by thy honeſt aide,
Thou keepeſt a Wife her ſelf, thy ſelf a Maid.
Of that and all the progreſſe more and leſſe,
Reſolv'dly more leiſure ſhall expreſſe:
All yet ſeems well, and if it end ſo meet,
The bitter paſt, more welcome is the ſweet.

Flouriſh.

THe King's a Beggar, now the Play is done.
All is well ended, if his ſuit be wonne,
That you expreſſe content: which we will pay,
With ſtrife to pleaſe you, day exceeding day:
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts,
Your gentle hands lend us, and take our hearts. Exeom.

FINIS.

Twelfe-Night, Or what you will.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Enter Orſino Duke of Illyria, Curio, and other Lords.

Duke.

IF Muſick be the food of Love, play on,
Give me exceſſe of it: that ſurfetting,
The appetite may ſicken, and ſo die.
That ſtrain agen, it had a dying fall:
O, it came o're my ear, like the ſweet ſound
That breathes upon a bank of Violets;
Stealing, and giving Odour. Enough, no more,
'Tis not ſo ſweet now, as it was before.
O ſpirit of Love, how quick and freſh art thou,
That notwithſtanding thy capacity,
Receiveth as the Sea. Nought enters there,
Of what validity, and pitch ſo e're,
But falls into abatement, and low price,
Even in a minute; ſo full of ſhapes is fancy,
That it alone is high fantaſticall.

Cur. Will you go hunt, my Lord?

Du. What Curio?

Cur. The Hart.

Du. Why ſo I doe, the Nobleſt that I have:
O when mine eyes did ſee Olivia firſt,
Me thought ſhe purg'd the ayre of peſtilence;
That inſtant was I turn'd into a Hart,
And my deſires, like fell and cruell hounds,
E're ſince purſue me. How now, what newes from her?

Enter Valentine.

Val. So pleaſe my Lord, I might not be admitted,
But from her hand-maid doe return this anſwer:
The Element it ſelf, till ſeven yeares heat,
Shall not behold her face at ample view:
But like a Cloyſtreſſe ſhe will vailed walke,
And water once a day her Chambers round
With eye-offending brine: all this to ſeaſon
A brothers dead love, which ſhe would keep freſh
And laſting, in her ſad remembrance.

Du. O ſhe that hath a heart of this fine frame,
To pay this debt of love but to a brother,
How will ſhe love, when the rich golden ſhaft
Hath kill'd the flock of all affections elſe
That live in her. When Liver, Brain, and Heart,
Theſe ſoveraign thrones, are all ſuppli'd and fill'd
Her ſweet perfections with one ſelf ſame king:
Away before me, to ſweet beds of Flowers,
Love-thoughts lie rich, when cannopy'd with bowres.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Viola a Captain, and Saylors.

Vio. What Countrey (Friends) is this?

Cap. This is Illyria, Lady.

Vio. And what ſhould I doe in Illyria?
My Brother he is in Elizium,
Perchance hes is not drown'd: What think you, Sailors?

Cap. It is perchance that you your ſelf were ſaved.

Vio. O my poor Brother, and ſo perchance may he be.

Cap. True Madam, and to comfort you with chance.
Aſſure your ſelf, after our ſhip did ſplit,
When you, and thoſe poor number ſaved with you,
Hung on our droving boat: I ſaw your brother
Moſt provident in peril, binde himſelf,
(Courage and hope both teaching him the practiſe)
To a ſtrong Maſte, that liv'd upon the ſea:
Where like Orion on the Dolphines back,
I ſaw him hold acquaintance with the waves,
So long as I could ſee.

Vio. For ſaying ſo, there's Gold:
Mine own eſcape unfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy ſpeech ſerves for authority
The like of him. Know'ſt thou this Countrey?

Cap. I, Madam, well; for I was bred and born
Not three hours travell from this very place?

Vio. Who governs here?

Cap. A noble Duke in nature, as in name.

Vio. What is his name?

Cap. Orſino.

Vio. Orſino! I have heard my Father name him.
He was a Batchellor then.

Cap. And ſo is now, or was ſo very late:
For but a moneth ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas freſh in murmure (as you know
What great ones doe, the leſſe will prattle of)
That he did ſeek the love of fair Olivia.

Vio. What's ſhe?

Cap. A virtuous maid, the daughter of a Count,
That di'd ſome twelvemoneth ſince, then leaving her
In the protection of his ſon, her brother,
Who ſhortly alſo di'd: for whoſe dear love
(They ſay) ſhe had abjur'd the ſight
And company of men.

Vio. O that I ſerv'd that Lady,
And might not be delivered to the world

Till I had made mine own occaſion mellow
What my eſtate is.
Cap. That were hard to compaſſe,
Becauſe ſhe will admit no kind of ſuit,
No not the Dukes.
Vio. There is a fair behaviour in thee, Captain,
And though that nature, with a beauteous wall
Doth oft cloſe in pollution; yet of thee
I will believe, thou haſt a mind that ſuits
With this thy fair and outward character.
I prethee (and I'le pay thee bounteouſly)
Conceal me what I am, and be my aide.
For ſuch diſguiſe as haply ſhall become
The form of my intent. I'le ſerve this Duke,
Thou ſhalt preſent me as an Eunuch to him,
It may be worth thy pains: for I can ſing,
And ſpeak to him in many ſorts of Muſick,
That will allow me very worth his ſervice.
What elſe may hap, to time I will commit,
Onely ſhape thou thy ſilence to my wit.
Cap. Be you his Eunuch, and your Mute I'le be,
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not ſee.
Vio. I thank thee: Lead me on. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague meanes my Neece to take the death of her brother thus? I am ſure care's an enemy to life.

Mar. By my troth, ſir Toby, you muſt come in earlier a nights: your Couſin, my Lady, takes great exceptions to your ill houres.

To. Why let her except, before excepted.

Mar. I, but you muſt confine your ſelf within the modeſt limits of order.

To. Confine? I'le confine my ſelf no finer then I am: theſe cloathes are good enough to drink in, and ſo be theſe boots too: and they be not, let them hang themſelves in their own ſtraps.

Mar. That quaffing and drinking will undoe you: I heard my Lady talke of it yeſter day: and of a fooliſh knight that you brought in one night here, to be her (wooer?

To. Who, Sir Andrew Ague-cheek?

Ma. I he.

To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Ma. What's that to th' purpoſe?

To. Why he has three thouſand Ducats a year.

Ma. I, but he'll have but a year in all theſe Ducats: He's a very fool, and a prodigall.

To. Fie, that you'll ſay ſo: he playes o'th Viol-de-gamboyes, and ſpeaks three or four languages word for word without book, and hath all the good gifts of nature.

Mar. He hath indeed, almoſt naturall: for beſides that he's a fool, he's a great quarreller: and but that he hath the gift of a Coward, to allay the guſt he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent, he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Tob. By this hand they are ſcoundrels and ſubſtractors that ſay ſo of him. Who are they?

Mar. They that adde moreover, he's drunk nightly in your company.

To. With drinking healths to my Neece: I'le drink to her as long as there is a paſſage in my throat, and drink in Illyria: he's a Coward and a Coyſtrill that will not drink to my Neece, till his brains turn o'th' toe, like a pariſh top. What wench? Caſtiliano vulgo: for here comes Sir Andrew Ague-face.

Enter Sir Andrew.

And. Sir Toby Belch. How now Sir Toby Belch?

To. Sweet Sir Andrew.

And. Bleſſe you fair Shrew.

Mar. And you too ſir.

Tob. Accoſt, Sir Andrew, accoſt.

And. What's that?

To. My Neeces Chamber-maid.

An. Good Miſtris accoſt, I deſire better acquaintance.

Ma. My name is Mary ſir.

And. Good Miſtreſſe Mary, accoſt.

To. You miſtake knight: Accoſt is, front her, boord her, wooe her, aſſaile her.

An. By my troth, I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of Accoſt?

Mar. Fare you well Gentlemen.

To. And thou let her part ſo, Sir Andrew, would thou mighſt never draw ſword agen.

And. And you part ſo Miſtreſſe, I would I might never draw ſword agen. Fair Lady, doe you think you have fools in hand?

Ma. Sir, I have not you by th' hand.

And. Marry but you ſhall have, and here's my hand.

Mar. Now ſir, thought is free: I pray you bring your hand to th' Buttry barre, and let it drink.

An. Wherefore (ſweet heart?) what's your Metáphor?

Mar. It's dry ſir.

An. Why I think ſo: I am not ſuch an aſſe, but I can keep my hand dry. But what's your jeſt?

Ma. A dry jeſt, ſir.

And. Are you full of them?

Ma. I Sir, I have them at my finger ends: marry now I let go your hand, I am barren. Exit Maria.

Tob. O knight, thou lack'ſt a cup of Canary: when did I ſee the ſo put down?

And. Never in your life, I think, unleſſe you ſee Canary put down: me thinks ſometimes I have no more wit then a Chriſtian, or an ordinary man has: but I am a great eater of beef, and I believe that do's harm to my wit.

To. No queſtion.

An. And I thought that, I'de forſweare it. I'le ride home to morrow, Sir Toby.

To. Pur-quoy, my dear knight?

An. What is pur-quoy? Doe, or not doe? I would I had beſtowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting: O had I but followed the Arts.

To. Then hadſt thou had an excellent head of hair.

An. Why, would that have mended my hair?

To. Paſt queſtion, for thou ſeeſt it will not cool my (nature.

An. But it becomes me well enough, doſt not?

To. Excellent, it hangs like flax on a diſtaffe: and I hope to ſee a huſwife take thee between her legs, & ſpin it off.

An. Faith I'le home to morrow, ſir Toby, your Neece will not be ſeen, or if ſhe be, it's four to one, ſhe'll none of me: the Count himſelf here hard by, wooes her.

To. She'll none o'th Count, ſhe'll not match above her degree, neither in eſtate, yeares, nor wit: I have heard her ſwear. Tut, there's life in't man.

And.

And. I'le ſtay a moneth longer. I am a fellow o'th ſtrangeſt mind i'th world: I delight in Maskes and Revells ſometimes altogether.

To. Art thou good at theſe kick-ſhawſes, Knight?

And. As any man in Illyria, whatſoever he be, under the degree of my betters, and yet I will not compare with an old man.

To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

And. Faith, I can cut a caper.

To. And I can cut the Mutton to't.

And. And I think I have the back-trick, ſimply as ſtrong as any man in Illyria.

To. Wherefore are theſe things hid? wherefore have theſe gifts a Curtain before 'em? are they like to take duſt, like Miſtris Mals picture? Why doſt thou not go to Church in a Galliard, and come home in a Carranto? My very walk ſhould be a Jigge: I would not ſo much as make water but in a Sink-a-pace: What doſt thou mean? Is it a world to hide virtues in? I did think by the excellent conſtitution of thy legge, it was form'd under the ſtarre of a Galliard.

And. I, 'tis ſtrong, and it does indifferent well in a dam'd colour'd ſtocken. Shall we ſit about ſome Revels?

To. What ſhall we doe elſe: were we not born under Taurus?

And. Taurus? That's ſides and heart.

To. No ſir, it is legges and thighes: let me ſee thee taper. Ha, higher: ha, ha, excellent. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, and Viola, in mans attire.

Val. If the Duke continue theſe favours towards you Ceſario, you are like to be much advanc'd, he hath known you but three dayes, and already you are no ſtranger.

Vio. You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in queſtion the continuance of his love. Is he inconſtant ſir, in his favours?

Val. No believe me.

Enter Duke, Curio, and Attendants.

Vio. I thank you: here comes the Count.

Duk. Who ſaw Ceſario hoa?

Vio. On your attendance, my Lord, here.

Du. Stand you a while aloof. Ceſario,
Thou knowſt no leſſe, but all: I have unclaſp'd
To thee the Book even of my ſecret ſoul.
Therefore good youth, addreſſe thy gate unto her,
Be not deni'd acceſſe, ſtand at her doores,
And tell them, there thy fixed foot ſhall grow
Till thou have audience.

Vio. Sure, my Noble Lord,
If ſhe be ſo abandon'd to her ſorrow
As it is ſpoke, ſhe never will admit me.

Du. Be clamorous, and leap all civil bounds,
Rather then make unprofited return.

Vio. Say I doe ſpeak with her (my Lord) what then?

Duk. O then, unfold the paſſion of my love,
Surprize her with diſcourſe of my dear faith;
It ſhall become thee well to act my woes:
She will attend it better in thy youth,
Then in a Nuntio's of more grave aſpect.

Vio. I think not ſo, my Lord:

Duk. Dear Lad, believe it;
For they ſhall yet belye thy happy yeares,
That ſay thou art a man: Dianaes lip
Is not more ſmooth, and rubious: thy ſmall pipe
Is as the maidens organ, ſhrill, and ſound,
And all is ſemblative a womans part.
I know thy conſtellation is right apt
For this affaire: ſome four or five attend him,
All if you will: for I my ſelf am beſt
When leaſt in company: proſper well in this,
And thou ſhalt live as freely as thy Lord,
To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. I'le doe my beſt
To wooe your Lady: yet a barrefull ſtrife,
Who e're I wooe, my ſelfe would be his wife. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Maria, and Clown.

Mar. Nay, either tell me where thou haſt bin, or I will not open my lips ſo wide as a briſsle may enter in way of thy excuſe: my Lady will hang thee for thy abſence.

Clo. Let her hang me: he that is well hang'd in this world, needs fear no colours.

Ma. Make that good.

Clo. He ſhall ſee none to fear.

Mar. A good lenton anſwer: I can tell thee where that ſaying was born, of I fear no colours.

Clo. Where good Miſtreſſe Mary?

Mar. In the warres, and that may you be bold to ſay in your foolery.

Clo. Well, God give them wiſedome that have it: and thoſe that are fooles, let them uſe their talents.

Mar. Yet you will be hang'd for being ſo long abſent, or be turn'd away, is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clo. Many a good hanging, prevents a bad marriage: and for turning away, let ſummer bear it out.

Mar. You are reſolute then?

Clo. Not ſo neither, but I am reſolv'd on two points.

Mar. That if one break, the other will hold: or if both break, your gaskins fall.

Clo. Apt in good faith, very apt: well, go thy way, if Sir Toby would leave drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eves fleſh, as any in Illyria.

Mar. Peace you rogue, no more o'that: here comes my Lady: make your excuſe wiſely, you were beſt.

Enter Lady Olivia, with Malvolio.

Clo. Wit, and't be thy will, put me into good fooling: thoſe wits that think they have thee, doe very oft prove fooles: and I that am ſure I lack thee, may paſſe for a wiſe man. For what ſayes Quinapalus, Better a witty fool, then a fooliſh wit. God bleſſe thee, Lady.

Ol. Take the fool away.

Clo. Doe you not hear fellowes, take away the Lady.

Ol. Go too, y'are a dry fool: I'le no more of you, beſides you grow diſhoneſt.

Clo. Two faults, Madona, that drink and good counſel will amend: for give the dry fool drink, then is the fool not dry: bid the diſhoneſt man mend himſelf, if he mend, he is no longer diſhoneſt; if he cannot, let the Botcher mend him: any thing that's mended, is but patch'd: virtue that tranſgreſſes, is but patcht with ſin, and ſin that amends, is but patcht with virtue. If that this ſimple Sillogiſme will ſerve, ſo; if it will not, what remedy?

As there is no true Cuckold but calamity, ſo beauty's a flower; The Lady bad take away the fool, therefore I ſay again, take her away.

Ol. Sir, I bad them take away you.

Clo. Miſpriſion in the higheſt degree. Lady, Cucullus non facit monachum: that's as much to ſay, as I wear not motley in my brain: good Madona, give me leave to prove you a fool.

Ol. Can you doe it?

Clo. Dexteriouſly, good Madona.

Ol. Make your proof.

Clo. I muſt catechize you for it, Madona, Good my Mouſe of virtue anſwer.

Ol. Well ſir, for want of other idleneſſe, I'le bide your proof.

Clo. Good Madona, why mourn'ſt thou?

Ol. Good fool, for my brothers death.

Clo. I think his ſoul is in hell, Madona.

Ol. I know his ſoul is in heaven, foole.

Clo. The more fool you (Madona) to mourn for your Brothers ſoul, being in heaven. Take away the fool, Gentlemen.

Ol. What think you of this fool, Malvolio, doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes, and ſhall doe, till the pangs of death ſhake him: Infirmity that decayes the wiſe, doth ever make the better fool.

Clo. God ſend you, ſir, a ſpeedy Infirmity, for the better increaſing your folly: Sir Toby will be ſworn that I am no Fox, but he will not paſs his word for two pence that you are no fool.

Ol. How ſay you to that Malvolio?

Mal. I marvell your Ladiſhip takes delight in ſuch a barren raſcall: I ſaw him put down the other day, with an ordinary fool, that has no more brains then a ſtone. Look you now, he's out of his gard already: unleſſe you laugh and miniſter occaſion to him, he is gag'd. I proteſt I take theſe Wiſe men, that crow ſo at theſe ſet kind of fooles, no better then the fooles Zanies.

Ol. O you are ſick of ſelf-love, Malvolio, and taſte with a diſtemper'd appetite. To be generous, guiltleſſe, and of free diſpoſition, is to take thoſe things for Bird-bolts, that you deem Cannon bullets: There is no ſlander in an allow'd fool, though he doe nothing but rail; nor no railing in a known diſcreet man, though he doe nothing but reprove.

Clo. Now Mercury indue thee with leaſing, for thou ſpeak'ſt well of fooles.

Enter Maria.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate, a young Gentleman, much deſire to ſpeak with you.

Ol. From the Count Orſino, is it?

Ma. I know not (Madam) 'tis a fair young man, and well attended.

Ol. Who of my people hold him in delay?

Ma. Sir Toby, Madam, your kinſman.

Ol. Fetch him off I pray you, he ſpeaks nothing but madman: Fie on him. Go you, Malvolio; if it be a ſuit from the Count, I am ſick, or not at home. What you will, to diſmiſſe it. Exit Malvo. Now you ſee, ſir, how your fooling growes old, and people diſlike it.

Clo. Thou haſt ſpoke for us (Madona) as if thy eldeſt ſon ſhould be a fool: whoſe ſcull, Jove cramme with brains, for here he comes. Enter Sir Toby. One of thy kin has a moſt weak Pia-mater.

Ol. By mine honour halfe drunk. What is he at the gate, Couſin?

To. A Gentleman.

Ol. A Gentleman? What Gentleman?

To. 'Tis a Gentleman here. A plague o' theſe pickle Herring: How now Sot.

Clo. Good Sir Toby.

Ol. Couſin, Couſin, how have you come ſo early by this Lethargy?

Tob. Letchery, I defie Letchery: there's one at the gate.

Ol. I marry, what is he?

To. Let him be the devil and he will, I care not: give me faith, ſay I. Well, it's all one. Exit.

Ol. What's a drunken man like, fool?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a fool, and a mad man: One draught above heat makes him a foole, the ſecond mads him, and a third drownes him.

Ol. Go thou and ſeek the Crowner, and let him ſit o' my Coz: for he's in the third degree of drink: he's drown'd: go look after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet, Madona, and the fool ſhall look to the mad man.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, yond young fellow ſweares he will ſpeak with you. I told him you were ſick, he takes on him to underſtand ſo much, and therefore comes to ſpeak with you. I told him you were aſleep, he ſeems to have a fore-knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to ſpeak with you. What is to be ſaid to him, Lady, he's fortified againſt any deniall.

Ol. Tell him, he ſhall not ſpeak with me.

Mal. Ha's been told ſo: and he ſayes he'll ſtand at your door like a Sheriffes poſt, and be the ſupporter to a bench, but he'll ſpeak with you.

Ol. What kind o' man is he?

Mal. Why, of man-kind.

Ol. What manner of man?

Mal. Of very ill manners: he'll ſpeak with you, will you, or no.

Ol. Of what perſonage and yeares is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor young enough for a boy: as a ſquaſh is before 'tis a peſcod, or a Codling when 'tis almoſt an Apple: 'Tis with him in ſtanding water, between boy and man. He is very well-favour'd, and he ſpeaks very ſhrewiſhly: One would think his mothers milk were ſcarce out of him.

Old. Let him approach: Call in my Gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my Lady calls. Exit.

Enter Maria.

Ol. Give me my vail: come throw it o're my face, We'll once more hear Orſino's Embaſſie.

Enter Viola.

Vio. The honourable Lady of the houſe, which is ſhe?

Ol. Speak to me, I ſhall anſwer for her: your will.

Vio. Moſt radiant, exquiſite, and unmatchable beauty. I pray you tell me if this be the Lady of the houſe, for I never ſaw her. I would be loath to caſt away my ſpeech: for beſides that it is excellently well penn'd, I have taken great pains to con it. Good Beauties, let me ſuſtain no ſcorn; I am very comptible, even to the leaſt ſiniſter uſage.

Ol. Whence came you, ſir?

Vio. I can ſay little more then I have ſtudied, and that queſtion's out of my part. Good gentle one, give me modeſt aſſurance, if you be the Lady of the houſe, that

I may proceed in ſpeech.

Ol. Are you a Comedian?

Vio. No my profound heart: and yet (by the very phangs of malice, I ſwear) I am not that I play. Are you the Lady of the houſe?

Ol. If I do not uſurp my ſelf, I am.

Vio. Moſt certain, if you are ſhe, yo do uſurp your ſelf: for what is yours to beſtow, is not yours to reſerve. But this is from my Commiſſion: I will on with my ſpeech in your praiſe, and then ſhew you the heart of my meſſage.

Ol. Come to what is important in't: I forgive you the praiſe.

Vio. Alas, I took great pains to ſtudy it, and 'tis Poeticall.

Ol. It is the more like to be feigned, I pray you keep it in. I heard you were ſawcy at my gates, and allow'd your approach rather to wonder at you, then to hear you. If you be not mad, be gone: if you have reaſon, be brief: 'tis not that time of Moon with me, to make one in ſo skipping a dialogue.

Ma. Will you hoyſt ſayle, ſir, here lyes your way.

Vio. No good ſwabber, I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your Giant, ſweet Lady: tell me your mind, I am a meſſenger.

Ol. Sure you have ſome hideous matter to deliver, when the curteſie of it is ſo fearfull. Speak your office.

Vio. It alone concerns your ear: I bring no overture of war, no taxation of homage; I hold the Olyffe in my hand: my words are as full of peace as matter.

Ol. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you?

Vio. The rudeneſſe that hath appear'd in me, have I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as ſecret as a maiden-head: to your ears, Divinity; to any others, prophanation.

Ol. Give us the place alone.
We will hear this divinity. Now ſir, what is your text?

Vio. Moſt ſweet Lady.

Ol. A comfortable doctrine, and much may be ſaid of it. Where lyes your Text?

Vio. In Orſino's boſome.

Ol. In his boſome? In what chapter of his boſome?

Vio. To anſwer by the method, in the firſt of his heart.

Ol. O, I have read it: it is hereſie. Have you no more to ſay?

Vio. Good Madam, let me ſee your face.

Ol. Have you any Commiſſion from your Lord, to negotiate with my face: you are now out of your Text: but we will draw the Curtain, and ſhew you the picture. Look you, ſir, ſuch a one I was this preſent: Is't not well done?

Vio. Excellently done, if God did all.

Ol. 'Tis in grain, ſir, 'twill endure winde and weather.

Vio. 'Tis beauty truly blent, whoſe red and white,
Natures own ſweet, and cunning hand laid on:
Lady, you are the cruell'ſt ſhe alive,
If you will lead theſe graces to the grave,
And leave the world no copy.

Ol. O ſir, I will not be ſo hard-hearted: I will give out divers ſcedules of my beauty. It ſhall be Inventoried and every particle and utenſile labell'd to my will: As, Item, two lips indifferent red, Item, two grey eyes, with lids to them: Item, one neck, one chin, and ſo forth. Were you ſent hither to praiſe me?

Vio. I ſee you what your are, you are too proud:
But if you were the devill, you are faire:
My Lord and Maſter loves you: O ſuch love
Could be but recompenc'd, though you were crown'd
The non-parill of beauty.

Ol. How does he love me?

Vio. With adorations, fertill tears,
With groans that thunder love, with ſighes of fire.

Ol. Your Lord do's know my mind, I cannot love him,
Yet I ſuppoſe him vertuous, know him noble,
Of great eſtate, of freſh and ſtainleſſe youth;
In voyces well divulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant,
And in dimenſion, and ſhape of nature,
A gracious perſon, But yet I cannot love him:
He might have took his anſwer long ago.

Vio. If I did love you in my maſters flame,
With ſuch a ſuffring, ſuch a deadly life:
In your deniall, I would find no ſence,
I would not underſtand it.

Ol. Why, what would you doe?

Vio. Make me a willow Cabine at your gate,
And call upon my ſoul within the houſe,
Write loyall Cantons of contemned love,
And ſing them loud even in the dread of night:
Hollow your name to the reverberate hills,
And Make the babling Goſſip of the aire,
Cry out, Olivia: O you ſhould not reſt
Between the elements of aire, and earth,
But you ſhould pitty me.

Ol. You might do much:
What is your Parentage?

Vio. Above my fortunes, yet my ſtate is well:
I am a Gentleman.

Ol. Get you to your Lord:
I cannot love him: let him ſend no more,
Unleſſe (perchance) you come to me again,
To tell me how he takes it; Fare you well:
I thank you for your pains: ſpend this for me.

Vio. I am no-feed poſt, Lady; keep your purſe,
My Maſter, not my ſelf, lacks recompence.
Love make his heart of flint, that you ſhall love.
And let your fervour like my Maſters be,
Plac'd in contempt: Farewell fair cruelty. Exit.

Ol. What is your Parentage?
Above my fortunes, yet my ſtate is well:
I am a Gentleman. I'le be ſworne thou art,
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbs, actions, and ſpirit,
Do give thee five-fold blazon: not too faſt: ſoft, ſoft,
Unleſſe the Maſter were the man. How now?
Even ſo quickly may one catch the plague?
Methinks I feele this youth's perfections,
With an inviſible, and ſubtle ſtealth
To creep in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.
What hoa, Malvolio.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. Here Madam, at your ſervice.

Ol. Run after that ſame peeviſh Meſſenger,
The Counts man: he left this Ring behind him,
Would I, or not: tell him, I'le none of it.
Deſire him not to flatter with his Lord,
Nor hold him up with hopes, I am not for him:
If that the youth will come this way to morrow,
I'le give him reaſons for't by thee, Malvolio.

Mal. Madam, I will. Exit.

Ol. I do I know not what, and fear to find
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my mind:

Fate

Fate, ſhew thy force, our ſelves we do not not owe;
What is decreed, muſt be: and be this ſo.

Finis, Actus primi.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Antonio, and Sebaſtian.

An. Will you ſtay no longer: nor will you not that I go with you?

Seb. By your patience, no: my ſtarres ſhine darkly over me; the malignancy of my fate, might perhaps diſtemper yours, therefore I ſhall crave of you your leave, that I may bear my evills alone. It were a bad recompence for your love, to lay any of them on you.

An. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Seb. No ſooth, ſir, my determinate voyage is meer extravagancy. But I perceive in you ſo excellent a touch of modeſty, that you will not extort from me, what I am willing to keep in: therefore it charges me in manners, the rather to expreſs my ſelf: you muſt know of me then, Antonio, my name is Sebaſtian (which I call'd Rodorigo) my father was that Sebaſtian of Meſſaline, whom I know you have heard of. He left behind him, my ſelf, and a ſiſter, both born in one houre: if the Heavens had been pleas'd, would we had ſo ended. But you ſir, alter'd that, for ſome houres before you took me from the breach of the ſea, was my ſiſter drown'd.

An. Alas the day!

Seb. A Lady ſir, though it was ſaid ſhe much reſembled me, was yet of many accounted beautifull: but though I could not with ſuch eſtimable wonder over-far believe that, yet thus far I will boldly publiſh her, ſhe bore a minde that envy could not but call fair: She is drown'd already, ſir, with ſalt water, though I ſeem to drown her remembrance again with more.

Ant. Pardon me, ſir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O good Antonio, forgive me your trouble.

Ant. If you will not murther me for my love, let me be your ſervant.

Seb. If you will not undo what you have done, that is kill him, whom you have recover'd, deſire it not. Fare ye well at once, my boſome is full of kindneſs, and I am yet ſo near the manners of my mother, that upon the leaſt occaſion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me: I am bound to the Count Orſino's Court, farewell. Exit.

An. The gentleneſs of all the gods go with thee:
I have made enemies in Orſino's Court,
Elſe would I very ſhortly ſee thee there:
But come what may, I do adore thee ſo,
That danger ſhall ſeem ſport, and I will go: Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Viola, and Malvolio, at ſeverall doors.

Mal. Were not you ev'n now, with the Counteſs Olivia?

Vio. Even now ſir, on a moderate pace, I have ſince arriv'd but hither.

Mal. She returns this Ring to you (ſir) you might have ſaved me my pains, to have taken it away your ſelf. She adds moreover, that you ſhould put your Lord in a deſperate aſſurance, ſhe will none of him. And one thing more, that you be never ſo hardy to come again in his affairs, unleſs it be to report your Lords taking of this: receive it ſo.

Vio. She took the Ring of me, I'le none of it.

Mal. Come, ſir, you peeviſhly threw it to her: and her Will is, it ſhould be ſo return'd: If it be worth ſtooping for: there it lyes, in your eye: if not, be it his that finds it. Exit.

Vio. I left no Ring with her: what means this Lady?
Fortune forbid my out-ſide have not charm'd her:
She made good view of me, indeed ſo much,
That ſure me thought her eyes had loſt her tongue,
For ſhe did ſpeak in ſtarts diſtractedly.
She loves me ſure, the cunning of her paſſion
Invites me in this churliſh meſſenger:
None of my Lords Ring? Why, he ſent her none?
I am the man, if it be ſo as 'tis,
Poor Lady, ſhe were better love a dream:
Diſguiſe, I ſee thou art a wickedneſſe,
Wherein the pregnant enemy does much.
How eaſie is it, for the proper falſe
In womens waxen hearts to ſet their formes:
Alas, our frailty is the cauſe, not we,
For ſuch as we are made, if ſuch we be:
How will this fadge? My Maſter loves her dearly,
And I (poor monſter) fond aſmuch on him:
And ſhe (miſtaken) ſeems to doat on me:
What will become of this? As I am a man,
My ſtate is deſperate for my maiſters love;
As I am woman (now alas the day)
What thriftleſſe ſighes ſhall poor Olivia breath?
O time, thou muſt untangle this, not I,
It is too hard a knot for me t'unty.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

Tob. Approach Sir Andrew: not to be a bed after midnight, is to be up betimes, and Diliculo ſurgere, thou know'ſt.

And Nay by my troth I know not: but I know, to be up late, is to be up late.

To. A falſe concluſion: I hate it as an unfill'd Canne, To be up after midnight, and to go to bed then is early: ſo that to go to bed after midnight, is to go to bed betimes. Does not our lives conſiſt of the four Elements?

An. Faith ſo they ſay, but I think it rather conſiſts of eating and drinking.

To. Th'art a ſcholler, let us therefore eat and drink, Marian I ſay, a ſtoope of wine.

Enter Clown.

An. Here comes the foole, ifaith.

Clo. How now my hearts: did you never ſee the Picture of we three?

To. Welcome aſſe, now let's have a catch.

And. By my troth the foole has an excellent breaſt. I had rather then forty ſhillings I had ſuch a legge, and ſo ſweet a breath to ſing, as the foole has. Inſooth thou waſt in very gracious fooling laſt night, when thou ſpok'ſt of Pigrogromitus, of the Vapians paſſing the Equinoctiall of Queubus: 'twas very good ifaith: I ſent thee ſix pence for for thy Lemon, hadſt it?

Clo. I did impetico's thy gratillity: for Malvolio's noſe is no Whip-ſtock. My Lady has a white hand, and the Merm idons are no bottle ale houſes.

An. Excellent: Why this is the beſt fooling, when all is done. Now a ſong.

To. Come on, there is ſix pence for you. Let's have a ſong.

An. There's a teſtrill of me too: if one knight give a--

Clo. Would you have a love-ſong, or a ſong of good life?

To. A love ſong, a love ſong.

An. I, I. I care not for good life.

Clown ſings.

O Miſtris mine, where are you roming?
O ſtay and hear, your true love coming,
That can ſing both high and low.
Trip no further pretty ſweeting.
Journeys end in lovers meeting.
Every wiſe mans ſon doth know.

An. Excellent good, ifaith.

To. Good, good.

Clo. What is love, 'tis not hereafter,
Preſent mirth, hath preſent laughter:
What's to come, is ſtill unſure,
In delay there lyes no plenty,
Then come kiſs me ſweet and twenty:
Youth's a ſtuff will not endure.

An. A mellifluous voyce, as I am true knight.

To. A contagious breath.

An. Very ſweet, and contagious, ifaith.

To. To hear by the noſe, it is dulcet in contagion. But ſhall we make the Welkin dance indeed? ſhall we rowze the night-Owle in a Catch, that will draw three ſouls out of one Weaver? Shall we do that?

An. And you love me, let's doo't: I am a dog at a Catch.

Clo. Byrlady ſir, and ſome dogs will catch well.

An. Moſt certain: Let our Catch be, Thou Knave.

Clo. Hold thy peace, thou Knave knight. I ſhall be conſtrain'd in't, to call thee Knave, Knight.

An. 'Tis not the firſt time I have conſtrained one to call me knave. Begin foole: it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clo. Shall I never begin if I hold my peace.

An. Good ifaith: Come begin. Catch ſing.

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a catterwalling do you keep here? If my Lady have not call'd up her Steward, Malvolio, and bid him turn you out of doors, never truſt me.

To. My Lady's a Catayan, we are politicians, Malvolio's a Peg-a-ramſie, and Three merry men be we. Am not I conſanguinious? Am not I of her bloud: tilly vally. Lady! There dwelt a man in Babylon, Lady, Lady.

Clo. Beſhrew me, the knight's in admirable fooling.

An. I, he do's well enough if he be diſpos'd, and ſo do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more naturall.

To. O twelf day of December.

Mar. For the love o'God peace.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My maſters are you mad? Or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honeſty, but to gabble like Tinkers at this time of night? Do ye make an Alehouſe of my Ladies houſe, that ye ſqueak out your Coziers Catches without any mitigation or remorſe of voyce? Is there no reſpect of place, perſons, nor time in you?

To. We did keep time ſir in our Catches. Sneck up.

Mal. Sir Toby, I muſt be round with you. My Lady bad me tell you, that ſhe harbours you as her kinſman, ſhe's nothing ally'd to your diſorders. If you can ſeperate your ſelf and your miſdemeanours, you are welcome to the houſe: if not, and it would pleaſe you to take leave of her, ſhe is very willing to bid you farewell.

To. Farewell dear heart, ſince I muſt needs be gone.

Mar. Nay, good Sir Toby.

Clo. His eyes do ſhew his dayes are almoſt done.

Mal. Is't even ſo?

To. But I will never dye.

Clo. Sir Toby, there you lye.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

To. Shall I bid him go?

Clo. What and if you do?

To. Shall I bid him go, and ſpare not?

Clo. O no, no, no, no, you dare not.

To. Out o'tune ſir, ye lye: Art any more then a Steward? Doſt thou think becauſe thou art vertuous, there ſhall be no more Cakes and Ale?

Clo. Yes by S. Anne, and Ginger ſhall be hot i'th mouth too.

To. Th'art i'th right. Go ſir, rub your chain with crums. A ſtope of Wine Maria.

Mal. Miſtris Mary, if you priz'd my Ladies favour at any thing more then contempt, you would not give means for this uncivill rule; ſhe ſhall know of it by this hand. Exit.

Mar. Go ſhake your ears.

An. 'Twere as good a deed as to drink when a mans a hungry, to challeng him the field, and then to break promiſe with him, and make a foole of him.

To. Doo't knight, I'le write thee a Challenge: or I'le deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby, be patient for to night; Since the youth of the Counts was to day with my Lady, ſhe is much out of quiet. For Mounſieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: If I do not gull him into an ayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lye ſtraight in my bed: I know I can do it.

To. Poſſeſs us, poſſeſs us, tell us ſomething of him.

Mar. Marry ſir, ſometimes he is a kind of a Puritane,

An. O, if I thought that, I'de beat him like a dog.

To. What for being a Puritan, thy exquiſite reaſon, dear knight.

An. I have no exquiſite reaſon for't, but I have reaſon good enough.

Mar. The dev'll a Puritan that he is, or any thing conſtantly but a time pleaſer, an affection'd Aſs, that Cons State without book, and utters it by great ſwarths. The beſt perſwaded of himſelf: ſo cram'd (as he thinks) with excellencies, that it is his ground of faith, that all that look on him, love him: and on that vice in him will my revenge find notable cauſe to work.

To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way ſome obſcure Epiſtles of love, wherein by the colour of his beard, the ſhape of his leg, the manner of his gate, the expreſſure of his eye, forehead, and complexion, he ſhall find himſelf moſt feelingly perſonated. I can write very like my Lady. your Niece, on a forgotten matter we can hardly make diſtinction of our hands.

To. Excellent, I ſmell a device.

An. I hav't in my noſe too.

To. He ſhall think by the Letters that thou wilt drop that

That they come from my Niece, and that she's in love with him.

Mar. My purpose is indeed a horse of that colour.

An. And your horse now would make him an Asse.

Mar. Asse, I doubt not.

An. O 'twill be admirable.

Mar. Sport royall I warrant you: I know my Physick will work with him, I will plant you two, and let the Foole make a third, where he shall find the Letter: observe this construction of it: For this night to bed, and dream on the event. Farewell. Exit.

To. Good night Penthisilea.

An. Before me she's a good wench.

To. She's a beagle, true bred, and one that adores me; what o'that?

An. I was ador'd once too.

To. Let's to bed knight: Thou hadst need send for more money.

An. If I cannot recover your Niece, I am a foul way out.

To. Send for money knight, if thou hast her not i'th end, call me Cut.

An. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.

To. Come, come, I'le go burn some Sack, 'tis too late to go to bed now: Come knight, come knight.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and others.

Du. Give me some Musick; Now good morrow friends;
Now good Cesario, but that piece of song,
That old and Antick song we heard last night;
Me thought it did relieve my passion much,
More then light aires, and recollected termes
Of these most brisk and giddy-paced times.
Come, but one verse.

Cu. He is not here (so please your Lordship) that should sing it.

Du. Who was it?

Cur. Feste the Jester my Lord, a foole that the Lady Olivia's Father took much delight in. He is about the house.

Du. Seek him out, and play the tune the while.

Musick playes.

Come hither Boy, if ever thou shalt love
In the sweet pangs of it, remember me?
For such as I am, all true Lovers are,
Unstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is belov'd. How dost thou like this tune?

Vio. It gives a very eccho to the seat
Where love is thron'd.

Du. Thou dost speak masterly,
My life upon't, young though thou art, thine eye
Hath staid upon some favour that it loves:
Hath it not boy?

Vio. A little by your favour.

Du. What kind of woman is't?

Vio. Of your complexion.

Du. She is not worth thee then. What years i'faith?

Vio. About your years my Lord.

Du. Too old by heaven: Let still the woman take
An elder then her self, so wears she to him:
So sways she level in her husbands heart:
For boy, however we do praise our selves,
Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and worne,
Then womens are.

Vio. I think it well my Lord.

Du. Then let thy love be younger then thy self,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent:
For women are as Roses, whose fair flower
Being once displaid, doth fall that very houre.

Vio. And so they are: alas, that they are so:
To dye, even when they to perfection grow.

Enter Curio, and Clown.

Du. O fellow come, the song we had last night.
Mark it Cesario, it is old and plain;
The Spinsters and the Knitters in the Sun,
And the free maids that weave their thred with bones,
Do use to chant it: it is silly sooth,
And dallies with the innocence of love,
Like the old age.

Clo. Are you ready Sir?

Du. I prethee sing. Musick.

The Song.

Come away, come away death,
And in sad cypress let me be laid,
Fie away, fie away breath,
I am slain by a fair cruell maid. (pare it.
My shrowd of white, stuck all with Ew, O pre-
My part of death no one so true did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweet
On my black coffin, let there be strewn:
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poor corps, where my bones shall be thrown:
A thousand thousand sighs to save, lay me O where
Sad true lover never find my grave, to weep there.

Du. There's for thy pains.

Clo. No pains sir, I take pleasure in singing sir.

Du. I'le pay thy pleasure then.

Clo. Truly, sir, and pleasure will be paid one time, or another.

Du. Give me now leave, to leave thee.

Clo. Now the melancholly God protect thee, and the Tailor make thy doublet of changeable Taffata, for thy mind is a very Opall. I would have men of such constancy put to Sea, that their business might be every thing, and their intent every where, for that's it that alwayes makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell. Exit.

Du. Let all the rest give place: Once more Cesario,
Get thee yond same soveraign cruelty:
Tell her my love (more noble then the world)
Prizes not quantity of dirty lands,
The parts that fortune hath bestow'd upon her,
Tell her I told as giddily as fortune:
But 'tis that miracle, and Queen of Jems
That nature pranks her in, attracts my soule.

Vio. But if she cannot love you sir.

Du. It cannot be so answer'd.

Vio. Sooth but you must.
Say that some Lady, as perhaps there is,
Hath for your love as great a pang of heart
As you have for Olivia: you cannot love her;
You tell her so: Must she not then be answer'd?

Du. There is no womans sides

Can

Can abide the beating of so strong a passion,
As love doth give my heart: no womans heart
So big, to hold so much, they lack retention.
Alass, their love may be call'd appetite:
No motion of the Liver, but the Pallat,
That suffer surfet, cloyment, and revolt;
But mine is all as hungry as the Sea,
And can digest as much, make no compare
Between that love a woman can bear me,
And that I owe Olivia.

Vio. I but I know.

Du. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what love women to men owe:
In faith they are as true of heart, as we.
My father had a daughter lov'd a man
As it might be perhaps, were I a woman
I should your Lordship.

Duk. And what's her history?

Vio. A blank, my Lord: she never told her love,
But let concealment like a worme i'th bud
Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought,
And with a green and yellow melancholly,
She sate like Patience on a Monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love indeed?
We men may say more, swear more, but indeed
Our shews are more then will: for still we prove
Much in our vowes, but little in our love.

Du. But dy'd thy sister of her love, my boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my Fathers house,
And all the brothers too, and yet I know not.
Sir, shall I to this Lady?

Du. I that's the Theam:
To her in haste? give her this Jewell: say,
My love can give no place, bide no denay. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

To. Come thy wayes, Signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay I'le come: if I lose a scruple of this sport, let me be boyl'd to death with Melancholly.

To. Would'st thou not be glad to have the niggardly Rascally sheep-biter, come by some notable shame?

Fa. I would exult man; you know he brought me out of favour with my Lady, about a Bear-baiting here.

To. To anger him we'll have the Bear again, and we will foole him black and blew, shall we not, Sir Andrew?

An. And we do not, it is pitty of our lives.

Enter Maria.

To. Here comes the little villain: How now my Nettle of India?

Mar. Get ye all three into the box tree: Malvolio's coming down this walk, he ha's been yonder i'the Sun practising behaviour to his own shadow this half hour: observe him for the love of Mockery: for I know this Letter will make a contemplative Ideot of him. Close in the name of jesting, lye thou there: for here comes the Trowt, that must be caught with tickling. Exit.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. 'Tis but Fortune, all is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me, and I have heard her self come thus near, that should she fancy, it should be one of my complexion. Besides she uses me with a more exalted respect, then any one else that follows her. What should I think on't?

To. Here's an over-weening rogue.

Fa. Oh peace: Contemplation makes a rare Turkey Cock of him, how he jets under his advan'd plumes.

And. 'Slight, I could so beat the Rogue.

To. Peace I say.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio.

To. Ah Rogue.

An. Pistoll him, pistoll him.

To. Peace, peace.

Mal. There is example for't: The Lady of the Strachy, married the yeoman of the wardrobe.

An. Fye on him Jezabel.

Fa. O peace, now he's deeply in: look how imagination blows him.

Mal. Having been three months married to her, sitting in my state.

To. O for a stone-bow to hit him in the eye.

Mal. Calling my Officers about me, in my branch'd Velvet gown: having come from a day bed, where I have left Olivia sleeping.

To. Fire and Brimstone.

Fa. O peace, peace.

Mal. And then to have the humour of state: and after a demure travaile of regard: telling them I know my place, as I would they should do theirs: to ask for my kinsman Toby.

To. Bolts and shackles.

Fa. Oh peace, peace, peace, now, now.

Mal. Seaven of my people with an obedient start, make out for him: I frown the while, and perchance winde up my watch, or play with some rich Jewell: Toby approaches; curtsies there to me.

To. Shall this fellow live?

Fa. Though our silence be drawn from us with cares, yet peace.

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus: quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of controll.

To. And do's not Toby take you a blow o'the lippes then?

Mal. Saying, Cosin Toby, my Fortunes having cast me on your Neece, give me this prerogative of speech:

To. What, what?

Mal. You must amend your drunkennes.

To. Out scab.

Fab. Nay patience, or we break the sinews of our plot?

Mal. Besides you waste the treasure of your time, with a foolish knight.

And. That's me I warrant you:

Mal. One Sir Andrew.

And. I knew 'twas I, for many do call me foole.

Mal. What employment have we here?

Fa. Now is the Woodcock near the gin.

To. Oh peace, and the spirit of humors intimate reading aloud to him.

Mal. By my life this is my Ladies hand: these be her very C's, her U's, and her T's, and thus makes she her great P's. It is in contempt to question her hand.

And. Her C's, her U's, and her T's: why that?

Mal. To the unknown belov'd, this, and my good Wishes: Her very Phrases: By your leave wax. Soft, and the impressure her Lucrece, with which she uses to seal: 'tis my Lady: To whom should this be?

Fab. This winns him, Liver and all.

Mal.

Mal. Jove knowes I love, but who, Lips do not move, no man must know. No man must know. What follows? The numbers alter'd: No man must know,
If this should be thee, Malvolio?

To. Marry hang thee brock.

Mal. I may command where I adore, but silence like a Lucress wife,
With bloudless stroke my heart doth gore, M.O.A.I. doth sway my life.

Fa. A fustian riddle.

To. Excellent Wench, say I.

Mal. M.O.A.I. doth sway my life. Nay but first let me see, let me see.

Fab. What dish of poison has she dresst him?

To. And with what wing the stallion checks at it?

Mal. I may command, where I adore: Why she may command me: I serve her, she is my Lady. Why this is evident to any formall capacity. There is no obstruction in this, and the end; What should that Alphabeticall position portend, If I could make that resemble something in me? Softly; M.O.A.I.

To. O, I, make up that, he is now at a cold sent.

Fab. Sowter will cry upon't for all this, though it be as rank as a Fox.

Mal. M. Malvolio, M. Why that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say he would work it out, the Curre is excellent at faults.

Mal. M. But then there is no consonancy in the sequell that suffers under probation: A. should follow, but O. does.

Fa. And O. shall end, I hope.

To. I, or I'le cudgell him, and make him cry O.

Mal. And then I. comes behind.

Fab. I, and you had any eye behinde you, you might see more detraction at your heels, then Fortunes before you.

Mal. M.O.A.I. This simulation is not as the former: and yet to crush this a little, it would bow me, for every one of these Letters are in my name. Soft, here followes prose: If this fall into thy hand, revolve. In my Stars I am above thee, but be not afraid of greatness: Some are become great, some atchieve greatness, and some have greatness put upon em. Thy fates upon their hands, let thy bloud and spirit embrace them, and to inure thy self to what thou art like to be: cast thy humble slough, and appear fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with servants: Let thy tongue tang arguments of State; put thy self into the trick of singularity. She thus advises thee, that sighes for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wish'd to see thee ever cross garter'd: I say remember, go too, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so: If not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of servants, and not worthy to touch Fortunes fingers: Farewell. She that would alter services with thee, the fortunate unhappy daylight and champion discovers not more: This is open, I will be proud, I will read politick Authours, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off grosse acquaintance, I will be point devise, the very man. I do now foole my selfe, to let imagination jade me; for every reason excites to this, that my Lady loves me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, she did praise my legge being crosse-garter'd, and in this she manifests her self to my love, and with a kind of conjunction drives me to these habits of her liking. I thank my starres, I am happy: I will be strange, stout, in yellow stockings and crosse garter'd even with the swiftnesse of putting on. Jove, and my starres be praised. Here is yet a postscript. Thou canst not choose to know who I am. If thou entertainst my love, let it appear in thy smiling, thy smiles become thee well. Therefore in my presence still smile, dear my sweet, I prethee. Jove I thank thee, I will smile, I will do every thing that thou wilt have me. Exit.

Fab. I will not give my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

To. I could marry this wench for this device.

An. So could I too.

To. And ask no other dowry with her, but such another jest.

Enter Maria.

An. Nor I neither.

Fab. Here comes my noble gull-catcher.

To. Wilt thou set thy foot o'my neck?

An. Or o'mine either?

To. Shall I play my freedome at a tray-trip, and become thy bond-slave?

An. Ifaith, or either?

Tob. Why, thou hast put him in such a dream, that when the image of it leaves him, he must run mad.

Ma. Nay but say true, do's it work upon him?

To. Like Aqua-vitæ with a Midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruits of the sport, mark his first approach before my Lady: he will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhors, and crosse garter'd, a fashion she detests: and he will smile upon her, which will now be so unsuteable to her disposition, being addicted to melancholy, as she is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you will see it, follow me.------

To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent devill of wit.

And. I'le make one too. Exeunt.

Finis Actus Secundi.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Viola, and Clown.

Vio. Save thee Friend and thy Musick: dost thou live by the Tabor?

Clo. No sir, I live by the Church.

Vio. Art thou a Churchman?

Clo. No such matter, sir, I do live by the Church: for, I do live at my house, and my house doth stand by the Church.

Vio. So thou maist say the King lyes by a begger, if a begger dwell near him: or the Church stands by thy Tabor, if thy Tabor stand by the Church.

Clo. You have said, sir: To see this age! A sentence is but a chev'rill glove to a good wit; how quickly the wrong side may be turn'd outward.

Vio. Nay that's certain: they that dally nicely with words, may quickly make them wanton.

Clo. I would therefore my sister had no name, Sir.

Vio. Why man?

Clo. Why, sir, her name's a word, and to dally with that word, might make my sister wanton: But indeed, words are very Rascals, since bonds disgrac'd them.

Vio. Thy reason man?

Clo.

Clo. Troth, sir, I can yield you none without words, and words are grown so false, I am loath to prove reason with them.

Vio. I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and car'st for nothing.

Clo. Not so, sir, I doe care for something: but in my conscience, sir, I doe not care for you: if that be to care for nothing, sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the Lady Oliviaes fool?

Clo. No indeed, sir, the Lady Olivia has no folly, she will keep no fool, sir, till she be married, and fools are as like husbands, as Pilchers are to Herrings, the husband's the bigger: I am indeed not her fool, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery, sir, does walk about the Orbe like the Sun, it shines every where. I would be sorry, sir, but the Fool should be as oft with your Master, as with my Mistresse: I think I saw your wisedome there.

Vio. Nay, and thou passe upon me, I'le no more with thee. Hold there's expences for thee.

Clo. Now Jove in his next commodity of hair, send thee a beard.

Vio. By my troth, I'le tell thee, I am almost sick for one, though I would not have it grow on my chin. Is thy Lady within?

Clo. Would not a pair of these have bred, sir?

Vio. Yes, being kept together, and put to use.

Clo. I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia, sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troylus.

Vio. I understand you, sir, tis well begg'd.

Clo. The matter I hope is not great, sir; begging, but a beggar: Cressida was a beggar. My Lady is within, sir. I will conster to them whence you come, who you are, and what you would is out of my Welkin, I might say, Element, but the word is over-worn. Exit.

Vio. This fellow is wise enough to play the fool,
And to doe that well craves a kind of wit:
He must observe their mood on whom he jests,
The quality of persons, and the time:
And like the Haggard, check at every Feather
That comes before his eye. This is a practice,
As full of labour as a Wise-mans Art:
For folly that he wisely shewes, is fit:
But wise mens folly faln, quite taint their wit.

Enter Sir Toby and Andrew.

To. Save you Gentleman.

Vio. And you sir.

And. Dieu vou guard Mounsier.

Vio. Et vouz ausie vostre serviteure.

And. I hope, sir, you are, and I am yours.

To. Will you encounter the house, my Neece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your Neece, sir, I mean she is the list of my voyage.

To. Taste your legges, sir, put them to motion.

Vio. My legges doe better understand me, sir, then I understand what you mean by bidding me taste my legges.

To. I mean to go, sir, to enter.

Vio. I will answer you with gate and entrance, but we are prevented.

Enter Olivia and Gentlewoman.

Most excellent accomplish'd Lady, the heavens rain Odours on you.

And. That youth's a rare Courtier, rain Odours, well.

Vio. My matter hath no voyce, Lady, but to your own most pregnant and vouchsafed eare.

And. Odours, pregnant, and vouchsafed: I'le get 'em all three ready.

Ol. Let the Garden doore be shut, and leave me to my hearing. Give me your hand, sir.

Vio. My duty, Madam, and most humble service.

Ol. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your servants name, fair Princesse.

Ol. My servant, sir? 'Twas never merry world,
Since lowly feigning was call'd complement:
Y'are servant to the Count Orsino (youth.)

Vio. And he is yours, and his must needs be yours:
Your servants servant is your servant, Madam.

Olivia. For him, I think not on him: for his thoughts,
Would they were blanks rather then fill'd with me.

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts
On his behalfe.

Ol. O by your leave I pray you.
I bad you never speak again of him;
But would you undertake another suit?
I had rather hear you, to solicit that,
Then Musick from the spheares.

Vio. Dear Lady.

Ol. Give me leave, I beseech you: I did send,
After the last enchantment you did hear,
A Ring in chace of you. So did I abuse
My self, my servant, and I fear me, you:
Under your hard construction must I sit,
To force that on you in a shamefull cunning
Which you knew none of yours. What might you think?
Have you not set mine honour at the stake,
And baited it with all th'unmuzled thoughts
That tyrannous heart can think? to one of your receiving
Enough is shewn, a Cipresse, not a bosome,
Hides my poor heart: so let me hear you speak.

Vio. I pitty you.

Ol. That's a degree to love.

Vio. No not a grice: for 'tis a vulgar proof
That very oft we pitty enemies.

Ol. Why then me thinks 'tis time to smile agen:
O world, how apt the poor are to be proud?
If one should be a prey, how much better
To fall before the Lion, then the Wolfe?

Clock strikes.

The clock upbraides me with the waste of time.
Be not afraid good youth, I will not have you;
And yet when wit and youth is come to harvest:
Your wife is like to reap a proper man:
There lies your way, due West.

Vio. Then Westward hoe:
Grace and good disposition attend your Ladiship:
You'll nothing, Madam, to my Lord, by me:

Ol. Stay: I prethee tell me what thou think'st of me?

Vio. That you doe think you are not what you are.

Ol. If I think so, I think the same of you.

Vio. Then think you right: I am not what I am.

Ol. I would you were, as I would have you be.

Vio. Would it be better, Madam, then I am?
I wish it might, for now I am your foole.

Ol. O what a deal of scorn, looks beautifull?
In the contempt and anger of his lip,
A murdrous guilt shewes not it self more soon,
Then love that would seem hid: Loves night, is noon.
Cesario, by the Roses of the Spring,
By maid-hood, honour, truth, and every thing,
I love thee so, that maugre all thy pride,

Nor wit, nor reaſon, can my paſſion hide:
Doe not extort thy reaſons from this clauſe,
For that I woo, thou therefore haſt no cauſe:
But rather reaſon thus, with reaſon fetter;
Love ſought, is good; but given unſought, is better.

Vio. By innocence I ſwear, and by my youth,
I have one heart, one boſome, and one truth,
And that no woman has, nor never none
Shall miſtris be of it, ſave I alone.
And ſo adieu, good Madam, never more,
Will I my Maſters teares to you deplore.

Ol. Yet come again: for thou perhaps may'ſt move
That heart, which now abhorres to like his love.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

And. No faith, I'le not ſtay a jot longer.

Tob. Thy reaſon dear venome, give thy reaſon.

Fab. You muſt needs yield your reaſon, Sir Andrew.

And. Marry I ſaw your Neece doe more favours to the Counts Serving-man, than ever ſhe beſtow'd upon me: I ſaw't i'th Orchard.

Tob. Did ſhe ſee thee the while, old boy, tell me that?

And. As plain as I ſee you now.

Fabi. This was a great argument of love in her toward you.

And. 'Slight; will you make an Aſſe o' me?

Fabi. I prove it legitimate, ſir, upon the oathes of judgement, and reaſon.

Tob. And they have been grand Jury-men, ſince before Noah was a Sailor.

Fabi. She did ſhew favour to the youth in your ſight, onely to exaſperate you, to awake your dormouſe valour, to put fire in your Heart, and brimſtone in your Liver: you ſhould then have accoſted her, and with ſome excellent jeſts (fire-new from the mint) you ſhould have bang'd the youth into dumbneſſe: this was look'd for at your hand, and this was baulkt: the double gilt of this opportunity you let time waſh off, and you are now ſail'd into the North of my Ladies opinion, where you will hang like an Iſickle on a Dutchmans beard, unleſſe you doe redeem it by ſome laudable attempt, either of valour or policy.

And. And't be any way, it muſt be with Valour, for Policy I hate: I had as liefe be a Browniſt, as a Politician.

Tob. Why then build me thy fortunes upon the baſis of valour. Challenge me the Counts youth to fight with him, hurt him in eleven places, my Neece ſhall take note of it, and aſſure thy ſelf, there is no love-Broker in the world, can more prevail in mens commendation with women, than report of valour.

Fab. There is no way but this, Sir Andrew.

And. Will either of you bear me a challenge to him?

Tob. Go write it in a martiall hand, be curſt and brief: it is no matter how witty, ſo it be eloquent, and full of invention: taunt him with the licenſe of Ink: if thou thou'ſt him ſome thrice, it ſhall not be amiſſe, and as many Lyes, as will lye in thy ſheet of paper, although the ſheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England, ſet 'em down, go about it. Let there be gall enough in thy Ink, though thou write with a Gooſe-pen, no matter: about it.

And. Where ſhall I find you?

Tob. We'll call thee at the Cubiculo: Go.

Exit Sir Andrew.

Fab. This is a dear Manakin to you, Sir Toby.

Tob. I have been dear to him lad, ſome two thouſand ſtrong, or ſo.

Fa. We ſhall have a rare Letter from him; but you'll not deliver't.

Tob. Never truſt me then: and by all meanes ſtirre on the youth to an anſwer. I think Oxen and wain-ropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were open'd and you find ſo much blood in his Liver, as will clog the foot of a flea, I'le eat the reſt of th'anatomy.

Fab. And his oppoſite the youth beares in his viſage no great preſage of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

Tob. Look where the youngeſt Wren of mine comes.

Mar. If you deſire the ſpleen, and will laugh your ſelves into ſtitches, follow me; yond gull Malvolio is turned Heathen, a very Renegatho; for there is no chriſtian that meanes to be ſaved by believing rightly, can ever believe ſuch impoſſible paſſages of groſſeneſſe. He's in yellow ſtockings.

Tob. And croſſe garter'd?

Mar. Moſt villanouſly: like a Pedant that keeps a Schoole i'th Church: I have dogg'd him like his murtherer. He does obey every point of the Letter that I dropt, to betray him: He does ſmile his face into more lines, then is in the new Mappe, with the augmentation of the Indies: you have not ſeen ſuch a thing as 'tis: I can hardly forbear hurling things at him, I know my Lady will ſtrike him: if ſhe doe, he'll ſmile, and tak't for a great favour.

Tob. Come bring us, bring us where he is.

Exeunt omnes.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sebaſtian, and Anthonio.

Seb. I would not by my will have troubled you,
But ſince you make your pleaſure of your pains,
I will no further chide you.

Anth. I could not ſtay behind you: my deſire
(More ſharp then filed ſteel) did ſpurre me forth,
And not all love to ſee you (though ſo much
As might have drawn one to a longer voyage)
But jealouſie, what might befall your travell,
Being ſkilleſſe in theſe parts: which to a ſtranger,
Unguided, and unfriended, often prove
Rough, and unhoſpitable. My willing love,
The rather by theſe arguments of fear
Set forth in your purſuit.

Seb. My kind Anthonio,
I can no other anſwer make, but thanks:
But were my worth, as is my conſcience firm,

You

You ſhould find better dealing: what's to doe?
Shall we go ſee the relicks of this Town?
Ant. To morrow, ſir, beſt firſt go ſee your Lodging.
Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night,
I pray you let us ſatisfie our eyes
With the memorialls, and the things of fame
That doe renown this City.
Ant. Would you'ld pardon me:
I doe not without danger walk theſe ſtreets.
Once in a ſea-fight 'gainſt the Count his gallies,
I did ſome ſervice, of ſuch note indeed,
That were I tane here, it would ſcarce be anſwer'd.
Seb. Belike you ſlew great number of his people.
Ant. Th'offence is not of ſuch a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of time, and quarrell
Might well have given us bloody argument:
It might have ſince been anſwer'd in repaying
What we took from them, which for Traffick's ſake
Moſt of our City did. Onely my ſelf ſtood out,
For which if I be lapſed in this place
I ſhall pay deare.
Seb. Doe not then walk too open.
Ant. It doth not fit me: hold, ſir, here's my purſe.
In the South Suburbes at the Elephant
Is beſt to lodge: I will beſpeak our diet,
Whiles you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the Town, there ſhall you have me.
Seb. Why I your purſe?
Ant. Haply your eye ſhall light upon ſome toy
You have deſire to purchaſe: and your ſtore
I think is not for idle Markets, ſir.
Seb. I'le be your purſe-bearer, and leave you
For an hour.
Ant. To th' Elephant.
Seb. I doe remember. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Olivia, and Maria.

Ol. I have ſent after him, he ſayes he'll come:
How ſhall I feaſt him? What beſtow of him?
For youth is bought more oft, then begg'd, or borrow'd.
I ſpeak too loud: Where's Malvolio, he is ſad, and civil,
And ſuits well for a ſervant with my fortunes,
Where is Malvolio?
Mar. He's comming, Madam:
But in very ſtrange manner. He is ſure poſſeſt, Madam.
Ol. Why, what's the matter, does he rave?
Mar. No, Madam, he does nothing but ſmile: your Ladiſhip were beſt to have ſome guard about you, if he come, for ſure the man is tainted in's wits.
Ol. Go call him hither.

Enter Malvolio.

I am as mad as he,
If ſad and merry madneſſe equall be.
How now Malvolio?
Mal. Sweet Lady, ha, ha.
Ol. Smil'ſt thou? I ſent for thee upon a ſad occaſion.
Mal. Sad Lady, I could be ſad:
This does make ſome obſtruction in the blood:
This croſſe-gartering, but what of that?
If it pleaſe the eye of one, it is with me as the very true Sonnet is: Pleaſe one, and pleaſe all.
Ol. Why? How do'ſt thou man?
What is the matter with thee?
Mal. Not black in my mind, though yellow in my legges: It did come to his hands, and Commands ſhall be executed. I think we doe know the ſweet Roman hand.
Ol. Wilt thou go to bed, Malvolio?
Mal. To bed? I ſweet heart: and I'le come to thee.
Ol. God comfort thee: why doſt thou ſmile ſo, and kiſſe thy hand ſo oft?
Mar. How doe you, Malvolio?
Mal. At your requeſt:
Yes Nightingales anſwer Dawes.
Mar. Why appear you with this ridiculous boldneſſe before my Lady?
Mal. Be not afraid of greatneſſe: 'twas well writ.
Ol. What meaneſt thou by that Malvolio?
Mal. Some are born great.
Ol. Ha?
Mal. Some atchieve greatneſſe.
Ol. What ſay'ſt thou?
Mal. And ſome have greatneſſe thruſt upon them.
Heaven reſtore thee.
Mal. Remember who commended thy yellow ſtockings.
Ol. Thy yellow ſtockings?
Mal. And wiſh'd to ſee thee croſſe-garter'd.
Ol. Croſſe-garter'd?
Mal. Go too, thou art made, if thou deſir'ſt to be ſo.
Ol. Am I made?
Mal. If not, let me ſee thee a ſervant ſtill.
Ol. Why this is very Midſummer madneſſe.

Enter Servant.

Ser. Madam, the young Gentleman of the Count Orſino's is return'd, I could hardly entreat him back: he attends your Ladiſhips pleaſure.
Ol. I'le come to him.
Good Maria, let this fellow be look'd to. Where's my Couſin Toby, let ſome of my people have a ſpeciall care of him, I would not have him miſcarry for the half of my Dowry. Exit.
Mal. Oh, ho, doe you come near me now: no worſe man then Sir Toby to look to me. This concurres directly with the Letter, ſhe ſends him on purpoſe, that I may appear ſtubborn to him: for ſhe incites me to that in the Letter. Caſt thy humble ſlough, ſayes ſhe: be oppoſite with a Kinſman, ſurly with ſervants, let thy tongue tang with arguments of ſtate, put thy ſelf into the trick of ſingularity: and conſequently ſets down the manner how: as a ſad face, a reverend carriage, a ſlow tongue, in the habit of ſome Sir of note, and ſo forth. I have limde her, but it is Joves doing, and Jove make me thankfull. And when ſhe went away now, let this Fellow be look'd to: Fellow? not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but Fellow. Why every thing adheres together, that no dramme of a ſcruple; no ſcruple of a ſcruple; no obſtacle; no incredulous or unſafe circumſtance: What can be ſaid? Nothing that can be, can come between me, and the full proſpect of my hopes. Well Jove, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Enter Toby, Fabian, and Maria.

To. Which way is he in the name of ſanctity? If all the deviils of hell be drawn in little, and Legion himſelf poſſeſt him, yet I'le ſpeak to him.

Fab. Here he is, here he is: how is't with you ſir? How is't with you man?

Mal. Go off, I diſcard you: let me enjoy my private: go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend ſpeakes within him; did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my Lady prayes you to have a care of him.

Mal. Ah ha, does ſhe ſo?

To. Go to, go to: peace, peace: we muſt deale gently with him: Let me alone. How doe you, Malvolio? How is't with you? What man, defie the devil: conſider, he's an enemy to mankind.

Mal. Doe you know what you ſay?

Mar. La you, and you ſpeak ill of the devil, how he takes it at heart. Pray God he be not bewitch'd.

Fab. Carry his water to th' wiſe woman.

Mar. Marry and it ſhall be done to morrow morning if I live. My Lady would not looſe him for more then I'le ſay.

Mal. How now Miſtris?

Mar. Oh Lord.

To. Prethee hold thy peace, this is not the w Doe you not ſee you move him?

Fa. No my gentleneſſe, gently, gently: the Fiend is rough, and will not be roughly us'd.

To. Why how now my havock? how doſt thou chuck?

Mal. Sir.

To. I biddy, come with me. What man, 'tis not for gravity to play at cherry-pit with ſathan. Hang him foul Colliar.

Mar. Get him to ſay his prayers, good Sir Toby, get him to pray.

Mal. My prayers Minx.

Mar. No I warrant you, he will not hear of godlineſſe.

Mal. Go hang your ſelves all: you are idle ſhallow things, I am not of your element, you ſhall know more hereafter. Exit.

To. Is't poſſible?

Fab. If this were plaid upon a ſtage now, I could condemn it as an unprobtable fiction.

To. His very genius hath taken the infection of the device man.

Mar. Nay purſue him now, leaſt the device take ayre, and taint.

Fa. Why we ſhall make him mad indeed.

Mar. The houſe will be the quieter.

To. Come, we'll have him in a darke room and bound. My Neece is already in the belief that he's mad: we may carry it thus for our pleaſure, and his penance, till our very paſtime tired out of breath, prompt us to have mercy on him: at which time, we will bring the device to the bar, and crown thee for a finder of madmen: but ſee, but ſee.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Fa. More matter for a May morning.

And. Here's the Challenge, read it: I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Is't ſo ſawcy?

And. I, is't? I warrant him: doe but read.

To. Give me.

Youth, whatſoever thou art, thou art but a ſcurvy fellow.

Fa. Good and valiant.

To. Wonder not, nor admire in thy mind why I doe call thee ſo, for I will ſhew thee no reaſon for't. (Law.

Fa. A good note, that keeps you from the blow of the

To. Thou comm'ſt to the Lady Olivia, and in my ſight ſhe uſes thee kindly: but thou ly'ſt in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Fa. Very brief, and to exceeding good ſenſe-leſſe,

To. I will way-lay thee going home, where if it be thy chance to kill me.

Fa. Good.

To. Thou kill'ſt me like a rogue and a villain.

Fa. Still you keep o'th windy ſide of the Law: good.

To. Fare thee well, and God have mercy upon our ſoules. He may have mercy upon mine, but my hope is better, and ſo look to thy ſelf. Thy friend as thou uſeſt him, and thy ſworn enemy, Andrew Ague-cheek.

To. If this Letter move him not, his legges cannot: I'le giv't him.

Mar. You may have very fit occaſion for't: he is now in ſome commerce with my Lady, and will by and by depart.

To. Go ſir Andrew: ſcout me for him at the corner of the Orchard like a bum-Baily: ſo ſoon as ever thou ſeeſt him, draw, and as thou draw'ſt ſwear horribly: for it comes to paſſe oft, that a terrible oath, with a ſwaggering accent ſharply twang'd off, gives manhood more approbation, then ever proof it ſelf would have earn'd him. Away.

And. Nay let me alone for ſwearing. Exit.

To. Now will not I deliver this Letter: for the behaviour of the young Gentleman, gives him out to be of good capacity, and breeding: his employment between his Lord and my Neece, confirmes no leſſe. Therefore, this Letter being ſo excellently ignorant, will breed no terrour in the youth: he will find that it comes from a Clodde-pole. But ſir, I will deliver his challenge by word of mouth; ſet upon Ague-cheek a notable report of valour, and drive the Gentleman (as I know his youth will aptly receive it) into a moſt hideous opinion of his rage, skill, fury, and impetuoſity. This will ſo fright them both, that they will kill one another by the look, like Cockatrices.

Enter Olivia, and Viola.

F. Here he comes with your Neece, give them way till he take leave, and preſently after him.

To. I will meditate the while upon ſome horrid meſſage for a Challenge. Exeunt.

Ol. I have ſaid too much unto a heart of ſtone,
And laid mine honour too unchary on't:
There's ſomething in me that reproves my fault:
But ſuch a head-ſtrong potent fault it is:
That it but mocks reproof.

Vio. With the ſame haviour that your paſſion beares,
Goes on my Maſter's griefs.

Ol. Here, wear this Jewell for me, 'tis my picture:
Refuſe it not, it hath no tongue to vex you:
And I beſeech you come again to morrow.
What ſhall you aske of me that I'le deny,
That (honour ſav'd) may upon asking give.

Vio. Nothing but this, your true love for my Maſter.

Ol. How with mine honour may I give him that,
Which I have given to you?

Vio. I will acquit you.

Ol. Well, come again to morrow: fare-thee-well,
A Fiend like thee might bear my ſoul to hell. Exit.

Enter Toby, and Fabian.

To. Gentleman, God ſave thee.

Vio.

Vio. And you, sir.

To. That defence thou hast, betake thee to't: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I know not: but thy intercepter full of despight, bloody as the Hunter, attends thee at the Orchard end: dismount thy Tuck, be yare in thy preparation, for thy assailant is quick, skilfull, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake, sir, I am sure, no man hath any quarrell to me: my remembrance is very free and clear from any image of offence done to any man.

To. You'l find it otherwise I assure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your guard: for your opposite hath in him, what youth, strength, skill, and wrath can furnish a man withall.

Vio. I pray you, sir, what is he?

To. He is knight dubb'd with unhatch'd Rapier, and on carpet consideration, but he is a devil in private brawl; soules and bodies hath he divorc'd three, and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none, but by pangs of death and sepulcher: Hob, nob, is his word: giv't or tak't.

Vio. I will return again into the house, and desire some conduct of the Lady. I am no fighter, I have heard of some kind of men, that put quarrells purposely on others, to taste their valour: belike this is a man of that quirk.

To. Sir, no: his indignation derives it self out of a very competent injury, therefore get you on, and give him his desire. Back you shall not to the house, unlesse you undertake that with me, which with as much safety you might answer him: therefore on, or strip your sword stark naked: for meddle you must, that's certain, or forswear to wear iron about you.

Vio. This is as uncivil as strange. I beseech you doe me this courteous office, as to know of the Knight what my offence to him is: it is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

To. I will do so. Signior Fabian, stay you by this Gentleman till my return. Exit Toby.

Vio. Pray you sir, doe you know of this matter?

Fab. I know the Knight is incens'd against you, even to a mortall arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you, what manner of man is he?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderfull promise to read him by his form, as you are like to find him in the proof of his valour. He is indeed, sir, the most skilfull, bloody, and fatall opposite that you could possibly have found in any part of Illyria: will you walk towards him, I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall be much bound to you for't: I am one, that had rather go with sir Priest, then sir Knight: I care not who knowes so much of my mettle. Exeunt.

Enter Toby, and Andrew.

Tob. Why man, he's a very devil, I have not seen such a firago: I had a passe with him, rapier, scabberd, and all: and he gives me the stuck in with such a mortall motion that it is inevitable: and on the answer, he payes you as surely, as your feet hits the ground they step on. They say, he has been Fencer to the Sophy.

And. Pox on't, I'le not meddle with him.

To. I, but he will not now be pacified, Fabian can scarce hold him yonder.

An. Plague on't, and I thought he had been valiant, and so cunning in Fence, I'de have seen him damn'd ere I'de have challeng'd him. Let him let the matter slip, and I'le give him my horse, gray Capilet.

Tob. I'le make the motion: stand here, make a good shew on't, this shall end without the perdition of soules, marry I'le ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Enter Fabian, and Viola.

I have his horse to take up the quarrell, I have perswaded him the youth's a devil.

Fab. He is as horribly conceited of him: and pants, and looks pale, as if a Bear were at his heeles.

To. There's no remedy, sir, he will fight with you for's oath sake: marry he hath better bethought him of his quarrell, and he finds that now scarce to be worth talking of: therefore draw for the supportance of his vow, he protests he will not hurt you.

Vio. Pray God defend me: a little thing would make me tell them how much I lack of a man.

Fab. Give ground if you see him furious.

To. Come, Sir Andrew, there's no remedy, the Gentleman will for his honours sake have one bout with you: he cannot by the Duello avoid it: but he has promised me, as he is a Gentleman and a Souldier, he will not hurt you. Come on, to't.

And. Pray God he keep his oath.

Enter Antonio.

Vio. I doe assure you 'tis against my will.

Ant. Put up your sword: if this young Gentleman
Have done offence, I take the fault on me:
If you offend him, I for him defie you.

Tob. You sir? Why, what are you?

Ant. One sir, that for his love dares yet doe more
Then you have heard him brag to you he will.

Tob. Nay, if you be an undertaker, I am for you.

Enter Officers.

Fab. O good Sir Toby, hold: here come the Officers.

Tob. I'le be with you anon.

Vio. Pray sir, put your sword up if you please.

And. Marry will I sir: and for that I promis'd you I'le be as good as my word. He will bear you easily, and raines well.

1. Off. This is the man, doe thy Office.

2. Off. Anthonio, I arrest thee at the suit of Count Orsino.

Ant. You doe mistake me, sir.

1. Off. No sir, no jot: I know your favour well:
Though now you have no sea-cap on your head:
Take him away, he knowes I know him well.

Ant. I must obey. This comes with seeking you:
But there's no remedy, I shall answer it:
What will you doe? now my necessity
Makes me to aske you for my purse. It grieves me
Much more, for what I cannot doe for you,
Then what befalls my self: you stand amaz'd,
Be of comfort.

2. Off. Come, sir, away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money.

Vio. What money, sir?
For the fair kindnesse you have shew'd me here,
And part being prompted by your present trouble,
Out of my lean and low ability
I'le lend you something: my having is not much,
I'le make division of my present with you:
Hold, there's half my Coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now?
Is't possible, that my deserts to you
Can lack perswasion? Doe not tempt my misery,
Least that it make me so unsound a man,
As to upbraid you with those kindnesses

That I have done for you.
Vio. I know of none.
Nor know I you by voyce, or any feature:
I hate ingratitude more in a man,
Then lying, vainneſſe, babling drunkenneſſe,
Or any taint of vice, whoſe ſtrong corruption
Inhabits our frail blood.
Ant. Oh heavens themſelves!
2. Off. Come, ſir, I pray you go.
Ant. Let me ſpeak a little. This youth that you ſee
I ſnatch'd one half out of the jawes of death, (here,
Reliev'd him with ſuch ſanctity of love;
And to his image, which me thought did promiſe
Moſt venerable worth, did I devotion.
1. Off. What's that to us, the time goes by: Away.
Ant. But oh, how vilde an idoll proves this god:
Thou haſt Sebaſtian done good feature ſhame,
In Nature there's no blemiſh but the mind:
None can be call'd deform'd but the unkind.
Virtue is beauty, but the beauteous evil
Are empty trunks, o're-flouriſh'd by the devil.
1. Off. The man growes mad, away with him:
Come, come, ſir.
Ant. Lead me on. Exit.
Vio. Me thinks his words doe from ſuch paſſion flie,
That he believes himſelf, ſo doe not I.
Prove true imagination, oh prove true,
That I dear brother, be now tane for you.
To. Come hither, Knight, come hither, Fabian: Well whiſper o're a couplet or two of moſt ſage ſawes.
Vio. He nam'd Sebaſtian: I my brother know
Yet living in my glaſſe: even ſuch, and ſo
In favour was my Brother, and he went
Still in this faſhion, colour, ornament,
For him I imitate: Oh if it prove,
Tempeſts are kind, and ſalt waves freſh in love. Exit.
Tob. A very diſhoneſt paltry boy, and more a coward then a Hare: his diſhoneſty appeares, in leaving his friend here in neceſſity, and denying him: and for his cowardſhip aske Fabian.
Fab. A Coward, a moſt devout Coward, religious in it.
And. 'Slid, I'le after him again, and beat him.
To. Doe, cuffe him ſoundly, but never thy ſword.
And. And I doe not.
Fab. Come, let's ſee the event.
Tob. I dare lay any mony, 'twill be nothing yet. Ex.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Sebaſtian, and Clown.
Clo. Will you make me believe that I am not ſent for you?
Seb. Go to, go to, thou art a fooliſh fellow,
Let me be clear of thee.
Clo. Well held out ifaith: No, I doe not know you, nor I am not ſent to you by my Lady, to bid you come ſpeak with her: nor your name is not Maſter Ceſario, nor this is not my noſe neither: nothing that is ſo, is ſo.
Seb. I prethee vent thy folly ſomewhere elſe, thou know'ſt not me.
Clow. Vent my folly: He has heard that word of ſome great man, and now applies it to a fool. Vent my folly: I am afraid this great lubber the World will prove a Cockney: I prethee now ungird thy ſtrangeneſſe, and tell me what I ſhall vent to my Lady: ſhall I vent to her that thou art comming?
Seb. I prethee fooliſh Greek depart from me, there's money for thee, if you tarry longer, I ſhall give worſe payment.
Clo. By my troth thou haſt an open hand: theſe Wiſemen that give fooles money, get themſelves a good report, after fourteen yeares purchaſe.

Enter Andrew, Toby, and Fabian.
And. Now, ſir, have I met you again: there's for you.
Seb. Why there's for thee, and there, and there: Are all the people mad?
To. Hold, ſir, or I'le throw your dagger o're the houſe.
Clo. This will I tell my Lady ſtraight: I would not be in ſome of your coats for two-pence.
To. Come on, ſir, hold.
And. Nay let him alone, I'le go another way to work with him: I'le have an action of Battery againſt him, if there be any law in Illyria: though I ſtrook him firſt, yet it's no matter for that.
Seb. Let go thy hand.
Tob. Come ſir, I will not let you go. Come my young ſouldier, put up your iron: you are well fleſh'd: Come on.
Seb. I will be free from thee. What would'ſt thou now? If thou dar'ſt tempt me further, draw thy ſword.
To. What, what? Nay then I muſt have an ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Enter Olivia.
Ol. Hold Toby, on thy life I charge thee hold.
Tob. Madam.
Ol. Will it be ever thus? Ungracious wretch,
Fit for the Mountains, and the barbarous Caves,
Where manners ne're were preach'd: out of my ſight.
Be not offended, dear Ceſario.
Rudesby be gone. I prethee gentle friend,
Let thy fair wiſedome, not thy paſſion ſway
In this uncivil, and unjuſt extent
Againſt thy peace. Go with me to my houſe,
And hear thou there, how many fruitleſſe pranks
This Ruffian hath botch'd up, that thou thereby
Maiſt ſmile at this: Thou ſhalt not chooſe but go:
Doe not deny, beſhrew his ſoul for me;
He ſtarted one poor heart of mine, in thee.
Seb. What reliſh is in this? How runs the ſtream?
Or I am mad, or elſe this is a dreame:
Let fancy ſtill my ſenſe in Lethe ſteep,
If it be thus to dreame, ſtill let me ſleep.
Ol. Nay come I prethee, would thoud'ſt be rul'd by me.
Seb. Madam, I will.
Ol. O ſay ſo, and ſo be. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Maria, and Clown.
Mar. Nay, I prethee put on this Gown, and this beard; make him believe thou art Sir Topas the Curate; doe it quickly. I'le call Sir Toby the whil'ſt.
Clo. Well, I'le put it on, and I will diſſemble my ſelf in't, and I would I were the firſt that ever diſſembled in ſuch such a Gown. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor lean enough to be thought a good Student: but to be said an honest man, and a good Housekeeper goes as fairly, as to say, a carefull man, and a great Schollar. The Competitors enter.

Enter Toby.

To. Jove blesse thee, M. Parson.

Clo. Bonos dies, Sir Toby: for as the old Hermit of Prage, that never saw Pen and Ink, very wittily said to a Neece of King Gorbodack, that that is, is: so I being M. Parson, am M. Parson; for what is that, but that? and is, but is?

To. To him, Sir Topas.

Clow. What hoa, I say, Peace in this prison.

To. The Knave counterfeits well: a good Knave.

Malvolio within.

Mal. Who calls there?

Clo. Sir Topas the Curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the Lunatick.

Mal. Sir Topas, Sir Topas, good Sir Topas, go to my Lady.

Clo. Out hyperbolicall fiend, how vexest thou this man? Talkest thou nothing but of Ladies?

Tob. Well said, M. Parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged, good Sir Topas, doe not think I am mad: they have laid me here in hideous darkenesse.

Clo. Fye, thou dishonest Sathan: I call thee by the most modest termes, for I am one of those gentle ones, that will use the Devil himself with curtesie: say'st thou that house is dark?

Mal. As hell, Sir Topas.

Clo. Why it hath bay Windowes transparent as Baricadoes, and the clear stones toward the South-North, are lustrous as Ebony: and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Mal. I am not mad, Sir Topas, I say to you this house is dark.

Clo. Madam, thou errest: I say there is no darkenesse but ignorance, in which thou art more puzzell'd then the Ægyptians in their fogge.

Mal. I say this house is as dark as ignorance, thou Ignorance were as dark as hell; and I say there was never man thus abus'd, I am no more mad than you are, make the triall of it in any constant question.

Clo. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning Wild-fowle?

Mal. That the soul of our Grandam, might happily inhabit a Bird.

Clo. What think'st thou of his opinion?

Mal. I think nobly of the soul, and no way approve his opinion.

Clo. Fare thee well: remain thou still in darkenesse, thou shalt hold th'opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits, and fear to kill a Woodcock, lest thou dispossesse the house of thy Grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Topas, sir Topas.

To. My most exquisite Sir Topas.

Clo. Nay, I am for all waters.

Mar. Thou might'st have done this without thy beard and gown, he sees thee not.

Tob. To him in thine own voyce, and bring me word how thou findst him: I would we were all rid of this knavery. If he may be conveniently deliver'd, I would he were, for I am now so farre in offence with my Neece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport the upshot. Come by and by to my Chamber. Exit.

Clo. Hey Robin, jolly Robin, tell me how thy Lady does.

Mal. Fool.

Clo. My Lady is unkind, perdie.

Mal. Fool.

Clo. Alas, why is she so?

Mal. Fool, I say.

Clo. She loves another. Who calls, ha?

Mal. Good Fool, as ever thou wilt deserve well at my hand, help me to a Candle, and Pen, Ink, and Paper: as I am a Gentleman, I will live to be thankfull to thee for't.

Clo. M. Malvolio?

Mal. I, good Fool.

Clo. Alas, sir, how fell you besides your five wits?

Mal. Fool, there was never man so notoriously abus'd: I am as well in my wits (fool) as thou art.

Clo. But as well: then you are mad indeed, if you be no better in your wits then a foole.

Mal. They have here propertied me: keep me in darkenesse, send Ministers to me, Asses, and doe all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clo. Advise you what you say: the Minister is here. Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wits the heavens restore: endeavour thy self to sleep, and leave thy vain bibble babble.

Mal. Sir Topas.

Clo. Maintain no words with him good fellow. Who I sir, not I sir. God buy you good Sir Topas: Marry Amen. I will sir, I will sir.

Mal. Fool, fool, fool, I say.

Clo. Alas, sir, be patient. What say you, sir? I am shent for speaking to you.

Mal. Good fool help me to some light, and some Paper. I tell thee I am as well in my wits, as any man in Illyria.

Clo. Well-a-day, that you were sir.

Mal. By this hand I am: good fool, some Ink, Paper, and Light: and convey what I will set down to my Lady: it shall advantage thee more, then ever the bearing of Letter did.

Clo. I will help you to't. But tell me true, are you not mad indeed, or doe you but counterfeit?

Mal. Believe me, I am not, I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'le ne're believe a madman, till I see his brains, I will fetch you light, and paper, and ink.

Mal. Fool, I'le requite it in the highest degree: I prethee be gone.

Clo. I am gone sir, and anon sir,
I'le be with you again:
In a trice, like to the old vice,
your need to sustain.
Who with Dagger of Lath, in his rage and his wrath,
cries ah ha, to the Devil:
Like a mad Lad, pair thy nailes Dad,
adieu good man Devil. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. This is the ayre, that is the glorious Sun,
This Pearl she gave me, I doe feel't, and see't,
And though 'tis wonder that enwraps me thus,

Yet

Yet 'tis not madneſſe. Where's Anthonio then ?
I could not find him at the Elephant,
Yet there it was, and there I found this credit,
That he did range the Town to ſeek me out,
His counſell now might do me golden ſervice,
For though my ſoule diſputes well with my ſenſe,
That this may be ſome error, but no madneſſe,
Yet doth this accident and floud of Fortune,
So far exceed all inſtance, all diſcourſe,
That I am ready to diſtruſt mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reaſon that perſwades me
To any other truſt, but that I am mad,
Or elſe the Ladies mad ; yet if 'twere ſo,
She could not ſway her houſe, command her followers,
Take, and give back affairs, and their diſpatch,
With ſuch a ſmooth, diſcreet, and ſtable-bearing
As I perceive ſhe do's: there's ſomething in't
That is deceiveable. But here the Lady comes.

Enter Olivia, and Prieſt.

Ol. Blame not this haſte of mine: if you mean well
Now go with me, and with this holy man
Into the Chantry by: there before him,
And underneath that conſecrated roofe,
Plight me the full aſſurance of your faith,
That my moſt jealous, and too doubtfull ſoule
May live at Peace. He ſhall conceale it,
Whiles you are willing it ſhall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keep
According to my birth, what do you ſay ?

Seb. I'le follow this good man, and go with you,
And having ſworn truth, ever will be true.

Ol. Then lead the way good father, & heaven ſo ſhine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine. Exeunt.

Finis Actus Quarti.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clown and Fabian.

Fab. Now as thou lov'ſt me, let me ſee this Letter.

Clo. Good M. Fabian grant me another requeſt.

Fab. Any thing.

Clo. Do not deſire to ſee this Letter.

Fab. This is to give a Dog, and in recompence deſire my dog again.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Lords.

Du. Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends?

Clo. I ſir, we are ſome of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well : how do'ſt thou my good Fellow ?

Clo. Truly ſir, the better for my foes, and the worſe for my friends.

Du. Juſt the contrary : the better for thy friends.

Clow. No ſir, the worſe.

Du. How can that be?

Clo. Marry ſir, they praiſe me, and make an Aſs of me, now my foes tell me plainly, I am an Aſſe: ſo that by my foes ſir, I profit in the knowledge of my ſelf, and by my friends I am abuſed : ſo that concluſions to be as kiſſes, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, why then the worſe of my friends, and the better for my foes.

Du. Why this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth ſir, no : though it pleaſe you to be one of my friends.

Du. Thou ſhalt not be the worſe for me, there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double dealing ſir, I would you could make it another.

Du. O you give me ill counſell.

Clo. Put your Grace in your pocket ſir, for this once, and let your fleſh and bloud obey it.

Du. Well, I will be ſo much a ſinner to be a double dealer : there's another.

Clo. Primo, ſecundo, tertio, is a good play, and the old ſaying is, the third Payes for all: the triplex ſir, is a good tripping meaſure, or the bells of S. Bennet ſir, may put you in minde, one, two, three.

Du. You can foole no more money out of me at this throw : if you will let your Lady know I am here to ſpeak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry ſir, lullaby to your bounty till I come agen. I go ſir, but I would not have you to think, that my deſire of having is the ſin of covetouſneſs: but as you ſay ſir, let your bounty take a nap, I will awake it anon. Exit.

Enter Anthonio and Officers.

Vio. Here comes the man ſir, that did reſcue me.

Du. That face of his I do remember well,
Yet when I ſaw it laſt, it was beſmear'd
As black as Vulcan, in the ſmoak of War:
A bawbling Veſſell was he Captain of,
For ſhallow draught and Bulk unprizable,
With which ſuch ſcathfull grapple did he make,
With the moſt noble bottome of our Fleet,
That very envy, and the tongue of loſſe
Cri'd fame and honour on him: What's the matter?

1. Offi. Orſino, this is that Anthonio
That took the Phœnix, and her fraught from Candy,
And this is he that did the Tiger boord,
When your young Nephew Titus loſt his leg:
Here in the ſtreets, deſperate of ſhame and ſtate,
In private brabble did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindneſſe ſir, drew on my ſide,
But in concluſion put ſtrange ſpeech upon me,
I know not what 'twas, but diſtraction.

Du. Notable Pyrate, thou ſalt-water Thief,
What fooliſh boldneſs brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou in termes ſo bloudy, and ſo dear
Haſt made thine enemies?

Ant. Orſino : Noble ſir,
Be pleas'd that I ſhake of theſe names you give me:
Anthonio never yet was Thief, or Pyrate,
Though I confeſs, on baſe and ground enough
Orſino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:
That moſt ingratefull Boy there by your ſide,
From the rude ſeas inrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeem: a wrack paſt hope he was:
His life I gave him, and did there to adde
My love without retention, or reſtraint,
All this is dedication. For his ſake,
Did I expoſe my ſelf (pure of his love)
Into the danger of this adverſe Town,
Drew to defend him, when he was beſet:
Where being apprehended, his falſe cunning
(Not meaning to partake with me in danger)
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,

And

And grew a twenty years removed thing,
While one would wink: denid be mine own purse,
Which I had recommended to his use,
Not half an houre before.
Vio. How can this be?
Du. When came he to this Town?
Ant. To day my Lord: and for three months before,
No interim, not a minutes vacancie,
Both day and night did we keep company.
Enter Olivia, and attendants.
Du. Here comes the Countess, now heaven walks on earth:
But for thee, fellow; fellow, thy words are madness,
Three months this youth hath tended upon me,
But more of that anon. Take him aside.
Ol. What would my Lord, but that he may not have,
Wherein Olivia may seem serviceable?
Cesario, you do not keep promise with me.
Vio. Madam.
Du. Gracious Olivia.
Ol. What do you say Cesario? Good my Lord.
Vio. My Lord would speak, my duty hushes me.
Ol. If it be ought to the old tune my Lord,
It is as fat and fulsome to mine ear
As howling after Musick.
Du. Still so cruell?
Ol. Still so constant my Lord.
Du. What to perverseness? you uncivill Lady
To whose ingrate, and unauspicious Altars
My soul the faithfull'st offerings have breath'd out
That ere devotion tender'd. What shall I do?
Ol. Even what it please my Lord, that shall become him.
Du. Why should I not, (had I the heart to do it)
Like to the Egyptian Thief, at point of death
Kill what I love: (a savage jealousie,
That sometime savours nobly) but hear me this:
Since you to none regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screws me from my true place in your favour:
Live you the Marble-breasted Tyrant still.
But this your Minion, whom I know you love,
And whom, by heaven I swear, I tender dearly,
Him will I tear out of that cruell eye,
Where he sits crowned in his Masters spight.
Come Boy with me, my thoughts are ripe in mischief:
I'le sacrifice the Lambe that I do love,
To spight a Ravens heart within a Dove.
Vio. And I most jocond, apt, and willingly,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would die.
Ol. Where goes Cesario?
Vio. After him I love,
More then I love these eyes, more then my life,
More by all mores, then ere I shall love wife.
If I do feigne, you witnesses above
Punish my life, for tainting of my Love.
Ol. Aye me detested, how am I beguil'd?
Vio. Who do's beguile you? who do's do you wrong?
Ol. Hast thou forgot thy self? Is it so long?
Call forth the holy Father.
Du. Come, away.
Ol. Whither my Lord? Cesario, Husband, stay.
Du. Husband?
Ol. I Husband. Can he that deny?
Du. Her husband sirrah?
Vio. No my Lord, not I.
Ol. Alas, it is the baseness of thy fear,
That makes thee strangle thy propriety:
Fear not Cesario, take thy fortunes up,
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as thou fear'st.
Enter Priest.
O welcome Father:
Father, I charge thee by thy reverence
Here to unfold, though lately we intended
To keep in darkness, what occasion now
Reveals before 'tis ripe: what thou do'st know
Hath newly past, between this youth, and me.
Priest. A contract of eternall bond of love,
Confirm'd by mutuall joynder of your hands,
Attested by the holy close of lips,
Strengthned by enterchangement of your Rings,
And all the Ceremony of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my grave
I have travell'd but two hours.
Du. O thou dissembling Cub: what wilt thou be
When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickly grow,
That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow?
Farewell, and take her, but direct thy feet,
Where thou, and (I henceforth) may never meet.
Vio. My Lord, I do protest.
Ol. O do not swear;
How little faith, though thou hast too much fear.

Enter Sir Andrew.
And. For the love of God a Surgeon, and one presently to Sir Toby.
Ol. What's the matter?
And. H'as broke my head a-crosse, and given Sir Toby a bloudy Coxcombe too: for the love of God your help, I had rather than forty pound I were at home.
Ol. Who has done this Sir Andrew?
And. The Counts Gentleman, one Cesario: we took him for a Coward, but he's the very Devill incardinate.
Du. My Gentleman Cesario?
And. Odd's lifelings here he is: you broke my head for nothing, and that that I did, I was set on to doo't by Sir Toby.
Vio. Why do you speak to me I never hurt you:
You drew your sword upon me without cause,
But I bespake you fair and hurt you not.

Enter Toby and Clown.
And. If a bloudy Coxcombe be a hurt, you have hurt me: I think you set nothing by a bloudy Coxcombe, Here comes sir Toby halting, you shall hear more: but if he had not been in drink, he would have tickel'd you other gates then he did.
Du. How now Gentleman? how is't with you?
To. That's all one, has hurt me, and there's an end on't. Sot, did'st thou see Dick Surgeon sot?
Clo. O he's drunk sir above an houre agone: his eyes were at eight i'th morning.
To. Then he's a Rogue after a passy measures Pavin: I hate a drunken Rogue.
Ol. Away with him? Who hath made this havock with them?
And. I'le help you Sir Toby, because we'll be dresst together.
To. Will you help an Asse-head, and a Coxcombe, and a Knave: a thin-fac'd Knave, a Gull?

Ol.

Ol. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd to.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry Madam I have hurt your kinsman:
But had it been the brother of my bloud,
I must have done no lesse with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard upon me, and by that
I do perceive it hath offended you:
Pardon me (sweet one) even for the vowes
We made each other, but so late ago.

Du. One face, one voyce, one habit, and two persons,
A naturall Perspective, that is, and is not.

Seb. Anthonio, O my dear Anthonio!
How have the hours rack'd, and tortur'd me,
Since I have lost thee?

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that Anthonio?

Ant. How have you made division of your self,
An ample cleft in two, is not more twin
Then these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Ol. Most wonderfull.

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother:
Nor can there be a Deity in my nature
Of here and every where. I had a sister,
Whom the blinde waves and surges have devour'd:
Of charity, what kin are you to me?
What Countreyman? What name? What Parentage?

Vio. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my Father,
Such a Sebastian was my brother too:
So went he suited to his watery tombe:
If spirits can assume both forme and suit,
You come to fright us.

Seb. A spirit I am indeed,
But am in that dimension grosly clad,
Which from the Wombe I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest go even,
I should my tears let fall upon your cheek,
And say, thrice welcome drowned Viola.

Vio. My Father had a Moale upon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine.

Vio. And di'd that day when Viola from her birth
Had numbred thirteen years.

Seb. O that record is lively in my soule,
He finished indeed his mortall act
That day that made my sister thirteen years.

Vio. If nothing lets to make us happy both,
But this my masculine usurp'd attyre:
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance,
Of place, time, fortune, do cohere and jump
That I am Viola, which to confirme,
I'le bring you to a Captain in this Town,
Where lye my Maiden weeds: by whose gentle help,
I was preserv'd to serve this noble Count:
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath been between this Lady, and his Lord.

Seb. So comes it Lady, you have been mistook:
But Nature to her bias drew in that.
You would have been contracted to a Maid,
Nor are you therein (by my life) deceiv'd,
You are betroth'd both to a Maid and man.

Du. Be not amaz'd, right noble is his bloud:
If this be so, as yet the glasse seems true,
I shall have share in this most happy wrack.
Boy, thou hast said to me a thousand times,
Thou never should'st love woman like to me.

Vio. And all those sayings, will I over-swear
And all those swearings keep as true in soule,
As doth that Orbed Continent, the fire,
That severs day from night.

Du. Give me thy hand,
And let me see thee in thy womans weeds.

Vio. The Captain that did bring me first on shore,
Hath my Maids garments: he upon some Action
Is now in durance, at Malvolio's suit,
A gentleman and follower of my Ladies.

Ol. He shall enlarge him: fetch Malvolio hither,
And yet alas, now I remember me,
They say, poor Gentleman, he's much distract.

Enter the Clown with a Letter, and Fabian

A most exacting frenzie of mine own,
From my remembrance, clearly banish his.
How does he sirrah?

Clo. Truly Madam, he holds Belzebub at the staves end as well as a man in his case may do: has here writ a letter to you, I should have given't you to day morning. But as a mad mans Epistles are no Gospels, so it skills not much when they are deliver'd.

Ol. Open't and read it.

Clo. Look then to be well edified, when the Foole delivers the Madman. By the Lord Madam.

Ol. How now, art thou mad?

Clo. No Madam, I do but read madnesse: and your Ladiship will have it as it ought to be, you must allow Vox.

Ol. Prethee read it i'thy right wits.

Clo. So I do Madona: but to read his right wits, is to read thus: therefore, perpend my Princess, and give ear.

Ol. Read it you, sirrah.

Fab. Reads. By the Lord Madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: Though you have put me into darknesse, and given your drunken Cozen rule over me, yet have I benefit of my senses as well as your Ladyship. I have your own Letter, that induced me to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not, but to do my self much right, or you much shame: Think of me as you please. I leave my duty a little unthought of, and speak out of my injury. The madly us'd Malvolio.

Ol. Did he write this?

Clo. I Madam.

Du. This savours not much of distraction.

Ol. See him deliver'd: Fabian, bring him hither:
My Lord, so please you, these things further thought on,
To think me as well a sister, as a wife,
One day shall crown th'alliance on't, so please you,
Here at my house, and at my proper cost.

Du. Madam, I am most apt t'embrace your offer:
Your Master quits you: and for your service done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So far beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me master, for so long:
Here is my hand, you shall from this time be
Your Masters Mistris.

Ol. A sister, you are she.

Enter Malvolio.

Du. Is this the Mad man?

Ol. I my Lord, this same: How now Malvolio?

Mal. Madam, you have done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.

Ol. Have I Malvolio? No.

Mal. Lady you have, pray you peruse that Letter.
You must not now deny it is your hand,
Write from it if you can, in hand or phrase,

Or my 'tis not your ſeale, not your invention:
You can ſay none of this. Well, grant it then,
And tell me in the modeſty of honour,
Why you have given me ſuch clear lights of favour,
Bad me come ſmiling and croſſ-garter'd to you,
To put on yellow ſtockings, and to frown
Upon Sir Toby, and the lighter people:
And acting this in an obedient hope,
Why have you ſuffer'd me to be impriſon'd,
Kept in a dark houſe, viſited by the Prieſt,
And made the moſt notorious geck or gull,
That ere invention plaid on? Tell me why?

Ol. Alas Malvolio, this is not my writing,
Though I confeſſe, much like the Character:
But out of queſtion, 'tis Maria's hand.
And now I do bethink me, it was ſhe
Firſt told me thou waſt mad; then cam'ſt in ſmiling,
And in ſuch formes, which here were preſuppos'd
Upon thee in the Letter: prethee be content,
This practiſe hath moſt ſhrewdly paſt upon thee:
But when we know the grounds and authours of it,
Thou ſhalt be both the plaintiff and the Judge
Of thine own cauſe.

Fab. Good Madam hear me ſpeak,
And let no quarrell, nor no brawle to come,
Taint the condition of this preſent hour,
Which I have wondred at. In hope it ſhall not,
Moſt freely I confeſſe my ſelf, and Toby
Set this device againſt Malvolio here,
Upon ſome ſtubborn and uncourteous parts
We had conceiv'd againſt him. Maria writ
The Letter, at Sir Tobyes great importance,
In recompence whereof, he hath married her:
How with a ſportfull malice it was follow'd,
May rather pluck on laughter then revenge,
If that the injuries be juſtly weigh'd,
That have on both ſides paſt.

Ol. Alas poor Foole how have they baffel'd thee?

Clo. Why ſome are born great, ſome atchieve greatneſſe, and ſome have greatneſſe thrown upon them. I was one ſir, in this Enterlude, one Sir Topas ſir, but that's all one: By the Lord Foole, I am not mad: but do you remember, Madam, why laugh you at ſuch a barren raſcal, and you ſmile not he's gag'd: and thus the whirle-gigge of time, brings in his revenges.

Mal. I'le be reveng'd on the whole pack of you.

Ol. He hath been moſt notoriouſly abus'd.

Du. Purſue him, and entreat him to a peace:
He hath not told us of the Captain yet,
When that is known, and golden time convents,
A ſolemn Combination ſhall be made
Of our dear ſouls. Mean time ſweet ſiſter,
We will not part from hence. Ceſario come
(For ſo you ſhall be while you are a man:)
But when in other habits you are ſeen.
Orſino's Miſtris, and his fancies Queen. Exeunt.

Clown ſings.

When that I was and a little tine Boy,
with hey, ho, the winde and the rain:
A fooliſh thing was but a toy,
for the rain it raineth every day.

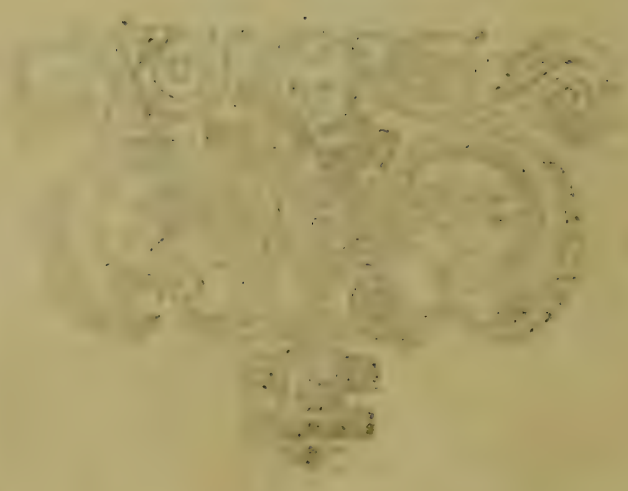
But when I came to mans eſtate
with hey, ho, &c.
'Gainſt knaves and theeves men ſhut their gate,
for the rain, &c.

But when I came at laſt to wive,
with hey, ho, &c.
By ſwaggering could I never thrive,
for the rain, &c.

But when I came unto my beds,
with he, ho, &c.
With Toſpots ſtill had drunken heads,
for the rain, &c.

A great while ago the world begon,
with hey, ho, &c.
But that's all one, our Play is done,
and we'll ſtrive to pleaſe you every day.

FINIS.



The VVinters Tale.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Camillo, and Archidamus.

Arch. IF you shall chance (Camillo) to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on-foot, you shall see (as I have said) great difference betwixt our Bohemia, and your Sicilia.

Cam. I think, this common Summer, the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation, which he justly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our entertainment shall shame us: we will be justified in our Loves: for indeed——

Cam. 'Beseech you——

Arch. Verily I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence——in so rare—— I know not what to say —— We will give you sleepy Drinks, that your Sences (un-intelligent of our insufficience) may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

Cam. You pay a great deal too dear, for what's given freely.

Arch. Beleeve me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot shew himself over kind to Bohemia: They were train'd together in their Child-hoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch now. Since their more mature Dignities, and Royall Necessities, made separation of their Society, their encounters (though not personal) have been royally attornyed with enter-change of Gifts, Letters, loving Embassies, that they have seem'd to be together, though absent: shook hands, as over a Vast Sea, and embrac'd as it were from the ends of opposed Winds. The Heavens continue their Loves.

Arch. I think there is not in the world, either Malice or Matter to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young Prince Mamillius: it is a Gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my Note.

Cam. I very well agree with you in the hopes of him: it is a gallant Child, one that (indeed) Physicks the Subject, makes old hearts fresh: they that went on Crutches ere he was born, desire yet their life, to see him a man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse, why they should desire to live.

Arch. If the King had no Son, they would desire to live on Crutches till he had one. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Hermione, Mamillius, Polixenes, Camillo.

Pol. Nine changes of the watry-Starre hath been
The Shepheards Note, since we have left our Throne
Without a Burthen: Time as long again
Would be fill'd up (my Brother) with our Thanks,
And yet we should, for pepetuity,
Go hence in debt: and therefore, like a Cypher
(Yet standing in rich place) I multiply
With one we thank you, many thousands moe,
That goe before it.

Leo. Stay your thanks a while,
And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to morrow:
I am question'd by my fears of what may chance,
Or breed upon our absence, that may blow
No sneaping Winds at home, to make us say,
This is put forth too truly: besides, I have stay'd
To tire your Royalty.

Leo. We are tougher (Brother)
Then you can put us to't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leo. One seve'night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to morrow.

Leo. Wee'll part the time between's then: and in that
Ile no gain-saying.

Pol. Presse me not ('beseech you) so:
There is no tongue that moves; none, none i'th'world
So soon as yours, could win me: so it should now,
Were there necessity in your request, although
'Twere needful I deny'd it. My affairs
Do even drag me homeward: which to hinder,
Were (in your Love) a whip to me; my stay,
To you a Charge, and Trouble: to save both,
Farewell (our brother.)

Leo. Tongue-ty'd our Queen? speak you.

Her. I had thought (Sir) to have held my peace, untill
You had drawn Oathes from him, not to stay: you (Sir)
Charge him too coldly. Tell him, you are sure
All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction,
The by-gone-day proclaim'd, say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward.

Leo. VVell said, Hermione.

Her. To tell, he longs to see his Sonne, were strong:
But let him say so then, and let him go;
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
VVee'l thwack him hence with Distaffes.
Yet of your Royal presence, ile adventure
The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia
You take my Lord, ile give him my Commission,
To let him there a Moneth, behind the Guest
Prefix'd for's parting: yet (good heed) Leontes,
I love thee not a jarre o'th'Clock, behind

VVhat Lady ſhe her Lord. You'l ſtay?
Pol. No, Madam.
Her. Nay, but you will?
Pol. I may not verily.
Her. Verily?
You put me off with limber vowes: but I,
Though you would ſeek t'unſphere the Stars with Oaths,
Should yet ſay, Sir, no going: verily
You ſhall not go; a Ladies verily is
As potent as a Lords. VVill you goe yet?
Force me to keep you as a priſoner,
Not like a Gueſt: ſo you ſhall pay your Fees
VVhen you depart, and ſave your thanks. How ſay you?
My Priſoner? or my Gueſt? by your dread verily,
One of them you ſhall be.
Pol. Your Gueſt then Madam:
To be your Priſoner, ſhould import offending;
VVhich is for me leſſe eaſie to commit,
Then you to puniſh.
Her. Not your Goaler then,
But your kind Hoſteſſe, come, ile queſtion you
Of my Lords tricks and yours, when you were boys:
You were pretty Lordings then?
Pol. VVe were (fair Queen)
Two Lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But ſuch a day to morrow, as to day,
And to be boy eternal.
Her. VVas not my Lord
The verier wag o'th' two?
Pol. VVe were as twin'd Lambs, that did friſk i'th'Sun
And bleat the one at th'other: what we chang'd,
VVas innocence, for innocence: we knew not
The Doctrine of ill-doing, no nor dream'd
That any did: had we purſu'd that life,
And our weak ſpirits ne're been higher rear'd
VVith ſtronger blood, we ſhould have anſwer'd Heaven
Boldly, not guilty; the impoſition clear'd,
Hereditary ours.
Her. By this we gather
You have tript ſince.
Pol. O my moſt ſacred Lady,
Temptations have ſince then been born to's: for
In thoſe unfledg'd daies, was my wife a Girle;
Your precious ſelf had then not croſs'd the eies
Of my young Play-fellow.
Her. Grace to boot:
Of this make no concluſion, leaſt you ſay
Your Queen and I are Devils: yet go on,
Th'offences we have made you do, wee'l anſwer,
If you firſt ſinn'd with us: and that with us
You did continue fault; and that you ſlipt not
VVith any, but with us.
Leo. Is he wonne yet?
Her. Hee'll ſtay, (my Lord)
Leo. At my requeſt, he would not:
Hermione (my deareſt) thou never ſpoak'ſt
To better purpoſe,
Her. Never?
Leo. Never, but once.
Her. VVhat?have I twice ſaid well?when was't before?
I prethee tell me: cram's with praiſe, and make's
As fat as tame things: One good deed,dying tongueleſſe
Slaughters a thouſand, waiting upon that.
Our praiſes are our wages, You may ride's
VVith one ſoft kiſs a thouſand Furlongs, ere
VVith Spur we heat an Acre. But to th'Goal:
My laſt good deed was to intreat his ſtay.
VVhat was my firſt? it has an elder Siſter,
Or I miſtake you: O, would her name were Grace,
But once before I ſpake to th'purpoſe? when?
Nay, let me hav't: I long.
Leo. VVhy, that was when
Three crabbed Moneths had ſowr'd themſelves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand:
And clap thy ſelf, my Love; then didſt thou utter,
I am yours for ever.
Her. 'Tis Grace indeed.
VVhy lo-you now; I have ſpoke to th'purpoſe twice:
The one for ever earn'd a Royal Husband;
Th'other,for ſome while a Friend.
Leo. Too hot, too hot:
To mingle friendſhip farre, is mingling bloods.
I have Tremor Cordis on me: my heart dances,
But not for joy; not joy. This entertainment
May a free face put on: derives a Liberty
From heartineſſe, from bounty, fertile boſom,
And wee'l become the Agent: 'tmay; I grant:
But to be padling palmes, and pinching fingers,
As now they are, and making practis'd ſmiles
As in a Looking-Glaſſe: and then to ſigh, as 'twere
The Mort o'th'Deer: oh, that is entertainment
My boſom likes not, nor my Browes. Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?
Mam. I my good Lord.
Leo. I'fecks:
VVhy that's my Bawcock: what?has't ſmutch'd thy Noſe?
They ſay it is a Coppy out of nine. Come Captain,
We muſt be neat; not neat, cleanly Captain;
And yet the Steer, the Heyfer, and the Calf,
Are all call'd Neat. Still V irgina lling
Upon his palme? How now(you wanton Calfe)
Art thou my Calfe?
Mam. Yes if you will (my Lord)
Leo. Thou want'ſt a rough paſh,& the ſhoots that I have
To be full, like me: yet they ſay we are
Almoſt as like as Egges; Women ſay ſo,
(That will ſay any thing, But were they falſe
As o're dy'd Blacks, as VVind, as VVaters; falſe
As Dice are to be wiſh'd, by one that fixes
No born 'twixt his and mine; yet were it true,
To ſay this Boy were like me. Come (Sir Page)
Look on me with your welkin eye: ſweet villain.
Moſt deare'ſt, my Collop: Can thy Dam,may't be Affection? thy intention ſtabs the Center.
Thou do'ſt make poſſible things not be ſo held,
Communicat'ſt with Dreams (how can this be?)
With what's unreal, thou coactive art,
And fellow'ſt nothing. Then 'tis very credent,
Thou maiſt co-joyn with ſomething, and thou doſt,
(And that beyond Commiſſion) and I find it,
(And that to the infection of my Brains,
And hardning of my Browes)
Pol. What means Sicilia?
Her. He ſomething ſeems unſetled.
Pol. How? my Lord?
Leo. What cheer? how is't with you, beſt Brother?
Her. You look as if you held a brow of much diſtraction,
Are you mov'd (my Lord?)
Leo. No, in good earneſt.
How ſometimes Nature will betray its folly?
It's tenderneſſe? and make it ſelf a paſtime
To harder boſomes? Looking on the Lynes

Of

Of my Boys face, me thoughts I did recoyl
Twenty three years, and saw my self unbreech'd,
In my green Velvet Coat; my Dagger muzzel'd,
Least it should bite it's Master, and so prove
(As Ornaments oft do's) too dangerous:
How like (me thought) I then was to this Kernel
This Squash, this Gentleman. Mine honest friend,
Will you take egges for Money?

Mam. No (my Lord) ile fight.

Leo. You will: why happy man be's dole. My brother
Are you so fond of your young Prince, as we
Do seem to be of ours?

Pol. If at home (Sir)
Here's all my exercise, my Mirth, my Matter;
Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;
My Parasite, my Souldier: States-man; all
He makes a July's day, short as December,
And with his varying child-nesse, cures in me
Thoughts, that should thick my blood.

Leo. So stands this Squire
Offic'd with me: We two will walk (my Lord)
And leave you to your graver steps. Hermione.
How thou lov'st, us, shew in our Brothers welcome;
Let what is dear in Sicily be cheap:
Next to thy self, and my young Rover, he's
Apparant to my heart.

Her. If you would seek us,
We are yours i'th'Garden: shall's attend you there?

Leo. To your own bents dispose you: you'd be found,
Be you beneath the Sky: I am angling now,
(Though you perceive me not how I give Lyne)
Goe to, goe to.
How she holds up the Neb? the Bill to him?
And armes her with the boldnesse of a Wife
To her allowing Husband. Gone already,
Inch thick, knee deep; ore head and ears a fork'd one.
Goe play (Boy) play: thy Mother plaies, and I
Play too; but so disgrac'd a part, whose issue
Will hisse me to my Grave: Contempt and Clamor
Will be my Knell. Goe play (Boy) play, there have been (Or I am much deceiv'd) Cuckolds ere now,
And many a man there is (even at this present,
Now, while I speak this) holds his Wife by th'Arme,
That little thinks she has been sluyc'd in's absence
And his Pond fish'd by his next Neighbour (by Sir Smil, his Neighbour:) nay, there's comfort in't,
Whiles other men have Gates, and those Gates open'd
(As mine) against their will. Should all despair
That have revolted wives, the tenth of Mankind
Would hang themselves. Physick for't, there's none:
It is a bawdy Planet that will strike
Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerful: think it:
From East, West, North, and South, be it concluded,
No Baricado for a Belly. Know't,
It will let in and out the enemy,
With bag and baggage: many thousand on's
Have the disease, and feel't not. How now Boy?

Mam. I am like you they say.

Leo. Why, that's some comfort.
What? Camillo there?

Cam. I, my good Lord.

Leo. Go play (Mamillius) thou'rt an honest man:
Camillo, this great Sir will yet stay longer.

Cam. You had much adoe to make his Anchor hold,
When you cast out, it still came home.

Leo. Didst note it?

Cam. He would not stay at your petitions, made
His businesse more material.

Leo. Didst perceive it?
They're here with me already; whisp'ring, rounding:
Sicilia is a so-forth: tis farre gone,
When I shall gust it last. How cam't (Camillo)
That he did stay?

Cam. At the good Queens entreaty.

Leo. At the Queens be't: Good should be pertinent,
But so it is, it is not. Was this taken
By any understanding pate but thine?
For the conceit is soaking, will draw in
More then the common Blocks, Not noted, is't,
But of the finer Natures? by some Severalls
Of Head-peece extraordinary? Lower Messes
Perchance are to this businesse purblind? say.

Cam. Businesse, my Lord? I think most understand
Bohemia stayes here longer.

Leo. Ha?

Cam. Stayes here longer.

Leo. I, but why?

Cam. To satisfie your Highnesse, and the Entreaties
Of our most gracious Mistris.

Leo. Satisfie?
Th'entreaties of your Mistresse? Satisfie?
Let that suffice. I have trusted thee (Camillo)
With all the nearst things to my heart, as well
My Chamber-Councels, wherein (Priest-like) thou
Hast cleans'd my bosom: I, from thee departed
Thy penitent reform'd: but we have been
Deceiv'd in thy integrity, deceiv'd
In that which seems so.

Cam. Be it forbid (my Lord.)

Leo. To bide upon't: thou art not honest: or
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a Coward,
Which hoxes honesty behind, restraining
From Course requir'd: or else thou must be counted
A Servant, grafted in my serious Trust,
And therein negligent: or else a Foole,
That seest a Game play'd home, the rich stake drawn.
And tak'st it all for jest.

Cam. My gracious Lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful,
In every one of these, no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Amongst the infinite doing of the World,
Sometime puts forth in your affairs (my Lord.)
If ever I were wilful-negligent,
It was my folly; if industriously
I play'd the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end: if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance; 'twas a fear
Which oft infects the wisest: these (my Lord)
Are such allow'd infirmities that honesty
Is never free of. But beseech your Grace
Be plainer with me, let me know my trespass
By it's own visage; if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.

Leo. Ha'not you seen Camillo?
(But that's past doubt: you have, or your eye-glasse
Is thicker then a Cuckolds Horn) or heard?
(For to a Vision so apparent, Rumour
Cannot be mute) or thought? (for Cogitation
Resides not in that man, that do's not think)

My Wife is slippery? if thou wilt confesse,
Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eies, nor ears, nor thought, then say
My wife's a Holy-Horse, deserves a Name
As rank as any Flax-wench, that puts to
Before her troth-plight: say't, and justify't.
Cam. I would not be a stander-by, to hear
My Soveraign Mistris clouded so, without
My present vengeance taken: 'shrew my heart,
You never spoke what did become you lesse
Then this; which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as that, though true.
Leo. Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning Cheek to Cheek? is meating Noses?
Kissing with inside Lip? stopping the Carier
Of Laughter, with a sigh? (a note infallible
Of breaking honesty) horsing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wishing Clocks more swift?
Hours, Minutes? the Noon, Midnight? and all eies
Blind with the pin and web, but theirs; theirs only,
That would unseen be wicked? Is this nothing?
Why then the world, and all that's in't, is nothing,
The covering Skie is nothing, Bohemia nothing,
My wife is nothing, nor nothing have these nothings,
If this be nothing.
Cam. Good my Lord, be cur'd
Of this diseas'd opinion, and betimes
For 'tis most dangerous.
Leo. Say it be, 'tis true.
Cam. No, no, my Lord.
Leo. It is: you lye, you lye:
I say thou lyest Camillo, and I hate thee,
Pronounce thee a grosse Lowt, a mindlesse Slave,
Or else a hovering Temporizer, that
Canst with thine eies at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both: were my wives Liver
Infected (as her life) she would not live
The running of one Glasse.
Cam. Who do's infect her?
Leo. Why he that wears her like her Medull, hanging
About his neck (Bohemia) who, if I
Had Servants true about me, that bare eies
To see alike mine honour, as their profits,
(Their own particular Thrifts) they would do that
Which should undoe more doing: I, and thou
His Cup-bearer, whom I from meaner forme
Have bench'd, and rear'd to worship, who may'st see
Plainly, as Heaven sees earth, and earth sees Heaven,
How I am gall'd, thou might'st be-spice a Cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink:
Which draught to me, were cordiall.
Cam. Sir (my Lord)
I could do this, and that with no rash Potion,
But with a lingring Dram, that should not work
Maliciously, like poison? but I cannot
Beleeve this Crack to be in my dread Mistresse
(So Soveraignly being honourable.)
I have lov'd thee.
Leo. Make that thy question, and go rot:
Do'st think I am so muddy, so unsetled,
To appoint my self in this vexation?
Sully the purity and whiteness of my sheets
(Which to preserve, is sleep: which being spotted,
Is Goads, Thorns, Nettles, Tails of Wasps)
Give scandall to the blood o'th'Prince, my Sonne,
(Who I do think is mine, and love as mine)
Without ripe moving to't? Would I do this?
Could man so blench?
Cam. I must beleeve you (Sir)
I doe, and will fetch off Bohemia for't:
Provided, that when he's remov'd, your Highnesse
Will take again your Queen, as yours at first,
Even for your Sonnes sake, and thereby for sealing
The injury of Tongues, in Courts and Kingdoms
Known and ally'd to yours.
Leo. Thou dost advise me.
Even so as I mine own course have set down:
Ile give no blemish to her honour, none.
Cam. My Lord,
Goe then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at Feasts, keep with Bohemia
And with your Queen: I am his Cup-bearer,
If from me he have wholsome Beveridge,
Account me not your Servant.
Leo. This is all:
Do't, and thou hast the one halfe of my heart;
Do't not, thou splitt'st thine own.
Cam. Ile do't, my Lord.
Leo. I will seem friendly, as thou hast advis'd me. Exit.
Cam. O miserable Lady. But for me!
What case stand I in? I must be the poysoner
Of good Polixenes, and my ground to do't,
Is the obedience to a Master; one,
Who in Rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his, so too. To do this deed,
Promotion follows: If I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed Kings,
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't: But since
Nor Brasse, nor Stone, nor Parchment bears not one,
Let villany it self forswear't. I must
Forsake the Court: to do't, or no, is certain
To me a break-neck. Happy Starre, raign now,
Here comes Bohemia. Enter Polixenes.
Pol. This is strange: me thinks
My favour here begins to warp. Not speak?
Good day Camillo.
Cam. Hoyl most royal Sir.
Pol. What is the news i'th'Court?
Cam. None rare (my Lord.)
Pol. The King hath on him such a countenance,
As he had lost some Province, and a Region
Lov'd, as he loves himself: even now I met him
With customary complement, when he
Wafting his eies to th'contrary, and falling
A Lippe of much contempt, speeds from me, and
So leaves me to consider what is breeding,
That changes thus his Manners.
Cam. I dare not know (my Lord.)
Pol. How, dare not? do not? do you know, and dare not?
Be intelligent to me, 'tis thereabouts:
For to your self, what do you know, you must,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo,
Your chang'd complexions are to me a Mirror,
Which shews me mine chang'd too: for I must be
A party in this alteration, finding
My self thus alter'd with't.
Cam. There is a sicknesse
Which puts some of us in distemper, but
I cannot name the Disease, and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well.
Pol. How caught of me?
Make me not sighted like the Basiliske.

I have

I look'd on thousands, who have sped the better
By my regard, but kill'd none so: Camillo,
As you are certainly a Gentleman, thereto
Clerk-like experienc'd, which no less adornes
Our Gentry, then our Parents Noble Names,
In whose success we are gentle: I beseech you,
If you know ought which do's behove my knowledge,
Thereof to be inform'd, imprison't not
In ignorant concealment.
Cam. I may not answer.
Pol. A Sickness caught of me, and yet I well?
I must be answer'd. Dost thou hear Camillo,
I conjure thee by all the parts of man,
Which honour do's acknowledge, whereof the least
Is not this Suit of mine, that thou declare
What incidency thou dost guess of harm
Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near,
Which way to be prevented, if to be:
If not, how best to bear it.
Cam. Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charg'd in Honour, and by him
That I think Honourable: therefore mark my counsel,
Which must be ev'n as swiftly followed, as
I mean to utter it; or both your self, and me,
Cry lost, and so good night.
Pol. On, good Camillo.
Cam. I appointed him to murder you.
Pol. By whom, Camillo?
Cam. By the King.
Pol. For what?
Cam. He thinks, nay with all confidence he swears,
As he had seen't, or been an Instrument
To vice you to't, that you have toucht his Queen
Forbiddenly.
Pol. Oh then, my best bloud turn
To an infected Gelly, and my Name
Be yoak'd with his, that did betray the best:
Turn then my freshest Reputation to
A savour, that may strike the dullest Nostril
Where I arrive, and my approach be shunn'd,
Nay hated too, worse then the great'st infection
That ere was heard, or read.
Cam. Swear his thought over
By each particular Star in Heaven, and
By all their influences; you may as well
Forbid the Sea for to obey the Moon,
As (or by Oath) remove, or (Counsel) shake
The Fabrick of his Folly, whose foundation
Is pyl'd upon his Faith, and will continue
The standing of his Body.
Pol. How should this grow?
Cam. I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown, then question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies enclosed in this Trunk, which you
Shall bear along impawnd, away to Night,
Your Followers I will whisper to the business,
And will by twoes, and threes, at several Posternes,
Clear them o'th' City: For my self, Ile put
My fortunes to your service (which are here
By this discovery lost.) Be not uncertain,
For by the honour of my Parents, I
Have uttered Truth: which if you seek to prove,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer,
Then one condemned by the Kings own mouth:
Thereon his Execution sworn.
Pol. I do believe thee:
I saw his heart i'ns face. Give me thy hand.
Be Pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My Ships are ready, and
My people did expect my hence departure
Two dayes ago. This Jealousie
Is for a precious Creature: as shee's rare,
Must it be great; and, as his Person's mighty,
Must it be violent: and, as he do's conceive,
He is dishonour'd by a man, which ever
Profess'd to him: Why his Revenges must
In that be made more bitter. Fear ore-shades me:
Good expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious Queen, part of his Theam; but nothing
Of his ill-tane suspition. Come Camillo,
I will respect thee as a Father, if
Thou-beat'st my life off, hence: Let us avoid.
Cam. It is in mine authority to command
The Keyes of all the Posternes: Please your Highness
To take the urgent hour. Come Sir, away. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Hermione, Mamillius, Ladies: Leontes, Antigonus, Lord.

Her. Take the Boy to you: he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.
Lady. Come (my gracious Lord)
Shall I be your play-fellow?
Mam. No, Ile none of you.
Lady. Why (my sweet Lord?)
Mam. You'l kiss me hard, and speak to me, as if I were a Baby still. I love you better.
2 Lady. And why so (my Lord?)
Mam. Not for because
Your Brows are blacker (yet black-brows they say
Become some Women best, so that there be not
Too much hair there, but in a Semicircle,
Or a half-Moon made with a Pen.)
2 Lady. Who taught this?
Mam. I learn'd it out of Womens faces: pray now,
What colour be your eye-browes?
Lady. Blew (my Lord.)
Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I have seen a Ladies Nose
That has been blew, but not her eye-browes.
Lady. Hark ye,
The Queen (your Mother) rounds apace: we shall
Present our services to a fine new Prince
One of these daies, and then you'ld wanton with us,
If we would have you.
2 Lady. She is spread of late
Into a goodly Bulk (good time encounter her.)
Her. What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come Sir, now
I am for you again: Pray you sit by us,
And tell's a Tale.
Mam. Merry, or sad, shal't be?
Her. As merry as you will.
Mam. A sad Tale's best for Winter:
I have one of Sprights, and Goblins.
Her. Let's have that (good Sir.)
Come-on, sit down, come-on, and do your best,
To fright me with your sprights: you're powerful at it.

Mam. There was a man.
Her. Nay, come sit down: then on.
Mam. Dwelt by a Church-yard: I will tell it softly,
Yond Crickets shall not hear it.
Her. Come on then, and giv't me in mine ear. Enter L.
Leon. Was he met there? his Train? Camillo with him?
Lord. Behind the tuft of Pines I met them, never Saw I men scour so on their way: I eyed them
Even to their Ships.
Leo. How blest am I
In my just Censure? In my true Opinion?
Alack, for lesser knowledge, how accurs'd,
In being so blest? There may be in the Cup
A Spider steep'd, and one may drink; depart,
And yet partake no venom; (for his knowledge
Is not infected) but if one present
Th' abhorr'd Ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he crackes his gorge, his sides
With violent Hefts: I have drunk, and seen the Spider.
Camillo was his help in this, his Pander:
There is a plot against my Life, my Crown;
All's true that is mistrusted: that false Villain,
Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him:
He ha's discovered my Design, and I
Remain a pinch'd Thing; yea, a very Trick
For them to play at will: how came the Posternes
So easily open?
Lord. By his great authority,
Which often hath no less prevail'd, then so
On your command.
Leo. I know't too well.
Give me the Boy, I am glad you did not nurse him;
Though he do's bear some signes of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.
Her. What is this? Sport?
Leo. Bear the Boy hence, he shall not come about her,
Away with him, and let her sport her self
With that she's big with, for 'tis Polixenes
Ha's made thee swell thus.
Her. But I'd say he had not;
And Ile be sworn you would believe my saying,
How e're you lean to th' Nayward.
Leo. You (my Lords)
Look on her, mark her well; be but about
To say she is a goodly Lady, and
The justice of your hearts will thereto add
'Tis pity she's not honest: Honourable:
Prayse her but for this her without-dore-Form,
(Which on my faith deserves high speech) and straight
The Shrug, the Hum, or Ha, (these Petty-brands
That Calumny doth use; Oh I am out,
That Mercy do's, for Calumny will sear
Vertue it self) these Shrugs, these Hum's, and Ha's,
When you have said she's goodly, come between,
Ere you can say she's honest: But be't known
(From him that ha's most cause to grieve it should be)
She's an Adultress.
Her. Should a Villain say so,
(The most replenish'd Villain in the world)
He were as much more Villain: you (my Lord)
Do but mistake.
Leo. You have mistook (my Lady)
Polixenes for Leontes: O thou Thing,
(Which Ile not call a Creature of thy place,
Least Barbarism (making me the precedent)
Should a like Language use to all degrees,
And mannerly distinguishment leave out,
Betwixt the Prince and Beggar:) I have said
She's an Adultress, I have said with whom:
More; She's a Traytor, and Camillo is
A Federary with her, and one that knowes
What she should shame to know her self,
But with her most vild Principal; that she's
A Bed-swarver, even as bad as those
That Vulgars give bold'st Titles; I, and privy
To this their late escape.
Her. No (by my life)
Privy to none of this: how will this grieve you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that
You thus have publish'd me? Gentle my Lord,
You scarce can right me throughly, then, to say
You did mistake.
Leo. No: If I mistake
In those Foundations which I build upon,
The Center is not big enough to bear
A School-Boyes Top. Away with her, to Prison:
He who shall speak for her, is afar-off guilty,
But that he speaks.
Her. Ther's some ill Planet raignes:
I must be patient, till the Heavens look
With an aspect more favourable. Good my Lords,
I am not prone to weeping (as our Sex
Commonly are) the want of which vain dew
Perchance shall dry your pities: but I have
That honourable Grief lodg'd here, which burnes
Worse then Tears drown: 'beseech you all (my Lords)
With thoughts so qualified, as your Charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me: and so
The Kings will be perform'd.
Leo. Shall I be heard?
Her. Who is't that goes with me? 'beseech your Highness
My women may be with me, for you see
My plight requires it. Do not weep (good Fooles)
There is no cause: When you shall know your Mistris
Has deserv'd Prison, then abound in tears,
As I come out: this Action I now go on,
Is for my better grace. Adieu (my Lord)
I never wish'd to see you sorry, now
I trust I shall: my Women come, you have leave.
Leo. Go do our bidding: hence.
Lord. Beseech your Highness call the Queen again.
Ant. Be certain what you do (Sir) lest your Justice
Prove violence, in the which three great ones suffer,
Your self, your Queen, your Son.
Lord. For her (my Lord)
I dare my life lay down, and will do't (Sir)
Please you t' accept it, that the Queen is spotless
I'th' eyes of Heaven, and to you (I mean
In this, which you accuse her.)
Antig. If it prove
She's otherwise, Ile keep my Stables where
I lodge my Wife, Ile go in couples with her:
Then when I feel, and see her, no further trust her:
For every Inch of Woman in the World,
I, every dram of Womans flesh is false,
If she be.
Leo. Hold your peaces.
Lord. Good my Lord.
Antig. It is for you we speak, not for our selves:
You are abus'd, by some putter on,
That will be damn'd for't: would I knew the Villain,
I would

I would Land-damne him : be ſhe honor-flaw'd,
I have three daughters : the eldeſt is eleven :
The ſecond, and the third, nine : and ſonnes five :
If this prove true, they'l pay for't. By mine honour
Ile gel'd 'em all : fourteen they ſhall not ſee
To bring falſe generations : they are co-heirs,
And I had rather glib my ſelf, then they
Should not produce fair iſſue.

Leo. Ceaſe, no more :
You ſmell this buſineſſe with a ſence as cold
As is a dead-mans noſe : but I do ſee't, and feel't,
As you feel doing thus : and ſee withall
The inſtruments that feel.

Ant. If it be ſo,
We need no grave to bury honeſty,
There's not a grain of it, the face to ſweeten
Of the whole dungy-earth.

Leo. What ? lack I credit ?

Lord. I had rather you did lack then I (my Lord)
Upon this ground : and more it would content me
To have her Honour true, then your ſuſpition
Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leo. Why what need we
Commune with you for this ? but rather follow
Our forceful inſtigation ? Our prerogative
Calls not your Counſels, but our natural goodneſſe
Imparts this : which, if you, or ſtupified,
Or ſeeming ſo, in skill, cannot, or will not
Reliſh a truth, like us : informe your ſelves
We need no more of your advice : the matter,
The loſſe, the gain, the ord'ring on't,
Is all properly ours.

Ant. And I wiſh (my Liege)
You had onely in your ſilent judgement try'd it,
Without more overture.

Leo. How could that be ?
Either thou art moſt ignorant by age
Or thou wer't born a fool : Camillo's flight
Added to their familiarity
(Which was as groſſe, as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd ſight only, nought for approbation
But only ſeeing all other circumſtances
Made up to th'deed) doth puſh on this proceeding,
Yet for a greater confirmation
(For in an act of this importance, 'twere
Moſt pittious to be wild) I have diſpatch'd in poſt,
To ſacred Delphos, to Apollo's Temple,
Cleomines and Deon, whom you know
Of ſtuff'd ſufficiency : Now, from the Oracle
They will bring all, whoſe ſpiritual counſel had,
Shall ſtop, or ſpurre me. Have I done well ?

Lord. Well done (my Lord.)

Leo. Though I am ſatisfy'd, and need no more
Then what I know, yet ſhall the Oracle
Give reſt to th'minds of others ; ſuch as he Whoſe ignorant credulity will not
Come up to th'truth. So we have thought it good
From our free perſon, ſhe ſhould be confin'd,
Leaſt that the treachery of the two, fled hence,
Be left her to perform. Come follow us,
We are to ſpeak in publick : for this buſineſſe
Will raiſe us all.

Antig. To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth, were known. Exeunt

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Paulina, a Gentleman, Goaler, Emilia.

Paul. The Keeper of the priſon, call to him :
Let him have knowledge whom I am. Good Lady,
No Court in Europe is too good for thee,
What doſt thou then in priſon ? Now good Sir,
You know me, do you not ?

Goa. For a worthy Lady,
And one, whom much I honour.

Pau. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the Queen.

Goa. I may not (Madam)
To the contrary I have expreſſe commandment.

Pau. Here's a-doe to lock up honeſty and honour from Th'acceſſe of gentle viſitors. Is't lawful pray you
To ſee her women ? any of them ? Emilia ?

Goa. So pleaſe you (Madam)
To put a-part theſe your attendants, I
Shall bring Emilia forth.

Pau. I pray you now call her :
Withdraw your ſelves.

Goa. And Madam,
I muſt be preſent at your conference.

Paul. Well : be't ſo : prethee. Enter.
Here's ſuch a-do, to make no ſtain, a ſtain, Emilia.
As paſſes colouring. Dear Gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious Lady ?

Emil. As well as one ſo great, and ſo forlorn
May hold together ; On her frights, and griefs
(Which never tender Lady hath born greater)
She is, ſomething before her time, deliver'd.

Pau. A boy ?

Emil. A daughter, and a goodly babe,
Luſty, and like to live : the Queen receives
Much comfort in't : Saies, my poor priſoner,
I am innocent as you.

Pau. I dare be ſworn :
Theſe dangerous, unſafe Lunes i'th'King, beſhrew them,
He muſt be told on't, and he ſhall : the office
Becomes a woman beſt. Ile take't upon me,
If I prove Honey-mouth'd, let my tongue bliſter.
And never to my red-look'd anger be
The Trumpet any more : pray you (Emilia)
Commend my beſt obedience to the Queen,
If ſhe dares truſt me with her little babe,
Ile ſhew't the King, and undertake to be
Her Advocate to'th loud'ſt. We do not know
How he may ſoften at the ſight o'th'Child :
The ſilence often of pure innocence
Perſwades, when ſpeaking fails.

Emil. Moſt worthy Madam,
Your honour and your goodneſſe is ſo evident,
That your free undertaking cannot miſs
A thriving iſſue : there is no Lady living
So meet for this great errand ; pleaſe your Ladyſhip
To viſit the next roome, ile preſently
Acquaint the Queen of your moſt Noble offer,
Who, but to day hammered of this deſigne,
But durſt not tempt a miniſter of honour
Leaſt ſhe ſhould be deny'd.

Pau.

Paul. Tell her (Emilia)
Ile uſe that tongue I have: If wit flow from't
As boldneſſe from my boſom, let't not be doubted
I ſhall do good.
Emil. Now be you bleſt for it.
Ile to the Queen: pleaſe you come ſomething neerer.
Goa. Madam if't pleaſe the Queen to ſend the babe,
I know not what I ſhall incurre, to paſſe it,
Having no warrant.
Paul. You need not fear it (ſir)
This Child was priſoner to the womb, and is
By Law and proceſſe of great Nature, thence Free'd, and enfranchis'd, not a party to
The anger of the King, nor guilty of
(If any be) the treſpaſs of the Queen.
Goa. I do beleeve it.
Paul. Do not you fear: upon mine honour, I
Will ſtand betwixt you, and danger. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Servants, Paulina, Antigonus, and Lords.

Leo. Nor night, nor day, no reſt: it is but weakneſſe
To bear the matter thus: meer weakneſſe, if
The cauſe were not in being: part o'th cauſe,
She, th'Adultreſſe; for the harlot-King
Is quite beyond mine arme: out of the blank
And level of my brain: plot-proof: but ſhe,
I can hook to me: ſay that ſhe were gone,
Given to the fire, a moity of my reſt
Might come to me again. Who's there?
Ser. My Lord. Enter.
Leo. How do's the boy?
Ser. He took good reſt to night: 'tis hop'd
His ſickneſſe is diſcharg'd.
Leo. To ſee his Nobleneſſe,
Conceiving the diſhonour of his Mother,
He ſtraight declin'd, droop'd, took it deeply,
Faſten'd, and fix'd the ſhame on't in himſelf:
Threw off his Spirit, his Appetite, his Sleep,
And down-right languiſh'd. Leave me ſolely: go,
See how he fares: Fie, fie, no thought of him,
The very thought of my Revenges that way
Recoyl upon me: in himſelf too mighty,
Untill a time may ſerve, For preſent vengeance
Take it on her: Camillo, and Polixenes
Laugh at me; make their paſtime at my ſorrow;
They ſhould not laugh, if I could reach them, nor Shall ſhe, within my power.
Enter Paulina.
Lord. You muſt not enter.
Paul. Nay rather (good my Lords) be ſecond to me:
Fear you his tyrannous paſſion more (alas)
Then the Queens life? A gracious innocent ſoul,
More free, then he is jealous.
Antig. That's enough.
Ser. Madam; he hath not ſlept to night, commanded
None ſhould come at him.
Paul. Not ſo hot (good Sir)
I come to bring him ſleep. 'Tis ſuch as you
That creep like ſhadowes by him, and do ſigh
At each his needleſſe heavings: ſuch as you
Nouriſh the cauſe of his awaking. I
Do come with words, as medicinal, as true;
(Honeſt, as either;) to purge him of that humour,
That preſſes him from ſleep.
Leo. What noiſe there, hoe?
Paul. No noiſe (my Lord) but needful conference,
About ſome Goſſips for your Highneſſe.
Leo. How?
Away with that audacious Lady. Antigonus.
I charg'd thee that ſhe ſhould not come about me,
I knew ſhe would.
Ant. I told her ſo (my Lord)
On your diſpleaſures peril and on mine,
She ſhould not viſit you.
Leo. What? canſt not rule her?
Paul. From all diſhoneſty he can: in this (Unleſſe he take the courſe that you have done)
Commit me, for committing honor, truſt it,
He ſhall not rule me:
Ant. La-you now, you hear,
When ſhe will take the rain, I let her run,
But ſhe'l not ſtumble.
Paul. Good my Liege I come:
And I beſeech you hear me: who profeſſes
My ſelf your loyal ſervant, your Phyſitian,
Your moſt obedient Counſellor: yet that dares
Leſſe appear ſo, in comforting your evils,
Then ſuch as moſt ſeem yours. I ſay, I come
From your good Queen.
Leo. Good Queen?
Paul. Good Queen (my Lord) good Queen,
I ſay good Queen,
And would by combate, make her good ſo, were I
A man, the worſt about you.
Leo. Force her hence.
Paul. Let him that makes but trifles of his eies
Firſt hand me: on mine own accord, ile off,
But firſt; ile do my errand. The good Queen
(For ſhe is good) hath brought you forth a daughter,
Here 'tis: commends it to your bleſſing.
Leo. Out:
A mankind Witch? Hence with her, out o'dore:
A moſt intelligencing bawd.
Paul. Not ſo:
I am as ignorant in that, as you,
In ſo entit'ling me: and no leſſe honeſt
Then you are mad: which is enough, ile warrant
(As this world goes) to paſſe for honeſt.
Leo. Traitors;
Will you not puſh her out? Give her the Baſtard,
Thou dotard, thou art woman-tyr'd: unroofted
By thy dame Partlet here. Take up the Baſtard,
Tak't up, I ſay: give't to the Croane,
Paul. For ever
Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'ſt up the Princeſſe, by that forced baſeneſſe
Which he has put upon't,
Leo. He dreads his Wife.
Paul. So I would you did: then 'twere paſt all doubt
Youl'd call your children, yours.
Leo. A neſt of Traitors.
Ant. I am none, by this good light.
Paul. Nor I: nor any
But one that's here: and that's himſelf: for he,

The

The ſacred honour of himſelf, his Queenes,
His hopeful Sons, his Babes, betrayes to ſlander,
Whoſe ſting is ſharper then the Swords, and will not
(For as the caſe now ſtands, it is a Curſe
He cannot be compell'd too't) once remove
The Root of his Opinion, which is rotten,
As ever Oak, or ſtone was found.

Leo. A Callat
Of boundleſs tongue, who late hath beat her husband,
And now baits me: This Brat is none of mine,
It is the Iſſue of Polixenes.
Hence with it, and together with the Dam,
Commit them to the fire.

Paul. It is yours:
And might we lay th' old Proverb to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worſe. Behold (my Lords)
Although the print be little, the whole Matter
And Copy of the Father: (Eye, Noſe, Lip,
The trick of's Frown, his Forehead, nay, the Valley,
The pretty dimples of his Chin, and Cheek; his Smiles:
The very Mold, and frame of hand, nayl, Finger.)
And thou good Goddeſs Nature, which haſt made it
So like to him that got it, if thou haſt
The ordering of the Mind too, 'mongſt all Colours
No Yellow in't, leſt ſhe ſuſpect, as he do's,
Her Children, not her Husbands.

Leo. A groſs Hag:
And Lozel, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not ſtay her Tongue.

Antig. Hang all the Husbands
That cannot do that Feat, you'l leave your ſelf
Hardly one Subject.

Leo. Once more take her hence.

Paul. A moſt unworthy, and unnatural Lord
Can do no more.

Leo. I'le ha' thee burnt.

Paul. I care not;
It is an Heretick that makes the fire,
Not ſhe which burnes in't. Ile not call you Tyrant:
But this moſt cruel uſage of your Queen
(Not able to produce more accuſation
Then your own weak-hing'd Fancy) ſomething ſavours
Of Tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, ſcandalous to the World.

Leo. On your Allegiance,
Out of the Chamber with her. Were I a Tyrant,
Where were her life? ſhe durſt not call me ſo,
If ſhe did know me one. Away with her.

Paul. I pray you do not puſh me, Ile be gone.
Look to your Babe (my Lord) 'tis yours: Jove ſend her
A better guiding Spirit. What need theſe hands?
You that are thus ſo tender o're his Follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, ſo: Farewel, we are gone. Exit.

Leo. Thou (Traytor) haſt ſet on thy Wife to this.
My Child? away with't? even thou, that haſt
A heart ſo tender o're it, take it hence,
And ſee it inſtantly conſum'd with fire.
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up ſtraight:
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done,
(And by good teſtimony) or Ile ſeize thy life,
With what thou elſe call'ſt thine: if thou refuſe,
And wilt encounter with my VVrath, ſay ſo;
The Baſtard-braines with theſe my proper hands
Shall I daſh out: Go take it to the fire;
For thou ſet'ſt on thy VVife.

Antig. I did not, Sir:
Theſe Lords, my Noble Fellowes, if they pleaſe,
Can clear me in't.

Lords. We can; my Royal Liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.

Leo. You're Liars all.

Lord. Beſeech your Highneſs give us better credit:
We have alwaies truly ſerv'd you, and beſeech
So to eſteem of us: and on our knees we beg,
(As recompenſe of our dear ſervices
Paſt, and to come) that you do change this purpoſe,
Which being ſo horrible, ſo bloudy, muſt
Lead on to ſome foul Iſſue. We all kneel.

Leo. I am a Feather for each wind that blowes:
Shall I live on, to ſee this Baſtard kneel,
And call me Father? better burn it now,
Then curſe it then. But be it: let it live.
It ſhall not neither. You Sir, come you hither:
You that have been ſo tenderly officious
With Lady Margery, your Mid-wife there,
To ſave this Baſtards life; for 'tis a Baſtard,
So ſure as this Beard's gray. What will you adventure,
To ſave this Brats life?

Antig. Any thing (my Lord)
That my ability may undergo,
And Nobleneſs impoſe: at leſt thus much;
*I*le pawn the little bloud which I have left,
To ſave the innocent: any thing poſſible.

Leo. It ſhall be poſſible: Swear by this Sword
Thou wilt perform my bidding.

Antig. I will (my Lord.)

Leo. Mark and perform it: ſeeſt thou? for the fail
Of any point in't, ſhall not only be
Death to thy ſelf, but to thy lewd-tongu'd Wife,
(Whom for this time we pardon) We enjoyn thee
As thou art Liege-man to us, that thou carry
This female Baſtard hence, and that thou bear it
To ſome remote and deſart place, quite out
Of our Dominions; and that there thou leave it
(Without much mercy) to its own protection,
And favour of the Climate: as by ſtrange fortune,
It came to us, I do in Juſtice charge thee,
On thy Soules peril, and thy bodies torture,
That thou commend it ſtrangely to ſome place,
Where Change may nurſe, or end it: take it up.

Antig. I ſwear to do this: though a preſent death
Had been more merciful. Come on (poor Babe)
Some powerful Spirit inſtruct the Kites and Ravens
To be thy Nurſes. Wolves and Bears, they ſay,
(Caſting their ſavageneſs aſide) have done
Like offices of pity. Sir, be proſperous
In more then this deed do's require; and bleſſing
Againſt this Cruelty, fight on thy ſide
(Poor Thing condemn'd to loſs.) Exit.

Leo. No: Ile not rear
Anothers Iſſue. Enter a Servant.

Serv. Pleaſe your Highneſs, Poſts
From thoſe you ſent to th' Oracle, are come
An hour ſince: Cleomines and Dion,
Being well arriv'd from Delphos, are both landed,
Haſting to th' Court.

Lord. So pleaſe you (Sir) their ſpeed
Hath been beyond accompt.

Leo. Twenty three dayes
They have been abſent: 'tis good ſpeed: foretels
The great Apollo ſuddenly will have

The truth of this appear: Prepare you Lords,
Summon a Session, that we may arraign
Our most disloyal Lady: for as she hath
Been publickly accus'd, so shall she have
A just and open Trial. While she lives,
My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me,
And think upon my bidding. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scæna Prima.

Enter Cleomines and Dion.

Cle. The Climat's delicate, the Ayr most sweet,
Fertil the Isle, the Temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.
Dion. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the Celestial Habits,
(Me thinkes I so should term them) and the reverence
Of the Grave Wearers. O, the Sacrifice.
How ceremonious, solemn, and un-earthly
It was i'th' Offering?
Cleo. But of all, the burst
And the ear-deaf'ning Voyce o'th' Oracle,
Kin to Joves Thunder, so surpriz'd my Sence
That I was nothing.
Dio. If th' event o'th' Journey
Prove as successful to the Queen (O be't so)
As it hath been to us, rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on't.
Cleo. Great Apollo
Turn all to th' best: these Proclamations,
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.
Dio. The violent carriage of it
Will clear, or end the Business, when the Oracle
(Thus by Apollo's great Divine seal'd up)
Shall the Contents discover: something rare
Even then will rush to knowledge. Go: fresh Horses,
And gracious be the issue. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Lords, Officers; Hermione (as to her Trial) Ladies: Cleomines, Dion.

Leo. This Sessions (to our great grief we pronounce)
Even pushes 'gainst our heart. The party try'd,
The Daughter of a King, our Wife, and one
Of us too much belov'd. Let us be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in Justice, which shall have due course,
Even to the Guilt, or the Purgation:
Produce the Prisoner.
Officer. It is his Highness pleasure, that the Queen
Appear in person, here in Court. Silence. Enter
Leo. Read the Indictment.
Officer. Hermione, Queen to the worthy Leontes, King of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of High Treason, in committing Adultery with Polixenes King of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the Life of our Soveraign Lord the King, thy royal Husband: the pretence whereof being by circumstance partly laid open, thou (Hermione) contrary to the Faith and Allegiance of a true Subject, didst counsel and ayd them, for their better safety, to flee away by Night.
Her. Since what I am to say, must be but that
Which contradicts my Accusation, and
The testimony on my part, no other
But what comes from my self, it shall scarce boot me
To say, Not guilty: mine integrity
Being counted Falshood, shall (as I expres it)
Be so receiv'd. But thus, if Powers divine
Behold our humane Actions (as they do)
I doubt not then, but innocence shall make
False Accusations blush, and Tyranny
Tremble at Patience. You (my Lord) best know
(Whom least will seem to do so) my past life
Hath been as continent, as chast, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Then History can pattern, though devis'd,
And play'd, to take Spectators. For behold me,
A Fellow of the Royal Bed, which owe
A Moity of the Throne: a great Kings Daughter,
The Mother to a hopeful Prince, here standing
To prate and talk for Life, and Honour, fore
Who please to come and hear. For Life, I prize it
As I weigh Grief (which I would spare:) For Honour,
'Tis a derivative from me to mine,
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own Conscience (Sir) before Polixenes
Came to your Court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so: Since he came,
With what encounter so uncurrant, I
Have strain'd t'appear thus; if one jot beyond
The bound of honour, or in act, or will
That way enclining, hardned be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of Kin
Cry fie upon my grave.
Leo. I ne'r heard yet,
That any of these bolder Vices wanted
Less impudence to gain-say what they did,
Then to perform it first.
Her. That's true enough,
Though 'tis a saying (Sir) not due to me.
Leo. You will not own it.
Her. More then Mistress of,
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes
(With whom I am accus'd) I do confess
I lov'd him, as in Honour he requir'd:
With such a kind of Love, as might become
A Lady like me; with a Love, even such,
So, and no other, as your self commanded:
Which, not to have done, I think had been in me
Both Disobedience, and Ingratitude
To you, and towards your friends, whose love had spoke,
Even since it could speak, from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now for Conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dish'd
For me to try how: All I know of it,
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your Court, the Gods themselves
(Wotting no more then I) are ignorant.
Leo. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have undertane to do in's absence.
Her. Sir,

Her. Sir,
You ſpeak a Language that I underſtand not:
My Life ſtands in the level of your Dreames,
Which Ile lay down.
Leo. Your Actions are my Dreames,
You had a Baſtard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it: As you were paſt all ſhame,
(Thoſe of your fact are ſo) ſo paſt all truth;
Which to deny, concernes more then availes: for as
Thy Brat hath been caſt out like, to it ſelf,
No Father owning it (which is indeed
More criminal in thee, then it) ſo thou
Shalt feel our Juſtice; in whoſe eaſieſt paſſage,
Look for no leſs then death.
Her. Sir, ſpare your Threats:
The Bugge which you would fright me with, I ſeek:
To me can Life be no commodity,
The Crown and comfort of my Life (your Favour)
I do give loſt, for I do feel it gone,
But know not how it went. My ſecond Joy,
And firſt fruits of my body, from his preſence
I am barr'd like one infectious My third comfort
(Star'd moſt unluckily) is from my breaſt
(The innocent milk in it moſt innocent mouth)
Hal'd out to murder. My ſelf on every Poſt
Proclaim'd a Strumpet: With immodeſt hatred
The Child-bed priviledge deny'd, which 'longs
To Women of all faſhion. Laſtly, hurried
Here, to this place, i'th' open ayr before
I have got ſtrength of limit. Now (my Liege
Tell me what bleſſings I have here alive,
That I ſhould fear to dye? Therefore proceed:
But yet hear this: miſtake me not: no Life,
(I prize it not a ſtraw) but for mine Honour,
Which I would free: if I ſhall be condemn'd
Upon ſurmizes (all proofes ſleeping elſe,
But what your Jealouſies awake) I tell you
'Tis Rigour, and not Law. Your Honours all,
I do refer me to the Oracle:
Apollo be my Judge.
Lord. This your requeſt Enter Dion and Cleomines.
Is altogether juſt: therefore bring forth
(And in Apollo's Name) his Oracle.
Her. The Emperour of Ruſſia was my Father,
Oh that he were alive, and here beholding
His Daughters Tryal: that he did but ſee
The flatneſs of my miſery; yet with eyes
Of pity, not Revenge.
Officer. You here ſhall ſwear upon the Sword of Juſtice,
That you (Cleomines and Dion) have
Been both at Delphos, and from thence have brought
This ſeal'd-up Oracle, by the hand deliver'd
Of great Apollo's Prieſt; and that ſince then,
You have not dar'd to break the holy Seal,
Nor read the Secrets in't.
Cleo. Dio. All this we ſwear.
Leo. Break up the Seales and read.
Officer. Hermione is chaſt, Polixenes blameleſs, Camillo a true Subject, Leontes a jealous Tyrant, his innocent Babe truly begotten, and the King ſhall live without an Heir, if that which is loſt, be not found.
Lords. Now bleſſed be the great Apollo.
Her. Praiſed.
Leo. Haſt thou read the truth?
Offic. I (my Lord) even ſo as it is here ſet down.
Leo. There is no truth at all i'th' Oracle:
The Seſſions ſhall proceed: this is meer falſhood.
Ser. My Lord the King: the King?
Leo. What is the buſineſs?
Ser. O Sir, I ſhall be hated to report it.
The Prince your Son, with meer conceit and fear
Of the Queen's ſpeed, is gone.
Leo. How? Gone?
Ser. Is dead.
Leo. Apollo's angry, and the Heavens themſelves
Do ſtrike at my Injuſtice. How now there?
Paul. This newes is mortal to the Queen: Look down
And ſee what death is doing.
Leo. Take her hence:
Her heart is but o're-charg'd: ſhe will recover.
I have too much believ'd mine own ſuſpition:
'Beſeech you tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life. Apollo pardon
My great prophaneſs 'gainſt thine Oracle.
Ile reconcile me to Polixenes,
New wooe my Queen, recal the good Camillo
(Whom I proclaim a man of Truth, of Mercy:)
For being tranſported by my Jealouſies
To bloudy thoughts and to revenge, I choſe
Camillo for the miniſter, to poyſon
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My ſwift command: though I with death, and with
Reward did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done: he, (moſt humane,
And fill'd with Honour) to my Kingly Gueſt
Unclaſp'd my practiſe, quit his fortunes here
(Which you knew great) and to the certain hazard
Of all uncertainties, himſelf commended,
No richer then his Honour: How he gliſters
Through my dark Ruſt? and how his Piety
Do's my deeds make the blacker?
Paul. Wo the while:
O cut my Lace, leſt my heart (cracking it)
Break too.
Lord. What fit is this? Good Lady?
Paul. What ſtudied torments (Tyrant) haſt for me?
What Wheels? Racks? Fires? What flaying? boyling? burning,
In Leads, or Oyles? What old, or new torture
Muſt I receive? whoſe very word deſerves
To taſt of thy moſt worſt. Thy tyranny
(Together working with thy Jealouſies,
Fancies too weak for Boyes, too green and idle
For Girles of Nine) O think what they have done,
And then run mad indeed: ſtark-mad: for all
Thy by-gone fooleries were but ſpices for it.
That thou betrayed'ſt Polixenes, 'twas nothing,
(That did but ſhew thee, of a Fool, inconſtant,
And damnable ingrateful:) Nor was't much.
Thou would'ſt have poyſon'd good Camillo's Honour,
To have him kill a King: poor Treſpaſſes,
More monſtrous ſtanding by: whereof I reckon
The caſting forth to Crowes, the Baby-daughter,
To be or none, or little; though a Devil
Would have ſhed water out of fire, ere don't:
Nor is't directly laid to thee, the death
Of the young Prince, whoſe honourable thoughts
(Thoughts high for one ſo tender) cleft the heart
That could conceive a groſs and fooliſh Sire
Blemiſh'd his gracious Dam: this is not, no,
Laid to thy anſwer: but the laſt: O Lords,
When I have ſaid, cry woe: the Queen, the Queen,

The sweet'st, dear'st creature's dead: and vengeance for't
Not drop'd down yet.
Lord. The higher powers forbid.
Paul. I say she's dead: Ile swear't. If word, nor oath
Prevail not, go and see: if you can bring
Tincture, or lustre in her lip, her eye
Heat outwardly, or breath within, Ile serve you
As I would do the Gods. But, O thou Tyrant,
Dost not repent these things, for they are heavier
Then all thy woes can stir: therefore betake thee
To nothing but despair. A thousand knees,
Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
Upon a barren Mountain, and still Winter
In storm perpetual, could not move the Gods
To look that way thou wer't.
Leo. Go on, go on:
Thou canst not speak too much, I have deserv'd
All tongues to talk their bitterest.
Lord. Say no more,
How ere the business goes, you have made fault
I'th boldness of your speech.
Paul. I am sorry for't,
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent: Alas, I have shew'd too much
The rashness of a woman: he is toucht
To th' Noble heart. What's gone, and what's past help
Should be past grief: Do not receive affliction
At my petition, I beseech you, rather
Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now (good my Liege)
Sir, Royal Sir, forgive a foolish woman:
The love I bore your Queen (Lo, fool again)
Ile speak of her no more, nor of your Children:
Ile not remember you of my own Lord,
(Who is lost too:) take your patience to you,
And Ile say nothing.
Leo. Thou didst speak but well,
When most the truth: which I receive much better,
Then to be pitied of thee. Prethee bring me
To the dead bodies of my Queen and Son,
One grave shall be for both. Upon them shall
The causes of their death appear (unto
Our shame perpetual) once a day, Ile visit
The Chappel where they lie, and teares shed there
Shall be my recreation. So long as Nature
Will bear up with this exercise, so long
I dayly vow to use it. Come, and lead me
To these sorrowes. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Antigonus, a Mariner, Babe, Sheep-heard, and Clown.

Ant. Thou art perfect then, our ship hath toucht upon
The Deserts of Bohemia.
Mar. I (My Lord) and fear
We have Landed in ill time: the skies look grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience
The heavens with that we have in hand, are angry,
And frown upon's.
Ant. Their sacred wils be done; get aboard,
Look to thy bark, Ile not be long before
I call upon thee.
Mar. Make your best hast, and go not
Too far i'th Land: 'tis like to be loud weather,
Besides this place is famous for the Creatures
Of prey, that keep upon't.
Antig. Go thou away,
Ile follow instantly.
Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so rid o'th business. Exit.
Ant. Come, poor Babe;
I have heard (but not believ'd) the spirits o'th' dead
May walk again: if such thing be, thy Mother
Appear'd to me last night: for ne're was dream
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head is on one side, some another,
I never saw a Vessel of like sorrow
So fill'd, and so becoming: in pure white Robes
Like very Sanctity she did approach
My Cabbin where I lay: thrice bow'd before me,
And (gasping to begin some speech) her eyes
Became two spouts; the fury spent, anon
Did this break from her. Good Antigonus,
Since Fate (against thy better disposition)
Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
Of my poor Babe, according to thine oath,
Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weep, and leave it crying: and for the babe
Is counted lost for ever, Perdita
I prethee call't: For this ungentle business
Put on thee, by my Lord, thou ne're shalt see
Thy Wife Paulina more: and so, with shrieks
She melted into ayr. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect my self, and thought
This was so, and no slumber: Dreams, are toyes,
Yet for this once, yea superstitiously,
I will be squar'd by this. I do believe
Hermione hath suffer'd death, and that
Apollo would (this being indeed the issue
Of King Polixenes) it should here be laid
(Either for life, or death) upon the Earth
Of it's right Father. Blossom, speed thee well,
There lie, and there thy character: there these,
Which may if Fortune please, both breed thee (Pretty)
And still rest thine. The storm begins, poor wretch,
That for thy Mothers fault, art thus expos'd
To loss, and what may follow. Weep I cannot,
But my heart bleeds: and most accurst am I
To be by Oath enjoyn'd to this. Farewel.
The day frowns more and more: thou'rt like to have
A lullaby too rough: I never saw
The heavens so dim, by day. A savage clamour!
Well may I get a-board: This is the Chace, (herd,
I am gone for ever. Exit pursued by a Bear. Enter a Shep-
Shep. I would there were no age between ten and three and twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest: for there is nothing (in the between) but getting wenches with child, wronging the Ancientry, stealing, fighting, hark you now: would any but these boyld-brains of nineteen, and two and twenty hunt this weather? They have scarr'd away two of my best Sheep, which I fear the Wolf will sooner find then the Master; if any where I have them, 'tis by the Sea-side, brouzing of Ivy. Good-luck (and't be the will) what have we here? Mercy on's, A Barne! A very pretty barne; A Boy, or a Child I wonder? (A pretty one, a very pretty one) sure some Scape: Though I am not bookish, yet I can read Waiting-Gentlewoman in the ſcape: this has been ſome ſtair-work, ſome Trunk-work, ſome behind-door work: they were warmer that got this, then the poor thing is here. Ile take it up for pity, yet Ile tarry till my ſonne come: he hallovv'd but even novv. Whoa-ho-hoa.

can

Enter Clown.

Clo. Hilloa, loa.

Shep. What? art ſo neer? If thou'lt ſee a thing to talk on, vvhen thou art dead and rotten, come hither: vvhat ayl'ſt thou, man?

Clow. I have ſeen tvvo ſuch ſights, by Sea and by Land: but I am not to ſay it is a Sea, for it is novv the skye, betvvixt the Firmament and it; you cannot thruſt a bodkins point.

Shep. Why boy, hovv is it?

Clo. I vvould you did but ſee hovv it chafes, hovv it rages, hovv it takes up the ſhore, but that's not to the point: Oh, the moſt pitteous cry of the poor ſouls, ſometimes to ſee'em, and not to ſee'em; Now the Ship boaring the Moon with her main Maſt, and anon ſwallowed with yeſt and froth, as you'ld thruſt a Cork into a hogſhead. And then for the Land-ſervice, To ſee how the Bear toar out his ſhoulder-bone, how he cry'd to me for help, and ſaid his name was Antigonus a Nobleman: But to make an end of the Ship, to ſee how the Sea flap-dragon'd it: but firſt, how the poor ſouls roared, and the Sea mock'd them: and how the poor Gentleman roared, and the Bear mock'd him, both roaring louder then the Sea, or Weather.

Shep. Name of mercy; when was this boy?

Clo. Now, now: I have not wink'd ſince I ſaw theſe ſights: the men are not yet cold under water, nor the Bear half din'd on the Gentleman: he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had been by to have help'd the old man.

Clow. I would you had been by the ſhip-ſide, to have help'd her; there your charity would have lack'd footing.

Shep. Heavy matters, heavy matters: but look thee here boy. Now bleſſe thy ſelf; thou met'ſt with things dying, I with things new born. Here's a ſight for thee: Look thee, a bearing-cloath for a Squires child: look thee here, take up, take up, (Boy:) open't: ſo, let's ſee, it was told me I ſhould be rich by the Fairies. This is ſome Changeling: open't: what's within boy?

Clo. You're a mad old man; If the ſinnes of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold, all Gold.

Shep. This is Faiery Gold boy, and 'twill prove ſo: up with't, keep it cloſe: home, home, the next way. We are lucky (boy) and to be ſo ſtill requires nothing but ſecrecy. Let my ſheep goe: Come (good boy) the next way home.

Clo. Goe you the next way with your Findings, Ile go ſee if the Bear be gone from the Gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are never curſt but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, ile bury it.

Shep. That's a good deed: if thou maiſt diſcern by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to th'ſight of him.

Clo. 'Marry will I: and you ſhall help to put him i'th'ground.

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and wee'l do good deeds on't. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Time, the Chorus.

Tim. I that pleaſe ſome, try all: both joy and terror
Of good, and bad; that makes, and unfolds error.
Now take upon me (in the name of Time)
To uſe my wings: Impute it not a crime
To me, or my ſwift paſſage, that I ſlide,
O're ſixteen years, and leave the growth untride
Of that wide gap, ſince it is in my power
To orethrow Law, and in one ſelf-born hour
To plant, and ore-whelm Cuſtom. Let me paſſe
The ſame I am, ere ancient'ſt Order was,
Or what is now receiv'd. I witneſſe to
The Times that brought them in, ſo ſhall I do
To th'freſheſt things now reigning, and make ſtale
The gliſtering of this preſent, as my Tale
Now ſeems to it: your patience this allowing,
I turn my glaſſe, and give my Scæne ſuch growing
As you had ſlept between: Leontes leaving
Th'effects of his fond jealouſies, ſo greeving
That he ſhuts up himſelf, imagine me
(Gentle Spectators) that I now may be
In fair Bohemia, and remember well,
I mention here a ſonne o'th Kings, which Florizel
I now name to you, and with ſpeed ſo pace
To ſpeak of Perdita, now grown in grace
Equall with wond'ring. What of her inſues
I liſt not propheſie: but let Times news
Be known when 'tis brought forth. A Shepheards daughter
And what to her adheres, which follows after,
Is th'argument of Time: of this allow,
If ever you have ſpent time worſe, ere now:
If never, yet that Time himſelf doth ſay,
He wiſhes earneſtly, you never may. Exit.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Polixenes and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee (good Camillo) be no more importunate: 'tis a ſickneſſe denying thee any thing: a death to grant this.

Cam. It is fifteen years ſince I ſaw my Countrey: though I have (for the moſt part) been ayred abroad, I deſire to lay my bones there. Beſides, the penitent King (my Maſter) hath ſent for me, to whoſe feeling ſorrows I might be ſome allay (or I o'reween to think ſo) which is another ſpurre to my departure.

Pol. As thou lov'ſt me (Camillo) wipe not out the reſt of thy ſervices, by leaving me now: the need I have of thee, thine own goodneſſe hath made: better not to have had thee, then thus to want thee, thou having made me Buſineſſes, (which none, (without thee) can ſufficiently mannage) muſt either ſtay to execute them thy ſelf, or take away with thee the very ſervices thou haſt done: which if I have not enough conſidered (as too much I cannot) to be more thankful to thee, ſhall be my ſtudy, and my profit therein, the heaping friendſhippes. Of that fatall Countrey Sicilia, prethee ſpeak no more, whoſe very naming, puniſhes me with the remembrance of that penitent(as thou call'ſt him) and reconciled King my brother, whoſe loſſe of his moſt precious Queen and Children, are even now to be a-freſh lamented. Say to me, when ſaw'ſt thou the Prince Florizel my ſon? Kings are no leſſe unhappy, their iſſue not being gracious, then they are in looſing them, when they have approved their vertues.

Cam. Sir, it is three daies ſince I ſaw the Prince: what his happier affairs may be, are to me unknown: but I have (miſſingly) noted, he is of late much retired from Court: and is leſſe frequent to his Princely exerciſes then formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I have conſidered ſo much (Camillo) and with ſome care, ſo farre, that I have eies under my ſervice, which look upon his removednesſe: from whom I have this intelligence, that he is ſeldom from the houſe of a moſt homely ſhepheard: a man (they ſay) that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is grown into an unſpeakable eſtate.

Cam. I have heard (Sir) of ſuch a man, who hath a daughter of moſt rare note: the report of her is extended more, then can be thought to begin from ſuch a cottage.

Pol. That's likewiſe part of my intelligence: but (I fear) the Angle that plucks our ſonne thither. Thou ſhalt accompany us to the place, where we will (not appearing what we are) have ſome queſtion with the Shepheard; from whoſe ſimplicity, I think it not uneaſie to get the cauſe of my ſonnes reſort thither. Prethee be my preſent partner in this buſineſſe, and lay aſide the thoughts of Sicilia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My beſt Camillo, we muſt diſguiſe our ſelves. Exit.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Autolicus ſinging.

When Daffadills begin to peer,
With heigh the Doxy over the dale,
Why then comes in the ſweet o'th year.
For the red blood raigns in the winters pale.

The white ſheet bleaching on the hedge,
With hey the ſweet birds, O how they ſing:
Doth ſet my pugging tooth an edge,
For a quart of Ale is a diſh for a King.

The Lark, that tirra-Lyra chaunts,
With heigh, with heigh the Thruſh and the lay:
Are Summer ſongs for me and my Aunts
While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have ſerv'd Prince Florizel, and in my time wore three pile, but now I am out of ſervice.

But ſhall I go mourn for that (my dear)
the pale Moon ſhines by night:
And when I wander here and there
I then do moſt go right.
If Tinkers may have leave to live,
and bear the Sow-skin Bowget,
Then my account I well may give,
and in the Stocks avouch it.

My Traffick is ſheets: when the Kite builds, look to leſſer Linnen. My Father nam'd me Autolicus, who being (as I am) lytter'd under Mercury, was likewiſe a ſnapper-up of unconſidered trifles: With Dye and drab, I purchas'd Capariſon, and my Revennew is the ſilly Cheat. Gallowes, and Knock, are too powerfull on the High-way. Beating and hanging are terrors to me: For the life to come, I ſleep out the thought of it. A prize, a prize.

Enter Clown.

Clo. Let me ſee, every Leaven-weather toddes, every told yields pound and odde ſhilling: fifteen hundred ſhorn, what comes the wooll to?

Aut. If the ſprindge hold, the Cock's mine.

Clo. I cannot do it without Compters. Let me ſee, what am I to buy for our Sheep-ſhearing-Feaſt? Three pound of Sugar, five pound of Currence, Rice: What will this Siſter of mine do with Rice? but my father hath made her Miſtriſs of the Feaſt, and ſhe laies it on. She hath made me four and twenty Noſe-gays for the ſhearers (three-man ſong-men, all, and very good ones) but they are moſt of them Means and Baſes; but one Puritan amongſt them, and he ſings Pſalms to horn-Pipes. I muſt have Saffron to colour the Warden Pies, Mace: Dates, none: that's out of my note: Nutmegs, ſeven; a Race or two of Ginger, but that I may begge: Four pound of Prewyns, and as many of Reaſons o'th Sun.

Aut. Oh, that ever I was born.

Clo. I'th'name of me.

Aut. Oh help me, help me: pluck but off theſe raggs: and then, death, death.

Clo. Alack poor ſoul, thou haſt need of more rags to lay on thee, rather than have theſe off.

Aut. Oh ſir, the loathſomneſſe of them offends me, more then the ſtripes I have received, which are mighty ones and millions.

Clo. Alas poor man, a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am rob'd ſir, and beaten: my money, and apparrel tane from me, and theſe deteſtable things put upon me.

Clo. What, by a horſe-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A foot-man (ſweet ſir) a foot-man.

Clo. Indeed, he ſhould be a foot-man, by the garments he has left with thee: if this be a horſemans Coat, it hath ſeen very hot ſervice. Lend me thy hand, ile help thee. Come lend me thy hand.

Aut. Oh good ſir, tenderly, oh.

Clo. Alas poor ſoul.

Aut. Oh good ſir, ſoftly, good ſir: I fear (ſir) my ſhoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now? canſt ſtand?

Aut. Softly, deer ſir: good ſir, ſoftly: you ha done me a charitable office.

Clo. Doſt lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good ſweet ſir: no, I beſeech you ſir: I have a kinſman not paſt three quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going: I ſhall there have money, or any thing I want: Offer me no money I pray you, that kills my heart.

Clo. What manner of Fellow was he that robb'd you?

Aut. A fellow (Sir) that I have known to go about with Troll-my-dames: I knew him once a ſervant of the Prince: I cannot tell good ſir, for which of his Vertues it was, but he was certainly Whipt out of the Court.

Clo.

Clo. His vices you would say: there's no vertue whipt out of the Court: they cherish it to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would say (Sir.) I know this man well, he hath been since an Ape-bearer, then a Process-server, (a Bailiffe) then he compast a Motion of the Prodigal son, and married a Tinkers wife, within a mile where my Land and living lies; and (having flown over many knavish professions) he setled only in Rogue: some call him Autolicus.

Clo. Out upon him: Prig, for my life Prig: he haunts VVakes, Fairs, and Bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true sir: he sir he: that's the Rogue that put me into this apparel.

Clo. Not a more cowardly Rogue in all Bohemia; If you had but look'd big, and spit at him, hee'ld have run.

Aut. I must confess to you (sir) I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way, and that he knew I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet Sir, much better then I was: I can stand, and walk: I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my Kinsmans.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good fac'd sir, no sweet sir.

Clo. Then farewel, I must go to buy Spices for our Sheep-shearing. Exit.

Aut. Prosper you sweet sir. Your Purse is not hot enough to purchase your Spice. Ile be with you at your Sheep-shearing too: If I make not this Cheat bring out another, and the shearers prove sheep, let me be unrold, and my name put in the book of Vertue.

Song. Jog on, Jog on, the foot-path way
And merrily hent the Stile-a.
A Merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a Mile-a Exit.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Florizel, Perdita, Shepherd, Clown, Polixenes, Camillo, Mopsa, Dorcas, Servants, Autolicus.

Flo. These your unusual weeds, to each part of you
Do's give a life: no Shepherdess, but Flora
Peering in Aprils front. This your sheep-shearing,
Is as a merry meeting of the petty gods,
And you the Queen on't.

Per. Sir: my gracious Lord,
To chide at your extreames, it not becomes me:
(Oh pardon, that I name them:) your high self
The gracious mark o'th' Land, you have obscur'd
With a Swaines wearing: and me (poor lowly Maid)
Most goddess-like prank'd up: But that our Feasts
In every Mess, have folly; and the Feeders
Digest it with a Custom, I should blush
To see you so attyr'd: sworn I think,
To shew my self a glass.

Flo. I bless the time
When my good Falcon, made her flight a-cross
Thy Fathers ground.

Per. Now Jove afford you cause:
To me the difference forges dread (your Greatness
Hath not been us'd to fear:) even now I tremble
To think your Father, by some accident
Should pass this way, as you did: Oh the Fates,
How would he look, to see his work, so noble,
Vildely bound up? VVhat would he say? Or how Should I (in these my borrowed Flaunts) behold
The sternness of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend
Nothing but jollity: the Gods themselves
(Humbling their Deities to love) have taken
The Shapes of Beasts upon them. Jupiter
Became a Bull, and bellow'd: the green Neptune
A Ram, and bleated: and the Fire-roab'd-God
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,
As I seem now. Their transformations,
Were never for a piece of Beauty, rarer,
Nor in a way so chast: since my desires
Run not before mine Honour: nor, my lusts
Burn hotter then my Faith.

Perd. O but dear sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
Oppos'd (as it must be) by th' power of the King.
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speak, that you must change this purpose,
Or I my life.

Flo. Thou dearest Perdita,
With these forc'd thoughts, I prethee darken not
The Mirth o'th' Feast: Or Ile be thine (my Fair)
Or not my Fathers. For I cannot be Mine own, nor any thing to any, if
I be not thine. To this I am most constant,
Though Destiny say no. Be merry (Gentle)
Strangle such thoughts as these, with any thing
That you behold the while. Your Guests are coming:
Lift up your countenance, as it were the day
Of celebration of that Nuptial, which
We two have sworn shall come.

Perd. O Lady Fortune,
Stand you auspicious. Enter all.

Flo. See, your Guests approach,
Addresse your self to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

Shep. Fye (daughter) when my old wife liv'd: upon
This day, she was both Pantler, Butler, Cook,
Both Dame and Servant: Welcom'd all: serv'd all,
Would sing her Song, and dance her turn: now here
At upper end o'th' Table; now, i'th middle:
On his shoulder, and his: her face o'fire
With labour, and the thing she took to quench it
She would to each one sip. You are retired,
As if you were a feasted one: and not
The Hostess of the meeting: Pray you bid
These unknown friends to's welcome, for it is
A way to make us better Friends, more known.
Come, quench your blushes, and present your self
That which you are, Mistris o'th' Feast. Come on,
And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,
As your good flock shall prosper.

Perd. Sir, welcome:
It is my Fathers will, I should take on me
The Hostesship o'th' day, you're welcome sir,
Give me those Flowers there (Dorcas.) Reverend Sirs,
For you, there's Rosemary, and Rue, these keep Seeming, and savour all the Winter long:
Grace, and Remembrance be to you both,
And welcome to our Shearing.

Pol. Shepherdeſs,
(A fair one are you: well you fit our ages
With flowers of Winter.
Perd. Sir, the year growing ancient,
Not yet on ſummers death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, the faireſt flowers o'th' ſeaſon
Are our Carnations. and ſtreak't Gilly-vors,
(Which ſome call Natures baſtards) of that kind
Our ruſtick Garden's barren, and I care not
To get ſlips of them.
Pol. VVherefore (gentle Maiden)
Do you neglect them.
Perd. For I have heard it ſaid,
There is an Art, which in their pideneſs ſhares
With great creating-Nature.
Pol. Say there be:
Yet Nature is made better by no mean,
But Nature makes that Mean: ſo over that Art
(VVhich you ſay addes to Nature) is an Art
That Nature makes: you ſee (ſweet Maid) we marry
A gentler Sien, to the wildeſt Stock,
And make conceive a bark of baſer kind
By bud of Nobler race. This is an Art
VVhich do's mend Nature: change it rather, but
The Art it ſelf, is Nature.
Per. So it is.
Pol. Then make your Garden rich in Gilly'vors,
And do not call them baſtards.
Per. Ile not put
The Dible in earth, to ſet one ſlip of them:
No more then were I painted, I would wiſh
This youth ſhould ſay'twer well: and only therefore
Deſire to breed by me. Here's flowers for you:
Hot Lavender, Mints, Savory, Marjorum,
The Mary-gold, that goes to bed with'Sun,
And with him riſes, weeping: Theſe are Flowers
Of middle Summer, and I think they are given
To men of middle age. Y'are very welcome.
Cam. I ſhould leave grazing, were I of your flock,
And only live by gazing.
Per. Out alas:
You'ld be ſo lean, that blaſts of January Friend,
VVould blow you through and through. Now (my fair'ſt
I would I had ſome Flowers o'th Spring, that might Become your time of day: and yours, and yours,
That wear upon your Virgin-branches yet
Your Maiden-heads growing: O Proſerpina,
For the Flowers now, that (frighted) thou let'ſt fall
From Diſſes VVaggon: Daffadils,
That come before the Swallow dares, and take
The winds of March with beauty: Violets (dim
But ſweeter then the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath) pale prime-roſes,
That die unmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his ſtrength (a Malady Moſt incident to Maids:) bold Oxlips, and
The Crown imperial: Lillies of all kinds,
(The flowre-de-Luce being one.) O, theſe I lack,
To make you Garlands of) and my ſweet friend,
To ſtrew him or'e, and o're.
Flo. VVhat? like a Coarſe?
Per. No, like a bank, for Love to lye, and play on:
Not like a Coarſe: or if: not to be buried,
But quick, and in mine armes. Come take your flowers,
Methinkes I play as I have ſeen them do
In VVhitſon-paſtorals: Sure this Robe of mine
Do's change my diſpoſition:
Flo. VVhat you do,
Still betters what is done. VVhen you ſpeak (ſweet)
I'ld have you do it ever: when you ſing,
I'ld have you buy, and ſell ſo: ſo give Almes,
Pray ſo: and for the ord'ring your Affaires,
To ſing them too. VVhen you do dance, I wiſh you
A wave o'th ſea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that: move ſtill, ſtill ſo:
And own no other Function. Each your doing,
(So ſingular in each particular)
Crownes what you are doing, in the preſent deeds,
That all your Acts, are Queens.
Perd. O Doricles,
Your praiſes are too large: but that your youth
And the true bloud which peeps fairly through't,
Do plainly give you out an unſtain'd Shepherd
VVith wiſdom, I might fear (my Doricles)
You woo'd me the falſe way.
Flo. I think you have
As little skill to fear, as I have purpoſe
To put you to't. But come, our dance I pray,
Your hand (my Perdita:) ſo Turtles pair
That never mean to part.
Perd. Ile ſwear for'em.
Pol. This is the prettieſt Low-born Laſs, that ever
Ran on the green-ſord: Nothing ſhe do's, or ſeemes
But ſmackes of ſomething greater then her ſelf,
Too Noble for this place.
Cam. He tels her ſomething
That makes her blood look on't: Good ſooth ſhe is
The Queen of Curds and Cream.
Clo. Come on: ſtrike up.
Dor. Mopſa muſt be your Miſtris: marry Garlick to mend her kiſſing with.
Mop. Now in good time.
Clo. Not a word, a word, we ſtand upon our manners,
Come, ſtrike up.

Here a Dance of Shepheards and Shepheardeſſes.

Pol. Pray good Shepherd, what fair Swain is this VVhich dances with your daughter?
Shep. They call him Doricles, and boaſts himſelf
To have a worthy Feeding; but I have it
Upon his own report, and I believe it:
He lookes like ſooth: he ſaies he loves my daughter,
I think ſo too; for never gaz'd the Moon
Upon the water, as he'll ſtand and read
As 'twere my daughters eyes: and to be plain,
I think there is not half a kiſs to chuſe
Who loves another beſt.
Pol. She dances featly.
Shep. So ſhe do's any thing, though I report it
That ſhould be ſilent: if young Doricles
Do light upon her, ſhe ſhall bring him that
Which he not dreames of. Enter Servant.
Ser. O Maſter: if you did but hear the Pedler at the door, you would never dance again after a Tabor and Pipe: no, the Bag-pipe could not move you: he ſings ſeveral Tunes, faſter then you'll tell money: he utters them as he had eaten Ballads, and all mens eares grew to his Tunes.
Clo. He could never come better: he ſhall come in: I love a ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter merrily ſet down: or a very pleaſant thing indeed, and ſung lamentably.

Ser.

Ser. He hath songs for man, or woman, of all sizes; No Milliner can so fit his customers with Gloves: he has the prettiest Love songs for Maids, so without bawdry (which is strange) with such delicate burthens of Dildo's and Fadings: Jump-her, and thump her; and where some stretch-mouth'd Rascall, would, (as it were) mean mischief, and break a foul gap into the Matter, he makes the Maid to answer, Whoop, do me no harm good man: put's him off, slights him, with Whoop, do me no harm good man.

Pol. This is a brave fellow.

Clo. Beleeve me, thou talkest of an admirable conceited fellow, has he any unbraided Wares?

Ser. He hath Ribbons of all the colours i'th'Rainbow; Points, more then all the Lawyers in Bohemia, can learnedly handle, though they come to him by th'gross: Inkles, Caddisses, Cambricks, Lawns: why he sings 'em over, as they were Gods, or Goddesses: you would think a Smock were a she-Angell, he so chants to the sleeve-hand, and the work about the Square on't.

Clo. Prethee bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Perd. Forewarn him that he use no scurrilous words in's tunes.

Clo. You have of these Pedlers, that have more in them, then you'd think (Sister)

Per. I good brother, or go about to think.

Enter Autolicus singing.

Lawn as white as driven Snow,
Cypresse black, as ere was Crow,
Gloves as sweet as Damask Roses,
Maskes for Faces, and for Noses:
Bugle-Bracelet, Neck-lace Amber,
Perfume for a Ladies Chamber:
Golden Quoifs, and Stomachers
For my Lads to give their Dears:
Pins, and poaking-sticks of steel.
What Maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come: come buy, come buy.
Buy Lads, or else your Lasses cry: Come buy.

Clo. If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me, but being enthrall'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certain Ribbons and Gloves.

Mop. I was promis'd them against the Feast, but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promis'd you more then that, or there be lyars.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promis'd you: 'May be he has paid you more, which will shame you to give him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among Maids? will they wear their plackets, where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time? when you are going to bed? Or kill-hole? To whistle of these secrets, but you must be tittle-tatling before all our Guests? 'Tis well they are whispring: clamour your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I have done; Come you promis'd me a tawdry-lace, and a pair of sweet Gloves.

Clo. Have I not told thee how I was cozen'd by the way, and lost all my money?

Aut. And indeed Sir, there are Cozeners abroad, therefore it behooves men to be wary.

Clo. Fear not thou man, thou shalt lose nothing here.

Aut. I hope so sir, for I have about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What hast here? Ballads?

Mop. Pray now buy some, I love a Ballad in print, a life, for then we are sure they are true.

Aut. Here's one, to a very doleful tune, how a Usurers wife was brought to bed with twenty money-bags at a burthen, and how she long'd to eat Adders heads, and Toads Carbonado'd.

Mop. Is it true, think you?

Aut. Very true, and but a moneth old.

Dor. Blesse me from marrying a Usurer.

Aut. Here's the Midwives name to't: one Mistris Tale-Porter, and five or six honest Wives, that were present. Why should I carry lyes abroad?

Mop. Pray you now buy it.

Clo. Come on, lay it by: and let's first see moe Ballads: We'l buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another Ballad of a Fish, that appeared upon the coast, on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fadom above water, and sung this Ballad against the hard hearts of Maids: it was thought she was a Woman, and was turn'd into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that lov'd her: The Ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, think you?

Aut. Five Justices hands at it: and witnesses more then my pack will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too; another.

Aut. This is a merry Ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's have some merry ones.

Aut. Why this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of two Maids wooing a man: there's scarse a Maid Westward but she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it: if thou'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear, 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on't a moneth agoe.

Aut. I can bear my part, you must know 'tis my occupation: Have at it with you:

Song. Get you hence, for I must goe
Aut. Where it fits not you to know.
Dor. Whether.
Mop. O whether?
Dor. Whether?
Mop. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.
Dor. Me too, let me goe thither:
Mop. Or thou goest to th'Grange, or Mill,
Dor. If to either thou dost ill,
Aut. Neither.
Dor. What neither?
Aut. Neither:
Dor. Thou hast sworn my Love to be,
Mop. Thou hast sworn it more to me.
Then whether goest? Say whether?

Clo. Wee'l have this song out anon by our selves: My Father and the Gent. are in sad talk, and wee'l not trouble them: Come bring away thy pack after me, Wenches Ile buy for you both: Pedler let's have the first choice; follow me girles. Aut. And you shall pay well for 'em.

Song. Will you buy any Tape, or Lace for your Cape?
My dainty Duck, my Deer-a?
Any Silk, any Thred, any Toyes for your head
Of the new'st, and fin'st, fin'st wear-a.
Come to the Pedler, Money's a Medler,
That doth utter all mens ware-a. Exit.

Ser. Master, there is three Carters, three Shepheards, three Neat-herds, three Swine-herds that have made themſelves all men of hair, they call themſelves Saltiers, and they have a Dance, which the wenches ſay is a gally-maufry of Gambols, becauſe they are not in't: but they themſelves are o'th'mind (if it be not too rough for ſome, that know little but bowling) it will pleaſe plentifully.

Shep. Away: wee'l none on't; here has been too much homely foolery already. I know (Sir) we weary you.

Pol. You weary thoſe that refreſh us: Pray let's ſee theſe four-threes of Heardſmen.

Ser. One three of them, by their own report (Sir,) hath danc'd before the King: and not the worſt of the three, but jumps twelve foot and a half by th'ſquire.

Shep. Leave your prating, ſince theſe good men are pleas'd, let them come in: but quickly now.

Ser. Why, they ſtay at door Sir.

Here a Dance of twelve Satires.

Pol. O Father, you'l know more of that hereafter: Is it not too far gone? 'tis time to part them, He's ſimple, and tels much. How now (fair ſhepheard) Your heart is full of ſomething, that do's take Your mind from feaſting. Sooth, when I was young, And handed love, as you do; I was wont To load my Shee with knacks: I would have ranſackt The Pedlers ſilken Treaſury, and have powr'd it To her acceptance: you have let him go, And nothing marted with him. If your Liſſe Interpretation ſhould abuſe, and call this Your lack of love, or bounty, you were ſtraited For a reply at leaſt, if you make a care Of happy holding her.

Flo. Old Sir, I know She prizes not ſuch trifles as theſe are: The gifts ſhe looks from me, are packt and lockt Up in my heart, which I have given already, But not deliver'd. O hear me breath my life Before this ancient Sir, who (it ſhould ſeem) Hath ſometime lov'd. I take thy hand, this hand, As ſoft as Doves Down, and as white as it, Or Ethyopians tooth, or the fan'd ſnow, That's bolted by th'Northern blaſt, twice o're.

Pol. What follows this? How prettily th'young Swain ſeems to waſh The hand, was fair before? I have put you out, But to your proteſtation: Let me hear What you profeſſe.

Flo. Do, and be witneſſe to't.

Pol. And this my neighbour too?

Flo. And he, and more Than he, and men: the earth, the heavens, and all; That were I crown'd the moſt Imperial Monarch Thereof moſt worthy: were I the faireſt youth That ever made eye ſwerve, had force and knowledge More than was ever mans, I would not prize them Without her Love; for her, employ them all, Commend them, and condemn them to her ſervice, Or to their own perdition.

Pol. Fairly offer'd,

Cam. This ſhews a ſound affection,

She. But my daughter,

S you the like to him.

Per. I cannot ſpeak So well, (nothing ſo well) no, nor mean better, By th'pattern of mine own thoughts, I cut out The purity of his.

Shep. Take hands, a Bargain; And friends unknown, you ſhall bear witneſſe to't: I give my daughter to him, and will make Her Portion, equal his.

Flo. O, that muſt be I'th vertue of your daughter: One being dead, I ſhall have more then you can dream of yet, Enough then for your wonder: but come-on: Contract us'fore theſe witneſſes.

Shep. Come, your hand: And daughter; yours.

Pol. Saft Swain a-while: beſeech you, Have you a Father?

Flo. I have: but what of him?

Pol. Knows he of this?

Flo. He neither do's, nor ſhall.

Pol. Me-thinks a Father, Is at the Nuptial of his ſonne, a Gueſt That beſt becomes the Table: pray you once more Is not your Father grown incapeable Of reaſonable affairs, is he not ſtupid With Age, and alting Rheums? Can he ſpeak? hear? Know man, from man? Diſpute his own eſtate? Lies he not bed-rid? And again, do's nothing But what he did, being childiſh?

Flo. No good Sir: He has his health, and ampler ſtrength indeed Then moſt have of his age.

Pol. By my white Beard, You offer him (if this be ſo) a wrong Something unfilial: Reaſon my ſonne Should chooſe himſelf a wife, but as good reaſon The Father, (all whoſe joy is nothing elſe But fair poſterity) ſhould hold ſome counſel In ſuch a buſineſſe.

Flo. I yield all this; But for ſome other reaſons (my grave Sir) Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint My father of this buſineſſe.

Pol. Let him know't.

Flo. He ſhall not.

Pol. Prethee let him.

Flo. No: he muſt not.

Shep. Let him (my ſonne) he ſhall not need to grieve At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he muſt not: Mark our Contract.

Pol. Mark your divorce (young Sir) Whom ſonne I dare not call: Thou art too baſe To be acknowledg'd. Thou a Scepters Heir, That thus affects a ſheep-hook? Thou old Traitor, I am ſorry, that by hanging thee, I can But ſhorten thy life one week. And thou, freſh piece Of excellent Witchcraft, who of force muſt know The royal Fool thou coap'ſt with.

Shep. Oh my heart.

Pol. Ile have thy beauty ſcratcht with bryers and made More homely then thy ſtate. For thee (fond boy) If I may ever know thou doſt but ſigh, That thou no more ſhalt never ſee this knack (as never I mean thou ſhalt) wee'l barre thee from ſucceſſion, Not hold thee of our blood, no not our Kin, Farre than Deucalion off: (mark thou my words) Follow us to the Court. Thou Churle, for this time (Though full of our diſpleaſure) yet we free thee From the dead blow of it: And your enchantment,

Wor-

Worthy enough a Heardſman: yea him too,
That makes himſelf (but for our Honour therein)
Unworthy thee. If ever henceforth, thou
Theſe rural Latches, to his entrance open,
Or hope his body more, with thy embraces,
I will deviſe a death, as cruel for thee
As thou art tender to't. Exit.

Perd. Even here undone:
I was not much afear'd: for once, or twice
I was about to ſpeak, and tell him plainly,
The ſelf-ſame Sun, that ſhines upon his Court,
Hides not his viſage from our Cottage, but
Lookes on alike. Wilt pleaſe you (Sir) be gone?
I told you what would come of this: Beſeech you
Of your own ſtate take care: This dream of mine
Being now awake, Ile Queen it no inch farther,
But milk my Ewes, and weep.

Cam. Why how now Father,
Speak ere thou dyeſt.

Shep. I cannot ſpeak, nor think,
Nor dare to know, that which I know: O Sir,
You have undone a man of fourſcore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet: yea,
To die upon the bed my father dy'd,
To lie cloſe by his honeſt bones; but now
Some Hangman muſt put on my ſhrowd, and lay me
Where no Prieſt ſhovels in duſt. Oh curſed wretch,
That knew'ſt this was the Prince, and wouldſt adventure
To mingle faith with him. Undone, undone:
If I might die within this hour, I have liv'd
To die when I deſire. Exit.

Flo. Why look you ſo upon me?
I am but ſorry, not afear'd: delaid,
But nothing altred: What I was, I am:
More ſtraining on, for plucking back: not following
My leaſh unwillingly.

Cam. Gracious my Lord,
You know your Fathers temper: at this time
He will allow no ſpeech: (which I do ghеſs
You do not purpoſe to him:) and as hardly
Will he endure your ſight, as yet I fear;
Then till the fury of his Highneſs ſettle
Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpoſe it:
I think Camillo.

Cam. Even he, my Lord.

Per. How often have I told you 'twould be thus?
How often ſaid, my dignity would laſt
But till 'twere known?

Flo. It cannot fail, but by
The violation of my faith, and then
Let Nature cruſh the ſides o'th' earth together,
And marre the ſeeds within. Lift up thy looks:
From my ſucceſſion wipe me (Father) I
Am heir to my affection.

Cam. Be advis'd.

Flo. I am. and by my Fancy, if my Reaſon
Will thereto be obedient: I have Reaſon:
If not, my ſenſes better (pleas'd with madneſs)
Do bid it welcom:

Cam. This is deſperate (ſir.)

Flo. So call it: but it do's fulfil my vow:
I needs muſt think it honeſty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pompe that may
Be thereat gleaned: for all that the Sun ſees, or
The cloſe earth wombes, or the profound ſeas hide
In unknown fadomes; will I break my Oath
To this my fair belov'd: Therefore I pray you,
As you have ever been my Fathers friend,
When he ſhall miſs me, as (in faith I mean not
To ſee him any more) caſt your good counſels
Upon his paſſion: Let my ſelf, and Fortune
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And ſo deliver, I am put to ſea
With her, whom here I cannot hold on ſhore:
And moſt opportune to her need, I have
A Veſſel rides faſt by, but not prepar'd
For this deſign. What courſe I mean to hold
Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.

Cam. O my Lord,
I would your ſpirit were eaſier for advice,
Or ſtronger for your need.

Flo. Hark Perdita,
Ile hear you by and by.

Cam. He's irremoveable;
Reſolv'd for flight: Now were I happy, if
His going, I could frame to ſerve my turn.
Save him from danger, do him love and honour;
Purchaſe the ſight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy King, my Maſter, whom
I ſo much thirſt to ſee.

Flo. Now good Camillo,
I am ſo fraught with curious buſineſs, that
I leave out Ceremony.

Cam. Sir, I think
You have heard of my poor ſervices, i'th love
That I have born your Father?

Flo. Very nobly
Have you deſerv'd: It is my Fathers Muſick
To ſpeak your deeds: not little of his care
To have them recompenc'd, as thought on.

Cam. Well (my Lord)
If you may pleaſe to think I love the King,
And through him, what's neareſt to him, which is
Your gracious ſelf; embrace but my direction,
If your more ponderous and ſetled project
May ſuffer alteration: On mine honour,
Ile point you where you ſhall have ſuch receiving
As ſhall become your Highneſs, where you may
Enjoy your Miſtreſs; from the whom, I ſee
Ther's no disjunction to be made, but by
(As heavens forfend) your ruine: Marry her,
And with my beſt endeavours, in your abſence,
Your diſcontenting Father, ſtrive to qualifie
And bring him up to liking.

Flo. How Camillo
May this (almoſt a miracle) be done?
That I may call thee ſomething more than man,
And after that truſt to thee.

Cam. Have you thought on
A place whereto you'l go?

Flo. Not any yet:
But as th'unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, ſo we profeſs
Our ſelves to be the ſlaves of chance, and flyes
Of every wind that blowes.

Cam. Then liſt to me:
This followes, if you will not change your purpoſe
But undergo this flight; make for Sicilia,
And there preſent your ſelf, and your fair Princeſs,
(For ſo I ſee ſhe muſt be) 'fore Leontes;

She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your Bed. Methinkes I see
Leontes opening his free Armes, and weeping
His Welcomes forth: askes thee the Son forgiveness,
As 'twere i'th' Fathers person: kisses the hands
Of your fresh Princess; ore and ore divides him,
'Twixt his unkindness, and his kindness: th'one
He chides to Hell, and bids the other grow
Faster than Thought, or Time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my Visitation, shall I
Hold up before him?

Cam. Sent by the King your Father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you (as from your Father) shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, Ile write you down,
The which shall point you forth at every sitting
What you must say, that he shall not perceive,
But that you have your Fathers Bosom there,
And speak his very heart.

Flo. I am bound to you:
There is some sap in this.

Cam. A Course more promising,
Then a wild dedication of your selves
To unpath'd waters, undream'd Shores; most certain,
To Miseries enough: no hope to help you,
But as you shake off one, to take another:
Nothing so certain, as your Anchors, who
Do their best office, if they can but stay you,
Where you'l be loath to be: besides you know,
Prosperity's the very bond of Love;
Whose fresh complexion, and whose heart together,
Affliction alters.

Per. One of these is true:
I think Affliction may subdue the Cheek,
But not take-in the Mind.

Cam. Yea, say you so?
There shall not, at your Fathers house, these seven yeares
Be born another such.

Flo. My good Camillo,
She's as forward, of her Breeding, as
She is i'th' reare 'our birth.

Cam. I cannot say, 'tis pity
She lackes instructions, for she seemes a Mistress
To most that teach.

Per. Your pardon Sir, for this.
Ile blush you thankes.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita.
But O, the Thornes we stand upon: (Camillo)
Preserver of my Father, now of me,
The Medicine of our House: how shall we do?
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's Son,
Nor shall appear in Sicily.

Cam. My Lord,
Fear none of this: I think you know my fortunes
Do all lie there: It shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed, as if
The Scene you play, were mine. For instance, Sir,
That you may know you shall not want; one word.

Enter Autolichus.

Aut. Ha, ha, what a fool Honesty is? and Trust (his sworn brother) a very simple Gentleman. I have sold all my Trumpery: not a counterfeit Stone, not a Ribbon, Glass, Pomander, Browch, Table-book, Ballad, Knife, Tape, Glove, Shoe-tye, Bracelet, Horne-Ring, to keep my Pack from fastning: they throng who should buy first, as if my Trinkets had been hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer; by which means, I saw whose Purse was best in Picture; and what I saw, to my good use, I remembred. My Clown (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in love with the Wenches Song, that he would not stir his Pettytoes till he had both Tune and Words, which so drew the rest of the Heard to me, that all their other Sences stuck in Eares: you might have pinch'd a Placket, it was senceless, 'twas nothing to geld a Cod-piece of a Purse: I would have fil'd Keyes off that hung in Chaynes: no hearing, no feeling, but my Sirs Song, and admiring the nothing of it. So that in this time of Lethargy, I pick't and cut most of their Festival Purses: And had not the old man come in with a Whoo-bub against his Daughter, and the Kings Son, and scar'd my chowghes from the Chaffe, I had not left a Purse alive in the whole Army.

Cam. Nay, but my Letters by this means being there
So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

Flo. And those that you'l procure from King Leontes?

Cam. Shall satisfie your Father.

Perd. Happy be you:
All that you speak, shewes fair.

Cam. Who have we here?
We'l make an Instrument of this: omit
Nothing may give us ayd.

Aut. If they have over-heard me now: why hanging.

Cam. How now (Good-Fellow)
Why shak'st thou so? Fear not (man)
Here's no harm intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poor Fellow, Sir.

Cam. Why, be so still: here's no body will steal that from thee: yet for the out-side of thy poverty, we must make an exchange: therefore dis-case thee instantly (thou must think there's a necessity in't) and change garments with this Gentleman: Though the pen-worth (on his side) be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.

Aut. I am a poor Fellow, Sir, (I know ye well enough.)

Cam. Nay prethee dispatch: the Gentleman is half fled already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, Sir? (I smell the trick on't.

Flo. Dispatch, I prethee.

Aut. Indeed I have had earnest, but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Unbuckle, unbuckle.
Fortunate Mistress (let my prophecy
Come home to ye:) you must retire your self
Into some Covert; take your sweet-hearts Hat
And pluck it ore your Browes, muffle your face,
Dismantle you, and (as you can) disliken
The truth of your own seeming, that you may
(For I do fear eyes over) to Ship-board
Get undescry'd.

Per. I see the Play so lies,
That I must bear a part.

Cam. No remedy:
Have you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my Father,
He would not call me Son.

Cam. Nay, you shall have no Hat:
Come Lady, come: Farewel (my friend.)

Aut. Adieu, Sir.

Flo. O Perdita: what have we twain forgot?

'Pray

'Pray you a word.

Cam. What I do next, shall be to tell the King
Of this escape, and whither they are bound;
Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevail,
To force him after: in whose company
I shall review Sicilia; for whose sight,
I have a womans Longing.

Flo. Fortune speed us:
Thus we set on (Camillo) to th'Sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better. Exit.

Aut. I understand the businesse, I hear it: to have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a Cut-purse; a good Nose is requisite also, to smell out work for th'other Sences. I see this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been, without boot? What a boot is here, with this exchange; Sure the Gods do this year connive at us, and we may doe any thing ex tempore. The Prince himself is about a piece of iniquity (stealing away from his Father, with his Clog at his heels:) if I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the King withall, I would not do't: I hold it the more knavery to conceal it; and therein am I constant to my Profession.

Enter Clown and Shepheard.

Aside, aside, here's more matter for a hot brain: Every Lanes end, every Shop, Church, Session, Hanging yields a careful man work.

Clown. See, see: what a man you are now? there is no other way, but to tell the King she's a Changling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but hear me.

Clow. Nay, but hear me.

Shep. Goe to then.

Clow. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the King, and so your flesh and blood is not to be punish'd by him. Shew those things you found about her (those secret things, all but what she has with her:) This being done, let the Law goe whistle: I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the King all, every word, yea, and his Sons pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man, neither to his Father, nor to me, to goe about to make me the Kings Brother in Law.

Clow. Indeed Brother in Law was the farthest off you could have been to him, and then your Blood had been the dearer, by I know how much an ounce.

Aut. Very wisely (Puppies)

Shep. Well: let us to the King: there is that in this Farthell, will make him scratch his Beard.

Aut. I know not what impediment this complaint may be to the flight of my Master.

Clo. 'Pray heartily he be at Pallace.

Aut. Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance: Let me pocket up my Pedlers excrement. How now (Rustiques) whither are you Bound?

Shep. To th'Pallace (and it like your Worship.)

Aut. Your affairs there? what? with whom? the condition of that Farthell? the place of your dwelling? your names? your ages? of what having? breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be known, discover?

Clo. We are but plain fellows, Sir.

Aut. A Lye: you are rough, and hairy: Let me have no lying; it becomes none but Tradesmen, and they often give us (Souldiers) the Lie, but we pay them for it with stamped Coine, not stabbing Steel, therefore they doe not give us the Lye.

Clo. Your Worship had like to have given us one, if you had not taken your self with the manner.

Shep. Are you a Courtier, and't like you Sir?

Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a Courtier. Seest thou not the ayr of the Court, in these enfoldings? hath not my gate in it, the measure of the Court? Receives not thy Nose Court-Odour from me? Reflect I not on thy Baseness, Court-contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or toaze from thee thy businesse, I am therefore no Courtier? I am Courtier Cap-a-pe; and one that will either push-on, or pluck-back, thy businesse there: whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

Shep. My businesse, Sir, is to the King.

Aut. What Advocate hast thou to him?

Shep. I know not, (and't like you.)

Clo. Advocate's the Court-word for a Pheazant: say you have none.

Shep. None, Sir: I have no Pheazant Cock, nor Hen.

Aut. How blessed are we, that are not simple men?
Yet Nature might have made me as these are,
Therefore I will not disdain.

Clo. This cannot be but a great Courtier.

Shep. His Garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomly.

Clo. He seems to be the more Noble in being fantastical: a great man, ile warrant; I know by the picking on's teeth.

Aut. The Farthel there? What's i'th' Farthel?
Wherefore that Box?

Shep. Sir, there lies such secrets in this Farthel and Box, which none must know but the King, and which he shall know within this hour, If I may come to th'speech of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why Sir?

Aut. The King is not at the Pallace, he is gone aboord a new Ship, to purge Melancholly, and ayr himself: for if thou bee'st capable of things serious, thou must know the King is full of grief.

Shep. So 'tis said (Sir:) about his Sonne that should have married a Shepheards daughter.

Aut. If that Shepheard be not in hand-fast, let him flye; the Curses he shall have, the Tortures he shall feel, will break the back of Man, the heart of Monster.

Clo. Think you so, Sir?

Aut. Not he alone shall suffer what Wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter; but those that are Jermain to him (though remov'd fifty times) shall all come under the Hangman: which, though it be great pitty, yet it is necessary. An old Sheep-whistling Rogue, a Ram-tender, to offer to have his Daughter come into grace? Some say he shall be ston'd: but that death is too soft for him (say I:) Draw our Throne into a Sheep-Coat? all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easie.

Clo. Ha's the old man ere a Son Sir (do you hear) and't likeyou, Sir.

Aut. He ha's a Son: who shall be flay'd alive, then 'nointed over with honey, set on the Head of a Wasps Nest, then stand till he be three quarters and a dram dead; then recover'd again with Aqua-vitæ, or some other hot Infusion: then, raw as he is (& in the hottest day Prognostication proclaimes) shall he be set against a Brick-wall (the Sunne looking with a South-ward eye upon him; where he is to behold him, with Flies blown to death.) But what talk we of these Traitorly-Rascals, whose miseries are to be smil'd at, their offences being so capital?

Tell

Tell me (for you seem to be honest plain men) what you have to the King: being something gently consider'd, Ile bring you where he is aboord, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfes; and if it be in man, besides the King, to effect your Suits, here is a man shall do it.

Clo. He seems to be of great authority: close with him, give him Gold: and though authority be a stubborn Bear, yet he is oft led by the Nose with Gold: shew the in-side of your Purse to the out-side of his hand, and no more adoe. Remember ston'd and flay'd alive.

Shep. And't please you (Sir) to undertake the business for us, here is that Gold I have: Ile make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawn till I bring it you.

Aut. After I have done what I promised?

Shep. I Sir.

Aut. Well, give me the moity: are you a party in this business?

Clo. In some sort, Sir,: but though my case be a pittiful one, I hope I shall not be flay'd out of it.

Aut. Oh that's the case of the Shepheards Sonne: hang him, he'l be made an example.

Clo. Comfort, good comfort: We must to the King, and shew our strange sights: he must know 'tis none of your Daughter, nor my Sister: we are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man do's, when the business is performed, and remain (as he saies) your pawn till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you, walk before toward the Sea-side, goe on the right hand, I will but look upon the Hedge, and follow you.

Clo. We are bless'd, in this man: as I may say, even bless'd.

Shep. Let's before, as he bids us: he was provided to do us good. Exeunt.

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, I see Fortune would not suffer me: she drops Booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion: (gold, and a means to doe the Prince my Master good: which, who knows how that may turn back to my advancement?) I will bring these two Moales, these blind ones, aboard him. if he think it fit to shoare them again, and that the Complaint they have to the King, concerns him nothing, let him call me Rogue, for being so farre officious, for I am proof against that Title, and what shame else belongs too't: To him will I present them, there may be matter in it. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Leontes, Cleomines, Dion, Paulina, Servants Florizel, Perdita.

Cleo. Sir, you have done enough, and have perform'd
A Saint-like Sorrow: No fault could you make,
Which you have not redeem'd; indeed pay'd down
More penitence, then done trespass: at the last
Doe, as the Heavens have done; forget your evil,
With them, forgive your self.

Leo. Whilest I remember
Her and her vertues, I cannot forget
My blemishes in them, and so still think of
The wrong I did my self: which was so much,
That Heir-lesse it hath made my Kingdom, and
Destroy'd the sweet'st companion, that ere man
Bred his hopes out of, true.

Paul. Too true (my Lord:)
If one by one, you wedded all the world,
Or from the All that are, took something good,
To make a perfect woman; she you kill'd,
Would be unparallell'd.

Leo. I think so. Kill'd?
She I kill'd? I did so, but thou strik'st me
Sorely, to say I did, it is as bitter
Upon thy tongue, as in my thought. Now, good now,
Say so but seldom.

Cleo. Not at all, good Lady:
You might have spoken a thousand things, that would
Have done the time more benefit, and grac'd
Your kindnesse better.

Pau. You are one of those
Would have him wed again.

Dio. If you would not so,
You pitty not the State, nor the Remembrance
Of his most Soveraign Name: Consider little,
What dangers, by his Highnesse fail of Issue,
May drop upon his Kingdom, and devour
Incertain lookers on. What were more holy,
Then to rejoyce the former Queen is well?
What holyer, then for Royalties repair,
For present comfort, and for future good,
To bless the Bed of Majesty again
With a sweet fellow to't?

Paul. There is none worthy,
(Respecting her that's gone:) besides the Gods
Will have fulfill'd their secret purposes:
For has not the Divine Apollo said?
Is't not the tenor of his Oracle,
That King Leontes shall not have an Heir,
Till his lost Child be found? Which, that it shall,
Is all as monstrous to our humane reason,
As my Antigonus to break his Grave,
And come again to me: who, on my life,
Did perish with the Infant. 'Tis your Councel,
My Lord should to the Heavens be contrary,
Oppose against their wills. Care not for issue,
The Crown will find an Heir. Great Alexander
Left his to th'Worthiest: so his Successor
Was like to be the best.

Leo. Good Paulina,
Who hast the memory of Hermione
I know in honour: O, that ever I
Had squar'd me to thy Councell: then, even now,
I might have look'd upon my Queens full eies,
Have taken Treasure from her Lips.

Pau. And left them
More rich, for what they yielded.

Leo. Thou speak'st truth:
No more such wives, therefore no wife: one worse,
And better us'd, would make her Sainted Spirit
Again possesse her Corps, and on this Stage
(Where we offendors now appear) Soul-vext,
And begin, why to me;

Paul. Had she such power,
She had just cause.

Leo. She had, and would incense me
To murther her I married.

Paul.

Paul. I should so:
Were I the Ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you mark
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't
You chose her: then I'd shriek, that even your ears
Should rift to hear me, and the words that follow'd,
Should be, Remember mine.
Leo. Stars, Stars,
And all eyes else, dead coales: fear thou no Wife;
Ile have no Wife, Paulina.
Paul. Will you swear
Never to marry, but by my free leave?
Leo. Never (Paulina) so be blest my Spirit.
Paul. Then good my Lords, bear witness to his oath.
Cleo. You tempt him over-much.
Paul. Unless another,
As like Hermione, as is her picture,
Affront his eye.
Cleo. Good Madam, I have done.
Paul. Yet if my Lord will marry: if you will, Sir;
No remedy but you will: Give me the office
To chuse you a Queen: she shall not be so young
As was your former, but she shall be such
As (walk'd your first Queenes Ghost) it should take joy
To see her in your armes.
Leo. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidst us.
Paul. That
Shall be when your first Queen's again in breath:
Never till then.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. One that gives out himself Prince Florizel,
Son of Polixenes, with his Princess (she
The fairest I have yet beheld) desires access
To your high presence.
Leo. What with him? he comes not
Like to his Fathers Greatness: his approach
(So out of circumstance, and sudden) tells us,
'Tis not a Visitation fram'd, but forc'd
By need, and accident. What Trayn?
Ser. But few,
And those but mean.
Leo. His Princess (say you) with him?
Ser. I: the most peerless piece of Earth, I think,
That ere the Sun shone bright on.
Paul. Oh Hermione,
As every present Time doth boast it self
Above a better, gone; so must thy Grave
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you your self
Have said, and writ so; but your writing now
Is colder then that Theam: she had not been,
Nor was not to be equall'd, thus your Verse
Flow'd with her Beauty once, 'tis shrewdly ebb'd,
To say you have seen a better.
Ser. Pardon, Madam:
The one, I have almost forgot (your pardon:)
The other, when she has obtain'd your Eye,
Will have your Tongue too. This is a Creature,
Would she begin a Sect, might quench the zeal
Of all Professors else; make Proselytes
Of who she but bid follow.
Paul. How? not women?
Ser. Women will love her, that she is a woman
More worth then any Man: Men, that she is
The rarest of all Women.
Leo. Goe Cleomines,
Your self (assisted with your honour'd friends)
Bring them to our embracement. Still 'tis strange,
He thus should steal upon us. Exit.
Paul. Had our Prince,
(Jewel of Children) seen this hour, he had pay'd
Well with this Lord; there was not a full moneth
Between their births.
Leo. 'Prethee no more; cease: thou know'st,
He dies to me again, when talk'd-of: sure
When I shall see this Gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that, which may Unfurnish me of Reason. They are come.

Enter Florizel, Perdita, Cleomines, and others.

Your Mother was most true to wedlock, Prince,
For she did print your Royal Father off,
Conceiving you. Were I but twenty one,
Your Fathers Image is so hit in you,
(His very air) that I should call you Brother,
As I did him, and speak of something wildly
By us perform'd before. Most dearly welcome,
And your fair Princess (Goddess) oh: alas,
I lost a couple, that 'twixt Heaven and Earth
Might thus have stood, begetting wonder, as
You (gracious Couple) do: and then I lost
(All mine own Folly) the Society,
Amity too of your brave Father, whom
(Though bearing Misery) I desire my life
Once more to look on him.
Flo. By his command
Have I here touch'd Sicilia, and from him
Give you all greetings, that a King (as friend)
Can send his Brother: and but infirmity
(Which waits upon worn times) hath something seiz'd
His wish'd Ability, he had himself
The Lands and Waters, 'twixt your Throne and his
Measur'd, to look upon you; whom he loves
(He bad me say so) more then all the Scepters,
And those that bear them, living.
Leo. Oh my brother,
(Good Gentleman) the wrongs I have done thee, stirre
Afresh within me: and these thy offices
(So rarely kind) are as Interpreters
Of my behind-hand slackness. Welcome hither,
As is the Spring to th' Earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this Paragon to th' fearful usage
(At least ungentle) of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man, not worth her paines; much less,
Th' adventure of her person?
Flo. Good my Lord,
She came from Lybia.
Leo. Where the warlike Smalus,
That Noble honour'd Lord, is fear'd, and lov'd?
Flo. Most Royal Sir,
From thence: from him, whose Daughter
His Teares proclaim'd his parting with her: thence
(A prosperous South-wind friendly) we have cross'd,
To execute the Charge my Father gave me,
For visiting your Highness: my best Train
I have from your Sicilian Shores dismiss'd;
Who for Bohemia bend, to signifie
Not only my success in Lybia (sir)
But my arrival, and my Wifes, in safety
Here, where we are.
Leo. The blessed Gods
Purge all infection from our Ayr, whilest you
Do Climate here: you have a holy Father,
A graceful Gentleman, against whose person

(So

(So sacred as it is) I have done sin,
For which the Heavens (taking angry note)
Have left me Issue-less: and your Father's blest
(As he from Heaven merits it) with you,
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a Son and Daughter now have look'd on,
Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most Noble Sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you (great Sir)
Bohemia greets you from himself, by me:
Desires you to attach his Son, who has
(His Dignity, and Duty both cast off)
Fled from his Father, from his Hopes, and with A Shepheards Daughter.

Leo. Where's Bohemia? speak.

Lor. Here in your City: I now came from him.
I speak amazedly, and it becomes
My marvel, and my Message. To your Court
Whiles he was hastning (in the Chase, it seems,
Of this fair Couple) meets he on the way
The Father of this seeming Lady, and
Her Brother, having both their Countrey quitted,
With this young Prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me;
Whose honour, and whose honesty till now,
Endur'd all Weathers.

Lord. Lay't so to his charge:
He's with the King your Father.

Leo. Who? Camillo?

Lord. Camillo (Sir:) I spake with him: who now
Has these poor men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake: they kneel, they kiss the earth;
Forswear themselves as often as they speak:
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths, in death.

Per. Oh my poor Father:
The Heaven sets Spies upon us, will not have
Our Contract celebrated.

Leo. You are married?

Flo. We are not (Sir) nor are we like to be:
The Stars (I see) will kiss the Valleyes first:
The odds for high and low's alike.

Leo. My Lord,
Is this the Daughter of a King?

Flo. She is,
When once she is my Wife.

Leo. That once (I see) by your good Fathers speed,
Will come-on very slowly. I am sorry
(Most sorry) you have broken from his liking,
Where you were ty'd in duty: and as sorry,
Your choice is not so rich in Worth, as Beauty,
That you might well enjoy her.

Flo. Dear look up:
Though Fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase us, with my Father: power no jot
Hath she to change our Loves. Beseech you (Sir)
Remember, since you ow'd no more to Time
Then I do now: with thought of such Affections,
Step forth mine Advocate: at your request,
My Father will grant precious things, as Trifles.

Leo. Would he do so, I'ld beg your precious Mistris
Which he counts but a Trifle.

Paul. Sir (my Liege)
Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a moneth
'Fore your Queen di'd, she was more worth such gazes
Then what you look on now.

Leo. I thought of her,
Even in these Lookes I made. But your Petition
Is yet un-answer'd: I will to your Father:
Your Honour not o're-thrown by your desires,
I am friend to them, and you: upon which Errand
I now go toward him: therefore follow me,
And mark what way I make: Come good my Lord.

Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Antolichus, and a Gentleman.

Ant. Beseech you (Sir) were you present at this Relation?

Gent. 1. I was by at the opening of the Fardel, heard the old Shepherd deliver the manner how he found it: whereupon (after a little amazedness) we were all commanded out of the Chamber: only this (me thought) I heard the Shepherd say, he found the Child.

Ant. I would most gladly know the Issue of it.

Gen. 1. I make a broken delivery of the business: but the changes I perceived in the King and Camillo, were very Notes of admiration: they seem'd almost, with staring on one another, to tear the Cases of their Eyes. There was speech in their dumbness, Language in their very Gesture: they look'd as they had heard of a World ransom'd, or one destroyed: a notable passion of Wonder appeared in them: but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if th'importance were Joy, or Sorrow; but in the extremity of the one, it must needs be.

Enter another Gentleman.

Here comes a Gentleman, that happily knowes more:
The News, Rogero.

Gent. 2. Nothing but Bonfires: the Oracle is fulfill'd: the Kings Daughter is found: such a deal of wonder is broken out within this hour, that Ballad-makers cannot be able to expresse it. Enter another Gentleman.
Here comes the Lady Paulina's Steward, he can deliver you more. How goes it now (Sir?) This Newes (which is call'd true) is so like an old Tale, that the verity of it is in strong suspition: Has the King found his heir?

Gen. 3. Most true, if ever Truth were pregnant by Circumstance; That which you hear, you'l swear you see, there is such unity in the Proofes. The Mantle of Queen Hermiones: her Jewel about the Neck of it: the Letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his Character; the Majesty of the Creature, in resemblance of the Mother: the Affection of Nobleness, which Nature shewes above her Breeding, and many other Evidences, proclaim her, with all certainty, to be the Kings Daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two Kings?

Gent. 2. No.

Gent. 3. Then have you lost a Sight which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one Joy crown another, so and in such manner, that it seem'd Sorrow wept to take leave of them: for their Joy waded in tears. There was casting up of Eyes, holding up of hands, with Countenance of such distraction, that they were to be known by Garment, not by Favour.

Our

Our King being ready to leap out of himself, for joy of his found Daughter; as if that joy were now become a Losse, cries, Oh, thy Mother, thy Mother: then askes Bohemia forgiveneſſe, then embraces his Son-in-law: then again worreys he his Daughter, with clipping her. Now he thanks the old Shepheard (which ſtands by, like a weather-beaten Conduit, of many Kings Reigns.) I never heard of ſuch another encounter; which lames Report to follow it, and undo's deſcription to do it.

Gent. 2. What, 'pray you, became of Antigonus, that carryed hence the Child?

Gent. 3. Like an old Tale ſtill, which will have matter to rehearſe, though Credit be aſleep, and not an ear open; he was torn to pieces with a Bear: This avouches the Shepheards ſon, who his not only his innocence (which ſeems much) to juſtifie him, but a Handkerchief and Rings of his, that Paulina knows.

Gent. 1. What became of his Bark, and his Followers?

Gent. 3. Wrackt the ſame inſtant of their Maſters death, and in the view of the Shepheard: ſo that all the Inſtruments which aided to expoſe the Child, were even then loſt, when it was found. But oh the Noble combat, that 'twixt Joy and Sorrow was fought in Paulina. She had one Eye declin'd for the loſſe of her Husband, another elevated, that the Oracle was fulfill'd: She lifted the Princeſſe from the Earth, and ſo locks her in embracing, as if ſhe would pin her to her heart, that ſhe might no more be in danger of loſing.

Gent. 1. The Dignity of this Act was worth the audience of Kings and Princes, for by ſuch was it acted.

Gent. 3. One of the prettieſt touches of all, and that which angl'd for mine Eies (caught the water, though not the Fiſh) was, when at the Relation of the Queens death (with the manner how ſhe came to't, bravely confeſs'd, and lamented by the King) how attentiveneſſe wounded his Daughter, till (from one ſigne of dolour to another) ſhe did (with an Alas) I would fain ſay, bleed Tears; for I am ſure, my heart wept blood. Who was moſt Marble there changed colour: ſome ſwounded, all ſorrowed: if all the World could have ſeen't, the Woe had been univerſall.

Gent. 1. Are they returned to the Court?

Gent. 3. No: The Princeſſe hearing of her Mothers Statue (which is in the keeping of Paulina) a Piece many years in doing, and now newly perform'd, by that rare Italian Maſter, Julio Romano, who (had he himſelf eternity, and could but breath into his Work) would beguile Nature of her Cuſtom, ſo perfectly he is her Ape: He ſo neer to Hermione, hath done Hermione, that they ſay one would ſpeak to her, and ſtand in hope of anſwer. Thither (with all greedineſſe of affection) are they gone, and there they intend to Sup.

Gent. 2. I thought ſhe had ſome great matter there in hand, for ſhe hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever ſince the death of Hermione, viſited that removed houſe. Shall we thither, and with our company piece the rejoycing?

Gent. 1. Who would be thence, that has the benefit of acceſſe? every wink of an Eye, ſome new Grace will be born: our abſence makes us unthrifty to our Knowledge. Let's along. Exit.

Aut. Now (had I not the daſh of my former life in me) would Preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his Sonne aboard the Prince; told him, I heard them talk of a Farthell, and I know not what: but he at that time over-fond of the Shepheards daughter (ſo he then took her to be) who began to be much Sea-ſick, and himſelf little better, extremity of weather continuing, this Myſtery remained undiſcover'd. But 'tis all one to me: for had I been the finder-out of this ſecret, it would not have reliſh'd among my other diſcredits.

Enter Shepheard, and Clown.

Here come thoſe I have done good to againſt my will, and already appearing in the bloſſoms of their Fortune.

Shep. Come boy, I am paſt more Children: but thy Sonnes and Daughters will be all Gentlemen born.

Clow. You are well met (Sir;) you deny'd to fight with me this other day, becauſe I was no Gentleman born. See you theſe Clothes? ſay you ſee them not, and think me ſtill no Gentleman born: You were beſt ſay theſe Robes are not Gentlemen born. Give me the Lye: do: and try whether I am not now a Gentleman born.

Aut. I know you are now (Sir) a Gentleman born.

Clow. I, and have been ſo any time theſe four hours.

Shep. And ſo have I, Boy.

Clow. So you have: but I was a Gentleman born before my Father: for the Kings Sonne took me by the hand, and call'd me brother; and then the two Kings call'd my Father brother: and then the Prince (my brother) and the Princeſſe (my Siſter) call'd my Father, father; and ſo we wept: and there was the firſt Gentleman-like teares that ever we ſhed.

Shep. We may live (Sonne) to ſhed many more.

Clow. I: or elſe 'twere hard luck, being in ſo prepoſterous eſtate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beſeech you (Sir) to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your Worſhip, and to give me your good report to the Prince my Maſter.

Shep. 'Prethe Sonne do: for we muſt be gentle, now we are Gentlemen.

Clow. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. I, and it like your good Worſhip.

Clow. Give me thy hand: I will ſwear to the Prince, thou art as honeſt a true Fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shep. You may ſay it, but not ſwear it.

Clow. Not ſwear it, now I am a Gentleman? Let Boores and Francklins ſay it, Ile ſwear it.

Shep. How if it be falſe (Sonne?)

Clow. If it be ne're ſo falſe, a true Gentleman may ſwear it, in the behalf of his friend: And Ile ſwear to the Prince, thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunk: but I know thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk: but Ile ſwear it, and I would thou wouldſt be a tall Fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prove ſo (Sir) to my power.

Clow. I, by any means prove a tall Fellow: if I do not wonder how thou dar'ſt venture to be drunk, not being a tall Fellow, truſt me not. Harke, the Kings and the Princes (our Kindred) are going to ſee the Queens Picture. Come, follow us: wee'l be thy good Maſter. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Florizell, Perdita, Camillo, Paulina, Hermione (like a Statue:) Lords, &c.

Leo. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort
That I have had of thee?

Paul.

Paul. What (Soveraign Sir)
I did not well, I meant well: all my Services
You have paid home. But that you have vouchsaf'd
(With your Crown'd Brother, and these your contracted Heirs of your Kingdoms) my poor House to visit;
It is a furplus of your Grace, which never
My life may last to answer.
Leo. O Paulina,
We honour you with trouble: but we came
To see the Statue of our Queen. Your Gallery
Have we pass'd through, not without much content
In many singularities; but we saw not
That which my Daughter came to look upon,
The Statue of her Mother.
Paul. As she liv'd Peerlesse,
So her dead likenesse I do well beleeve
Excells what ever yet you look'd upon,
Or hand of Man hath done: therefore I keep it
Lovely, apart. But here it is: prepare
To see the life as lively mock'd, as ever
Still Sleep mock'd death: behold, and say 'tis well.
I like your silence, it the more shews off
Your wonder: but yet speak, first you (my Liege)
Comes it not something neer?
Leo. Her natural Posture.
Chide me (dear Stone) that I may say indeed
Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art she,
In thy not chiding: for she was as tender
As infancy, and Grace. But yet (Paulina)
Hermione was not so much wrinkled, nothing
So aged as this seems.
Pol. Oh, not by much.
Paul. So much the more our Carvers excellence.
Which lets go-by some sixteen years, and makes her
As she liv'd now.
Leo. As now she might have done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is
Now piercing to my soul. Oh, thus she stood,
Even with such Life of Majesty (warm Life,
As now it coldly stands) when first I woo'd her.
I am asham'd: Do's not the Stone rebuke me,
For being more Stone then it? Oh Royal Peece:
There's Magick in thy Majesty, which has
My evils conjur'd to remembrance; and
From thy admiring Daughter took the Spirits,
Standing like Stone with thee.
Perd. And give me leave,
And do not say 'tis Superstition, that
I kneel, and then implore her Blessing. Lady,
Deer Queen, that ended when I but began,
Give me that hand of yours to kisse.
Paul. O, patience:
The Statue is but newly fix'd; the Colour's
Not dry.
Cam. My Lord, your Sorrow was too sore laid-on,
Which sixteen Winters cannot blow away,
So many Summers dry: scarce any Joy
Did ever so long live; no Sorrow,
But kill'd it self much sooner.
Pol. Deer my Brother,
Let him, that was the cause of this, have power
To take off so much grief from you, as he
Will peece up in himself.
Paul. Indeed my Lord,
If I had thought the sight of my poor Image
Would thus have wrought you (for the Stone is mine)
I'd not have you shew'd it.
Leo. Doe not draw the Curtain.
Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't: least your Fancy
May think anon, it moves.
Leo. Let be, let be,
Would I were dead, but that me thinks already.
(What was he that did make it?) See (my Lord)
Would you not deem it breath'd? and that those veins
Did verily bear blood?
Pol. Masterly done.
The very life seems warm upon her Lippe,
Leo. The fixure of her Eye has motion in't,
As we are mock'd with Art.
Paul. I'le draw the Curtain:
My Lord's almost so farre transported, that
He'l think anon it lives.
Leo. Oh sweet Paulina,
Make me to think so twenty years together:
No setled Senses of the World can match
The pleasure of that madnesse. Let's alone.
Paul. I am sorry (Sir) I have thus farre stirr'd you: but I could afflict you further.
Leo. Doe Paulina:
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any Cordiall comfort. Still me thinks
There is an ayre comes from her. What fine Chizzell
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kisse her.
Paul. Good my Lord forbear;
The ruddinesse upon her Lippe, is wet:
You'll marre it, if you kisse it; stain your own
With Oyly Painting: shall I draw the Curtain?
Leo. No: not these twenty years.
Perd. So long could I
Stand by, a looker-on.
Paul. Either forbear,
Quit presently the Chappell, or resolve you
For more amazement: if you can behold it,
Ile make the Statue move indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand: but then you'll think
(Which I protest against) I am assisted
By wicked Powers.
Leo. What you can make her do,
I am content to look on: what to speak,
I am content to hear: for 'tis as easie
To make her speak, as move.
Paul. It is requir'd
You doe awake your Faith: then, all stand still:
On: those that think it is unlawful Business
I am about, let them depart.
Leo. Proceed:
No foot shall stirre,
Paul. Musick; awake her: Strike:
'Tis time: descend: be Stone no more: approach:
Strike all that look upon with marvaile: Come:
Ile fill your Grave up: stirre, nay, come away:
Bequeath to death your numnesse: (for from him
Dear Life redeems you) you perceive she stirres;
Start not: her Actions shall be holy, as
You hear my spell is lawful: do not shun her,
Untill you see her dye again; for then
You kill her double: Nay, present your hand:
When she was young, you woo'd her: now in age,
Is she become the Suitor?
Leo. Oh she's warm:
If this be Magick, let it be an Art

Law-

Lawful as Eating.
Pol. She embraces him.
Cam. She hangs about his neck,
If ſhe pertain to life, let her ſpeak too:
Pol. I, and make it manifeſt where ſhe ha's liv'd,
Or how ſtoln from the dead?
Paul. That ſhe is living,
Were it but told you, ſhould be hooted at
Like an old Tale: but it appears ſhe lives,
Though yet ſhe ſpeak not. Mark a little while:
Pleaſe you to interpoſe (fair Madam) kneel,
And pray your Mothers bleſſing; turn good Lady,
Our Perdita is found.
Her. You gods look down,
And from your ſacred Viols poure your graces
Upon my Daughters head: Tell me (mine own)
Where haſt thou been preſerv'd? Where liv'd? How found
Thy Fathers Court? For thou ſhalt hear that I
Knowing by Paulina, that the Oracle
Gave hope thou waſt in being, have preſerv'd
My ſelf, to ſee the Iſſue.
Paul. There's time enough for that;
Leſt they deſire (upon this puſh) to trouble
Your joyes with like Relation. Go together
You precious winners all: your exultation
Partake to every one: I (an old Turtle)
Will wing me to ſome wither'd bough, and there
My Mate (that's never to be found again)
Lament till I am loſt.
Leo. O peace Paulina:
Thou ſhouldſt a husband take by my conſent,
As I by thine a Wife. This is a Match,
And made between's by Vowes. Thou haſt found mine,
But how, is to be queſtion'd: for I ſaw her
(As I thought) dead: and have (in vain) ſaid many
A prayer upon her grave. Ile not ſeek far
(For him, I partly know his mind) to find thee
An honourable husband. Come Camillo,
And take her by the hand: whoſe worth, and honeſty
Is richly noted: and here juſtified
By Us, a pair of Kings. Let's from this place.
What? look upon my Brother: both your pardons;
That ere I put between your holy lookes
My ill ſuſpition: This your Son-in-law,
And Son unto the King, whom heavens directing
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina,
Lead us from hence, where we may leiſurely
Each one demand, and anſwer to his part
Perform'd in this wide gap of Time, ſince firſt
Were diſſever'd. Haſtily lead away. Exeunt.

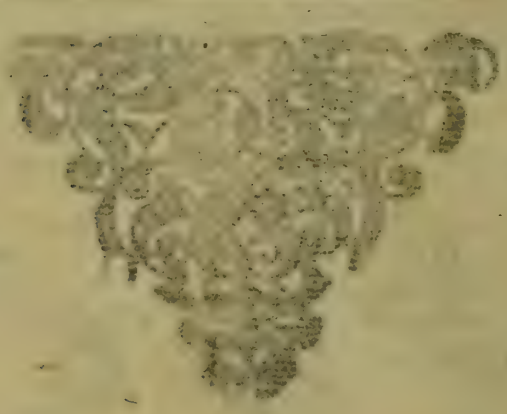
FINIS.



The Life and Death of King John.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King John, Queen Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, and Salisbury, with the Chattylion of France.

King John.

NOw say Chattylion, what would France with us?

Chat. Thus (after greeting) speaks the King of France.
In my behaviour to the Majesty,
The borrowed Majesty of England here.

Eli. A strange beginning: borrowed Majesty,

K. John. Silence (good Mother) hear the Embassie.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalf
Of thy deceased brother, Geffreys son,
Arthur Plantaganet layes most lawful claim
To this fair Island, and the Territories:
To Ireland, Poyctiers, Anjowe, Loraine, Maine,
Desiring thee to lay aside the sword
Which sways usurpingly these several Titles,
And put the same into young Arthurs hand,
Thy Nephew, and right Royal Soveraign.

K. Joh. What follows if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud controle of fierce and bloody warre,
To inforce these rights so forcibly withheld.

K. John. Here have we war for war, & blood for blood,
Controlement for controlement: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my Kings defiance from my mouth,
The farthest limit of my Embassie.

K. John. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace,
Be thou as lightning in the eies of France;
For ere thou canst report, I will be there;
The Thunder of my Canon shall be heard.
So hence: be thou the Trumpet of our wrath,
And sullen presage of your own decay:
An honorable conduct let him have,
Pembroke look to't: farewell Chattilion.

Exit Chat. and Pem.

Eli. What now my sonne, have I not ever said
How that ambitious Constance would not cease
Till she had kindled France and all the world,
Upon the right and party of her sonne?
This might have been prevented, and made whole
With very easie arguments of Love,
Which now the mannage of two kingdoms must
With fearful bloody issue arbitrate.

K. John. Our strong possession, and our right for us.

Eli. Your strong possession much more than your right
Or else it must go wrong with you and me,
So much my conscience whispers in your eare,
Which none but heaven, and you and I shall hear:

Enter a Sheriff.

Essex. My Liege, here is the strangest controversie
Come from the Countrey to be judg'd by you
That ere I heard, shall I produce the men?

K. John. Let them approach:
Our Abbies and our Priories shall pay
This expeditions charge. What men are you?

Enter Robert Faulconbridge and Philip.

Philip. Your faithful subject, I a Gentleman,
Born in Northamptonshire, and eldest son
As I suppose to Faulconbridge,
A Souldier by the Honour-giving-hand
Of Cordelion, Knighted in the field.

K. John. What art thou?

Robert. The son and heir to that same Faulconbridge.

K. John. Is that the elder, and art thou the Heyr?
You came not of one Mother then it seems.

Philip. Most certain of one Mother, mighty King,
That is well known, and as I think one father:
But for the certain knowledge of that truth,
I put you o're to heaven, and to my mother;
Of that I doubt, as all mens children may.

Eli. Out on thee rude man, thou dost shame thy mother,
And wound her honour with this diffidence.

Phil. I Madam? No? I have no reason for it,
That is my brothers plea, and none of mine,
The which if he can prove, a pops me out,
At least from fair five hundred pound a year:
Heaven guard my Mothers honour, and my Land.

K. John. A good blunt fellow: why being younger born
Doth he lay claim to thine inheritance?

Phil. I know not why, except to get the Land;
But once he slandered me with Bastardy:
But where I be as true begot or no,
That still I lay upon my mothers head,
But that I am as well begot my Liege
(Fair fall the bones that took the pains for me)
Compare our faces, and be judge your self
If old Sir Robert did beget us both,
And were our father, and this sonne like him;
O old Sir Robert father, on my knee
I give heaven thanks I was not like to thee.

K. John. Why what a mad-cap hath heaven lent us here?

Ele. He hath a trick of Cordelions face,
The accent of his tongue affecteth him:
Do you not read some tokens of my sonne
In the large composition of this man?

K. John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And finds them perfect Richard: sirrah speak,
What doth move you to claim your brothers Land?
Philip. Because he hath a half-face like my Father,
With half that face would he have all my Land,
A half-fac'd groat, five hundred pound a year?
Rob. My gracious Liege, when that my father liv'd,
Your brother did imploy my father much.
Phil. Well sir, by this you cannot get my Land,
Your tale must be how he imploy'd my Mother.
Rob. And once dispatch'd him in an Embassie
To Germany, there with the Emperour
To treat of high affairs touching that time:
Th'advantage of his absence took the King,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my fathers;
Where how he did prevail, I shame to speak:
But truth is truth, large lengths of Seas and Shores
Between my father, and my mother lay,
As I have heard my father speak himself
When this same lusty Gentleman was got:
Upon his death-bed he by Will bequeath'd
His lands to me, and took it on his death
That this my Mothers son was none of his;
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteen weeks before the course of time:
Then good my Liedge let me have what is mine,
My fathers Land, as was my fathers Will.
K. Joh. Sirra, your brother is Legittimate,
Your fathers wife did after wedlock bear him:
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lies on the hazzards of all Husbands
That marry wives: tell me, how if my brother
Who as you say, took pains to get this Son,
Had of your father claim'd this son for his,
Insooth, good friend, your father might have kept
This Calfe, bred from his Cow from all the world:
Insooth he might: then if he were my brothers,
My brother might not claim him, nor your father
Being none of his, refuse him: this concludes,
My Mothers son did get your Farhers heire,
Your Fathers heir must have your Fathers land.
Rob. Shall then my fathers Will be of no force.
To dispossesse that child which is not his?
Phil. Of no more force to dispossesse me Sir,
Then was his will to get me, as I think.
Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And like thy brother to enjoy thy Land:
Or the reputed son of Cordelion
Lord of thy presence, and no Land beside.
Bast. Madam, and if my brother had my shape
And I had his, Sir Roberts his like him,
And if my leggs were two such riding rods,
My armes, such Eele-skins stuft, my face so thin,
That in mine ear I durst not stick a Rose,
Lest men should say, look where three farthings goes,
And to his shape were heire to all this Land,
Would I might never stirre from off this place,
I would give it every foot to have this face:
I would not be sir nobbe in any case.
Eli. I like thee well: wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy Land to him, and follow me?
I am a Souldier, and now bound to France.
Bast. Brother, take you my Land, Ile take my chance;
Your face hath got five hundred pound a year,
Yet sell your face for five pence and 'tis dear.
Madam, Ile follow you unto the death.
Eli. Nay, I would have you go before me thither.
Bast. Our Countrey manners give our betters way.
K. John. What is thy name?
Bast. Philip my Liege, so is my name begun,
Philip, good old Sir Roberts wives eldest son.
K. John. From henceforth bear his name
Whose form thou beares:
Kneel thou down Philip, but rise more great,
Arise Sir Richard and Plantagenet.
Bast. Brother by th'mothers side, give me your hand,
My father gave me Honour, yours gave Land,
Now blessed be the hour by night or day
When I was got Sir Robert was away,
Eli. The very spirit of Plantagenet:
I am thy Grandame Richard, call me so.
Bast. Madam by chance, but not by truth, what tho;
Something about a little from the right,
In at the window, or else ore the hatch:
Who dares not stirre by day, must walk by night,
And have is have, however men do catch:
Neer or farr off, well wonne is still well shot,
And I am I, how ere I was begot.
K. John. Go Faulconbridge, now hast thou thy desire,
A Landlesse Knight, makes thee a Landed Squire:
Come Madam, and come Richard, we must speed
For France, for France, for it is more then need.
Bast. Brother adieu, good fortune come to thee,
For thou wast got i'th way of honesty.

Exeunt all but Bastard.

Bast. A foot of honour better then I was,
But many a many foot of Land the worse.
Well, now can I make any Ioane a Lady;
Good denne Sir Richard, Godamercy fellow,
And if his name be George, Ile call him Peter;
For new made honour doth forget mens names:
'Tis too respective, and too sociable
For your conversion, now your traveller,
He and his Tooth-pick, at my worships messe,
And when my Knightly stomack is suffis'd,
Why then I suck my teeth and Catechize
My picked man of Countreys: my dear sir,
Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin,
I shall beseech you; that is question now,
And then comes answer like an Absey-book:
O sir, says answer, at your best command,
At your employment, at your service sir:
No sir, says question, I sweet sir at yours,
And so ere answer knows what question would,
Saving in Dialogue of Complement,
And talking of the Alpes and Appenines,
The Pyrennean and the river Po,
It draws towards supper in conclusion so.
But this is worshipful society,
And fits the mounting spirit like my self;
For he is but a Bastard to the time
That doth not smoak of observation,
And so am I whether I smack or no;
And not alone in habit and device,
Exterior form, outward accoutrement;
But from the inward motion to deliver
Sweet, sweet, sweet poyson for the ages tooth,
Which though I will not practise to deceive,
Yet to avoid deceit I mean to learn;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising:
But who comes in such haste in riding Robes?

What

What woman post is this? hath she no Husband
That will take pains to blow a horn before her?
O me, 'tis my Mother: how now good Lady,
What brings you here to Court so hastily?

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and James Gurney.

Lady. Where is that slave thy Brother? where is he?
That holds in chase mine honour up and down.
Bast. My brother Robert, old Sir Roberts son:
Colbrand the Gyant that same mighty man,
Is it Sir Roberts son that you seek so?
Lady. Sir Roberts son, I thou unreverend boy,
Sir Roberts son, why scorn'st thou at Sir Robert?
He is Sir Roberts son, and so art thou.
Bast. James Gourney, wilt thou give us leave a while?
Gour. Good leave good Philip.
Bast. Philip, sparrow, James,
There's toys abroad, anon Ile tell thee more.
Exit James.
Madam, I was not old Sir Roberts Son,
Sir Robert might have eat his part in me
Upon good Friday, and ner'e broke his fast:
Sir Robert could do well, marry to confesse
Could get me, Sir Robert could not do it;
We know his handy-work, therefore good Mother
To whom am I beholding for these limbs?
Sir Robert never holp to make this legge.
Lady. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too,
That for thine own gain shouldst defend mine honour?
What means this scorn, thou most untoward knave?
Bast. Knight, Knight, good Mother, Basilisco-like.
What, I am dub'd, I have it on my shoulder:
But Mother, I am not Sir Roberts son,
I have disclaim'd Sir Robert and my Land,
Legitimation, name, and all is gone;
Then good my Mother, let me know my Father,
Some proper man I hope, who was it Mother?
Lady. Hast thou denyed thy self a Faulconbridge?
Bast. As faithfully as I deny the Devil.
Lady. King Richard Cordelian was thy Father,
By long and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make room for him in my Husbands bed:
Heaven lay not my transgression to my charge,
That art the issue of my dear offence
Which was so strongly urg'd past my defence.
Bast. Now by this light were I to get again,
Madam I would not wish a better father:
Some sins do bear their priviledge on earth,
And so doth yours: your fault was not your folly,
Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,
Subjected tribute to commanding love,
Against whose fury and unmatched force,
The awlesse Lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keep his Princely heart from Richards hand:
He that perforce robs Lions of their hearts,
May easily win a womans: aye my Mother,
With all my heart I thank thee for my father:
Who lives and dares but say, thou didst not well
When I was got, Ile send his soul to hell.
Come Lady I will shew thee to my kin,
And they shall say, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had been sin;
Who says it was, he lyes, I say 'twas not.

Exeunt.

Scæna secunda.

Enter before Angiers, Philip King of France, Lewis, Daulphin, Austria, Constance, Arthur.

Lewis. Before Angiers well met brave Austria,
Arthur that great forerunner of thy blood,
Richard that rob'd the Lion of his heart,
And fought the Holy warrs in Palestine,
By this brave Duke came early to his grave:
And for amends to his posterity,
At our importance hither is he come,
To spread his colours boy in thy behalf,
And to rebuke the usurpation
Of thy unnatural Uncle English Iohn,
Embrace him, love him, give him welcome hither.
Arth. God shall forgive you Cordelions death
The rather, that you give his off-spring life,
Shadowing their right under your wings of warre:
I give you welcome with a powerlesse hand,
But with a heart full of unstained Love,
Welcome before the gates of Angiers Duke.
Lewis. A noble boy, who would not do thee right?
Aust. Upon thy cheek lay I this zealous kisse,
As seal to this Indenture of my love:
That to my home I will no more return
Till Angiers and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,
Whose foot spurns back the Oceans roaring tides;
And coops from other Lands her Islanders,
Even till that England hedg'd in with the main,
That water-walled Bulwark, still secure
And confident from forrain purposes,
Even till that utmost corner of the West
Salute thee for her King, till then fair boy
Will I not think of home, but follow Arms.
Const. O take his Mothers thanks, a widdows thanks,
Till your strong hand shall help to give him strength,
To make a more requital to your love.
Aust. The peace of heaven is theirs that lift their swords
In such a just and charitable warre.
King. Well, then to work our Cannon shall be bent
Against the brows of this resisting town,
Call for our chiefest men of discipline,
To cull the plots of best advantages:
We'l lay before this Town our Royal bones,
Wade to the Market-place in French-mens blood,
But we will make it subject to this boy.
Const. Stay for an answer to your Embassie,
Least unadvis'd you stain your swords with blood:
My Lord Chattilion may from England bring
That right in peace which here we urge in warre,
And then we shall repent each drop of blood,
That hot rash haste so indirectly shed.

Enter Chattilion.

King. A wonder Lady; lo upon thy wish
Our Messenger Chattillion is arriv'd,
What England says, say briefly gentle Lord,
We coldly pause for thee, Chattillion speak.
Chat. Then turn your forces from this paltry siege,
And stirre them up against a mightier task:
England impatient of your just demands,
Hath put himself in Arms, the adverse winds

Whose leisure I have staid, have given him time
To Land his Legions all as soon as I:
His marches are expedient to this Town,
His forces strong, his souldiers confident:
With him along is come the Mother Queen,
An Ace stirring him to bloud and strife,
With her her Neece, the Lady Blanch of Spain,
With them a Bastard of the King deceas'd,
And all th'unsetled humours of the Land,
Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
With Ladies faces, and fierce Dragons spleens,
Have sold their fortunes at their native homes,
Bearing their birth-right proudly on their backs,
To make a hazzard of new fortunes here:
In brief, a braver choise of dauntlesse spirits
Then now the English bottoms have waft o're,
Did never float upon the swelling tide,
To do offence and scathe in Christendome:
The interruption of their churlish Drums
Cuts off more circumstance, they are at hand;
Drums beats.
To parly or to fight, therefore prepare.

King. How much unlook'd for, is this expedition,

Aust. By how much unexpected, by so much
We must awake endeavour for defence,
For courage mounteth with occasion,
Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter King of England, Bastard, Queen, Blanch, Pembrook, and others.

K. John. Peace be to France: if France in peace permit
Our just and lineal entrance to our own;
If not, bleed France, and peace ascend to Heaven.
Whiles we Gods wrathful agent do correct
Their proud contempt that beats his peace to Heaven.

Fran. Peace be to England, if that warre return
From France to England, there to live in peace:
England we love, and for that Englands sake,
With burden of our armour here we sweat:
This toyl of ours should be a work of thine,
But thou from loving England art so farre
That thou hast under-wrought his lawful King,
Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Out-faced Infant State, and done a rape
Upon the Maiden-vertue of the Crown:
Look here upon thy brother Geffreys face,
These eyes, these brows, were moulded out of his;
This little abstract doth contain that large,
Which died in Geffry: and the hand of time,
Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume:
That Geffry was thy elder brother born,
And this his son, England was Geffreys right,
And this is Geffreys in the Name of God:
How comes it then that thou art call'd a King,
When living blood doth in these Temples beat
Which owe the Crown that thou o're-maskerest?

K. John. From whom hast thou this great Commission
To draw my answer from thy Articles? (France,

Fra. From that supernal judge that stirs good thoughts
In any breast of strong authority,
To look into the blots and stains of right,
That judge hath made me guardian to this boy,
Under whose warrant I impeach thy wrong,
And by whose help I mean to chastise it.

K. Joh. Alack thou dost usurp authority.

Fran. Excuse it is to beat usurping down.

Queen. Who is it thou dost call usurper France?

Const. Let me make answer: thy usurping son,

Queen. Out insolent, thy Bastard shall be King,
That thou maist be a Queen and check the world.

Const. My bed was ever to thy Son as true
As thine was to thy Husband, and this boy
Liker in feature to his father Geffrey
Then thou and John, in manners being as like,
As rain to water, or devil to his damme.
My boy a bastard? by my soul I think
His father never was so true begot,
It cannot be, and if thou wert his mother.

Qu. There's a good mother boy, that blots thy father.

Const. There's a good Grandame boy
That would blot thee.

Aust. Peace.

Bast. Hear the Cryer.

Aust. What the devil art thou?

Bast. One that will play the devil sir with you,
And a may catch your hide and you alone:
You are the Hare of whom the Proverb goes
Whose valour plucks dead Lyons by the beard;
Ile smoak your skin-coat, and I catch you right,
Sirrah look to't, yfaith I will, yfaith.

Blan. O well did he become that Lyons robe,
That did disrobe the Lyon of that robe.

Bast. It lyes as sightly on the back of him
As great Alcides shooes upon an Asse:
But Asse, Ile take that burden from your back,
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders crack.

Aust. What cracker is this same that deafs our ears
With this abundance of superfluous breath?
King Lewis determine what we shall do strait.

Lew. Women and fools, break off your conference.
King John, this is the very summe of all:
England and Ireland, Angiers, Torain, Main,
In right of Arthur do I claim of thee:
Wilt thou resign them, and lay down thy Arms?

John. My life as soon: I do defie thee France.
Arthur of Britain, yield thee to my hand;
And out of my deer love Ile give thee more,
Then ere the coward hand of France can win;
Submit thee boy.

Queen. Come to thy Grandame child.

Const. Do child, go to it grandame child,
Give Grandame kingdom, and it Grandame will Give it a plum, a cherry and a figge,
There's a good Grandame.

Arthur. Good my mother peace,
I would that I were low laid in my grave,
I am not worth this coyl that's made for me. (weeps.

Qu. Mo. His Mother shames him so, poor boy he

Const. Now shame upon you where she does or no.
His Grandames wrongs, and not his Mothers shames
Draws those Heaven-moving pearls from his poor eyes,
Which heaven shall take in nature of a fee:
I, with these Cristall beads heaven shall be brib'd
To do him justice and revenge on you.

Qu. Thou monstrous slanderer of heaven and earth.

Const. Thou monstrous injurer of heaven and earth,
Call not me slanderer, thou and thine usurp
The Domination, Royalties and Rights
Of this oppressed boy; this is thy eldest sons son,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee;

Thy

Thy ſins are viſited in this poor child,
The Canon of the Law is laid on him,
Being but the ſecond generation
Removed from thy ſin-conceiving womb.
Iohn. Bedlam have done.
Conſt. I have but this to ſay,
That he is not only plagued for her ſin,
But God hath made her ſin and her, the plague
On this removed iſſue, plagued for her,
And with her plague her ſin: his injury
Her injury the Beadle to her ſin,
All puniſh'd in the perſon of this child,
And all for her, a plague upon her.
Que. Thou unadviſed ſcold, I can produce
A Will, that barrs the title of thy ſon.
Conſt. I who doubts that, a Will: a wicked will,
A womans will, a cankered Grandames will.
Fran. Peace Lady, pauſe, or be more temperate,
It ill beſeems this preſence to cry ay me
To theſe ill tuned repetitions:
Some Trumpet ſummon hither to the walls
Theſe men of Angiers, let us hear them ſpeak,
Whoſe title they admit, Arthurs or Iohns.

Trumpet ſounds.
Enter a Citizen upon the walls.

Citi. Who is it that hath warn'd us to the walls?
Fran. 'Tis France, for England.
Iohn. England for it ſelf:
You men of Angiers, and my loving ſubjects.
Fran. You loving men of Angiers, Arthurs ſubjects,
Our Trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.
Iohn. For our advantage, therefore hear us firſt:
Theſe flags of France that are advanced here
Before the eye and proſpect of your Town,
Have hither march'd to your endamagement.
The Canons have their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to ſpit forth
Their Iron indignation 'gainſt your walls;
All preparation for a bloody ſiege
And mercileſs proceeding, by theſe French.
Comfort your Cities eyes, your winking gates:
And but for our approach, thoſe ſleeping ſtones,
That as a waſte doth girdle you about
By the compulſion of their ordinance,
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Had been diſhabited, and wide havock made
For bloody power to ruſh upon your peace,
But on the ſight of us your lawful King,
Who painfully with much expedient march
Have brought a counter-check before your gates,
To ſave unſcrach'd your Cities threatned cheeks:
Behold the French amaz'd vouchſafe a parle,
And now inſtead of bullets wrapt in fire
To make a ſhaking Feaver in your walls,
They ſhoot but calm words, folded up in ſmoak,
To make a faithleſſe error in your ears,
Which truſt accordingly kind Citizens,
And let us in. Your King, whoſe labour'd ſpirits
Fore-wearied in this action of ſwift ſpeed,
Craves harbourage within your City walls.
Fran. When I have ſaid, make anſwer to us both.
Loe in this right hand, whoſe protection
Is moſt divinely vow'd upon the right
Of him it holds, ſtands young Plantagenet,
Son to the elder brother of this man,
And King ore him, and all that he enjoyes:
For this down-troden equity, we tread
In warlike march, theſe greens before your Town,
Being no further enemy to you
Then the conſtraint of Hoſpitable zeal,
In the relief of this oppreſſed child,
Religiouſly provokes. Be pleaſed then
To pay that duty which you truly owe,
To him that owes it, namely, this young Prince,
And then our Arms, like to a muzled Bear,
Save in aſpect, hath all offence ſeal'd up:
Our Canons malice, vainly ſhall be ſpent
Againſt th'invulnerable clouds of Heaven,
And with a bleſſed, and un-vext retire,
With unhack'd ſwords, and Helmets all unbruiſ'd,
We will bear home that luſty blood again,
Which here we came to ſpout againſt your Town,
And leave your children, wives, and you in peace.
But if you fondly paſſe our proffer'd offer,
'Tis not the rounder of your old-fac'd walls,
Can hide you from our meſſengers of war,
Though all theſe Engliſh, and their diſcipline
Were harbour'd in their rude circumference:
Then tell us, Shall your City call us Lord,
In that behalf which we have challeng'd it?
Or ſhall we give the ſignal to our rage,
And ſtalk in blood to our poſſeſſion?
Citi. In brief we are the King of Englands ſubjects,
For him, and in his right, we hold this Town.
Iohn. Acknowledge then the King, and let me in.
Citi. That can we not: but he that proves the King
To him will we prove loyal, till that time
Have we ramm'd up our gates againſt the world.
Iohn. Doth not the Crown of England, prove the King?
And if not that, I bring you witneſſes
Twice fifteen thouſand hearts of Englands breed.
Baſt. Baſtards and elſe.
Iohn. To verifie our title with their lives.
Fran. As many and as well born bloods as thoſe.
Baſt. Some Baſtards too.
Fran. Stand in his face to contradict his claim.
Citi. Till you compound whoſe right is worthieſt,
We for the worthieſt hold the right from both.
Iohn. Then God forgive the ſin of all thoſe ſouls,
That to their everlaſting reſidence,
Before the dew of evening fall ſhall fleet
In dreadful trial of our Kingdoms King.
Fran. Amen, Amen, mount Chevaliers to Arms.
Baſt. Saint George that ſwindg'd the Dragon,
And ere ſince ſits on's horſeback at mine Hoſteſſe door,
Teach us ſome fence. Sirrah, were I at home
At your den ſirrah, with your Lyonneſſe,
I would ſet an Ox-head to your Lyons hide:
And make a monſter of you,
Auſt. Peace no more.
Baſt. O tremble: for you hear the Lyon roar.
Iohn. Up higher to the plain, where we'l ſet forth
In beſt appointment all our Regiments.
Baſt. Speed then to take advantage of the field.
Fran. It ſhall be ſo, and at the other hill
Command the reſt to ſtand. God and our right. Exeunt.

Here after excurſions, enter the Herald of France
with Trumpets to the gates.

F. Her. You men of Angiers open wide your gates,
And let young Arthur Duke of Britain in,

Who by the hand of France, this day hath made
Much work for tears in many an Engliſh Mother,
Whoſe ſons lye ſcattered on the bleeding ground:
Many a widdows Husband groveling lyes,
Coldly embracing the diſcoloured earth,
And victory with little loſſe doth play
Upon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand triumphantly diſplayed
To enter Conquerors, and to proclaim
Arthur of Britain, Englands King, and yours.

Enter Engliſh Herald with Trumpet.

E. Har. Rejoyce you men of Angiers, ring your bels,
King Iohn, your King and Englands, doth approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day,
Their Armours that march'd hence ſo ſilver bright,
Hither return all gilt with Frenchmens blood:
There ſtuck no plume in any Engliſh Creſt,
That is removed by a ſtaffe of France.
Our colours do return in thoſe ſame hands
That did diſplay them when we firſt marcht forth
And like a jolly troop of Huntſmen come
Our luſty Engliſh, all with purpled hands,
Dide in the dying ſlaughter of their foes.
Open your gates, and give the victors way.

Hub. Heralds, from off our towers we might behold
From firſt to laſt, the on-ſet and retire,
Of both your Armies, whoſe equality
By our beſt eyes cannot be cenſured: (blows:
Blood hath bought blood, and blows have anſwered
Strength match with ſtrength, and power confronted power.
Both are alike, and both alike we like:
One muſt prove greateſt. While they weigh ſo even,
We hold our Town for neither: yet for both.

Enter the two Kings with their powers at ſeveral doors.

Iohn. France, haſt thou yet more blood to caſt away?
Say, ſhall the currant of our right run on,
Whoſe paſſage vext with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channel, and ore-ſwell
With courſe diſturb'd even thy confining ſhores,
Unleſſe thou let his ſilver Water, keep
A peaceful progreſſe to the Ocean.

Fran. England thou haſt not ſav'd one drop of blood
In this hot trial more than we of France.
Rather loſt more. And by this hand I ſwear
That ſways the earth this Climat over-looks,
Before we will lay down our juſt born Arms,
We'l put thee down, 'gainſt whom theſe Arms we bear,
Or add a royal number to the dead:
Gracing the ſcroul that tells of this wars loſſe,
With ſlaughter coupled to the name of Kings.

Baſt. Ha Majeſty: how high thy glory towers,
When the rich blood of Kings is ſet on fire:
Oh now doth death line his dead chaps with ſteel,
The ſwords of Souldiers are his teeth, his phangs,
And now he feaſts, mouſing the fleſh of men
In undetermin'd differences of Kings.
Why ſtand theſe royall fronts amazed thus:
Cry havock Kings, back to the ſtained field
You equal Potents, fiery kindled ſpirits,
Then let confuſion of one part confirm
The others peace: till then, blows, blood, and death.

Iohn. Whoſe party do the Townſmen yet admit?

Fran. Speak Citizens for England, who's your King.

Hub. The King of England, when we know the King.

Fran. Know him in us, that here hold up his right.

Iohn. In us, that are our own great Deputy,
And bear poſſeſſion of our Perſon here,
Lord of our preſence Angiers, and if you.

Fran. A greater power than We denies all this,
And till it be undoubted, we do lock
Our former ſcruple in our ſtrong barr'd gates:
Kings of our fear, until our fears reſolv'd
Be by ſome certain King purg'd and depoſ'd.

Baſt. By heaven, theſe ſcroyles of Angiers flout you
And ſtand ſecurely on their battlements, (Kings
As in a Theater, whence they gape and point,
At your induſtrious Scenes and acts of death.
Your Royal preſences be rul'd by me,
Do like the Mutines of Ieruſalem,
Be friends a while, and both conjoyntly bend,
Your ſharpeſt deeds of malice on this Town.
By Eaſt and Weſt let France and England mount
Their battering Canon charged to the mouths,
Till their ſoul-fearing clamours have braul'd down
The flinty ribs of this contemptuous City,
I'de play inceſſantly upon theſe Jades,
Even till unfenced deſolation
Leave them as naked as the vulgar Air:
That done, diſſever your united ſtrengths,
And part your mingled colours once again,
Turn face to face, and bloody point to point:
Then in a moment Fortune ſhall cull forth
Out of one ſide her happy Minion.
To whom in favour ſhe ſhall give the day,
And kiſſe him with a glorious victory:
How like you this wild counſel mighty States,
Smacks it not ſomething of the policy?

Iohn. Now by the Sky that hangs above our heads,
I like it well. France, ſhall we knit our powers,
And lay this Angiers even with the ground,
Then after fight who ſhall be King of it?

Baſt. And if thou haſt the mettle of a King,
Being wrong'd as we are by this peeviſh Town:
Turn thou the mouth of thy Artillery,
As we will ours, againſt theſe ſaucy walls,
And when that we have daſh'd them to the ground,
Why then defie each other, and pell-mell,
Make work upon our ſelves for heaven or hell.

Fran. Let it be ſo: ſay, where will you aſſault?

Iohn. We from the Weſt will ſend deſtruction
Into this Cities boſom.

Auſt. I from the North.

Fran. Our Thunder from the South,
Shall rain their drift of bullets on this Town,

Baſt. O prudent diſcipline! From North to South:
Auſtria and France ſhoot in each others mouth,
Ile ſtirr them to it: come, away, away.

Hub. Hear us great Kings, vouchſafe awhile to ſtay
And I ſhall ſhew you peace, and fair fac'd league:
Win you this City without ſtroak, or wound,
Reſcue thoſe Breathing lives to dye in beds,
That here come ſacrifices for the field.
Perſevere not, but hear me mighty Kings.

Iohn. Speak on with favour, we are bent to hear.

Hub. That daughter there of Spain, the Lady Blanch
Is neer to England, look upon the years
Of Lewis the Dolphin, and that lovely maid.
If luſty love ſhould go in queſt of beauty,

Where

Where ſhould he find it faiter, than in Blanch:
If zealous Love go in ſearch of vertue,
Where ſhould he find it purer than in Blanch?
If Love ambitious, ſought a match of birth,
Whoſe veins bound richer blood then Lady Blanch?
Such as ſhe is, in beauty, vertue, birth,
Is the young Dolphin every way compleat,
If not compleat of, ſay he is not ſhe,
And ſhe again wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not, that ſhe is not he:
He is the half part of a bleſſed man,
Left to be finiſhed by ſuch as ſhe,
And ſhe a fair divided excellence,
Whoſe fulneſſe of perfection lies in him.
O two ſuch ſilver Currents when they joyn,
Do glorifie the banks that bound them in:
And two ſuch ſhores, to two ſuch ſtreams made one,
Two ſuch controlling bounds ſhall you be, Kings,
To theſe two Princes, if you marry them:
This union ſhall do more than battery can,
To our faſt cloſed gates: for at this match,
With ſwifter ſpleen than powder can enforce,
The mouth of paſſage ſhall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance: but without this match,
The Sea enraged is not halfe ſo deaf,
Lyons more confident, Mountains and Rocks,
More free from Motion, no not death himſelf
In mortall fury half ſo peremptory,
As we to keep this City.

Baſt. Here's a ſtay,
That ſhakes the rotten carkaſſe of old death
Out of his raggs. Here's a large mouth indeed,
That ſpits forth death, and Mountains, Rocks, and Seas,
Talks as familiarly of roaring Lyons,
As Maids of thirteen do of Puppi-dogs.
What Cannoneer begot this luſty blood,
He ſpeaks plain Cannon fire, and ſmoak, and bounce,
He gives the Baſtinado with his tongue:
Our ears are cudgel'd, not a word of his
But buffets better than a fiſt of France
Zounds I was never ſo bethumpt with words,
Since I firſt call'd my brothers father Dad.

Old Qu. Son, liſt to this conjunction, make this match,
Give with our Neece a dowry large enough,
For by this knot, thou ſhalt ſo ſurely tye,
Thy now unſur'd aſſurance to the Crown,
That you green Boy ſhall have no Sun to ripe,
The bloom that promiſeth a mighty fruit,
I ſee a yeelding in the looks of France:
Mark how they whiſper, urge them while their ſouls
Are capable of this ambition,
Leaſt zeal now melted by the windy breath
Of ſoft petitions, pity and remorſe,
Cool and congeal again to what it was.

Hub. Why anſwer not the double Majeſties,
This friendly Treaty of our threatned Town?

Fra. Speak England firſt, that hath been forward firſt,
To ſpeak unto this City: what ſay you?

Iohn. If that the Dolphin there thy Princely ſonne.
Can in this book of beauty read, I love:
Her Dowry ſhall weigh equal with the Queen,
For Angiers, and fair Torain, Main, Poyctiers,
And all that we upon this ſide the Sea,
(Except this City now by us beſieg'd)
Find liable to our Crown and dignity,
Shall gild her bridall bed and make her rich
In titles, honours, and promotions,
As ſhe in beauty, education, blood,
Holds hands with any Princeſſe of the world.

Fra. What ſay'ſt thou Boy? look in the Ladies face.

Dol. I do my Lord, and in her eye I find,
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The ſhadow of my ſelf form'd in her eye,
Which being but the ſhadow of your ſon,
Becomes a ſon, and makes your ſon a ſhadow:
I do proteſt I never lov'd my ſelf
Till now, infixed I beheld my ſelf,
Drawn in the flattering Table of her eye.

Whiſpers with Blanch.

Baſt. Drawn in the flattering Table of her eye,
Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
And quarter'd in her heart, he doth eſpie
Himſelf Loves traitor, this is pity now:
That hang'd and drawn, and quarter'd there ſhould be,
In ſuch a Love, ſo vile a Lout as he.

Blan. My Uncles will in this reſpect is mine.
If he ſee ought in you that makes him like,
That any thing he ſees which moves his liking
I can with eaſe tranſlate it to my will:
Or if you will, to ſpeak more properly,
I will enforce it eaſily to my love.
Further I will not flatter you my Lord,
That all I ſee in you is worthy Love,
Than this, that nothing do I ſee in you,
Though churliſh thoughts themſelves ſhould be your Judge,
That I can find, ſhould merit any hate.

Iohn. What ſay theſe young-ones? What ſay you my Neece?

Blan. That ſhe is bound in honour ſtill to doe
What you in wiſdom ſtill vouchſafe to ſay.

Iohn. Speak then Prince Dolphin, can you love this Lady?

Dol. Nay aske me if I can refrain from love,
For I do love her moſt unfeinedly.

Iohn. Then do I give Volqueſſen, Torain, Main, Poyctiers, and Anjow, theſe five Provinces
With her to thee, and this addition more,
Full thirty thouſand Marks of Engliſh coyn;
Philip of France, if thou be pleaſ'd withall,
Command thy ſon and daughter to joyn hands.

Fran. It likes us well young Princes: cloſe your hands.

Auſt. And your lips too, for I am well aſſur'd,
That I did ſo, when I was firſt aſſur'd.

Fran. Now Citizens of Angiers ope your gates,
Let in that amity which you have made,
For at Saint Maries Chappell preſently.
The rights of marriage ſhall be ſolemniz'd.
Is not the Lady Conſtance in this troop?
I know ſhe is not, for this match made up,
Her preſence would have interrupted much,
Where is ſhe and her ſon, tell me, who knows?

Dol. She is ſad and paſſionate at your Highneſſe Tent.

Fran. And by my faith, this league that we have made,
Will give her ſadneſſe very little cure:
Brother of England, how may we content
This widdow Lady? in her right we came,
Which we God knows, have turned another way,
To our own vantage.

Iohn. We will heal up all,
For we'l create young Arthur Duke of Britain
And Earl of Richmond, and this rich fair Town

We make him Lord of. Call the Lady Conſtance,
Some ſpeedy Meſſenger bid her repair
To our ſolemnity: I truſt we ſhall,
(If not fill up the meaſure of her will)
Yet in ſome meaſure ſatisfie her ſo,
That we ſhall ſtop her exclamation.
Go we as well as haſte will ſuffer us,
To this unlook'd for unprepared pomp. Exeunt.

Baſt. Mad world, mad kings, mad compoſition;
John to ſtop Arthurs Title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part,
And France, whoſe Armour Conſcience buckled on,
Whom zeal and charity brought to the field,
As Gods own ſouldier, rounded in the ear
With that ſame purpoſe-changer, that ſlye divel,
That broker, that ſtill breaks the pate of faith,
That daily break-vow, he that winns of all,
Of kings, of beggars, old men, young men, maids,
Who having no external thing to loſe,
But the word Maid, cheats the poor Maid of that.
That ſmooth-fac'd Gentleman, tickling commodity,
Commodity, the byas of the world,
The world, who of it ſelf is peyſed well,
Made to run even, upon even ground:
Till this advantage, this vile drawing byas,
This ſway of motion, this commodity,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpoſe, courſe, intent.
And this ſame byas, this commodity,
This Bawd, this Broker, that all-changing-world,
Clap'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawn him from his own determin'd ayd,
From a reſolv'd and honorable warre.
To a moſt baſe and vile concluded peace.
And why rail I on this commodity?
But for becauſe he hath not wooed me yet:
Not that I have the power to clutch my hand,
When his fair Angels would ſalute my palm,
But for my hand, as unattempted yet,
Like a poor beggar, raileth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a beggar, I will rail,
And ſay there is no ſin but to be rich,
And being rich my vertue then ſhall be,
To ſay there is no vice, but beggary:
Since Kings break faith upon commodity
Gain be my Lord, for I will worſhip thee. Exit.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Conſtance. Arthur, and Salisbury.

Conſt. Gone to be married? gone to ſwear a peace?
Falſe blood to falſe blood joyn'd. Gone to be friends?
Shall Lewis have Blaunch, and Blaunch thoſe provinces?
It is not ſo, thou haſt miſpoke, miſheard,
Be well adviſ'd, tell ore thy tale again.
It cannot be, thou doſt but ſay 'tis ſo.
I truſt I may not truſt thee, for thy word
Is but the vain breath of a common man:
Beleeve me, I do not beleeve thee man,
I have a Kings oath to the contrary.
Thou ſhalt be puniſh'd for thus frighting me,
For I am ſick, and capable of fears.
Oppreſt with wrongs, and therefore full of fears,
A widdow, Husbandleſs, ſubject to fears,
A woman naturally born to fears;
And though thou now confeſſe thou didſt but jeſt
With my vext ſpirits, I cannot take a Truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What doſt thou mean by ſhaking of thy head?
Why doſt thou look ſo ſadly on my ſon?
What means that hand upon that breaſt of thine?
Why holds thine eye that lamentable rheume,
Like a proud River peering ore his bounds?
Be theſe ſad ſignes confirmers of thy words?
Then ſpeak again; not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true as I beleeve you think them falſe,
That give you cauſe to prove my ſaying true.

Conſt. Oh if thou teach me to beleeve this ſorrow,
Teach thou this ſorrow, how to make me dye,
And let beleef, and life encounter ſo,
As doth the fury of two deſperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall and dye.
Lewis marry Blaunch? O boy, then where art thou?
France friend with England, what becomes of me?
Fellow be gone: I cannot brook thy ſight,
This news hath made thee a moſt ugly man.

Sal. What other harm have I good Lady done,
But ſpoke the harm, that is by others done?

Conſt. Which harm within it ſelf ſo hainous is,
As it makes harmfull all that ſpeak of it.

Arthur. I do beſeech you Madam be content.

Conſt. If thou that bidſt me be content, wert grim
Ugly, and ſlandrous to thy Mothers womb,
Full of unpleaſing blots, and ſightleſſe ſtains,
Lame, fooliſh, crooked, ſwart, prodigious,
Patch'd with foul Moles, and eye-offending marks,
I would not care, I then would be content,
For then I ſhould not love thee: no, nor thou
Become thy great birth, nor deſerve a Crown.
But thou art fair, and at thy birth (dear boy)
Nature and Fortune joyn'd to make thee great.
Of Natures gifts, thou maiſt with Lillies boaſt,
And with the halfe blown Roſe. But Fortune, oh,
She is corrupted, chang'd, and wonn from thee,
Sh'adulterates hourly with thine Uncle John
And with her golden hand hath pluckt on France
To tread down fair reſpect of Soveraignty,
And made his Majeſty the bawd to theirs.
France is a Bawd to Fortune, and king John,
That ſtrumpet Fortune, that uſurping John:
Tell me thou fellow, is not France forſworn?
Envenom him with words, or get thee gone,
And leave thoſe woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to under-bear.

Sal. Pardon me Madam,
I may not go without you to the Kings.

Conſt. Thou mayſt, thou ſhalt, I will not go with thee.
I will inſtruct my ſorrows to be proud,
For grief is proud, and makes his owner ſtoop;
To me and to the ſtate of my great grief,
Let Kings aſſemble: for my grief's ſo great,
That no ſupporter but the huge firm earth
Can hold it up: here I and ſorrows ſit,
Here is my Throne, bid Kings come bow to it.

Actus

Actus Tertius, Scæna prima.

Enter King John, France, Dolphin, Blanch Elianor, Philip, Austria, Constance.

Fran. 'Tis true (fair daughter) and this blessed day,
Ever in France shall be kept festival:
To solemnize this day the glorious Sunne
Stays in his course, and plays the Alchymist;
Turning with splendor of his precious eye
The meager cloddy earth to glittering gold:
The yearly course that brings this day about,
Shall never see it, but a holy day.

Const. A wicked day, and not a holy day.
What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done,
That it in golden letters should be set
Among the high tides in the Kalender?
Nay, rather turn this day out of the week,
This day of shame, oppression, perjury.
Or if it must stand still, let wives with child
Pray that their burthens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be crost:
But (on this day) let Sea-men fear no wrack,
No bargains break that are not this day made;
This day all things begun, come to ill end,
Yea, faith it self, to hollow falshood change.

Fran. By heaven Lady, you shall have no cause
To curse the fair proceedings of this day:
Have I not pawn'd to you my Majesty?

Const. You have beguil'd me with a counterfeit
Resembling Majesty, which being touch'd and try'd,
Proves valueless: you are forsworn, forsworn,
You came in Arms to spill mine enemies blood,
But now in Arms, you strengthen it with yours.
The grapling vigor, and rough frown of warre
Is cold in amity, and painted peace,
And our oppression hath made up this league:
Arme, arme, you heavens, against these perjur'd Kings,
A widdow cries, be Husband to me (Heavens)
Let not the hours of this ungodly day
Wear out the days in peace: but ere Sun-set,
Set armed discord 'twixt these perjur'd Kings,
Hear me, Oh, hear me.

Aust. Lady Constance, peace.

Const. Warre, warre, no peace, peace is to me a warre:
O Lymoges, O Austria, thou dost shame
That bloudy spoil: thou slave, thou wretch, thou coward,
Thou little valiant, great in villany:
Thou ever strong upon the stronger side;
Thou Fortunes Champion, that dost never fight
But when her humourous Ladyship is by
To teach thee safety: thou art perjur'd too,
And soothst up greatness. What a fool art thou,
A ramping fool, to brag, and stamp, and swear,
Upon my party: thou cold blouded slave,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
Been sworn my souldier, bidding me depend
Upon thy starrs, thy fortune, and thy strength,
And dost thou now fall over to my foes?
Thou wear a Lyons hide? doff it for shame,
And hang a Calves skin on those recreant Limbs.

Aust. O that a man should speak those words to me.

Phil. And hang a Calves-skin on those recreant Limbs.

Aust. Thou dar'st not say so villain for thy life.

Phil. And hang a Calves-skin on those recreant Limbs.

John. We like not this, thou dost forget thy self.

Enter Pandulph.

Fran. Here comes the holy Legat of the Pope.

Pan. Hail you anointed deputies of Heaven;
To thee King John my holy errand is:
I Pandulph of fair Millane Cardinal,
And from Pope Innocent the Legate here,
Do in his name religiously demand
Why thou against the Church, our holy Mother,
So wilfully dost spurn, and force perforce
Keep Stephen Langton chosen Archbishop
Of Canterbury from that holy Sea:
This in our foresaid holy fathers name
Pope Innocent, I do demand of thee.

John. What earthy name to interrogatories
Can taste the free-breath of a sacred King?
Thou canst not (Cardinal) devise a name
So slight, unworthy, and ridiculous
To charge me to an answer, as the Pope:
Tell him this tale, and from the mouth of England,
Adde thus much more, that no Italian Priest
Shall tythe or toll in our Dominions:
But as we, under heaven, are supream head,
So under him that great Supremacy
Where we do Reign, we will alone uphold
Without th'assistance of a mortal hand:
So tell the Pope, all reverence set apart
To him and his usurp'd authority.

Fran. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.

John. Though you, and all the Kings of Christendome
Are led so grossely by this medling Priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out,
And by the merit of vile gold, drosse, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who in that sale sels pardon from himself:
Though you, and all the rest so grossely led,
This jugling witch-craft with revenue cherish,
Yet I alone, alone, do me oppose
Against the Pope, and count his friends my foes.

Pand. Then by the lawful power that I have,
Thou shalt stand curst, and excommunicate,
And blessed shall he be that doth revolt
From his Allegeance to an Heretique,
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canonized and worshipp'd as a Saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hateful life.

Const. O lawful let it be
That I have room with Rome to curse a while,
Good Father Cardinal, cry thou Amen
To my keen curses; for without my wrong
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.

Pan. There's Law and Warrant (Lady) for my curse.

Const. And for mine too, when Law can do no right.
Let it be lawful, that Law barre no wrong:
Law cannot give my child his kingdom here;
For he that holds his kingdom, holds the law;
Therefore since Law it self is perfect wrong,
How can the Law forbid my tongue to curse?

Pand. Philip of France, on peril of a curse,
Let go the hand of that Arch-heritique,
And raise the power of France upon his head,
Unless he do submit himself to Rome.

Elea. Look'st thou pale France? do not let go thy hand.

Const. Look to that devil, lest that France repent,

And

And by disjoyning hands hell lose a soul.
Aust. King Philip, listen to the Cardinal.
Bast. And hang a Calves-skin on his recreant Limbs,
Aust. Well Ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs
Because,
Bast. Your Breeches best may carry them.
John. Philip, what saist thou to the Cardinal?
Con. What should he say, but as the Cardinal?
Dolph. Bethink you father, for the difference
Is purchase of a heavy curse from Rome,
Or the light losse of England, for a friend:
Forgoe the easier.
Bla. That is the curse of Rome.
Con. O Lewis, stand fast, the devil tempts thee here
In likenesse of a new untrimmed Bride.
Bla. The Lady Constance speaks not from her faith,
But from her need.
Const. Oh, if thou grant my need,
Which onely lives but by the death of faith,
That need, must needs inferre this principle,
That faith would live again by death of need:
O then tread down my need, and faith mounts up:
Keep my need up, and faith is troden down.
John. The kind is moved, and answers not to this.
Const. O be remov'd from him, and answer well:
Aust. Do so king Philip, hang no more in doubt.
Bast. Hang nothing but a Calves-skin most sweet lout.
Fran. I am perplext, and know not what to say.
Pan. What canst thou say, but will perplex thee more?
If thou stand excommunicate, and curst?
Fran. Good reverend father, make my person yours,
And tell me how you would bestow your self?
This Royall hand, and mine are newly knit,
And the conjunction of our inward souls
Married in league, coupled and link'd together
With all Religious strength of sacred vows:
The latest breath that gave the sound of words,
Was deep-sworn faith, peace, amity, true love
Between our kingdoms and our Royal selves,
And even before this truce, but new before,
No longer than we well could wash our hands,
To clap this Royal bargain up of peace,
Heaven knows they were besmear'd and over-stain'd
With slaughters pencil; where revenge did paint
The fearful difference of incensed Kings:
And shall these hands so lately purg'd of blood?
So newly joyn'd in love? so strong in both,
Unyoke this seisure, and this kind regreet?
Play fast and loose with faith? so jest with heaven,
Make such unconstant children of our selves
As now again to snatch our palm from palm?
Un-swear faith sworn, and on the marriage bed
Of smiling peace to march a bloody Hoast,
And make a riot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O holy sir
My reverend father, let it not be so;
Out of your grace, devise, ordain, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be blest
To do your pleasure and continue friends.
Pand. All form is formlesse, Order orderlesse,
Save what is opposite to Englands love.
Therefore to Arms, be champion of our Church,
Or let the Church our Mother breath her curse,
A Mothers curse on her revolting son.
France, thou mayst hold a Serpent by the tongue,
A fasted Lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting Tyger safer by the tooth,
Than keep in peace that hand which thou dost hold.
Fran. I may dis-joyn my hand, but not my faith,
Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith,
And like a civil war setst oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O let thy vow
First made to Heaven, first be to Heaven perform'd,
That is, to be the Champion of our Church,
What since thou swor'st, is sworn against thy self,
And may not be performed by thy self,
For that which thou hast sworn to do amisse,
Is not amisse when it is truly done:
And being not done, where doing tends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it:
The better Act of purposes mistook,
Is to mistake again, though indirect,
Yet indirection thereby grows direct,
And falsehood, falsehood cures, as fire cools fire
Within the scorching veins of one new burn'd.
It is Religion that doth make vows kept,
But thou hast sworn against Religion:
By what thou swear'st, against the thing thou swear'st:
And mak'st an oath the surety for thy truth:
Against an oath the truth, thou art unsure
To swear, swears, only not to be forsworn,
Else what a mockery should it be to swear?
But thou dost swear, onely to be forsworn,
And most forsworn, to keep what thou dost swear,
Therefore thy latter vows, against thy first,
Is in thy self rebellion to thy self:
And better conquest never canst thou make,
Than arm thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy loose suggestions:
Upon which better part, our pray'rs come in
If thou vouchsafe them. But if not, then know
The peril of our curses light on thee
So heavy, as thou shalt not shake them off
But in despair, dye under their black weight.
Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion.
Bast. Wil't not be?
Will not a Calves-skin stop that mouth of thine?
Daul. Father, to Arms.
Blanch. Upon thy wedding day?
Against the blood that thou hast married?
What, shall our feast be kept with slaughtered men?
Shall braying Trumpets, and loud churlish Drums
Clamours of hell, be measures to our pomp?
O husband hear me: ay, alack, how new
Is Husband in my mouth? even for that name
Which till this time my tongue did nere pronounce;
Upon my knee I beg, go not to Arms
Against mine Uncle.
Const. O, upon my knee, made hard with kneeling,
I do pray to thee, thou vertuous Daulphin.
Alter not the doom fore-thought by heaven.
Blan. Now shall I see thy love, what motive may
Be stronger with thee, than the name of wife?
Const. That which upholdeth him, that thee upholds,
His honour. Oh thine honour, Lewis thine honour.
Dolph. I muse your Majesty doth seem so cold,
When such profound respects do pull you on?
Pand. I will denounce a curse upon his head.
Fra. Thou shalt not need. England, I will fall from thee.
Const. O fair return of banish'd Majesty.
Elea. O foul revolt of French inconstancy.
Eng. France, thou shalt rue this hour within this hour.

Bast.

Baſt. Old Time the Clock-ſetter, that bauld ſexton Time:
Is it as he will? well then, France ſhall rue.
Blan. The Sun's orecaſt with blood: fair day adieu,
Which is the ſide that I muſt go withall?
I am with both, each Army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whurle aſſunder, and diſmember me.
Husband, I cannot pray that thou maiſt winn:
Uncle, I needs muſt pray that thou maiſt loſe:
Father, I may not wiſh the fortune thine:
Grandame, I will not wiſh thy wiſhes thrive:
Who ever winnes, on that ſide ſhall I loſe:
Aſſured loſſe, before the match be plaid.
Dolph. Lady, with me, with me thy fortune lies.
Bla. There where my fortune lives, there my life dies.
John. Coſen, go draw our puiſſance together,
France, I am burn'd up with inflaming wrath,
A rage, whoſe heat hath this condition;
That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
The blood and deereſt valued blood of France.
Fran. Thy rage ſhall burn thee up, and thou ſhalt turne
To aſhes, ere our blood ſhall quench that fire:
Look to thy ſelf, thou art in jeopardy.
John. No more then he that threats. To Arms let's hie.

Exeunt

Scæna ſecunda.

Allarums, Excurſions: Enter Baſtard with Auſtria's head.

Baſt. Now by my life, this day grows wondrous hot,
Some ayery devil hovers in the skie,
And pour's down miſchief. Auſtrias head lye there,

Enter John, Arthur, Hubert.

While Philip breathes.
John. Hubert, keep this boy: Philip make up,
My Mother is aſſailed in our Tent,
And tane I fear.
Baſt. My Lord I reſcued her.
Her Highneſſe is in ſafety, fear you not:
But on my Liege for very little pains
Will bring this labour to an happy end. Exit.

Alarums, excurſions, Retreat. Enter John, Eleanor, Arthur, Baſtard, Hubert, Lords.

John. So ſhall it be: your grace ſhall ſtay behind
So ſtrongly guarded: Coſen, look not ſad,
Thy Grandame loves thee, and thy Unkle will
As deere be to thee, as thy father was.
Arth. O this will make my Mother die with grief.
John. Coſen, away for England, haſte before,
And ere our coming ſee thou ſhake the bags
Of hoarding Abbots, impriſoned Angels
Set at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
Muſt by the hungry now be fed upon:
Uſe our Commiſſion in his utmoſt force
Baſt. Bell, Book, and Candle, ſhall not drive me back,
When gold and ſilver becks me to come on.
I leave your Highneſſe: Grandame, I will pray
(If ever I remember to be holy)
For your fair ſafety; ſo I kiſſe your hand.
Ele. Farewell gentle Coſen.
John. Coz, farewell.
Ele. Come hither little kinſman, hark, a word,
John. Come hither Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much: within this wall of fleſh
There is a ſoul counts thee her Creditor,
And with advantage means to pay thy love:
And my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Lives in this boſom, dearly cheriſhed.
Give me thy hand, I had a thing to ſay,
But I will fit it with ſome better tune.
By heaven Hubert, I am almoſt aſham'd
To ſay what good reſpect I have of thee.
Hub. I am much bounden to your Majeſty.
John. Good friend, thou haſt no cauſe to ſay ſo yet;
But thou ſhalt have: and creep time nere ſo ſlow,
Yet it ſhall come for me to do thee good.
I had a thing to ſay, but let it go:
The Sun is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleaſures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gawdes.
To give me audience, if the midnight Bell
Did with his iron tongue, and brazen mouth
Sound on into the drowſie race of night:
If this ſame were a Church-yard where we ſtand,
And thou poſſeſſed with a thouſand wrongs:
Or if that ſurely ſpirit melancholy
Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy, thick,
Which elſe runs tickling up and down the veins,
Making that idiot laughter keep mens eies,
And ſtrain their cheeks to idle merriment,
A paſſion hateful to my purpoſes:
Or if that thou couldſt ſee me without eies,
Heare me without thine ears, and make reply
Without a tongue, uſing conceit alone,
Without eies, ears, and harmful ſound of words:
Then, in deſpight of brooded watchful day,
I would into thy boſom pour my thoughts:
But (ah) I will not, yet I love thee well,
And by my troth I think thou lov'ſt me well.
Hub. So well, that what you bid me undertake,
Though that my death were adjunct to my Act,
By heaven I would do it.
John. Do not I know thou wouldſt?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert throw thine eye
On yon young boy: Ile tell thee what my friend,
He is a very ſerpent in my way,
And whereſoere this foot of mine doth tread,
He lyes before me: doſt thou underſtand me?
Thou art his keeper.
Hub. And ile keep him ſo,
That he ſhall not offend your Majeſty.
John. Death.
Hub. My Lord.
John. A Grave.
Hub. He ſhall not live.
John. Enough.
I could be merry now, Hubert, I love thee.
Well, Ile not ſay what I intend for thee:
Remember: Madam, fare you well.
Ile ſend thoſe powers o're to your Majeſty.
Ele. My bleſſing go with thee.
John. For England Coſen, go.
Hubert ſhall be your man, to attend on you
With all true duty: on toward Callice hoa.

Exeunt.

Scæna

Scæna Tertia.

Enter France, Dolphin, Pandupho. Attendants.

Fran. So by a roaring Tempeſt on the flood,
A whole Armado of convicted ſaile
Is ſcattered and disjoyned from fellowſhip.
Pand. Courage and comfort, all ſhall yet go well.
Fran. What can go well, when we have run ſo ill?
Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers loſt?
Arthur tane priſoner? divers deer friends ſlain?
And bloody England into England gone,
Ore-bearing interruption ſpight of France?
Dol. What he hath wonne, that hath he fortified:
So hot a ſpeed, with ſuch advice diſpoſ'd,
Such temperate order in ſo fierce a cauſe,
Doth want example: who hath read, or heard
Of any kindred-action like to this?
Fran. Well could I bear that England had this praiſe,
So we could find ſome pattern of our ſhame.

Enter Conſtance.

Look who comes here? a grave unto a ſoul,
Holding th'eternal ſpirit againſt her will,
In the vilde priſon of afflicted breath:
I prethee Lady go away with me.
Conſt. Lo, now: now ſee the iſſue of your peace.
Fran. Patience good Lady, comfort gentle Conſtance.
Conſt. No, I defie all counſel, all redreſſe,
But that which ends all counſel, true redreſſe:
Death, death, O amiable, lovely death,
Thou odoriferous ſtench: ſound rottenneſſe,
Ariſe forth from the couch of laſting night,
Thou hate and terror to proſperity,
And I will kiſſe thy deteſtable bones.
And put my eyeballs in thy vaulty browes,
And ring theſe fingers with thy houſhold worms,
And ſtop this gap of breath with fulſome duſt,
And be a Carrion monſter like thy ſelf;
Come, grin on me, and I will think thou ſmil'ſt,
And buſſe thee as thy wife: Miſeries love,
O come to me,
Fran. O fair affliction, peace.
Conſt. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry:
O that my tongue were in the thunders mouth,
Then with a paſſion I would ſhake the world,
And rowze from ſleep that fell Anatomy
Which cannot hear a Ladys feeble voyce,
Which ſcorns a modern invocation.
Pand. Lady, you utter madneſſe, and not ſorrow.
Conſt. Thou art holy to bely me ſo,
I am not mad: this hair I tear is mine,
My name is Conſtance, I was Geffreys wife,
Young Arthur is my ſonne, and he is loſt:
I am not mad, I would to heaven I were,
For then 'tis like I ſhould forget my ſelf:
O, if I could, what grief ſhould I forget?
Preach ſome Philoſophy to make me mad,
And thou ſhalt be Canoniz'd (Cardinal)
For, being not mad, but ſenſible of grief,
My reaſonable part produces reaſon
How I may be deliver'd of theſe woes,
And teaches me to kill or hang my ſelf:
If I were mad, I ſhould forget my ſonne,
Or madly think a babe of clouts were he;
I am not mad: too well, too well I feel
The different plague of each calamity.
Fran. Bind up thoſe treſſes: O what love I note
In the fair multitude of thoſe her hairs;
Where but by chance a ſilver drop hath falne,
Even to that drop ten thouſand wiery fiends
Do glew themſelves in ſociable grief,
Like true, inſeparable, faithful Loves,
Sticking together in Calamity.
Conſt. To England, if you will.
Fran. Bind up your hairs.
Conſt. Yes that I will: and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their bonds, and cry'd aloud,
O, that theſe hands could ſo redeem my ſonne,
As they have given theſe hairs their liberty:
But now I envy at their liberty,
And will again commit them to their bonds,
Becauſe my poor child is a priſoner.
And father Cardinal, I have heard you ſay
That we ſhall ſee and know our friends in heaven:
If that be true, I ſhall ſee my boy again:
For ſince the birth of Cain, the firſt male-child
To him that did but yeſterday ſuſpire,
There was not ſuch a gracious creature borne:
But now will canker-ſorrow eat my bud,
And chaſe the native beauty from his cheek,
And he will look as hollow as a Ghoſt,
As dim and meager as an Agues fit,
And ſo he'l dye: and riſing ſo again,
When I ſhall meet him in the Court of Heaven
I ſhall not know him: therefore never, never
Muſt I behold my pretty Arthur more.
Pand. You hold too hainous a reſpect of grief.
Conſt. He talkes to me that never had a ſonne.
Fran. You are as fond of grief, as of your child.
Conſt. Grief fills the room up of my abſent child:
Lies in his bed, walks up and down with me,
Puts on his pretty looks, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffs out his vacant garments with his forme,
Then, have I reaſon to be fond of grief?
Fare you well: had you ſuch a loſſe as I,
I could give better comfort than you do.
I will not keep this forme upon my head,
When there is ſuch diſorder in my wit:
O Lord, my boy, my Arthur, my fair ſonne,
My life, my joy, my food, my all the world:
My widow-comfort, and my ſorrows cure. Exit.
Fran. I fear ſome outrage, and ile follow her. Exit.
Dol. There's nothing in this world can make me joy.
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull ear of a drowſie man;
And bitter ſhame hath ſpoil'd the ſweet words taſte,
That it yields nought but ſhame and bitterneſſe.
Pand. Before the curing of a ſtrong diſeaſe,
Even in the inſtant of repair and health,
The fit is ſtrongeſt: evils that take leave
On their departure, moſt of all ſhew evil:
What have you loſt by loſing of this day?
Dol. All dayes of glory, joy, and happineſſe.
Pand. If you had wonne it, certainly you had,
No, no: when Fortune means to men moſt good,
She looks upon them with a threatning eye:
'Tis ſtrange to think how much King John hath loſt
In this which he accounts ſo clearly wonne:

Are

Are not you griev'd that Arthur is his priſoner?
Dol. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.
Pand. Your mind is all as youthful as your blood.
Now hear me ſpeak with a prophetick ſpirit:
For even the breath of what I mean to ſpeak,
Shall blow each duſt, each ſtraw, each little rub
Out of the path which ſhall directly lead
Thy foot to Englands Throne. And therefore mark:
John hath ſeiz'd Arthur, and it cannot be,
That whiles warm life plays in that infants veins,
The miſplac'd-John ſhould entertain an hour,
Ore minute, nay one quiet breath of reſt.
A Scepter ſnatch'd with an unruly hand,
Muſt be as boyſterouſly maintain'd as gain'd.
And he that ſtands upon a ſlipp'ry place,
Makes nice of no vilde hold to ſtay him up:
That John may ſtand, then Arthur needs muſt fall,
So be it, for it cannot be but ſo.
Dol. But what ſhall I gain by young Arthurs fall?
Pand. You, in the right of Lady Blanch your wife,
May then make all the claim that Arthur did.
Dol. And loſe it, life and all, as Arthur did.
Pand. How green you are, and freſh in this old world?
John laies you plots: the times conſpire with you,
For he that ſteeps his ſafety in true blood,
Shall find but bloody ſafety and untrue.
This Act ſo evilly born ſhall cool the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze up their zeal,
That none ſo ſmall advantage ſhall ſtep forth
To check his reigne, but they will cheriſh it.
No natural exhalation in the skie,
No ſcope of Nature, no diſtemper'd day,
No common wind, no cuſtomed event,
But they will pluck away his natural cauſe,
And call them Meteors, prodigies, and ſignes,
Abortives, preſages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance upon John.
Dol. May be he will not touch young Arthurs life,
But hold himſelf ſafe in his priſonment.
Pand. O Sir, when he ſhall hear of your approach,
If that young Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that news he dies: and then the hearts
Of all his people ſhall revolt from him,
And kiſſe the lips of unacquainted change,
And pick ſtrong matter of revolt, and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers ends of John.
Me thinks I ſee this hurley all on foot;
And O, what better matter breeds for you,
Than I have nam'd. The baſtard Fauleonbridge
Is now in England ranſacking the Church,
Offending Charity: If but a dozen French
Were there in Arms, they would be as a Call
To train ten thouſand Engliſh to their ſide;
Or, as a little ſnow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a Mountain. O noble Dolphin,
Go with me to the King, 'tis wonderful,
What may be wrought out of their diſcontent,
Now that their ſouls are top full of offence,
For England go; I will whet on the King.
Dol. Strong reaſons makes ſtrong actions: let us go,
If you ſay I, the King will not ſay no. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Hubert and Executioners.

Hub. Heat me theſe Irons hot, and look thou ſtand
Within the Arras: when I ſtrike my foot
Upon the boſom of the ground, ruſh forth
And bind the boy, which you ſhall find with me
Faſt to the chair: be heedfull: hence and watch.
Exec. I hope your warrant will bear out the deed.
Hub. Uncleanly ſcruples fear not you: look to't,
Young Lad come forth; I have to ſay with you.

Enter Arthur.

Ar. Good morrow Hubert.
Hub. Good morrow little Prince.
Ar. As little Prince, having ſo great a Title
To be more Prince, as may be: you are ſad.
Hub. Indeed I have been merrier.
Ar. Mercy on me:
Me thinks no body ſhould be ſad but I:
Yet I remember, when I was in France
Young Gentlemen would be as ſad as night
Onely for wantonneſſe: by my Chriſtendome,
So I were out of priſon, and kept ſheep
I ſhould be as merry as the day is long:
And ſo I would be here, but that I doubt
My Uncle practiſes more harm to me:
He is afraid of me, and I of him:
Is it my fault that I was Geffreys ſon?
No indeed it's not, and I would to heaven
I were your ſon, ſo you would love me, Hubert:
Hub. If I talke to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my mercy which lies dead:
Therefore I will be ſodain, and diſpatch.
Ar. Are you ſick Hubert? you look pale to day,
Inſooth I would you were a little ſick.
That I might ſit all night and watch with you.
I warrant I love you more than you do me,
Hub. His words do take poſſeſſion of my boſom.
Read here young Arthur. How now fooliſh rheume?
Turning diſpitious Torture out of doore?
I muſt be brief, leaſt reſolution drop
Out at mine eies, in tender womaniſh tears.
Can you not read it? Is it not fair writ?
Ar. Too fairly Hubert, for ſo foul effect,
Muſt you with hot Irons, burn out both mine eies?
Hub. Young boy, I muſt.
Ar. And will you?
Hub. And I will.
Ar. Have you the heart? When your head did but ake,
I knit my Hand-kercher about your brows
(The beſt I had, a Princeſs wrought it me)
And I did never aske it you again:
And with my hand, at midnight held your head;
And like the watchful minutes, to the hour,
Still and anon cheer'd up the heavy time;
Saying, what lacke you? and where lies your grief?
Or what good love may I perform for you?
Many a poor mans ſon would have lyen ſtill,
And ne're have ſpoke a loving word to you:
But you, at your ſick ſervice had a Prince:
Nay, you may think my love was crafty love,
And call it cunning. Do, and if you will,

If heaven be pleas'd that you must use me ill,
Why then you must. Will you put out mine eies?
These eies, that never did, nor never shall
So much as frown on you.
Hub. I have sworn to do it:
And with hot Irons must I burn them out.
Ar. Ah, none but in this Iron age, would do it:
The Iron of it self, though heat red hot,
Approaching neer these eies, would drink my tears,
And quench this fiery indignation,
Even in the matter of mine innocence:
Nay, after that, consume away in rust,
But for containing fire to harm mine eye:
Are you more stubborn hard, than hammer'd Iron?
And if an Angell should have come to me,
And told me Hubert should put out mine eies,
I would not have beleev'd him: no tongue but Huberts.
Hub. Come forth: Do as I bid you do.
Ar. O save me Hubert, save me: my eies are out
Even with the fierce looks of these bloody men.
Hub. Give me the Iron I say, and bind him here.
Ar. Alas, what need you be so boisterous rough?
I will not struggle, I will stand stone still:
For heaven sake Hubert, let me not be bound:
Nay, hear me Hubert, drive these men away,
And I will sit as quiet as a Lamb.
I will not stirre, nor wince, nor speake a word,
Nor look upon the Iron angerly:
Thrust but these men away, and Ile forgive you,
What ever torment you do put me to.
Hub. Go stand within: let me alone with him.
Exec. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deed.
Art. Alas, I then have chid away my friend,
He hath a sterne look, but a gentle heart:
Let him come back, that his compassion may
Give life to yours.
Hub. Come (Boy) prepare your self.
Art. Is there no remedy?
Hub. None, but to lose your eies.
Art. O heaven: that there were but a moth in yours,
A grain, a dust, a gnat, a wandring hair,
Any annoyance in that precious sense:
Then feeling what small things are boisterous there
Your vild intent must needs seem horrible.
Hub. Is this your promise? Go too, hold your tongue.
Ar. Hubert, the utterance of a brace of tongues,
Must needs want pleading for a pair of eies:
Let me not hold my tongue, let me not Hubert,
Or Hubert, if you will cut out my tongue,
So I may keep mine eies, O spare mine eies,
Though to no use, but still to look on you.
Loe, by my troth, the instrument is cold,
And would not harm me.
Hub. I can heat it, boy.
Ar. No, in good sooth, the fire is dead with grief,
Being create for comfort, to be us'd
In undeserved extreams: see else your self,
There is no malice in this burning coal,
The breath of heaven, hath blown his spirit out,
And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.
Hub. But with my breath I can revive it boy.
Art. And if you do, you will but make it blush,
And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert:
Nay, it perchance will sparkle in your eies:
And, like a dog that is compell'd to fight,
Snatcht at his Master that doth tarre him on.
All things that you should use to do me wrong
Deny their office: onely you do lack
That mercy, which fierce fire, and Iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy, lacking uses.
Hub. Well, see to live: I will not touch thine eye,
For all the treasure that thine Uncle owes,
Yet am I sworn, and I did purpose, boy,
With this same very Iron, to burn them out:
Art. O now you look like Hubert. All this while
You were disguis'd.
Hub. Peace: no more. Adieu,
Your Uncle must not know but you are dead.
Ile fill these dogged spies with false reports:
And, pretty child, sleep doubtlesse, and secure,
That Hubert, for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.
Art. O heaven! I thank you Hubert.
Hub. Silence, no more: go closely in with me.
Much danger do I undergoe for thee. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter John, Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lords.

John. Here once again we sit, once again crown'd
And look'd upon, I hope, with cheerfull eies.
Pem. This once again (but that your Highnesse pleas'd)
Was once superfluous: you were Crown'd before,
And that high Royalty was nere pluck'd off:
The faiths of men, nere stained with Revolt:
Fresh expectation troubled not the Land
With any long'd-for-change, or better State.
Sal. Therefore to be possess'd with double pomp,
To guard a Title that was rich before;
To gild refined gold, to paint the Lilly;
To throw a perfume on the Violet,
To smooth the ice, or adde another hew
Unto the Rainbow; or with Taper-light
To seek the beauteous eye of Heaven to garnish,
Is wasteful, and ridiculous excesse.
Pem. But that your Royal pleasure must be done,
This Act is as an ancient tale new told,
And, in the last repeating troublesome,
Being urged at a time unseasonable.
Sal. In this the Antick, and well noted face
Of plain old form, is much disfigured,
And like a shifted wind unto a saile,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles, and frights consideration:
Makes sound opinion sick, and truth suspected,
For putting on so new a fashion'd Robe.
Pem. When workmen strive to do better than well,
They do confound their skill in covetousnesse,
And oftentimes excusing of a fault,
Doth make the fault the worse by th'excuse:
As patches set upon a little breach,
Discredit more in hiding of the fault,
Than did the fault before it was so patch'd.
Sal. To this effect, before you were new crown'd
We breath'd our Counsel: but it pleas'd your Highnesse
To over-bear it, and we are all well pleas'd,
Since all, and every part of what we would
Doth make a stand, at what your Highnesse will.

John

John. Some reasons of this double Coronation
I have possest you with, and think them strong.
And more, more strong, then lesse is my fear
I shall indue you with: Mean time, but aske
What you would have reform'd, that is not well,
And well shall you perceive, how willingly
I will both hear, and grant you your requests,
Pem. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these
To sound the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for my self, and them: but chief of all
Your safety: for the which, my self and them
Bend their best studies, heartily request
Th'infranchisment of Arthur, whose restraint
Doth move the murmuring lips of discontent
To break into this dangerous argument,
If what in rest you have, in right you hold,
Why then your feares (which as they say) attend
The steps of wrong, should move you to mew up
Your tender kinsman, and to choake his daies
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich advantage of good exercise,
That the times enemies may not have this
To grace occasions: let it be our suit,
That you have bid us ask his liberty,
Which for our goods we do no further ask,
Than, whereupon our weale on you depending,
Counts it your weale: he have his liberty.

Enter Hubert.

John. Let it be so: I do commit his youth
To your direction: Hubert, what news with you?
Pem. This is the man should do the bloody deed:
He shew'd his warrant to a friend of mine,
The image of a wicked heynous fault
Lives in his eye: that close aspect of his,
Do shew the mood of a much troubled breast,
And I do fearfully beleeve 'tis done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.
Sal. The colour of the King doth come, and goe,
Between his purpose and his conscience,
Like Heralds 'twixt two dreadful battails set:
His passion is so ripe, it needs must break.
Pem. And when it breaks, I fear will issue thence
The foul corruption of a sweet childs death.
John. We cannot hold mortalities strong hand.
Good Lords, although my will to give, is living,
The suit which you demand is gone, and dead.
He tels us Arthur is deceas'd to night.
Sal. Indeed we fear'd his sickneſſe was past cure.
Pem. Indeed we heard how neer his death he was,
Before the child himself felt he was sick;
This must be answer'd either here, or hence.
John. Why do you bend such solemn brows on me?
Think you I bear the Sheers of destiny?
Have I commandement on the pulse of life?
Sal. It is apparent foul-play, and 'tis shame
That greatnesse should so grossely offer it:
So thrive it in your game, and so farewell.
Pem. Stay yet (Lord Salisbury) Ile goe with thee,
And find th'inheritance of this poor child,
His little kingdome of a forced grave.
That blood which ow'd the bredth of all this Isle,
Three foot of it doth hold; bad world the while:
This must not be thus born, this will break out
To all our sorrows, and ere long I doubt. Exeunt.
John. They burn in indignation: I repent: Enter Mes.
There is no sure foundation set on blood:
No certain life atchiev'd by others death:
A fearful eye thou hast. Where is that blood,
That I have seen inhabit in those cheeks?
So foul a skie, cleeres not without a storm,
Poure down thy weather: how goes all in France?
Mes. From France to England, never such a power
For any forraine preparation,
Was levied in the body of a Land.
The Copy of your speed is learn'd by them:
For when you should be told they do prepare,
The tydings comes, that they are all arriv'd.
John. Oh where hath our intelligence been drunk?
Where hath it slept? Where is my Mothers care?
That such an Army could be drawn in France,
And she not hear of it?
Mes. My Liege, her eare
Is stopt with dust: the first of April dy'd
Your noble Mother; and as I hear, my Lord,
The Lady Constance in a frenzie dy'd
Three days before: but this from Rumours tongue
I idely heard: if true, or false I know not.
John. Withhold thy speed, dreadful occasion:
O make a league with me, 'till I have pleas'd
My discontented Peers. What? Mother dead?
How wildly then walkes my Estate in France?
Under whose conduct came those powers of France,
That thou for truth giv'st out are landed here?
Mes. Under the Dolphin.

Enter Bastard and Peter of Pomfret.

John. Thou hast made me giddy
With these ill tydings: Now? What saies the world
To your proceedings? Do not seek to stuffe
My head with more ill news: for it is full.
Bast. But if you be afeard to hear the worst,
Then let the worst unheard, fall on your head.
John. Beare with me Cosen, for I was amaz'd
Under the tide; but now I breath again
Aloft the flood, and can give audience
To any tongue, speak it of what it will.
Bast. How I have sped among the Clergy men,
The summes I have collected shall expresse:
But as I travail'd hither through the Land,
I find the people strangely fantasied,
Possest with rumours, full of idle dreams,
Not knowing what they fear, but full of fear.
And here's a Prophet that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heels:
To whom he sung in rude harsh sounding rimes,
That ere the next Ascention day at noon,
Your Highnesse should deliver up your Crown.
Joh. Thou idle Dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?
Pet. Fore-knowing that the truth will fall out so.
John. Hubert, away with him: imprison him,
And on that day at noon, whereon he saies
I shall yield up my Crown, let him be hang'd.
Deliver him to safety, and return,
For I must use thee. O my gentle Cosen,
Hear'st thou the news abroad, who are arriv'd?
Bast. The French (my Lord) mens mouths are full of it:
Besides I met Lord Bigot, and Lord Salisbury
With eies as red as new enkindled fire,
And others more, going to seek the grave
Of Arthur, whom they say is kill'd to night, on your John. Gentle kinsman, goe (suggestion.
And thrust thy self into their companies,

I have a way to winne their loves again:
Bring them before me.
Bast. I will seek them out.
John. Nay, but make hatte: the better foot before.
O, let me have no subjects enemies,
When adverse Forreyners affright my Towns
With dreadful pomp of stout invasion.
Be Mercury, set feathers to thy heels,
And flye (like thought) from them, to me again.
Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed. Exit.
John. Spoke like a sprightful Noble Gentleman.
Goe after him: for he perhaps shall need
Some Messenger betwixt me and the Peeres,
And be thou he.
Mes. With all my heart, my Liege.
John. My Mother dead?

Enter Hubert.

Hub. My Lord, they say five Moons were seen to night:
Four fixed, and the fifth did whirle about
The other four in wondrous motion.
John. Five Moons?
Hub. Old men, and Beldames, in the streets
Doe prophesie upon it dangerously:
Young Arthurs death is common in their mouths,
And when they talke of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the ear.
And he that speaks, doth gripe the hearers wrist,
Whilst he that hears makes fearful action
With wrinkled browes, with nods, with rolling eies,
I saw a Smith stand with his hammer (thus);
The whilst his Iron did on the Anvil cool,
With open mouth swallowing a Taylors news,
Who with his Sheers and Measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet,
Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattailed, and rank'd in Kent.
Another lean, unwash'd Artificer,
Cuts off his tale, and talks of Arthurs death.
John. Why seek'st thou to possesse me with these fears?
Why urgest thou so oft young Arthurs death?
Thy hand hath murdered him: I had a mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.
H. No had (my Lord?) why, did you not provoke me?
John. It is the curse of Kings, to be attended
By slaves that take their humours for a warrant,
To break the bloody house of life,
And on the winking of Authority
To understand a Law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous Majesty, when perchance it frowns
More upon humour, than advis'd respect.
Hub. Here is your hand and seale for what I did.
John. Oh, when the last account 'twixt heaven and earth
Is to be made, then shall this hand and seale
Witnesse against us to damnation.
How of the sight of means to do ill deeds,
Make deeds ill done? hadst not thou been by,
A fellow by the hand of Nature mark'd,
Quoted, and sign'd to do a deed of shame,
This murther had not come into my mind.
But taking note of thy abhorr'd Aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villany:
Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthurs death:
And thou, to be endeered to a King,
Made it no conscience to destroy a Prince.
Hub. My Lord.
John. Had'st thou but shook thy head, or made a pause
When I spake darkly, what I purposed:
Or turn'd an eye of doubt upon my face;
As bid me tell my tale in expresse words:
Deep shame had struck me dumb, made me break off,
And those thy fears, might have wrought fears in me.
But, thou didst understand me by my signes,
And didst in signes again parley with sinne,
Yea, without stop didst let thy heart consent.
And consequently thy rude hand to act;
The deed, which both our tongues held vild to name
Out of my sight, and never see me more:
My Nobles leave me, and my State is braved,
Even at my gates, with ranks of forrain powers:
Nay, in the body of this fleshly Land,
This Kingdom, this Confine of blood, and breath
Hostility, and civil tumult reigns
Between my conscience, and my Cosins death.
Hub. Arme you against your other enemies?
Ile make a peace between your soul, and you.
Young Arthur is alive: this hand of mine
Is yet a Maiden, and an innocent hand,
Not painted with the Crimson spots of blood:
Within this bosom, never entred yet
The dreadful motion of a murderous thought,
And you have slander'd Nature in my forme,
Which howsoever rude exteriorly,
Is yet the cover of a fairer mind,
Than to be butcher of an innocent child.
John. Doth Arthur live? O haste thee to the Peers,
Throw this report on their incensed rage,
And make them tame to their obedience.
Forgive the Comment that my passion made
Upon thy feature, for my rage was blind,
And foule imaginary eyes of blood
Presented thee more hideous than thou art.
Oh, answer not; but to my Closet bring,
The angry Lords, with all expedient haste.
I conjure thee but slowly: run more fast. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Arthur on the walls.

Art. The wall is high, and yet will I leap down.
Good ground be pitiful, and hurt me not:
There's few or none do know me, if they did,
This Ship-boys semblance hath disguis'd me quite.
I am afraid, and yet Ile venture it.
If I get down and do not break my limbs,
Ile find a thousand shifts to get away;
As good to dye, and goe; as dye, and stay.
Oh me, my Uncles spirit is in these stones,
Heaven take my soul, and England keep my bones. Dies.

Enter Pembroke, and Salisbury, and Bigot.

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at St. Edmondsbury,
It is our safety, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perillous time.
Pem. Who brought that Letter from the Cardinall?
Sal. The Count Melloone, a Noble Lord of France,
Whose private with me of the Dolphins love,
Is much more general than these lines import.

Bigot

Big. To morrow morning let us meet him then.
Sal. Or rather then set forward, for 'twill be
Two long dayes journey (Lords) or ere we meet.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Once more to day well met, distemper'd Lords,
The King by me requests your presence strait.
Sal. The King hath dispossest himself of us,
We will not line his thin-bestained clake
With our pure Honours: nor attend the foot
That leaves the print of blood where ere it walkes.
Return, and tell him so: we know the worst. (best.
Bast. What ere you think, good words I think were
Sal. Our griefs, and not our manners reason now.
Bast. But there is little reason in your grief.
Therefore 'twere reason you had manners now.
Pem. Sir, sir, impatience hath his priviledge.
Bast. 'Tis true, to hurt his master, no man else.
Sal. This is the prison: what is he lyes here?
P. Oh death made proud with pure and princely beauty,
The earth had not a hole to hide this deed.
Sal. Murther, as hating what himself hath done,
Doth lay it open to urge on revenge.
Big. Or when he doom'd this beauty to a grave,
Found it too precious Princely, for a grave.
Sal. Sir Richard, what think you? have you beheld,
Or have you read, or heard, or could you think?
Or do you almost think, although you see,
That you do see? could thought, without this object
Form such another? this is the very top,
The heighth, the Crest: or Crest unto the Crest
Of murthers Armes: this is the bloodiest shame,
The wildest Savagery, the vildest stroke
That ever wall-ey'd wrath, or staring rage
Presented to the tears of soft remorse.
Pem. All murthers past, do stand excus'd in this:
And this so sole, and so unmatchable,
Shall give a holinesse, a purity,
To the yet unbegotten sinne of times;
And prove a deadly blood-shed, but a jest,
Exampled by this heynous spectacle.
Bast. It is a damned, and a bloody work,
The graceless action of a heavy hand,
If that it be the work of any hand.
Sal. If that it be the work of any hand?
We had a kind of light, what would ensue:
It is the shameful work of Huberts hand,
The practice, and the purpose of the King:
From whose obedience I forbid my soul,
Kneeling before this ruine of sweet life,
And breathing to his breathless excellence
The incense of a Vow, a holy Vow:
Never to taste the pleasures of the world,
Never to be infected with delight,
Nor conversant with ease, and idleness,
Till I have set a glory to this hand,
By giving it the worship of Revenge.
Pem. Big. Our souls Religiously confirm thy words.

Enter Hubert.

Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste, in seeking you,
Arthur doth live, the King hath sent for you.
Sal. Oh he is bold, and blushes not at death:
Avant thou hatefull villaine, get thee gone.
Hub. I am no villaine.
Sal. Must I rob the Law.
Bast. Your sword is bright sir, put it up again.
Sal. Not till I sheath it in a mutherers skin.
Hub. Stand back Lord Salisbury, stand back I say
By heaven, I think my sword's as sharp as yours.
I would not have you (Lord) forget your self
Nor tempt the danger of my true defence;
Least I by marking of your rage, forget
Your Worth, your Greatnesse, and Nobility.
Big. Out dunghill, dar'st thou brave a Nobleman?
Hub. Not for my life: but yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an Emperor.
Sal. Thou art a Murtherer.
Hub. Do not prove me so:
Yet I am none. Whose tongue so ere speaks false,
Not truly speaks: who speaks not truly, Lies.
Pem. Cut him to pieces.
Bast. Keep the peace, I say.
Sal. Stand by, or I shall gaul you Faulconbridge.
Bast. Thou wer't better gaul the divel Salisbury.
If thou but frown on me, or stirre thy foot,
Or teach thy hasty spleen to do me shame,
Ile strike thee dead, Put up thy sword betime.
Or Ile so maul you, and your tossing-Iron,
That you shall think the divel is come from hell.
Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?
Second a Villaine, and a Murtherer?
Hub. Lord Bigot, I am none.
Big. Who kill'd this Prince?
Hub. 'Tis not an hour since I left him well:
I honour'd him, I lov'd him, and will weep
My date of life out, for his sweet lives losse.
Sal. Trust not those cunning waters of his eies,
For villany is not without such Rheume,
And he long traded in it, makes it seem
Like Rivers of remorse and innocency.
Away with me, all you whose souls abhorre
Th'uncleanly savour of a slaughter-house,
For I am stifled with this smell of sinne.
Big. Away toward Bury, to the Dolphin there.
P. There tell the King, he may enquire us out. Ex. Lords.
Ba. Here's a good world: knew you of this fair work?
Beyond the infinite and boundlesse reach of mercy,
(If thou didst this deed of death) art thou damn'd Hubert.
Hub. Do but hear me sir.
Bast. Ha? Ile tell thee what.
Thou'rt damn'd as black, nay nothing is so black,
Thou art more deep damn'd than Prince Lucifer.
There is not yet so ugly a fiend of Hell
As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this child.
Hub. Upon my soul.
Bast. If thou didst but consent
To this most cruel Act: do but despair,
And if thou want'st a Cord, the smallest thred
That ever Spider twisted from her womb
Will serve to strangle thee: A rush will be a beam
To hang thee on. Or would'st thou drown thy self,
Put but a little water in a spoon,
And it shall be as all the Ocean,
Enough to stifle such a Villaine up.
I do suspect thee very grievously.
Hub. If I in act, consent, or sinne of thought,
Be guilty of the stealing that sweet breath
Which was embounded in this beauteous clay,
Let hell want pains enough to torture me:
I left him well.
Bast. Go bear him in thine armes:
I am amaz'd me thinks, and lose my way
Among the thorns, and dangers of this world.

How eaſie doſt thou take all England up,
From forth this morſel of dead Royalty?
The life, the right, and truth of all this Realm
Is fled to heaven: and England now is left
To tug and ſcamble, and to part by th'teeth
The unowed intereſt of proud ſwelling State:
Now for the bare-pickt bone of Majeſty,
Doth dogged warre briſtle his angry creſt,
And ſnarleth in the gentle eyes of peace:
Now Powers from home, and diſcontents at home
Meet in one line: and vaſt confuſion waits
As doth a Raven on a ſick-fallen beaſt,
The imminent decay of wreſted pomp.
Now happy he, whoſe cloak and center can
Hold out this tempeſt. Bear away that child,
And follow me with ſpeed; Ile to the King:
A thouſand buſineſſes are brief in hand,
And heaven it ſelf doth frown upon the Land. Exit.

Actus Quartus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King John, and Pandulph, attendants.

K. John. Thus have I yielded up into your hand
The Circle of my glory.
Paud. Take again
From this my hand, as holding of the Pope
Your Soveraigne greatneſſe and authority.
John. Now keep your holy word, go meet the French,
And from his holineſſe uſe all your power
To ſtop their marches 'fore we are enflam'd:
Our diſcontented Counties do revolt:
Our people quarrel with obedience,
Swearing Allegeance, and the love of ſoul
To ſtranger-blood, to forrain Royalty;
This inundation of miſtempered humour,
Reſts by you only to be qualified.
Then pauſe not; for the preſent time's ſo ſick,
That preſent med'cine muſt be miniſtred,
Or overthrow incureable enſues.
Pand. It was my breath that blew this tempeſt up,
Upon your ſtubborn uſage of the Pope:
But ſince you are a gentle convertite.
My tongue ſhall huſh again this ſtorm of warre,
And make fair weather in your bluſtring Land:
On this Aſcention day, remember well,
Upon your oath of ſervice to the Pope,
Go I to make the French lay down their Arms. Exit.
John. Is this Aſcention day? did not the Prophet
Say, that before Aſcention day at noon,
My Crown I ſhould give off? even ſo I have:
I did ſuppoſe it ſhould be on conſtraint,
But (heav'n be thank'd) it is but voluntary.

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. All Kent hath yielded: nothing there holds out
But Dover Caſtle: London hath receiv'd
Like a kind Hoſt, the Dolphin and his powers.
Your Nobles will not hear you, but are gone
To offer ſervice to your enemy:
And wild amazement hurries up and down
The little number of doubtful friends.
John. Would not my Lords return to me again
After they heard young Arthur was alive?
Baſt. They found him dead, and caſt into the ſtreets,
An empty Caſket, where the Jewel of life
By ſome damn'd hand was rob'd and tane away.
John. That villain Hubert told me he did live.
Baſt. So on my ſoul he did, for ought he knew:
But wherefore do you droop? why look you ſad?
Be great in Act, as you have been in Thought:
Let not the world ſee fear and ſad diſtruſt
Govern the motion of a kingly eye:
Be ſtirring as the time, be fire with fire,
Threaten the threatner, and out-face the brow
Of bragging horror: So ſhall inferior eies
That borrow their behaviours from the great,
Grow great by your example and put on
The dauntleſſe ſpirit of reſolution.
Away, and gliſter like the god of warre
When he intendeth to become the field:
Shew boldneſſe and aſpiring confidence:
What, ſhall they ſeek the Lyon in his denne,
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
Oh let it not be ſaid: forrage, and run
To meet diſpleaſure farther from the doors,
And grapple with him ere he come ſo nigh.
John. The Legat of the Pope hath been with me,
And I have made a happy peace with him,
And he hath promiſ'd to diſmiſs the Powers
Led by the Dolphin.
Baſt. Oh inglorious League:
Shall we upon the footing of our Land,
Send fair-play-orders, and make comprimiſe,
Inſinuation, parley, and baſe truce
To Arms Invaſive? Shall a beardleſſe boy,
A cockred-ſilken wanton brave our fields,
And fleſh his ſpirit in a warre-like ſoyle,
Mocking the ayr with colours idely ſpread,
And find no check? Let us my Liege to Armes:
Perchance the Cardinal cannot make your peace;
Or if he do, let it at leaſt be ſaid
They ſaw we had a purpoſe of defence.
John. Have thou the ordering of this preſent time.
Baſt. Away then with good courage: yet I know
Our party may well meet a prouder foe.

Exeunt.

Scæna ſecunda.

Enter (in Armes) Dolphin, Salisbury, Melloone, Pembroke, Bigot, Souldiers.

Dol. My Lord Melloone, let this be coppied out,
And keep it ſafe for our remembrance:
Return the preſident to theſe Lords again,
That having our fair order written down,
Both they and we, peruſing ore theſe notes
May know wherefore we took the Sacrament,
And keep our faiths firm and inviolable.
Sal. Upon our ſides it never ſhall be broken.
And noble Dolphin, albeit we ſwear
A voluntary zeale, and an un-urg'd faith
To your proceedings: yet beleeve me Prince,
I am not glad that ſuch a ſore of time
Should ſeek a plaiſter by contemn'd revolt,
And heal the inveterate Canker of one wound,

By

By making many: Oh it grieves my ſoul,
That I muſt draw this mettle from my ſide
To be a widdow-maker: oh, and there
Where honourable reſcue, and defence
Cries out upon the name of Saliſbury.
But ſuch is the infection of the time,
That for the health and Phyſick of our right,
We cannot deal but with the very hand
Of ſtern injuſtice, and confuſed wrong:
And is't not pity, (oh my grieved friends)
That we, the ſons and children of this Iſle,
Were born to ſee ſo ſad an hour as this,
Wherein we ſtep after a ſtranger, march
Upon her gentle boſom, and fill up
Her enemies ranks? I muſt withdraw, and weep
Upon the ſpot of this enforced cauſe,
To Grace the Gentry of a Land remote,
And follow unacquainted colours here:
What here? O Nation that thou couldſt remove,
That Neptunes Armes who clippeth thee about,
Would bear thee from the knowledge of thy ſelf,
And cripple thee unto a Pagan ſhore,
Where theſe two Chriſtian Armies might combine
The bloud of malice, in a vein of league,
And not to ſpend it ſo un-neighborly.

Dolph. A noble temper doſt thou ſhew in this,
And great affections wraſtling in thy boſom
Doth make an Earthquake of Nobility:
Oh, what a Noble combate haſt fought
Between compulſion, and a brave reſpect:
Let me wipe off this honourable dew,
That ſilverly doth progreſſe on thy cheeks:
My heart hath melted at a Ladies tears,
Being an ordinary inundation:
But this effuſion of ſuch manly drops,
This ſhowre blown up by tempeſt of the ſoul,
Startles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
Than had I ſeen the vaulty top of Heaven
Figur'd quite ore with burning Meteors.
Lift up thy brow (renowned Salisbury)
And with a great heart heave away this ſtorme:
Commend theſe warrs to thoſe baby-eyes
That never ſaw the Gyant-world enrag'd,
Nor met with Fortune, other than at feaſts,
Full warm of blood, of mirth, of Goſſipping.
Come, come, for thou ſhalt thruſt thy hand as deep
Into the purſe of rich proſperity
As Lewis himſelf: ſo (Nobles) ſhall you all,
That knit your ſinews to the ſtrength of mine.

Enter Pandulpho.

And even there, methinks an Angel ſpake,
Look where the holy Legat comes apace,
To give us warrant from the hand of heaven,
And on our Actions ſet the name of right
With holy breath.

Pan. Hail noble Prince of France:
The next is this: King John hath reconcil'd
Himſelf to Rome, his ſpirit is come in,
That ſo ſtood out againſt the Holy Church,
The great Metropolis and Sea of Rome:
Therefore thy threatning colours now wind up,
And tame the ſavage ſpirit of wild warre,
That like a Lyon foſtered up at hand,
It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
And be no further harmful than in ſhew.

Dolph. Your grace ſhall pardon me, I will not back:
I am too high-born to be propertied
To be a ſecondary at controll,
Or uſeful ſerving-man, and inſtrument
To any Soveraign State throughout the world.
Your breath firſt kindled the dead coal of warres,
Between this chaſtiz'd kingdom and my ſelf,
And brought in matter that ſhould feed this fire;
And now 'tis farre too huge to be blown out
With that ſame weak wind which enkindled it:
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with intereſt to this Land,
Yea, thruſt this enterprize into my heart,
And come ye now to tell me John hath made
His peace with Rome? what is that peace to me?
I (by the honour of my marrige bed)
After young Arthur, claim this Land for mine,
And now it is half conquer'd, muſt I back,
Becauſe that John hath made his peace with Rome?
Am I Romes ſlave? what penny hath Rome born?
What men provided? what munition ſent
To under-prop this Action? Is't not I
That under-go this charge? who elſe but I,
And ſuch as to my claim are liable,
Sweat in this buſineſſe, and maintain this warre?
Have I not heard theſe Iſlanders ſhout out
Vive le Roy, as I have bank'd their Towns?
Have I not here the beſt Cards for the game
To winne this eaſie match, playd for a Crown?
And ſhall I now give ore the yielded Set?
No, no, on my ſoul it never ſhall be ſaid.

Pand. You look but on the out-ſide of this work.

Dolph. Out-ſide, or in-ſide, I will not return
Till my attempt ſo much be glorified,
As to my ample hope was promiſed,
Before I drew this gallant head of warre,
And cull'd theſe fiery ſpirits from the world
To out-look Conqueſt, and to winne renown
Even in the jaws of danger, and of death:
What luſty Trumpet thus doth ſummon us?

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. According to the fair-play of the world,
Let me have audience: I am ſent to ſpeak:
My holy Lord of Millane from the King
I come to learn how you have dealt for him:
And, as you anſwer, I do know the ſcope
And warrant limited unto my tongue.

Pand. The Dolphin is too wilful oppoſite
And will not temporize with my entreaties:
He flatly ſayes, he'l not lay down his Arms.

Baſt. By all the blood that ever fury breath'd,
The youth ſays well. Now hear our Engliſh King,
For thus his Royalty doth ſpeak in me:
He is prepar'd, and reaſon too he ſhould,
This apiſh and unmannerly approach,
This harneſs'd Maske, and unadviſed Revell,
This unheard ſawcineſſe and boyiſh Troops,
The King doth ſmile at, and is well prepar'd
To whip this dwarfiſh warre, this Pigmy Armes
From out the circle of his Territories.
That hand which had the ſtrength, even at your door,
To cudgel you, and make you take the hatch,
To dive like Buckets in concealed Wells,
To crowch in litter of your ſtable planks,
To lye like pawns, lock'd up in Cheſts and Trunks,
To hug with ſwine, to ſeek ſweet ſafety out
In vaults and priſons, and to thrill and ſhake,

Even

Even at the crying of your Nations crow,
Thinking this voice an armed Engliſh man.
Shall that victorious hand be feebled here,
That in your chambers gave you chaſtiſement?
No: know the gallant Monarch is in Armes,
And like an Eagle, o're his ayery towres,
To ſowſſe annoyance that comes neere his Neſt;
And you degenerate, you ingrate Revolts,
You bloody Nero's, ripping up the womb
Of your dear Mother-England: bluſh for ſhame:
For your own Ladies, and pale-viſag'd Maids
Like Amazons, come tripping after drummes:
Their thimbles into armed Gantlets change,
Their Needles to Lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Dol. There end thy brave, and turne thy face in peace,
We grant thou canſt out-ſcold us: fare thee well,
We hold our time too precious to be ſpent
With ſuch a brabler.

Pan. Give me leave to ſpeake.

Baſt. No, I will ſpeak.

Dol. We will attend to neither:
Strike up the drummes, and let the tongue of warre,
Plead for our intereſt, and our being here.

Baſt. Indeed your Drums being beaten, will cry out;
And ſo ſhall you, being beaten: do but ſtart
An eccho with the clamour of thy drumme,
And even at hand, a drumme is ready brac'd,
That ſhall reverberate all, as loud as thine.
Sound but another, and another ſhall
(As loud as thine) rattle the Welkins ear,
And mock the deep-mouth'd Thunder: for at hand
(Not truſting to this halting Legat here
Whom he hath uſ'd rather for ſport than need)
Is warlike John; and in his forehead ſits
A bare-rib'd death, whoſe office is this day
To feaſt upon whole thouſands of the French.

Dol. Strike up our drummes, to find this danger out.

Baſt. And thou ſhalt find it (Dolphin) do not doubt.

Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Alarums. Enter John, and Hubert.

John. How goes the day with us? oh tell me Hubert.

Hub. Badly I fear; how fares your Majeſty?

John. This Feaver that hath troubled me ſo long,
Lyes heavy on me: oh, my heart is ſick.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. My Lord: your valiant kinſman Faulconbridge,
Deſires your Majeſty to leave the field,
And ſend him word by me, which way you goe.

John. Tell him toward Swinſted, to the Abby there.

Meſ. Be of good comfort: for the great ſupply,
That was expected by the Dolphin here,
Are wrack'd three nights agoe on Goodwin ſands.
This news was brought to Richard but even now,
The French fight coldly, and retire themſelves.

John. Aye me, this tyrant Feaver burns me up,
And will not let me welcome this good news.
Set on toward Swinſted: to my Litter ſtraight,
Weakneſſe poſſeſſeth me, and I am faint. Exeunt.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, and Bigot.

Sal. I did not think the King ſo ſtor'd with friends.

Pem. Up once again: put ſpirit in the French,
If they miſcarry, we miſcarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten Divel Faulconbridge,
In ſpight of ſpight, alone upholds the day.

Pem. They ſay King John ſore ſick hath left the field.

Enter Meloon wounded.

Mel. Lead me to the Revolts of England here.

Sal. When we were happy, we had other names.

Pem. It is the Count Meloone.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly Noble Engliſh, you are bought and ſold,
Unthred the rude eye of rebellion,
And welcome home again diſcarded faith,
Seek out King John, and fall before his feet:
For if the French be Lords of this loud day,
He means to recompence the pains you take,
By cutting off your heads: Thus hath he ſworn,
And I with him, and many moe with me,
Upon the Altar at St. Edmondsbury,
Even on that Altar, where we ſwore to you,
Deere amity, and everlaſting love.

Sal. May this be poſſible? May this be true?

Mel. Have I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life,
Which bleeds away, even as a form of waxe
Reſolveth from his figure 'gainſt the fire?
What in the world ſhould make me now deceive,
Since I muſt loſe the uſe of all deceit?
Why ſhould I then be falſe, ſince it is true
That I muſt die here, and live hence, by truth?
I ſay againe, if Lewis do winne the day,
He is forſworn, if ere thoſe eies of yours
Behold another day break in the Eaſt:
But even this night, whoſe black contagious breath
Already ſmoaks about the burning Creſt
Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied Sunne,
Even this ill night, your breathing ſhall expire,
Paying the fine of rated Treachery,
Even with a treacherous fine of all your lives:
If Lewis, by your aſſiſtance win the day.
Commend me to one Hubert, with your King;
The love of him, and this reſpect beſides
(For that my Grandſire was an Engliſhman)
Awakes my Conſcience, to confeſſe all this.
In lieu whereof, I pray you bear me hence
From forth the noiſe and rumour of the field;
Where I may think the remnant of my thoughts
In peace: and part this body and my ſoul
With contemplation, and devout deſires.

Sal. We do beleeve thee, and beſhrew my ſoul,
But I do love the favour, and the form
Of this moſt fair occaſion, by the which
We will untread the ſteps of damned flight,
And like a bated and retired flood,
Leaving our rankneſſe, and irregular courſe,
Stoop low within thoſe bounds we have o're-look'd,
And calmely run on in obedience,
Even to our Ocean, to our great King John.
My arme ſhall give thee help to bear thee hence,

For

For I do ſee the cruel pangs of death
Right in thine eye. Away, my friends, new flight,
And happy newneſſe that intends old right Exeunt.

Scæna Quinta.

Enter Dolphin and his Train.

Dol. The Sun of heaven (me thought) was loath to ſet;
But ſtaid, and made the Weſtern Welkin bluſh,
When Engliſh meaſure backward their own ground
In faint retire: Oh bravely came we off,
When with a Volley of our needleſſe ſhot,
After ſuch bloody toyle, we bid good night,
And woon'd our tott'ring colours clearly up,
Laſt in the field, and almoſt Lords of it.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. Where is my Prince the Dolphin?
Dol. Here, what news?
Meſ. The Count Melloone is ſlain: The Engliſh Lords
By his perſwaſion are at length falln off,
And your ſupply which you have wiſh'd ſo long,
Are caſt away, and ſunk on Goodwin Sands.
Dol. Ah foul ſhrew'd news. Beſhrew thy very heart:
I did not think to be ſo ſad to night
As this hath made me. Who was he that ſaid
King John did fly an hour or two before
The ſtumbling night did part our weary powers?
Meſ. Who ever ſpoke it, it is true my Lord,
Dol. Well: keep good quarter, and good care to night,
The day ſhall not be up ſo ſoon as I,
To try the fair adventure of to morrow. Exeunt.

Scæna Sexta.

Enter Baſtard and Hubert ſeverally.

Hub. Whoſe there? Speak hoa, ſpeak quickly, or I ſhoot.
Baſt. A friend. What art thou?
Hub. Of the part of England.
Baſt. Whither doſt thou goe?
Hub. What's that to thee?
Why may not I demand of thine affairs,
As well as thou of mine?
Baſt. Hubert, I think.
Hub. Thou haſt a perfect thought:
I will upon all hazzards well beleeve
Thou art my friend, that know'ſt my tongue ſo well:
Who art thou?
Baſt. Who thou wilt: and if thou pleaſe
Thou maiſt be-friend me ſo much, as to think
I come one way of the Plantagenets.
Hub. Unkind remembrance: thou, and endleſſe night,
Have done me ſhame: brave Souldier, pardon me,
That any accent breaking from thy tongue,
Should ſcape the true acquaintance of mine ear.
Baſt. Come, come: ſans complement, What newes abroad?
Hub. Why here walk I, in the black brow of night,
To find you out.
Baſt. Brief then: and what's the news?
Hub. O my ſweet Sir, news fitting to the night,
Black, fearfull, comfortleſſe, and horrible.
Baſt. Shew me the very wound of this ill news,
I am no woman, Ile not ſwound at it.
Hub. The King I fear is poyſon'd by a Monk,
I left him almoſt ſpeechleſſe, and broke out
To acquaint you with this evil that you might
The better arme you to the ſodain time,
Than if you had at leiſure known of this.
Baſt. How did he take it? Who did taſte to him?
Hub. A Monk I tell you, a reſolved Villaine
Whoſe bowels ſuddenly burſt out: The King
Yet ſpeaks, and peradventure may recover.
Baſt. Who didſt thou leave to tend his Majeſty?
Hub. Why know you not? the Lords are all come back,
And brought Prince Henry in their company,
At whoſe requeſt the King hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his Majeſty.
Baſt. With-hold thine indignation, mighty heaven,
And tempt us not to bear above our power.
Ile tell thee Hubert, halfe my power this night
Paſſing theſe Flats, are taken by the Tide,
Theſe Lincoln-waſhes have devoured them,
My ſelf, well mounted, have eſcap'd.
Away before: Conduct me to the King,
I doubt he will be dead, or ere I come. Exeunt.

Scæna Septima.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Hen. It is too late, the life of all his blood
Is touch'd corruptibly: and his pure brain
(Which ſome ſuppoſe the ſouls frail dwelling houſe)
Doth by the idle Comments that it makes,
Foretell the ending of mortality.

Enter Pembroke.

Pem. His Highneſſe yet doth ſpeak, and holds belief,
That being brought into the open aire,
It would allay the burning quality
Of that fell poyſon which aſſayleth him.
Hen. Let him be brought into the Orchard here;
Doth he ſtill rage?
Pem. He is more patient
Than when you left him; even now he ſung.
Hen. Oh vanity of ſickneſſe, fierce extreams
In their continuance, will not feele themſelves.
Death having prey'd upon the outward parts
Leaves them inviſible, and her ſiege is now
Againſt the wind, the which he pricks and wounds
With many legions of ſtrange fantaſies,
Which in their throng and preſſe to that laſt hold,
Confound themſelves. 'Tis ſtrange that death ſhould ſing:
I am the Symet to this pale faint Swan.
Who chaunts a doleful hymne to his own death,
And from the Organ-pipe of frailty ſings
His ſoul and body their laſting reſt.
Sal. Be of good comfort (Prince) for you are born
To ſet a forme upon that indigeſt
Which he hath left ſo ſhapeleſſe, and ſo rude.

John brought in.

John. I marry now my ſoul hath elbow-room,

It

It would not out at windows, nor at doors,
There is so hot a Summer in my bosom,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust:
I am a scribled forme drawn with a pen,
Upon a Parchment, and against this fire
Doe I shrink up.

Hen. How fares your Majestie?

John. Poyson'd, ill fare: dead, forsook, cast off,
And none of you will bid the Winter come
To thrust his icie fingers in my maw;
Nor let my Kingdomes Rivers take their course
Through my burn'd bosom: nor intreat the North
To make his bleak winds kisse my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold. I do not aske you much,
I beg cold comfort: and you are so straight
And so ingrateful, you deny me that.

Hen. Oh that there were some vertue in my tears,
That might relieve you.

John. The salt of them is hot.
Within me is a hell, and there the poyson
Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize,
On unrepreeveable condemned blood.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Oh, I am scalded with my violent motion
And spleen of speed to see your Majestie.

John. Oh Cozen, thou art come to set mine eye:
The tackle of my heart, is crackt and burnt,
And all the shrowds wherewith my life should saile,
Are turned to one thred, one little hair:
My heart hath one poor string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy news be uttered,
And then all this thou seest, is but a clod,
And module of confounded Royalty.

Bast. The Dolphin is preparing hitherward,
Where heaven he knows how we shall answer him.
For in a night the best part of my power,
As I upon advantage did remove,
Were in the Washes all unwarily,
Devoured by the unexpected flood.

Sal. You breath these dead news in as dead an ear
My Liege, my Lord: but now a King, now thus.

Hen. Even so must I run on, and even so stop.
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a King, and now is Clay?

Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behind
To do the office for thee, of revenge,
And then my soul shall wait on thee to Heaven,
As it on earth hath been thy servant still.
Now, now you Stars, that move in your right Spheres,
Where be your powers? Shew now your mended faiths,
And instantly return with me again,
To push destruction, and perpetual shame
Out of the weak door of our fainting Land:
Straight let us seek, or straight we shall be sought,
The Dolphin rages at our very heels.

Sal. It seems you know not then so much as we,
The Cardinal Pandulph is within at rest,
Who half an hour since came from the Dolphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace,
As we with honour and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leave this warre.

Bast. He will the rather do it, when he sees
Our selves well sinew'd to our defence.

Sal. Nay, 'tis in a manner done already,
For many carriages he hath dispatch'd
To the Sea-side, and put his cause and quarrel
To the disposing of the Cardinal,
With whom your self, my self, and other Lords,
If you think meet, this afternoon will post
To consummate this businesse happily.

Bast. Let it be so, and you my Noble Prince,
With other Princes that may best be spar'd,
Shall wait upon your Fathers funeral.

Hen. At Worcester must his body be interr'd,
For so he will'd it.

Bast. Thither shall it then,
And happily may your sweet self put on
The lineal state, and glory of the Land,
To whom with all submission on my knee,
I do bequeath my faithful services
And true subjection everlastingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our love we make
To rest without a spot for evermore.

Hen. I have a kind soul that would give thanks,
And knows not how to do it but with tears.

Bast. Oh let us pay the time: but needful woe,
Since it hath been before hand with our griefs.
This England never did, nor never shall
Lye at the proud foot of a Conqueror,
But when it first did help to wound it self.
Now, these her Princes are come home again,
Come the three Corners of the world in Armes,
And we shall shock them: Nought shall make us rue,
If England to it self, do rest but true. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Life and Death of King Richard the Second.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King Richard, John of Gant, with other Nobles and Attendants.

King Richard.

OLd John of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaſter,
Haſt thou according to thy oath and band,
Brought hither Henry Herford thy bold ſon:
Here to make good the boiſterous late appeal,
Which then our leaſure would not let us hear,
Againſt the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I have my Liege.

King. Tell me moreover, haſt thou ſounded him,
If he appeal the Duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily as a good Subject ſhould,
On ſome known ground of treachery in him.

Gaunt. As neer as I could ſift him on that argument,
On ſome apparent danger ſeen in him,
Aym'd at your Highneſſe, no inveterate malice.

King. Then call them to our preſence face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, our ſelves will hear
Th'accuſer, and the accuſed freely ſpeak;
High ſtomack'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage, deaf as the ſea; haſty as fire.

Enter Bullingbrooke and Mowbray.

Bull. Many years of happy daies befall
My gracious Soveraign, my moſt loving Liege.

Mow. Each day ſtill better others happineſſe,
Until the heavens envying earths good hap,
Adde an immortal Title to your Crown.

King. We thank you both, yet one but flatters us,
As well appeareth by the cauſe you come,
Namely to appeal each other of high Treaſon.
Couſin of Hereford what doſt thou object
Againſt the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray?

Bull. Firſt, heaven be the record to my ſpeech,
In the devotion of a Subjects love,
Tendring the precious ſafety of my Prince,
And free from other miſ-begotten hate,
Come I appealant to this Princely preſence.
Now Thomas Mowbray do I turn to thee,
And mark my greeting well: for what I ſpeak,
My body ſhall make good upon this earth,
Or my Divine ſoul anſwer it in heaven.
Thou art a Traitor and a miſcreant;
Too good to be ſo, and too bad to live;
Since the more fair and Criſtall is the skie,
The uglier ſeem the clouds that in it flye:
Once more, the more to aggravate the note,
With a foule Traitors name ſtuffe I thy throat,
And wiſh (ſo pleaſe my Soveraigne) ere I move, (prove.
What my tongue ſpeaks, my right drawn ſword may

Mow. Let not my cool words here accuſe my zeale:
'Tis not the Tryal of a womans warre,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cauſe betwixt us twain:
The blood is hot that muſt be cool'd for this.
Yet can I not of ſuch tame patience boaſt,
As to be huſht, and nought at all to ſay.
Firſt the fair reverence of your Highneſſe curbs me,
From giving reins and ſpurrs to my free ſpeech,
Which elſe would poſt, untill it had return'd
Theſe termes of treaſon, doubly down his throat,
Setting aſide his high bloods royalty,
And let him be no kinſman to my Liege,
I do defie him, and I ſpit at him,
Call him a ſlanderous Coward, and a Villaine:
Which to maintain, I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I tide to run afoot,
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alpes,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where ever Engliſhman durſt ſet his foot,
Mean time, let this defend my loyalty,
By all my hopes moſt falſly doth he lie.

Bull. Pale trembling Coward, there I throw my gage,
Diſclaiming here the kindred of a King,
And lay aſide my high bloods Royalty,
Which fear, not reverence makes thee to except,
If guilty dread hath left thee ſo much ſtrength,
As to take up mine honours pawn, then ſtoop.
By that, and all the rights of Knighthood elſe,
Will I make good againſt thee arme to arme,
What I have ſpoken, or thou canſt deviſe.

Mow. I take it up, and by that ſword I ſwear,
Which gently laid my Knighthood on my ſhoulder,
Ile anſwer thee in any fair degree,
Or Chivalrous deſigne of Knightly tryall:
And when I mount, alive may I not light,
If I be Traitor, or unjuſtly fight.

King. What doth our Coſin lay to Mowbrayes charge?
It muſt be great that can inherit us,
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Bull. Look what I ſaid, my life ſhall prove it true,
That Mowbray hath receiv'd eight thouſand Nobles,

In

In name of lendings for your Highneſſe Souldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for lewd imployments,
Like a falſe traitor and injurious Villain,
Beſides I ſay, and will in battail prove,
Or here, or elſewhere to the furtheſt Verge
That ever was ſurvey'd by Engliſh eye,
That all the Treaſons for theſe eighteen years
Complotted and contrived in this Land,
Fetcht from falſe Mowbray their firſt head and ſpring.
Further I ſay, and further will maintain
Upon his bad life, to make all this good,
That he did plot the Duke of Glouſters death,
Suggeſt his ſoon beleeving adverſaries,
And conſequently like a traitor Coward,
Sluc'd out his innocent ſoul through ſtreams of blood:
Which blood, like ſacrificing Abels cries,
(Even from the tongueleſſe Caverns of the earth)
To me for juſtice, and rough chaſtiſement:
And by the glorious worth of my deſcent,
This arm ſhall do it, or this life be ſpent.

King. How high a pitch his reſolution ſoars:
Thomas of Norfolke, what ſaiſt thou to this?

Mow. Oh let my Soveraign turn away his face,
And bid his ears a little while be deaf,
Till I have told this ſlander of his blood,
How God and good men hate ſo foul a lyer.

King. Mowbray, impartial are our eies and ears,
Were he my brother, nay, our Kingdoms heir,
As he is but my fathers brothers ſon;
Now by my Scepters awe, I make a vow,
Such neighbour-neerneſſe to our ſacred blood,
Should nothing priviledge him, nor partialize
The unſtooping firmneſſe of my upright ſoul.
He is our ſubject (Mowbray) ſo art thou,
Free ſpeech and fearleſſe, I to thee allow.

Mow. Then Bullingbrooke as low as to thy heart,
Through the falſe paſſage of thy throat; thou lieſt:
Three parts of that receipt I had for Callice,
Diſburſt I to his Highneſſe Souldiers;
The other part reſerv'd I by conſent,
For that my Soveraign Liege was in my debt,
Upon remainder of a deer account,
Since laſt I went to France to fetch his Queen:
Now ſwallow down that lye. For Glouſters death,
I ſlew him not; but (to mine own diſgrace)
Neglected my ſworn duty in that caſe:
For you my noble Lord of Lancaſter,
The honorable father to my foe,
Once I did lay an ambuſh for your life,
A treſpaſſe that doth vex my grieved ſoul:
But ere I laſt receiv'd the Sacrament,
I did confeſſe it, and exactly begg'd
Your Graces pardon, and I hope I had it.
This is my fault: as for the reſt appeal'd,
It iſſues from the rancor of a Villaine,
A recreant and moſt degenerate traitor,
Which in my ſelf I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurle down my gage,
Upon this overweening traitors foot,
To prove my ſelf a loyal Gentleman,
Even in the beſt blood chamber'd in his boſom.
In haſte whereof moſt heartily I pray
Your Highneſſe to aſſigne our tryal day.

King. Wrath kindled Gentlemen be rul'd by me:
Let's purge this choller without letting blood:
This we preſcribe, though no Phyſitian.
Deep malice makes too deep inciſion.
Forget, forgive, conclude and be agreed,
Our Doctors ſay, this is no time to bleed.
Good Uncle, let this end where it begun,
We'l calme the Duke of Norfolke, you your ſon.

Gaunt. To be a make-peace ſhall become my age,
Throw down (my ſon) the Duke of Norfolks gage.

King. And Norfolk throw down his.

Gaunt. When Harry when? Obedience bids,
Obedience bids, I ſhould not bid agen.

King. Norfolke, throw down, we bid; there is no boot.

Mow. My ſelf I throw (dread Soveraign) at thy foot.
My life thou ſhalt command, but not my ſhame,
The one my duty owes, but my fair name
Deſpight of death that lives upon my grave
To dark diſhonours uſe, thou ſhalt not have.
I am diſgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffel'd here,
Pierc'd to the ſoul, with ſlanders venom'd ſpear:
The which no balme can cure, but his heart blood
Which breath'd this poyſon.

King. Rage muſt be withſtood:
Give me his gage: Lyons make Leopards tame.

Mow. Yea, but not change his ſpots: take but my ſhame,
And I reſigne my gage. My deer, deer Lord,
The pureſt treaſure mortal times afford,
Is ſpotleſſe reputation: that away,
Men are but gilded loam, or painted clay.
A Jewell in a ten-times barr'd up Cheſt,
Is a bold ſpirit in a loyal breſt.
Mine honour is my life; both grow in one:
Take honour from me, and my life is done.
Then (deer my Liege) mine honour let me try,
In that I live; and for that will I dye.

King. Coſin, throw down your gage,
Doe you begin.

Bul. Oh heaven defend my ſoul from ſuch foul ſin.
Shall I ſeem Creſt-faln in my fathers ſight,
Or with pale beggar'd fear impeach my hight
Before this out-dar'd daſtard? Ere my tongue,
Shall wound mine honour with ſuch feeble wrong;
Or ſound ſo baſe a parle: my teeth ſhall tear
The ſlaviſh motive of recanting fear,
And ſpit it bleeding in his high diſgrace,
Where ſhame doth harbour, even in Mowbrays face.

Exit Gaunt.

King. We were not born to ſue, but to command,
Which ſince we cannot doe to make you friends,
Be ready, (as your lives ſhall anſwer it)
At Coventree, upon Saint Lamberts day:
There ſhall your ſwords and Lances arbitrate
The ſwelling difference of your ſetled hate:
Since we cannot attone you, you ſhall ſee
Juſtice deſigne the Victors Chivalry.
Lord Marſhal command our Officers at Arms,
Be ready to direct theſe home Alarmes. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Gaunt, and Dutcheſſe of Glouſter.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Glouſters blood,
Doth more ſolicite me than your exclaims,
To ſtirre againſt the Butchers of his life.

But

But since correction lyeth in those hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct
Put we our quarrell to the will of Heaven,
Who when they see the hours ripe on earth,
Will rain hot vengeance on offenders heads.
Dut. Findes brotherhood in thee no sharper spurre?
Hath love in thy old blood no living fire?
Edwards seven sons (whereof thy self art one)
Were as seven Vialls of his sacred blood.
Or seven fair branches springing from one root:
Some of those seven are dri'd by natures course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut:
But Thomas, my deer Lord, my life, my Gloster;
One Viall full of Edwards Sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most Royal root
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hackt down, and his Summer leaves all vaded
By Envies hand, and Murders bloody Axe.
Ah Gaunt? His blood was thine, that bed, that womb,
That mettle, that self-mould that fashion'd thee,
Made him a man: and though thou liv'st and breath'st;
Yet art thou slain in him: thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy Fathers death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother die,
Who was the modell of thy Fathers life.
Call it not patience (Gaunt) it is despair,
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou shew'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching stern murther how to butcher thee:
That which in mean men, we intitle patience
Is pale cold cowardesse in noble brests:
What shall I say, to safegard thine own life,
The best way is to venge my Glosters death.
Gaunt. Heavens is the quarrell: for heavens substitute,
His Deputy anointed in his sight,
Hath caus'd his death, the which if wrongfully
Let heaven revenge: for I may never lift
An angry arme against his Minister.
Dut. Where then (alas) may I complain my self?
Gaun. To heaven, the widows Champion to defence.
Dut. Why then I will: farewell old Gaunt.
Thou go'st to Coventrey, there to behold
Our Cousin Hereford, and fell Mowbray fight:
O sit my Husbands wrongs on Herefords spear,
That it may enter butcher Mowbrayes brest:
Or if misfortune miss the first carreer,
Be Mowbrayes sins so heavy in his bosom,
That they may break his foaming Coursers back,
And throw the Rider headlong in the Lists,
A Caytiffe recreant to my Cousin Hereford.
Farewell old Gaunt, thy sometimes brothers wife
With her companion Grief, must end her life.
Gaunt. Sister farewell: I must to Coventrey,
As much good stay with thee, as go with me.
Dut. Yet one word more, Grief boundeth where it fals,
Not with the empty hollowneſſe but weight:
I take my leave, before I have begun,
For sorrow ends not: when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my Brother Edward York.
Loe, this is all: nay yet depart not so,
Though this be all, do not so quickly go,
I shall remember more. Bid him, Oh, what?
With all good speed at Plashie visit me.
Alack, and what shall good old York there see
But empty lodgings, and unfurnish'd walls,
Un-peopl'd Offices, untroden stones?
And what hear there for welcome, but my groans?
Therefore commend me, let him not come there,
To seek out sorrow that dwels every where;
Desolate, desolate will I hence, and dye,
The last leave of thee, takes my weeping eye. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Marshal and Aumerle.

Mar. My L. Aumerle, is Harry Hereford arm'd?
Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.
Mar. The Duke of Norfolk, sprightful and bold,
Stays but the summons of the appealants Trumpet.
Au. Why then the Champions are prepar'd, and stay
For nothing but his Majesties approach. Flourish.

Enter King, Gaunt, Bushy, Bagot, Green, & others: Then Mowbray in Armor, and Harrold.

Rich. Marshal, demand of yonder Champion
The cause of his arrival here in Armes;
Aske him his name, and orderly proceed
To swear him in the justice of his cause.
Mar. In Gods Name, and the Kings, say who thou art?
And why thou com'st, thus Knightly clad in Armes?
Against what man thou com'st, and what's thy quarrell,
Speak truly on thy Knighthood, and thine oath,
As so defend thee heaven, and thy valour.
Mow. My name is Tho. Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
Who hither come engaged by my oath,
(Which heaven defend a Knight should violate)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my King, and his succeeding issue,
Against the Duke of Hereford, that appeals me:
And by the Grace of God and this mine Arme,
To prove him (in defending of my self)
A Traitor to my God, my King, and me;
And as I truly fight, defend me heaven.
Tucket. Enter Hereford, and Harold.
Rich. Marshal: Aske yonder Knight in Armes,
Both who he is, and why he cometh hither,
Thus placed in habiliments of warre:
And formally according to our Law
Depose him in the justice of his cause.
Mar. What is thy name, & wherefore com'st thou hither
Before King Richard in his Royal Lists?
Against whom com'st thou? and what's thy quarel?
Speak like a true Knight, so defend thee heaven.
Bull. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Am I, who ready here do stand in Arms,
To prove by heavens grace, and my bodies valour,
In Lists, on Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk,
That he's a Traitor foul and dangerous,
To God of heaven, King Richard, and to me,
And as I truly fight, defend me heaven.
Mar. On pain of death, no person be so bold,
Or daring hardy as to touch the Lists,
Except the Marshal, and such officers
Appointed to direct these fair designes.
Bull. Lord Marshal, let me kisse my Soveraigns hand,
And bow my knee before his Majesty:
For Mowbray and my self are like two men,
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage,

Then let us take a ceremonious leave
And loving farewell of our several friends.
Mar. The Appealant in all duty greets your Highnesse.
And craves to kisse your hand, and take his leave.
Rich. We will descend, and fold him in our arms.
Cousin of Hereford as thy cause is just,
So be thy fortune in this Royal fight:
Farewell, my blood, which if to day thou shed,
Lament me may, but not revenge thee dead.
Bull. Oh let no noble eye prophane a tear
For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbrayes speare:
As confident, as is the Faulcons flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight.
My loving Lord, I take my leave of you,
Of you (my noble Cosin) Lord Aumerle;
Not sick, although I have to do with death,
But lusty, young, and cheerly drawing breath.
Loe, as at English Feasts, so I regreet
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet.
Oh thou the earthy author of my blood,
Whose youthful spirit in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold vigor lift me up
To reach at victory above my head,
Adde proof unto mine Armour with thy Prayers,
And with thy blessings steel my Lances point,
That it may enter Mowbrays waxen coat,
And furnish new the name of John a Gaunt
Even in the lusty haviour of his sonne.
Gaunt. Heaven in thy good cause make thee prosperous,
Be swift like lightning in the execution,
And let thy blows doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the Caske
Of thy amaz'd pernicious enemy.
Rouze up thy youthful Blood, be valiant, and live.
Bull. Mine innocence, and St. George to thrive.
Mow. How ever heaven or fortune cast my lot,
There lives, or dies, true to King Richards Throne,
A loyal, just, and upright Gentleman:
Never did Captain with a freer heart
Cast off his chains of bondage, and embrace
His golden uncontroul'd enfranchisement,
More than my dancing soul doth celebrate
This Feast of Battle, with mine adversary.
Most mighty Liege, and my companion Peers,
Take from my mouth, the wish of happy yeers,
As gentle, and as jocond, as to jest,
Go I to fight: Truth, hath a quiet brest.
Rich. Farewell my Lord, securely I espy
Vertue with valour, couched in thine eye:
Order the trial Marshal, and begin.
Mar. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster and Derby,
Receive thy Launce, and Heaven defend thy right.
Bull. Strong as a Tower in hope, I cry Amen.
Mar. Go bear this Launce to Thomas Duke of Norfolk.
1. Harry of Hereford, Lancaster and Derby,
Stands here for God, his Soveraign, and himself,
On pain to be found false and recreant,
To prove the Duke of Norfolk, Thomas Mowbray,
A Traitor to his God, his King, and him,
And dares him to set forward to the fight.
2. Har. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk
On pain to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himself, and to approve
Henry of Hereford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his Soveraign, and to him disloyal:
Couragiously, and with a free desire,
Attending but the signall to begin. A charge sounded.
Mar. Sound trumpets, and set forward Combatants:
Stay, the King hath thrown his Warder down.
Rich. Let them lay by their Helmets, and their Spears,
And both return back to their Chairs again:
Withdraw with us, and let the Trumpets sound,
While we return these Dukes what we decree.

A long Flourish.

Draw neer and list
What with our Councel we have done.
For that our Kingdoms earth should not be soyld
With that deer blood which it hath fostered,
And for our eies do hate the dire aspect
Of civil wounds plough'd up with neighbours swords,
Which so rouz'd up with boisterous untun'd Drums,
With harsh resounding Trumpets dreadful bray,
And grating shock of wrathful iron Arms,
Might from our quiet Confines fright fair Peace,
And make us wade even in our kindreds blood:
Therefore, we banish you our Territories.
You Cousin Hereford, upon pain of death,
Till twice five Summers have enrich'd our fields,
Shall not regreet our fair dominions,
But tread the stranger paths of banishment.
Bull. Your will be done: This must my comfort be,
That Sun that warms you here, shall shine on me:
And those his golden beams to you here lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.
Rich. Norfolk: for thee remains a heavier doom,
Which I with some unwillingnesse pronounce,
The slye slow hours shall not determinate
The dateless limit of thy deer exile:
The hopelesse word, of never to return,
Breathe I against thee, upon pain of life.
Mow. A heavy sentence, my most Soveraign Liege,
And all unlook'd for from your Highnesse mouth:
A deerer merit, not so deep a maime,
As to be cast forth in the common air
Have I deserved at your Highnesse hands.
The language I have learn'd these forty years
(My native English) now I must forgo,
And now my tongues use is to me no more,
Than an unstringed Violl, or a Harp,
Or like a cunning Instrument cas'd up,
Or being open, put into his hands
That knows no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you have engoal'd my tongue,
Doubly portcullist with my teeth and lips,
And dull, unfeeling, barren ignorance,
Is made my Goaler to attend on me:
I am too old to fawn upon a Nurse,
Too farre in years to be a pupil now:
What is thy sentence then, but speechlesse death,
Which robs my tongue from breathing native breath?
Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate,
After our sentence, plaining comes too late.
Mow. Then thus I turn me from my Countries light
To dwell in solemn shades of endlesse night.
Rich. Return again, and take an oath with thee
Lay on our Royal sword, your banish'd hands;
Swear by the duty that you owe to heaven
(Our part therein we banish with your selves)
To keep the Oath that we administer:
You never shall (so help you Truth, and Heaven)
Embrace each others love in banishment,
Nor ever look upon each others face,

Nor

Nor ever write, regreet, or reconcile
This lowring tempeſt of your home-bred hate,
Nor ever by adviſed purpoſe meet,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
'Gainſt Us, our State, our Subjects, or our Land.
Bul. I ſwear.
Mow. And I, to keep all this.
Bull. Norfolk, ſo farre, as to mine enemy,
By this time (had the King permitted us)
One of our ſouls had wandred in the air,
Baniſh'd this frail ſepulcher of our fleſh,
As now our fleſh is baniſh'd from this Land.
Confeſſe thy Treaſons, ere thou fly this Realm,
Since thou haſt farre to go, bear not along
The clogging burthen of a guilty ſoul.
Mow. No Bullingbrooke: if ever I were Traitor,
My name be blotted from the book of Life,
And I from heaven baniſh'd, as from hence:
But what thou art, heaven, thou, and I do know,
And all too ſoon (I fear) the King ſhall rue.
Farewell (my Liege) now no way can I ſtray,
Save back to England, all the worlds my way.
Rich. Uncle, even in the glaſſes of thine eies
I ſee thy grieved heart: thy ſad aſpect,
Hath from the number of his baniſh'd years
Pluck'd four away: Six frozen Winters ſpent,
Return with welcome home from baniſhment.
Bull. How long a time lies in one little word:
Four lagging Winters, and four wanton Springs
End in a word, ſuch is the breath of Kings.
Gaunt. I thank my Liege, that in regard of me
He ſhortens four years of my ſons exile:
But little vantage ſhall I reap thereby.
For ere the ſix years that he hath to ſpend,
Can change the Moons, and bring their times about,
My oyl-dri'd Lamp, and time-bewaſted light
Shall be extinct with age, and endleſſe night:
My inch of Taper, will be burnt, and done,
And blindfold death, not let me ſee my ſon.
Rich. Why Uncle, thou haſt many years to live.
Gaunt. But not a minute (King) that thou canſt give;
Shorten my daies thou canſt with ſudden ſorrow,
And pluck nights from me, but not lend a morrow:
Thou canſt help time to furrow me with age,
But ſtop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage:
Thy word is currant with him, for my death,
But dead, thy kingdom cannot buy my breath.
Rich. Thy ſon is baniſh'd upon good advice,
Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gave,
Why at our juſtice ſeem'ſt thou then to lowre?
Gaunt. Things ſweet to taſte, prove in digeſtion ſowre:
You urg'd me as a Judge, but I had rather
You would have bid me argue like a Father.
Alas, I look'd when ſome of you ſhould ſay,
I was too ſtrict to make mine own away:
But you gave leave to my unwilling tongue,
Againſt my will, to do my ſelf this wrong.
Rich. Coſin farewell: and Uncle bid him ſo:
Six years we baniſh him, and he ſhall go. Exit.

Flouriſh.

Au. Coſin farewell, what preſence muſt not know
From where you do remain, let paper ſhow.
Mar. My Lord, no leave take I, for I will ride
As farr as Land will let me, by your ſide.
Gaunt. Oh to what purpoſe doſt thou hoard thy words,
That thou return'ſt no greeting to thy friends?
Bull. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongues office ſhould be prodigal,
To breath th'abundant dolour of the heart.
Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy abſence for a time.
Bull. Joy abſent, grief is preſent for that time.
Gaunt. What is ſix Winters, they are quickly gone?
Bull. To men in joy, but grief makes one hour ten.
Gaunt. Call it a travel that thou tak'ſt for pleaſure.
Bull. My heart will ſigh, when I miſcall it ſo,
Which finds it an inforced Pilgrimage.
Gaunt. The ſullen paſſage of thy weary ſteps
Eſteem a ſoyl, wherein thou art to ſet
The precious Jewell of thy home return.
Bull. Oh who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the froſty Caucaſus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
By bare imagination of a Feaſt?
Or wallow naked in December ſnow
By thinking on fantaſtick Summers heat?
Oh no, the apprehenſion of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worſe:
Fell ſorrows tooth, doth ever ranckle more
Then when it bites, but lanceth not the ſore.
Gaunt. Come, come (my ſon) Ile bring thee on thy way
Had I thy youth, and cauſe, I would not ſtay.
Bull. Then Englands ground farewell: ſweet ſoil adieu
My Mother and my Nurſe, which bears me yet:
Where ere I wander, boaſt of this I can,
Though baniſh'd, yet a true-born Engliſhman.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter King, Aumerle, Green, Bagot.

Rich. We did obſerve. Coſin Aumerle,
How farre brought you High Hereford on his way?
Aum. I brought High Hereford (if you call him ſo)
But to the next high way, and there I left him.
Rich. And ſay, what ſtore of parting tears were ſhed?
Aum. Faith none by me: except the Northeaſt wind
Which then grew bitterly againſt our face,
Awak'd the ſleepy rheume, and ſo by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a tear.
Rich. What ſaid our Coſin when you parted with him?
Au. Farewell: and for my heart diſdained that my tounge
Should ſo prophane the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeit oppreſſion of ſuch grief,
That word ſeem'd buried in my ſorrows grave.
Marry, would the word farewell, had lengthn'd hours,
And added years to his ſhort baniſhment,
He ſhould have had a volumne of farewels
But ſince it would not, he had none of me.
Rich. He is our Coſin (Coſin) but 'tis doubt,
When time ſhall call him home from baniſhment,
Whether our kinſman come to ſee his friends,
Our ſelf, and Buſhy: here Bagot and Green
Obſerv'd his Courtſhip to the common people;
How he did ſeem to dive into their hearts,
With humble, and familiar courteſie,
What reverence he did throw away on ſlaves;
Wooing poor Crafts-men with the craft of ſouls,
And patient under-bearing of his fortune,
As 'twere to baniſh their affects with him.
Off goes his Bonnet to an Oyſter-wench,

A brace of Dray-men bid God ſpeed him well,
And had the tribute of his ſupple knee,
With thanks my Countreymen, my loving friends,
As were our England in reverſion his,
And he our ſubjects next degree in hope.
Gr. Well, he is gone, & with him goe theſe thoughts:
Now for the Rebels, which ſtand out in Ireland,
Expedient mannage muſt be made my Liege
Ere further leiſure, yield the further means
For their advantage, and your highneſſe loſſe.
Rich. We will our ſelf in perſon to this warre,
And for our Coffers, with too great a Court,
And liberal Largeſſe, are grown ſomewhat light,
We are inforc'd to farm out Royal Realm,
The revenew whereof ſhall furniſh us
For our affairs in hand: if they come ſhort
Our ſubſtitutes at home ſhall have Blank charters:
Whereto, when they ſhall know what men are rich,
They ſhall ſubſcribe them for large ſummes of Gold,
And ſend them after to ſupply our wants:
For we will make for Ireland preſently.

Enter Buſhy.

Buſhy, what news?
Bu. Old John of Gaunt is very ſick my Lord,
Sodainly taken, and hath ſent poſt haſte
To intreat your Majeſty to viſit him.
Ric. Where lies he?
Bu. At Ely-houſe.
Ric. Now put it (heaven) in his Phyſitians mind,
To help him to his grave immediately:
The lining of his Coffers ſhall make Coats
To deck our ſouldiers for theſe Iriſh warres.
Come Gentlemen, let's all go viſit him:
Pray heaven we may make haſte, and come too late. Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scæna Prima.

Enter ſick Gaunt, with York.

Gau. Will the King come, that I may breath my laſt
In wholſom counſell to his unſtaid youth?
Yor. Vex not your ſelf, nor ſtrive not with your breath,
For all in vain comes counſel to his ear.
Gau. Oh but (they ſay) the tongues of dying men
Inforce attention like deep harmony:
Where words are ſcarce, they are ſeldom ſpent in vain,
For they breath truth, that breath their words in pain.
He that no more muſt ſay, is liſten'd more,
Then they whom youth and eaſe have taught to gloſe,
More are mens ends markt; then their lives before,
The ſetting Sun, and Muſick is the cloſe
As the laſt taſte of ſweets, is ſweeteſt laſt,
Writ in remembrance, more then things long paſt;
Though Richard my lives counſel would not hear,
My deaths ſad tale may yet undeaf his ear.
Yor. No, it is ſtopt with other flatt'ring ſounds
As praiſes of his ſtate: then there are found
Laſcivious Meeters, to whoſe venom ſound
The open ears of youth doth always liſten.
Report of faſhions in proud Italy,
Whoſe manners ſtill our tardie apiſh Nation
Limps after in baſe imitation.
Where doth the World thruſt forth a vanity,
So it be new, there's no reſpect how vile,
That is not quickly buz'd into their ears?
That all too late comes counſel to be heard,
Where will doth mutiny with wits regard:
Direct not him, whoſe way himſelf will chooſe,
'Tis breath thou lackſt, and that breath wilt thou looſe.
Gaunt. Methinks I am a Prophet new inſpir'd,
And thus expiring, do foretell of him,
His raſh fierce blaze of Ryot cannot laſt,
For violent fires ſoon burn out themſelves;
Small ſhowers laſt long, but ſodain ſtorms are ſhort,
He tires betimes, that ſpurs too faſt betimes;
With eager feeding, food doth choak the feeder;
Light vanity, inſatiate cormorant,
Conſuming means ſoon preys upon it ſelf.
This royall Throne of Kings, this ſceptered Iſle,
This earth of Majeſty, this ſeat of Mars,
This other Eden, demy paradiſe,
This Fortreſs built by Nature for her ſelf,
Againſt infection, and the hand of warre:
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious ſtone ſet in the ſilver Sea,
Which ſerves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a Moat defenſive to a houſe,
Againſt the envy of leſſe happier Lands,
This bleſſed plot, this Earth, this Realm, this England,
This Nurſe, this teeming womb of Royal Kings,
Fear'd by their breed, and famous for their birth,
Renowned for their deeds, as far from home,
For Chriſtian ſervice, and true Chivalrie,
As is the ſepulcher in ſtubborn Iury
Of the worlds ranſom, bleſſed Maries Son.
This Land of ſuch deer ſouls, this deer-deer Land,
Deer for her reputation through the world,
Is now Leas'd out (I dye pronouncing it)
Like to a Tenement or pelting Farme
England bound in with the triumphant Sea,
Whoſe rocky ſhore beats back the envious ſiedge
Of watry Neptune, is now bound in with ſhame,
With Inky blots, and rotten Parchment bonds.
That England that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a ſhameful conqueſt of it ſelf.
Ah? would the ſcandal vaniſh with my life,
How happy then were my enſuing death?

Enter King, Queen, Aumerle, Buſhy, Green, Bagot, Roſs, and Willoughby.

Yor. The King is come, deal mildly with his youth,
For young hot Coalts, being rag'd, do rage the more.
Qu. How fares our Noble Uncle Lancaſter?
Ri. What comfort man? How iſt with aged Gaunt?
Ga. Oh how that name befits my compoſition:
Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old:
Within me grief hath kept a tedious faſt,
And who abſtains from meat, that is not gaunt?
For ſleeping England long time have I watcht,
Watching breeds leanneſſe, leanneſſe is all gaunt:
The pleaſure that ſome Fathers feed upon,
Is my ſtrict faſt, I mean my Childrens looks,
And therein faſting haſt thou made me gaunt:
Gaunt am I for the grave, gaunt as a grave,
Whoſe hollow womb inherits nought but bones.
Ric. Can ſick men play ſo nicely with their names?
Gau. No, miſery makes ſport to mock it ſelfe:
Since thou doſt ſeek to kill my name in me,

I mock my name (great King) to flatter thee.
Ric. Should dying men flatter those that live?
Gau. No, no men living flatter those that dye.
Ric. Thou now a dying, saist thou flatter'st me.
Gau. Oh no, thou dyest, though I the sicker be.
Ric. I am in health, I breathe, I see thee ill.
Gau. Now he that made me, knows I see thee ill:
Ill in my self to see, and in thee, seeing ill,
Thy death-bed is no lesser then the Land,
Wherein thou liest in reputation sick,
And thou too careless patient as thou art,
Committ'st thy anointed body to the cure
Of those Physitians that first wounded thee:
A thousand flatterers sit within thy Crown,
Whose compasse is no bigger then thy hand,
And yet ingaged in so small a Verge,
The waste is no whit lesser then thy Land.
Oh had thy Grandsier with a prophets eye,
Seen how his sons son should destroy his sons,
From forth thy reach he would have laid thy shame,
Deposing thee before thou wert possest,
Which art possest now to depose thy self,
Why (Cosin) were thou Regent of the world,
It were a shame to let his Land by lease:
But for thy world enjoying but this Land,
Is it not more then shame, to shame it so?
Landlord of England art thou, and not King:
Thy state of Law, is bondslave to the Law,
And ——

Rich. And thou, a lunatick lean-witted fool,
Presuming on an Agues priviledge,
Dar'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheek, chasing the Royal blood
With fury, from his native residence?
Now by my Seats right Royal Majesty,
Wer't thou not brother to great Edwards son,
This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head,
Should run thy head from thy unreverent shoulders.
Gau. Oh spare me not, my brother Edwards son,
For that I was his father Edwards son:
That blood already (like the Pellican)
Thou hast tapt out, and drunkenly carows'd.
My brother Glouceſter, plain well meaning soul
(Whom fair befall in heaven 'mongst happy souls)
May be a president and witnesse good,
That thou respect'st not spilling Edwards blood:
Joyn with the present sickneſſe that I have,
And thy unkindneſſe be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too long wither'd flower.
Live in thy shame, but dye not shame with thee,
These words hereafter thy tormentors be.
Convey me to my bed, then to my grave.
Love they to live, that love and honour have. Exit.
Rich. And let them dye that age and sullens have,
For both hast thou, and both become the grave.
Yor. I do beseech your Majesty impute his words
To wayward sicklineſſe, and age in him:
He loves you on my life, and holds you deer
As Harry Duke of Hereford, were he here.
Rich. Right, you say true: as Herefords love; so his;
As theirs, so mine: and all be as it is.

Enter Northumberland.

Nor. My Liege, old Gaunt commends him to your Majesty.

Rich. What saies he?
Nor. Nay nothing, all is said:
His tongue is now a stringleſſe instrument,
Words, life, and all, old Lancaſter hath spent.
Yor. Be York the next, that must be bankrupt so.
Though death be poor, it ends a mortal wo.
Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he,
His time is spent, our pilgramage must be:
So much for that. Now for our Irish warres,
We must supplant those rough rug-headed Kernes,
Which live like venom, where no venom elſe
But onely they, have priviledge to live.
And for these great affairs do aske some charge
Towards our assistance, we do seize to us
The plate, coyn, and revenews, and moveables,
Whereof our Uncle Gaunt did stand possest.
Yor. How long shall I be patient? Oh how long
Shall tender duty make me suffer wrong?
Not Glouſters death, nor Herefords banishment.
Nor Gaunts rebukes, nor Englands private wrongs,
Nor the prevention of poor Bullingbrooke,
About his marriage, nor my own disgrace
Have ever made me sower, my patient cheek,
Or bend on wrinkle on my Soveraigns face:
I am the last of noble Edwards sons,
Of whom thy father Prince of Wales was first:
In warres was never Lyon rag'd more fierce:
In peace, was never gentle Lamb more mild,
Then was that young and Princely Gentleman:
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he
Accomplish'd with the number of thy hours:
But when he frown'd, it was against the French,
And not against his friends: his noble hand
Did win what he did spend: and spent not that
Which his triumphant fathers hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindreds blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kinne:
Oh Richard, York is too farre gone with grief,
Or else he never would compare between.
Rich. Why Uncle,
What's the matter?
Yor. Oh my Liege pardon me if you please, if not
I pleas'd not to be pardon'd, am content with all:
Seek you to seize, and gripe into your hands
The Royalties and Rights of banish'd Hereford?
Is not Gaunt dead, and doth not Hereford live?
Was not Gaunt just, and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserve to have an heir?
Is not his heir a well deserving son?
Take Herefords rights away, and take from time
His Charters; and his customary rights:
Let not to morrow then ensue to day,
Be not thy self. For how art thou a King
But by fair sequence and succession?
Now afore God, God forbid I say true,
If you do wrongfully seize Herefords right,
Call in his Letters Patents that he hath
By his Attourneys general, to sue
His Livery, and deny his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You loose a thousand well disposed hearts,
And prick my tender patience to those thoughts
Which honour and allegeance cannot think.
Ric. Think what you will: we seise into our hands,
His plate, his goods, his money, and his Lands.
Yor. Ile not be by the while: my Leige farewell,

What will enſue hereof, there's none can tell,
But by bad courſes may be underſtood,
That their events can never fall out good. Exit.
Rich. Go Buſhie to the Earle of Wiltſhire ſtraight,
Bid him repair to us to Ely-houſe,
To ſee this buſineſſe: to morrow next
We will for Ireland, and 'tis time I trow:
And we create in abſence of our ſelf
Our Uncle York, Lord Governor of England:
For he is juſt, and always lov'd us well.
Come on our Queen, to morrow muſt we part,
Be merry, for our time of ſtay is ſhort. Flouriſh.
Manet North, Willoughby, and Roſſe.
Nor. Well Lords, the Duke of Lancaſter is dead.
Roſſ. And living too, for now his ſon is Duke.
Will. Barely in title, not in revenue.
Nor. Richly in both, if juſtice had her right.
Roſſ. My heart is great: but it muſt break with ſilence
Ere't be disburthened with a liberal tongue.
Nor. Nay ſpeak thy mind: and let him ne'r ſpeak more
That ſpeaks thy words again to do thee harm.
Wil. Tends that thou'dſt ſpeak to th'Duke of Hereford?
If it be ſo, out with it boldly man:
Quick is mine ear to hear of good towards him.
Roſſ. No good at all that I can can do for him,
Unleſſe you call it good to pitty him,
Bereft and gelded of his patrimony.
Nor. Now afore heaven, it's ſhame ſuch wrongs are born,
In him a royal Prince, and many moe,
Of noble blood in this declining Land;
The King is not himſelf, but baſely led
By flatterers, and what they will inform
Meerly in hate 'gainſt any of us all,
That will the King ſeverely proſecute
'Gainſt us, our lives, our children, and our heirs.
Roſſ. The Commons hath he pill'd with grievous taxes
And quite loſt their hearts: the Nobles hath he fin'd
For ancient quarrels, and quite loſt their hearts.
Will. And daily new exactions are deviſ'd
As blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what:
But what o'Gods name doth become of this?
Nor. Wars hath not waſted it, for war'd he hath not,
But baſely yielded upon comprimize,
That which his Anceſtors atchiev'd with blows:
More hath he ſpent in peace, then they in warres.
Roſ. The Earle of Wiltſhire hath the Realm in Farm.
Wil. The King's grown bankrupt like a broken man.
Nor. Reproach and diſſolution hangeth over him.
Roſ. He hath not money for theſe Iriſh wars:
(His burthenous taxations notwithſtanding)
But by the robbing of the baniſh'd Duke.
Nor. His noble kinſman, moſt degenerate King:
But Lords, we hear this fearful tempeſt ſing,
Yet ſeek no ſhelter to avoid the ſtorm:
We ſee the wind ſit ſore upon our ſails,
And yet we ſtrike not, but ſecurely periſh.
Roſ. We ſee the very wrack that we muſt ſuffer,
And unavoyded is the danger now
For ſuffering ſo the cauſes of our wrack.
Nor. Not ſo: even through the hollow eies of death,
I ſpie life peering: but I dare not ſay
How neer the tidings of our comfort is,
Wil. Nay let us ſhare thy thoughts, as thou doſt ours.
Roſ. Be confident to ſpeak Northumberland,
We three, are but thy ſelf, and ſpeaking ſo,
Thy words are but as thoughts, therefore be bold.
Nor. Then thus: I have from Port le Blan
A Bay in Britain receiv'd intelligence,
That Harry Duke of Hereford, Rainald Lord Cobham,
That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His brother Archbiſhop, late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Rainſton,
Sir John Norberie, Sir Robert Waterton, and Francis Quoint,
All theſe well furniſh'd by the Duke of Britain,
With eight tall ſhips, three thouſand men of warre
Are making hither with all due expedience,
And ſhortly mean to touch our Northern ſhore:
Perhaps they had ere this, but that they ſtay
The firſt departing of the King for Ireland.
If then we ſhall ſhake off our ſlaviſh yoak,
Impe out our drooping Countries broken wing,
Redeem from broaking pawn the blemiſh'd Crown,
Wipe off the duſt that hides our Scepters gilt,
And make high Majeſty look like it ſelf,
Away with me in haſte to Ravenſpurgh,
But if you faint, as fearing to do ſo,
Stay, and be ſecret, and my ſelf will go.
Roſ. To horſe, to horſe, urge doubts to them that fear.
Wil. Hold out my horſe, and I will firſt be there.
Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Queen, Buſhy, and Bagot.

Buſh. Madam, your Majeſty is too much ſad,
You promiſ'd when you parted with the King,
To lay aſide ſelf-harming heavineſſe,
And entertain a cheerful diſpoſition,
Qu. To pleaſe the King, I did: to pleaſe my ſelf
I cannot do it: yet I know no cauſe
Why I ſhould welcome ſuch a gueſt as grief,
Save bidding farewell to ſo ſweet a gueſt
As my ſweet Richard, yet again me thinks
Some unborn ſorrow, ripe in fortunes womb
Is coming towards me, and my inward ſoul
Which nothing trembles, at ſomething it grieves,
More than with parting from my Lord the King.
Buſh. Each ſubſtance of a grief hath twenty ſhadows
Which ſhews like grief it ſelf, but is not ſo:
For ſorrows eye, glazed with blinding tears,
Divides one thing intire, to many objects,
Like perſpectives, which rightly gaz'd upon
Shew nothing but confuſion ey'd awry,
Diſtinguiſh form: ſo your ſweet Majeſty
Looking awry upon your Lords departure,
Find ſhapes of grief, more then himſelf to waile,
Which look'd on as it is, is nought but ſhadows
Of what it is not: then thrice gracious Queen,
More then your Lords departure weep not, more's not ſeen;
Or if it be, 'tis with falſe ſorrows eye,
Which for things true, weep things imaginary.
Qu. It may be ſo, but yet my inward ſoul
Perſwades me it is otherwiſe: how ere it be,
I cannot but be ſad: ſo heavy ſad,
As though one thinking on no thought I think,
Makes me with heavy nothing faint and ſhrink.
Buſh. 'Tis nothing but conceit (my gracious Lady.)

Qu.

Qu. 'Tis nothing leſſe: conceit is ſtill deriv'd
From ſome fore-father grief, mine is not ſo,
For nothing hath begot my ſomething grief,
Or ſomething, hath the nothing that I grieve,
'Tis in reverſion that I do poſſeſſe,
But what it is, that is not yet known, what
I cannot name, 'tis nameleſſe woe I wot.

Enter Green.

Gree. Heaven ſave your Majeſty, and well met Gentlemen
I hope the King is not yet ſhipt for Ireland.

Qu. Why hop'ſt thou ſo? 'Tis better hope he is:
For his deſignes crave haſte, good hope,
Then wherefore doſt thou hope he is not ſhipt?

Gree. That he our hope, might have retir'd his power,
And driven into deſpair an enemies hope,
Who ſtrongly hath ſet footing in this Land,
The baniſh'd Bullinbrooke repeals himſelf,
And with up-lifted Arms is ſafe arriv'd
At Ravenſpurg.

Qu. Now God in heaven forbid.

Gree. O Madam 'tis too true: and that is worſe,
The L. Northumberland, his young ſon Henry Percie,
The Lords of Roſſe, Beaumond, and Willoughby,
With all their powerful friends are fled to him.

Buſh. Why have you not proclaim'd Northumberland
And the reſt of that revolted faction, Traitors?

Gree. We have: whereupon the Earl of Worceſter
Hath broke his ſtaffe, reſign'd his Stewardſhip,
And all the houſhold ſervants fled with him to Bullinbrook.

Qu. So Green, thou art the Midwife of my woe,
And Bullinbrooke my ſorrows diſmal heir:
Now hath my ſoul brought forth her prodigie,
And I a gaſping new delivered Mother,
Have woe to woe, ſorrow to ſorrow joyn'd.

Buſh. Deſpair not Madam,

Qu. Who ſhall hinder me?
I will deſpair and be at enmity
With couzening hope; he is a flatterer.
A Paraſite, a keeper back of death,
Who gently would diſſolve the bands of life,
Which falſe hopes linger in extremity.

Enter York.

Gree. Here comes the Duke of York.

Qu. With ſignes of warre about his aged neck,
Oh full of careful buſineſſe are his looks:
Uncle, for heavens ſake ſpeak comfortable words.

Yor. Comfort's in heaven, and we are on the earth,
Where nothing lives but croſſes, care and grief:
Your Husband he is gone to ſave farre off,
Whilſt others come to make his looſe at home:
Here am I left to underprop his Land,
Who weak with age, cannot ſupport my ſelf:
Now comes his ſick hour that his ſurfet made,
Now ſhall he try his friends that flattered him.

Enter a Servant.

Ser. My Lord, your ſon was gone before I came,

Yor. He was: why ſo, go all which way it will:
The Nobles they are fled, the Commons they are cold,
And will I fear revolt on Herefords ſide.
Sirra, get thee to Plaſhie to my Siſter Gloſter,
Bid her ſend me preſently a thouſand pound,
Hold, take my Ring.

Ser. My Lord, I had forgot,
To tell your Lordſhip, to day I came by, and call'd there,
But I ſhall grieve you to report the reſt.

Yor. What is't knave?

Ser. An hour before I came, the Dutcheſſe di'd,

Yor. Heav'n for his mercy, what a tide of woes
Come ruſhing on this woful Land at once?
I know not what to do: I would to heaven
(So my untruth had not provok'd him to it)
The King had cut off my head with my brothers.
What, are there poſts diſpatch'd for Ireland?
How ſhall we do for money for theſe warres?
Come ſiſter, (Coſin I would ſay) pray pardon me.
Go follow, get thee home, provide ſome Carts,
And bring away the Armour that is there.
Gentlemen, will you muſter men?
If I know how, or which way to order theſe affairs
Thus diſorderly thruſt into my hands,
Never beleeve me. Both are my kinſmen,
Th'one is my Soveraign, whom both my oath
And duty bids defend: th'other again
Is my kinſman, whom the King hath wrong'd,
Whom conſcience, and my kindred bids to right.
Well, ſomewhat we muſt do: Come Cozen,
Ile diſpoſe of you. Gentlemen, go muſter up your men,
And meet me preſently at Barkly Caſtle;
I ſhould to Plaſhy too: but time will not permit,
All is uneven, & every thing is left at ſix and ſeven. Exit

Buſh. The wind ſits fair for news to go to Ireland,
But none returns: for us to levy power
Proportionable to th'enemy, is all impoſſible.

Gree. Beſides our neerneſſe to the King in love,
Is neer the hate of thoſe love not the King.

Bag. And that's the wavering Commons, for their love
Lies in their purſes, and who ſo empties them,
By ſo much fils their hearts with deadly hate.

Buſh. Wherein the King ſtands generally condemn'd.

Bag. If judgement lie in them, then ſo do we,
Becauſe we have been ever neer the King.

Gree. Well: I will for refuge ſtraight to Briſtol Caſtle,
The Earl of Wiltſhire is already there.

Buſh. Thither will I with you, for little office
Will the hateful Commons perform for us,
Except like Currs, to tear us all in pieces:
Will you go along with us?

Bag. No, I will to Ireland to his Majeſty:
Farewell, if hearts preſages be not vain,
We three here part, that never ſhall meet again.

Bu. That's as York thrives to beat back Bullinbrooke.

Gree. Alas poor Duke, the taske he undertakes
Is numbring Sands, and drinking Oceans dry,
Where one on his ſide fights, thouſands will flye.

Buſh. Farewell at once, for once, for all, and ever.
Well, we may meet again.

Bag. I fear me never. Exit.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter the Duke of Hereford, and Northumberland.

Bul. How farre is it my Lord to Barkley now?

Nor. Beleeve me Noble Lord,
I am a ſtranger here in Glouſterſhire,
Theſe high wild hills, and rough uneven waies,
Draws out our miles, and makes them wearieſome:
And yet our fair diſcourſe hath been as ſugar,

Making

Making the hard way sweet and delectable:
But I bethink me, what a weary way
From Ravenspurgh to Cottshold will be found,
In Rosse and Willoughby, wanting your company,
Which I protest hath very much beguil'd
The tediousnesse and processe of my travel:
But theirs is sweetned with the hope to have
The present benefit that I possesse:
And hope to joy, is little lesse in joy,
Then hope enjoy'd: By this, the weary Lords
Shall make their way seem short, as mine hath done,
By sight of what I have, your noble Company,

Bull. Of much lesse value is my Company,
Then your good words: but who comes here?

Enter H. Percy.

North. it is my son, young Harry Percie,
Sent from my brother Worcester: whencesoever.
Harry, how fares your Uncle?

Percie. I had thought, my Lord, to have learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the Queen?

Percie. No, my good Lord, he hath forsook the Court,
Broken his staffe of Office, and dispersed
The Houshold of the King.

North. What was his reason?
He was not so resolv'd, when we last spake together.

Percie. Because your Lordship was proclaimed Traitor.
But he, my Lord, is gone to Ravenspurgh,
To offer service to the Duke of Hereford,
And sent me over by Barkley, to discover
What power the Duke of York had levied there,
Then with direction to repair to Ravenspurgh,

North. Have you forgot the Duke of Hereford (Boy.)

Percie. No, my good Lord; for that is not forgot
Which ne're I did remember: to my knowledge,
I never in my life did look on him.

North. Then learn to know him now: this is the Duke.

Percie. My gracious Lord, I tender you my service,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder dayes shall ripen, and confirm
To more approved service and desert.

Bull. I thank thee gentle Percy, and be sure
I count my self in nothing else so happy,
As in a soul remembring my good Friends:
And as my fortune ripens with thy Love,
It shall be still thy true Loves recompence,
My heart this covenant makes, my hand thus seals it.

North. How farre is it to Barkley? and what stirre
Keeps good old York there with his men of Warre?

Percie. There stands the Castle by yond tuft of trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I have heard.
And in it are the Lords of York, Barkley, and Seymour
None else of name, and noble estimate.

Enter Rosse and Willoughby.

North. Here comes the Lords of Rosse and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, fiery red with haste.

Bull. Welcome my Lords, I wot your love pursues
A banisht Traitor; all my Treasury
Is yet but unfelt thanks, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your love and labours recompence.

Rosse. Your presence makes us rich most Noble Lord.

Willo. And farre surmounts our labour to attain it.

Bull. Evermore thanks, th'Exchequer of the poor,
Which till my infant-fortune comes to years,
Stands for my Bounty: but who comes here?

Enter Barkley.

North. It is my Lord of Barkly, as I guesse.

Bark. My Lord of Hereford, my Message is to you.

Bull. My Lord, my answer is to Lancaster,
And I am come to seek that name in England,
And I must find that Title in your Town,
Before I make reply to aught you say.

Bark. Mistake me not, my Lord, 'tis not my meaning
To raze one title of your honour out.
To you, my Lord, I come (what Lord you will)
From the most glorious of this Land,
The Duke of York, to know what pricks you on
To take advantage of the absent time,
And fright our Native peace, with self-born Arms.

Enter York.

Bull. I shall not need transport my words by you,
Here comes his Grace in person. My Noble Uncle.

Yor. Shew me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,
Whose duty is deceivable, and false.

Bull. My gracious Uncle.

Yor. Tut, tut, Grace me no Grace, nor Uncle me,
I am no Traitors Uncle; and that word Grace,
In an ungracious mouth, is but prophane.
Why have these banish'd, and forbidden Leggs.
Dar'd once to touch a dust of Englands Ground?
But more then why, why have they dar'd to march
So many miles upon her peaceful Bosom,
Frighting her pale-fac'd Villages with Warre,
And ostentation of despised Arms?
Com'st thou because th'anointed King is hence?
Why foolish Boy, the King is left behind,
And in my loyal Bosome lies his power.
Were I but now the Lord of such hot youth,
As when brave Gaunt, thy Father, and thy self
Rescued the Black Prince, that young Mars of men,
From forth the Ranks of many thousand French:
Oh then, how quickly should this arm of mine,
Now Prisoner to the Palsie, chastise thee,
And minister correction to thy fault.

Bull. My gracious Uncle, let me know my fault,
On what condition stands it, and wherein?

Yor. Even in condition of the worst degree,
In grosse Rebellion, and detested Treason:
Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come
Before th'expiration of thy time,
In braving Arms against thy Soveraigne.

Bull. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford,
But as I come, I come for Lancaster.
And noble Uncle, I beseech your Grace
Look on my wrongs with an indifferent eye:
You are my Father, for me thinks in you
I see old Gaunt alive. Oh then my Father,
Will you permit that I shall stand condemn'd
A wandring Vagabond; my Rights and Royalties
Pluckt from my Arms perforce, and given away
To upstart Unthrifts? wherefore was I born?
If that my Cosin King, be King of England,
It must be granted I am Duke of Lancaster.
You have a son, Aumerle, my Noble kinsman,
Had you first died, and he been thus trode down,
He should have found his Uncle Gaunt a father,
To rowze his wrongs, and chase them to the bay.
I am deny'd to sue my Livery here,
And yet my Letters Patents give me leave:
My Fathers goods are all distrain'd, and sold,
And these and all, are all amisse imploy'd.

What

What would you have me do? I am a subject,
And challenge Law: Attorneys are deny'd me,
And therefore personally I lay my claim
To mine inheritance of free Descent.
North. The Noble Duke hath been too much abus'd.
Ross. It stands your Grace upon to do him right.
Willo. Base men by his endowments are made great.
Yor. My Lords of England, let me tell you this,
I have had feeling of my Cosins wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to do him right:
But in this kind, to come in braving Arms,
Be his own Carver, and cut out his way,
To find out right with wrongs it may not be,
And you that do abet him in this kind,
Cherish Rebellion, and are Rebells all.
North. The Noble Duke hath sworn his coming is
But for his own; and for the right of that,
We all have strongly sworn to give him aid,
And let him nev'r see joy that breaks that oath.
Yor. Well, well, I see the issue of these Arms,
I cannot mend it, I must needs confesse,
Because my power is weak, and all ill left:
But if I could, by him that gave me life,
I would attach you all, and make you stoop
Unto the Soveraign mercy of the King.
But since I cannot, be it known to you,
I do remain as Neuter. So fare you well,
Unlesse you please to enter in the Castle,
And there repose you for this night.
Bull. An offer Uncle that we will accept:
But we must winne your Grace to go with us
To Bristow-Castle, which they say is held
By Bushy, Bagot, and their Complices,
The Caterpillars of the Common-wealth,
Which I have sworn to weed, and pluck away.
Yor. It may be I will go with you, but yet Ile pause,
For I am loth to break our Countreys Laws:
For friends, nor foes, to me welcome you are,
Things past redresse, are now with me past care. Exeunt.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, and a Captain.

Cap. My Lord of Salisbury, we have staid ten days,
And hardly kept your Countrey-men together,
And yet we hear no tidings from the King;
Therefore we will disperse our selves: farewell.
Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusty Welchman,
The King reposeth all his confidence in thee.
Cap. 'Tis thought the King is dead, we will not stay,
The Bay-trees in our Countrey are all wither'd,
And Meteors fright the fixed Stars of heaven;
The pale-fac'd Moon looks bloody on the Earth,
And lean-look'd Prophets whisper fearful change;
Rich men look sad, and Ruffians dance and leap,
The one in fear, to lose what they enjoy,
The other to enjoy by Rage and Warre:
These signes forerun the death of Kings.
Farewell, our Countreymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd Richard their King is dead. Exit.

Sal. Ah Richard, with eies of heavy mind,
I see thy Glory like a shooting Starre,
Fall to the base earth from the firmament:
Thy Sun sets weeping in the lowly West.
Witnessing Storms to come, Woe, and Unrest:
Thy Friends are fled to wait upon thy Foes,
And crossely to thy good, all fortune goes. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scæna Prima.

Enter Bullinbrooke, York, Northumberland, Rosse, Percie, Willoughby, with Bushy and Green, prisoners.

Bull. Bring forth these men:
Bushy and Green, I will not vex your souls,
(Since presently your souls must part your bodies)
With too much urging your pernicious lives,
For 'twere no Charity: yet to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will unfold some causes of your deaths.
You have mis-led a Prince, a Royal King,
A happy Gentleman in Blood and Lineaments,
By you unhappied, and disfigur'd clean:
You have in manner with your sinful hours
Made a divorce betwixt his Queen and him,
Broke the possession of a Royal Bed,
And stain'd the Beauty of a fair Queens Cheeks
With tears drawn from her eies, with your foul wrongs.
My self a Prince, by fortune of my birth,
Neer to the King in blood, and neer in love,
Till you did make him mis-interpret me,
Have stoopt my neck under your injuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in forrain Clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
While you have fed upon my Seignories,
Dis-park'd my Parks, and fell'd my Forrest Woods;
From mine own windows torn my Houshold Coat,
Raz'd out my Impresse, leaving me no signe,
Save mens opinions, and my living blood,
To shew the world I am a Gentleman.
This, and much more, much more then twice all this,
Condemns you to the death: see them delivered over
To execution, and the hand of death.
Bushie. More welcome is the stroak of death to me,
Then Bullinbrooke to England.
Gree. My comfort is, that Heaven will take our souls,
And plague injustice with the pains of Hell.
Bull. My Lord Northumberland, see them dispatch'd:
Uncle, you say the Queen is at your house,
For Heavens sake, fairly let her be entreated,
Tell her I send to her my kind commends;
Take special care my Greetings be deliver'd.
Yor. A Gentleman of mine I have dispatch'd
With Letters of your love to her at large.
Bull. Thanks gentle Uncle: come Lords away,
To fight with Glendoure, and his Complices;
A while to work, and after holliday.

Exeunt.

Scæna

Scæna Secunda.

Drums: Flourish, and Colours.

Enter Richard, Aumerle, Carlile, and Souldiers.

Rich. Barkloughly-Castle call you this at hand?
Aum. Yea my Lord, How brooks your Grace the air,
After your late tossing on the breaking Seas?
Rich. Needs must I like it well: I weep for joy
To stand upon my Kingdome once again.
Deer Earth, I do salute thee with my hand,
Though Rebels wound thee with their Horses hoofs:
As a long parted Mother with her Child,
Plays fondly with her tears, and smiles in meeting;
So weeping, smiling, greet I thee the Earth,
And do thee favour with my Royal hands.
Feed not thy Soveraigns Foe, my gentle Earth,
Nor with thy sweets, comfort his ravenous sense:
But let thy Spiders that suck up thy venom,
And heavy-gated Toads lie in their way,
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feet,
Which with usurping steps do trample thee.
Yeeld stinging Nettles to mine Enemies;
And when they from thy Bosom pluck a Flower,
Guard it I prethee with a lurking Adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortal touch
Throw death upon thy Soveraigns Enemies.
Mock not my senseless Conjuration: Lords;
This Earth shall have a feeling, and these stones
Prove armed Souldiers ere her Native King
Shall falter under foul Rebellious Arms.
Car. Fear not my Lord, that power that made you King
Hath power to keep you King, in spight of all.
Aum. He means, my Lord, that we are too remiss
Whilst Bullingbrooke through their security,
Grows strong and great, in substance and in friends.
Rich. Discomfortable Cousin, knowest thou not,
That when the searching eye of heaven is hid
Behind the Globe that lights the lower World,
Then Thieves and Robbers raunge abroad unseen,
In Murthers, and in out-rage bloody here:
But when from under this Terrestrial Ball
He fires the proud tops of the Eastern Pines,
And darts his Lightning through ev'ry guilty hole,
Then Murthers, Treasons, and detested sinnes
(The Cloak of Night being pluckt from off their backs)
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves.
So when this Thief, this Traitor Bullingbrooke,
Who all this while hath revell'd in the Night,
Shall see us rising in our Throne, the East,
His Treasons will set blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of Day;
But self-affrighted, tremble at his sinne.
Not all the water in the rough rude Sea
Can wash the balm from an anointed King;
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The Deputy elected by the Lord:
For every man that Bullingbrooke hath prest,
To lift shrewd Steel against our Golden Crown,
Heaven for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious Angel: then if Angels fight,
Weak men must fall, for Heaven still guards the right.

Enter Salisbury.

Welcome my Lord, how farre off lies your Power?
Salis. Nor neer, nor farther off, my gracious Lord,
Then this weak arm; discomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speak of nothing but despair:
One day too late, I feare (my Noble Lord)
Hath clouded all my happy daies on Earth:
Oh call back yesterday, bid time return,
And thou shalt have twelve thousand fighting men:
To day, to day, unhappy day too late
Orethrows thy Joyes, Friends, Fortune, and thy State.
For all the Welchmen hearing thou art dead,
Are gone to Bullingbrooke, dispersed, and fled.
Aum. Comfort my Liege, why looks your Grace so pale?
Rich. But now the blood of twenty thousand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled,
And till so much blood thither come again,
Have I not reason to look pale, and dead?
All souls that will be safe, fly from my side,
For time hath set a blot upon my pride.
Aum. Comfort my Liege, remember who you are.
Rich. I had forgot my self. Am I not King?
Awake thou sluggard Majesty, thou sleepest:
Is not the Kings Name, forty thousand Names?
Arm, arm my Name: a punie subject strikes
At thy great glory. Look not to the ground,
Ye Favorites of a King: are we not high?
High be our thoughts: I know my Uncle York
Hath power enough to serve our turn,
But who comes here? Enter Scroop.
Scroop. More health and happinesse betide my Liege,
Then can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him.
Rich. Mine ear is open, and my heart prepar'd:
The worst is worldly loss, thou canst unfold:
Say, Is my Kingdome lost? why 'twas my Care:
And what losse is it to be rid of Care?
Strives Bullingbrooke to be as great as we?
Greater he shall not be: if he serve God,
We'l serve him too, and be his Fellow so.
Revolt our subjects? That we cannot mend,
They break their Faith to God as well as us:
Cry Woe, Destruction, Ruine, Losse, Decay,
The worst is Death, and death will have his day.
Scroop. Glad am I, that your Highnesse is so arm'd
To bear the tidings of Calamity.
Like an unseasonable stormy day,
Which make the Silver Rivers drown their Shores,
As if the world were all dissolv'd to tears:
So high above his Limits, swells the Rage
Of Bullingbrooke, covering your fearful Land
With hard bright Steel, and hearts harder then Steel:
White Beares have arm'd their thin and hairlesse Scalps
Against thy Majesty, and Boys with Womens voices,
Strive to speak bigge, and clap their female joynts
In stiff unwieldy Armes: against thy Crown
Thy very Beadsmen learn to bend their Bows
Of double fatal Eugh: against thy State
Yea Distaff-women manage rusty Bills:
Against thy Seat both young and old rebell:
And all goes worse then I have power to tell.
Rich. Too well, too well thou tel'st a tale so ill.
Where is the Earl of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
What is become of Bushy? where is Green?

That

That they have let the dangerous Enemy
Measure our Confines with such peaceful steps?
If we prevail, their hands shall pay for it.
I warrant they have made peace with Bullingbrooke.

Scroop. Peace have they made with him indeed (my Lord.)

Rich. Oh Villains, Vipers, damn'd without redemption,
Dogs, easily won to fawn on any man,
Snakes in my heart-blood warm'd, that sting my heart,
Three Judasses, each one thrice worse then Judas,
Would they make peace? terrible Hell make warre
Upon their spotted souls for this offence.

Scroope. Sweet Love (I see) changing his property,
Turns to the sowrest, and most deadly hate:
Again uncurse their Souls; their peace is made
With Heads, and not with Hands; those whom you curse
Have felt the worst of deaths destroying hand.
And lie full low, grav'd in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Bushy, Green, and the Earle of Wiltshire dead?

Scroope. Yea, all of them at Bristow lost their heads.

Aum. Where is the Duke my Father with his Power?

Rich. No matter where, of comfort no man speak:
Let's talke of Graves, of Worms, and Epitaphs,
Make Dust our Paper, and with Rainy eies
Write Sorrow in the bosom of the Earth.
Let's chuse Executors, and talke of Wills:
And yet not so; for what can we bequeath,
Save our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our Lands, our Lives, and all are Bullingbrookes
And nothing can we call our own, but Death,
And that small Model of the barren Earth,
Which serves as Paste, and Cover to our bones:
For Heavens sake let us sit upon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of Kings:
How some have been depos'd, some slain in warre,
Some haunted by the Ghosts they have depos'd,
Some poyson'd by their Wives, some sleeping kill'd,
All murther'd. For within the hollow Crown
That rounds the mortal Temples of a King,
Keeps Death his Court, and there the Antique sits
Scoffing his State, and grinning at his pomp,
Allowing him a breath, a little scene,
To Monarchize, be fear'd, and kill with looks,
Infusing him with self and vain conceit,
As if this Flesh, which walls about our Life,
Were Brasse impregnable: and humour'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little Pinne
Boares through his Castle walls, and farewell King.
Cover your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemn Reverence: throw away Respect,
Tradition, Form, and Ceremonious duty,
For you have but mistook me all this while:
I live with bread like you, feel want,
Taste Grief, need Friends: subjected thus,
How can you say to me, I am a King?

Carl. My Lord, wise men ne're wail their present woes,
But presently prevent the wales to wail:
To fear the Foe, since fear oppresseth strength,
Gives in your weaknesse, strength unto your Foe;
Fear, and be slain, no worse can come to fight;
And fight and die, is death destroying death.
Where fearing, dying, payes death servile breath.

Aum. My Father hath a Power, enquire of him,
And learn to make a Body of a Limb.

Rich. Thou chid'st me well: proud Bullingbrooke I come
To change blows with thee, for our day of Doom:
This ague-fit of fear is over-blown,
An easie task it is to winne our own.
Say Scroop, whre lies our Uncle with his Power?
Speak sweetly man, although thy looks be sowre.

Scroope. Men judge by the complexion of the Skie
The state and inclination of the day,
So may you by my dull and heavy eye:
My tongue hath but a heavier tale to say:
I play the Torturer, by small and small
To lengthen out the worst, that must be spoken.
Your Uncle York is joyn'd with Bullingbrooke,
And all your Northern Castles yielded up,
And all your Southern Gentlemen in Arms
Upon his faction.

Rich. Thou hast said enough.
Shrew thee Cousin, which didst lead me forth
Of that sweet way I was in, to despair:
What say you now? What comfort have we now?
By heaven Ile hate him everlastingly
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Go to Flint-Castle, there Ile pine away,
A King, Woes slave, shall Kingly woe obey:
That Power I have, discharge, and let 'em goe
To ear the Land, that hath some hope to grow,
For I have none. Let no man speak again
To alter this, for counsell is but vain.

Aum. My Liege, one word.

Rich. He does me double wrong,
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.
Discharge my followers: let them hence away,
From Richards Night, to Bullingbrooks fair Day,

Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Bullingbrooke, York, Northumberland, Attendants.

Bull. So that by this intelligence we learn
The Welchmen are dispers'd, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the King, who lately landed
With some few private friends, upon this Coast.

North. The news is very fair and good, my Lord,
Richard not farre from hence, hath hid his head.

Yor. It would beseem the Lord Northumberland,
To say King Richard: alack the heavy day,
When such a sacred King should hide his head.

North. Your Grace mistakes: onely to be brief,
Left I his Title out.

Yor. The time hath been,
Would you have been so brief with him, he would
Have been so brief with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the head, your whole heads length.

Bull. Mistake not (Uncle) farther than you should,

Yor. Take not (good Cousin) farther than you should,
Least you mistake the heavens are ore your head.

Bull. I know it (Uncle) and oppose not my self
Against their will. But who comes here?

Enter Piercie.

Welcome Harry: what, will not this Castle yield?

Per. The Castle royally is mann'd, my Lord,
Against thy entrance.

Bull. Roy-

Bull. Royally? Why, it contains no King?
Per. Yes (my good Lord)
It doth contain a King: Kind Richard lies
Within the Limits of yond Lime and Stone,
And with him, the Lord Aumerle, Lord Saliſbury,
Sir Stephen Scroop, beſides a Clergy-man
Of holy reverence; who, I cannot learn.
North. Oh, belike it is the Biſhop of Carlile.
Bull. Noble Lord,
Goe to the rude Ribs of that ancient Caſtle,
Through brazen Trumpet ſend the breath of Parle
Into his ruin'd ears, and thus deliver:
Henry Bullingbrooke upon his knees doth kiſſe
King Richards hand, and ſends allegeance
And true faith of heart to his royal Perſon: hither come
Even at his feet, to lay my Arms and Power,
Provided, that my baniſhment repeal'd,
And Lands reſtor'd again, be freely granted:
If not, Ile uſe th'advantage of my power,
And lay the Summers duſt with ſhowers of blood,
Rain'd from the wounds of ſlaughter'd Engliſhmen;
The which, how farre off from the mind of Bullingbrooke
It is, ſuch Crimſon tempeſt ſhould bedrench
The freſh green Lap of fair King Richards Land,
My ſtooping duty tenderly ſhall ſhew.
Go ſignifie as much, while here we march
Upon the Graſſie Carpet of this plain:
Let's march without the noiſe of threatning Drum,
That from this Caſtles tatter'd Battlements
Our fair appointments may be well perus'd.
Me thinks King Richard and my ſelf ſhould meet
With no leſſe terror than the Elements
Of Fire and Water, when their thundring ſmoak
At meeting tears the cloudy Cheeks of Heaven:
Be he the Fire, Ile be the yielding Water;
The Rage be his, while on the earth I raine
My Waters on the Earth, and not on him.
March on, and mark King Richard how he looks.

Parle without, and anſwer within: then a Flouriſh.
Enter on the Walls, Richard, Carlile, Aumerle,
Scroop, Salisbury.

See, ſee, King Richard doth himſelf appear
As doth the bluſhing diſcontented Sun,
From out the fiery Portall of the Eaſt,
When he perceives the envious Clouds are bent
To dimme his glory, and to ſtain the tract
Of his bright paſſage to the Occident.
Yor. Yet looks he like a King: behold his eye
(As bright as is the Eagles) lightens forth
Controlling Majeſty: alack, alack, for woe,
That any harm ſhould ſtain ſo fair a ſhow.
Rich. We are amaz'd, and thus long have we ſtood
To watch the fearful bending of thy knee,
Becauſe we thought our ſelf thy lawful King:
And if we be, how dare thy joynts forget
To pay the awful duty to our preſence?
If we be not, ſhew us the hand of God,
That hath diſmiſs'd us from our Srewardſhip,
For well we know, no hand of blood and bone
Can gripe the ſacred handle of our Scepter,
Unleſſe he do prophane, ſteal, or uſurpe.
And though you think, that all, as you have done,
Have torn their ſouls, by turning them from us,
And we are barren, and bereft of Friends:
Yet know, my Maſter, God Omnipotent,
Is muſtring in his Clouds on our behalf,
Armies of Peſtilence, and they ſhall ſtrike
Your Children yet unborn, and unbegot,
That lift your Vaſſal hands againſt my head,
And threat the Glory of my precious Crown.
Tell Bullingbrooke, for yond me thinks he is,
That every ſtride he makes upon my Land,
Is dangerous Treaſon, he is come to ope
The purple Teſtament of a bleeding Warre;
But ere the Crown he looks for, live in peace,
Ten thouſand bloody crowns of Mothers Sonnes
Shall ill become the flower of Englands face,
Change the complexion of her Maid-pale Peace
To Scarlet indignation, and bedew
Her Paſtors Graſſe with faithful Engliſh Blood.
North. The King of Heaven forbid our Lord the King
Should ſo with civil and uncivil Arms
Be ruſh'd upon: Thy thrice-noble Couſin,
Harry Bullingbrooke doth humbly kiſs thy hand,
And by the honourable Tomb he ſwears
That ſtands upon your Royal Grandſiers bones
And by the Royalties of both your bloods,
(Currents that ſpring from one moſt gracious Head)
And by the buried hand of Warlike Gaunt,
And by the Worth and Honour of himſelf,
Compriſing all that may be ſworn, or ſaid,
His coming hither hath no further ſcope,
Than for his Lineall Royalties, and to beg
Infranchiſement immediate on his knees:
Which on thy Royal party granted once,
His glittering Arms he will commend to Ruſt,
His barbed Steeds to Stables, and his heart
To faithful ſervice of your Majeſty:
This ſwears he, as he is a Prince, is juſt,
And as I am a Gentleman, I credit him.
Rich. Northumberland, ſay thus: The King returns,
His Noble Couſin is right welcome hither,
And all the number of his fair demands
Shall be accompliſh'd without contradiction:
With all the gracious utterance thou haſt,
Speak to his gentle hearing kind commends.
We do debaſe our ſelf (Couſin) do we not,
To look ſo poorly, and to ſpeak ſo fair?
Shall we call back Northumberland and ſend
Defiance to the Traitor, and ſo die?
Aum. No, good my Lord, let's fight with gentle words,
Till time lend friends, & friends their hopeful Swords.
Rich. Oh God, oh God, that ere this tongue of mine
That laid the Sentence of dread baniſhment
On yond proud man, ſhould take it off again
With words of ſooth: Oh that I were as great
As is my Grief, or leſſer than my Name,
Or that I could forget what I have been,
Or not remember what I muſt be now:
Swell'ſt thou proud heart? Ile give thee ſcope to beat,
Since foes have ſcope to beat both thee and me.
Aum. Northumberland comes back from Bullingbrooke.
Rich. What muſt the King do now? muſt he ſubmit?
The King ſhall do it: Muſt he be depos'd?
The King ſhall be contented: Muſt he loſe
The Name of King? o'Gods Name let it go.
Ile give my Jewels for a ſet of Beads,
My gorgeous Pallace, for a Hermitage,
My gay Apparrel, for an Almes-mans Gown,
My figur'd Goblets, for a diſh of Wood,
My Scepter, for a Palmers walking Staffe,

My

My Subjects, for a pair of Carved Saints,
And my large Kingdom, for a little Grave,
A little little Grave, an obscure Grave.
Or ile be buried in the Kings high-way,
Some way of common Trade, where Subjects feet
May hourly trample on their Soveraigns head:
For on my heart they tread now, whilst I live;
And buried once, why not upon my head?
Aumerle, thou weepst, (my tender-hearted Cousin)
We'l make foul weather with despised tears:
Our sighs, and they, shall lodge the Summer Corn,
And make a dearth in this Revolting Land.
Or shall we play the wantons with our woes,
And make some pretty match with shedding tears?
As thus: to drop them still upon one place,
Till they have fretted us a pair of Graves,
Within the earth: and therein laid, there lies
Two Kinsmen digg'd their graves with weeping eies?
Would not this ill do well? Well, well, I see
I talk but idely, and you mock at me.
Most mighty Prince, my Lord Northumberland,
What saies King Bullingbrooke? Will his Majesty
Give Richard leave to live, till Richard die?
You make a Legge, and Bullingbrooke saies I.

North. My Lord, in the base Court he doth attend
To speak with you, may it please you to come down.

Rich. Down, down I come, like glist'ring Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of unruly Jades.
In the base Court? base Court where Kings grow base,
To come at Traitors Calls, and do them Grace.
In the base Court come down: down Court, down King,
For night-Owls shrike, where mounting Larks should sing.

Bull. What saies his Majesty?

North. Sorrow, and grief of heart
Makes him speak fondly, like a frantick man:
Yet he is come.

Bull. Stand all apart,
And shew fair duty to his Majesty.
My gracious Lord.

Rich. Fair Cousin.
You debase your Princely knee,
To make the base earth proud with kissing it.
Me rather had, my heart might feel your Love,
Than my un-pleas'd Eye see your Courtesie.
Up Cousin, up, your heart is up, I know,
Thus high at least, although your knee be low.

Bull. My gracious Lord, I come but for mine own.

Rich. Your own is yours, and I am yours, and all.

Bull. So farre be mine, (my most redoubted Lord,)
As my true service shall deserve your love.

Rich. Well you desrv'd:
They well deserve to have,
That know the strong'st and surest way to get.
Uncle give me your hand: nay, dry your eies
Tears shew their love, but want their remedies.
Cousin I am too young to be your Father,
Though you are old enough to be my Heir.
What you will have, ile give, and willing too,
For do we must, what force will have us do.
Set on towards London:
Cousin, is it so?

Bull. Yea, my good Lord:

Rich. Then I must not say, no.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Scæna Quinta.

Enter Queen and two Ladies.

Qu. What sport shall we devise here in this Garden,
To drive away the heavy thought of care?

La. Madam, we'l play at Bowls.

Qu. 'Twill make me think the world is full of Rubs,
And that my fortune runs against the Byas.

La. Madam, we'll dance.

Qu. My Legs can keep no measure in delight,
When my poor heart no measure keeps in grief.
Therefore no dancing (Girle) some other sport.

La. Madam, we'll tell tales.

Qu. Of Sorrow, or of Grief?

La. Of either, Madam.

Qu. Of neither, Girle.
For if of joy, being altogether wanting,
It doth remember me the more of sorrow:
Or if of grief, being altogether had,
It adds more sorrow to my want of joy:
For what I have, I need not to repeat;
And what I want, it boots not to complain.

La. Madam, ile sing.

Qu. 'Tis well that thou hast cause:
But thou should'st please me better, would'st thou weep.

La. I could weep, Madam, would it do you good?

Qu. And I could sing, would weeping do me good,
And never borrow any tear of thee.

Enter a Gardiner, and two Servants.

But stay, here comes the Gardiners,
Let's step into the shadow of these Trees.
My wretchednesse, unto a row of Pinnes,
They'l talk of state? for every one doth so,
Against a Change; woe is fore-run with woe.

Gard. Go bind thou up yond dangling Apricocks,
Which like unruly Children, make their Syre
Stoop with oppression of their prodigal weight:
Give some supportance to the bending twiggs.
Go thou, and like an Executioner
Cut off the heads of too fast growing sprayes,
That look too lofty in our Common-wealth:
All must be even, in our Government.
You thus imploy'd, I will go root away
The noisom weeds that without profit suck
The soyles fertility from wholsom Flowers.

Ser. Why should we in the compasse of a Pale,
Keep Law and Form, and due Proportion,
Shewing as in a Modell our firm state?
When our Sea-walled Garden, (the whole Land,)
Is full of weeds, her fairest Flowers choakt up,
Her fruit-trees all unpruin'd, her hedges ruin'd,
Her Knots disorder'd, and her wholsome Hearbs
Swarming with Caterpillars.

Gard. Hold thy peace.
He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd Spring,
Hath now himself met with the fall of Leaf.
The weeds that his broad-spreading Leaves did shelter,
That seem'd in eating him, to hold him up,
Are pull'd up, root and all, by Bullingbrooke
I mean, the Earle of Wiltshire, Bushy, Green.

Ser. What are they dead?
Gard. They are,
And Bullingbrooke hath ſeiz'd the waſteful King.
What pitty is it, that he had not trim'd
And dreſt his Land, as we this Garden at time of year;
And wound the Bark, the skin of our Fruit-trees,
Leaſt being over proud with Sap and Blood,
With too much riches it confound it ſelf?
Had he done ſo, to great and growing men,
They might have liv'd to bear, and he to taſte
Their fruits of duty. All ſuperfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughs may live:
Had he done ſo, himſelf had born the Crown,
Which waſte and idle hours hath quite thrown down.
Ser. VVhat think you the King ſhall be depos'd?
Gar. Depreſt he is already, and depos'd
'Tis doubted he will be. Letters came laſt night
To a deer friend of the Duke of York,
That tell black tidings.
Qu. Oh I am preſt to death through want of ſpeaking:
Thou old Adams likeneſſe, ſet to dreſſe this Garden:
How dares thy harſh tongue ſound this unpleaſing news?
VVhat Eve? what ſerpent hath ſuggeſted thee,
To make a ſecond fall of curſed man?
VVhy doſt thou ſay, King Richard is depos'd?
Dar'ſt thou (thou little better thing then earth)
Divine his downfall? ſay where, when, and how
Cam'ſt thou by this ill tidings? ſpeak thou wretch.
Gard. Pardon me Madam. Little joy have I
To breathe theſe news; yet what I ſay, is true;
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bullingbrooke, their fortunes both are weigh'd:
In your Lords Scale, is nothing but himſelf,
And ſome few vanities that make him light:
But in the Ballance of great Bullingbrooke,
Beſides himſelf, are all the Engliſh Peers,
And with that odds he weighs King Richard down.
Poſt you to London, and you'l find it ſo,
I ſpeak no more, then every one doth know.
Qu. Nimble miſchance, that art ſo light of foot,
Doth not thy Embaſſage belong to me?
And am I laſt that knows it? Oh thou think'ſt
To ſerve me laſt, that I may longeſt keep
Thy ſorrow in my breaſt. Come Ladies goe,
To meet at London, Londons King in woe.
VVhat, was I born to this! that my ſad look,
Should grace the Triumph of great Bullingbrooke!
Gard'ner, for telling me this news of woe,
I would the Plants thou graft'ſt, may never grow. Exit.
G. Poor Queen, ſo that thy ſtate might be no worſe,
I would my skill were ſubject to thy curſe:
Here did ſhe drop a tear, here in this place
Ile ſet a bank of Rew, (ſowre Herb of Grace:)
Rew, ev'n for Ruth, here ſhortly ſhall be ſeen,
In the remembrance of a weeping Queen. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter as to the Parliament, Bullingbrooke, Aumerle, Northumberland, Percie, Fitz-Water, Surrey, Carlile, Abbot of Weſtminſter. Herauld, Officers, and Bagot.

Bullingbrooke. Call forth Bagot.
Now Bagot, freely ſpeak thy mind,
VVhat thou doſt know of Noble Glouſters death;
VVho wrought it with the King, and who perform'd
The bloody Office of his timeleſſe end.
Bag. Then ſet before my face the Lord Aumerle.
Bull. Couſin, ſtand forth and look upon that man.
Bag. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
Scorns to unſay, what it hath once deliver'd.
In that dead time when Glouſters death was plotted,
I heard you ſay, Is not my arme of length,
That reacheth from the reſtful Engliſh Court
As far as Callis to my Uncles head?
Amongſt much other talke, that very time,
I heard you ſay, that you had rather refuſe
The offer of an hundred thouſand Crowns,
Then Bullingbrooke return to England; adding withall,
How bleſt this Land would be in this your Coſins death.
Aum. Princes and Noble Lords:
VVhat anſwer ſhall I make to this baſe man?
Shall I ſo much diſhonour my fair Starrs.
On equal terms to give him chaſtiſement?
Either I muſt, or have mine honour ſpoild
VVith th'Atteindor of his ſland'rous Lips.
There is my Gage, the manual Seal of death
That marks thee out for Hell. Thou lieſt,
And will maintain what thou haſt ſaid, is falſe,
In thy heart blood, though being all too baſe,
To ſtain the temper of my Knightly ſword.
Bull. Bagot forbear, thou ſhalt not take it up.
Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the beſt
In all this preſence that hath moved me ſo.
Fitz. If that thy valour ſtand on ſympathies:
There is my Gage, Aumerle, in Gage to thine:
By that fair Sunne, that ſhews me where thou ſtand'ſt,
I heard thee ſay (and vantingly thou ſpak'ſt it)
That thou wert cauſe of Noble Glouſters death.
If thou denieſt it, twenty times thou lieſt,
And I will turn thy falſhood to thy heart,
Where it was forged with my Rapiers point.
Aum. Thou dar'ſt not (Coward) live to ſee the day.
Fitz. Now by my ſoul, I would it were this hour.
Aum. Fitzwater thou art damn'd to hell for this.
Per. Aumerle, thou lyeſt: his Honour is as true
In this appeal, as thou art all unjuſt:
And that thou art ſo, there I throw my Gage
To prove it on thee, to th'extreameſt point
Of mortal breathing. Seize it, if thou dar'ſt.
Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And never brandiſh more revengeful Steel,
Over the glittering Helmet of my Foe.
Surrey. My Lord Fitz-water:
I do remember well, the very time
Aumerle and you did talke.
Fitz. My Lord,
'Tis very true: You were in preſence then;
And you can witneſſe with me, this is true.
Surrey. As falſe, by heaven,
As heaven it ſelf is true.
Fitz. Surrey, thou lyeſt.
Surrey. Diſhonourable Boy,
That Lye, ſhall lie ſo heavy on my ſword,
That it ſhall render Vengeance and revenge,
Till thou the Lye-giver, and that Lye, do lye
In earth as quier, as thy Fathers Scull.
In proof whereof, there is mine Honours pawn,
Engage it to the Trial, if thou dar'ſt.

Fitz.

Fitzw. How fondly do'ſt thou ſpur a forward Horſe?
If I dare eat, or drink, or breath, or live,
I dare meet Surry in a Wilderneſs,
And ſpit upon him, whilſt I ſay he Lyes,
And Lyes, and Lyes: there is my bond of Faith,
To tye thee to my ſtrong Correction.
A I intended to thrive in this new World,
Aumerle is guilty of my true Appeal.
Beſides, I heard the baniſht Norfolke ſay,
That thou Aumerle didſt ſend two of thy men,
To execute the Noble Duke at Calice.
Aum. Some honeſt Chriſtian truſt me with a Gage,
That Norfolke lies: here do I throw down this,
If he may be repeal'd, to try his honour.
Bull. Theſe differences ſhall all reſt under Gage,
Till Norfolke be repeal'd: repeal'd he ſhall be;
(And though mine Enemy) reſtor'd again
To all his Lands and Seigniories: when he's return'd,
Againſt Aumerle we will enforce his Tryal.
Carl. That honourable day ſhall ne're be ſeen.
Many a time hath baniſht Norfolke fought
For Jeſu Chriſt, in glorious Chriſtian field
Streaming the Enſign of the Chriſtian Croſs
Againſt black Pagans, Turks, and Saracens:
And toyl'd with works of War, retyr'd himſelf
To Italy, and there at Venice gave
His Body to that pleaſant Countries Earth,
And his pure Soul unto his Captain Chriſt,
Under whoſe Colours he had fought ſo long.
Bull. Why Biſhop, is Norfolke dead?
Carl. As ſure as I live my Lord.
Bull. Sweet peace conduct his ſweet Soul
To the Boſom of good old Abraham.
Lords Appealants, your differences ſhall all reſt under gage,
Till we aſſign you to your dayes of Tryal.

Enter Yorke.

Yorke. Great Duke of Lancaſter, I come to thee
From Plume-pluckt Richard, who with willing Soul
Adopts thee Heir, and his high Scepter yields
To the poſſeſſion of thy Royal Hand.
Aſcend his Throne, deſcending now from him,
And long live Henry, of that Name the Fourth.
Bull. In Gods Name, I'le aſcend the Regal Throne.
Carl. Marry, Heaven forbid.
Worſt in this Royal Preſence may I ſpeak,
Yet beſt beſeeming me to ſpeak the truth.
Would God, that any in this Noble Preſence
VVere enough Noble to be upright Judge
Of Noble Richard, then true Nobleneſs would
Learn him forbearance from ſo foul a wrong.
VVhat Subject can give Sentence on his King?
And who ſits here, that is not Richards Subject?
Thieves are not judg'd, but they are by to hear,
Although apparent guilt be ſeen in them:
And ſhall the figure of Gods Majeſty,
His Captain, Steward, Deputy elect,
Anoynted, Crown'd and planted many years,
Be judg'd by ſubject and inferiour breath,
And he himſelf not preſent? Oh, forbid it, God,
That in a Chriſtian Climate, Soules refin'd
Should ſhew ſo heinous, black, obſcene a deed.
I ſpeak to Subjects, and a Subject ſpeaks,
Stirr'd up by Heaven, thus boldly for his King.
My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call King,
Is a foul Traytor to proud Herefords King.
And if you Crown him, let me propheſie,
The blood of Engliſh ſhall manure the ground,
And future ages groan for his foul Act.
Peace ſhall go ſleep with Turks and Infidels,
And in this Seat of Peace, tumultuous VVars
Shall Kin with Kin, and Kind with Kind confound.
Diſorder, Horrour, Fear and Mutiny
Shall here inhabit, and this Land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead mens Skuls.
Oh, if you rear this Houſe, againſt this Houſe
It will the wofulleſt Diviſion prove,
That ever fell upon this curſed Earth.
Prevent it, reſiſt it, let it not be ſo,
Leſt Child, Childs Children cry againſt you, wo.
North. VVell have you argu'd Sir: and for your paines,
Of Capital Treaſon we arreſt you here.
My Lord of Weſtminſter, be it your charge,
To keep him ſafely, till his day of Tryal.
May it pleaſe you, Lords, to grant the Commons Suit?
Bull. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may ſurrender: ſo we ſhall proceed
VVithout ſuſpition.
Yor. I will be his Conduct. Exit.
Bull. Lords, you that are here under our Arreſt,
Procure your Sureties for your Dayes of Anſwer:
Little are we beholding to your Love,
And little look'd for at your helping Hands.

Enter Richard and Yorke.

Rich. Alack, why am I ſent for to a King,
Before I have ſhook off the Regal thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet have learn'd
To inſinuate, flatter, bow, and bend my Knee.
Give Sorrow leave a while, to return me
To this Submiſſion. Yet I will remember
The favours of theſe men: were they not mine?
Did they not ſometime cry, All haile to me?
So Judas did to Chriſt: but he in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one; I, in twelve thouſand, none.
God ſave the King: will no man ſay, Amen?
Am I both Prieſt and Clark? well then, Amen.
God ſave the King, although I be not he:
And yet Amen, if Heaven do think him me.
To do what ſervice, am I ſent for hither?
Yor. To do that Office of thine own good will,
Which tyred Majeſty did make thee offer:
The Reſignation of thy State and Crown
To Henry Bullingbrooke.
Rich. Give me the Crown. Here Couſin, ſeize the Crown:
Here Couſin, on this ſide my Hand, on that ſide thine.
Now is this Golden Crown like a deep Well,
That owes two Buckets, filling one another,
The emptier ever dancing in the Ayr,
The other down, unſeen, and full of Water:
That Bucket down, and full of Teares am I,
Drinking my Griefs, whilſt you mount up on high.
Bul. I thought you had been willing to reſign.
Rich. My Crown I am, but ſtill my Griefs are mine:
You may my Glories, and my State depoſe,
But not my Griefes; ſtill am I King of thoſe.
Bul. Part of your Cares you give me with your Crown.
Rich. Your Cares ſet up, do not pluck my Cares down,
My Care, is loſs of Care, by old Care done,
Your Care, is gain of Care, by new Care won.
The Cares I give, I have, though given away,
They tend the Crown, yet ſtill with me they ſtay.
Bul. Are you contented to reſign the Crown?

Rich. I no ; no, I for I muſt nothing be:
Therefore no, no, for I reſigne to thee.
Now, mark me how I will undo my ſelf;
I give this heavy Weight from off my Head,
And this unwieldy Scepter from my Hand,
The pride of Kingly ſway from out my Heart,
With mine own tears I waſh away my blame,
With mine own hands I give away my Crown,
With mine own tongue deny my Sacred State,
With mine own breath releaſe all dutious Oaths :
All Pomp and Majeſty I do forſwear :
My Manors, Rents, Revenues, I forgoe ;
My Acts, Decrees, and Statutes I deny :
God pardon all Oathes that are broke to me,
God keep all vows unbroke are made to thee.
Make me, that nothing have, with nothing griev'd,
And thou with all pleas'd, that haſt all atchiev'd,
Long maiſt thou live in Richards ſeat to ſit,
And ſoon lie Richard in an Earthy pit.
God ſave King Henry, un-King'd Richard ſaies,
And ſend him many years of Sun-ſhine daies.
What more remains ?

North. No more : but that you read
Theſe Accuſations, and theſe grievous Crimes,
Committed by your perſon, and your followers,
Againſt the State and Profit of this Land :
That by confeſſing them, the Souls of men
May deem that you are worthily depos'd.

Rich. Muſt I do ſo ? and muſt I ravel out
My weav'd-up follies ? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy Offences were upon Record,
Would it not ſhame thee, in ſo fair a troope,
To read a Lecture of them ? if thou would'ſt
There ſhould'ſt thou find one hainous article,
Containing the depoſing of a King,
And cracking the ſtrong warrant of an Oath,
Mark'd with a blot, damn'd in the Book of Heaven.
Nay, all of you, that ſtand and look upon me,
Whil'ſt that my wretchedneſſe doth bait my ſelf,
Though ſome of you, with Pilate waſh your hands,
Shewing an outward pitty : yet you Pilates
Have here deliver'd me to my ſower Croſſe,
And water cannot waſh away your ſinne.

North. My Lord, diſpatch, read o're theſe Articles.

Rich. Mine eies are full of tears, I cannot ſee :
And yet ſalt-water blinds them not ſo much,
But they can ſee a ſort of Traitors here.
Nay, if I turn mine eies upon my ſelf,
I find my ſelf a Traitor with the reſt :
For I have given here my ſouls conſent,
T'undeck the pompous Body of a King ;
Made Glory baſe ; a Soveraign, a Slave ;
Proud Majeſty, a Subject; State, a Peaſant.

North. My Lord.

Rich. No Lord of thine, thou haught-inſulting man ;
No, nor no mans Lord : I have no Name, no Title;
No, not that name was given me at the Font,
But 'tis uſurpt : alack the heavy day,
That I have worn ſo many Winters out,
And know not now, what name to call my ſelf.
Oh, that I were a Mockerie, King of Snow,
Standing before the Sun of Bullingbrooke,
To melt my ſelf away in water-drops.
Good King, great King, and yet not greatly good,
And if my word be Sterling yet in England
Let it command a Mirror hither ſtraight,
That it may ſhew me what a face I have,
Since it is Bankrupt of his Majeſty.

Bull. Goe ſome of you, and fetch a Looking-Glaſſe.

North. Read o're this paper, while the Glaſs doth come.

Rich. Fiend, thou torments me, ere I come to Hell.

Bull. Urge it no more, my Lord Northumberland.

North. The Commons will not then be ſatisfy'd.

Rich. They ſhall be ſatisfy'd : ile read enough,
When I do ſee the very Book indeed,
Where all my ſins are writ, and that's my ſelf.

Enter one with a Glaſſe.

Give me that Glaſſe, and therein will I read.
No deeper wrinkles yet ? hath ſorrow ſtruck
So many blows upon this face of mine.
And made no deeper wounds ? Oh fla t'ring Glaſſe,
Like to my followers in proſperity,
Thou doſt beguile me. Was this Face, the Face
That every day under his Houſhold-roof,
Did keep ten thouſand men ? Was this the face,
That like the Sun did make beholders wink ?
Is this the Face, which fac'd ſo many follies,
That was at laſt out-fac'd by Bullingbrooke ?
A brittle Glory ſhineth in this Face,
As brittle as the Glory, is the Face,
For there it is, crackt in an hundred ſhivers.
Mark ſilent King, the Morall of this ſport,
How ſoon my ſorrow hath deſtroy'd my Face.

Bul. The ſhadow of your ſorrow hath deſtroy'd
The ſhadow of your Face.

Rich. Say that again.
The ſhadow of my Sorrow : ha, let's ſee,
'Tis very true, my Grief lies all within,
And theſe external manners of Laments,
Are meerly ſhadowes to the unſeen Grief,
That ſwells with ſilence in the tortur'd Soul.
There lies the Subſtance : and I thank thee King
For thy great bounty, that not only giv'ſt
Me cauſe to wail, but teacheſt me the way
How to lament the cauſe. Ile beg one boon,
And then be gone, and trouble you no more.
Shall I obtain it ?

Bull. Name it, fair Couſin.

Rich. Fair Couſin ? I am greater than a King :
For when I was a King, my flatterers
Were then but ſubjects ; being now a ſubject,
I have a King here to my flatterer :
Being ſo great, I have no need to beg.

Bul. Yet aske.

Rich. And ſhall I have ?

Bull. You ſhall.

Rich. Then give me leave to goe.

Bull. Whither ?

Rich. Whither you will, ſo I were from your ſights.

Bull. Goe ſome of you, convey him to the Tower.

Rich. Oh good : convey : Conveyers are you all,
That riſe thus nimbly by a true Kings fall.

Bull. On Wedneſday next we ſolemnly ſet down
Our Coronation : Lords, prepare your ſelves. Exeunt.

Abbot. A woful Pageant have we here beheld.

Carl. The woe's to come, the Children yet unborn,
Shall feel this day as ſharp to them as thorn.

Aum. You holy Clergy-men, is there no plot ?
To rid the Realm of this pernicious blot ?

Abbot. Before I freely ſpeak my mind herein,
You ſhall not only take the Sacrament,
To bury mine intents, but alſo to effect

What

VVhat ever I shall happen to devise.
I see your Brows are full of discontent,
Your Heart of sorrow, and your Eies of tears,
Come home with me to Supper, Ile lay a plot
Shall shew us all a merry day. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Queen, and Ladies.

Qu. This way the King will come: this is the way
To Julius Cæsars ill-erected Tower:
To whose flint bosom, my condemned Lord
Is doom'd a Prisoner, by proud Bullingbrooke.
Here let us rest, if this Rebellious earth
Have any resting for her true Kings Queen.

Enter Richard, and Guard.

But soft, but see, or rather do not see,
My fair Rose wither: yet look up; behold,
That you in pitty may dissolve to dew,
And wash him fresh again with true-love tears.
Ah thou, the Modell, where old Troy did stand,
Thou Mappe of Honour, thou King Richards Tomb,
And not King Richard: thou most beauteous Inne,
Why should hard-favor'd grief be lodg'd in thee,
When Triumph is become an Ale-house Guest?

Rich. Joyn not with grief, fair woman, do not so,
To make my end too sudden: learn good soul,
To think our former State a happy Dream,
From which awak'd, the truth of what we are,
Shews us but this. I am sworn Brother (Sweet)
To grim necessity; and he and I
Will keep a League till death. High thee to France,
And Cloyster thee in some Religious house:
Our holy lives must winne a new worlds Crown,
Which our prophane hours here have stricken down.

Qu. What, is my Richard both in shape and mind
Transform'd and weaken'd? Hath Bullingbrooke
Depos'd thine intellect? hath he been in thy heart?
The Lyon dying thrusteth forth his Paw,
And wounds the earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o're-pow'r'd: and wilt thou, Pupill-like,
Take thy correction mildly, kisse the Rod,
And fawn on rage with base humility,
Which art a Lyon and a King of Beasts?

Rich. A King of Beasts indeed: if aught but Beasts,
I had been still a happy King of men.
Good (sometime) Queen prepare thee hence for France:
Think I am dead, and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my Death-bed, my last-living leave.
In Winters tedious Nights sit by the fire
With good old folks, and let them tell thee tales
Of wofull Ages, long agoe betide:
And ere thou bid good-night, to quit their grief,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their beds:
For why? the senseless Brands will sympathize
The heavy accent of my moving tongue,
And in compassion weep the fire out:
And some will mourn in Ashes, some coal-black,
For the deposing of a rightful King.

Enter Northumberland.

North. My Lord, the mind of Bullingbrooke is chang'd.
You must to Pomfret, not unto the Tower.
And Madam, there is order ta'ne for you:
With all swift speed, you must away to France.

Rich. Northumberland, thou Ladder wherewithall
The mounting Bullingbrooke ascends my Throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age,
More than it is, ere foul sin, gathering head,
Shall break into corruption: thou shalt think,
Though he divide the Realm, and give thee halfe,
It is too little, helping him to all:
He shall think, that thou which know'st the way
To plant unrightful Kings, wilt know again,
Being ne're so little urg'd, another way,
To pluck him headlong from th'usurped Throne.
The Love of wicked friends converts to fear;
That Fear, to Hate; and Hate turns one, or both,
To worthy danger, and deserved death.

North. My guilt be one my head, and there an end:
Take leave, and part, for you must part forthwith.

Rich. Doubly divorc'd? (bad men) ye violate
A two-fold Marriage; 'twixt my Crown and me;
And then betwixt me, and my married wife,
Let me un-kisse the Oath, 'twixt thee and me:
And yet not so, for with a kisse 'twas made.
Part us Northumberland: I, towards the North,
Where shivering Cold and Sickness pines the Clime:
My Queen to France: from whence, set forth in Pomp,
She came adorned hither like sweet May,
Sent back like Hollowmas, or short'st of day.

Qu. And must we be divided? must we part?

Rich. I, hand from hand (my Love) and heart from heart.

Qu. Banish us both, and send the King with me.

North. That were some Love, but little policy.

Qu. Then whither he goes, thither let me goe.

Rich. So two together weeping, make one woe,
Weep thou for me in France; I, for thee here:
Better farre off then neer, be ne're the neer
Goe, count thy way with sighs, I mine with groans.

Qu. So longest way, shall have the longest moans.

Rich. Twice for one step Ile groan, the way being short,
And piece the way out with a heavy heart.
Come, come, in wooing Sorrow let's be brief,
Since wedding it, there is such length in Grief:
One Kisse shall stop our mouths, and dumbly part;
Thus give I mine, and thus take I thy heart.

Qu. Give me mine own again: 'twere no good part,
To take on me to keep, and kill thy heart.
So, now I have mine own again, be gone,
That I may strive to kill it with a groan.

Rich. We make woe wanton with this fond delay:
Once more adieu; the rest let sorrow say. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter York and his Dutchesse.

Dut. My Lord, you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you break the story off,
Of our two Cousins coming into London.

Yor. Where did I leave?

Dut. At that sad stop, my Lord,
Where rude mis-govern'd hands, from Windows tops,
Threw dust and rubbish on King Richards head.

Yor. Then, as I ſaid, the Duke (great Bullingbrooke)
Mounted upon a hot and fiery Steed,
Which his aſpiring Rider ſeem'd to know,
With ſlow, but ſtately pace, kept on his courſe:
While all tongues cry'd, God ſave thee Bullingbrooke.
You would have thought the very windows ſpake,
So many greedy looks of young and old,
Through Caſements darted their deſiring eies
Upon his viſage: and that all the walls
With painted Imagery had ſaid at once,
Jeſu preſerve thee, welcome Bullingbrooke.
Whilſt he, from one ſide to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower then his proud Steeds neck,
Beſpake them thus: I thank you Countrey-men:
And thus ſtill doing, thus he paſt along.

Dutch. Alas poor Richard, where rides he the whilſt?

Yor. As in a Theater, the eies of men
After a well-grac'd Actor leaves the Stage,
Are idely bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious:
Even ſo, or with much more contempt, mens eies,
Did ſcowle on Richard: no man cry'd, God ſave him:
No joyful tongue gave him his welcome home,
But duſt was thrown upon his Sacred head,
Which with ſuch gentle ſorrow he ſhook off,
His face ſtill combating with tears and ſmiles
(The badges of his grief and patience)
That had not God (for ſome ſtrong purpoſe) ſteel'd
The hearts of men, they muſt perforce have melted,
And Barbariſme it ſelf have pittyed him.
But heaven hath a hand in theſe events,
To whoſe high will we bound our calme contents.
To Bullingbrooke, are we ſworn Subjects now,
Whoſe State, and Honour, I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle.

Dut. Here comes my ſonne Aumerle.

Yor. Aumerle that was,
But that is loſt, for being Richards Friend.
And Madam, you muſt call him Rutland now:
I am in Parliament pledge for his truth,
And laſting fealtie in the new-made King.

Dut. Welcome my Sonne: who are the violets now,
That ſtrew the green lap of the new-come Spring?

Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not,
God knows, I had as lief be none, as one.

Yor. Well, bear you well in this new-ſpring of time,
Leaſt you be cropt before you come to prime.
What news from Oxford? Hold thoſe Juſts and Triumphs?

Aum. For ought I know my Lord, they do.

Yor. You will be there I know.

Aum. If God prevent not, I purpoſe ſo.

Yor. What Seal is that that hangs without thy boſom?
Yea, look'ſt thou pale? let me ſee the Writing.

Aum. My Lord, 'tis nothing.

Yor. No matter then who ſees it,
I will be ſatisfied, let me ſee the writing.

Aum. I do beſeech your Grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of ſmall conſequence,
Which for ſome reaſons I would not have ſeen.

Yor. Which for ſome reaſons ſir, I mean to ſee:
I fear, I fear.

Dut. What ſhould you fear?
'Tis nothing but ſome bond, that he is enter'd into
For gay apparell, againſt the triumph.

Yor. Bound to himſelf? VVhat doth he with a Bond
That he is bound to? VVife, thou art a fool.
Boy, let me ſee the writing.

Aum. I do beſeech you pardon me, I may not ſhew it.

Yor. I will be ſatisfied, let me ſee it I ſay. Snatches it.
Treaſon, foul treaſon, Villain, Traitor, Slave.

Dut. What's the matter, my Lord?

Yor. Hoa, who's within there? ſaddle my horſe.
Heaven for his mercy: what treachery is here?

Dut. VVhy, what is't my Lord?

Yor. Give me my boots, I ſay: ſaddle my horſe:
Now by my honour, my life, my troth,
I will appeach the villain.

Dut. VVhat is the matter?

Yor. Peace fooliſh woman.

Dut. I will not peace. What is the matter Son?

Aum. Good Mother be content, it is no more
Then my poor life muſt anſwer.

Dut. Thy life anſwer?

Enter Servant with Boots.

Yor. Bring my Boots, I will unto the King.

Dut. Strike him Aumerle. Poor boy, thou art amaz'd,
Hence villain, never more come in my ſight.

Yor. Give me my Boots I ſay.

Dut. Why York what wilt thou do?
Wilt thou not hide the treſpaſſe of thine own?
Have we more Sonnes? or are we like to have?
Is not my teeming date drunk up with time?
And wilt thou pluck my fair Son from mine age,
And rob me of a happy Mothers name?
Is he not like thee? is he not thine own?

Yor. Thou fond mad woman:
Wilt thou conceale this dark Conſpiracy?
A dozen of them here have tane the Sacrament,
And interchangeably ſet their hands
To kill the King at Oxford.

Dut. He ſhall be none:
VVe'll keep him here: then what is that to him?

Yor. Away fond woman: were he twenty times my Son, I would appeach him.

Dut. Hadſt thou groan'd for him as I have done,
Thou wouldſt be more pittifull:
But now I know thy mind; thou doſt ſuſpect
That I have been diſloyal to thy bed,
And that he is a Baſtard, not thy Sonne:
Sweet York, ſweet Husband, be not of that mind:
He is as like thee, as a man may be,
Not like to me, nor any of my kin,
And yet I love him.

Yor. Make way, unruly woman. Exit.

Dut. After Aumerle. Mount thee upon his horſe,
Spurr poſt, and get before him to the King,
And beg thy pardon, ere he do accuſe thee,
Ile not be long behind: though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as faſt as York:
And never will I riſe up from the ground,
Till Bullingbrooke have pardon'd thee: Away, be gone. Exit.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Bullingbrooke, Percie, and other Lords.

Bull. Can no man tell of my unthrifty Son?
Tis full three moneths ſince I did ſee him laſt.
If any plague hang over us, 'tis he:
I would to heaven (my Lords) he might be found,
Enquire at London, 'mongſt the Taverns there:

For

For there (they say) he daily doth frequent,
With unrestrained loose Companions,
Even such (they say) as stand in narrow Lanes,
And rob our Watch, and beat our passengers,
Which he (young wanton, and effeminate Boy)
Takes on the point of honour, to support
So dissolute a crew.

Per. My Lord, some two days since I saw the Prince,
And told him of these triumphs held at Oxford.

Bull. And what said the Gallant?

Per. His answer was: he would unto the Stews,
And from the common'st creature pluck a Glove
And wear it as a favour, and with that
He would unhorse the lustiest Challenger.

Bull. As dissolute as desp'rate, yet through both,
I see some sparks of better hope: which elder daies
May happily bring forth. But who comes here?

Enter Aumerle.

Aum. Where is the King?

Bull. What means our Cousin, that he stares
And looks so wildly?

Aum. God save your Grace. I do beseech your Majesty
To have some conference with your Grace alone.

Bull. Withdraw your selves, and leave us here alone:
What is the matter with our Cousin now?

Aum. For ever may my knees grow to the earth,
My tongue cleave to my roof within my mouth,
Unless a Pardon, ere I rise or speak.

Bull. Intended or committed was this fault?
If on the first, how hainous ere it be,
To win thy after-love I pardon thee.

Aum. Then give me leave, that I may turn the key,
That no man enter till the tale be done.

Bull. Have thy desire. York within.

Yor. My Liege beware, look to thy self,
Thou hast a Traitor in thy presence there.

Bull. Villain, Ile make thee safe.

Aum. Stay thy revengeful hand, thou hast no cause to fear.

York. Open the door, secure fool-hardy King:
Shall I for love speak Treason to thy face?
Open the door, or I will break it open.

Enter York.

Bull. What is the matter (Uncle) speak, recover breath,
Tell us how neer is danger,
That we may arme us to encounter it.

Yor. Peruse this writing here, and thou shalt know
The reason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember as thou read'st, thy promise past:
I do repent me, read not my name there,
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

Yor. It was (villain) ere thy hand did set it down.
I tore it from the Traitors bosom, King.
Fear and not Love, begets his penitence;
Forget to pitty him, least thy pitty prove
A Serpent, that will sting thee to the heart.

Bull. Oh heinous, strong, and bold Conspiracie,
O loyal Father of a treacherous Son:
Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain,
From whence this stream, through muddy passages
Hath had his current, and defil'd himself.
Thy overflow of good, converts to bad,
And thine abundant goodnesse shall excuse
This deadly blot, in thy digressing son.

Yor. So shall my vertue be his vices bawd,
And he shall spend mine Honour with his Shame:
As thriftlesse Sonnes their scraping Fathers Gold.
Mine honour lives when his dishonour dies,
Or my sham'd life in his dishonour lies:
Thou kil'st me in his life, giving him breath,
The traitor lives, the true mans put to death.

Dutchesse within.

Dut. What hoa (my Liege) for heavens sake let me in.

Bull. What shrill-voic'd Suppliant makes this eager cry?

Dut. A Woman and thine Aunt (great King) 'tis I.
Speak with me, pitty me, open the dore,
A Beggar begs, that never begg'd before.

Bull. Our Scene is alter'd from a serious thing,
And now chang'd to the Beggar, and the King:
My dangerous Cosin, let your Mother in,
I know she's come to pray for your foul sin.

Yor. If thou do pardon, whosoever pray,
More sins for this forgivenesse, prosper may.
This fester'd joynt cut off, the rest rests sound,
This let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter Dutchesse.

Dut. O King, beleeve not this hard hearted man,
Love, loving not it self, none other can.

Yor. Thou frantick woman, what dost thou make here,
Shall thy old dugges once more a Traitor rear?

Dut. Sweet York be patient, hear me gentle Liege.

Bull. Rise up good Aunt.

Dut. Not yet, I thee beseech,
For ever will I kneel upon my knees,
And never see day that the happy sees,
Till thou give joy: until thou bid me joy,
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing Boy.

Aum. Unto my Mothers prayers, I bend my knee.

York. Against them both, my true joynts bended be.

Dut. Pleads he in earnest? Look upon his face,
His eyes do drop no tears: his prayers are in jest:
His words come from his mouth, ours from our breast.
He prayes but faintly, and would be deny'd,
We pray with heart and soul, and all beside:
His weary joynts would gladly rise, I know,
Our knees shall kneel, till to the ground they grow:
His prayers are full of false Hypocrisie,
Ours of true zeale, and deep integrity:
Our prayers do out-pray his, then let them have
That mercy, which true prayers ought to have.

Bull. Good Aunt stand up.

Dut. Nay do not say stand up.
But pardon first, and afterwards stand up.
And if I were thy Nurse, thy tongue to teach,
Pardon should be the first word of thy speech.
I never long'd to hear a word till now:
Say Pardon (King) let pitty teach thee how.
The word is short, but not so short as sweet,
No word like Pardon, for Kings mouths so meet.

Yor. Speak it in French (King) say Pardon'ne moy.

Dut. Dost thou teach pardon, Pardon to destroy?
Ah my sowre husband, my hard-hearted Lord,
That set'st the word it self, against the word.
Speak pardon as 'tis currant in our Land,
The chopping French we do not understand.
Thine eye begins to speak, set thy tongue there;
Or in thy pitteous heart, plant thou thine ear,
That hearing how our plaints and prayers do pierce,
Pitty may move thee, Pardon to rehearse.

Bull. Good Aunt stand up.

Dut. I do not sue to stand,
Pardon is all the suit I have in hand.

Bull.

Bull. I pardon him as heaven ſhall pardon me.
Dut. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee:
Yet am I ſick for fear: Speak it again,
Twice ſaying Pardon, doth not pardon twain,
But makes one pardon ſtrong.
Bull. I pardon him with all my heart.
Dut. A God on earth thou art.
Bull. But for our truſty brother in-law, the Abbot,
With all the reſt of that conſorted crew,
Deſtruction ſtraight ſhall dog them at the heels:
Good Uncle help to order ſeveral powers
To Oxford, or where ere theſe Traitors are:
They ſhall not live within this world I ſwear,
But I will have them once know where.
Uncle farewell, and Couſin adieu:
Your Mother well hath pray'd, and prove you true.
Dut. Come my old ſon, I pray heaven make thee new.
Exit.

Enter Exton and Servant.

Ext. Didſt thou not mark the King, what words he ſpake?
Have I no friend will rid me of this living fear:
Was it not ſo?
Ser. Thoſe were his very words.
Ex. Have I no friend? (quoth he:) he ſpake it twice,
And urg'd it twice together, did he not?
Ser. He did.
Ex. And ſpeaking it, he wiſtly look'd on me,
As who ſhall ſay, I would thou wer't the man
That would divorce this terror from my heart;
Meaning the King at Pomfret: Come, let's goe,
I am the Kings friend, and will rid his foe. Exit.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Richard.

Rich. I have been ſtudying, how to compare
This Priſon where I live: unto the World:
And for becauſe the world is populous,
And here is not a Creature, but my ſelf,
I cannot do it: yet I'le hammer't out.
My Brain, Ile prove the Female to my ſoul,
My ſoul, the Father: and theſe two beget
A generation of ſtill breeding Thoughts;
And theſe ſame thoughts, people this little world
In humours, like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better ſort,
As thoughts of things Divine, are intermixt
With ſcruples, and do ſet the faith it ſelf
Againſt the Faith: as thus: Come little ones: & then again,
It is as hard to come, as for a Camell
To thred the poſtern of a Needles eye.
Thoughts tending to ambition, they do plot
Unlikely wonders; how theſe vain weak nailes
May tear a paſſage through the Flinty ribs
Of this hard world, my ragged priſon walls:
And for they cannot, dye in their own pride.
Thoughts tending to content, flatter themſelves,
That they are not the firſt of Fortunes ſlaves,
Nor ſhall not be the laſt. Like ſilly Beggars,
Who ſitting in the Stocks, refuge their ſhame
That many have, and others muſt ſit there;
And in this thought, they find a kind of eaſe,
Bearing their own misfortune on the back
Of ſuch as have before endur'd the like.
Thus play I in one Priſon, many people,
And none contented. Sometimes am I King:
Then Treaſon makes me wiſh my ſelf a Beggar,
And ſo I am. Then cruſhing penury,
Perſwades me, I was better when a King:
Then am I King'd again; and by and by,
Think that I am un-king'd by Bullingbrooke,
And ſtraight am nothing. But what ere I am, Muſick
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
With nothing ſhall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd
With being nothing. Muſick do I hear?
Ha, ha? keep time: How ſower ſweet Muſick is,
When time is broke, and no proportion kept?
So is it in the Muſick of mens lives:
And here have I the daintineſſe of ear
To hear time broke in a diſorder'd ſtring:
But for the Concord of my State and Time,
Had not an ear to hear my true Time broke.
I waſted Time, and now doth Time waſte me:
For now hath Time made me his numbring clock;
My thoughts are minutes; and with ſighs they jarre,
Their watches to mine eies, the outward Watch,
Whereto my finger, like a Dialls point,
Is pointing ſtill, in cleanſing them from tears.
Now ſir, the ſound that tells what hour it is,
Are clamourous groans, that ſtrike upon my heart,
Which is the bell: ſo Sighs, and Tears, and Groans,
Shew Minutes, Hours, and Times: O but my Time
Runs poſting on, in Bullingbrookes proud joy,
While I ſtand fooling here, his jack o'th'Clock.
This Muſick mads me, let it ſound no more,
For though it have holpe mad men to their wits,
In me it ſeems, it will make wiſe-men mad:
Yet bleſſing on his heart that gives it me;
For 'tis a ſigne of love, and love to Richard,
Is a ſtrange Brooch, in this all-hating world.

Enter Groome.

Groo. Hail Royal Prince.
Ric. Thanks Noble Peer.
The cheapeſt of us, is ten groats too deer.
What art thou? and how com'ſt thou hither?
Where no man ever comes, but that ſad dogge
That brings me food, to make misfortune live?
Groo. I was a poor Groom of thy Stable (King)
When thou wer't King, who travelling towards York,
With much adoe, at length have gotten leave
To look upon my (ſometimes Royal) Maſters face.
O how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld
In London ſtreets, that Coronation day,
When Bullingbrooke rode on Roan Barbary,
That horſe, that thou ſo often haſt beſtrid,
That horſe, that I ſo carefully have dreſt.
Rich. Rode he on Barbary? tell me gentle Friend,
How went he under him?
Groo. So proudly, as if he had diſdain'd the ground.
Rich. So proud, that Bullingbrooke was on his back;
That Jade hath eat bread from my Royall hand.
This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.
Would he not ſtumble? would he not fall down
(Since Pride muſt have a fall) and break the neck
Of that proud man, that did uſurpe his back?
Forgiveneſſe horſe: why do I rail on thee,
Since thou created to be aw'd by man
VVas't born to bear? I was not made a horſe,

And yet I bear a burthen like an Asse,
Spur-gall'd, and tyr'd by jauncing Bullingbrooke.

Enter Keeper with a Dish.

Keep. Fellow, give place, here is no longer stay.
Rich. If thou love me, 'tis time thou wer't away.
Groo. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. Exit.
Keep. My Lord, wilt please you to fall too?
Rich. Taste of it first, as thou wer't wont to do.
Keep. My Lord I dare not: Sir Pierce of Exton,
Who lately came from th'King, commands the contrary.
Rich. The divel take Henry of Lancaster, and thee;
Patience is stale, and I am weary of it.
Keep. Help, help, help.

Enter Exton and Servants.

Ri. How now? what means death in this rude assault?
Villain, thine own hand yields thy deaths instrument,
Go thou and fill another roome in Hell.
Exton strikes him down.
That hand shall burn in never-quenching fire,
That staggers thus my person. Exton, thy fierce hand,
Hath with the Kings blood, stain'd the Kings own land.
Mount, mount my soul, thy seat is up on high,
Whil'st my grosse flesh sinks downward, here to dye.
Exton. As full of valour as of Royal blood,
Both have I spilt: Oh would the deed were good,
For now the divel that told me I did well,
Saies, that this deed is chronicled in Hell.
This dead King to the living King ile bear,
Take hence the rest; and give them burial here. Exit.

Scæna Quinta.

Flourish. Enter Bullingbrooke, Yorke, with other Lords and attendants.

Bull. Uncle York, the latest news we hear,
Is that the Rebels have consum'd with fire
Our Town of Ciceter in Glouces'tershire,
But whether they be tane or slain, we hear not.

Enter Northumberland.

Welcome my Lord: what is the news?
Nor. First to thy Sacred State wish I all happinesse:
The next news is, I have to London sent
The heads of Salisbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent:
The manner of their taking may appear
At large discoursed in this paper here.
Bull. We thank thee gentle Percy for thy pains,
And to thy worth will adde right worthy gaines.

Enter Fitz-waters.

Fitz. My Lord, I have from Oxford sent to London,
The heads of Broccas, and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous consorted Traitors,
That sought at Oxford thy dire overthrow.
Bull. Thy pains Fitzwaters shall not be forgot;
Right Noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter Percy and Carlile.

Per. The grand Conspirator, Abbot of Westminster,
With clog of Conscience, and sower melancholly,
Hath yielded up his body to the grave:
But here is Carlile, living to abide
Thy Kingly doom, and sentence of his pride.
Bull. Carlile, this is your doom:
Choose out some secret place, some reverend roome
More than thou hast, and with it joy thy self:
So as thou liv'st in peace, dye free from strife:
For though mine enemy thou hast ever been,
High sparks of Honour in thee have I seen.

Enter Exton with a Coffin.

Exton. Great King, within this Coffin I present
Thy buried fear. Herein all breathlesse lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies
Richard of Burdeanx by me hither brought.
Bull. Exton. I thank thee not, for thou hast wrought
A deed of Slaughter with thy fatal hand,
Upon my head, and all this famous Land.
Ex. From your own mouth my Lord, did I this deed.
Bull. They love not poyson, that do poyson need,
Nor do I thee: though I did wish him dead,
I hate the Murtherer, love him murthered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor Princely favour.
With Cain go wander through the shade of night,
And never shew thy head by day, nor light.
Lords I protest my soul is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me, and make me grow.
Come mourn with me, for that I do lament,
And put on sullen black incontinent:
Ile make a voyage to the holy-land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.
March sadly after, grace my mourning here,
In weeping after this untimely Beer. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The First Part of Henry the Fourth,

with the Life and Death of HENRY Sirnamed HOT-SPURRE.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter the King, Lord John of Lancaſter, Earl of Weſtmerland, with others.

King.

So ſhaken as we are, ſo wan with care,
Find we a time for frighted Peace to pant,
And breath ſhort winded accents of new
Broils
To be commenc'd in Storms afar remote:
No more the thirſty entrance of this Soyl,
Shall dambe her lips with her own childrens bloud:
No more ſhall trenching War channel her fields,
Nor bruiſe her Flowrets with the armed hoofes
Of hoſtile paces. Thoſe oppoſed eyes,
Which like the Meteors of a troubled Heaven,
All of one Nature, of one Subſtance bred,
Did lately meet in the inteſtine ſhock,
And furious cloze of civil Butchery,
Shall now in mutual well-beſeeming rankes
March all one way, and be no more oppos'd
Againſt Acquaintance, Kindred, and Allies.
The edge of War, like an ill-ſheathed knife,
No more ſhall cut his Maſter. Therefore Friends,
As far as to the Sepulcher of Chriſt,
Whoſe Souldier now, under whoſe bleſſed Croſs
We are impreſſed, and engag'd to fight,
Forthwith a power of Engliſh ſhall we levy,
Whoſe armes were moulded in their Mothers Womb,
To chaſe theſe Pagans in thoſe holy Fields,
Over whoſe Acres walk'd thoſe bleſſed feet
Which fourteen hundred years ago were nail'd
For our advantage on the bitter Croſs.
But this our purpoſe is a twelvemonth old,
And bootleſs 'tis to tell you we will go:
Therefore we meet not now. Then let me hear
Of you my gentle Couſin Weſtmerland,
What yeſternight our Council did decree,
In forwarding this dear expedience.

Weſt. My Liege: This haſt was hot in queſtion,
And many limits of the Charge ſet down
But yeſternight: when all athwart there came
A Poſt from Wales, loaden with heavy News;
Whoſe worſt was, That the Noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordſhire to fight
Againſt the irregular and wild Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welſhman taken,
And a thouſand of his people butchered:
Upon whoſe dead corps there was ſuch miſuſe,
Such beaſtly, ſhameleſs transformation,
By thoſe Welſhwomen done, as may not be (Without much ſhame) re-told or ſpoken of.

King. It ſeems then, that the tidings of this broil,
Brake off our buſineſs for the Holy Land.

Weſt. This matcht, with other like, my gracious Lord,
Far more uneven and unwelcome News
Came from the North, and thus it did report:
On Holy-Rood day, the gallant Hotſpur there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That ever-valiant and approved Scot,
At Holmedon met, where they did ſpend
A ſad and bloudy hour:
As by diſcharge of their Artillery,
And ſhape of likelihood the newes was told:
For he that brought them, in the very heat
And pride of their contention, did take horſe,
Uncertain of the iſſue any way.

King. Here is a dear and true induſtrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his Horſe,
Stain'd with the variation of each ſoyl,
Betwixt the Holmedon, and this Seat of ours:
And he hath brought us ſmooth and welcom News.
The Earle of Dowglas is diſcomfited,
Ten thouſand bold Scots, two and twenty Knights
Balk't in their own bloud did Sir Walter ſee
On Holmedons Plaines. Of Priſoners, Hotſpur took
Mordake Earle of Fife, and eldeſt ſon
To beaten Dowglas, and the Earle of Athol,
Of Marry, Angus, and Menteith.
And is not this an honourable ſpoyl?
A gallant prize? Ha Couſin, is it not? In faith it is.

Weſt. A Conqueſt for a Prince to boaſt of.

King. Yea, there thou mak'ſt me ſad, and mak'ſt me ſin,
In envy, that my Lord Northumberland
Should be the father of ſo bleſt a ſon:
A Son, who is the Theam of Honours tongue:
Amongſt a Grove, the very ſtraiteſt Plant,
Who is ſweet Fortunes Minion, and her Pride:
Whil'ſt I by looking on the praiſe of him,
See Ryot and Diſhonour ſtain the brow
Of my young Harry. O that it could be prov'd,
That ſome Night-tripping Fayry, had exchang'd
In Cradle-cloaths, our Children where they lay,
And calld mine Percy, his Plantagenet:

Then

Then would I have his Harry, and he mine:
But let him from my thoughts. What think you Coze
Of this young Percies pride? The Prisoners
Which he in this adventure hath surpriz'd,
To his own use he keeps, and sends me word
I shall have none but Mordake Earl of Fife,
West. This is his Uncles teaching. This is Worcester
Malevolent to you in all Aspects:
Which makes him prune himself, and bristle up
The crest of Youth against your Dignity.
King. But I have sent for him to answer this:
And for this cause a while we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Jerusalem.
Cosin, on Wednesday next, our Council we will hold
At Windsor, so inform the Lords:
But come your self with speed to us again,
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Than out of anger can be uttered.
West. I will my Liege. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Henry Prince of Wales, Sir John Falstaffe, and Pointz.

Fal. Now Hal, what time of day is it Lad?

Prince. Thou art so fat-witted with drinking of old Sack and unbuttoning thee after Supper, and sleeping upon benches in the afternoon that thou hast forgotten to demand that truly, which thou wouldst truly know. What a divel hast thou to do with the time of the day? unless houres were Cups of Sack, and minutes Capons, and Clocks the tongues of Bawds, and Dials the signes of Leaping-houses, and the blessed Sun himself a fair hot Wench in Flame-coloured Taffata, I see no reason why thou shouldst be so superfluous, to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed you came near me now Hal. for we that take Purses, go by the Moon and seven Stars, and not by Phœbus he, that wandring Knight so fair. And I pray thee sweet Wagge, when thou art King, as God save thy Grace, Majesty I should say, for Grace thou wilt have none.

Prince. What! none?

Fal. No, not so much as will serve to be Prologue to an Egge and Butter.

Prince. Well, how then? Come roundly, roundly.

Fal. Marry then, sweet Wagge, when thou art King, let not us that are Squires of the Nights body, be call'd Theeves of the Dayes beauty. Let us be Diana's Forresters, Gentlemen of the Shade, Minions of the Moon; and let men say, we be men of good Government, being governed as the Sea is, by our noble and chast Mistris the Moon, under whose countenance we steal.

Prince. Thou say'st well, and it holds well too: for the fortune of us that are the Moones men, doth ebb and flow like the Sea, being governed as the Sea is, by the Moon: as for proof. Now a Purse of Gold most resolutely snatch'd on Monday night, and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday morning; got with swearing, Laid by: and spent with crying, Bring in: now in as low an ebb, as the foot of the Ladder; and by and by in as high a flow as the ride of the Gallows.

Fal. Thou say'st true Lad; and is not my Hostess of the Tavern a most sweet Wench?

Prince. As is the honey, my old Lad of the Castle: and is not a Buffe Jerkin a most sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How, how? how now mad Wagge? What in thy quips and thy quiddities? What a plague have I to d with a Buffe-Jerkin?

Prince. Why, what a pox have I to do with my Hostess of the Tavern?

Fal. Well, thou hast call'd her to a reckoning many a time and oft.

Prince. Did I ever call thee for to pay thy part?

Fal. No, Ile give thee thy due, thou hast paid all there.

Prince. Yea and elsewhere, so far as my Coyn would stretch, and where it would not; I have us'd my Credit.

Fal. Yea, and so us'd it, that were it here apparent, that thou art Heir apparent. But I prythee sweet Wagge, shall there be Gallows standing in England when thou art King? and Resolution thus fobb'd as it is, with the rusty curb of old Father Antick the Law? Do not thou when thou art a King, hang a Thief.

Prince. No, thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! Ile be a brave Judge.

Prince. Thou judgest false already. I mean, thou shalt have the hanging of the Thieves, and so become a rare Hangman.

Fal. Well Hal, well: and in some sort it jumpes with my humour, as well as waiting in the Court, I can tell you.

Prince. For obtaining of suites?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suites, whereof the Hangman hath no lean Wardrobe. I am as Melancholly as a Gyb-Cat, or a lugg'd Bear.

Prin. Or an old Lion, or a Lovers Lute.

Fal. Yea, or the Drone of a Lincolnshire Bagpipe.

Prin. What say'st thou to a Hare, or the Melancholy of Moor-Ditch?

Fal. Thou hast the most unsavoury similes, and art indeed the most comparative rascallest sweet young Prince. But Hal, I prythee trouble me no more with vanity, I would thou and I knew, where a Commodity of good names were to be bought: an old Lord of the Council rated me the other day in the street about you sir; but I mark'd him not, and yet he talk'd very wisely, but I regarded him not, and yet he talkt wisely, and in the street too.

Prin. Thou didst well: for no man regards it.

Fal. O, thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a Saint. Thou hast done much harm unto me Hal, God forgive thee for it. Before I knew thee Hal, I knew nothing: and now I am (if a man should speak truly) little better then one of the wicked. I must give over this life, and I will give it over: and I do not, I am a Villain. Ile be damned for never a Kings son in Christendom.

Prin. Where shall we take a Purse to morrow, Jack?

Fal. Where thou wilt Lad, Ile make one: and I do not, call me Villain, and baffle me.

Prin. I see a good amendment of life in thee: From Praying, to Purse-taking.

Fal. Why Hal, 'tis my Vocation Hal. 'Tis no sin for a man to labour in his Vocation.

Pointz. Now shall we know if Gads-hill have set a Watch. O, if men were to be saved by merit, what hole in Hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent Villain, that ever cryed, Stand, to a true man.

Prin. Good morrow, Ned.

Pointz.

Pointz. Good morrow sweet Hal. What saies Monsieur Remorse? What saies Sir John Sack and Sugar, Jack? How agrees the Devil and thee about thy Soul, that thou soldest him on Good-Fryday last, for a Cup of Madera, and a cold Capons legge?

Prin. Sir John stands to his word, the devil shall have his bargain, for he was never yet a Breaker of Proverbs: He will give the devil his due.

Poin. Then art thou damn'd for keeping thy word with the devil.

Prin. Else he had been damn'd for cozening the devil.

Poy. But my Lads, my Lads, to morrow morning, by four a clock early at Gads-hill, there are Pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich Offerings, and Traders riding to London with fat Purses. I have Vizards for you all; you have horses for your selves: Gads-hill lies to night in Rochester, I have bespoke Supper to morrow in Eastcheap; we may do it as secure as sleep: if you will go, I will stuffe your Purses full of Crownes: if you will not, tarry at home and be hang'd.

Fal. Hear ye Yedward, if I tarry at home, and go not, Ile hang you for going.

Poy. You will Chops.

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one?

Prin. Who, I rob? I a Thief? Not I.

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou cam'st not of the blood-royal, if thou dar'st not stand for ten shillings.

Prin. Well then, once in my daies Ile be a mad-cap.

Fal. Why that's well said.

Prin. Well, come what will, Ile tarry at home.

Fal. Ile be a Traytor then, when thou art King.

Prin. I care not.

Poyn. Sir John, I pray thee leave the Prince and me alone, I will lay him down such reasons for this adventure, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, maist thou have the spirit of perswasion; and he the eares of profiting, that what thou speakest, may move; and what he hears may be believed, that the true Prince may (for recreation sake) prove a false thief; for the poor abuses of the time, want countenance. Farewel, you shall find me in Eastcheap.

Prin. Farewel the latter Spring. Farewel Allhollown Summer. Exit Fal.

Poy. Now, my good sweet honey Lord, ride with us to morrow. I have a jest to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaffe, Harvey, Rossil, and Gads-hill, shall rob those men that we have already way-layd; your self and I, will not be there: and when they have the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

Prin. But how shall we part with them in setting forth?

Poyn. Why we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherein it is at our pleasure to fail; and then will they venture upon the exploit themselves, which they have no sooner atchieved, but we'l set upon them.

Prin. I but 'tis like that they will know us by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment to be our selves.

Poy. Tut, our horses they shall not see, Ile tye them in the Wood; our vizards we will change after we leave them: and sirrah, I have Cases of Buckram for the nonce, to immask our noted outward garments.

Prin. But I doubt they will be too hard for us.

Poyn. Well, for two of them, I know them to be as true bred Cowards as ever turn'd back: and for the third, if he fight longer than he sees reason, Ile forswear Armes. The vertue of this Jest will be, the incomprehensible lies that this fat Rogue will tell us, when we meet at Supper; how thirty at least he fought with, what wards, what blowes, what extremities he endured; and in the reproof of this, lies the Jest.

Prin. Well, Ile go with thee, provide us all things necessary, and meet me to morrow night in Eastcheap, there Ile sup. Farewel.

Poyn. Farewel, my Lord. Exit Poynes.

Prin. I know you all, and will a while uphold
The unyoak'd humour of your Idleness:
Yet herein will I imitate the Sun,
Who doth permit the base contagious cloudes
To smother up his Beauty from the world;
That when he please again to be himself,
Being wanted, he may be more wondred at,
By breaking through the foul and ugly Mists
Of vapours, that did seem to strangle him.
If all the year were playing Holidaies,
To sport, would be as tedious as to work;
But when they seldom come, they wisht-for come,
And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.
So when this loose behaviour I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promised:
By how much better then my word I am,
By so much shall I falsifie mens hopes,
And like bright Metal on a sullen ground:
My reformation glittering o're my faulr,
Shall shew more goodly, and attract more eyes,
Then that which hath no foyl to set it off.
Ile so offend, to make offence a skill,
Redeeming time, when men think least I will.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter the King, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspur, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

King. My bloud hath been too cold and temperate,
Unapt to stir at these indignities,
And you have found me; for accordingly,
You tread upon my patience: But be sure,
I will from henceforth rather be my self,
Mighty, and to be fear'd, then my condition,
Which hath been smooth as Oyl, soft as young Down,
And therefore lost the Title of respect,
Which the proud ne're payes, but to the proud.

Wor. Our house (my Soveraign Liege) little deserves
The scourge of greatness to be used on it,
And that same greatness too, which our own hands
Have holp to make so portly.

Nor. My Lord.

King. Worcester get thee gone: for I do see
Danger and disobedience in thine eye.
O sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And Majesty might never yet endure
The moody Frontier of a servant brow,
You have good leave to leave us. When we need
Your use and counsel, we shall send for you.
You were about to speak.

North. Yea, my good Lord.

Those

Those Prisoners in your Highnesse demanded,
Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon took,
Where (as he sayes) not with such strength denied
As was delivered to your Majesty:
Who either through envy, or misprision,
Was guilty of this fault; and not my Son.
Hot. My Liege, I did deny no Prisoners.
But, I remember when the fight was done,
When I was dry with Rage, and extream toyl,
Breathlesse, and faint, leaning upon my Sword,
Came there a certain Lord, neat and trimly dresst;
Fresh as a Bride-groom, and his Chin new reapt,
Shew'd like a stubble Land at harvest home.
He was perfumed like a Milliner,
And 'twixt his Finger and his Thumb, he held
A Pouncet-box: which ever and anon
He gave his Nose, and took't away again:
Who therewith angry, when it next came there,
Took it in Snuffe. And still he smil'd and talk'd:
And as the Souldiers bare dead bodies by,
He call'd them untaught Knaves, Unmannerly,
To bring a slovenly unhandsome Corse
Betwixt the wind, and his Nobility.
With many holiday and Lady termes
He question'd me: Among the rest, demanded
My Prisoners, in your Majesties behalf.
I then, all-smarting with my wounds being cold,
(To be so pestered with a Popingay)
Out of my grief, and my impatience,
Answer'd (neglectingly) I know not what,
He should, or should not: For he made me mad,
To see him shine so brisk, and smell so sweet,
And talk so like a Waiting-Gentlewoman,
Of Guns, and Drums, and Wounds: God save the mark;
And telling me, the Soveraign'st thing on earth
Was Parmacity, for an inward bruise:
And that it was great pitty, so it was,
That villanous Salt-peter should be digg'd
Out of the bowells of the harmlesse Earth,
Which many a good tall Fellow had destroy'd
So cowardly. And but for these vile Guns,
He would himself have been a Souldier.
This bald, unjoynted Chat of his (my Lord)
Made me to answer indirectly (as I said.)
And I beseech you, let not this report
Come currant for an Accusation,
Betwixt my love and your high Majesty.
Blunt. The circumstance considered, good my Lord,
What ever Harry Percie then had said,
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest retold,
May reasonably die, and never rise
To doe him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he unsay it now.
King. Why yet he doth deny his Prisoners,
But with Proviso and Exception,
That we at our own charge, shall ransome straight
His Brother-in-Law, the foolish Mortimer,
Who (in my soul) hath wilfully betraid
The lives of those, that he did lead to Fight,
Against the great Magician, damn'd Glendower;
Whose daughter (as we hear) the Earl of March
Hath lately married. Shall our Coffers then
Be emptied, to redeem a Traitor home?
Shall we buy Treason? and indent with Fears,
When they have lost and forfeited themselves?
No: on the barren Mountain let him starve:
For I shall never hold that man my friend,
Whose tongue shall aske me for one penny cost
To ransome home revolted Mortimer,
Hot. Revolted Mortimer?
He never did fall off, my Soveraign Liege,
But by the chance of Warre: to prove that true,
Needs no more but one tongue. For all those Wounds,
Those mouthed Wounds, which valiantly he took,
When on the gentle Severnes sedgie bank,
In single opposition hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an hour
In changing hardiment with great Glendower:
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink
Upon agreement, of swift Severnes flood;
Who then affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearfully among the trembling Reeds,
And hid his crisped-head in a hollow bank,
Blood stained with these valiant Combatants.
Never did base and rotten policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
Nor never could the noble Mortimer
Receive so many, and all willingly:
Then let him not be slander'd with Revolt.
King. Thou do'st belye him Percy, thou do'st belye him;
He never did encounter with Glendower:
I tell thee, he durst as well have met the devil alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
Art thou not asham'd? But sirrah, henceforth
Let me not hear you speak of Mortimer.
Send me your Prisoners with the speediest meanes,
Or you shall hear in such a kind from me
As will displease ye. My Lord Northumberland,
We License your departure with your Son,
Send us your Prisoners, or you'll hear of it. Exit King.
Hot. And if the devil come and roare for them,
I will not send them. I will after straight
And tell him so: for I will ease my heart,
Although it be with hazard of my head,
Nor. What? drunk with choller? stay and pause awhile,
Here comes your Uncle. Enter Worcester.
Hot. Speak of Mortimer?
Yes, I will speak of him, and let my soul
Want mercy, if I doe not joyn with him.
In his behalf, I'le empty all those Veines,
And shed my dear blood drop by drop i'th dust,
But I will lift the downfall Mortimer
As high i'th aire as this unthankfull King,
As this ingrate and cankred Bullingbrook.
Nor. Brother, the King hath made your Nephew mad.
Wor. Who strook this heat up after I was gone?
Hot. He will (forsooth) have all my Prisoners:
And when I urg'd the ransome once again
Of my wives Brother, then his cheek look'd pale,
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.
Wor. I cannot blame him: was he not proclaim'd
By Richard that dead is, the next of blood?
Nor. He was: I heard the Proclamation,
And then it was, when the unhappy King
(Whose wrongs in us God pardon) did set forth
Upon his Irish Expedition:
From whence he, intercepted, did return
To be depos'd, and shortly murthered.
Wor. And for whose death, we in the worlds wide mouth
Live so scandaliz'd, and foully spoken of.

Hot. But soft I pray you; did King Richard then
Proclaime my brother Mortimer,
Heir to the Crown?
Nor. He did, my self did hear it.
Hot. Nay then I cannot blame his Cousin King,
That wish'd him on the barren Mountains starv'd.
But shall it be, that you that set the Crown
Upon the head of this forgetfull man,
And for his sake wore the detested blot
Of murtherous subornations? shall it be,
That you a world of curses undergo,
Being the Agents, or base second meanes,
The Cords, the Ladder, or the Hangman rather?
O pardon, if that I descend so low,
To shew the Line, and the Predicament
Wherein you range under this subtill King.
Shall it for shame, be spoken in these dayes,
Or fill up Chronicles in time to come,
That men of your Nobility and Power,
Did gage them both in an unjust behalf
(As both of you, God pardon it, have done)
To put down Richard, that sweet lovely Rose,
And plant this Thorn, this Canker Bullingbrook?
And shall it in more shame be further spoken,
That you are fool'd, discarded, and shook off
By him, for whom these shames ye underwent?
No: yet time serves, wherein you may redeem
Your banish'd Honours, and restore your selves
Into the good thoughts of the world again.
Revenge the jeering and disdain'd contempt
Of this proud King, who studies day and night
To answer all the debt he owes unto you,
Even with the bloody payments of your deaths:
Therefore I say------
Wor. Peace Cousin, say no more.
And now I will unclasp a secret book,
And to your quick conveying Discontents,
I'le read you Matter, deep and dangerous,
As full of peril and adventerous Spirit,
As to o're-walk a Current, roaring loud
On the unstedfast footing of a Spear.
Hot. If he fall in, good night, or sink or swimme:
Send danger from the East unto the West,
So Honour crosse in from the North to South,
And let them grapple: The blood more stirres
To rowze a Lyon, then to start a Hare.
Nor. Imagination of some great exploit,
Drives him beyond the bounds of Patience.
Hot. By heaven, me thinks it were an easie leap,
To pluck bright Honour from the pale-fac'd Moon,
Or dive into the bottom of the deep,
Where Fadome-line could never touch the ground,
And pluck up drowned Honour by the Locks:
So he that doth redeem her thence, might wear
Without Co-rivall, all her Dignities:
But out upon this half-fac'd Fellowship.
Wor He apprehends a world of Figures here,
But not the form of what he should attend:
Good Cousin give me audience for a while,
And list to me.
Hot. I cry you mercy.
Wor. Those same noble Scots
That are your Prisoners.
Hot. I'le keep them all.
By heaven, he shall not have a Scot of them:
No, if a Scot would save his Soul, he shall not.
I'le keep them, by this Hand.
Wor. You start away,
And lend no eare unto my purposes.
Those Prisoners you shall keep.
Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat:
He said he would not ransome Mortimer:
Forbad my tongue to speak of Mortimer.
But I will find him when he lies asleep,
And in his eare I'le holla Mortimer.
Nay, I'le have a Starling shall be taught to speak
Nothing but Mortimer, and give it him,
To keep his anger still in motion.
Wor. Hear you Cousin: a word.
Hot. All studies here I solemnly defie,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bullingbrook,
And that same Sword and Buckler Prince of Wales.
But that I think his Father loves him not,
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I would have poyson'd him with a pot of Ale.
Wor. Farewell Kinsman: I'le talk to you
When you are temper'd to attend.
Nor. Why what a Wasp-tongu'd and impatient fool
Art thou, to break into this Womans mood,
Tying thine ear to no tongue but thine own?
Hot. Why look you, I am whipt & scourg'd with rods?
Netled, and stung with Pismiers, when I hear
Of this vile Politician Bullingbrook.
In Richard's time: What de' ye call the place?
A plague upon't, it is in Glocester-shire:
'Twas where the madcap Duke his Uncle kept
His Uncle York, where I first bow'd my knee
Unto the King of Smiles, this Bullingbrook:
When you and he came back from Ravenspurgh.
Nor. At Barkley Castle.
Hot. You say true:
Why what a gaudie deal of curtesie,
This fawning Gray-hound then did proffer me.
Look when his infant fortune came to age,
And gentle Harry Percy, and kind Cousin:
O, the Devil take such Cozeners, God forgive me:
Good Uncle tell your tale, for I have done.
Wor. Nay, if you have not, to't again,
We'l stay your leisure.
Hot. I have done insooth.
Wor. Then once more to your Scottish Prisoners.
Deliver them up without their ransome straight,
And make the Dowglas son your onely mean
For powers in Scotland: which for divers reasons
Which I shall send you written, be assur'd
Will easily be granted you, my Lord.
Your Son in Scotland being thus employ'd,
Shall secretly in the bosome creep
Of that same noble Prelate, well belov'd,
The Arch-Bishop.
Hot. Of York, is't not?
Wor. True, who beares hard
His Brothers death at Bristow, the Lord Scroop.
I speak not this in estimation,
As what I think might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set down,
And onely stayes but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.
Hot. I smell it:
Upon my life, it will doe wondrous well.
Nor. Before the game's a foot, thou still let'st slip.
Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a noble plot,

And

And then the power of Scotland, and of York,
To joyn with Mortimer, Ha.
Wor. And so they shall.
Hotsp. Infaith it is exceeding well aim'd.
Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids us speed,
To save our heads, by raising of a Head:
For, bear our selves as even as we can,
The King will always think him in our debt,
And think we think our selves unsatisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay us home.
And see already, how he doth begin
To make us strangers to his looks of love.
Hot. He does, he does; we'll be reveng'd on him.
Wor. Cousin, farewell. No further go in this,
Then I by Letters shall direct your course
When time is ripe, which will be suddenly:
I'le steal to Glendower, and lo, Mortimer,
Where you, and Dowglas, and our powers at once,
As I will fashion it, shall happily meet,
To bear our fortunes in our own strong armes,
Which now we hold at much uncertainty.
Nor. Farewell good Brother, we shall thrive, I trust.
Hot. Uncle, adieu: O let houres be short,
Till fields, and blows, and groans applaud our sport. Exit.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Carrier with a Lantern in his hand.

1. Car. Heigh ho, an't be not four by the day I'le be hang'd. Charles wain is over the new Chimney, and yet our horse not packt. What Ostler?

Ost. Anon, anon.

1. Car. I prethee Tom, beat Cuts Saddle, put a few Flocks in the point: the poor Jade is wrung in the withers, out of all cesse.

Enter another Carrier.

2. Car. Pease and Beans are as dank here as a Dog, and this is the next way to give poor Jades the Bots: This house is turned upside down since Robin the Ostler died.

1. Car. Poor fellow never joy'd since the price of oats rose, it was the death of him.

2. Car. I think this is the most villanous house in all London roade for Fleas: I am stung like a Tench.

1. Car. Like a Tench? There's ne're a King in Christendome, could be better bit, then I have been since the first Cock.

2. Car. Why, you will allow us ne'r a Jourden, and then we leak in your Chimney: and your Chamber-lye breeds Fleas like a Loach.

1. Car. What Ostler, come away, and be hang'd: come away.

2. Car. I have a Gammon of Bacon, and two razes of Ginger, to be delivered as far as Charing-crosse.

1. Car. The Turkies in my Panniers are quite starved. What Ostler? a plague on thee, hast thou never an eye in thy head? can'st not hear? and 'twere not as good a deed as drink, to break the pate of thee, I am a very Villain. Come and be hang'd, hast no faith in thee?

Enter Gads-hill.

Gad. Good morrow Carriers. What's a clock?

Car. I think it be two a Clock.

Gad. I prethee lend me thy Lanthorn to see my Gelding in the stable.

1. Car. Nay soft I pray ye, I know a trick worth two of that.

Gad. I prethee lend me thine.

2. Car. I, when, canst tell? lend me thy Lanthern (quoth-a) marry I'le see thee hang'd first.

Gad. Sirra Carrier: what time doe you mean to come to London.

2. Car. Time enough to go to bed with a Candle, I warrant thee. Come neighbour Mugges, we'll call up the Gentlemen, they will along with company, for they have great charge. Exeunt.

Enter Chamberlain.

Gad. What ho, Chamberlain?

Cham. At hand quoth Pick-purse.

Gad. That's even as fair, as at hand quoth the Chamberlain: For thou variest no more from picking of Purses, then giving direction doth from labouring. Thou know'st the plot, how.

Cham. Good morrow Master Gads-hill, it holds currant that I told you yesternight. There's a Franklin in the wilde of Kent, hath brought three hundred Marks with him in Gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company last night at Supper; a kind of Auditor, one that hath abundance of charge too (God knowes what) they are up already, and call for Egges and Butter. They will away presently.

Gad. Sirra, if they meet not with S. Nicholas Clarks, I'le give thee this neck.

Cham. No, I'le none of it: I prethee keep that for the Hangman, for I know thou worship'st S. Nicholas as truly as a man of falshood may.

Gad. What talkest thou to me of the Hangman? If I hang, I'le make a fat pair of Gallows. For, if I hang, old Sir John hangs with me, and thou know'st he's no Starveling. Tut, there are other Trojans that thou dream'st not of, the which (for sport sake) are content to doe the Profession some grace; that would (if matters should be look'd into) for their own Credit sake, make all whole. I am joyned with no Foot-Land-Rakers, no Long-staffe six-penny strikers, none of these mad Mustachio-purple-hu'd-Malt-wormes, but with Nobility, and Tranquility; Bourgomasters, and great Oneyers, such as can hold in, such as will strike sooner then speak; and speak sooner then drink, and drink sooner then pray: and yet I lye, for they pray continually unto their Saint the Common-wealth; or rather, not to pray to her, but prey on her: for they ride up and down on her, and make her their Boots.

Cham. What, the Commonwealth their Boots? Will she hold out water in foul way?

Gad. She will, she will; Justice hath liquor'd her. We steal, as in a Castle, cock-sure: we have the receit of Fern-seed, we walk invisible.

Cham. Nay, I think rather, you are more beholding to the Night, then the Fern-seed, for your walking invisible.

Gad. Give me thy hand.
Thou shalt have a share in our purpose,
As I am a true man.

Cham. Nay, rather let me have it, as you are a false Thief.

Gad. Go to: Homo is a common name to all men. Bid the Ostler bring the Gelding out of the stable. Farewell, ye muddy Knave. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prince, Poyns, and Peto.

Poines. Come shelter, shelter, I have removed Falstaffs Horse, and he frets like a gumm'd Velvet.

Prin. Stand close.

Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. Poynes, Poynes, and be hang'd Poynes.

Prin. Peace ye fat-kidney'd Rascall, what a bawling dost thou keep?

Fal. What Poynes. Hal?

Prin. He is walk'd up to the top of the hill, I'le go seek him.

Fal. I am accurst to rob in that Thiefs company: that Rascall hath removed my Horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travell but four foot by the square further a foot, I shall break my wind. Well, I doubt not but to die a fair death for all this, if I scape hanging for killing that Rogue. I have forsworn his company hourely any time this two an twenty year, and yet I am bewitcht with the Rogues company. If the Rascall have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'le be hang'd, it could not be else: I have drunk Medicines. Poynes, Hall, a Plague upon you both. Bardolph, Peto: I'le starve e're I rob a foot further. And 'twere not as good a deed as to drink, to turn Trueman, and to leave these Rogues, I am the veriest Varlet that ever chewed with a Tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground, is threescore and ten miles afoot with me: and the stony-hearted Villains know it well enough. A plague upon't, when Thieves cannot be true one to another. They whistle. Whew: a plague light upon you all. Give me my Horse you Rogues: give me my Horse and be hang'd.

Prin. Peace ye fat-guts, lie down, lay thine ear close to the ground, and list if thou can hear the tread of travellers.

Fal. Have you any Leavers to lift me up again being down? I'le not bear mine own flesh so far afoot again, for all the coin in thy Fathers Exchequer. What a plague mean ye to colt me thus?

Prin. Thou lyest, thou art not colted, thou art uncolted.

Fal. I prethee good Prince Hal, help me to my horse, good Kings son.

Prin. Out you Rogue, shall I be your Ostler?

Fal. Go hang thy self in thine own heir-apparant-Garters: If I be tane, I'le peach for this: and I have not Ballads made on all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a Cup of Sack be my poyson: when a jest is so forward, and a foot too, I hate it.

Enter Gads-hill.

Gad. Stand.

Fal. So I doe against my will.

Poyn. O 'tis our Setter, I know his voyce: Bardolfe, what newes?

Bar. Case ye, case ye; on with your Vizards, there's money of the Kings comming down the hill, 'tis going to the Kings Exchequer.

Fal. You lie you Rogue, 'tis going to the Kings Tavern.

Gad. There's enough to make us all.

Fal. To be hang'd.

Prin. You four shall front them in the narrow Lane: Ned and I will walk lower; if they scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. But how many be of them?

Gad. Some eight or ten.

Fal. Will they not rob us?

Prin. What, a Coward Sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed I am not John of Gaunt your Grandfather: but yet no Coward, Hal.

Prin. We'll leave that to the proof.

Poyn. Sirra Jack, thy horse stands behind the hedge, when thou need'st him, there shalt thou finde him, farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now I cannot strike him if I should be hang'd.

Prin. Ned, where are our disguises?

Poyn. Here hard by: Stand close.

Fal. Now my Masters, happy man be his dole, say I: every man to his businesse.

Enter Travellers.

Tra. Come neighbour: the boy shall lead our Horses down the hill: We'll a foot a while, and ease our Legges.

Thieves. Stay.

Tra. Jesu blesse us.

Fal. Strike: down with them, cut the villains throats; a whorson Caterpillars: Bacon-fed Knaves, they hate us youth; down with them, fleece them.

Tra. O, we are undone, both we and ours for ever.

Fal. Hang ye gorbellied knaves, are you undone? No ye Fat Chuffes, I would your store were here. On Bacons on, what ye knaves? young men must live, you are Grand Jurers? We'll jure ye i faith.

Here they rob them and bind them. Enter the Prince and Poynes.

Prin. The thieves have bound the True-men: Now could thou and I rob the thieves and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a Week, Laughter for a Moneth, and a good jest for ever.

Poynes. Stand close, I hear them comming.

Enter Thieves again.

Fal. Come my Masters, let us share, and then to horse before day: and the Prince and Poynes be not two arrand Cowards, there's no equity stirring. There's no more valour in that Poynes, than in a wild Duck.

Prin. Your money.

Poyn. Villains.

As they are sharing, the Prince and Poynes set upon them. They all run away, leaving the booty behind them.

Prince. Got with much ease. Now merrily to Horse: The Thieves are scattred, and possest with fear so strongly, that they dare not meet each other: each takes his fellow for an Officer. Away good Ned, Falstaffe sweats to death, and Lards the lean earth as he walks along: wer't not for laughing, I should pitty him.

Poyn. How the Rogue roar'd. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Hotspurre solus, reading a Letter.

But for mine own part, my Lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the love I bear your house.

He could be contented: Why is he not then? in respect of the love he beares our house. He shewes in this, he loves his own Barn better then he loves our house. Let me see some more, The purpose you undertake is dangerous.

rous. Why that's certain: 'Tis dangerous to take a cold, to sleep, to drink: but I tell you (my Lord foole) out of this Nettle, Danger; we pluck this Flower, Safety. The purpose you undertake is dangerous, the Friends you have named uncertain, the Time it self unsorted, and your whole Plot too light, for the counterpoize of so great an Opposition. Say you so, say you so: I say unto you again, you are a shallow cowardly Hinde, and you lye. What a lack-brain is this? I protest, our plot is as good a plot as ever was laid; our Friends true and constant: A good Plot, good Friends, and full of expectation: An excellent Plot, very good Friends. What a Frosty-spirited rogue is this? Why, my Lord of York commends the Plot, and the generall course of the action. By this hand, if I were now by this Rascall, I could brain him with his Ladies Fan. Is there not my Father, my Uncle, and and my Self, Lord Edmond Mortimer, my Lord of York, and Owen Glendower? Is there not besides, the Dowglas? Have I not all their letters, to meet me in Armes by the ninth of the next moneth? and are there not some of them set forward already? What a Pagan Rascall is this? An Infidell. Ha, you shall see now in very sincerity of Fear and Cold heart, will he to the King, and lay open all our proceedings. O, I could divide my self, and go to buffets, for moving such a dish of skim'd Milk with so honourable an action. Hang him, let him tell the King we are prepared. I will set forwards to night.

Enter his Lady.

How now Kate, I must leave you within these two hours.

La. O my good Lord, why are you thus alone?
For what offence have I this fortnight been
A banish'd woman from my Harries bed?
Tell me (sweet Lord) what is't that takes from thee
Thy stomack, pleasure, and thy golden sleep?
Why dost thou bend thy eyes upon the earth?
And start so often when thou sitt'st alone?
Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheeks?
And given my Treasures and my rights of thee,
To thick-ey'd musing, and curst melancholly?
In my faint slumbers, I by thee have watcht,
And heard thee murmur tales of Iron Warres:
Speak termes of manage to thy bounding Steed,
Cry courage to the field. And thou hast talk'd
Of Sallies, and Retires; Trenches, Tents,
Of Palizadoes, Frontiers, Parapets.
Of Basilisks, of Canon, Culverin.
Of Prisoners ransome, and of Souldiers slain,
And all the current of a heady fight.
Thy spirit within thee hath been so at Warre,
And thus hath so bestirr'd thee in thy sleep,
That beds of sweat hath stood upon thy Brow,
Like bubbles in a late disturbed streame;
And in thy face strange motion have appear'd,
Such as we see when men restrain their breath
On some great sudden haste. O what portents are these?
Some heavy businesse hath my Lord in hand,
And I must know it: else he loves me not.

Hot. What ho; Is Gilliams with the Packet gone?

Ser. He is, my Lord, an hour agone.

Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses from the Sheriff?

Ser. One horse, my Lord, he brought even now.

Hot. What Horse? a Roan, a crop-eare, is it not?

Ser. It is, my Lord.

Hot. That Roan shall be my Throne. Well, I will back him straight. Esperance, bid Butler lead him forth into the Parke.

La. But hear you, my Lord.

Hot. What say'st thou, my Lady?

La. What is it that carries you away?

Hot. Why, my Horse (my Love) my Horse.

La. Out you mad-headed Ape, a Weazell hath not such a deal of spleen, as you are tost with. Infooth I'le know your businesse Harry, that I will. I fear my Brother Mortimer doth stirre about his Title, and hath sent for you to line his enterprize. But if you go——

Hot. So farre a foot, I shall be weary, Love.

La. Come, come, you Paraquito, answer me directly unto this question, that I shall aske. Indeed I'le break thy little finger Harry, if thou wilt not tell me true.

Hot. Away, away, you trifler: Love, I love thee not,
I care not for thee Kate: this is no world
To play with Mammets, and to tilt with lips.
We must have bloody Noses, and crack'd Crownes,
And passe them currant too. Gods me, my horse.
What saist thou Kate? what would'st thou have with me?

La. Do ye not love me? doe you not indeed?
Well, doe not then. For since you love me not,
I will not love my self. Doe you not love me?
Nay, tell me if thou speakest in jest, or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride?
And when I am a horse-back, I will swear
I love thee infinitely. But harke you Kate,
I must not have you henceforth, question me,
Whether I go: nor reason whereabout.
Whether I must, I must: and to conclude,
This Evening must I leave thee, gentle Kate.
I know you wise, but yet no further wise
Then Harry Percies wife. Constant you are,
But yet a woman: and for secrecie,
No Lady closer. For I will believe
Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know,
And so farre will I trust thee, gentle Kate.

La. How so farre?

Hot. Not an inch further. But hark you Kate,
Whether I go, thither shall you go too:
To day will I set forth, to morrow you.
Will this content you Kate?

La. It must of force. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Prince and Poynes.

Prin. Ned, prethee come out of that fat room, and lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poynes. Where hast been Hall?

Prin. With three or four Loggerheads, amongst three or fourscore Hogsheads. I have sounded the very base string of humility. Sirra, I am sworn brother to a leash of Drawers, and can call them by their names, as Tom, Dick, and Francis. They take it already upon their confidence, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the King of Curtesie: telling me flatly, I am not proud like Jack Falstaffe, but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy, and when I am King of England, I shall command all the good Lads in Eastcheap. They call drinking deep, dying Scarlet; and when you break in your watring, then they cry pem, and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an hour, that I can drink with any Tinker in his own Language during my life. I tell thee Ned, thou hast lost much honour, that thou wert not with me in this action: but sweet Ned, to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this penniworth of Sugar, clapt even now into my hand by an under Skinker, one that never spake other English in his life, then Eight shillings and six pence, and, You are welcome: with this shrill addition, Anon sir, Anon sir, Score a pint of Bastard in the Half Moon, or so. But Ned, to drive away time till Falstaffe come, I prethee doe thou stand in some by-room, while I question my puny Drawer, to what end he gave me the Sugar, and doe never leave calling Francis, that his Tale to me may be nothing but, Anon: step aside, and I'le shew thee a President.

Poynes. Francis.

Prin. Thou art perfect.

Poyn. Francis.

Enter Drawer.

Fran. Anon, anon sir; look down into the Pomgarnet, Ralfe.

Prince. Come hither, Francis.

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. How long hast thou to serve, Francis?

Fran. Forsooth five yeares, and as much as to----

Poyn. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. Five yeares: Berlady a long Lease for the clinking of Pewter. But Francis, darest thou be so valiant, as to play the coward with thy Indenture, and shew it a fair pair of heeles, and run from it?

Fran. O Lord, sir, I'le be sworn upon all the Books in England, I could find in my heart.

Poyn. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon, sir.

Prin. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me see, about Machaelmas next I shall be---

Poyn. Francis.

Fran. Anon sir, pray you stay a little, my Lord.

Prin. Nay but hark you Francis, for the Sugar thou gavest me, 'twas a penniworth, was't not?

Fran. O Lord sir, I would it had been two.

Prin. I will give thee for it a thousand pound: aske me when thou wilt, and thou shalt have it.

Poyn. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon.

Prin. Anon, Francis? No, Francis, but to morrow Francis: or Francis, on Thursday: or indeed Francis when thou wilt. But Francis.

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. Wilt thou rob this Leathern Jerkin, Christall button, Not-pated, Agat ring, Puke stocking, Caddice garter, Spanish pouch.

Fran. O Lord, sir, who doe you mean?

Prin. Why then your brown Bastard is your onely drink: for look you, Francis, your white Canvas doublet will sully. In Barbary, sir, it cannot come to so much.

Fran. What, sir?

Poyn. Francis.

Prin. Away you Rogue, dost thou hear them call?

Here they both call, the Drawer stands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What stand'st thou still, and hear'st such a calling? Look to the Guests within: My Lord, old Sir John with half a dozen more, are at the door: shall I let them in?

Prin. Let them alone awhile, and then open the door, Poynes.

Enter Poynes.

Poyn. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. Sirra, Falstaffe and the rest of the Thieves are at the door, shall we be merry?

Poyn. As merry as Crickets my Lad. But hark ye, what cunning match have you made with this jest of the Drawer? Come, what's the issue?

Prin. I am now of all humors, that have shewed themselves humors, since the old dayes of goodman Adam, to the pupill age of this present twelve a clock at midnight. What's a clock Francis?

Fran. Anon, anon sir.

Prin. That ever this Fellow should have fewer words then a Parret, and yet the son of a Woman. His industry is up-staires and down-staires, his eloquence the parcell of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percies mind, the Hotspurre of the North, he that killes me some six or seven dozen of Scots at a Breakfast, washes his hands and sayes to his Wife; Fie upon this quiet life, I want work. O my sweet Harry, sayes she, how many hast thou kill'd to day? Give my Roan horse a drench (sayes he) and answers, some fourteen, an hour after: a trifle, a trifle. I prethee call in Falstaffe, I'le play Percy, and that damn'd Brawn shall play Dame Mortimer his wife. Rivo, sayes the Drunkard. Call in Ribs, call in Tallow.

Enter Falstaffe.

Poyn. Welcome Jack, where hast thou been?

Fal. A plague of all cowards I say, and a vengeance too, marry and Amen. Give me a cup of Sack Boy. Ere I lead this life long, I'le sow nether stocks, and mend them too. A plague of all Cowards. Give me a Cup of Sack, Rogue. Is there no Virtue extant?

Prin. Didst thou never see Titan kisse a dish of Butter, pittifull hearted Titan that melted at the sweet Tale of the Sun? If thou didst, then behold that compound.

Fal. You Rogue, here's Lime in this Sack too: there is nothing but Roguery to be found in Villanous man; yet a Coward is worse then a Cup of Sack with lime. A villanous Coward, go thy wayes old Jack, die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood be not forgot upon the face of the earth, then am I a shotten Herring: there lives not three good men unhang'd in England, & one of them is fat, and growes old, God help the while, a bad world I say. I would I were a Weaver, I could sing all manner of Songs. A plague of all Cowards, I say still.

Prin. How now Woolsack, what mutter you?

Fal. A Kings Son? If I doe not beat thee out of thy Kingdome with a Dagger of Lath, and drive all thy Subjects afore thee like a flock of Wild-geese, I'le never wear hair on my face more. You Prince of Wales?

Prin. Why you horson round man? what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a coward? answer me to that, and Poynes there?

Prin. Ye fat paunch, and ye call me Coward, I'le stab thee.

Fal. I call thee Coward? I'le see thee damn'd ere I call the Coward: but I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou canst. You are straight enough in the shoulders, you care not who sees your back: Call you that that backing of your friends? a plague upon such backing: give me them that will face me. Give me a Cup of Sack, I am a Rogue if I drunk to day.

Prin. O Villain, thy Lips are scarce wip'd, since thou drunk'st last.

Falst. All's one for that. He drinks. A plague of all Cowards still, say I.

Prin. What's the matter?

Falst. What's the matter? here be four of us, have ta'ne a thousand pound this Morning.

Prince. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Falst. Where is it? taken from us, it is: a hundred upon poor four of us.

Prin. What, a hundred, man?

Falst. I am a Rogue, if I were not at halfe sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have escaped by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the Doublet, foure through the Hose, my Buckler cut through and through, my Sword hack'd like a Hand-saw, ecce signum. I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not do. A plague of all Cowards: let them speak; if they speak more or lesse then truth, they are villains and the sonns of darknesse.

Prince. Speak sirs, how was it?

Gad. We four set upon some dozen.

Falst. Sixteen, at least, my Lord.

Gad. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Falst. You Rogue they were bound, every man of them, or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.

Gad. As we were sharing, some six or seaven fresh men set upon us.

Falst. And unbound the rest, and then came in the other.

Prin. What, fought ye with them all?

Falst. All? I know not what ye call all: but if I fought not with fifty of them, I am a Bunch of Radish: if there were not two or three and fifty upon poor old Jack, then am I no two-legg'd Creature.

Poin. Pray Heaven, you have not murthered some of them.

Falst. Nay, that's past praying for. I have pepper'd two of them: Two I am sure I have payed, two Rogues in Buckrom Sutes. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a Lye, spit in my face, call me Horse: thou knowest my old word: here I lay and thus I bore my point; four Rogues in Buckrom let drive at me.

Prince. What, four? thou said'st but two, even now.

Falst. Four Hal, I told thee four.

Poin. I, I, he said four.

Falst. These four came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me; I made no more adoe, but took all their seven points in my Target, thus.

Prince. Seaven? why there were but four, even now.

Falst. In Buckrom.

Poin. I, four, in Buckrom Sutes.

Falst. Seaven, by these hilts, or I am a Villain else.

Prin. Prethee let him alone, we shall have more anon.

Falst. Dost thou hear me, Hal?

Prin. I, and mark thee too, Jack.

Falst. Do so, for it is worth the listning too: these nine in Buckrom, that I told thee of.

Prin. So, two more already.

Falst. Their points being broken.

Poin. Down fell his Hose.

Falst. Began to give me ground: but I followed me close, came in foot and hand; and with a thought seaven of the eleven I pay'd.

Prin. O monstrous! eleven Buckrom men grown out of two?

Falst. But as the Devill would have it, three mis-be gotten Knaves, in Kendall Green, came at my Back, and let drive at me; for it was so dark, Hal, that thou could'st not see thy Hand.

Prin. These Lyes are like the Father that begets them, grosse as a Mountain, open, palpable. Why thou Clay-brain'd Guts, thou Knotty-pated Foole, thou Horson obscene greasie Tallow Catch.

Falst. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?

Prin. Why, how could'st thou know these men in Kendall Green, when it was so dark, thou could'st not see thy hand? Come, tell us your reason: what say'st thou to this?

Poin. Come, your reason Jack, your reason.

Falst. What, upon compulsion? No: were I at the Strappado, or all the Racks in the World, I would not tell you on compulsion. Give you a reason on compulsion? If reasons were as plenty as Black-berries, I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I.

Prin. I'le be no longer guilty of this sinn. This sanguine Coward, this Bed-presser, this Horse-back-breaker, this huge Hill of Flesh.

Falst. Away you Starveling, you Elf-skin, you dried Neats tongue, Bulls-pissell, you stock-fish: O for breath to utter. What is like thee? You Tailors yard, you sheath, you Bow-case, you vile standing tuck.

Prin. Well, breath a-while, and then to't again: and when thou hast tyr'd thy self in base comparisons, hear me speak but thus.

Poin. Mark Jack.

Prin. We two, saw you four set on four and bound them, and were Masters of their Wealth: mark now how a plain Tale shall put you down. Then did we two, set on you four, and with a word, outfac'd you from your prize, and have it: ye, and can shew it you in the House. And Falstaffe, you carried your Guts away as nimbly, with as quick dexterity, and roared for mercy, and still ran and roar'd, as ever I heard Bull-Calf. What a Slave art thou, to hack thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight. What trick? what device? what starting hole canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparent shame?

Poins. Come, let's hear Jack: What trick hast thou now?

Falst. I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why hear ye my Masters, was it for me to kill the Heir apparent? Should I turn upon the true Prince? Why, thou knowest I am as valiant as Hercules: but beware instinct, the Lion will not touch the true Prince: Instinct is a great matter. I was a Coward on Instinct: I shall think the better of my self, and thee, during my life: I, for a valiant Lion and thou for a true Prince. But Lads, I am glad you have the Money. Hostesse, clap to the doors: watch to Night, pray to morrow. Gallants, Lads, Boyes, Hearts of Gold, all the good titles of Fellowship come to you. What, shall we be merry? shall we have a Play extempory.

Prin. Content, and the argument shall be, thy running away.

Falst. A, no more of that Hal, if thou lovest me.

Enter Hostesse.

Host. My Lord the Prince?

Prin.

Prin. How now my Lady the Hostesse, what say'st thou to me?

Hostes. Marry, my Lord, there is a Noble man of the Court at door would speak with you: he sayes he comes from your Father.

Prin. Give him as much as will make him a Royall man, and send him back again to my Mother.

Falst. What manner of man is he?

Hostes. An old man.

Falst. What doth Gravity out of his Bed at Midnight? Shall I give him his answer?

Prin. Prethee do Jack.

Falst. 'Faith and I'le send him packing. Exit

Prince. Now Sirs: you fought fair; so did you Peto, so did you Bardol: you are Lions too, you ran away upon instinct: you will not touch the true Prince; no, fie.

Bard. 'Faith, I ran when I saw others run.

Prin. Tell me now in earnest, how came Falstaffs Sword so hacke?

Peto. Why, he hackt it with his Dagger, and said, he would swear truth out of all England: but he would make you believe it was done in fight, and perswaded us to do the like.

Bard. Yea, and tickle our Noses with Spear-grasse, to make them bleed, and then beslubber our garments, with it, and swear it was the bloud of true men. I did that I did not these seaven years before, I blusht to hear his monstrous devices.

Prin. O Villain, thou stolest a Cup of Sack eighteen years agoe, and wert taken with the manner, and ever since thou hast blusht extempore: thou hadst fire and sword on thy side, and yet thou ranneſt away; what instinct hadst thou for it?

Bard. My Lord, do you see these Meteors? do you behold these exhalations?

Prin. I doe.

Bard. What think you they portend?

Prin. Hot Livers, and cold Purses.

Bard. Choler, my Lord, if rightly taken.

Prin. No, if rightly taken, Halter.

Enter Falstaffe.

Here comes lean Jack, here comes bare-bone. How now my sweet Creature of Bombast, how long is't ago, Jack, since thou saw'st thine own Knee?

Falst. My own Knee? When I was about thy years (Hal) I was not an Eagles Talent in the Waste, I could have crept into any Aldermans Thumb-Ring: a plague of sighing and grief, it blowes a man up like a Bladder. There's villanous Newes abroad: here was Sir John Braby from your Father; you must go to the Court in the Morning. That same mad fellow of the North, Percy; and he of Wales, that gave Amamon the Bastinado, and made Lucifer Cuckold, and swore the Devill his true Liege-man upon the Crosse of a Welsh-hook; what a Plague call you him?

Poin. O, Glendower.

Falst. Owen, Owen; the same, and his Son in Law Mortimer, and old Northumberland, and the sprightly Scot of Scots, Dowglas, that runs a Horse-back up a Hill perpendicular.

Prin. He that rides at high speed, and with a Pistoll kills a Sparrow flying.

Falst. You have hit it.

Prin. So did he never the Sparrow.

Falst. Well, that Rascall hath good mettall in him, he will not run.

Prin. Why, what a Rascall art thou then, to praise him so for running?

Falst. A Horse-back (ye Cuckow) but a foot he will not budge a foot.

Prin. Yes Jack, upon instinct.

Falst. I grant ye, upon instinct: Well, he is there too, and one Mordake, and a thousand blew-Capps more, Worcester is stolne away by Night: thy Fathers Beard is turn'd white with the Newes; you may buy Land now as cheap as stinking Mackerell.

Prin. Then 'tis like, if there come a hot Sun, and this civill buffetting hold, we shall buy Maidenheads as they buy hob-nails, by the hundreds.

Falst. By the Masse Lad, thou say'st true, it is like we shall have good trading that way. But tell me Hall, art not thou horrible afear'd? thou being Heir apparent, could the World pick thee out three such Enemies again, as that Fiend Dowglas, that Spirit Percy, and that Devill Glendower? Art thou not horrible afraid? Doth not thy bloud thrill at it?

Prin. Not a whit: I lack some of thy instinct.

Falst. Well, thou wilt be horrible chid to morrow, when thou commest to thy Father: if thou do love me practice an answer.

Prin. Do thou stand for my Father, and examine me upon the particulars of my Life.

Falst. Shall I? content: This Chaire shall be my State, this Dagger my Scepter, and this Cushion my Crown.

Prin. Thy State is taken for a Joyn'd-Stoole, thy Golden Scepter for a Leaden Dagger, and thy precious rich Crown, for a pittifull bald Crown.

Falst. Well, and the fire of Grace be not quite out of thee now shalt thou be moved. Give me a Cup of Sack to make mine eyes look red, that it may be thought I have wept, for I must speak in passion, and I will do it in King Cambyses vein.

Prin. Well, here is my Legge.

Falst. And here is my speech: stand aside Nobility.

Hostes. This is excellent sport, i'faith.

Fal. Weep not sweet Queen, for trickling tears are vain.

Hostes. O the Father, how he holds his countenance?

Fal. For Gods sake Lords, convey my trustfull Queen, For tears do stop the floud-gates of her eyes.

Hostes. O rare, he doth it as like one of these harlotry Players as ever I see.

Fal. Peace good Pint-pot, peace good Tickle-brain. Harry, I do not onely marvell where thou spendest thy time; but also, how thou art accompanied: For though the Camomile, the more it is trodden, the faster it grows; yet Youth, the more it is wasted, the sooner it wears. Thou art my sonne: I have partly thy Mothers Word, partly my Opinion; but chiefly, a villanous trick of thine Eye, and a foolish hanging of thy nether Lip, that doth warrant me. If then thou be Sonne to me, here lyeth the point: why, being Son to me, art thou so pointed at? Shall the blessed Sonne of heaven prove a Micher, and eat Black-berries? a question not to be ask'd. Shall the Sonne of England proove a Thief, and take Purses? a question to be ask'd. There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many many in our Land, by the name of Pitch: this Pitch (as ancient Writers do report) doth defile; so doth the company thou keepest: for Harry, now I do not speak to thee in Drink, but in Tears; not in pleasure, but in Passion; not in Words onely, but in Woes also: and yet there is a vertuous man, whom I have often noted in thy company, but I know not his Name.

Prin. What manner of man, and it like your Majestie?

Falst. A goodly portly man ifaith, and corpulent, of a cheerfull Look, a pleasing Eye, and a most noble Carriage, and as I think, his age some fifty, or (byrlady) inclining to threescore; and now I remember me, his Name is Falstaffe: if that man should be lewdly given, he deceives me; for Harry, I see vertue in his Looks. If then the Tree may be known by the Fruit, as the Fruit by the Tree, then peremptorily I speak it, there is Vertue in that Falstaffe: him keep with, the rest banish. And tell me now, thou naughty Varlet, tell me, where hast thou been this month?

Prin. Do'st thou speak like a King? do thou stand for me, and I'le play my Father.

Falst. Depose me: if thou do'st it halfe so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me up by the heels for a Rabbet-sucker, or a Poulters Hare.

Prin. Well, here I am set.

Falst. And here I stand: judge my Masters.

Prin. Now Harry, whence come you?

Falst. My Noble Lord, from East-cheap.

Prin. The complaints I hear of thee, are grievous.

Falst. Ifaith, my Lord, they are false: Nay, I'le tickle ye for a young Prince.

Prin. Swearest thou, ungracious Boy? henceforth ne're look on me: thou art violently carried away from Grace: there is a Devill hunts thee, in the likenesse of a fat old Man; a Tunne of Man is thy Companion: Why do'st thou converse with that Trunk of Humours, that Boulting-Hutch of Beastlinesse, that swolne Parcell of Dropsies, that huge Bombard of Sack, that stuft Cloakbagge of Guts, that rosted Manning-Tree Oxe with the Puddings in his Belly, that Reverend Vice, that grey Iniquity, that Father Ruffian, that Vanity in years? wherein is he good, but to taste Sack and drink it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a Capon and eat it? wherein Cunning, but in Craft? where in Crafty, but in Villany? wherein Villanous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing?

Falst. I would your Grace would take me with you: whom means your Grace?

Prin. That villanous abominable mis-leader of Youth, Falstaffe, that old white-bearded Sathan.

Falst. My Lord, the man I know.

Prin. I know thou do'st.

Falst. But to say, I know more harm in him then in my selfe, were to say more then I know. That he is old (the more's the pitty) his white hairs do witnesse it: But that he is (saving your reverence) a Whore-master, that I utterly deny. If Sack and Sugar be a fault, Heaven help the wicked: if to be old and merry, be a sinne, then many an Hoste that I know is damn'd: if to be fat, to be hated, then Pharaohs lean Kine are to be loved. No, my good Lord, banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins: but for sweet Jack Falstaffe, kinde Jack Falstaffe, true Jack Falstaffe, valiant Jack Falstaffe, and therefore more valiant, being as he is old Jack Falstaffe, banish not him thy Harryes company, banish not him thy Harryes company; banish plump Jack, and banish all the World.

Prince. I doe, I will.

Enter Bardolph running.

Bard. O, my Lord, my Lord, the Sheriff, with a most monstrous Watch, is at the door.

Falst. Out you Rogue, play out the Play: I have much to say in the behalf of that Falstaffe.

Enter the Hostesse.

Host. O, my Lord, my Lord.

Falst. Heigh, heigh, the Devill rides upon a Fiddle-stick: what's the matter?

Hostes. The Sheriff and all the Watch are at the door: they are come to search the House, shall I let them in?

Falst. Do'st thou hear Hal, never call a true piece of Gold a Counterfeit: thou art essentially mad, without seeming so.

Prince. And thou a naturall Coward, without instinct.

Falst. I deny your Major; if you will deny the Sheriff, so: if not, let him enter. If I become not a Cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing up: I hope I shall as soon be strangled with a Halter, as another.

Prince. Go hide thee behinde the Arras, the rest walk up above. Now my Masters, for a true Face and good Conscience.

Falst. Both which I have had: but their date is out, and therefore I'le hide me.

Prin. Call in the Sheriff. Exit.

Enter Sheriff and the Carrier.

Prince. Now Master Sheriff, what is your will with me?

She. First pardon me, my Lord. A Hue and Cry hath followed certain men unto this house.

Prince. What men?

She. One of them is well known, my gracious Lord, a grosse fat man.

Car. As fat as Butter.

Prin. The man, I do assure you is not here,
For I my self at this time have imploy'd him:
And Sheriff, I will engage my word to thee,
That I will by to morrow Dinner time,
Send him to answer thee, or any man,
For any thing he shall be charg'd withall:
And so let me entreat you, leave the house.

She. I will, my Lord: there are two Gentlemen
Have in this Robbery lost three hundred Marks.

Prin. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men,
He shall be answerable: and so farewell.

She. Good Night, my Noble Lord.

Prin. I think it is good Morrow, is it not?

She. Indeed, my Lord, I think it be two a Clock.
Exit.

Prince. This oyly Rascall is known as well as Poules: go call him forth.

Peto. Falstaffe? fast a sleep behinde the Arras, and snorting like a Horse.

Prin. Hark, how hard he fetches his breath: search his Pockets. He

He searcheth his pockets and findeth certain Papers.

Prin. What hast thou found?
Peto. Nothing but papers, my Lord.
Prin. Let's see, what be they? read them.
Peto. Item, a Capon. ii.s.ii.d.
Item, Sawce. iiii.d.
Item, Sack, two Gallons. v.s.viii.d.
Item, Anchoves and Sack after supper. ii.s.vi.d.
Item, Bread. ob.
Prince. O monstrous, but one halfe penny-worth of Bread to this intollerable deale of Sack? What there is else, keep close, we'll read it at more advantage: there let him sleep till day. I'le to the Court in the Morning: We must all to the Warrs, and thy place shall be honorable. I'le procure this fat Rogue a Charge of Foot, and I know his death will be a March of Twe[illegible]score. The Money shall be pay'd back again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the Morning: and so good morrow Peto.
Peto. Good morrow, good my Lord. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Hotspurre, Worcester, Lord Mortimer, Owen Glendower.

Mort. These promises are fair, the parties sure,
And our induction full of prosperous hope.
Hotsp. Lord Mortimer, and Cousin Glendower,
Will you sit down?
And Uncle Worcester; a plague upon it,
I have forgot the Map.
Glend. No, here it is:
Sit Cousin Percy, sit good Cousin Hotspurre:
For by that Name, as oft as Lancaster doth speak of you,
His cheeks look pale, and with a rising sigh,
He wisheth you in Heaven.
Hotsp. And you in Hell, as oft as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.
Glend. I cannot blame him: At my Nativity,
The front of heaven was full of fiery shapes,
Of burning Cressets: and at my Birth,
The frame and foundation of the Earth
Shak'd like a Coward.
Hotsp. Why so it would have done at the same season if your Mothers Cat had but kitten'd, though your self had never been born.
Glend. I say the Earth did shake when I was born.
Hotsp. And I say the Earth was not of my minde:
If you suppose, as fearing you, it shook.
Glend. The heavens were all on fire, the Earth did tremble.
Hotsp. Oh, then the Earth shook
To see the Heavens on fire,
And not in fear of your Nativity.
Diseased nature oftentimes breaks forth
In strange eruptions: and the teeming Earth
Is with a kind of Cholick pinch'd and vext,
By the imprisoning of unruly Winde
Within her Wombe: which for enlargement striving,
Shakes the old Beldam Earth, and tumbles down
Steeples, and mosse-grown Towers. At your Birth,
Our Grandam Earth, having this distemperature,
In passion shook.
Glend. Cousin: of many men
I do not bear these Crossings: give me leave
To tell you once again, that at my Birth
The front of Heaven was full of fiery shapes,
The Goats ran from the Mountains, and the Heards
Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields:
These signes have mark'd me extraordinary,
And all the courses of my Life do shew,
I am not in the Roll of common men.
Where is the Living, clipt in with the Sea,
That chides the Banks of England, Scotland, and Wales,
Which calls me Pupill, or hath read to me?
And bring him out, that is but womans son,
Can trace me in the the tedious wayes of Art,
And hold me pace in deep experiments.
Hotsp. I think there's no man speaks better Welsh: I'le to Dinner.
Mort. Peace Cousin Percy, you will make him mad.
Glend. I can call Spirits from the vastie Deep.
Hotsp. Why so can I, or so can any man:
But will they come, when you do call for them?
Glend. Why, I can teach thee, Cousin, to command the Devill.
Hot. And I can teach thee, Cousin, to shame the Devill,
By telling truth. Tell truth, and shame the Devill.
If thou have power to raise him, bring him hither,
And I'le be sworn, I have power to shame him hence.
Oh, while you live, tell truth, and shame the Devill.
Mort. Come, come, no more of this unprofitable Chat.
Glen. Three times hath Henry Bullingbrook made head
Against my power: thrice from the banks of Wye,
And sandy-bottom'd Severn, have I sent him,
Bootlesse home, and Weather-beaten back.
Hot. Home without Boots,
And in foule Weather too,
How scapes he Agues in the Devils name?
Glend. Come, here's the Map:
Shall we divide our Right,
According to our threefold order ta'ne?
Mor. The Arch-Deacon hath divided it
Into three Limits, very equally:
England, from Trent, and Severn hitherto,
By South and East, is to my part assign'd:
All Westward, Wales, beyond the Severn shore,
And all the fertile Land within that bound,
To Owen Glendower: And dear Couze, to you
The remnant Northward, lying off from Trent,
And our indentures Tripartite are drawn:
Which being sealed enterchangeably,
(A businesse that this Night may execute)
To morrow, Cousin Percy, you and I,
And my good Lord of Worcester will set forth,
To meet your Father, and the Scottish Power,
As is appointed us at Shrewsbury.
My Father Glendower is not ready yet,
Nor shall we need his help these fourteen dayes:
Within that space, you may have drawn together
Your Tenants, Friends, and neighbouring Gentlemen.
Glend. A short time shall send me to you, Lords:
And in my conduct shall your Ladies come,
From whom you now must steale, and take no leave
For there will be a world of Water shed,

Upon

Upon the parting of your Wives and you:
Hotsp. Methinks my moity, North from Burton here,
In quantity equals not one of yours:
See, how this River comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the best of all my Land,
A huge half Moon, a monstrous Cantle out.
I'le have the Currant in this place damn'd up,
And here the smug and Silver Trent shall run,
In a new Channell, fair and evenly:
It shall not winde with such a deep indent,
To rob me of so rich a bottome here.
Glend. Not winde? it shall, it must, you see it doth.
Mort. Yea, but mark how he bends his course,
And runs me up, with like advantage on the other side,
Gelding the opposing Continent as much,
As on the other side it takes from you.
Worc. Yea, but a little Charge will trench him here,
And on this North side win this Cape of Land,
And then he runs straight and even.
Hotsp. I'le have it so, a little Charge will do it.
Glend. I'le not have it alter'd.
Hotsp. Will not you?
Glend. No, nor you shall not.
Hotsp. Who shall say me nay?
Glend. Why, that will I.
Hotsp. Let me not understand you then, speak it in Welsh.
Glend. I can speak English, Lord, as well as you:
For I was train'd up in the English Court;
Where, being but young, I framed to the Harpe,
Many an English Ditty, lovely well,
And gave the tongue a helpfull Ornament;
A vertue that was never seen in you.
Hotsp. Marry, and I am glad of it withall my heart,
I had rather be a Kitten, and cry mew,
Then one of these same Meeter-Ballad-mongers:
I had rather hear a Brazen Candlestick turn'd,
Or dry a Wheele grate on the Axle-tree,
And that would set my teeth on edge,
Nothing so much, as mincing Poetrie;
'Tis like the forc't gate of a shuffling Nag.
Glend. Come, you shall have Trent turn'd.
Hotsp. I do not care: I'le give thrice so much Land
To any well-deserving friend;
But in the way of Bargain, mark ye me,
I'le cavill on the ninth part of a hair;
Are the Indentures drawn? shall we be gone?
Glend. The Moon shines fair,
You may away by Night:
I'le haste the Writer; and withall,
Break with your Wives, of your departure hence:
I am afaid my Daughter will run mad.
So much she doteth on her Mortimer. Exit.
Mort. Fie, Cousin Percy, how you crosse my Father.
Hotsp. I cannot choose: sometime he angers me,
With telling me of the Moldwarpe and the Ant,
Of the Dreamer Merlin, and his Prophecies;
And of a Dragon, and a fin-lesse Fish,
A clip-wing'd Griffin, and a moulten Raven,
A couching Lyon, a ramping Cat,
And such a deale of skimble-skamble Stuff,
As puts me from my Faith. I tell you what,
He held me last Night, at least, nine hours,
In reckning up these severall Devils Names,
That were his Lackeys:
I cry'd hum, and well, go too,
But mark'd him not a word. O, he is as tedious
As a tyred Horse, a railing Wife,
Worse then a smoaky house. I had rather live
With Cheese and Garlick in a Windmill far,
Then feed on Cates, and have him talk to me,
In any Summer-house in Christendome.
Mort. In faith he was an honest Gentleman;
Exceeding well read, and profited,
In strange Concealments:
Valiant as a Lion, and wondrous affable,
And as bountifull, as Mines of India.
Shall I tell you, Cousin,
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbs himself, even of his naturall scope;
When you do crosse his humour: 'faith he does.
I warrant you, that a man is not alive,
Might so have tempted him, as you have done,
Without the taste of danger, and reproofe:
But do not use it oft, let me entreat you.
Worc. In faith, my Lord, you are too willfull blame,
And since your coming hither, have done enough,
To put him quite besides his patience:
You must needs learn, Lord, to amend this fault;
Though sometimes it shew greatness, Courage, Bloud,
And that's the dearest grace it renders you;
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh Rage,
Defect of manners, want of government,
Pride, Haughtinesse, Opinion, and Disdain:
The least of which, haunting a Nobleman,
Loseth mens hearts, and leaves behind a stain
Upon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.
Hotsp. Well, I am school'd:
Good-manners be your speed;
Here come your Wives, and let us take our leave.

Enter Glendower, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spight that angers me,
My Wife can speak no English, I no Welsh.
Glend. My daughter weeps, she'll not part with you,
She'll be a Souldier too, she'll to the Warrs.
Mort. Good Father tell her, that she and my Aunt Percy
Shall follow in your Conduct speedily.

Glendower speaks to her Welsh, and she answers him in the same.

Glend. She is desperate here:
A peeviſh self-will'd Harlotry,
One that perswasion can do good upon,

The Lady speaks in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy Looks: that pretty Welsh
Which thou powr'st down from these swelling Heavens,
I am too perfect in: and but for shame,
In such a parley should I answer thee.

The Lady again in Welsh.

Mort. I understand thy Kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeble disputation:
But I will never be a Truant, Love,
Till I have learn'd thy Language: for thy tongue
Makes

Makes Welsh as sweet as Ditties highly penn'd,
Sung by a fair Queen in a Summers Bower,
With rauishing Division to her Lute.
Glend. Nay, if thou melt, then will she run mad.

The Lady speaks again Welsh.

Mort. O, I am ignorance it self in this.
Glend. She bids you,
On the wanton rushes lay you down,
And rest your gentle head upon her Lap,
And she will sing the song that pleaseth you,
And on your Eye-lids Crown the God of Sleep,
Charming your blood with pleasing heavinesse;
Making such difference betwixt Wake and Sleep,
As is the difference betwixt Day and Night,
The houre before the Heavenly Harneis'd Team
Begins his golden Progresse in the East.
Mort. Withall my heart I'le sit, and hear her sing:
By what time will our Book, I think, be drawn.
Glend. Go so:
And those Musitians that shall play to you,
Hang in the Aire a thousand Leagues from thence;
And straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.
Hotsp. Come Kate, thou art perfect in lying down:
Come, quick, quick, that I may lay my Head in thy Lap.
Lady. Go, ye giddy-Goose.

The Musick playes.

Hotsp. Now I perceive the Devill understands Welsh,
And 'tis no marvell he is so humorous:
Byrlady he's a good Musitian.
Lady. Then would you be nothing but Musicall,
For you are altogether governed by humors:
Lie still ye thief, and hear the Lady sing in Welsh.
Hotsp. I had rather hear (Lady) my Brach howle in Irish.
Lady. Would'st have thy Head broken?
Hotsp. No.
Lady. Then be still.
Hotsp. Neither, 'tis a Womans fault.
Lady. Now God help thee.
Hotsp. To the Welsh Ladies Bed.
Lady. What's that?
Hotsp. Peace she sings.

Here the Lady sings a Welsh Song.

Hotsp. Come, I'le have your Song too.
Lady. Not mine, in good sooth.
Hotsp. Not yours, in good sooth?
You swear like a Comfit-makers Wife:
Not you, in good sooth; and, as true as I live;
And, as God shall mend me; and as sure as day:
And giv'st such Sarcenet surety for thy Oaths,
As if thou never walk'st further then Finsbury.
Swear me, Kate, like a Lady, as thou art,
A good mouth-filling Oath: and leave in sooth,
And such protest of Pepper-Ginger-bread,
To Velvet-Guards, and Sunday-Citizens.
Come, sing.
Lady. I will not sing.
Hotsp. 'Tis the next way to turn Taylor, or be Red-breast teacher: and the Indentures be drawn, I'le away within these two houres: and so come in, when ye will. Exit.
Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer, you are as slow,
As hot Lord Percy is on fire to go,
By this our Book is drawn: we'll but seale,
And then to Horse immediately.
Mort. With all my heart. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, and others.

King. Lords, give us leave:
The Prince of Wales, and I,
Must have some private conference:
But be near at hand,
For we shall presently have need of you.
Exeunt Lords.
I know not whether Heaven will have it so,
For some displeasing service I have done;
That in his secret Doome, out of my Blood,
He'll breed Revengement, and a Scourge for me:
But thou dost in thy passages of Life,
Make me believe, that thou art onely mark'd
For the hot vengeance, and the Rod of heaven
To punish my Mistreadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poor, such bare, such lew'd, such mean attempts,
Such barren pleasures, rude society,
As thou art match'd withall, and grafted too,
Accompany the greatnes of thy blood,
And hold their levell with thy Princely heart?
Prince. So please your Majesty, I would I could
Quit all offences with as clear excuse,
As well as I am doubtlesse I can purge
My self of many I am charg'd withall:
Yet such extenuation let me beg,
As in reproofe of many Tales devis'd,
Which oft the Ear of Greatnesse needs must hear,
By smiling Pick-thanks, and base News-mongers;
I may for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faulty wandred, and irregular,
Finde pardon on my true submission.
King. Heaven pardon thee:
Yet let me wonder, Harry,
At thy affections, which do hold a Wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in Counsell thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy yonger brother is supplí'd;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the Court and Princes of my blood.
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd and the soul of every man
Prophetically do fore-think thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my presence been,
So common hackney'd in the wayes of men,
So stale and cheap to vulgar Company;
Opinion, that did help me to the Crown,
Had still kept loyall to possession,
And left me in reputeless banishment,
A fellow of no mark, nor likelihood.
By being seldome seen, I could not stir,
But like a Comet, I was wondred at.

That

That men would tell their children, This is he:
Others would say, where? which is Bullingbrook?
And then I stole all courtesie from heaven,
And drest my self in such humility,
That I did pluck allegiance from mens hearts,
Loud shouts and salutations from their mouthes,
Even in the presence of the crowned King.
Thus I did keep my person fresh and new,
My presence like a Robe Pontifical,
Ne're seen, but wondred at: and so my state,
Seldome but sumptuous, shewed like a Feast,
And wonne by rarenesse such solemnity.
The skipping King he ambled up and down,
With shallow Jesters, and rash Bavin Wits,
Soon kindled, and soon burnt, carded his State,
Mingled his Royalty with carping fooles,
Had his great Name profaned with their scorns,
And gave his countenance, against his name,
To laugh at gybing Boyes, and stand the push
Of every beardlesse vain comparative;
Grew a companion to the common streets,
Enfeoff'd himself to popularity:
That being daily swallowed by mens eyes,
They surfetted with Honie, and began to loathe
The taste of sweetnesse, whereof a little
More then a little, is by much too much.
So when he had occasion to be seen,
He was but as the Cuckow is in June,
Heard, not regarded: seen but with such eyes,
As sick and blunted with community,
Affoord no extraordinary gaze,
Such as is bent on Sun-like Majesty,
When it shines seldome in admiring Eyes:
But rather drowz'd, and hung their eye-lids down,
Slept in his face, and rendred such aspect
As cloudy men use to doe their adversaries,
Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.
And in that very Line, Harry, standest thou
For thou hast lost thy Princely privilege,
With vile participation. Not an eye
But is a weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more:
Which now doth that I would not have it doe,
Make blind it self with foolish tenderneſſe.

Prince. I shall hereafter, my thrice gracious Lord,
Be more my self.

King. For all the World,
As thou art to this hour, was Richard then,
When I from France set forth at Ravenspurgh;
And even as I was then, is Percy now:
Now by my Scepter, and my Soul to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the state
Then thou the shadow of succession;
For of no right, nor colour like to right,
He doth fill fields with Harneis in the Realm,
Turns head against the Lyons armed Jawes;
And being no more in debt to yeares, then thou,
Leads ancient Lords, and reverend Bishops on
To bloody Battels, and to bruising Armes.
What never-dying honour hath he got,
Against renowned Dowglas, whose high deeds,
Whose hot incursions, and great name in Armes,
Holds from all Soldiers chief Majority,
And Military Title Capitall.
Through all the Kingdomes that acknowledge Christ,
Thrice hath the Hotspurre Mars, in swathing Cloathes,
This Infant-Warriour, in his Enterprises,
Discomfited great Dowglas, ta'ne him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deep Defiance up,
And shake the peace and safety of our Throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The Arch-Bishops Grace of York, Dowglas, Mortimer,
Capitulate against us, and are up.
But wherefore doe I tell this newes to thee?
Why, Harry, doe I tell thee of my Foes,
Which art my near'st and deares enemy?
Thou art like enough, through vassall fear,
Base inclination, and the start of spleen,
To fight against me under Percies pay,
To dogge his heels, and curtsie at his frowns,
To shew how much thou art degenerate.

Prince. Doe not think so, you shall not find it so:
And heaven forgive them, that so much have sway'd
Your Majesties good thoughts away from me:
I will redeem all this on Percies head,
And in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you, that I am your Son,
When I will wear a Garment all of blood,
And stain my favours in a bloody Maske:
Which washt away, shall scowre my shame with it.
And that shall be the day when ere it lights,
That this same Child of honour and renown,
This gallant Hotspurre, this all-praised Knight,
And your unthought of Harry chance to meet:
For every Honour sitting on his Helme,
Would they were multitudes, and on my head
My shame's redoubled. For the time will come,
That I shall make this Northern Youth exchange
His glorious Deeds for my indignities:
Percy is but my Factor, good my Lord,
To engrosse up glorious deeds on my behalf:
And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render every Glory up,
Yea, even the sleightest worship of his time,
Or I will tear the Reckoning from his heart.
This, in the Name of Heaven, I promise here:
The which, if I promise, and doe survive,
I doe beseech your Majesty, may salve
The long-grown Wounds of my intemperature:
If not, the end of Life cancells all Bands,
And I will dye a hundred thousand deaths,
Ere break the smallest parcell of this Vow.

King. A hundred thousand Rebels die in this:
Thou shalt have Charge, and soveraign trust herein.

Enter Blunt.

How now good Blunt? thy looks are full of speed.

Blunt. So hath the businesse that I come to speak of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word,
That Dowglas and the English Rebels met
The eleventh of this moneth, at Shrewsbury:
A mighty and a fearfull Head they are,
(If promises be kept on every hand)
As ever offered foul play in a State.

King. The Earl of Westmerland set forth to day:
With him my Son, Lord John of Lancaster,
For this advertisement is five dayes old.
On Wednesday next, Harry, thou shalt set forward:
On Thursday, we our selves will march.
Our meeting is Bridgenorth: and Harry, you shall march

Through Gloceſter-ſhire: by which account,
Our Buſineſſe valued ſome twelve dayes hence,
Our generall Forces at Bridgenorth ſhall meet.
Our hands are full of buſineſſe: let's away,
Advantage feeds them fat, while men delay. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falſtaffe, and Bardolph.

Falſt. Bardolph, am I not faln away vilely, ſince this laſt action? doe I not bate? doe I not dwindle? Why my skinne hangs about me like an old Ladies looſe Gown: I am withered like an old Apple John. Well, I'le repent, and that ſuddenly, while I am in ſome liking: I ſhall be out of heart ſhortly, and then I ſhall have no ſtrength to repent. And I have not forgotten what the inſide of a Church is made of, I am a Pepper Corn, a Brewers Horſe: the inſide of a Church. Company, villanous Company hath been the ſpoyle of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are ſo fretfull, you cannot live long.

Falſt. Why there is it: Come, ſing me a bawdy Song, make me merry: I was as virtuouſly given, as a Gentleman need to be; virtuous enough, ſwore little, Dic'd not above ſeven times a week, went to a Bawdy-houſe not above once in a quarter of an hour, paid money that I borrowed, three or four times; lived well, and in good compaſſe: and now I live out of all order, out of compaſſe.

Bard. Why, you are ſo fat, Sir John, that you muſt needs be out of all compaſſe; out of all reaſonable compaſſe, Sir John.

Falſt. Doe thou amend thy Face, and I'le amend my Life. Thou art our Admirall, thou beareſt the Lantern in the Poop, but 'tis in the Noſe of thee; thou art the Knight of the burning Lamp.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my Face does you no harme.

Falſt. No, I'le be ſworn: I make as good uſe of it, as many a man doth of a Deaths-Head, or a Memento Mori. I never ſee thy Face, but I think upon Hell fire, and Dives that lived in purple; for there he is in his Robes burning. If thou wert any way given to virtue, I would ſwear by thy Face; my Oath ſhould be, By this Fire: But thou art altogether given over; and wert indeed, but for the Light in thy Face, the Sun of utter Darkneſſe. When thou rann'ſt up Gads-hill in the night to catch my Horſe, if I did not think thou hadſt been an Ignis fatuus, or a Ball of Wild-fire, there's no purchaſe in Money. O, thou art a perpetuall Triumph, an everlaſting Bone-fire-light: thou haſt ſaved me a thouſand Markes in Links and Torches, walking with thee in the night betwixt Tavern and Tavern: but the ſack that thou haſt drunk me, would have bought me light as good cheap, as the deareſt Chandlers in Europe. I have maintain'd that Salamander of yours with fire, any time this two and thirty yeares, heaven reward me for it.

Bard. I would my Face were in your belly.

Falſt. So ſhould I be ſure to be heart-burn'd.

Enter Hoſteſſe.

How now, Dame Partlet the Hen, have you enquir'd yet who pick'd my Pocket?

Hoſteſſe. Why Sir John, what doe you think, Sir John? doe you think I keep Thieves in my houſe? I have ſearch'd, I have enquir'd, ſo has my husband, Man by Man, Boy by Boy, Servant by Servant: the tight of a hair was never loſt in my houſe before.

Falſt. Ye lye, Hoſteſſe: Bardolph was ſhav'd, and loſt many a hair; and I'le be ſworn my Pocket was pick'd, go to, you are a Woman, go.

Hoſteſſe. Who I? I defie thee: I was never call'd ſo in mine own houſe before.

Falſt. Go to, I know you well enough.

Hoſteſſe. No, Sir John: you doe not know me, Sir John; I know you, Sir John: you owe me money, Sir John, and now you pick a quarrell to beguile me of it: I bought you a dozen of Shirts to your back.

Falſt. Dowlas, filthy Dowlas: I have given them away to Bakers Wives, and they have made Boulters of them.

Hoſteſſe. Now as I am a true Woman, Holland of eight ſhillings an Ell: You owe Money here beſides, Sir John, for your Diet, and by-Drinkings, and Money lent you, four and twenty pounds.

Falſt. He had his part of it, let him pay.

Hoſteſſe. He? alaſs he is poor, he hath nothing.

Falſt. How? poor? look upon his face: What call you rich? Let him coyn his Noſe, let him coyn his Cheeks, I'le not pay a Denier. What, will you make a Yonker of me? Shall I not take mine eaſe in mine Inne, but I ſhall have my Pocket pick'd? I have loſt a Seal-Ring of my Grand-fathers, worth forty Mark.

Hoſteſſe. I have heard the Prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that Ring was Copper.

Falſt. How? the Prince is a Jack, a Sneak-Cup: and if he were here, I would cudgell him like a Dog, if he would ſay ſo.

Enter the Prince marching, and Falſtaffe meets him, playing on his Truncheon like a Fife.

Falſt. How now Lad? is the wind in that Doore? Muſt we all march?

Bard. Yea, two and two, Newgate faſhion.

Hoſteſſe. My Lord, I pray you hear me.

Prince. What ſay'ſt thou, Miſtreſſe Quickly? How does thy Husband? I love him well, he is an honeſt man.

Hoſteſſe. Good, my Lord, hear me.

Falſt. Prethee let her alone, and liſt to me.

Prince. What ſay'ſt thou, Jack?

Falſt. The other night I fell aſleep here behind the Arras, and had my Pocket pickt: this Houſe is turn'd Bawdy-houſe, they pick Pockets.

Prince. What didſt thou loſe, Jack?

Falſt. Wilt thou believe me, Hal? Three or four Bonds of forty pound a piece, and a Seal-Ring of my Grand-fathers.

Prince. A trifle, ſome eight-penny matter.

Hoſt. So I told him, my Lord; and I ſaid, I heard your Grace ſay ſo: and (my Lord) he ſpeaks moſt vilely of you, like a foul-mouth'd man as he is, and ſaid he would cudgell you.

Prince. What he did not?

Hoſt. There's neither Faith, Truth, nor Woman-hood in me elſe.

Falſt.

Falst. There's no more faith in thee then in a stu'de Prune; nor no more truth in thee then in a drawn Fox: and for Woman-hood, Maid-marian may be the Deputies Wife of the Ward to thee. Go you nothing, go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Falst. What thing? why a thing to thank heaven on.

Host. I am nothing to thank heaven on, I would thou shouldst know it: I am an honest mans wife: and setting thy Knighthood aside, thou art a knave to call me so.

Falst. Setting thy Womanhood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knave thou?

Fal. What beast? Why an Otter.

Prin. An Otter, Sir John, why an Otter?

Fal. Why? she's neither fish nor flesh; a man knowes not where to have her.

Host. Thou art an unjust man in saying so; thou, or any man knowes where to have me, thou knave thou.

Prince. Thou say'st true, Hostesse, and he slanders thee most grossely.

Host. So he doth you, my Lord, and said this other day, you ought him a thousand pound.

Prince. Sirrah, doe I owe you a thousand pound?

Fal. A thousand pound, Hal? a million: thy love is worth a million: thou ow'st me thy love.

Host. Nay, my Lord, he call'd you Jack, and said he would cudgell you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bar. Indeed, Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yea, if he said my Ring was Copper.

Prin. I say 'tis Copper. Dar'st thou be as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why, Hal? thou know'st, as thou art but a man, I dare; but, as thou art a Prince, I fear thee, as I fear the roaring of the Lyons Whelp.

Prin. And why not as the Lyon?

Fal. The King himself is to be feared as the Lyon: Do'st thou think I'se fear thee, as I fear thy Father? nay if I doe, let my Girdle break.

Prin. O, if it should, how would thy guts fall about thy knees. But sirra: there's no room for Faith, Truth, nor Honesty, in this bosome of thine: it is all fill'd up with Guts and Midriffe. Charge an honest Woman with picking thy pocket? Why thou horson impudent imbost Rascall, if there were any thing in thy Pocket but Tavern Recknings, Memorandums of Bawdy-houses, and one poor penny-worth of Sugar-candy to make thee long-winded: if thy pocket were enrich'd with any other injuries but these, I am a Villain: And yet you will stand to it, you will not Pocket up wrongs. Art thou not asham'd?

Fal. Dost thou hear, Hal? Thou know'st in the state of Innocency, Adam fell: and what would poor Jack Falstaffe doe, in the dayes of Villany; Thou seest, I have more flesh then another man, and therefore frailty. You confesse then you pickt my Pocket?

Prin. It appeares so by the Story.

Fal. Hostesse, I forgive thee:
Go make ready Breakfast, love thy Husband,
Look to thy Servants, and cherish thy Guests:
Thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reason:
Thou seest, I am pacified still.
Nay, I prethee be gone.

Exit Hostesse.

Now, Hal, to the newes at Court for the Robbery, Lad? How is that answered?

Prin. O my sweet Beef:
I must still be good Angell to thee.
The money is paid back again.

Fal. O, I doe not like that paying back, 'tis a double Labour.

Prin. I am good Friends with my Father, and may doe any thing.

Fal. Rob me the Exchequer the first thing thou do'st, and doe it with unwash'd hands too.

Bard. Doe, my Lord.

Prin. I have procured thee, Jack, a Charge of Foot.

Fal. I would it had been of Horse. Where shall I find one that can steal well? O, for a fine thief, of two and twenty, or thereabout: I am hainously unprovided. Well, God be thanked for these Rebels, they offend none but the Virtuous. I laud them, I praise them.

Prin. Bardolph.

Bar. My Lord.

Prin. Go bear this Letter to Lord John of Lancaster, to my Brother John. This to my Lord of Westmerland: Go Peto, to horse: for thou, and I,
Have thirty miles to ride yet ere dinner time.
Jack, meet me to morrow in the Temple Hall
At two a clock in the afternoon,
There shalt thou know thy Charge, and there receive
Money and Order for their Furniture.
The Land is burning, Percy stands on hie,
And either they, or we, must lower lie.

Fal. Rare words: brave world,
Hostesse, my Breakfast, come:
Oh, I could wish this Tavern were my Drumme.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Harry Hotspurre, Worcester and Dowglas.

Hot. Well said, my noble Scot, if speaking truth
In this fine Age, were not thought flattery,
Such attribution should the Dowglas have,
As not a Souldier of this seasons stamp,
Should go so generall currant through the world.
By heaven I cannot flatter: I defie
The Tongues of Soothers. But a braver place
In my hearts love, hath no man then your Self.
Nay, taske me to my word: approve me Lord.

Dow. Thou art the King of Honour:
No man so potent breathes upon the ground,
But I will Beard him.

Enter a Messenger.

Hot. Do so, and 'tis well. What Letters hast thou there? I can but thank you.

Mes. These Letters come from your Father.

Hot. Letters from him?
Why comes he not himself?

Mess. He cannot come, my Lord,
He is grievous sick.

Hot. How? has he the leisure to be sick now,
In such a justling time? who leads his power?
Under whose Government come they along?

Meſſ. His Letters beares his minde, not I his minde.
Wor. I prethee tell me, doth he keep his Bed?
Meſſ. He did, my Lord, four dayes ere I ſet forth:
And at the time of my departure thence,
He was much fear'd by his Phyſician.
Wor. I would the ſtate of time had firſt been whole,
Ere he by ſickneſſe had been viſited;
His health was never better worth then now.
Hotſp. Sick now? droop now? this ſickneſſe doth infect
The very Life-blood of our Enterpriſe,
'Tis catching hither, even to our Camp.
He writes me here, that inward ſickneſſe,
And that his friends by deputation
Could not ſo ſoon be drawn: nor did he think it meet,
To lay ſo dangerous and dear a truſt
On a Soul remov'd, but on his own.
Yet doth he give us bold advertiſment,
That with our ſmall conjunction we ſhould on,
To ſee how Fortune is diſpos'd to us,
For, as he writes, there is no quailing now,
Becauſe the King is certainly poſſeſt
Of all our purpoſes. What ſay you to it?
Wor. Your Fathers ſickneſſe is a maime to us.
Hotſp. A perilous Gaſh, a very Limme lopt off:
And yet, infaith, 'tis not his preſent want
Seems more then we ſhall find it.
Were it good, to ſet the exact wealth of all our ſtates
All at one Caſt? to ſet ſo rich a mine
On the nice hazard of one doubtfull hour,
It were not good: for therein ſhould we read
The very bottom, and the Soul of hope,
The very Liſt, the very utmoſt bound
Of all our fortunes.
Dowg. Faith and ſo we ſhould,
Where now remains a ſweet reverſion.
We may boldly ſpend, upon the hope
Of what is to come in:
A comfort of retirement lives in this.
Hotſp. A Randevous, a Home to flie unto,
If that the Devil and Miſchance look big
Upon the Maidenhead of our affaires.
Wor. But yet I would your Father had been here:
The quality and heir of our attempt
Brooks no diviſion: It will be thought
By ſome, that know not why he is away,
That wiſedome, loyalty, and meer diſlike
Of our proceedings, kept the Earl from hence.
And think, how ſuch an apprehenſion
May turn the tide of fearfull Faction,
And breed a kind of queſtion in our cauſe:
For well you know, we of the offering ſide,
Muſt keep aloof from ſtrict arbitrement,
And ſtop all ſight-holes, every loop, from whence
The eye of reaſon may prye in upon us:
This abſence of your Father drawes a Curtain,
That ſhewes the ignorant a kind of fear
Before not dreamt of.
Hotſp. You ſtrain too far.
I rather of his abſence make this uſe:
It lends a luſtre, and more great opinion,
A larger Dare to your great Enterprize,
Then if the Earl were here: for men muſt think,
If we without his help, can make a Head
To puſh againſt the Kingdome: with his help,
We ſhall o'return it topſie-turvy down.
Yet all goes well, yet all our joynts are whole,
Dowg. As heart can think:
There is not ſuch a word ſpoke of in Scotland,
At this Dream of Fear.

Enter Sir Richard Vernon.

Hotſp. My Couſin Vernon, welcome by my ſoul,
Vern. Pray God my newes be worth a welcome, Lord.
The Earl of Weſtmerland, ſeven thouſand ſtrong,
Is marching hither-wards with Prince John.
Hotſp. No harm: what more?
Vern. And further, I have learn'd,
The King himſelf in perſon hath ſet forth,
Or hither-wards intended ſpeedily,
With ſtrong and mighty preparation.
Hotſp. He ſhall be welcome too,
Where is his Son,
The nimble-footed Mad-cap, Prince of Wales,
And his Comrades, that daſt the World aſide,
And bid it paſſe?
Vern. All furniſht all in Armes,
All plum'd like Eſtridges, that with the Wind
Baited like Eagles, having lately bath'd,
Glittering in Golden Coats, like Images,
As full of ſpirit as the Moneth of May,
And gorgeous as the Sun at Mid-ſummer,
Wanton as youthfull Goats, wild as young Bulls.
I ſaw young Harry with his Beaver on,
His Cuſhes on his thighes, gallantly arm'd,
Riſe from the ground like feathered Mercury,
And vaulted with ſuch eaſe into his Seat,
As if an Angell dropt down from the Clouds,
To turn and wind a fiery Pegaſus,
And witcht the world with noble Horſemanſhip,
Hotſp. No more, no more;
Worſe then the Sun in March,
This praiſe doth nouriſh Agues: let them come.
They come like Sacrifices in their trimme,
And to the fire-ey'd Maid of ſmoaky War,
All hot, and bleeding, will we offer them:
The mailed Mars ſhall on his Altar ſit
Up to the eares in blood. I am on fire,
To hear this rich reprizall is ſo nigh,
And yet not ours. Come, let me take my Horſe,
Who is to bear me like a Thunder-bolt,
Againſt the boſome of the Prince of Wales.
Harry to Harry, ſhall not Horſe to Horſe
Meet, and ne're part, till one drop down a Coarſe?
Oh, that Glendower were come.
Ver. There is more newes:
I learn'd in Worceſter, as I rode along,
He cannot draw his Power this fourteen dayes.
Dowg. That's the worſt Tidings that I hear of yet.
Wor. I by my faith, that beares a froſty ſound.
Hotſp. What may the Kings whole Battell reach unto?
Ver. To thirty thouſand.
Hot. Forty let it be,
My Father and Glendower being both away,
The powers of us may ſerve ſo great a day.
Come, let us take a muſter ſpeedily:
Dooms-day is near; die all, die merrily.
Dow. Talk not of dying, I am out of fear
Of death, or deaths hand, for this one half year.
Exeunt omnes.

Scena.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falſtaffe and Bardolph.

Falſt. Bardolph, get thee before to Coventry, fill me a Bottle of Sack, our Souldiers ſhall march through: we'll to Sutton-cop-hill to Night.

Bard. Will you give me money, Captain?

Falſt. Lay out, lay out.

Bard. This Bottle makes an Angell.

Falſt. And if it doe, take it for thy labour: and if it make twenty, take them all, I'le anſwer thy Coynage. Bid my Lieutenant Peto meet me at the Towns end.

Bard. I will Captain: farewell. Exit.

Falſt. If I be not aſham'd of my Souldiers, I am a ſowc't Gurnet: I have mis-us'd the Kings Preſſe damnably. I have got, in exchange of a hundred and fifty Souldiers, three hundred and odde pounds. I preſſe me none but good houſe-holders, Yeomens Sons: enquire me out contracted Batchellors, ſuch as had been ask'd twice on the Banes: ſuch a Commodity of warm ſlaves, as had as lieve hear the Devil, as a Drumme; ſuch as fear the report of a Caliver, worſe then a ſtruck-Fool, or a hurt Wild-Duck. I preſt me none but ſuch Toſtes and Butter, with hearts in their Bellies no bigger then Pinnes heads, and they have bought out their ſervices: And now my whole Charge conſiſts of Ancients, Corporals, Lieutenants, Gentlemen of Companies, Slaves as ragged as Lazarus in the painted Cloth where the Gluttons Dogges licked his Sores; and ſuch as indeed were never Souldiers, but diſ-carded unjuſt Servingmen, younger Sonnes to younger Brothers: Revolted Tapſters and Oſtlers, Trade-faln, the Cankers of a calm World, and long peace, ten times more diſhonourable, ragged, then an old-fac'd Ancient; and ſuch have I to fill up the roomes of them that have bought out their ſervices: that you would think, that I had a hundred and fifty tatter'd Prodigalls, lately come from Swine-keeping, from eating Draffe and Husks. A mad fellow met me on the way, and told me, I had unloaded all the Gibbets, and preſt the dead bodies. No eye hath ſeen ſuch skar-Crowes: I'le not march through Coventry with them, that's flat. Nay, and the Villains march wide betwixt the Legges, as if they had Gyves on; for indeed, I had the moſt of them out of Priſon. There's not a Shirt and a half in all my Company: and the half Shirt is two Napkins tackt together, and thrown over the Shoulders like a Heralds Coat, without ſleeves: and the Shirt, to ſay the truth, ſtoln from my Hoſt of S. Albans; or the Red-Noſe Inne-keeper of Daintry. But that's all one, they'l finde Linnen enough on every Hedge.

Enter the Prince, and the Lord of Weſtmerland.

Prince. How now, blown Jack? how now, Quilt?

Falſt. What Hal? How now, mad Wag, what a Devil do'ſt thou in Warwick-ſhire? My good Lord of Weſtmerland, I cry you mercy, I thought your Honour had already been at Shrewsbury.

Weſt. 'Faith, Sir John, 'tis more then time that I were there, and you too: but my Powers are there already. The King, I can tell you, looks for us all: we muſt away all to Night.

Falſt. Tut, never fear me, I am as [illegible] to ſteal Cream.

Prince. I think to ſteal Cream indeed, for [illegible] hath already made thee Butter: but tell me, Jack, whoſe fellows are theſe that come after?

Fal. Mine, Hal, mine.

Prince. I did never ſee ſuch pittifull Raſcals.

Fal. Tut, tut, good enough to toſſe: food for Powder, food for Powder: they'l fill a Pit, as well as better: tuſh man, mortall men, mortall men.

Weſtm. I, but Sir John, me thinks they are exceeding poor and bare, too beggarly.

Fal. Faith, for their poverty, I know not where they had that; and for their barrenneſſe, I am ſure they never learn'd that of me.

Prin. No, I'le be ſworn, unleſſe you call three fingers on the Ribs bare. But ſirrah make haſte. Percy is already in the field.

Fal. What, is the King encamp'd?

Weſt. He is, John, I fear we ſhall ſtay too long.

Falſt. Well, to the latter end of a Fray, and the beginning of a Feaſt, fits a dull Fighter, and a keen Gueſt.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Hotſpurre, Worceſter, Douglas, and Vernon.

Hotſp. We'll fight with him to Night.

Worc. It may not be.

Dowg. You give him then advantage.

Vern. Not a whit.

Hotſp. Why ſay you ſo? looks he not for ſupply?

Vern. So doe we.

Hotſp. His is certain, ours is doubtfull.

Worc. Good Couſin be adviſ'd, ſtirre not to night.

Vern. Doe not, my Lord.

Dowg. You doe not counſell well:
You ſpeak it out of fear, and cold heart.

Vern. Doe me no ſlander, Douglas: by my Life,
And I dare well maintain it with my Life,
If well-reſpected Honour bid me on,
I hold as little counſell with weak fear,
As you, my Lord, or any Scot that this day lives.
Let it be ſeen to morrow in the Battell,
Which of us feares.

Dowg. Yea, or to night.

Vern. Content.

Hotſp. To night, ſay I.

Vern. Come, come, it may not be.
I wonder much, being men of ſuch great leading as you
That you foreſee not what impediments [illegible] are,
Drag back our expedition: certain Horſe
Of my Couſin Vernons are not yet come up;
Your Uncle Worceſters Horſe came but to day,
And now their pride and mettle is aſleep,
Their courage with hard labour tame and dull,
That not a Horſe is half the half of himſelf,

Hotſp. So are the Horſe of the Enemy
In generall, journey-bated, and brought low:
The better part of ours are full of reſt.

Worc. The number of the King exceedeth ours:
For Gods sake, Cousin, stay till all come in.

The Trumpet sounds a Parley. Enter Sir Walter Blunt.

Blunt. I come with gracious offers from the King,
If you vouchsafe me hearing, and respect.
Hotsp. Welcome, Sir Walter Blunt:
And would to God you were of our determination.
Some of us love you well: and even those some
Envy your great deservings, and good name,
Because you are not of our quality,
But stand against us like an enemy.
Blunt. And heaven defend, but still I should stand so,
So long as out of Limit, and true Rule,
You stand against anoynted Majesty.
But to my Charge.
The King hath sent to know
The nature of your griefs, and whereupon
You conjure from the breast of Civil Peace,
Such bold Hostility, teaching his dutious Land
Audacious Cruelty. If that the King
Have any way your good deserts forgot,
Which he confesseth to be manifold,
He bids you name your griefs; and with all speed
You shall have your desires, with interest:
And Pardon absolute for your self, and these,
Her in mis-led, by your suggestion.
Hotsp. The King is kind:
And well we know, the King
Knowes at what time to promise, when to pay.
My Father, my Unckle, and my self,
Did give him that same Royalty he weares:
And when he was not six and twenty strong,
Sick in the worlds regard, wretched and low,
A poor unminded Out-law, sneaking home,
My Father gave him welcome to the shore:
And when he heard him swear, and vow to God,
He came to be but Duke of Lancaster,
To sue out his Livery, and beg his Peace,
With teares of Innocency, and tearmes of zeal:
My Father, in kind heart and pitty mov'd,
Swore him assistance, and perform'd it too.
Now, when the Lords and Barons of the Realm
Perceiv'd Northumberland did lean to him,
The more and lesse came in with Cap and Knee,
Met him in Boroughs, Cities, Villages,
Attended him on Bridges, stood in Lanes,
Laid Gifts before him, proffer'd him their Oathes,
Gave him their Heirs, as Pages followed him,
Even at the heeles, in golden multitudes.
He presently, as greatnesse knowes it self,
Steps me a little higher then his Vow
Made to my Father, while his blood was poor,
Upon the naked shore at Ravenspurgh:
And now (forsooth) takes on him to reform
Some certain Edicts, and some strait Decrees,
That lay too heavy on the Common-wealth;
Cries out upon abuses, seems to weep
Over his Countreys wrongs: and by his Face,
This seeming Brow of Justice, did he win
The hearts of all that he did angle for.
Proceeded further, cut me off the Heads
Of all the Favourites, that the absent King
In deputation left behind him here,
When he was personall in the Irish Warre.
Blunt. Tut, I came not to hear this.
Hot. Then to the point.
In short time after, he depos'd the King,
Soon after that, depriv'd him of his Life:
And in the neck of that, task't the whole State.
To make that worse, suffer'd his Kinsman March,
Who is, if every Owner were right plac'd,
Indeed his King, to be engag'd in Wales,
There, without ransome, to lie forfeited:
Disgrac'd me in my happy Victories,
Sought to intrap me by intelligence,
Rated my Unckle from the Council Boord,
In rage dismiss'd my Father from the Court,
Broke Oath, committing wrong on wrong,
And in conclusion, drove us to seek out
This head of safety; and withall, to prie
Into his Title: the which we find
Too indirect, for long continuance.
Blunt. Shall I return this answer to the King?
Hotsp. Not so, Sir Walter.
We'll withdraw a while:
Go to the King, and let there be impawn'd
Some surety for a safe return again,
And in the morning early shall my Unckle
Bring him our purpose: and so farewell.
Blunt. I would you would accept of Grace and Love.
Hotsp. And 't may be, so we shall.
Blunt. Pray Heaven you doe. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Arch-Bishop of York, and Sir Michell.

Arch. Hie, good Sir Michell, bear this sealed Brief
With winged haste to the Lord Marshall,
This to my Cousin Scroop, and all the rest
To whom they are directed.
If you knew how much they do import,
You would make haste.
Sir Mich. My good Lord, I guesse their tenour.
Arch. Like enough you doe.
To morrow, good Sir Michell, is a day,
Wherein the fortune of ten thousand men
Must bide the touch. For, Sir, at Shrewsbury,
As I am truly given to understand,
The King, with mighty and quick-raised Power,
Meets with Lord Harry: and I fear, Sir Michell,
What with the sickneſse of Northumberland,
Whose power was in the first proportion;
And what with Owen Glendowers absence thence,
Who with them was rated firmly too,
And comes not in, over-rul'd by Prophecies,
I fear the power of Percy is too weak,
To wage an instant tryall with the King.
Sir Mich. Why, my good Lord, you need not fear,
There is Dowglas, and Lord Mortimer.
Arch. No, Mortimer is not there.
Sir Mich. But there is Mordake, Vernon, Lord Harry Percy,
And there is my Lord of Worcester,
And a Head of gallant Warriours,
Noble Gentlemen.

Arch.

Arch. And so there is, but yet the King hath drawn
The speciall head of all the Land together:
The Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster,
The Noble Westmerland, and warlike Blunt;
And many more Corrivals, and deer men
Of estimation, and command in Armes.
Sir M. Doubt not, my Lord, he shall be well oppos'd.
Arch. I hope no lesse: Yet needfull 'tis to fear,
And to prevent the worst, Sir Michell speed;
For if Lord Percy thrive not, ere the King
Dismiss his power, he means to visit us;
For he hath heard of our Confederacie,
And, 'tis but Wisdome to make strong against him:
Therefore make haste, I must go write again
To other Friends: and so farewell, Sir Michell. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster, Earle of Westmerland, Sir Walter Blunt, and Falstaffe.

King. How bloudily the Sun begins to peer
Above yon busky hill: the day looks pale
At his distemperature.
Prin. The Southern winde
Doth play the Trumpet to his purposes,
And by his hollow whistling in the Leaves,
Foretells a Tempest: and a blust'ring day.
King. Then with the losers let it sympathize,
For nothing can seem sowre to them that win.
The Trumpet sounds.

Enter Worcester.

King. How now my Lord of Worster? 'Tis not well
That you and I should meet upon such termes,
As now we meet. You have deceiv'd our trust,
And made us doff our easie Robe of Peace,
To crush our old limbs in ungentle Steele:
This is not well, my Lord, this is not well.
What say you to it? Will you again unknit
This churlish knot of all-abhorred War?
And move in that Obedient Orbe again,
Where you did give a fair and naturall light,
And be no more an exhal'd Meteor,
A prodigie of Fear, and a Portent
Of broached Mischief, to the unborn Times?
Wor. Hear me my Liege:
For mine own part, I could be well content
To entertain the Lag-end of my life
With quiet hours: For I do protest,
I have not sought the day of this dislike.
King. You have not sought it: how comes it then?
Falst. Rebellion lay in his way, and he found it.
Prin. Peace, Chewet, peace.
Wor. It pleas'd your Majesty, to turn your looks
Of Favour, from my Self, and all our House;
And yet I must remember you, my Lord,
We were the first, and dearest of your Friends:
For you, my staffe of Office did I break
In Richards time, and posted day and night
To meet you on the way, and kiss your hand,
When yet you were in place, and in account
Nothing so strong and fortunate, as I;
It was my Self, my Brother, and his Son,
That brought you home, and boldly did out-dare
The danger of the time. You swore to us,
And you did swear that Oath at Doncaster,
That you did nothing of purpose 'gainst the State,
Nor claim no further, then your new-fall'n right,
The seat of Gaunt, Dukedome of Lancaster.
To this, we sware our aid: But in short space,
It rain'd down Fortune showring on your head,
And such a floud of Greatness, fell on you,
What with our help, what with the absent King,
What with the injuries of wanton time,
The seeming sufferances that you had borne,
And the contrarious Windes that held the King
So long in the unlucky Irish Warrs,
That all in England did repute him dead:
And from this swarme of fair advantages,
You took occasion to be quickly woo'd,
To gripe the generall sway into your hand,
Forgot your Oath to us at Doncaster,
And being fed by us, you us'd us so,
As that ungentle gull the Cuckows Bird,
Useth the Sparrow, did oppresse our Nest,
Grew by our Feeding, to so great a bulk,
That even our Love durst not come near your sight
For fear of swallowing: But with nimble wing
We were inforc'd for safety sake, to flye
Out of your sight, and raise this present Head,
Whereby we stand opposed by such means
As you your self, have forg'd against your self,
By unkinde usage, dangerous countenance,
And violation of all faith and troth
Sworn to us in your younger enterprize.
King. These things indeed you have articulated,
Proclaim'd at Market Crosses, read in Churches,
To face the Garment of Rebellion.
With some fine colour, that may please the eye
Of fickle Changelings, and poor Discontents,
Which gape, and rub the Elbow at the news
Of hurly burly Innovation:
And never yet did Insurrection want
Such water-colours, to impaint his cause:
Nor moody Beggars, starving for a time
Of pell-mell havock, and confusion.
Prin. In both our Armies, there is many a soule
Shall pay full dearly for this encounter,
If once they joyn in triall. Tell your Nephew,
The Prince of Wales doth joyn with all the world
In praise of Henry Percy: By my Hopes,
This present enterprize set off his head,
I do not think a braver Gentleman,
More Active, valiant, or more valiant young,
More daring, or more bold, is now alive,
To grace this latter Age with noble deeds.
For my part, I may speak it to my shame,
I have a Truant been to Chivalry,
And so I hear, he doth account me too:
Yet this before my Fathers Majesty,
I am content that he shall take the odds
Of his great name and estimation,
And will, to save the bloud on either side,
Try fortune with him, in a Single Fight.
King. And, Prince of Wales, so dare we venter thee,
Albeit, considerations infinite

Do make against it: No, good Worster, no,
We love our people well; even those we love
That are misled upon your Cousins part:
And will they take the offer of our Grace:
Both he, and they, and you, yea, every man
Shall be my Friend again, and I'le be his.
So tell your Cousin, and bring me word,
What he will do. But if he will not yield,
Rebuke and dread correction waite on us,
And they shall do their Office. So be gone,
We will not now be troubled with reply,
We offer fair, take it advisedly,

Exit Worcester.

Prin. It will not be accepted, on my Life,
The Dowglas and the Hotspurre both together,
Are confident against the world in Armes.

King. Hence therefore, every Leader to his charge,
For on their answer will we set on them;
And God befriend us, as our cause is just. Exeunt.

Manet Prince and Falstaffe.

Fal. Hal, if thou see me down in the battell,
And bestride me, so; 'tis a point of friendship.

Prin. Nothing but a Colossus can do thee that friendship:
Say thy prayers, and farewell.

Falst. I would it were bed time, Hal, and all well.

Prin. Why thou owest heaven a death.

Fal. 'Tis not due yet: I would be loath to pay him before his day. What need I be so forward with him that call's not on me? Well, 'tis no matter, Honour pricks me on. But how if honour prick me off when I come on? How then; Can Honour set to a leg? No: or an arme? No: Or take away the grief of a wound? No. Honour hath no skill in Surgery then? No. What is Honour? a word. What is that word Honour? Ayre: A trim reckoning. Who hath it? He that dy'd a Wednesday. Doth he feele it? No. Doth he hear it? No. Is it insensible then? yea, to the dead. But will it not live with the living? No. Why? Detraction will not suffer it, therefore I'le none of it. Honour is a meer Scutcheon, and so ends my Catechisme. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Worcester, and Sir Richard Vernon.

Wor. O no, my nephew must not know, Sir Richard,
The liberall kinde offer of the King.

Ver. 'Twere best he did.

Wor. Then we are all undone.
It is not possible, it cannot be,
The King would keep his word in loving us,
He will suspect us still, and finde a time
To punish this offence in other faults:
Supposition, all our lives shall be stuck full of eyes;
For treason is but trusted like the Fox,
Who ne're so tame, so cherish'd, and lock'd up,
Will have a wilde trick of his Ancestors:
Look how he can, or sad or merrily,
Interpretation will misquote our looks,
And we shall feed like Oxen at a stall,
The better cherish'd, still the nearer death.
My Nephews trespasse may be well forgot,
It hath the excuse of youth, and heat of bloud,
And an adopted name of priviledge,
A hare-brain'd Hotspurre, govern'd by a Spleen:
All his offences live upon my head,
And on his Fathers. We did train him on,
And his corruption being tane from us,
We as the Spring of all, shall pay for all:
Therefore, good Cousin, let not Harry know
In any case, the offer of the King.

Ver. Deliver what you will, I'le say 'tis so.
Here comes your Cousin.

Enter Hotspurre.

Hot. My Unkle is return'd:
Deliver up, my Lord of Westmerland.
Unkle, what newes?

Wor. The King will bid you battle presently.

Dow. Defie him by the Lord of Westmerland.

Hot. Lord Dowglas: go you and tell him so.

Dow. Marry and shall, and very willingly.

Exit Dowglas.

Wor. There is no seeming mercy in the King.

Hot. Did you beg any? God forbid.

Wor. I told him gently of our grievances,
Of his Oath-breaking: which he mended thus,
By now forswearing that he is forsworne,
He calls us Rebels, Traitors, and will scourge
With haughty armes, this hatefull name in us.

Enter Dowglas.

Dow. Arme Gentlemen, to Armes, for I have thrown
A brave defiance in King Henries teeth:
And Westmerland that was ingag'd did bear it,
Which cannot choose but bring him quickly on,

Wor. The Prince of Wales stept forth before the King,
And Nephew, challeng'd you to single fight.

Hot. O, would the quarrell lay upon our heads,
And that no man might draw short breath to day,
But I and Harry Monmouth. Tell me, tell me,
How shew'd his Talking? Seem'd it in contempt?

Ver. No, by my Soule: I never in my life
Did hear a Challenge urg'd more modestly,
Unlesse a Brother should a Brother dare
To gentle exercise, and proofe of Armes.
He gave you all the Duties of a Man,
Trimm'd up your praises with a Princely tongue,
Spoke your deservings like a Chronicle,
Making you ever better then his praise,
By still dispraising praise, valu'd with you:
And which became him like a Prince indeed,
He made a blushing citall of himself
And chid his Trewant youth so with a Grace,
As if he mastred there a double spirit
Of teaching and of learning instantly:
There did he pause. But let me tell the World,
If he out-live the envy of this day,
England did never owe so sweet a hope,
So much misconstrued in his wantonnesse.

Hot. Cousin, I think thou art enamored
On his Follies: never did I hear
Of any Prince so wilde at Liberty.
But be he as he will, yet once ere night,
I will embrace him with a Souldiers Arme,
That he shall shrink under my curtesie.
Arme, arme with speed. And Fellow's, Souldiers, Friends,
Better consider what you have to do,
Then I that have not well the gift of Tongue,

Can

Can lift your bloud up with perſwation.

Enter a Meſſenger.

Meſ. My Lord, here are letters for you.

Hot. I cannot read them now.
O Gentlemen, the time of life is ſhort;
To ſpend that ſhortneſſe baſely, were too long.
If life did ride upon a Dials point,
Still ending at the arrivall of an houre,
And if we live, we live to tread on Kings:
If dye; brave death, when Princes dye with us.
Now for our Conſciences, the Armes is fair,
When the intent for bearing them is juſt.

Enter another Meſſenger.

Meſ. My Lord prepare, the King comes on apace,

Hot. I thank him, that he cuts me from my tale:
For I profeſſe not talking: Onely this,
Let each man do his beſt. And here I draw a Sword,
Whoſe worthy temper I intend to ſtain
With the beſt bloud that I can meet withall,
In the adventure of this perillous day.
Now Eſperance Percy, and ſet on:
Sound all the lofty Inſtruments of War,
And by that Muſick, let us all embrace:
For heaven to earth, ſome of us never ſhall,
A ſecond time do ſuch a curteſie.

They embrace, the Trumpets ſound, the King entreth with his power, alarum unto the battell. Then enter Dowglas, and Sir Walter Blunt.

Blu. What is thy name, that in battell thus thou croſſeſt
What honour doſt thou ſeek upon my head? (me?

Dow. Know then my name is Dowglas,
And do haunt thee in the battle thus,
Becauſe ſome tell me, that thou art a King.

Blunt. They tell thee true.

Dow. The Lord of Stafford here to day hath bought
Thy likeneſs: for inſtead of thee, King Harry,
This ſword hath ended him, ſo ſhall it thee,
Unleſſe thou yield thee as a Priſoner.

Blu. I was not born to yield, thou haughty Scot,
And thou ſhalt finde a King that will revenge
Lord Staffords death.

Fight, Blunt is ſlain, then enters Hotſpurre.

Hot. O Dowglas, hadſt thou fought at Holmedon thus,
I never had triumphed o're a Scot.

Dow. All's done, all's won, here breathleſs lies the King.

Hot. Where?

Dow. Here.

Hot. This Dowglas? No, I know this face full well:
A gallant Knight he was, his name was Blunt,
Semblably furniſh'd like the King himſelf.

Dow. Ah foole: go with thy ſoule whither it goes,
A borrowed title haſt thou bought too dear.
Why didſt thou tell me, that thou wert a King?

Hot. The King hath many marching in his Coats.

Dow. Now by my Sword, I will kill all his Coats,
I'le murther all his Wardrobe piece by piece,
Untill I meet the King.

Hot. Up and away,
Our Souldiers ſtand full fairly for the day. Exeunt.

Alarum, and enter Falſtaffe ſolus.

Fal. Though I could ſcape ſhot-free at London, I fear the ſhot here: here's no ſcoring, but upon the pate. Soft who art thou? Sir Walter Blunt, there's Honour for you: here's no vanity, I am as hot as moulten Lead, and as heavy too; heaven keep Lead out of me, I need no more weight then mine own Bowells. I have led my rag of Muffians where they are pepper'd: there's not three of my 150, left alive; and they for the Towns end, to beg during life. But who comes here?

Enter Prince.

Prin. What ſtand'ſt thou idle here? Lend me thy ſword,
Many a Noble man lies ſtark and ſtiff
Under the hooves of vanting enemies,
Whoſe deaths are unreveng'd. Prethee lend me thy ſword.

Fal. O Hal, I prethee give me leave to breath a while: Turk Gregory never did ſuch deeds in Armes, as I have done this day. I have paid Percy, I have made him ſure.

Prin. He is indeed, and living to kill thee;
I prethee lend me thy ſword.

Falſt. Nay, Hal, if Percy be alive, thou getſt not my Sword; but take my Piſtoll if thou wilt.

Prin. Give it me: What, is it in the Caſe?

Fal. I, Hal, 'tis hot: There's that will Sack a City.

The Prince drawes out a Bottle of Sack.

Prin. What, is it a time to jeſt and dally now? Exit. Throwes it at him.

Falſt. If Percy be alive. I'le pierce him: if he do come in my way, ſo: if he do not, if I come in his (willingly) let him make a Carbonado of me, I like not ſuch grinning honour as Sir Walter hath: Give me life, which if I can ſave, ſo: if not, honour comes unlook'd for, and there's an end. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Alarum, excurſions, enter the King, the Prince, Lord John of Lancaſter, and the Earle of Weſtmerland.

King. I prethee, Harry, withdraw thy ſelf, thou bleedeſt too much: Lord John of Lancaſter, go you with him.

P. Joh. Not I, my Lord, unleſſe I did bleed too.

Prin. I beſeech your Majeſty make up,
Leaſt your retirement do amaze your friends.

King. I will do ſo:
My Lord of Weſtmerland, lead him to his Tent.

Weſt. Come my Lord, I'le lead you to your Tent.

Prin. Lead me, my Lord? I do not need your help,
And heaven forbid a ſhallow ſcratch ſhould drive
The Prince of Wales from ſuch a field as this,
Where ſtain'd Nobility lyes troden on,
And Rebels Armes triumph in maſſacres.

Joh. We breath too long: come, couſin Weſtmerland,
Our duty this way lyes, for heavens ſake come.

Prin. By heaven thou haſt deceived me, Lancaſter,
I did not think thee Lord of ſuch a ſpirit:
Before, I lov'd thee as a brother John;
But now, I do reſpect thee as my Soule,

King. I ſaw him hold Lord Percy at the point,
With luſtier maintenance then I did look for
Of ſuch an ungrown Warriour.

Prin. O this Boy, lends mettle to us all. Exit

Enter Dowglas.

Dow. Another King? They grow like Hydra's heads:
I am the Dowglas fatall to all thoſe
That were thoſe colours on them. What art thou
That counterfeit'ſt the perſon of a King?

King. The King himſelf: who Dowglas grieves at heart

So

So many of his shadows thou hast met,
And not the very King. I have two Boyes
Seek Percy and thy self about the Field:
But seeing thou fall'st on me so luckily,
I will assay thee: so defend thy self.

Dow. I fear thou art another counterfeit:
And yet infaith thou bear'st thee like a King:
But mine I am sure thou art, who ere thou be,
And thus I win thee. They fight, the K. being in danger.

Enter Prince.

Prin. Hold up thy head, vile Scot, or thou art like
Never to hold it up again: the Spirits
Of valiant Sherly, Stafford, Blunt, are in my Armes;
It is the Prince of Wales that threats thee,
Who never promiseth, but means to pay.

They fight, Dowglas flyeth.

Cheerly My Lord: how fares your Grace?
Sir Nicholas Gawsey hath for succour sent,
And so hath Clifton: I'le to Clifton straight.

King. Stay, and breath a while.
Thou hast redeem'd thy lost opinion,
And shew'd thou mak'st some tender of my life
In this fair rescue thou hast brought to me.

Prin. O heaven, they did me too much injury,
That ever said I hearkned to your death.
If it were so, I might have let alone
The insulting hand of Dowglas over you,
Which would have been as speedy in your end,
As all the poysonous Potions in the world,
And sav'd the Treacherous labour of your Son.

K. make up to Clifton, I'le to Sir Nichol. Gausey. Exit.

Enter Hotspurre.

Hot. If I mistake not thou art Harry Monmouth.

Prin. Thou speakest as if I would deny my name.

Hot. My name is Harry Percy.

Prin. Why then I see a very valiant rebell of that name.
I am the Prince of Wales, and think not Percy,
To share with me in glory any more:
Two Starrs keep not their motion in one Sphere,
Nor can one England brook a double reigne,
Of Harry Percy, and the Prince of Wales.

Hot. Nor shall it, Harry, for the houre is come
To end the one of us; and would to heaven,
Thy name in Armes, were now as great as mine.

Prin. I'le make it greater, ere I part from thee,
And all the budding Honours on thy Crest,
I'le crop to make a Garland for my head.

Hot. I can no longer brook thy Vanities. Fight.

Enter Falstaffe.

Fal. Well said, Hal, to it Hal. Nay you shall find no Boyes play here, I can tell you.

Enter Dowglas, he fights with Falstaffe, who falls down as if he were dead. The Prince killeth Percy.

Hot. Oh Harry, thou hast rob'd me of my youth:
I better brook the losse of bitter life,
Then those proud titles thou hast won of me,
They wound my thoughts worse, then the sword my flesh:
But thought's the slave of Life, and Life Times foole;
And Time, that takes survey of all the world,
Must have a stop. O, I could Prophesie,
But that the Earth, and the cold hand of death,
Lyes on my Tongue: No, Percy, thou art dust
And food for--------

Prin. For Wormes, brave Percy. Farewell great heart:
Ill-weav'd Ambition, how much art thou shrunk?
When that this body did contain a spirit,
A Kingdome for it was too small a bound:
But now two paces of the vilest Earth
Is room enough. This Earth that bears the dead,
Bears not alive so stout a Gentleman.
If thou wer't sensible of curtesie,
I should not make so great a show of Zeale.
But let my favours hide thy mangled face,
And even in thy behalfe, I'le thank my selfe
For doing these fair Rites of Tenderneſſe.
Adiew, and take thy praise with thee to heaven,
Thy ignominy sleep with thee in the grave,
But not remembred in thy Epitaph.
What? Old Acquaintance? Could not all this flesh
Keep in a little life? Poor Jack, farewell:
I could have better spar'd a better man.
O, I should have a heavy misse of thee,
If I were much in love with Vanity.
Death hath not struck so fat a Deer to day,
Though many dearer in this bloudy Fray:
Imbowell'd will I see thee by and by,
Till then, in bloud? by Noble Percy lye. Exit.

Falstaffe riseth up.

Falst. Imbowell'd? If thou imbowell me to day, I'le give you leave to powder me, and eat me too to morrow. 'Twas time to counterfeit, or that hot Termagant Scot, had paid me scot and lot too. Counterfeit? I am no counterfeit; to dye, is to be a counterfeit, for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man: But to counterfeit dying, when a man thereby liveth, is to be no counterfeit, but the true and perfect image of life indeed. The better part of Valour, is Discretion; in the which better part, I have saved my life. I am afraid of this Gun-powder Percy though he be dead. How if he should counterfeit too, and rise? I am afraid he would prove the better counterfeit: therefore I'le make him sure: yea, and I'le swear I kill'd him. Why may not he rise as well as I? Nothing confutes me but eyes, and no-body sees me. Therefore, sirra, with a new wound in your thigh come you along with me. Takes Hotspurre on his back.

Enter Prince, and John of Lancaster.

Prin. Come Brother John, full bravely hast thou flesht thy Maiden sword.

John. But soft, who have we here?
Did you not tell me this fat man was dead?

Prin. I did, I saw him dead,
Breathlesse, and bleeding on the ground: Art thou alive?
Or is it fantasie that playes upon our eye-sight?
I prethee speak, we will not trust our eyes
Without our ears. Thou art not what thou seem'st.

Falst. No, that's certain: I am not a double man: but if I am not Jack Falstaffe, then am I a Jack: There is Percy, if your Father will do me any Honor, so: if not, let him kill the next Percy himself. I look either to be Earle or Duke, I can assure you.

Prin. Why, Percy I kill'd my self, and saw thee dead.

Fal. Did'st: how? Lord, Lord, how the world is given to Lying? I grant you I was down, and out of Breath, and so was he, but we rose both at an instant, and fought a long houre by Shrewsbury clock, if I may be believed, so: if not, let them that should reward Valour, bear the sinne upon their own heads. I'le take't on my death I gave him this wound in the Thigh: if the man were alive and would deny it, I would make him eat a piece of my sword.

John. This is the strangest tale that e're I heard.

Prin. This is the strangest Fellow, Brother John.

Come

Come bring your luggage nobly on your back:
For my part, if a lye may do the grace,
I'le guil'd it with the happiest termes I have.
A Retreat is sounded.
The Trumpets sound Retreat, the day is ours:
Come Brother, let's to the highest of the field,
To see what Friends are living, who are dead. Exeunt.
Fal. I'le follow as they say, for Reward. He that rewards me, heaven reward him. If I do grow great again, I'le grow lesse? For I'le purge, and leave Sack, and live cleanly, as a Noble man should do. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

The Trumpets sound.
Enter King, Prince of Wales, Lord John of Lancaster, Earle of Westmerland, with Worcester and Vernon Prisoners.

King. Thus ever did Rebellion finde Rebuke.
Ill-spirited Worcester, did we not send Grace,
Pardon, and termes of Love to all of you?
And would'st thou turn our offers contrary?
Misuse the tenor of thy Kinsmans trust?
Three Knights upon our party slain to day,
A Noble Earle and many a creature else,
Had been alive this houre,
If like a Christian thou had'st truly borne,
Betwixt our Armies, true Intelligence.
Wor. What I have done, my safety urg'd me to,
And I embrace this fortune patiently,
Since not to be avoided, it falls on me.
King. Bear Worcester to death, and Vernon too.
Other Offenders we will pause upon.
Exit Warcester and Vernon.
How goes the Field?
Prin. The Noble Scot Lord Dowglas, when he saw
The fortune of the day quite turn'd from him,
The Noble Percy slain, and all his men,
Upon the foot of fear, fled with the rest;
And falling from a hill, he was so bruiz'd
That the Pursuers took him. At my Tent
The Dowglas is, and I beseech your Grace,
I may dispose of him.
King. Withall my heart.
Prin. Then Brother John of Lancaster,
To you this honourable bounty shall belong:
Go to the Dowglas, and deliver him
Up to his pleasure, ransomeless and free:
His Valour shewn upon our Crests to day,
Hath taught us how to cherish such high deeds,
Even in the bosome of our Adversaries.
King. Then this remains: that we divide our Power.
You Son John, and my Cousin Westmerland
Towards York shall bend you, with your deerest speed
To meet Northumberland, and the Prelate Scroop,
Who (as we hear) are busily in Armes.
My Self, and Son Harry will towards Wales,
To fight with Glendower, and the Earle of March.
Rebellion in this Land shall lose his way,
Meeting the Check of such another day;
And since this business so fair is done,
Let us not leave till all our own be wonne. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The Second Part of Henry the Fourth,

Containing his Death: and Coronation of King Henry the Fift.

Actus Primus. Scena Prima.

Induction.

Enter Rumor.

Open your Ears: For which of you will ſtop
The vent of Hearing, when loud Rumor ſpeaks?
I, from the Orient, to the drooping Weſt
(Making the wind my Poſt-horſe) ſtill unfold
The Acts commenced on this Ball of Earth.
Upon my Tongue continuall Slanders ride,
The which, in every Language, I pronounce,
Stuffing the ears of them with falſe Reports:
I ſpeak of Peace, while covert Enmity
(Under the ſmile of ſafety) wounds the World:
And who but Rumor, who but onely I
Make fearfull Muſters, and prepar'd Defence,
Whil'ſt the big year, ſwolne with ſome other griefs,
Is thought with childe, by the ſtern Tyrant War;
And no ſuch matter. Rumor is a Pipe
Blown by Surmiſe, Jealouſies, Conjectures;
And of ſo eaſie, and ſo plain a ſtop,
That the blunt Monſter, with uncounted heads,
The ſtill diſcordant, wavering Multitude,
Can play upon it. But what need I thus
My well-known Body to Anathomize
Among my houſhold? Why is Rumor here?
I run before King Harries victory,
Who in a bloudy field by Shrewsbury
Hath beaten down young Hotſpurre, and his Troops,
Quenching the flame of bold rebellion,
Even with the Rebels bloud. But what mean I
To ſpeak of truth at firſt? My Office is
To noyſe abroad, that Harry Monmouth fell
Under the Wrath of Noble Hotſpurr's Sword;
And that the King, before the Dowglas Rage,
Stoop'd his Annointed head, as low as death.
This have I rumor'd through the peaſant-Towns,
Between the Royall Field of Shrewsbury,
And this Worm-eaten-Hole of ragged Stone,
Where Hotſpurr's Father, old Northumberland,
Lyes crafty ſick. The Poſts come tyring on,
And not a man of them brings other news
Then they have learn'd of me. From Rumors Tongues,
They bring ſmooth-Comforts-falſe, worſe then True-wrongs. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lord Bardolfe, and the Porter.

L. Bar. Who keeps the Gate hoa?
Where is the Earle?
Por. What ſhall I ſay you are?
L. Bar. Tell thou the Earle
That the Lord Bardolfe doth attend him here.
Por. His Lordſhip is walk'd forth into the Orchard,
Pleaſe it your Honor, knock but at the Gate,
And he himſelf will anſwer.

Enter Northumberland.

L. Bar. Here comes the Earle.
Nor. What news Lord Bardolfe? Ev'ry minute now
Should be the Father of ſome Stratagem;
The Times are wilde: Contention (like a Horſe
Full of high feeding) madly hath broke looſe,
And bears down all before him.
L. Bar. Noble Earle,
I bring you certain news from Shrewsbury.
Nor. Good, and heaven will.
L. Bar. As good as heart can wiſh:
The King is almoſt wounded to the death:
And in the Fortune of my Lord your Son,
Prince Harry ſlain outright: and both the Blunts
Kill'd by the hand of Dowglas. Young Prince John,
And Weſtmerland, and Stafford, fled the Field.
And Harry Monmouth's Brawn (The Hulk Sir John)
Is priſoner to your Son. O, ſuch a Day.
(So fought, ſo follow'd, and ſo fairly wonne)
Came not, till now, to dignifie the Times
Since Cæſars Fortunes.
Nor. How is this deriv'd?
Saw you the Field? Came you from Shrewsbury?
L. Bar. I ſpake with one (my L.) that came from thence
A Gentleman well bred, and of good name,
That freely render'd me this news for true.
Nor. Here comes my ſervant Travers, whom I ſent
On Tueſday laſt, to liſten after News.

Enter Travers.

L. Bar. My Lord, I over-rode him on the way.
And he is furniſh'd with no certainties,
More then he (haply) may retaile from me.
Nor. Now Travers, what good tidings comes from you?

Tra.

Tra. My Lord, John Umfrevill turn'd me back
With joyfull tydins; and (being better hors'd)
Out-rode me. After him, came spurring hard
A Gentleman (almoſt fore-spent with speed)
That ſtopp'd by me, to breathe his bloodied horſe.
He ask'd the way to Cheſter: And of him
I did demand what Newes from Shrewsbury:
He told me, that Rebellion had ill luck,
And that young Harry Percies Spurre was cold.
With that he gave his able Horſe the head,
And bending forward ſtrook his able heels
Againſt the panting ſides of his poor Jade
Up to the Rowell head, and ſtarting ſo,
He ſeem'd in running, to devoure the way,
Staying no longer queſtion.

North. Ha? Again:
Said he young Harry Percies Spurre was cold?
(Of Hotſpurre, cold-Spurre) that Rebellion,
Had met ill luck?

L. Bar. My Lord: I'le tell you what,
If my young Lord your Son, have not the day,
Upon mine Honour, for a ſilken point
I'le give my Barony. Never talk of it.

Nor. Why ſhould the Gentleman that rode by Travers
Give then ſuch inſtances of Loſſe?

L. Bar. Who he?
He was ſome hielding Fellow, that had ſtoln
The Horſe he rode on: and upon my life
Spake at adventure. Look, here comes more Newes.

Enter Morton.

Nor. Yea, this mans brow, like to a Title-leaf,
Foretells the Nature of a Tragick Volume:
So looks the Strond, when the Imperious Flood
Hath left a witneſt Uſurpation.
Say, Morton, did'ſt thou come from Shrewsbury?

Mor. I ran from Shrewsbury (my Noble Lord)
Where hatefull death put on his ugliеſt Mask
To fright our party.

Nor. How doth my Son, and Brother?
Thou trembl'ſt; and the whiteneſſe in thy Cheek
Is apter then thy Tongue, to tell thy Errand.
Even ſuch a man, ſo faint, ſo ſpiritleſſe,
So dull, ſo dead in look, ſo woe-be-gone,
Drew Priams Curtain, in the dead of night,
And would have told him, half his Troy was burn'd.
But Priam found the Fire, ere he his Tongue:
And I, my Percies death, ere thou report'ſt it.
This, thou would'ſt ſay: Your Son did thus, and thus:
You Brother, thus. So fought the Noble Dowglas,
Stopping my greedy ear with their bold deeds.
But in the end (to ſtop my Ear indeed)
Thou haſt a Sigh, to blow away this Praiſe,
Ending with Brother, Son, and all are dead.

Mor. Dowglas is living, and your Brother, yet:
But for my Lord, your Son.

No. Why he is dead.
See what a ready tongue ſuſpition hath;
He that but feares the thing, he would not know,
Hath by Inſtinct, knowledge from others Eyes,
That what he fear'd, is chanc'd. Yet ſpeak (Morton)
Tell thou thy Earl, his Divination Lies,
And I will take it as a ſweet Diſgrace,
And make thee rich, for doing me ſuch wrong.

Mor. You are too great, to be (by me) gainſaid:
Your Spirit is too true, your Feares too certain.

Nor. Yet for all this, ſay not that Percy's dead.
I ſee a ſtrange Confeſſion in thine Eye:
Thou ſhak'ſt thy head, and hold'ſt it Fear, or Sin,
To ſpeak a truth. If he be ſlain, ſay ſo:
The Tongue offends not, that reports his death:
And he doth ſin that doth belye the dead:
Not he, which ſayes the dead is not alive:
Yet the firſt bringer of unwelcome Newes
Hath but a looſing Office: and his Tongue,
Sounds ever after as a ſullen Bell
Remembred, knolling a departing Friend.

L. Bar. I cannot think (my Lord) your Son is dead.

Mor. I am ſorry I ſhould force you to believe
That, which I would to heaven I had not ſeen.
But theſe mine eyes ſaw him in bloody ſtate,
Rend'ring faint quittance (wearied, and out-breath'd)
To Henry Monmouth, whoſe ſwift wrath beat down
The never-daunted Percy to the earth,
From whence (with life) he never more ſprung up.
In few; his death (whoſe ſpirit lent a fire,
Even to the dulleſt Peazant in his Camp)
Being bruited once, took fire and heat away
From the beſt temper'd Courage in his Troops.
For from his Mettle was his Party ſteel'd;
Which once in him abated, all the reſt
Turn'd on themſelves, like dull and heavy Lead,
And as the thing that's heavy in it ſelf,
Upon enforcement, flies with greateſt ſpeed,
So did our Men, heavy in Hotſpurre's loſſe,
Lend to this weight, ſuch lightneſſe with their Fear,
That Arrows fled not ſwifter toward their ayme,
Then did our Souldiers (ayming at their ſafety)
Fly from the field. Then was that Noble Worceſter
Too ſoon ta'ne priſoner: and that furious Scot,
(The bloody Dowglas) whoſe well-labouring ſword
Had three times ſlain th'appearance of the King,
'Gan vail his ſtomack, and did grace the ſhame
Of thoſe that turn'd their backs: and in his flight,
Stumbling in Fear, was took. The ſumme of all,
Is, that the King hath won: and hath ſent out
A ſpeedy power, to encounter you my Lord,
Under the conduct of young Lancaſter
And Weſtmerland. This is the Newes at full.

Nor. For this, I ſhall have time enough to mourn.
In Poyſon there is Phyſick: and this newes
(Having been well) that would have made me ſick,
Being ſick, hath in ſome meaſure made me well.
And as the Wretch, whoſe Feaver-weakned joynts,
Like ſtrengthleſſe Hinges, buckle under life,
Impatient of his Fit, breaks like a fire
Out of his Keepers armes: Even ſo, my Limbs
(Weakned with grief) being now inrag'd with grief,
Are thrice themſelves. Hence therefore thou nice crutch,
A ſcaly Gauntlet now, with joynts of Steel
Muſt glove his hand. And hence thou ſickly Quoif,
Thou art a guard too wanton for the head,
Which Princes fleſh'd with Conqueſt, ayme to hit.
Now bind my Brows with Iron, and approach
The ragged'ſt hour that Time and Spight dare bring
To frown upon th' enrag'd Northumberland.
Let Heaven kiſſe Earth: now let not Natures hand
Keep the wild Flood confin'd: Let Order die,
And let the world no longer be a ſtage
To feed Contention in a lingring Act:
But let one ſpirit of the firſt-born Cain,

Reign in all bosomes, that each heart being set
On bloody Courses, the rude Scene may end,
And darknesse be the burier of the dead. (Honour.

L. Bar. Sweet Earl, divorce not wisdome from your

Mor. The lives of all your loving Complices
Lean on your health, the which if you give o're
To stormy Passion, must perforce decay.
You cast th'event of War (my Noble Lord)
And summ'd the accompt of Chance, before you said,
Let us make head: It was your presumize,
That in the dole of blows, your Son might drop.
You knew he walk'd o're perils, on an edge
More likely to fall in, then to get o're:
You were advis'd his flesh was capable
Of Wounds, and Scarrs; and that his forward Spirit
Would lift him, where most trade of danger rang'd,
Yet did you say, go forth: and none of this (Though strongly apprehended) could restrain
The stiffe-born action: what hath then befaln?
O what hath this bold enterprize brought forth,
More then that Being, which was like to be?

L. Bar. We all that are engaged to this losse,
Knew that we venter'd on such dangerous Seas,
That if we wrought out life, was ten to one:
And yet we venter'd for the gain propos'd,
Choak'd the respect of likely peril fear'd,
And since we are o're-set, venter again.
Come, we will all put forth; Body, and Goods.

Mor. 'Tis more then time: And (my most noble Lord)
I hear for certain, and do speak the truth:
The gentle Arch-Bishop of York is up
With well appointed Powers: he is a man
Who with a double Surety bindes his Followers.
My Lord (your Son) had onely but the Corps,
But shadows, and the shews of men to fight.
For that same word (Rebellion) did divide
The action of their bodies, from their soule,
And they did fight with queasinesse, constrain'd
As men drink Potions; that their Weapons only
Seem'd on our side: but for their Spirits and Souls,
This word (Rebellion) it had froze them up,
As Fish are in a Pond. But now the Bishop
Turns Insurrection to Religion,
Suppos'd sincere, and holy in his Thoughts:
He's follow'd both with Body, and with Minde:
And doth enlarge his Rising, with the blood
Of fair King Richard, scrap'd from Pomfret stones,
Derives from heaven his Quarrell, and his Cause:
Tells them, he doth bestride a bleeding Land,
Gasping for life, under great Bullingbrook,
And more, and lesse, do flock to follow him.

North. I knew of this before. But to speak truth,
This present grief had wip'd it from my mind.
Go in with me, and counsell every man
The aptest way for safety, and revenge:
Get Posts, and Letters, and make Friends with speed,
Never so few, nor never yet more need. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe, and Page.

Fal. Sirra, you giant, what says the Doct. to my water?

Pag. He said, sir, the water it self was a good healthy water: but for the party that ow'd it, he might have more diseases then he knew for.

Fal. Men of all sorts take a pride to gird at me: the brain of this foolish compounded Clay-man, is not able to invent any thing that tends to laughter, more then I invent, or is invented on me. I am not onely witty in my self, but the cause that wit is in other men. I doe here walk before thee, like a Sow, that hath o'rewhelm'd all her Litter, but one. If the Prince put thee into my Service for any other reason, then to set me off, why then I have no judgement. Thou horson Mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap, then to wait at my heeles. I was never maim'd with an Agot till now: but I will set you neither in Gold, nor Silver, but in vilde apparell, and send you back again to your Master, for a Jewell. The Juvenall (the Prince your Master) whose Chin is not yet fledg'd, I will sooner have a beard grow in the Palm of my hand, then he shall get one on his cheek: yet he will not stick to say, his Face is a Face-Royall. Heaven may finish it when he will, it is not a hair amisse yet: he may keep it still as a Face-Royall, for a Barber shall never earn six pence out of it; and yet he will be crowing, as if he had writ man ever since his Father was a Batchellor. He may keep his own Grace, but he is almost out of mine, I can assure him. What said M. Dombledon, about the Satten for my short Cloak, and Slops?

Pag. He said, sir, you should procure him better Assurance, then Bardolfe: he would not take his Bond and yours, he lik'd not the Security.

Fal. Let him be damn'd like the Glutton, may his Tongue be hotter, a horson Achitophel, a Rascally-yea-forsooth-knave, to bear a Gentleman in hand, and then stand upon Security? The horson smooth-pates doe now wear nothing but high shooes, and bunches of Keyes at their girdles: and if a man is through with them in honest Taking-up, then they must stand upon Security: I had as lief they would put Rats-bane in my mouth, as offer to stop it with Security. I look'd he should have sent me two and twenty yards of Satten (as I am a true Knight) and he sends me Security. Well, he may sleep in Security, for he hath the horn of Abundance: and the lightnesse of his Wife shines through it, and yet cannot he see, though he have his own Lanthorn to light him. Where's Bardolfe?

Pag. He's gone into Smithfield to buy your Worship a Horse.

Fal. I bought him in Paules, and he'll buy me a horse in Smithfield. If I could get me a wife in the Stewes, I were Mann'd, Hors'd, and Wiv'd.

Enter Chief Justice, and Servant.

Pag. Sir, here comes the Nobleman that committed the Prince for striking him, about Bardolfe.

Fal. Wait close, I will not see him.

Ch. Just. What's he that goes there;

Ser. Falstaffe, and't please your Lordship.

Just. He that was in question for the Robbery?

Ser. He, my Lord, but he hath since done good service at Shrewsbury: and (as I hear) is now going with some Charge to the Lord John of Lancaster.

Just. What, to York? Call him back again.

Ser. Sir John Falstaffe.

Fal. Boy, tell him I am deaf.

Pag. You must speak lowder, my Master is deaf.

Just. I am sure he is, to the hearing of any thing good. Go pluck him by the Elbow. I must speak with him.

Ser. Sir John.

Fal. What? a young knave & beg? Is there not wars? Is there not employment? Doth not the K. lack subjects? do not the Rebels want Soldiers? Though it be a shame to be on

on any side but one, it is worse shame to beg, then to be on the worst side, were it worse then the name of Rebellion can tell how to make it.

Ser. You mistake me, Sir.

Fal. Why, sir, did I say you were an honest man? Setting my Knight-hood, and my Souldiership aside, I had lyed in my throat, if I had said so.

Ser. I pray you (Sir) then set your Knighthood and your Souldier-ship aside, and give me leave to tell you, you lye in your throat, if you say I am any other then an honest man.

Fal. I give thee leave to tell me so? I lay aside that which grows to me? If thou gett'st any leave of me, hang me, if thou tak'st leave, thou wer't better be hang'd: you Hunt-counter: hence, avant.

Ser. Sir, my Lord would speak with you.

Just. Sir John Falstaffe, a word with you.

Fal. My good Lord: give your Lordship good time of the day. I am glad to see your Lordship abroad: I heard say your Lordship was sick. I hope your Lordship goes abroad by advice. Your Lordship (though not clean past your youth) hath yet some smack of age in you: some relish of the saltnesse of time: and I most humbly beseech your Lordship, to have a reverend care of your health.

Just. Sir John, I sent for you before your Expedition to Shrewsbury.

Fal. If it please your Lordship, I hear his Majesty is return'd with some discomfort from Wales.

Just. I talk not of his Majesty: you would not come when I sent for you?

Fal. And I hear moreover, his Highnesse is fain into this same whorson Apoplexy.

Just. Well, heaven mend him. I pray let me speak with you.

Fal. This Apoplexy is (as I take it) a kind of Lethargy, a sleeping of the blood, a horson Tingling.

Just. What tell you me of it? be it as it is.

Fal. It hath its originall from much grief; from study and perturbation of the brain. I have read the cause of his effects in Galen. It is a kind of deafnesse.

Just. I think you are fain into that disease: for you hear not what I say to you.

Fal. Very well (my Lord) very well: rather an't please you) it is the disease of not Listning, the malady of not Marking, that I am troubled withall.

Just. To punish you by the heels, would amend the attention of your ears, and I care not if I be your Physitian.

Fal. I am as poor as Job, my Lord; but not so patient: your Lordship may minister the Potion of imprisonment to me, in respect of Poverty: but how I should be your Patient to follow your prescriptions, the wise may make some dram of a scruple, or indeed, a scruple it self.

Just. I sent for you (when there were matters against you for your life) to speak with me.

Fal. As I was then advised by my learned Council, in the Laws of this Land-service, I did not come.

Ju. Well, the truth is (sir John) you live in great infamy.

Fal. He that buckles him in my Belt, cannot live in less.

Just. Your Means is very slender, and your waste great.

Fal. I would it were otherwise: I would my Means were greater, and my Waste slenderer.

Just. You have misled the youthfull Prince.

Fal. The young Prince hath misled me. I am the Fellow with the great belly, and he my Dog.

Just. Well, I am loth to gall a new-heal'd wound: your dayes service at Shrewsbury, hath a little gilded over your Nights exploit on Gads-hill. You may thank the unquiet time, for your quiet o're-posting that Action.

Fal. My Lord? (Wolf.

Just. But since all is well, keep it so: wake not a sleeping

Fal. To wake a Wolf, is as bad as to smell a Fox.

Ju. What? you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Fal. A Wasell-Candle, my Lord; all Tallow: if I did say of Wax, my growth would approve the truth.

Ju. There is not a white hair on your face, but should have his effect of gravity.

Fal. His effect of gravy, gravy, gravy.

Just. You follow the young Prince up and down, like his evil Angel.

Fal. Not so (my Lord) your ill Angel is light: but I hope, he that looks upon me, will take me without weighing: and yet, in some respects I grant, I cannot go: I cannot tell. Virtue is of so little regard in these Costormongers dayes, that true valour is turn'd Bear-heard. Pregnancy is made a Tapster, and hath his quick wit wasted in giving Recknings: all the other gifts appertinent to man (as the malice of this Age shapes them) are not worth a Goose-berry. You that are old, consider not the capacities of us that are young: you measure the heat of our Livers, with the bitternes of your galls: and we that are in the vaward of our youth, I must confess, are waggs too.

Just. Doe you set down your name in the scrowle of youth, that are written down old, with all the Characters of age? Have you not a moyst eye? a dry hand? a yellow cheek? a white beard? a decreasing leg? an increasing belly? Is not your voyce broken? your wind short? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with Antiquity? and will you call your self young? Fy, fie, fie, Sir John.

Fal. My Lord, I was born with a white head, and somthing a round belly. For my voyce, I have lost it with hollowing and singing of Anthems. To approve my youth further, I will not. The truth is, I am onely old in judgement and understanding, and he that will caper with me for a thousand Marks, let him lend me the money, and have at him. For the box oth' ear that the Prince gave you, he gave it like a rude Prince, and you took it like a sensible Lord. I have checkt him for it, and the young Lyon repents: Marry not in sack-cloth, but in new Silk, and old Sack.

Just. Well, heaven send the Prince a better companion.

Fal. Heaven send the Companion a better Prince: I cannot rid my hands of him.

Just. Well, the King hath sever'd you and Prince Harry, I hear you are going with Lord John of Lancaster, against the Archbishop, and the Earl of Northumberland.

Fal. Yes, I thank your pretty sweet wit for it: but look you pray, (all you that kisse my Lady Peace at home) that our Armies joyn not in a hot day: for if I take but two shirts out with me, and I mean not to sweat extraordinarily: if it be a hot day, if I brandish any thing but my Bottle, would I might never spit white againe: There is not a dangerous Action can peepe out his head, but I am thrust upon it. Well, I cannot last ever.

Just. Well, be honest, be honest, and heaven blesse your Expedition.

Fal. Will your Lordship lend me a thousand pound, to furnish me forth?

Just. Not a penny, not a penny: you are too impatient to bear crosses. Fare you well. Commend me to my Cousin Westmerland. Exit.

Fal. If I do, fillop me with a three-man-Beetle. A man can no more separate Age and Covet ousnesse, then he can

Part young limbs and lechery: but the Gowt galls the one, and the pox pinches the other; and so both the Degrees prevent my curses. Boy?

Pag. Sir.

Fal. What money is in my purse?

Pag. Seven groats, and two pence.

Fal. I can get no remedy against this Consumption of the purse. Borrowing onely lingers, and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable. Go bear this Letter to my Lord of Lancaster, this to the Prince, this to the Earl of Westmerland, and this to old Mistris Ursula, whom I have weekly sworn to marry, since I perceiv'd the first white hair on my chin. About it: you know where to find me. A pox of this Gowt, or a Gowt of this Pox: for the one or th'other playes the rogue with my great toe: It is no matter, if I doe halt, I have the Warrs for my colour, and my Pension shall seem the more reasonable: A good wit will make use of any thing: I will turn diseases to commodity. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Archbishop, Hastings, Mowbray, & Lord Bardolfe.

Ar. Thus have you heard our causes, and know our means:
And my most noble Friends, I pray you all
Speak plainly your opinions of our hopes,
And first (Lord Marshall) what say you to it?

Mow. I well allow the occasion of our Armes,
But gladly would be better satisfied,
How (in our Means) we should advance our selves
To look with forehead bold and big enough
Upon the Power and Puissance of the King.

Hast. Our present Musters grow upon the File
To five and twenty thousand men of choice:
And our Supplies, live largely in the hope
Of great Northumberland, whose bosome burns
With an incensed Fire of Injuries.

L. Bar. The question then (Lord Hastings) standeth
Whether our present five and twenty thousand (thus,
May hold up head without Northumberland:

Hast. With him we may.

L. Bar. I marry, there's the point:
But if without him we be thought too feeble,
My judgement is, we should not step too far
Till we had his Assistance by the hand.
For in a Theam so bloody fac'd as this,
Conjecture, Expectation, and Surmise
Of Aides uncertain, should not be admitted.

Arch. 'Tis true, Lord Bardolfe, for indeed
It was young Hotspurres case at Shrewsbury.

L. Bar. It was (my Lord) who lin'd himself with hope,
Eating the aire, on promise of Supply,
Flattring himself with Project of a power,
Much smaller then the smalleft of his Thoughts,
And so with great imagination
(Proper to mad men) led his Powers to death,
And (winking) leap'd into destruction.

Hast. But (by your leave) it never yet did hurt,
To lay down likely-hoods, and forms of hope.

L. Bar. Yes, if this present quality of war,
Indeed the instant action: a cause on foot,
Lives so in hope: As in an early Spring,
We see th'appearing buds, which to prove fruit,
Hope gives not so much warrant, as Despair
That Frosts will bite them. When we mean to build,
We first survey the Plot, then draw the Modell,
And when we see the figure of the house,
Then must we rate the cost of the Erection,
Which if we find out-weighs ability,
What doe we then, but draw a-new the Modell
In fewer Offices (Or at least, desist
To build at all? Much more, in this great work,
(Which is (almost) to pluck a Kingdome down,
And set another up) should we survey
The plot of Situation, and the Modell,
Consent upon a sure Foundation:
Question Surveyors, know our own estate.
How able such a Work to undergo,
To weigh against his Opposite? or else,
We fortifie in Paper, and in Figures,
Using the Names of men, instead of men:
Like one that draws the Modell of a house
Beyond his power to build it; who (half through)
Gives o're, and leaves his part-created Cost
A naked subject to the Weeping Clouds,
And waste, for churlish Winters tyranny.

Hast. Grant that our hopes (yet likely of fair birth)
Should be still-born: and that we now possest
The utmost man of expectation:
I think we are a Body strong enough
(Even as we are) to equall with the King.

L. Bar. What is the King but five & twenty thousand?

Hast. To us no more: nay not so much, Lord Bardolfe.
For his divisions (as the Times do brawl)
Are in three Heads: one Power against the French,
And one against Glendower: Perforce a third
Must take up us: So is the unfirm King
In three divided: and his Coffers sound
With hollow Poverty, and Emptinesse.

Ar. That he should draw his several strengths together,
And come against us in full puissance,
Need not be dreaded.

Hast. If he should do so,
He leaves his back unarm'd, the French, and Welch
Baying him at the heels: never fear that.

L. Bar. Who is it like should lead his Forces hither?

Hast. The Duke of Lancaster and Westmerland:
Against the Welch himself, and Harry Monmouth.
But who is substituted 'gainst the French,
I have no certain notice.

Arch. Let us on:
And publish the occasion of our Armes.
The Common-wealth is sick of their own choyce,
Their over-greedy love hath surfetted:
An habitation giddy, and unsure
Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart.
O thou fond Many, with what loud applause
Didd'st thou beat heaven with blessing Bullingbrook,
Before he was, what thou would'st have him be?
And being now trimm'd up in thine own desires,
Thou (beastly Feeder) art so full of him,
That thou provok'st thy self to cast him up.
So, so, (thou common Dog) didst thou disgorge
Thy glutton-bosome of the Royal Richard,
And now thou would'st eat thy dead vomit up,
And howl'st to find it. What trust is in these Times?
They, that when Richard liv'd, would have him die.
Are now become enamour'd on his grave.
Thou that threw'st dust upon his goodly head,
When through proud London he came sighing on,
After th'admired heels of Bullingbrook,
Cri'st now, O Earth yield us that King again,

And

And take thou this (O thoughts of men accurs'd)
Past, and to come, seems best; things present, worst.

Mow. Shall we go draw our numbers, and set on?

Hast. We are Times subjects, and Time bids, be gon.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Hostesse, with two Officers, Fang, and Snare.

Hostesse. Mr. Fang, have you entred the Action?

Fang. It is enter'd.

Host. Where's your Yeoman? Is it a lusty yeoman? Will he stand to it?

Fang. Sirra, where's Snare?

Host. I, I, good M. Snare.

Snare. Here, here.

Fang. Snare, we must Arrest Sir John Falstaffe.

Host. I, good M. Snare, I have enter'd him, and all.

Sn. It may chance cost some of us our lives: he will stab.

Host. Alass-the-day! take heed of him: he stabb'd me in mine own house, and that most beastly: he cares not what mischief he doth, if his weapon be out. He will foyn like any devil, he will spare neither man, woman, nor child.

Fan. If I can close with him, I care not for his thrust.

Host. No, nor I neither: I'le be at your elbow.

Fang. If I but fist him once: if he come but within my Vice.

Host. I am undone with his going: I warrant he is an infinitive thing upon my score. Good M. Fang, hold him sure: good M. Snare, let him not scape, he comes continuantly to Pie-corner (saving your manhoods) to buy a Saddle, and he is invited to dinner to the Lubbars-head in Lombard-street to M. Smoothes the Silkman. I pray ye since my Action is enter'd, and my Case so openly known to the world, let him be brought in to his answer. A hundred Mark is a long one, for a poor lone woman to bear: and I have born, and born, and born; and have bin fub'd off, and fub'd off, from this day to that day, that it is a shame to be thought on. There is no honesty in such dealing, unlesse a Woman should be made an Asse and a Beast, to bear every Knaves wrong.

Enter Falstaffe and Bardolfe.

Yonder he comes, and that arrant Malmsey-Nose Bardolfe with him, do your offices, do your offices: M. Fang, and M. Snare, do me, do me, do me your offices.

Fal. How now? whose Mare's dead? what's the matter?

Fang. Sir John, I arrest you at the suit of Mist. Quickly.

Fal. Away Varlets, draw Bardolfe: Cut me off the Villains head: throw the Quean in the Channell.

Host. Throw me in the channell? I'le throw thee there. Wilt thou? wilt thou? thou bastardly rogue. Murder, murder: O thou Hony-suckle villain, wilt thou kill Gods officers and the Kings? O thou hony-seed Rogue, thou art a hony-seed, a Man-queller, and a woman-queller.

Fal. Keep them off, Bardolfe.

Fang. A rescue, a rescue.

Host. Good people bring a rescue. Thou wilt not? thou wilt not? Do, do thou Rogue: Do thou Hempseed.

Fal. Away you Scullion, you Rampallian, you Fustilirian: I'le tuck your Catastrophe.

Enter Ch. Justice.

Just. What's the matter? Keep the Peace here, hoa.

Host. Good my Lord, be good to me. I beseech you stand to me.

Ch. Ju. How now, sir John? what are you brawling here? Doth this become your place, your time, and businesse? You should have been well on your way to York. Stand from him Fellow, wherefore hang'st upon him?

Host. Oh my most worshipfull Lord, and't please your Grace, I am a poor Widow of Eastcheap, and he is arrested at my suit.

Ch. Just. For what summe?

Host. It is more then for some (my Lord) it is for all: all I have, he hath eaten me out of house and home: he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his: but I will have some of it out again, or I will ride thee o' Nights, like the Mare.

Fal. I think I am as like to ride the Mare, if I have any vantage of ground to get up.

Ch. Just. How comes this, Sir John? Fie, what a man of good temper would endure this tempest of exclamation? Are you not asham'd to inforce a poor Widow to so rough a course to come by her own?

Fal. What is the grosse summe that I owe thee?

Host. Marry (if thou wer't an honest man) thy self, & the money too. Thou didst swear to me upon a parcell gilt Goblet, sitting in my Dolphin-chamber, at the round table, by a sea-cole fire, on Wednesday in Whitson week, when the Prince broke thy head for likening him to a singing-man of Windsor; thou didst swear to me then (as I was washing thy wound) to marry me, and make me my Lady thy wife. Canst thou deny it? Did not good wife Keech the Butchers wife come in then, and call me goss-sip Quickly? comming in to borrow a messe of Vinegar: telling us, she had a good dish of Prawns: whereby thou didst desire to eat some: whereby I told thee they were ill for a green wound? And didst not thou (when she was gone down staires) desire me to be no more familiar with such poor people, saying, that ere long they should call me Madam? And didst thou not kisse me, and bid me fetch thee thirty shillings? I put thee now to thy Book-oath, deny it if thou canst?

Fal. My Lord, this is a poor mad soul: and she sayes up and down the town, that her eldest Son is like you. She hath bin in good case, and the truth is, poverty hath distracted her: but for these foolish Officers, I beseech you, I may have redresse against them.

Just. Sir John, sir John, I am well acquainted with your manner of wrenching the true cause, the false way. It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words, that come with such (more then impudent) sawcinesse from you, can thrust me from a levell consideration, I know you ha' practis'd upon the easie-yielding spirit of this woman.

Host. Yes in troth, my Lord.

Just. Prethee peace: pay her the debt you owe her, and unpay the villany you have done her: the one you may do with sterling mony, & the other with currant repentance.

Fal. My Lord, I will not undergo this sneap without reply. You call honorable boldnesse, impudent sawcinesse. If a man will curt'sie, and say nothing, he is virtuous: No, my Lord (your humble duty remembred) I will not be your sutor. I say to you, I desire deliv'rance from these Officers being upon hasty employment in the Kings affaires.

Just. You speak, as having power to do wrong: But answer in the effect of your reputation, and satisfie the poor woman.

Fal. Come hither, Hostesse,

Enter M. Gower.

Ch. Just. Now, Master Gower, what newes?

Gow. The King (my Lord) and Henry Prince of Wales are near at hand: The rest the Paper tells.

Fal. As I am a Gentleman,

Host. Nay, you said so before.

Fal. As I am a Gentleman. Come, no more words of it.

Hoſt. By this heavenly ground I tread on, I muſt be fain to pawn both my Plate, and the Tapiſtry of my Dining Chambers.

Fal. Glaſſes, glaſſes, is the onely drinking: and for thy walls a pretty ſlight Drollery, or the Story of the Prodigal, or the Germane hunting in Water-work, is worth a thouſand of theſe Bed-hangings, and theſe Fly-bitten Tapiſtries. Let it be ten pound (if thou canſt.) Come, if it were not for thy humours, there is not a better Wench in England. Go, waſh thy face, and draw thy Action: Come, thou muſt not be in this humour with me, come, I know thou was't ſet on to this.

Hoſt. Prethee (Sir John) let it be but twenty Nobles I am loth to pawn my Plate, in good earneſt la.

Fal. Let it alone, I'le make other ſhift: you'l be a fool ſtill.

Hoſt. Well, you ſhall have it, although I pawn my Gown. I hope you'll come to Supper: You'll pay me altogether?

Fal. Will I live? Go with her, with her: hook on, hook on.

Hoſt. Will you have Doll Tear-ſheet meet you at ſupper?

Fal. No more words. Let's have her.

Ch. Juſt. I have heard better newes.

Fal. What's the newes, my good Lord?

Ch. Juſt. Where lay the King laſt night?

Meſ. At Baſingſtoke, my Lord.

Fal. I hope (my Lord) all's well. What is the newes, my Lord?

Ch. Ju. Come all his Forces back?

Meſ. No: fifteen hundred Foot, and five hundred Horſe, are march'd up to my Lord of Lancaſter, againſt Northumberland and the Arch-Biſhop.

Fal. Comes the King back from Wales, my noble Lord?

Ch. Ju. You ſhall have Letters of me preſently. Come go along with me, good M. Gower.

Fal. My Lord.

Ch. Ju. What's the matter?

Fal. Maſter Gower, I ſhall entreat you with me to dinner.

Gow. I muſt wait upon my good Lord here. I thank you, good Sir John.

Ch. Ju. Sir John, you loyter here too long, being you are to take Souldiers up in Countreys as you go.

Fal. Will you ſup with me, Maſter Gower?

Ch. Ju. What fooliſh Maſter taught you theſe manners, Sir John?

Fal. Maſter Gower, if they become me not, he was a Fool that taught them me. This is the right Fencing grace (my Lord) tap for tap, and ſo part fair.

Ch. Ju. Now the Lord lighten thee, thou art a great Fool.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prince Henry, Poyns, Bardolf, and Page.

Prin. Truſt me, I am exceeding weary.

Poyn. Is it come to that? I had thought wearineſſe durſt not have attach'd one of ſo high blood.

Prin. It doth me, though it diſcolours the complexion of my greatneſſe to acknowledge it. Doth it not ſhew vildly in me, to deſire ſmall Beer?

Poyn. Why, a Prince ſhould not be ſo loofly ſtudied, as to remember ſo weak a Compoſition.

Prin. Belike then, my Appetite was not Princely got: for (in troth) I do now remember the poor Creature, Small Beer. But indeed theſe humble conſiderations make me out of love with my greatneſſe. What a diſgrace is it to me, to remember thy name? or to know thy face to morrow? or to take notice how many pair of Silk Stockings thou haſt? (viz. theſe, and thoſe that were the peach-colour'd ones:) or to bear the Inventory of thy Shirts; as one for ſuperfluity, and one other for uſe: but that the Tennis-Court Keeper knows better then I, for it is a low ebbe of Linnen with thee, when thou keepeſt not Racket there, as thou haſt not done a great while, becauſe the reſt of thy Low Countreys have made a ſhift to eat up thy Holland.

Poin. How ill it follows, after you have labour'd ſo hard, you ſhould talk ſo idlely? Tell me how many good young Princes would do ſo, their Fathers lying ſo ſick, as yours is?

Prin. Shall I tell the one thing, Poyns?

Poyn. Yes: and let it be an excellent good thing.

Prin. It ſhall ſerve among Wits of no higher breeding then thine.

Poyn. Go to: I ſtand the puſh of your one thing, that you'll tell.

Prin. Why, I tell thee, it is not meet that I ſhould be ſad now my Father is ſick: albeit I could tell to thee (as to one it pleaſes me, for fault of a better, to call my friend) I could be ſad, and ſad indeed too.

Poyn. Very hardly upon ſuch a ſubject.

Prin. Thou think'ſt me as far in the Devils Book, as thou, and Falſtaffe, for obduracy and perſiſtency. Let the end try the man. But I tell thee, my heart bleeds inwardly, that my Father is ſick: and keeping ſuch vild company as thou art, hath in reaſon taken from me, all oſtentation of ſorrow.

Poyn. The reaſon?

Pr. What would'ſt thou think of me, if I ſhould weep?

Poyn. I would think thee a moſt Princely hypocrite.

Prin. It would be every mans thought: and thou art a bleſſed Fellow, to think as every man thinks: never a mans thought in the world keeps the rode-way better, then thine: every man would think me an Hypocrite indeed. And what excites your moſt worſhipfull thought to think ſo?

Poyn. Why, becauſe you have been ſo lewd, and ſo much ingraffed to Falſtaffe.

Prin. And to thee.

Poyn. Nay, I am well ſpoken of, I can hear it with mine own ears: the worſt that they can ſay of me is, that I am a ſecond Brother, and that I am a proper fellow of my hands; and thoſe two things I confeſſe I cannot help. Look, look, here comes Bardolfe.

Prin. And the Boy that I gave Falſtaffe: he had him from me Chriſtian, and ſee if the fat villain have not transform'd him Ape. Enter Bardolfe.

Bar. Save your Grace.

Prin. And yours, moſt Noble Bardolfe.

Poyn. Come you pernicious Aſſe, you baſhfull Fool, muſt you be bluſhing? wherefore bluſh you now? what a Maidenly man at Armes are you become? Is it ſuch a matter to get a Pottle-pots Maidenhead?

Page. He call'd me even now (my Lord) through a red Lattice, and I could diſcern no part of his face from the window:

Window; at last I spy'd his eyes, and me thought he had made two holes in the Ale-wives new Petticoat, and peep-ed through.

Prin. Hath not the Boy profited?

Bar. Away, you horson upright Rabbet, away.

Page. Away, you rascally Althea's dream, away.

Prin. Instruct us Boy, what dream, Boy?

Page. Marry (My Lord) Althea dream'd, she was deliver'd of a Firebrand, and therefore I call him her dream.

Prince. A Crowns-worth of good interpretation: There it is, Boy.

Poin. O that this good Blossome could be kept from Cankers: Well, there is six pence to preserve thee.

Bard. If you do not make him be hang'd among you, the gallows shall be wrong'd.

Prin. And how doth thy Master, Bardolph?

Bard. Well, my good Lord: he heard of your Graces comming to Town. There's a Letter for you.

Prin. Deliver'd with good respect. And how doth the Martlemas, your Master?

Bard. In bodily health, Sir.

Poin. Marry, the immortall part needs a Physician: but that moves not him: though that be sick, it dyes not.

Prin. I do allow this Wen to be as familiar with me as my dogge. and he holds his place, for look you how he writes.

Poin. Letter. John Falstaffe Knight: (Every man must know that, as oft as he hath occasion to name himself:) Even like those that are kin to the King, for they never prick their finger, but they say, there is some of the Kings bloud spilt. How comes that (sayes he) that takes upon him not to conceive? the answer is as ready as a borrowed cap: I am the Kings poor Cosin, Sir.

Prin. Nay, they will be kin to us, but they will fetch it from Japhet. But to the Letter:-----Sir John Falstaffe, Knight, to the Son of the King, nearest his Father, Harry Prince of Wales, greeting.

Poin. Why this is a Certificate.

Prin. Peace.

I will imitate the honourable Romans in brevity.

Poin Sure he means brevity in breath: short-winded.

I commend me to thee, I commend thee, and I leave thee. Be not too familiar with Poins, for he misuses thy Favours so much, that he swears thou art to marry his Sister Nell. Repent at idle times as thou maist, and so farewell.

Thine, by yea and no: which is as much as to say, as thou usest him. Jack Falstaffe with my Familiars: John with my Brothers & Sisters: and Sir John with all Europe.

My Lord, I will steep this Letter in Sack, and make him eat it.

Prin. That's to make him eat twenty of his Words. But do you use me thus, Ned? Must I marry your Sister?

Poin. May the Wench have no worse fortune. But I never said so.

Prin. Well, thus we play the Fool with the time and the spirits of the wise, sit in the clouds, and mock us: Is your Master here in London?

Bard. Yes, my Lord.

Prin. Where supps he? Doth the old Bore, feed in the old Frank?

Bard. At the old place, my Lord, in East-cheap.

Prin. What company?

Prin. Sup any women with him?

Page. None, my Lord, but old Mistris Quickly, and Mrs. Dol Tear-sheet.

Prin. What Pagan may that be?

Page. A proper Gentlewoman, Sir, and a Kinswoman of my Masters.

Prin. Even such Kin, as the Parish Heyfors are to the Town-Bull?

Shall we steal upon them (Ned) at Supper?

Poin. I am your shadow, my Lord, I'le follow you.

Prin. Sirra, you Boy, and Bardolph, no word to your Master that I am yet in Town.

There's for your silence.

Bar. I have no tongue, sir.

Page. And for mine, Sir, I will govern it.

Prin. Fare ye well: go.

This Dol Tear-sheet should be some Rode.

Poin. I warrant you, as common as the way between S. Albans and London.

Prin. How might we see Falstaffe bestow himself to night in his true colours, and not our selves be seen?

Poin. Put on two Leather Jerkins, and Aprons, and wait upon him at his Table, like Drawers.

Prin. From a god, to a Bull? A heavy declension: It was Joves case. From a Prince, to a Prentice, a low transformation, that shall be mine: for in every thing, the purpose must weigh with the folly. Follow me, Ned. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Northumberland, his Lady, and Harry Percies Lady.

North. I prethee loving Wife, and gentle Daughter,
Give an even way unto my rough affairs.
Put not you on the visage of the Times,
And be like them to Percie, troublesome.

Wife. I have given over, I will speak no more;
Do what you will: your Wisdome, be your guide.

Nor. Alas (sweet Wife) my Honour is at pawn,
And but my going, nothing can redeem it.

La. Oh yet, for heavens sake, go not to these Warrs;
The Time was (Father) when you broke your word,
When you were more endear'd to it, then now,
When your own Percie, when my heart-dear-Harry,
Threw many a Northward look, to see his Father
Bring up his powers: but he did long in vain.
Who then perswaded you to stay at home?
There were two Honour's lost; you and your Sons.
For Yours, may heavenly glory brighten it:
For His, it stuck upon him, as the Sun
In the grey vault of Heaven: and by his Light
Did all the Chevalry of England move
To do brave Acts. He was (indeed) the Glasse,
Wherein the Noble-Youth did dresse themselves.
He had no Legs, that practic'd not his Gate:
And speaking thick (which Nature made his blemish)
Became the Accents of the Valiant,
For those that could speak low, and tardily,
Would turn their own Perfection, to Abuse,
To seem like him. So that in Speech, and Gate,
In Diet, in Affections of delight,
In Military Rules, Humors of Bloud,

He

He was the Mark, and Glaſs, Copy, and Book,
That faſhion'd others. And him, O wondrous! him,
O Miracle of Men! Him did you leave
(Second to none) un-ſeconded by you,
To look upon the hideous god of War,
In diſadvantage, to abide the field,
Where nothing but the ſound of Hotſpur's Name
Did ſeem defenſible: ſo you left him.
Never, O never do his Ghoſt the wrong,
To hold your Honour more preciſe and nice
With others, then with him. Let them alone:
The Marſhall and the Arch-Biſhop are ſtrong.
Had my ſweet Harry had but half their Numbers,
To day might I (hanging on Hotſpurs Neck)
Have talk'd of Monmouth's Grave.

North. Beſhrew your heart,
(Fair Daughter) you do draw my ſpirits from me,
With new lamenting ancient Over-ſights.
But I muſt go, and meet with danger there:
